Total for England, Allies and Neutrals In War Is 1,443

LONDON, May 10.-Britain, her Allies and the neutrals lost 1,098 ships aggregating 4.734.407 tons in the year since the Nazi invasion of the Low Countries, new Admiralty statistics showed to-

This, chiefly, is the toll of Brit ish, Allied and neutral shipping in the battle of the Atlantic, but the totals include Britain's losses in the June, 1940, and the withdrawal from Greece last month.

From the start of the war to th end of April, according to Admiralt figures, British, Allied and neutral ships lost 6,078,330 tons in all. The Admiralty arrived at thi figure by adding an unspecified number of ships of 117,286 tons lost at Dunkerque to the regular list of 1,443 ships totalling 5.961,044 tons. Broken down, the regular list shows 885 of the ships were British, totaling 3.810.541 tons, and 558 were Allied and neutral vessels totaling 2,150,-

(American shipping men estimated early this year that, at the rate of operations so far, it would take Germany at least another year to whittle Britain's merchant fleet down to its prewar total of 21,000,000 tons. Australian Official Sees Beginning of Defeat of Nazis

"Just wait," said Robert Gordon Menzies, Prime Minister of Australia, at a press conference yesterday in the Australian Legation, two tons of bombs in Germany for every ton loosed in England, and see what happens.

Mr. Menzies smiled faintly and added a gesture that indicated a clear belief that the Nazis wouldn't be able to take it.

Not only, he pointed out, will the devastating air attacks which Britain plans affect the Nazi morale, but it will play havoc with their materials resources, such as oil, and test their capacity to replace the losses. And the leader of the Australian Commonwealth said he thought it wouldn't be long until the British were able to launch what he called the offensive phase of this war.

"We'll beat those fellows," said the Prime Minister, "if it takes 20 years, though we would rather do it in two years or less.'

The Prime Minister, who is both genial and terse, and has a flair for candid, pungent phrases, said the recent Nazi air raids on England showed British fighters dropping "much too great a percentage of enemy planes than the Nazis can afford to lose." and, he added: "I think we are seeing the beginning of a phase that will end in the defeat of the Nazis.

Invasion by July 1 Seen. It seems likely, therefore, that the Iberian peinsula will be invaded between now and July 1. What happens as Hitler strikes at Suez Lt. Col. Manuel Rodigo Zara Goza and drives for Iraq oil will be decisive, but only as regards the timetable. Whether France and Spain invite him in or not Hitler will feel compelled to sweep toward Gioraltar, in the opinion of most observers. Military necessity will force Hitler to act and unless there is some unexpected counterstroke such American entry into the war, the Spaniards, like Frenchmen and Portuguese, will welcome the invaders. In three times refusing passage to the Germans, Gen. Franco and the Spanish generals who support him are neither pro-British nor dubious of ultimate German victory. They know almost nothing of the world beyond Spain and they are carefully propagandized by the 2,000odd German agents who flock the drawing rooms of Madrid. It is merely that they want to come into the war at the last moment because they fear revolution from a warweary and anti-Nazi proletariat should they repeat Premier Mussolini's blunder and come in too soon Ramon Serrano Suner, Gen. Franco's brother-in-law, heads the Falangista group which has wanted to come in each time that Hitler has requested Spanish co-operation. Serrano Suner told diplomats in Madrid-and it is no indiscretion to repeat it—that he believed in, de sired and worked for German victory -a German victory in which Spain would have a share. This sums up his policy and the policy of his party. It also explains his unpopularity with the Spanish public, which faces starvation, dreads war and vasion by foreigners. Against his excesses Gen. Franco has stood firm

Finally, Gen. Franco is scarcely likely to resist once he sees that France and North Africa are being swept along by the Nazi machine thanks to victory at Suez, or. con versely, once he realizes that Hitler because of military necessity, intends to march into Spain whether Madrid agrees or not. In two conversations with Gen. Franco I have found him to be a shrewd but a taciturn shrewdness of his province and he has the Latin's tendency to stall when in difficulties on the hope that the situation may improve with time. But his will is no more strong than his soft womanish voice or the limp hand which he extends

It has been good internal politics as well as sound statesmanship for him to stall Hitler. The Spanish public knows that he has tried to keep Spain out of war. He has prepared the public to believe, once he takes Spain to war, that he had no choice. He hasn't.

R. A. F. Spurt Believed Due to Increasing U. S. Assistance

414 Planes Exported To Britain in Month, Double September Total

By the Associated Press

The tremendous spurt in Britain's aerial warfare this week was described by some military authorities today as evidence that United States assistance is enabling the British to use both defensee and offensive planes in much greater numbers than

These authorities cited three recent developments involving plane supplies from this country as contributing to the R. A. F.'s reported success in taking heavy toll of Nazi attack bombers and spreading destruction over Hamburg, Bremen and other Reich cities

They pointed first to the huge and steady increase in American military plane production this spring. In March the output of both commercial and military craft totaled 1.216. Last month the output of military planes alone was 1.427, about equally divided between training and combat craft with probably more than half of the latter destined for 414 Planes Sent in Month. This was indicated by the fact that in March 414 planes were exported to the British, as compared with a total of 208 last September and only 37 last May when the Nazis were pressing their blitzkrieg into

In the second place, the experts said that American help in deliver- creases ing war supplies by turning over cargo ships to Britain and extending the neutrality patrol means the British high command is more assured than ever before of receiving air craft replacements in constantly increasing quantities.

Third, it is believed in informed quarters that with the advent of good weather this spring an inof long-range bombers has been flown across the Atlantic to Britain, in addition to short-range fighters sent by ship. Many of the latest deliveries may not yet have seen active service. But Lord Beaverbrook disclosed recently that the R. A. F. had a reserve strength of 100 per cent of its first line fighting strength. While military experts consider this to be a comparatively slender margin of reserve power, they say it could be drawn on for current operations

Additional Members Seen as Only Partial Solution to Problem

Key men of the National Defense Mediation Board, worked to the point of exhaustion by a crowded docket are considering recommendations for drastic changes in the poard's operations, it was learned

The number of pending cases mounts daily, despite frequent settlements by board panels of strike: and threatened strikes. So busy have the board leaders been in conducting and arranging hearings that they have had little time to consider what might be done to relieve their increasing burden.

Up to this morning, for example, the board had been unable to set a time for hearing one case certified to it a full week ago, and only vesterday their docket was increased by three additional certifications.

Chairman C. A. Dykstra has been ill recently, primarily due to overwork, it was said, and Vice Chairman William H. Davis was compelled to postpone hearing of a case yesterday because of sheer

The possibility that at least two more members would be named to the board, as announced at the White House by Secretary Stephen T. Early, was viewed as only partial solution to the problem.

The board already has an authorized membership of 22 members, including alternates, and something more than mere addition of personnel is desirable, a number of the board members are known to be-

There are several possibilities. Some have proposed that service on the board should be made a fulltime duty rather than part-time, as at present. Critics of this plan claim this would work hardship on all members of the board, since they have other jobs that require attention. Also full-time service, on a permanent basis, would be impossible for many of the members. It has been pointed out that a compromise arrangement might evolved under which part of the board would serve full time, even if only for two or three month periods, and others would participate on a part-time alternate system Others assert that size of the board has only slight bearing on its present difficulties, that the policy whereby the board handles defense industry labor cases certified by a separate agency-the Labor Depart-Conciliation Service-is at The ban on public demonstrations fault. # Food Is No. 1 Problem As Occupied France Studies Her Plight

Natives Derive Bitter Merriment by Caricatures Of Their Miseries

(Last of a Series.)

By PRESTON GROVER,

Special News Service. PARIS (via Berlin) .- France, Germany's biggest prisoner, is extracting much bitter merriment out of her plight while she gropes for some hint as to which is the best

Unlike in Germany, where authorities frown on spoofing cartoons about food rations, the French are forever caricaturing their miseries. But underneath the merriment which appears in the newspapers and magazines is genuine concern on the part of heads of families as to how they are going to feed their dependents.

Millions were made jobless by the German invasion. However, in recent months there has been progress in reducing unemployment In the Paris region, the unemployment total has dropped from an estimated 750,000 to approximately

Skilled Workers Sought. Germany is advertising for skilled French workers to go to Germany where they are promised wages which will permit married men to send 2,500 francs a month to their families and permit single men to save 1,600 francs monthly. (At official exchange rates 2,500 francs would come to about $37, but that means more in France than in the United States.)

How many have accepted these offers is not generally known. Officially it was stated early in March that 25,000 French workers already had gone to Germany.

In the mining areas of northern France, German authorities are making a real effort to get industry going-with a double pupose of getting France on its feet and producing raw materials which Ger-

Miners' Pay Increased.

One of the first moves of German authorities on entering Lorraine and Calais coal mine fields was to order a blanket increase in wages. Even the French authorities conceded that wage increases were long overdue, and this had the immediate effect of inducing many workers to return to the mines, even when they knew that the coal and iron would go to the conquering nation.

To prevent inflation, French authorities fixed wage levels in many industries at the beginning of the war, and shortly before the German invasion wages in virtually all inwere frozen at current Greater Interest Indicated.

Mr. Hamilton, director of the Derby last year and associated in an official capacity with the event in the three years it has been held in Washington, was to tell the boys of the plans for the fourth annual race to be held on Saturday, July 12. Mr. Hamilton said yesterday that early registrations indicated a greater interest in this year's race than ever before.

"There is going to be plenty of competition this year," he said. "Out of it we hope to get a national champion for Washington.

The Derby is open to boys living in Washington and nearby areas who are between 11 and 15 years of age. inclusive. Each boy must build his own car at a cost not to exceed $10, and according to rules outlined in the 1941 Official Soap Box Derby

To obtain a rule book, go with one of your parents or a guardian, to the Chevrolet dealer nearest your home and sign up now for the Soap Box Derby. When you have registered there, and signed the safety pledge, you will be given a rule book.

26 More Entries. The official registration forms of 26 more boys were cleared through Soap Box Derby headquarters at The Evening Star today. They are: Warren M. # Latin Naval Chiefs Will Inspect Yard And Model Basin

Formal Ceremony Will Follow Reception at Pan-American Union

Following a reception at the Pan-American Union the 11 chiefs of Latin American navies today were scheduled to devote most of their time inspecting the Washington Navy Yard and the David W. Taylor Model Basin at Carderock, Md.

In a formal ceremony the visitors were scheduled to be greeted at the main gate of the yard with four flourishes by the Navy Band under the direction of Lt. Charles Benter.

As soon as the band completes the admiral's march, yard guns were to fire a 17-gun salute prior to greetings by Rear Admiral George T. Pettengill, commandant; department heads, the commanding officer of the Alexandria Torpedo Station and representatives of the Anacostia Air Station and Carderock.

Two companies of the yard Marine guard were to be formed on the right of the entrance while the band is massed at the lower end of Dahlgren avenue. Yard officials will extend greetings before leaving for the admiral's buffet luncheon.

Welles to Give Dinner. The representatives of Argentina. Chile, Brazil, Mexico and Peru and their aides were to be accompanied by the naval attaches of their respective countries. Other countries in the delegation are Uruguay, Cuba, Colombia, Ecuador, Venezuela and Paraguay. Following a reception to be given at 5:30 p.m. in the Shoreham Hotel by Capt. A. G. Kirk, director of Naval Intelligence, a dinner will be given for the group at 8:30 p.m. in the Sulgrave Club by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles.

The Latin naval chiefs reviewed a brilliant full dress parade of 2,600 midshipmen yesterday which climaxed their visit to the Naval Academy in Annapolis. As the regiment, in blue uniforms, swung eastward over the parade field behind the academy band and drum and bugle corps, the highranking officers took a position on the edge of the field, saluting the battalions as they swept by. The Latin Americans were accompanied to the reviewing stand and during their tour of the academy by their personal aides, Rear Admiral Russell Willson, academy siperintendent; Rear Admiral A. T. Beauregard, Admiral Harold R. Stark's personal representative, and other United States naval officials. Admiral Host at Luncheon.

Pausing at midday for lunch at Admiral Willson's quarters, the visitors heard the superintendent assert that "I hope you will take away some impressions of value and certainly some small understanding of the spirit and warm professional regard with which we greet you to-

Responding on behalf of the visitors, Capt. Julio Diez Arguelles, chief of the Cuban Constitutional Navy, declared that control of the seas is vitally important, adding "our navies now treasure upon the decks of our ships the hope of the world." He said in part:

"In this historic moment in which in the old continent the sound of cannon is the predominant note; these moments when America revives and affirms her sentiments of democracy, keeping herself alert and ready to defend the Western Hemisphere in case of peril, it is more than ever a necessity to proclaim that our nations should be wholly in accord, that we may safeguard our

"In the world of today, as we see before our eyes the tragedy of countless and mournful chapters, the United States Navy holds the position of the highest and most vistal importance. . . .

Organized Racket Of Stealing Flowers From Graves Nipped

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 10.—Organized theft of floral pieces from cemeteries-a new racket which authorities said yielded an estimated $100,000 annually-was discovered yesterday by the State police. Lt. Alex Notto said the racket. apparently on an organized basis for years, was disclosed by one of three men arrested with a truckload of flowers taken from Mount Carmel Cemetery.

Lt. Notto said the robbers read the obituary pages of newspapers, visited homes before the funeral to determine whether the floral pieces were large enough for profitable theft, and then followed the cortege to the cemetery to locate the grave. That night the flowers were stolen and sold to unethical florists and roadside markets.

Parley Deadlocked On Plan for Higher Federal Crop Loans

Arguments Center on Revision of Legislation Passed by Both Houses

By the Associated Press. A novel preliminary tangle today caused a temporary deadlock between Senate and House in the movement to boost prices of five major crops through higher government loans Senator Bankhead, Democrat of Alabama, leader of the Senate drive for loans at 85 per cent of parity, said he was confident that the stalemate would end early next week

"because we've got the votes. Questions leading to the legislative snarl were raised by House members appointed to work out a compromise with Senators on Houseapproved legislation calling for mandatory loans on cotton, wheat corn, tobacco and rice at a slightly lower level, 75 per cent of parity. Parity is the term used to describe a price level for farm products which would give producers the equivalent in non-agricultural goods and service which prevailed in 1909-

Conferees' Power Involved. Involved in the dispute are powers of a joint Senate-House Conference Committee to revamp legislation passed by both Houses. Parliamentary precedent extending back over a century of congressional disputes are being dug out in the argument. Originally the Senate passed legislation revising the system of marketing restrictions under the present farm act. The House took this bill, for sending it to conference. Right Questioned. But when this Senate-House group met, some House members questioned the right of the House to consider the higher loan level because the Senate itself had not acted on this "I can't understand this attitude." Senator Bankhead said. "Vice President Garner cited many precedents showing that when either house took a bill and struck out everything after the enacting clause, the conference was wide open on everything in the bills."

If House members hold to the view that they cannot consider a higher loan figure, Senator Bankhead said he would take the loan bill back to the Senate and have it amended for the higher loan rate.

Hemispheric Defense

It is more than a good-will tour that high naval officials of eleven Latin American republics are making in this country. In accepting the invitation of Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, to visit the United States and to inspect some of our defenses, the naval officers of nations below the border are evidencing a realistic appreciation of the common peril that besets all of the Americas in this critical hour of history. Pan-America is on the defensive, and these experts on naval strategy are well qualified to recognize the importance of co-ordinated tactics and strategy, and the dangers of discord and disunity, in combating the threatened spread of aggression across the Atlantic.

Just as the military chiefs of Central and South American countries were given an opportunity earlier to familiarize themselves with the defense preparations of the United States, so the leaders of Latin American naval forces will be shown the inside workings of our growing naval inspection trip, the visitors will complete a series of conferences with Departments, during which many of clearly which way he is moving. the complicated problems of hemiroutes by land and sea, of increased production of defense materialsand the current consultations, by clarifying some of these questions, should help to smooth the way for their eventual solution.

Exports to Japan

Although a large part of our trade with that country is subject to export control. Department of Commerce figures show that Japan is still receiving substantial economic aid from the United States. Exports for the first two months of this year were valued at nearly $23,000,000. Shipments in January and February, with their reported values, included the following: Petroleum and petroleum products, $8,106,000; raw cotton, $1, 137,000; refined copper, $3,966,000; lead, $204,000, and power-driven metal-working machinery, $326,000. The list of exports contained many other items, covering a wide range of goods.

Since the Tokio government has aligned itself with the Axis, and since this country is extending all possible material help to China, in her fight against Japanese aggression, the continued flow of United States exports to Japan does not, on the surface, appear to square with the administration's policy of all-out aid to the democracies. With the exception of cotton, wood products and automobiles, most of the important items in our trade with Japan are now under export control. Hence the Washington Government could easily take action drastically to curtail shipments to Japan. Examination will reveal, however, that important steps have already been taken to deny Japan our economic aid. A ban was placed last year on the export of scrap iron and steel and high test aviation gasoline to countries other than those in the Western Hemisphere and in the British Empire. Most of the metals were placed under export control some time ago, and copper went on the list in February. Largely as a result of export restrictions, the value of our shipments to Japan during the first two months of 1941 declined nearly fifty per cent in value over those for the same months in 1940. Many war materials, which bulked large in shipments a year ago, no longer appear on the current export lists. Shipments of petroleum products, notably lubricating oil and gasoline (other than high-grade motor fuel) have been running slightly above the 1940 levels. An important factor governing the grant of licenses for the export of petroleum is the effect which such a policy may have in restraining Japan from moving into the Dutch East Indies, with their vast oil fields. Japan is dependent on foreign sources for most of her supplies of petroleum. A ban on shipments from the United States would no doubt increase demands | free of dull convention and ultraon the Japanese government for slick streamlining." Japanese ports.

Through export control, the United States has already put economic pressure on Japan. Existing restrictions are making more difficult her war effort, for Japan had been relying on this country for a substantial part of her war materials. These restrictions have been progressively tightened, and they can be tightened a good deal more. The administration, therefore, has other economic weapons in its armory, so far unused. These weapons, held in reserve. provide our diplomacy with an additional leverage in its efforts to protect American interests in the Far East, and curb the forces of aggres-

Hints From Stalin

Less than a week has elapsed since Joseph Stalin took his unprecedented step into the official limelight. Although he has been the obvious dictator of Soviet Russia ever since the death of Lenin in 1924, he was hitherto content to remain secretary of the Communist party. Since this was purely a party function, Stalin was technically outside the government, leaving official honors to his obedient tools.

Now, for the first time, Stalin formally heads the government by displacing Mr. Molotoff as Premier and Foreign Commissar. Naturally, this step has been as keen as it has climax. been varied. Knowledge of Stalin's coldly calculating nature quickly ruled out guesses that his action was due to personal vanity. The alternative was that the dictator was meditating a step in foreign policy so important that he felt it imperative both to assume personal responsibility and to reap the full credit.

Here, again, the indications pointed to a drastic alternative: Either a radical break with the policy of understanding with Nazi Germany or a greatly accentuated move toward fuller collaboration with Germany, perhaps going so far as formally joining the Axis.

Next day three official acts took place of still greater significance. The Soviet Foreign Office informed the diplomatic representatives of Belgium, Norway and Yugoslavia accredited to Moscow that Russia no longer recognized their countries as sovereign states. Since all three are occupied by German forces, this constituted formal Soviet recognition of the German conquest as a definitive change in their international status. This must have been quite gratifying to Berlin and seems indicative of Stalin's intention to cultivate friendly relations with the Reich.

Stalin's action toward Yugoslavia is especially significant, since only the day before the German invasion of that country his government had signed a treaty of friendship with Yugoslavia tacitly encouraging that country's defiance of German demands and almost openly condemning Germany's aggressive policy in the Balkans. Now, that attitude is diametrically reversed and the treaty

In face of all this, only one inference seems logical. Stalin has evidently made up his mind on a pro-Axis policy. And this, in turn, would indicate the striking of some secret bargain between Moscow and Berlin. What Stalin's "pay-off" may be is not yet known. Perhaps he will get a share in the control of the Straits, a slice of Persia with access to the Indian Ocean, or other rich spoils. Hitler can afford to be generous-with other people's property. But it is reasonable to assume that Stalin has been promised his reward. For Stalin is a shrewd

When Peace Returns

The average Englishman always has wanted a more beautiful England. No other people in the world have been more notably concerned about gardens, and their devotion to flowers is symptomatic of their essential character. It is part of their nature to desire orderliness and neatness in their surroundings. The trial through which they now are passing will strengthen rather than weaken their longing for harmony. So it well may happen that a fairer Britain may arise from the ruins of the Britain which currently is proving its right to survive and to prosper through the years ahead.

A reconstruction committee, headed by Lord Reith, already is at work on plans for the rebuilding of London and the provincial towns blasted by the German aerial invaders. Two groups of architects-one formed by Sir Edwin Lutyens, president of the Royal Academy; the other organized by William H. Ansell-have been invited to make suggestions. Both professional designers and amateur critics seem to be agreed that the cities of the future must be "equally shipment of American petroleum to is available for study in relation to the prevailing problem. The name of Sir Christopher Wren will serve as an index to a practical philosophy of the variety required by the heirs of his tradition. During his boyhood London was afflicted by what was known as "the poor's plague," a mysterious epidemic which destroyed thousands of people in the densely crowded slums. The contagion spread from neighborhood to neighborhood until the whole population appeared fated to extinction. Then, at 1 o'clock in the morning of Sunday, September 2, 1666, a baker's shop in Pudding Lane, burst into flames. The fire was carried from street to street by a wind that blew freshly throughout three days. When at last the blaze died down two hundred and seventy-three acres within the walls and sixty-three acres without had been burned. A clue to the extent of the devastation may be found in the fact that eighty-seven parish churches were destroyed.

Wren's genius was commensurate with his opportunity. Not England only but America also profited from his labors. His conceptions were noble and his methods distinguished. They are reflected in the civilization of the whole company of Englishspeaking nations. So may the enterprises of his twentieth century successors enrich humanity at large.

Toward that end-among others-Britain must be helped to win the speculation about the reasons for war now rapidly approaching its

Recreational Facilities

The Acting Co-ordinator of Recreation for the District has come forward with a $5,580,700 development program for local facilities which, if it were put into effect along with a unified recreation control system, should certainly place the Nation's Capital on a par with the leading cities of the country in this field instead of lagging ten years behind them as at present.

The need for such a development program is clearly shown by the figures in Co-ordinator Christiansen's report. The estimated value of land allocated to recreational use and development in the District is about $140,000,000. During the past fifteen years something more than $4,500,000 has been spent in the purchase of land. During the past ten years only $125,000 has been appropriated to develop the recreation properties. In other words, the city has the ground, but needs the money to equip it. work beyond what could be done on the mere $125,000 allowed during the past decade to maintain this large. taxpayer investment, but even this has been limited by lack of adequate appropriations from the District budget for the sponsoring of these relief projects.

Many of the projects included in the comprehensive program announced by Mr. Christiansen have been sought for years by various communities through their civic organizations and parent-teacher groups. The Acting Co-ordinator estimates that development of thirtysix recreation areas alone, exclusive of intended park land development, would provide leisure time facilities for 7,000,000 persons annually, as against 2,245,870 in 1940.

The practical difficulty of obtaining at one time the large sum of money needed, even should special funds become available to the city through passage of the Overton-Hunter formula or the Lanham bill to relieve national defense areas, has been considered and Mr. Christiansen wisely is working on a priority schedule which may spread the entire program over a period of five to

Van Ness Street

The proposal to close Van Ness street from Connecticut avenue to Reno road is a matter of considerable importance to citizens of the northern Cleveland Park area. It is true that this road, which bisects the recently enlarged property of the Bureau of Standards, complicates the problem of protecting the bureau's laboratories against possible sabotage. But it is also true that it is the only connecting link with Connecticut avenue and the east for residents west of Reno road between Tilden street and Albemarle street, a stretch of approximately half a mile.

In recent weeks a strong protective fence has been erected around the bureau except for that side along Van Ness street. Bureau officials oppose the citizens' alternative plan of fencing both sides of the street and posting guards at gates near the new high voltage laboratory. Official opposition has been based on the cost of maintaining guards and on the inconvenience involved in use of gates which, in some instances, would require roundabout routes between various units of the bureau. However, a city street, especially one which is the only route serving a large area, is so important, even though it may be little used during some hours of the day, that it should not be sacrificed until all other alternatives have been exhausted. If it is found to be impracticable to pass the street through the bureau between fences, it might be feasible to construct one or more pedestrian tunnels or protected overpasses from within the fenced areas and thus achieve both the safeguarding of the a large body of residents and bus line

Notebook of Science Progress In Laboratory, Field And Study

By Thomas R. Henry.

Handwriting electricity, or the pattern of finger waves, is the newest field of possible character revelation being studied by science.

A report on the progress of the research has just been reported to the National Research Council here by Drs. Jurgen Ruesch, Jacob E. Finesinger and Robert S. Schwab of Harvard medical Science long since has given up the idea that one's character is revealed by one's handwriting. Even if it were, a person could consciously disguise his script. The new method is beyond the control of the writer's will. Muscles when in action give off tiny currents of electricity, which increase and decrease according to individual patterns, like the waves given off by the brain. When a muscle is at rest the discharge ceases at once. It also varies according to the tension of the muscle. The Harvard experimenters taped electrodes on the fingers over the muscles used in writing and attached them to amplifiers and finally to an ink writing oscillograph, which recorded the variations in the current generated. The subjects were physicians, their secretaries, nurses and patients.

These were asked to read a short story and then write naturally their resumes of it. As soon as they started writing the finger waves started and were recorded by the oscillograph.

The physicians found that the tracings fell into three major groups. In appearance they are much like brain waves. One group showed regularly recurring "spindles" or outbursts of electrical energy, separated by periods of low energy output of approximately equal length. The second group gave wave tracings with almost no variation from start to finish. The third group showed alternate "spindles" and low output periods, but without any regular pattern.

Then the subjects were asked to 'write on the air" with pens held in their toes. Approximately the same pattern of electrical output was obtained from the untrained toe muscles of each

The oscillograms of individuals varied considerably on different trials, but the general pattern remained the sameso much so that eventually it may be possible to identify an individual's "electric signature" as well as his written signature. This, however, is beyond the present range of the research.

Dr. Ruesch and his associates describe in their report to the National Research Council just published in the official journal, Psychosomatic Medicine, a complex system of mathematical analysis of individual characteristics. The basic theory is that the hand and the brain in writing work in very close association. Writing becomes an almost automatic activity which a person carries on without conscious thought of the physical process. But it may reveal the mental habits of an individualwhether one's brain works by jerks or at a steady pace.

The research is being continued. "It seems to indicate," reports Dr. Ruesch. that the evaluation of myograms (the wave tracings) during constant movement would throw light on the more general problems of tension and relaxation in their broader aspects." * * * *

More than a thousand European "weeds" have invaded America in the past three centuries. In their native lands they may have been lovely flowers, such as the St. John's wort, one of the handsomest plants of British hillsides About 70 years ago it appeared in Nova Scotia and by 1900 it had become one of the worst pests of the countryside. Farmers rechristened it "stinking Willie," and it now has reached as far south as Massachusetts.

This is only one striking example, says Dr. M. L. Fernald of Harvard University in the latest annual report of the Smithsonian Institution. The invaders include the common dandelion, burdock, white daisy, witchgrass. Canada thistle, plantain, pigweed and dock.

They are crowding out some of the rarest and most delicate North American

"Their army is reinforced," says Dr Fernald, "by every arrival of uncleaned European seeds, in the stockings, trouser bottoms, skirt hems and blankets of immigrants, and in the litter and old straw used in packings from abroad. Arrived in a new country, they know no restraints, and after a period of adjustment become the bulk of our plant population, wherever natural conditions have been destroyed." A notable case, says Dr. Fernald, is that of the "Devil's paintbrush," a lovely plant with orange and scarlet blossoms, which was a prized plant in New England gardens a half century ago. In the early nineties it had become acclimated and began to appear in the fields. It now, he says, has ruined thousands of acres of field and clearing from the tip of the Gaspe Peninsula in Quebec to Michigan and southward to Penn-

"These invaders," says Dr. Fernald, 'are our thoroughly successful wild plants, and their success is to be compared with that of European man, the European rat and mouse, the European starling, the English sparrow, the European gypsy and brown tail moths and the European housefly.'

These weeds are much more of a menace, he believes, than the purely native species such as the poison ivy, wild strawberries, raspberries and blackberries, fire weed, pennyroyal and others.

"These," he says, "are our native invaders, but they are relatively harmless. They have been longer on the ground and, although showing some of the unrepressed traits of aggressive youth, are surely less obnoxious in their behavior than many of the recently arrived European invaders."

THIS AND THAT

By Charles E. Tracewell.

"ALEXANDRIA, Va.

"Dear Sir: "For years I have read your column in The Star. I am writing to ask if you will tell me what to do with my narcissus and jonquil bulbs until the tops die. "I have heard that they should not be taken out of the ground while the tops are still green. My yard is small and I need the space for summer flowers. I will appreciate any information. "Very truly, R. E. H."

Narcissus is the family name which includes all the rest. Thus, if we talk of a jonguil, we mean a certain sort of narcissus, belonging to the polyanthus varieties. Daffy-down-dillies are easy to grow, that is one reason they are so popular.

Another is that they multiply so readily. Colonizing them, that is, growing them in great drifts in the grass, is one very fine way to grow them. In the small yard, however, the spring flowering bulbs seem to take up so much space, as our correspondent says. This spring the heat wave literally "forced" the jonguils and others. They came out overnight everywhere.

and the lack of water wilted them in a It was a great show, while it lasted, but it didn't last very long. That, of course, was no fault of the bulbs. They did their best, producing good flowers. Nature was unkind to them, bringing a real drought during the month when rain was in order. * * * *

There are three ways of handling such bulbs after they have bloomed. They may be left where they are.

which perhaps is the best way. They may be lifted, roots and all, and really transplanted in a trench, dug for the purpose in some out-of-the-way place, usually behind a garage.

Or they may have annual plants put in between them. The leaves of the latter, as they grow, cover the dying leaves of the bulbs. Another method, sometimes used, requires a sure knowledge of which types of leaves will stand the following treat-The faded leaves are folded over on each other, two of the longest not being subjected to this treatment. These two leaves are used to tie around the bunch of folded leaves. This method obviates the unsightly brown of the dying leaves, at least to a certain extent. If the type of flower has brittle leaves, which would crack instead of fold, this method should not be used.

* * * * In taking up the bulbs, with their leaves, from the places they have grown and bloomed, great care must be taken to get all the roots.

That is, the gardener should know just how deep he planted them last fall and should go down well below that

The plants are taken up carefully, then "heeled in," as it is called, in the trench already prepared for them. Earth is thrown in around them, but the leaves are left out. One of the most satisfactory methods is to leave enough space between individual plants, so that at this time of year thriving annual plants, usually secured from some grower, can be placed between them.

The fresh green leaves soon hide the old ones.

The unusually hot, dry weather was not good for most of the flowering bulbs. It was too hot and too dry

Most of these bulbs have their origin in countries where there is plenty of moisture. In this country the best of them are grown in States where there is much rainfall, usually combined with a cool spring.

All of these bulbs are tough, though, and this means that they will stand a great deal of mistreatment, whether at the hands of man or nature.

This is a fortunate thing for most of us, since we possess neither the time nor inclination to give them extra care Yet tulips and narcissi would be worth all the care any one had to give them, so great is their beauty, so complete their charm. Few flowers strike the human heart more forcibly than these. Any yard. at least for a few weeks, can be a supreme picture, if tulip bulbs and narcissus bulbs are planted in the fall That meant last fall, for bulbs which have just finished blooming; it means the coming fall for fresh spring flowers next year.

* * * * It may seem strange to some, to be talking about fall plantings, when the yards are so full of spring flowers. It is necessary, however, if one wants the so-called Dutch bulbs to bloom in course, one already has them planted. The narcissus, particularly, made such a good show recently, although it did not last, that no doubt many beginning gardeners decided right then and there to "go in" for these bulbs.

the garden next spring. Unless, of

Well, the time to do it is next fall. Investigate the plantings of neighbors who had flowers you admired. Get the exact names of the species (varieties, in common parlence) and the place from which they were purchased.

These bulbs are more or less standardized, the prices being much the same everywhere, but if a certain dealer's bulbs have done well for some one else. they probably will do well for you.

We believe that people ought to do a great deal more reading about the flowers they admire than many of them do. There are scores of excellent gardening books on the market today, some of them huge but comparatively inexpensive. Get at least one of these and double your enjoyment of your garden by reading about the plants, as you plant

Denies That 6,000 Nazi Tourists

Have Arrived in Iran. To the Editor of The Star.

The article of Constantine Brown in The Evening Star of April 28 concerning the so-called entrance of 6.000 German tourists into Iran has come to our attention. It was stated that these foreigners are traveling through the mountains along the Iragian border.

Knowing the strict supervision over all foreign travelers in Iran during these times, I was quite certain that this information could not be true. However, I cabled to Teheran, and have just received word that this piece of news is entirely without foundation. I should be very grateful if you would be kind enough to inform your readers of the true state of affairs

McCallum has taken in the public golf problem in this city Washington undoubtedly has the largest percentage of golfers (or rather, golf players) in tts total population than any city in the United States. Not only is its population predominantly desk workers, but they also have a larger proportion of autos than the average, and since what few courses we have are fairly easy to reach, you will see what a large proportion of our citizenry finds its way to our golf courses. There is also a larger number of people working unusual hours, which makes golf a more practicable weekday sport for more people. That is the principal grievance I have against the present arrangement -an utter failure to grasp the potentialities of public golf in this city. It would be possible to almost double the present intake by providing more facilities Of course, the fault may not lie en-

Urges Letting Experts Decide Policy Regarding Convoys. To the Editor of The Star:

It was good to read the speeches delivered by Senator Guffey and Senator Pepper on the all-important issue of convoys. They spoke like real men, men not afraid to face reality, but ever ready to meet it, to challenge it

The time is gone when we can afford to remain complacent. We cannot afford to waste any more of our precious days and weeks arguing back and forth. The important job is to deliver a knockout blow to Hitler and the decision should be made, not by our Senators or Congressmen or the man in the street, but by our naval authorities. It is they who should decide whether we are prepared to send convoys; and, if so, whether we are ready to face whatever may result as a natural and anticipated consequence.

With reference to Dorothy Thompson's article, printed in The Star for April 30, I should like to say that many, many years ago I lived in a certain boarding house here in Washington where Charles A Lindbergh, then a child, also was a boarder.

He was a bright, happy little fellow spending hours with his special playmate in perfect accord. He certainly was devoted to his very lovely and attractive mother and to his father also. The latter took the boy for a walk every Sunday afternoon, holding his little hand in a most loving, protective way. Charles Lindbergh had the appearance

About 55 machines are to be installed and members of the carpenters' union have been employed to do some of the work. Anticipating the possibility that millwrights would not be permitted to install the machinery itself, a threat of a strike has been made. The machinists in turn have threatened a strike unless the work is given them, for they argue they understand the machines which are

It would appear that a dispute of this kind would lend itself to mediation and that some ingenuous minds in the Government would be rangement which would not set up a precedent or prejudice the rights of either union. But jurisdictional disputes are evidently hot potatoes which nobody in the Government likes to grasp. The National Labor Relations Board, for instance, has had a 5-year-old custom of avoiding intervention in jurisdictional

Ship Seizure Bill Indicates Strong House Sentiment for Utmost Aid to England

By GOULD LINCOLN.

By more than a 2-to-1 vote the House passed the foreign ship seizure bill, authorizing the President to acquire and to use the foreign merchant vessels which have been tied up in American ports as a result of the war. Fifty-one Republicans voted with 212 Democrats and 3 Progressives in favor of the measure, while 100 Republicans, 19 Democrats and 1 American-Labor voted against it. The vote was 266 to 120. Surely this vote in the House indicates the strong sentiment, which is becoming stronger, prevailing in the House for the utmost aid to England against the

The bill was an administration measure. However, 51 Republicans joined with their Democratic colleagues in support of the bill. The bill still has to run the gauntlet of the Senate-but its final passage seems assured in that body, also by substantial vote. Nor will an anticonvoy amendment, which Senator

Tobey of New Hampshire has said he will offer, be adopted. The Tobey amendment is a negative proposition, and since the bill itself says nothing about the use of convoys, Senators will feel at liberty to vote against the amendment without committing themselves to a policy of convoying. There is no doubt, however, that a defeat of the Tobey amendment by a substantial vote will be considered-and interpreted-as a boost for the supporters of the use of convoys to see that munitions and supplies are safely landed in Britain.

Diversion Strategy.

And should a German plane be able to drop a few bombs on one of our East Coast cities or throw a few shells ashore from a commerce raider, which would not have one chance in a hundred of escaping our naval patrols, the object would be to divert an expenditure of man power and material from outlying defense to local defense. It appears that reports of Germany building the smallest possible type of submarine (between 65 and 100 tons) are not correct. It is possible that such types may have been contemplated by German naval engineers at a time when America's intervention was far off, and considered by some unlikely.

The best available information shows, however, that the U-boats at present in the Atlantic and being built in the German yards are of medium size, about 750 tons each. These vessels have a cruising range of about 2,000 miles from base. This is a longer range than during the last war when the submarines were based at German ports like Wilhelmshaven and Heligoland.

There is no doubt in the minds of those responsible for the food shipments that the Germans will do their utmost to prevent them from reaching British ports. During the last war, food of any kind was declared contraband by all belligerents. The same drastic regulations are being enforced in the present war. The Germans will in all likelihood send their raiders out to intercept foodships going to England. TOMORROW in the Editorial Feature Section of The Sunday Star, Marquis W. Childs will give you the background of Iraq and other areas in the Near East where oil and the Suez Canal offer inviting plums for the hungry aggressors. His article will help you to an understanding of the vital nature of the situation as England defends and Germany prepares to attack. Lothrop Stoddard will supplement this article with another on the importance of Syria's position.

ONSTANTINE BROWN has prepared an exposition of the views of those who believe that the United States has reached a critical period in which it must decide to follow one of two paths, that toward isolation or that which leads to much closer cooperation with Great Britain. Felix Morley also will present a viewpoint on America's attitude toward the war. A review of the present week of fighting will be prepared by John C. Henry. You will find these articles highly interesting tomorrow in

THE DIARY OF OUR OWN SAMUEL PEPYS. Saturday, May 3.

Caught up R. Kirby, and so to play tennis with him, and we played four sets, each losing two, and thought it discreet not to play the fifth, and so in to visit the Coopers, and I had played three weeks in Sheffield and were now in Liverpool, and Alice tells me that she had a letter from Marjorie Eyre telling that they are done the best business in the hombed towns albeit most of the young male choristers are in the army. So after supper I early to bed.

Sunday, May 4.

Early up, and started to say to mysell "I must be up, and back to the court again," and kept it to myself, but went there and played four sets of doubles, losing all. But in the afternoon my boys played and then Mrs. Cooper and Tim were beaten by me and Anthony, but Tim and I lost at the change of partners. So home and took a bath, but there was no hot water, there being no oil for the heater, so imso after a frugal supper, to bed be-

At 7 o'clock waked and saw my boy polishing his shoes and said that I saw that he did arise and shine and he said that his shoes looked pretty muddy. So to the train and rode with Betty Howard, and I read her the names of various highsalaried presidents of corporations, to guess what the corporation was and it was sweet to see a Cudahy actually in the Cudahy Packing Co. So to see my wife and thence to see G. Tunney and so home forth-(Released by the Bell Syndicate, Inc.

More Street Cars Asked To Serve Eastern Area

Criticizing street car service on Pennsylvania avenue from Eighth street to Seventeenth street S.E. as inadequate, the Randle Highlands Citizens' Association last night urged that a substantial number of street cars be diverted from the Eighth street-Navy Yard route to serve residents of the east side of the

The New Joe Louis: Affable and Voluble

Time in sports doesn't march on. It races with bewildering swiftness you realized this again as Joe Louis, his sweating body carefully Proselyting and you realized this again as Joe Louis, his sweating body carefully covered, stretched out on his rubbing table at Riverside Stadium and admitted that his second fight with Max Schmeling marked the last time he got excited before stepping into a battle pit.

It doesn't seem as if seven years have passed since a spectacular Negro amateur from Detroit began to attract attention as a professional. Seven years ago prohibition was repealed. Franklin D. Roosevelt was serving his first year in the White House. Mussolini was a bigger guy than Hitler and Primo Carnera, who was heavyweight champion, was

Those seven years have dealt kindly with Joe Louis. He has won the heavyweight title, earned a fortune by successfully defending it 17 zealous college alumni scrambling to times, married, and changed from a shy, monosyllabic ex-cotton picker and Ford factory worker into a young veteran who, like most self-made men, has acquired a polish, affability and sense of humor.

He won't be 27 until next Tuesday, which day he will take off from Pacific Coast Conference. training, but already he is throwing out hints that he will retire from the ring. "S'far as Ah know," he was saying, "Ah got Buddy Baer, Conn letes of 5 member schools ineligible and Nova to fight this summer. We happened to cover both training camps before the fight. Schmeling, who was located in far-away Speculator, N. Y., was confident and cocky. Surrounded by perhaps half a dozen German newspapermen, who affected berets and miniature cameras hung from their necks. Schmeling did most of the talking.

Louis was training at Pompton Lakes, N. J. One day he was brought before two dozen newspapermen for a mass interview before the fight. It may be recalled that Joe had an uncanny knack of calling the round in Washington two apiece. which he would win. After a series of questions so worded that Louis could answer them by grunts, somebody asked him in what round it

Joe sat on a pine table, shy in his sloe-eyed manner although it was ing of the athletic code, last sumfashionable at the time to depict him as sullen on the eve of battle. He held up three fingers. This was one of the times Joe was wrong. The boy whom Schmeling knocked out in 12 rounds in 1936 walked out two years later and almost committed murder. In two minutes he completely destroyed Schmeling and even when it was over he wouldn't talk much, although he had all the wind which he carried into the ring.

He Wasn't Impressed by Schmeling's Courage

Now he will talk about that June night of 1938. "An guess that's the last time Ah really got excited over a fight was that time." he was saying yesterday as Trainer Jack Blackburn kneaded his muscles. "Ah got a little keyed up for Galento but not since then."

A reporter asked if defending his title had become "just business." Louis lifted his head from the flat table and nodded. "Ah guess so. That's and brother as inducements to the way Ah feel about it now.

Baer and Simon Hurt His Hands

A question was tenderly posed. In light of the Simon, Musto and Godoy fights, was there any significance? In other words, Joe, do you hit as hard now as ever? Joe used to let Blackburn, a great fighter in his day, do the answering.

Yesterday he spoke for himself. "Ah guess Ah could if Ah tried." he said. "Ah hit Red Burman as hard as Ah evah hit anybody. If yo'all mean the Simon fight Ah hit him hard, too, but he's a big man and a doctor told me he's got extra thick cheek-bones. Ah'll be honest. Ah hurt my hands when Ah fought Maxie Baer and Ah hurt 'em when Ah fought Simon. Those boys' faces really hurt my hands.

Joe says that he respects Buddy Baer-for his potentialities. "Ah saw him fight twice," he explained. "He can move faster than Max. By the Associated Press. He's got a good left, while Max ain't got none, and he's got a quicker right hand. But Max had a lot of heart no matter what people say about him, and Ah don' think Buddy has got it. Ah think Max hit a little harder, too. If Buddy had Max's heart he'd be a real good fighter." Joe says that when Uncle Sam calls he will be ready. "Joe Palooka k doin' all right," he said. "If they git me, too, we ought to put on a pretty good fight." Joe grinned slyly and Blackburn slapped him in the region where the champion once hit the deck. "'Course," he added, "Uncle Sam will have to find a way to cut in Uncle Mike Jacobs or it sin't gonna come off."

With Overlin apparently out in front seven rounds to one as they went into the ninth, Soose fought desperately to capture the next two heats. But Overlin rallied to keep things under control until the fourteenth, when Soose abandoned caution and finesse for his most furious assault of the evening, to take the last two rounds by safe margins. A crowd of 11.676 shelled out a net of $35,973 to see Soose get his second verdict over Overlin and the second to be questioned.

Joe Louis Good Talker Commissioners If Subject Is Right

By JOHN LARDNER, This week in a magazine is a story by a gangling fellow named Caswell Adams about the new Joe Louisthe Louis who talks, lives, breathes his first show on the big time.

Joe came to the office of Mike Jacobs, the duce (pronounced deuce) of boxing, the day after the fight. Word had got around that he was going to talk to the press. It was just an idle rumor.

Pretty soon one genius said, "What is your ambition. Joe?" This query at the Rock Creek Park golf course

The new Joe Louis is a talker. And Joe seldom answers a question any more without a wisecrack. Adams dates this metamorphosis from the second Schmeling fight.

He says that Joe began to talk and talk smoothly after he ground Schmeling's kidneys to powder and leveled the great parachute-jumper to the altitude of the canvas.

But Joe had a pretty nimble

"Who's that man Detroit got this year, that new man, that hits a lot of home runs?" he asked. "Rudy York." "Yeah, Rudolph Preston York."

That's right. "He's holding out," said Joe, "and he's a rookie. He never played ball in the big leagues before, and he wants a better price for what he does. That's funny.

"But a couple years from now, he'll be a great hitter," said Joe. From what I hear, he got a natural swing. Remember what I'm saying, a couple years from now he'll he a star and he won't hold out." The visiting expert from the South scratched his head when we left Joe's camp. "He's a pretty smart boy," said

Shrine of Immaculate Conception Will Be Scene Of Rite Tomorrow

The ninth annual intercollegiate celebration in honor of the Blessed Mother, in which Catholic students from all the colleges and universities of Washington will participate, will be held tomorrow at 3:30 p.m. in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at the Catholic University. Coinciding with the popular observance of Mother's Day, it is expected that the ceremonies, which will be a very colorful religious demonstration, will attract many non-Catholics as well as Catholic worshipers.

Sponsored by the Students' Spir-Itual Council of Catholic University, the program will be under the auspices of students of Dunbarton College. The services within the shrine will include the student dedication to the Blessed Mother, which will be read by Miss Elizabeth Batchelder of Dunbarton College. The Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, titular Bishop of Bilta and rector of the university, will officiate at the benediction of the blessed sacrament, and the sermon will be given by the Rey Gerald F. Dillon, dean of men of the university. The university choir will sing the benedic-

Preceding the ceremonies in the shrine, there will be a procession. Members of the faculty will assemble at the entrance of the shrine to review the procession. Academic costumes will be worn. Crisis Strategy Involves The Domestic Life of All

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

This war calls for a greater strategy than mere battle plans. It is an all-out struggle for the reshaping of the world. So we have to look well to our ultimate resources, wherein the spirit of democracy dwells. The crisis calls for special preparedness, not only in munition plants, but also in the homes of the Nation The hour is ripe for a "drive" to develop the output of character in family life. # Case of Burko Expected to Go To Jury Monday

Testimony Tells of Alleged Controversy Among Judges

troversy among Police Court judges was presented in testimony in the case of Joseph R. Burko, dismissed Police Court clerk, when evidence was concluded in District Court yesterday, the third day of the trial.

Burko, who is on trial for splitting traffic fines, grew out of antagonism on the part of Police Judge Walter J. Casey and Edward M. Curran, former police judge, now United States attorney, for Judge Hobart Newman and the defendant himself. missed the jury for the week end to report Monday morning. He admonished the jury of 11 men and 1 woman not to talk to any one about the case, not to allow any one to talk to them, not to read about it, or even to listen to it on the radio.

Final Arguments Monday. Counsel Allen Krouse and Defense Counsel James J. Laughlin plan final arguments of about an hour each Monday and Justice Letts probably will give the case to the jury about the middle of

The controversy, according to

Justice F. Dickinson Letts disasked Mr. Laughlin.

"I did not," replied Mr. Curran. Confidential records of the Department of Justice investigation into the court record of Judge Newman were subpoenaed by the defense, but Frank Holloman, a special agent from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, appeared with a ruling by Frank Murphy, former Attorney General, and a message from J. Edgar Hoover, director of the bureau, to the effect that the records could not be disclosed because they were confidential. Justice Letts, upholding this position, refused to specimens, according to Inspector order the records produced. This Bernard W. Thompson, chief of Deinvestigation, Burko had told the jury previously, had given Judge Newman a "clean bill of health."

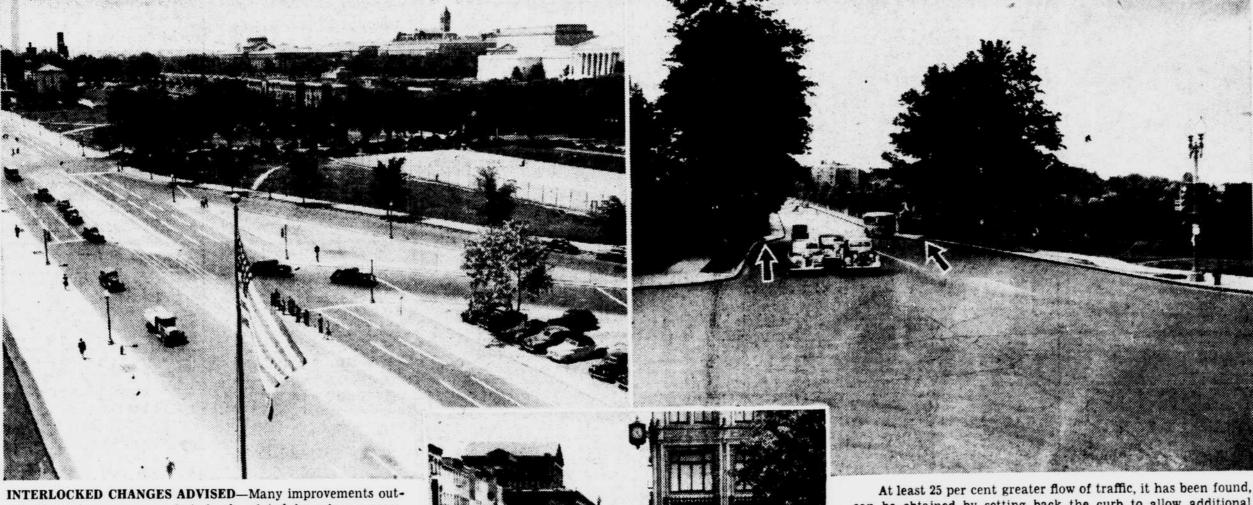

Since the defendant is on trial for having split traffic fines with a former Police Court baliff, in cases where court records were changed to show "sentence suspended" and personal bonds taken, defense counsel asked Mr. Curran if in his experience as a judge in police court he had ever suspended a sentence in chambers in the absence of a defendant. Mr. Curran replied that to the best of his knowledge he never had used such a practice.

Whitehurst Would Improve Streetcar Loading Platforms and Add Pedestrian Islands

On May 20 the District Commissioners will hold a public hearing on the $44,450,000 highway construction program drawn up after surveys lasting more than a year and desscribed in detail in The Star when released by Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst April 25. This is the last of a series of articles in which The Star has analyzed in detail the purpose of all phases of the program.

No. 7—Suggestions for Safety

By PAT JONES.

A number of closely interlocked street and traffic changes, ranging from more consideration for pedestrians to steps designed State roads be freed of tolls. to bring about greater use of mass transportation service, are recommended by Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst in connection with the new roadway program.

While these developments are not included in the general plan, they will afford greater safety, he said, and for that reason alone should be put into effect "regardless of who pays the bill."

One of the most important of the proposed improvements is toll highway. the replacement of every painted streetcar loading zone with an improved type of platform, wher-* ever street width permits and traffic density warrants. "These death traps should be replaced in the immediate future even at the sacrifice of other work," Capt.

Whitehurst declared Misplaced Confidence.

The trouble with the painted safety zone, the director explained, is that the motorist cannot see it as he approaches, while the pedestrial stands within its boundaries confident that he is protected from injury by passing vehicles. Two persons were killed in Washington while standing in these zones last year, and another casualty was added to the list as late as February of this year.

The type of platform suggested in place of the painted zones already is in use in certain sections of the city. They have been found entirely satisfactory, Capt. Whitehurst said do not involve a great outlay of money, and add to the appearance of the streets.

As another move to reduce deaths from this cause, the highway director recommended that the number of streetcar loading points or stops be reduced to the minimum consistent with proper service. He said buses and street cars to permit

"Work of this cnaracter," he re ported in connection with the proposed intersection improvements, "has been undertaken in recent years at several points and has resulted in the elimination of very hazardous conditions. Pedestrian movement is well protected and vehicular flow is controlled so as to intofore largely uncontrolled areas." Capt. Whitehurst termed widening of main highways through community commercial areas so as to provide greater roadway widths, another of his proposals, "a beneficial roadway improvement for a little money." He pointed out that, no matter how strict regulations prohibiting parking, there will be curb stopping, which takes from one to two lanes temporarily out of use for through traffic. In case this occurs on each side of a six-lane street simultaneously, only two lanes will be left for the main artery of

But an extra lane eliminates this crowded condition. The director recalled that one of the worst congested points in the city-Rhode Island avenue N.E., between South Dakota avenue and Twenty-second street-was made a smooth-flowing artery by adding another lane on the north side.

Would Set Back Curbs.

Capt. Whitehurst further proposed that curbs be set back on intersecting roadways near junction points controlled by traffic lights to provide additional lanes. This, he said, would greatly reduce congestion. It was tried on Connecticut avenue, at the north end of the William Howard Taft Bridge, and was found to permit an average of 25 per cent more traffic to pass through the intersection at each light change.

The final proposals, while they are expected to follow this initial plan, will come after all supporting data on which the report is based have been made available.

Surveys to Continue. The director pointed out, for instance, that the traffic surveys in connection with the report will be continued indefinitely to keep a current picture of conditious before the Highway Department. has been favorable. He said there seemed to be general accord with the plan to boost the gasoline tax 2 cents, a revenue source estimated to bring in enough money to complete immediate phases of the program over an eight-year period. Those who would pay the tax, he added, apparently realize that they already are paying this sum, due to increased fuel consumption from traffic congestion, and that they will benefit in the end, both in safety and in reduced transportation expense.

Capt. Whitehurst has recommended that the Commissioners, after approving the program, authorize the corporation counsel, in co-operation with the Highway Department, to prepare the necessary work. After this is done, he promised, the construction will be advanced on a basis of as wise a priority of projects as can be deter-

A number of closely interlocked street and traffic changes, ranging from more consideration for pedestrians to steps designed ward indications of a typical 'shaketo bring about greater use of mass transportation service, are recommended by Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst in connection with the new roadway program.

While these developments are not included in the general plan, they will afford greater safety, he said, and for that reason alone was no public interest in the bill is should be put into effect "regardless of who pays the bill."

Whitehurst declared. Misplaced Confidence. The trouble with the painted safety zone, the director explained, is that the motorist cannot see it as he approaches, while the pedestrian stands within its boundaries confident that he is protected from injury by passing vehicles. Two persons were killed in Washington while standing in these zones last problems in Washington and going year, and another casualty was into detail only enough to show

Control Effected.

"Work of this cnaracter," he reported in connection with the proposed intersection improvements. "has been undertaken in recent years at several points and has resulted in the elimination of very hazardous conditions. Pedestrian movement is well protected and vehicular flow is controlled so as to insure a safe movement into the heretofore largely uncontrolled areas." Capt. Whitehurst termed widening of main highways through community commercial areas so as to provide greater roadway widths, another of his proposals, "a beneficial roadway improvement for a little money." He pointed out that, no matter how strict regulations prohibiting parking, there will be curb stopping, which takes from one to two lanes temporarily out of use for through traffic. In case this occurs on each side of a six-lane street simultaneously, only two lanes will be left for the main artery of

But an extra lane eliminates this crowded condition. The director recalled that one of the worst congested points in the city-Rhode Island avenue N.E., between South Dakota avenue and Twenty-second street—was made a smooth-flowing Son of Belvoir Officer artery by adding another lane or the north side.

Would Set Back Curbs.

Capt. Whitehurst further proposed that curbs be set back on intersecting roadways near junction points controlled by traffic lights to provide additional lanes. This, he said, would greatly reduce congestion. It was tried on Connecticut avenue, at the north end of the William Howard Taft Bridge, and was found to permit an average of 25 per cent more traffic to pass through the intersection at each light change.

"There is no simpler method of increasing roadway capacity," he

New Group to Assume Duties Monday In Baltimore

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE. May 10.-Twentythree new jurors who will assume their duties Monday will have for their consideration the recommendation of their predecessors that they "take up and conclude" the investigation of the alleged "shakedown" activities during the recent session of the State Legislature.

In a special report, submitted on its retirement yesterday, the January term grand jury wrote that it had turned over to proper prosecuting authorities sworn testimony which "has indicated to us that possible offenses may have been committed in other jurisdictions."

While the retiring jury did not disclose what counties might be involved, it was learned that Marvin Anderson, States attorney for Anne Arundel, and Patrick Schnauffer, for Frederick County, had conferred recently with State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells during the last stages of the grand jury's probe.

The jury's advice to the incoming jurors that if they take up the probe 'additional assistance will be forthcoming" was later interpreted by Mr. Wells as meaning that a special investigator would be provided.

Further Assistance.

"The question of what is to be done." Mr. Wells said, "will depend in a measure on the attitude of the incoming grand jury. If they accept the recommendation in this report to go on with the investigation, I am of the opinion that some arrangements will be made to get further

The report explained that "because of the expiration of our term of office we are unable to follow the investigation to a final conclusion.

During its term of office the investigating body returned an indictment against Charles S. Houck, Frederick County member of the House of Delegates, who was charged with perjury by giving conflicting testimony before the grand jury and with attempting to obstruct justice. Mr. Houck is scheduled to be tried May 21.

National Conclave To Discuss Needs Of Defense Effort

Washington realtors will be hosts next Thursday, Friday and Saturday to residential builders from all over the country as the first national conference of the Home Builders Institute of America is held at the Mayflower Hotel. A program for home builders to follow during the defense period and after the emergency passes will be laid out at this important meeting.

The institute was formed last winwithin the National Association of Real Estate Boards to give home builders more recognition and better representation in the national organization. One of the leaders in the movement to organize the institute was Waverly Taylor, a prominent developer and president of the Washington Real Estate Board. Mr. Taylor is expected to play an important role in next week's conference, along with Edward R. Carr, chairman of the Home Builders Committee of the local realtors organization.

Virginians to Participate. All active builders of residential property are invited to take part in conference discussions. It was pointed out that home building is under extreme pressure now to develop new techniques and short cuts so that private initiative may speedily assume its share of defense building. Along this line, one of the greatest problems is for private industry to find means of producing dwelling units for the very low income groups of workers which of all types of permits approved in defense housing authorities say are most needed. News About Builders and Real Estate Personalities

Local realtors will celebrate the 29th anniversary of the founding of the Washington Real Estate Board with a meeting at the Mayflower Hotel Wednesday night, May 21, President Waverly Taylor announced today. Details for the meeting are being worked out by the board's Program Committee, headed by Charles H. Hillegeist.

The meeting is scheduled for 8 o'clock. Philip W. Kniskern, Philadelphia, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, and Herbert T. Shannon, the first secretary of the local board, will be speakers. A sound and color cinema will be shown, entitled "Pcople Come First," which portrays efforts being made to solve the Capital's traffic problems as well as giving details to be considered in developing home communities.

Founding of the board dates back to May, 1912, when it was known as the Real Estate Brokers' Association of the District of Columbia. It was not until 1921 that it was reorganized and given its present name, with headquarters offices and a full-time secretary. Among the original founders were Mr. Shannon. John L. Weaver. Lee D. Latimer. Charles W. Fairfax and the late William H. Saunders and E. F. Fox. A buffet supper will be served following the business session.

Screen Is Marketed Which Defeats Heat By Shutting Out Sun

Venetian Blind Principle Allows Air to Circulate But Stops Rays

By LAWRENCE CROLIUS.

Are you looking for some simple, inexpensive way to keep your house or apartment cool and comfortable during the hot summer months? If you work in a pleasantly air-conditioned office you probably notice the heat more than ever when you try to relax in a stuffy living room, or sleep in a torrid bedroom. This isn't at all necessary these days, you know, because numerous devices have been brought out in recent years which do much towards providing comfort without involving great expense. Keeping heat out of a room is a major point in this battle against the weather, and an obvious point of entry are the windows. But if you close the windows the supply of air is cut off, and the inside of the house heats up like the interior of your car when it stands in the sun with all the windows rolled up. Hence a way must be found to keep out the sun's rays, and still let air

A new type of window screen now Is available which takes care of wires are flat, and make an amazstill cut off the rays of the sun, and keep heat outside. We are advised by the makers of this sun screen that it is installed like any other window or porch screen. It will keep out insects, and since the direct days of the sun are prevented from crashing through your windows, you also should notice a big reduction in the fading of curtains and draperies. * * * *

Few things can be quite as exasperating as an electric outlet which refuses to accept the prongs of plug that you are groping around with. Outlets are installed in such out-of-the-way places that it takes a direct drive and a lucky push to make the desired connection, and we believe it is high time this element of chance is removed in favor of a more positive arrangement.

A simple new face plate, which guides the prongs into the slots automatically, answers this problem. On this new convenient outlet the slots are arranged so that they are set deep with a slanting face all around which centers the plug and enables you to make the connection

Some of the fun of camping in the Maine woods can be found in your own backyard if you set up one of the new outdoor fireplaces which are becoming very popular. With one of these simple devices you can cook all sorts of fine foods, including steaks and chops, and everyone knows how much better food tastes outdoors, especially if it is prepared over hickory logs.

The company making these new fireplaces provides you with a framework around which you build a sim-

First Aid For the Ailing House

By ROGER B. WHITMAN.

One of my readers explains that he lives in an old two-family house, and that many times during the day and night the volume from his radio would change from loud to soft; inaudible one minute and the next minute blaring. Without realizing it, he goes to the root of the trouble in adding that it happens when the people upstairs turn the switches on and off. Being an old house, the wiring that was put in took care of only the few lights used in those days. As time had gone on, more lights had been added, and in particular, many appliances are now in use; radio, vacuum cleaner, cooking appliances, and so forth. The wiring is now called on to supply far more current than it was intended for, and is not big enough to carry currents for all the demands. It can be compared to putting several faucets on a water pipe only big enough to supply a single faucet; when additional faucets are turned on, the pipe has not the capacity for a full supply. For convenience the house should be rewired, and rewiring is necessary for safety. An overloaded electric wire will become heated to such an extent that it may become a fire risk. Rewiring calls for the services of a trained and licensed electrician.

Paint on Wallpaper.

Q. We have lived in our house only a short time and find that under several coats of paint on the upper walls of our bathroom is a layer of wallpaper. Before repainting, we should like to take off the wallpaper, for it causes the paint to chip. How can we do it? A. Wash the wall repeatedly with a solution of two pounds of washing soda to the gallon of water. This is a paint remover and in softening the paint it will go through the wallpaper and loosen it. Do not let the solution spatter on paint or varnish work that you want to keep, for it will have a damaging effect. After taking off the wallpaper, wash with clear water to remove traces of the washing soak and allow the wall to dry thoroughly before painting.

One or Two Boilers.

Q. My two-flat building has a hotwater heating boiler for each flat, and I want to burn oil. One company says to put a burner in each boiler and another recommends replacing the two boilers with one new boiler, which I would prefer. What is your advice? A. A single boiler should be more economical and less trouble. A competent and responsible burner company will advise you on the type of burner best suited to your conditions. Keep away from a cut-rate installation. For best service and greatest economy in the long run. go to a reliable dealer and pay a good price.

Q. Little by little I have been replacing the plaster walls of my kitchen with plywood. The job is nearly finished, but the first par now has finger marks and dirt stains. What cleaning compound can I use on the bare plywood? What would be a suitable finish?

Addresses for Leaflets.

As stated in footnotes to my column, I have prepared leaflets on many subjects relating to the care of a house, including methods of treatment for various household insects. These will be sent out without charge on receipt of a self-addressed envelope carrying a 3-cent stamp. There are many requests for these leaflets without the envelopes, and often with no addresses on the letters. Requests for these leaflets cannot be filled if I do not know where they are to be sent. Discolored Paint.

Q. Storm doors and window sills are discolored from copper screens; doors also from the brass trim. How can this be stopped?

A. Clean the screening by scrubbing with scouring powder, and then after rinsing and drying, apply a thin coat of a mixture of two parts of spar varnish and one part each of linseed oil and turpentine. Do not put this on thick enough to fill the meshes. Solid brass does not have a staining effect; your hardware and trim are evidently of brass-plated steel, and stains are from the rusting of the steel. To stop it, take off the trim and cover

Easily Installed Chute Eliminates Cost of Carrying Coal

'Creep Resisting' Sheet Lead Coming Back as Material for Roofing

By DOROTHY DUCAS and ELIZABETH GORDON.

Now that the heating system of rour house is about to "hibernate" for the summer it is time to consider improvements, both small and large, which are made more easily while the furnace or boiler is not in use.

Sometimes the smallest additions and alterations count for a lot. Here, for example, is a simple thing which can save you inconvenience and money next winter. If you have a coal-fired heating system why not install a cloat chute through which the fuel can be delivered to your basement storage bin?

A coal chute is a very simple piece of equipment, installed in the foundation wall of a house flush with the pavement, practically on a level with the grade line. It hardly shows from the outside. Yet when your coal supplier calls he can pour the fuel into your bins quickly without charging you a carrying fee.

We know one family that recently paid $1.25 above the cost of two tons of coal because it was carried into we figure that six more tons of coal expansion due to a rise in tempera- smooth it? chute, for it sells as low as $4.45. Of course this price does not in- has a steep pitch, tends to flow clude cost of installation, but that downward when the weather turns annual "modernization" budget. And with a coal chute you save possible scarring of siding and masonry if the coal is delivered by hand.

The manufacturer of the inexpensive coal chute also makes a steel clean-out door for chimneys, which facilitates the removal of ashes and soot from the bottom of a chimney or flue. It costs 58 cents, exclusive of installation charges, and measures 1012 by 1012 inches around the frame, with an 8x8-inch door.

The most important difference between the new light lead and its predecessors for the last 60 years is the increased "creep resistance" of the new product. To make oldfashioned sheet lead lighter it was thinned and its "creep resistance" was much reduced, which was a recognized defect. As soon as the wood has begun to absorb the turpentine -5 to 10 minutes-rub the filler well into the wood with a clean rag, working in a circular motion, taking off as much as the rag will absorb. Allow the filler a day to set hard and then sand lightly to achieve a smooth surface.

The cabinet is then ready for painting. Use a good grade enamel or lacquer of the desired color and give it two coats. When this is finished the cabinet is mounted on the wall with 3-inch screws so spaced to catch two studs in the house framing. Holes for these screws are drilled in the back panel just under the top shelf.

Excessive Heat Shrinks Interior Woodwork

Interior trim work, such as door and window casing, shrinks under dry, super-heated condition which prevails in many homes during winter months. If trim has been mitered at the corners, the early spring will find an open joint at each of these miters due to loss of width in the cross section of the wood. One way to prevent such openings is to install all interior woodwork in a bone-dry condition. Even then, the material may absorb some moisture during the construction process.

There is another means of preventing the opening of miters-and that is to eliminate miter cuts. This

Thorough Soil Preparation Important Factor When Planting Boxwood

Adequate Drainage Must Also Be Assured if Specimens Are to Have Long Life

The mention of boxwood brings to the mind's eye pictures of Colonial ardens, of beautiful English estates and of stately old mansions. We normally associate boxwood with old historic places and so revere it "The Living Antique" is sometimes given as a descriptive term for boxwood

That we should associate boxwood with Colonial America and early English gardens is not hard to explain, although it is not native to either America or England. Gardeners have long appreciated the value of this marvelous evergreen, for the richness of its foliage, its fragrance, its comparative freedom from insect pests and diseases are merits enough to endear any plant or shrub to the garden-minded

Boxwood is very slow of growth and so does not quickly outgrow its position. It is not particularly fussy about soil or climate, will respond to severe pruning and training. It will grow in sun or shade. These are certainly sufficient attributes to make this shrub a most valued member of the magic garden, be it Colonial or modern.

There are a number of species of boxwood (Buxus), but only two are grown to any extent. The so-called English box and the American box are horticultural varieties of the common box (B. sempervirens). The Korean box (B. microphylla) is larger leaved and is hardier than the common box. It merits wider planting in areas farther North where the English box is subject to winter &

Of the many horticultural varieties of the common box, the American box (Var. arborescens) and the dwarf or English box (Var. suffruticosa) are most useful. California's Poppy Enjoys Legend All Its Own CALIFORNIA'S poppy is quite a personage in flower society. It enjoys the distinction of a place of its own in legend. Little wonder, then, hat it tosses its head a bit proudly at times!

Growing Cactus Indoors Is Fascinating Hobby; Simple to Care For

Prepare Containers Carefully For Reception of Plants; Many Types Available

By C. F. Greeves-Carpenter

One phase of gardening open to every one is that of growing eacti indoors in self-designed miniature dish gardens. There is such a wide variety of these fascinating plants from which to select that the actual planning of the dish garden or gardens offers limitless possibilities for decorative effects.

Cacti, although comparatively little known to apartment dwellers and others who would like a garden yet lack the outdoor space, are truly American plants. With one solitary exception found in Ceylon, the cacti are native to North and South America and the nearby islands. These plants, and the succulents with which they are so often combined in dish gardens, offer the most varied and grotesque forms of plant life which range in size from small, prickly "buttons" to fronded, palm-like miniature trees and giant, snake-like species which twist into all manner of odd

Though the cacti do not bloom frequently they have an unusual 'eye-appeal" as the shades of their spines give them such beautiful coloring. The shades range from white to black, orange, red and gold, and the coloring of the spines in some varieties is so beautiful that one marvels at their delicacy. It is when the cacti are in bloom that they are perhaps the most beautiful, for the blossoms far surpass all other flowers in their delicacy and charm.

Prepare the pots or bowls by placing in the bottoms some charcoal and cinders, or sand and gravel, to create proper drainage conditions. Fill in with soil composed of a mixture of good topsoil, preferably weed-free soil purchased from a florist or nurseryman, with an equal quantity of sand, adding a quart of finely ground limestone, together with a little charcoal to each bushel

With the soil properly prepared, one should draw a planting plan so that the completed garden will present a finished effect. The plan will, of course, differ, depending some-what on the type of the plants, the kind and arrangement of rocks and shells that may be used to enhance the effectiveness of the dish garden. and on the actual size and shape of the garden container. If the dish is oblong, then the taller growing species should be at the back. If it s square or circular, a good plan to follow would be to plant the taller varieties in the center, tapering down to the border with the lower-growing cacti. Do not overcrowd these plants, for it is necessary for them natural growth.

Roots should be planted straight down in the soil, rather than spread fanwise. If the roots are very short and the plant top-heavy, support it with sticks until such time as the roots have had time to become established, when they will anchor the plant themselves. After planting, thoroughly water the cacti but not so much that the soil is puddled.

Setting the lawn mower so that it cuts not less than 11/4 inches high one way to choke out crab grass -the easiest way to control this pest. Withholding water and fertilizer also help to control it.

Newly planted shrubs and trees need watering and mulching. Boxwood and some of the evergreens will be benefited by a lath or burlap screen. Strong sunlight increases evaporation, as does wind, and the reduced root system cannot take up soil moisture fast enough to meet these drains. A light cover, however unsightly, will reduce the moistu loss through the leaves.

Sodium chlorate is an effective control for poison ivy. The crystals sprinkled onto the ivy foliage while moist is ordinarily sufficient to kill the entire plant. A strong growing plant may require a second application. Use care with sodium chlorate for it renders combustible material explosively inflammable. However, with care it is a more successful eradicator than the hoe. The lack of spring showers has favored the aphids, those tiny sucking insects that cluster on the tender new shoots of spireas and roses. Nicotine-sulphate (two teaspoonfuls to the gallon of water), rotenone or strong soapsuds are effective controls. Applications on two successive days seems to be the best spraying program. Keep your tulips growing with food and water. Leave the foliage undisturbed until it has matured. Dig the bulbs and store in a cool, dry place until fall. The supply of these early spring flowering bulbs is apt to be short and we should take the best care of those we have. Now is the time to watch for the gray garment of dense down, darker COLLECTOR - SALESMAN for established above than beneath. By July 12 resemble their parents, without, of course, the "plumes." By July 18 COOK experienced for restaurant. 626 E all evidence of down has disappeared; light grayish feathers on the side of neck and face indicate the coming contour feathers.

By the time the children are grown, the parents look seedy and need of fresh, new clothes. Going in and out of the damp hallway is extremely hard on their plumage. All the wing feathers are a dirty gray, even the vanes are disconnected and have ragged edges. The once white "plumes" are soiled and matted together, the brilliant colors of the bill, faded.

With domestic duties honorably discharged, the elder auklets begin to grow a complete new "wardrobe" which as a matter of fact was making headway in the nursery, since old plumage is actually pushed out of the way by the new.

Auklets may be observed cruising surely fashion, usually three to six pany will seem to rise slightly above the surface and dive. They are going after gammarids, of which they are fond and upon which they seem to depend for the greater part of their food.

By THORNTON W. BURGESS. Peter Rabbit looked up at Jenny Wren as she fussed about just over his head and there was mischief in ISV, 1,500k. his eyes as he said: "That tongue of yours is just as sharp as ever, but it is good to hear it just the same. We certainly would miss it. You are so late that I was beginning to worry a little for fear something boro Glee Club might have happened to you and that you wouldn't be back here this summer. You know me well enough, Jenny Wren, to know that you can't hurt me with your tongue, sharp as it is, so you may as well save your breath to tell me a few things I want to know. Now, if you are so fond of the Old Orchard as you pretend to be, why did you ever leave it?"

Jenny Wren's bright eyes snapped. 'Why do you eat?" she asked sharply. "Because I'm hungry," replied

Peter promptly. "What would you eat if there was nothing to eat?" sputtered Jenny. "That's a silly question," retorted

"It is no more silly than asking me why I leave the Old Orchard,' replied Jenny. "Do give us birds credit for a little common sense, Peter. We can no more live without eating than you can, and in winter there is no food at all here for most of us, so we go where there is food. Those who can eat the kinds of food found here in winter, stay. They are lucky. That's what they are lucky. And yet-" Jenny Wren paused.

"Yet what?" prompted Peter. "I wonder sometimes if you folks who are at home all the time know just what a blessed place home is. replied Jenny. "It is only six months since we went South, but I said it seems ages, and it does. The best part of going away is coming home. That sounds rather mixed, but it is true just the same. It isn't home down there in the Sunny South even if we do spend as much time there as we do here. This is home. and there's no place like it. What's that, Mr. Wren? I haven't seen all the Great World? Perhaps I haven't, but I've seen enough of it! # Union Jack Hides 'Made in Germany'

How dealers in textile fabrics came to import shirts made in Germany and marked with a Union Jack label is the problem put up to the government by a woman living near Maryborough, Australia. She was mending a shirt given her husband by a friend at the height of the "Buy Empire Goods" campaign. She unpicked the label and found underneath a flap with the hidden words, "Made in Germany."

When West dropped the ten. South realized that West had doubled with only three trumps; hence South was sure that West must have the diamond king to bolster up his double. Since a diamond finesse was bound to lose. South decided to hope for four hearts in the East hand. Accordingly, South cashed the ace and 15. queen of hearts, discarding diamonds from the dummy.

West chose not to ruff since his only hope at this point was that South would make a mistake. But South's course was quite clear now. He laid down the ace of diamonds. ruffed a diamond in the dummy, and ruffed a club in his own hand. West 1 could take his high trumps whenever he liked, but he could not prevent South from winning 10 tricks by the delayed cross-ruff.

But Nothing Much Comes of It Because Its Intended Satire Refuses Sturdily to Jell

By JAY CARMODY.

The satirical western, the one that kids the chaps off the cowboys. is a picture that catches the fancy of a lot of Hollywood big shots. They never will forget it was such a caricature that salvaged the career of Marlene Dietrich and made a wad of money for its producer.

Because they won't forget it, comes now "The Lady From Cheyenne" at Keith's. Frank Lloyd produced and directed it and in the process utilized a cast that fairly bristles.

There is a lot of other bright nonsense, too. But nonsense is tricky stuff, nothing falling flatter when it fails to come off. "Affectionately Yours" falls flat on its face in some of its would-be zany moments that are not. Occasionally the reaction toward the goings-on is akin to the one you have for the party of noisy convention delegates at the next table in a night club, so full of their own hilarity that there is not enough left for others within range.

Perhaps the major failing of "Affectionately Yours," however, is that it is based on a premise many will have difficulty in accepting. of the college musical, "Sis Hopkins" is not, you might well be warned, a glittering and sophisticated filmusical; its humor is broad, not brittle, and designed to strike with the impact of a nice. creamy custard pie in the mush. But it is refreshingly vigorous. Even the presence of Jerry Colonna Makes a Gay Thing doesn't detract from the enjoyment of its engaging slapstick fun.

In addition to Miss Canova, Republic has provided a cast which includes Susan Hayward being a nasty little girl quite nastily, Charlie Butterworth being that be-Bob Crosby being Bob Crosby, which means leading his orchestra. There is a tuneful score, too, reaching its peak in an elaborate production number which has Judy Canova impersonating Cleanatra and Marie Antoinette, which ought to take care of Cleopatra and Marie
