By the Associated Press.

SINGAPORE, Jan. 10 .- Driven back relentlessly after a brief, hard stand along the Slim River, 220 miles north of here, the British were told tonight by their commander, Gen. Sir. Henry R. Pownall, that they faced desperate days ahead in defending the most vital areas, including Singapore.

(A Japanese broadcast heard in San Francisco by C. B. S. claimed the capture of Kuala Lumpur, Malayan rubber capital only 180 miles north of Singapore, after attacks from the north and northwest.

(Earlier Japanese claims hinted that the British had abandoned the Kuala Lumpur area after the Japanese had occupied an airfield only two and a half miles southwest of the city and started an all-out attack on the town from the rear.) That the British carried out the "scorched earth" policy in their retreat was indicated in these reports from Central Malaya: All mines in the rich tin producing area are being flooded and dredges and all equipment de-stroved. Hundreds of thousands of valuable rubber trees—which require six years of careful tending before yielding-are being ruthlessly chopped down. Malayan businessmen joined in the campaign of destruction. Those at Kuala Lumpur opened doors of their stores to the public and gave away all their stocks.

A Kuala Lumpur newspaper, after publishing 46 years, put out its final edition, summoned its staff and ordered it to wreck the presses. Jan Shin Is Bombed.

Measure Expected To Be Revised In Conference

By GOULD LINCOLN. . The Senate late yesterday passed a wartime price-control measure so much amended by its farm bloc that critics said it would increase food prices 25 per cent, and Majority Leader Barkley called it a "farm-relief bill.'

The vote on final passage was 83 to 1. Employer of Victim And 2 Small Children Witness Shooting

A 17-year-old girl was shot to death by a jealous suitor, who then ended his own life in the living room of the girl's employer in Arlington County yesterday afternoon.

Five hours after James Taylor, 25-year-old ice company employe, shot himself, Miss Martha Lamb died of a bullet wound in the head. inflicted, according to police, by Taylor in a fit of jealousy.

The tragedy occurred in the home where the girl worked, and in the presence of her employer and his two small children, who were playing in the living room at 2007 North Pollard street.

The children, 6 and 7 years of age, ran screaming from the room while their father, William R. Western, who said he thought Taylor was going to shoot him, escaped through a front door to summon police. When the police arrived, Miss Lamb and Taylor were lying wounded on the living room floor.

The Clarendon ambulance carried both to Emergency Hospital where Taylor was pronounced dead on arrival. Miss Lamb died at 7 p.m. Threats Revealed.

Mr. Western, a Capital Transit Co. employe, told reporters Taylor moved to Arlington several months ago from Stanardsville, Va., and that Miss Lamb was his childhood sweetheart there. Miss Lamb was employed as a domestic by Mr. and Mrs. Western about three and a half months ago.

For the last month, Mr. Western declared, Miss Lamb had been threatened by Taylor because she was having other dates.

Yesterday afternoon when Miss Lamb mentioned the threat again to her employer, Mr. Western said he went to the home of Taylor to warn him against further threats.

"He told me that he had no intention of harming her," Mr. Western said. "After talking with him a while, he half-way convinced me that he was telling the truth and offered to walk back to my home with me to explain to Miss Lamb.

"When we got home, they talked very quietly for a while. I sat in the living room and heard only parts of the conversation."

Mr. Western said the conversation centered about the threats to Miss Lamb and that he did overhear Taylor saying: "You know I had no such in tention."

Hearing Gets Plea for 'Quick Death' Rather Than 'Strangulation'

By the Associated Press

Chairman, Murray of the Senate Small Business Committee said yesterday he understood the Government might undertake to recompense automobile dealers for "expenses" incurred by the order which froze their stocks.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson had indicated such a step, Sena-tor Murray said, at the conclusion of a hearing during which one witness asked that the Government impose a quick death" rather than "strangulation" if it intended eventually to shut down the dealer's business.

The witness was Norman Chapman, Cliffside Park (N. J.), dealer. Senator Murray said similar opinions had been expressed in many telegrams he had received from dealers throughout the country. The Senator added that the hear-ing might produce satisfactory reg-ulations for rationing of automobiles to see Taylor grab Miss Lamb's wrist and pull a gun from his pocket.

"He shot at her once and as she staggered he pointed the gun towards me." Mr. Western continued. "I thought he was going to shoot me and I ducked out the door. The children also ran outside."

Mrs. Western, an employe of the Treasury Department, was at work at the time.

(Larry Allen came perilously close to never telling this story, the best in his thrilling catalogue of experiences as an eyewitness to every important battle fought by the British Beet in the Mode terranean during this war. (Word came to the Associated Press on December 16 that Allen, who had survived unscratched the violent German air attack on the British aircraft carrier Illustrious, was in an Alexandria hospital recuperating after swallowing oily water and suffering cuts and bruises in a 45-minute plunge into the sea.

(Allen, a native of Mount Savage, Md., was permitted to tell his story after the British had officially acknowledged the loss of the cruiser Galatea.)

By LARRY ALLEN. ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Jan. 10 .-When the British light cruiser Galatea, stabbed three times in her side torpedoes, heeled quickly over by and sank with a muffled blast, an heroic naval story just began. The Galatea was sunk by a U-boat in the pre-dawn blackness of December 16, only 32 miles off Alexandria.

It was a cold, choppy sea and the lurking menace of the U-boat was always present, but for 10 hours sions, rapidly tipped over to port British destroyers stuck to the dangerous job of rescuing the cruiser's survivors.

Prosecution Resumes Testimony Tomorrow In Trial of Hill

Hearing on Perjury Charge Will Enter Second Week In District Court

Government testimony intended to link George Hill, a secretary to Repesentative Fish, Republican, of New York, with 1940-41 operations of an alleged Nazi-sponsored propaganda network will be resumed when Mr. Hill's trial on two charges of perjury enters a second week in District Court tomorrow morning.

It has been over the strenuous objections of Defense Attorney John J. O'Connor, former New York member of the House, that Special Assistants to the Attorney General William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., have described in their own words or those of Government witnesses many of the operations of this propaganda ring.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts has agreed with Mr. Hill's attorney that no proof has been submitted that many of the events mentioned actually took place, but the jurist frequently permitted them to be recounted in order to show that a grand jury had heard testimony concerning German propaganda which made it necessary to obtain truthful information from Mr. Hill, False Testimony Charged. The defendant is a slim, unob-

Physicians Organize Along Army Lines to Protect Pittsburgh

1,200 Form Teams of Specialists to Meet Any Situation

By the Associated Press. PITTSBURGH, Jan. 10 .- Twelve undred physicians in this vitally important armament production center have organized along Army lines into "mercy teams of medi-cine" to meet any emergency the war may bring.

Profiting from the Army's ex-ample in organizing its new mech-anized forces into highly specialized units, the physicians formed their full force into small "teams," each correlated part of the whole.

All of the physicians have volun-teered their services, according to Dr. George R. Harris, secretary of the Allegheny County Medical Society, which drafted the medical mobilization program.

"The teams consist of surgical. transfusion, intravenous and emergency field units, base hospital, Xray and other specialized groups," Dr. Harris said. "Physicians were assigned to the team where their particular skills could be best used." This specialist grouping, Dr. Harris said, will enable the physicians to render swift succor should air war strike this rich industrial area. "We are prepared to render synchronized aid on instant notice," Dr. Harris declared. "The city's 27 major hospitals have been designated as base hospitals in our mobilization, each with its own staff, comprised largely of regular hospital staff members. The hospitals also have developed an emergency plan which coincides with ours.'

Dr. Harris said the field units of physicians will be the first to see action, moving to the emergency scene where they will give "on the spot" *reatment before shipping casualties "down the line" to the base hospitals."

$275,000 Damage Done To WOL, Anti-Trust Action Charges

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 10 .- The Mutual Broadcasting System and six affiliated stations filed a $10,275,000 damage suit in Federal Court today, charging the Radio Corp. of Amer-ica and the National Broadcasting Co. with illegally restricting the transmission of M. B. S. Nationwide network programs.

Brought under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, the suit sought three times the amount of the $3,425,000 damages actually claimed.

The complaint charged R. C. A. and its subsidiary, N. B. C., and the officers and agents of the corporation with engaging in "an un-lawful combination and conspiracy among themselves and with third persons to injure plaintiffs • • Contracts Challenged.

Challenged specifically was the validity of contracts between N. B C's blue network and affiliated stations in cities having less than four stations of comparable facilities.

Under option time clauses in some contracts, the suit alleged, N. B. C. could on 28 days' notice "use all or as substantial a part of the time of station as it required." The bill complained this prevented M. B. S. from competing "for the desirable hours.

"Except for said unlawful acts and practices. Mutual could have been able to obtain continuous time during the preferred hours on broadcast stations in many important cities."

The complaint contended further ment, declaring that it should help that in cities having less than four stations, N. B. C. controlled two stations and the Columbia Broadcasting System the third.

Stifling of Competition Charged. "This effectively stifles the growth of any competitive network and if permitted to continue, will make jobs with the Price Control Ad-Mutual's continued existence imministration. possible," it said.

The suit contended N. B. C. operated its Blue and Red networks jointly, and asked that the corporation be enjoined from carrying out the alleged conspiracy and from maintaining or entering into further contracts in restraint of the free transmission of programs. Supply Manganese For War Needs New Extraction Method

Georgia Ore May Help

ATLANTA, Jan. 10 .-- Georgia may play an important part in helping overcome the prospective shortage of manganese, needed in manufacture of heavy armament for the Nation's war effort. Garland Peyton, Georgia State director of mining and geology, announced developmen of a process for extracting manganese from low-grade ore. Recent experiments, he said, show that through a "magnetic roast," at approximately 1,000 degrees temperature in a specially constructed furnace, it is possible to bring lowgrade ore, found in abundance in the Cartersville district in North Georgia, up to Government specifications.

The O'Mahoney amendment also provided that no celling should be fixed lower than the October 1 or the December 15 price of a farm product, whichever was higher. The October 1 date is in the House bill. On some commodities, the December 15 price is higher.

Taft Proposal Rejected.

The administration scored a victory, however, when the Senate defeated an amendment offered by Senator Taft, Republican, of Ohio, which would have substituted a board of five members to fix prices instead of a single administrator. The vote against the Taft amendment was 65 to 19.

Senator Taft, argaing in support of his amendment, insisted that price fixing was partly a legislative function and partly a judicial function-not purely work for an administrator. The chairman of the board he proposed, he said, would also be designated "administrator," to handle the administrative functions of the job.

He said that the Senate had al-ready demonstrated, in the amend-amendment by Senator O'Mahoney, ments adopted, that it felt the far- Democrat, of Wyoming, to the admers must be protected "from the orders of one man." He said that Mr. Henderson, now functioning as price administrator under executive order, had by one order put 44,000 automobile dealers and 500,000 of their employes out of business.

He insisted that a board, under his amendment, would hold hearings in advance of price fixing, that it could and would function promptly, and that a hearing before one man, a price administrator, would be merely an "argument." The House bill, he pointed out, has provision for a board, but merely to act as a board of appeals after AIKEN AUSTIN prices have been fixed.

Senator Brown, Democrat, of Michigan, in charge of the bill, fold the Senate that the President "feels strongly" in favor of a one man administrator and against a board. He said that during the last world war control of food prices had been placed under one man, Herbert Boover, fuel prices under Dr. Harry A. Garfield, and prices of war materials under Bernard Baruch, and that all had functioned well.

Strictly a War Measure. To this Senator Taft replied that these men had set up committees to aid them in price fixing.

Fuchrer, showed that the winter campaign in Russia is written off by the German leaders as lost.

In every available quarter, meanwhile, the German Army launched a recruiting drive in the hope of building a fresh force for tthe planned spring offensive. Highly reliable advices said that because of German losses and the need for a far greater army in any new push, this drive had spread into Bulgaria, the occupied Baltic States and even into Norway.

Attack by German Paper. The recruiting campaign, perhaps, prompted the German paper in Norway, Deutsche Zeitung in Norwegen, to attack Sweden for not aiding Finland and for banning exportation of clothing which Germans in Sweden wanted to send to the Russian front.

As far as the internal German situation goes, it is known here that the first great German failure in the east inspired feelings of concern and unrest at home. However. the correspondents who were called from their beds to hear telephoned denials of reports of an imminent state of revolution said it was quite apparent that there was no evidence of such a thing in Berlin, and the best information obtainable elsewhere is that no organized effort to revolt exists or is likely to exist

In making its denials, the Foreign Office blamed the reports on British and American sources. Today the Berlin radio, quoting the Berlin correspondent for the Rumanian newspaper Timpul, said that "rumors of growing dissatisfaction in Germany • • were launched in the hope of influencing the forthcoming conference (of American foreign ministers) at Rio de Janeiro." Representatives of Nine Countries Will Hold Meeting This Week

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 10.-Representa ives of nine countries occupied by Axis armies will meet next week and pledge themselves to bring final justice to officials of Germany, Italy, Hungary and Rumania who are responsible for hostage executions, mass fines and seizure of property in conquered lands.

Informed quarters pointed out that the pledge will require the governments now residing in London to start compiling a huge "blacklist" of Nazi and other officers to be brought to trial after the war. These quarters said the governments of the Netherlands, Belgium, Poland, Norway, Czecho-Slovakia, Yugoslavia, Greece, Luxembourg and the Free French Committee will agree at the meeting to punish all officials for any violations of the Hague convention of 1907 which Jermany signed. Whether the trials will be held by an international court or by the ountries concerned will be worked out with other details of procedure at later meetings. The United States, Britain, Rus-sia and China will send observers to the meeting, it was announced, but they will not take an active part, the conference being confined to governments whose countries are acually under Axis occupation.

The meeting is not connected with he inter-Allied governments council, in which Britain and Russia hold nembership.

It is that the Nazi Army troubles began when Hitler impatiently overruled his then commander in chief. Field Marshal Walter von Brauchitsch, who presented a plan for

But by that time it was too late. Winter set in in full fury before the construction of barracks was begun in mid-December. The continued Russian offensive forced abandonment of a number of "winter quarters" which, Berlin dispatches have admitted, were modeled after Russian peasant huts.

Reports Persist Finns Are Seeking Peace With Russians

Discouragement With Present Hardships Seen Behind Move

By the Associated Press.

SOMEWHERE ON THE GERMAN FRONTIER, Jan. 10.-Reports persisted tonight, despite official denials from Berlin, that Finland is seeking peace with Russia through Stock-holm intermediaries.

Behind the feeling for peace, these reports said, is Finnish discouragement with present hardships, food shortage and limited clothing.

Advices from Stockholm said the Germans also are withdrawing some of their troops from Finland, and that Swedish volunteers who had returned from the Finnish front were not being replaced.

Information coming from Sweden and Finland suggested that conferences of Juhu Paasikivi, former Minister to Sweden and Russia, with government leaders in Stockholm had peace negotiations through Swedish intermediaries as their objective.

Major Question for Pan-American Talks

Diplomats Meet Thursday In Rio in Their Most

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 10.-Whether to declare war unanimously on the Axis will be the madiplomats when they gather in Brazil's abandoned parliamentary hall five days hence for their most important conference in history.

Delegates who already have arclarify two points:

1-Whether the United States wants the nations to declare war. 2-Whether all the South American nations are willing to do so. of the Central American countries which have expressed solidarity with the United States, has announced it would propose that all nations enter the war.

Argentina May Not Agree. But Enrique Ruiz Guinazu, foreign minister of Argentina, has agree, and Oswaldo Aranha, foreign minister of Brazil, has refused to answer the direct question. Other South American nations have not committed themselves.

It seemed likely that the conference opening Thursday would produce at least a strong declaration reinforcing expressions of solidarity. New economic agreements guaranteeing the United States all the raw materials she needs and can obtain from South America also seemed probable. Informed sources said it appeared that Argentina, Brazil and probably other nations felt that so long as the Americas were not directly attacked they could serve Hemisphere defense better by remaining out of the fight.

Physician and Woman Arrested Here on Narcotics Charges

Couple Described as Chief Illegal Suppliers In Capital During Year

A 62-year-old physician and a 50year-old woman were arrested late yesterday by detectives and Federal narcotics agents and accused of being the principal illegal suppliers of narcotics in Washington during the past year.

The physician, booked as Dr Laurence Maxwell Hynson of the 1400 block of Rhode Island avenue N.W., was charged with violation of the Harrison Narcotics Act. Mrs. Janie Mae Jacobs, 900 block of I street N.W., was charged with the same offense and in addition was booked on conspiracy charges.

Bond of $3,000 each was set, pending arraignment before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Terry A. Talent, narcotics agent in charge of the Washington area, explained the two had been under surveillance for some time and were believed responsible for most of the narcetics distributed illegally here for many months.

The doctor was accused of writing prescriptions for more than 10.000 grains of narcotics in a year for persons not under his direct care as provided in the Harrison Act. The arresting officers named the woman as a "contact" who procured "patients" and received a cut of the proceeds.

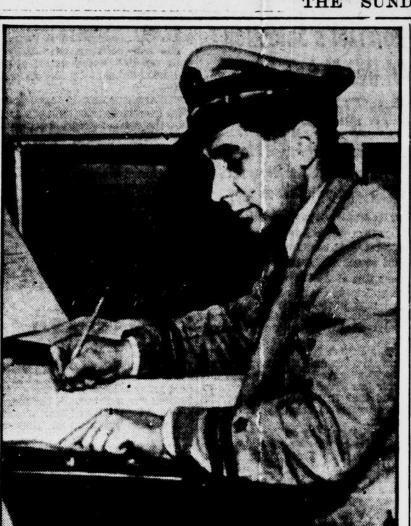

In addition to Mr. Talent, investigators on the case were L. W. Morrison and J. D. Brennan, also narcotics agents, and Detective Sergts. Robert S. Bryant and Hjalmar H. Carper.

> 80.000 Between 20 and 45 to Be Enrolled Here February 16

By THOMAS C. HARDMAN.

Washington selective service offi-cials, busily engaged in supplying increasingly large numbers of men for war-time Army inductions, will divert part of their attention this week to preliminary arrangements for the February 16 registration of 80,000 men between the ages of 20 and 45.

Conferences with school officials will be scheduled within the next few days to map plans for use of 50 school buildings as registration cen-

Selective Service Director Wil-liam E. Leahy has asked that public school teachers serve as registrars to enable the personnel of local draft boards to continue uninterrupted their classification of old registrants to fill current quotas. The number of teachers needed as registrars and the amount of space required in the designated schools are major items to be discussed with school officials.

Total of 9,000,000 Expected. Nationally, 9,000,000 men are expected to be registered in the new enrollment, and officials indicated yesterday that in many sections of the country the registrations will get under way before the designated day for purposes of convenience. The hours from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. February 16 have been set by President Roosevelt as the time for registration of all men between the ages of 20 and 45 who have not been registered prior to that time. National headquarters spokesmen explained that there was nothing in the regulations to prevent reg-istrations before that date if such a procedure suited local draft boards, which have been charged with final responsibility for the registration.

This pre-date system probably will be followed in many of the country's agricultural and industrial areas, it was explained, to avoid loss of man hours in the defense effort.

"We realize that every minute counts for defense workers," one official explained, "and we don't intend to take a single man away from his job if it is possible to register him otherwise

Special Offices in Plants. Registration facilities in many nstances literally will be taken to potential registrants employed in important war industries, it was said, with special offices being set up within the confines of armament plants.

This will be a decided contrast to the first registration on October 16, 1940, when President Roosevelt called on the Nation's employers to allow their employes sufficient time off, if necessary, in which to regisary 16 will be men who were below the age of 45 at that time and who reached the age of 20 before De-cember 31. The low age group will include a full year of 20-year-olds and those 21-year-olds who reached their majority after July 1, 1941, the date of the second registration. Registrations in Flowator Fire Registrations in the upper age limits will start with men who are over 37 years and four months, as the first registration embraced all men from 21 through 35 as of October 16, 1940.

reports from elevator guards stressed the likelihood of grain dust blasts. Seven men, two firemen and five employes, were injured in the explosions, felt several miles away. Although three were hurled more than 100 feet, none of the men were hurt critically.

Fire Chief Edward Nelson threw every available man into the fight to prevent spread of the flames, which at times leaped 200 feet into the air. It soon became apparent that the elevator was doomed, so efforts were directed at saving four adjacent elevators, docks and a 16,-000,000-gallon gasoline storage depot. Chief Nelson said the huge pile of grain probably would smoulder for at least a week.

50,000 Attracted Here In Year, Only 3 Pct. Failing to Find Jobs

Most Young and Single, With 26 Average Age; 45 Pct. Are Women

More than 50,000 persons were attracted to Washington and settled here during a little more than a year, a Work Projects Administration survey shows, but whether the magnetic influence was the defense effort is hard to determine, since less than half that number obtained Government jobs.

This population increase was greater than that experienced by any of five other cities of 500,000 or more people surveyed-higher than Los Angeles, twice as high as Baltimore, three times as high as St. Louis and eight times higher than Philadelphia.

Made at the request of the Federal Security Agency, the survey covers migrants arriving after October 1, 1940, and found here during November. It was limited to the District and does not account for nearby Maryland or Virginia.

Most Arrivals Young and Single. So great has been the Washington influx that two out of every five new families of more than one person have had to share dwellings with others, the report says. Other pertinent conclusions of the survey show that:

Most of the arrivals are young and single. They equal 8 per cent of the city's 1940 population. Only 3 per cent have not ob-tained jobs of any kind.

women. Only 7 per cent are colored. They left 10,000 family members at home. Most of them came from New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois and neighboring States, only one-third traveling more than 500 miles. Few came from rural areas.

The British Near East headquar ters said the Axis withdrawal along the 70-mile road to El Agheila from their last stand at Agedabia was so swift that British advanced troops were unable to bring the enemy to action.

Ras el Aali is on the coast 30 miles farther to the west along the desert road to Tripolitania. It was recalled that Ras el Aali has been mentioned several times as a base of Axis supplies and possibly reinforcements.

In his resolution he stated that "in the opinion of the representatives of the agencies affected, expressed in public hearings before the committees, the efficiency of the Federal Government will be seriously injured, the increase in cost of maintaining the offices away from Washington will result in tremendous increase in appropriations to carry on the work of these agencies."

He also insisted that Congress would be seriously hampered and its work impaired in co-operation and consultation with the agencies and that "the cost of communicating with such agencies and offices will be tremendously increased."

Veteran of Japanese Attacks Surprised By One in Hawaii

Red Cross Official Was Coming Home to Rest After Year in China

The Japanese air raids he had undergone in China seemed far away to Walter Wessellus as he sat on a hospital terrace looking out over Pearl Harbor that tranquil Sunday morning, December 7. The director of Chinese relief for the American Red Cross suffered an attack of malaria on the Burma road and was under treatment at an Army hospital in Honolulu while en route to his home at 1226 North Abitngton road, Arlington, to recuperate.

"I had just finished chatting with the head nurse," Mr. Wesselius said. Organization Set Up "She complained that things were too quiet ... she wanted to see For Red Cross Drive

We agreed we were safer in impregnable Hawaii than on the mainand of the United States."

Planes Filled Air.

Mr. Wesselius, who has just rehurned to his home here, was seated on the terrace with two Army majors when the sky over Pearl Harbor and Hickam Field suddenly was filled with planes, diving and circling. In a moment terriffic explosions occurred.

"Gosh, that's a wonderful maneuver for Sunday morning," exclaimed one major.

"Maneuver nothing, that's the real thing!" the other declared. Mr. Wesselius, who had seen scores of bombings in Chungking, Kunming and other interior cities of China in the last year, was inclined to agree with the latter estimate of the situation.

Commissioners Hope All Employes Will Contribute To War Fund

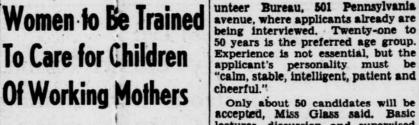

District officials were organized yesterday to promote contributions by municipal workers to the Red Cross war fund, in keeping with the notice given by President Roosevelt indorsing the emergency campaign.

Announcing the appointment of Geoffrey M. Thornett, secretary to the Board of Commissioners, as chairman of the District government Red Cross campaign unit, Commissioner Young said officials The three on the terrace could hope that every District employe is in the fund raising.

Mr. Thornett, announcing the appointment of 16 assistants for the wounded began to arrive at the campaign, said: "You will underhospital. Threat to Dynamite Cement Plant Charged

By the Associated Press.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Jan. 10 .- A threat to dynamite a Washington County cement plant was disclosed today by E. A. Soucy, agent in charge of the Baltimore office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who announced the arrest of a 23-year-old workman accused of attempted extortion. Mr. Soucy said the workman, James Gibson Trenary of Security, Md., had admitted writing letters to executives of the North American Cement Corp. at Security, threatening to dynamite the plant unless he was paid $5,000.

The Security plant, one of the largest cement plants in the country, is engaged principally in manufacturing cement under national defense contracts, agents said.

One Treasury suggestion. members of Congress said, was that income tax exemptions be lowered from $1,500 to $1,000 for married couples and from $750 to $500 for single persons. Others involved increases in corporate taxes and excise levies such as those on liquor,

Taxes Ordered On Two More D. C. Hospitals

Garfield and G. W. Held Not Exempt By Review Board

Two additional privately owned hospitals, except for their nursing and medical school facilities, have been made subject to District real estate taxes under orders issued yesterday by the Commissioners. They are Garfield Memorial Hospital and George Washington University Hospital.

On recommendation by the Real Estate Tax Exemption Board, headed by Walter L. Fowler, budget officer, the city heads denied tax exemptions in nine cases concerning properties valued at more than $2,000,000, but in most cases only partial assessments are ordered.

Heretofore, the Commissioners have ordered taxation, in whole or in part, against Emergency, Casualty, Sibley, Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat. Providence. Homeopathic and Children's Hospitals on findings they were not conducted as purely public charities without charge to inmates, profit or income, under the meaning of District statutes.

Valued at $1,253,740.

Garfield Hospital has land and buildings assessed at $1,253,740. Its nursing school is to be continued in the exempt class on a ruling an educational institution and prop-erly exempt. A report on the hos-nital financies A report on the hospital financing for 1940 showed it received $60,425 from the Com-munity Chest; $96,872 from the open Rent Complaints wards, and $328,009 from private rooms. For the use of operating rooms and other specified services, the hospital received $171,537.

Properties of George Washington University Hospital have an assessed value of $754,086. While the Fowler board and the Commissioners agreed that the Medical School Building and its annex were used for educational purposes and therefore should continue to be exempt, they denied claims for exemption of the hospital building.

On this latter point, the authorities ruled: "The calling of that building a medical school 'teaching hospital' does not, in our opinion. affect its real status as a privately owned and privately conducted hospital."

1940, the hospital received $203.988. who requested them. The forms including $17,681 from the Com- may be obtained by calling in permunity Chest and $3,547 from the son or writing to the Office of Rent Health Security Administration.

Land Held Excessive.

The whole parcel, of about 4 acres, has an assessed value of $232,385. The Fowler Board made the point that the one building on this property occupies but about 25 per cent of the land area. The building trict contains 96 rooms with accommodations for 35 or 40 guests, there being 24 guests at the time of inspection, the board said. Aside from taxation ordered for such "excessive" land holdings, the Commissioners found the institution to be a public charity. Other properties subject to tax orders were: National Child Research Center, 3209 Highland place N.W., which Commerce Department was ruled properly tax exempt as an educational institution, except an educational institution, except for second floor guarters rented out Orders 44-Hour Week as an apartment at $70 a month The research school was made possible by a grant from the Laura Spellman Rockefeller Foundation. secured through the Bureau of Home Economics, Agriculture Department, and the commissioner of education, Interior Department.

Police Pay Raises Among Measures Called Tomorrow

Despite war legislation, the House tomorrow is expected to engage in scrap over three District bills which have been sidetracked since last summer because they were regarded then as too controversial to consider.

The measures, which Chairman Randolph was given orders to call up by the District Committee yesterday at a special meeting, would: 1. Provide a substantial pay increase for members of the Fire Department and the Metropolitan,

Park and White House police forces, estimated to cost the District an additional $1,500,000 a year. 2. Allow small loan companies to operate in the District, make loans up to $500 and charge an interest rate of 2 per cent a month on unpaid balances

3. Prohibit advertising of liquor prices by "any medium" and stop the sale of alcoholic beverages within 600 feet of churches, schools, military reservations and eleemosynary institutions.

Agreed on Loan Bill. Of the three, the small loan bill was the only one the committee unanimously agreed the House should be asked to pass at this time. Representative Schulte, Democrat, of Indiana, who sponsored the measure to increase the pay of police and firemen said there was a "lot" of unjustified opposition, but he thought the Heuse might approve it. Representative Dirksen, Republican, of Illinois warned that higher pay for police and firemen would lead to "fiscal trouble" and probably cause increased taxes for the District

Stiff opposition also was predicted for the liquor control bill, but Mr. Schulte, its sponsor, said the legislation is urgently needed to break up a "chaotic condition" in the liquor industry which has allowed half a dozen liquor wholesalers to control retail prices. "There have been underselling and short practices here because of existing conditions," he charged Commerce Department employes in Washington and in the field will go on a 44-hour week beginning January 19, under an order issued yesterday by Acting Secretary Robert H. Hinckley. About 10,000 employes here are affected.

Regular working hours after January 19 will be from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays and 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Saturdays. The Saturday schedule is the same as at present. When conditions of work make it necessary, bureau heads are authorized to extend the hours further. An extension exceeding an average of 52 hours a week for a period of more than a month must first be approved by Secretary Jones, the order said.

Longer working hours are imperative because of the services the Commerce Department has been called upon to contribute to the war effort, Mr. Hinckley explained.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 10 .- Virginia's hiennial session of the General Assembly will open Wednesday with the major attention centered on what it can do to help in the all-out war effort.

Aside from matters of defense larger appropriations for schools and penal reforms will be among the salient items on the docket.

10-Year Outline Given County After Months of Study

Public hearings are to be held soon by the Arlington County Board on the county's master zoning plan following its presentation at the board's meeting yesterday. The plan was prepared by the county planning department in consultation with Jacob Crane, community planning expert, who was retained by the county board several months ago. Final action on the plan has been deferred pending completion of the hearings. A proposed zoning ordinance to carry out the aims of the plan will be submitted by the planning department to the board in about two weeks.

In a written memorandum to the board, submitted by Donald R. Locke and Frank L. Dieter, county zoning administrator and planning engineer, respectively, three major results of the new plan, which Mr. Dieter said should provide a guide for future development for the next 10 years, were outlined.

Density Areas Retained.

First, the plan creates and preserves population density districts, carrying from high-density district n apartment zones to low-density districts in those areas best suited to such control.

This is accomplished. it was explained, by setting up four singlefamily residential districts, two twofamily residential and three apart-ment districts. Purpose of this phase of the plan, officials pointed out, is to stabilize existing neighborhoods and to create a design for future development of new neighborhoods "along rational h " The second feature of the p.an is the establishment of larger and more unified general commercial terday granted eight rezoning peti- districts as well as local commercial districts to serve neighborhood needs. While this has resulted in the elimination in some cases of small, "unrelated spots" of commercial zoning which were described as being incapable of being unified or developed in any orderly plan, in most cases, existing commercial areas were included and unified where it was deemed reasonable. Off-Street Parking Plan.

Third, the plan makes it possible to establish off-street parking facilities in all commercial zones by making such facilities an integral part of the commercial district itself, it was said.

The reapportionment recommendations undoubtedly will be opposed by many of those who stand to lose some representation. As some counties and cities gain a voice others must give up part of their representation because of a State constitutional limitation which establishes the number of Delegates at 100 and the number of Senators at 40. Young Actress Wed To Mickey Rooney in Quiet Ceremony

Carolina Girl and Comedian Pick Small Town for Marriage

By the Associated Press.

BALLARD, Calif., Jan.10.-Mickey Rooney, who coaxes more money into theater cash registers than any one else in Hollywood, was married today to his soft-spoken North Carolina sweetheart, thereby bringing fame to this tiny community in the rich Santa Yanez Valley.

The wedding in the little, rustic Presbyterian church was about the biggest event in this farming town since W. M. Ballard set up his stage coach station in 1862.

Young Rev. Glenn Lutz had been told a few day ago that Mickey was bringing pretty Ava Gardner her, but even so he was nervous as the celebrities arrived.

Mickey Mops His Brow.

It might have been more noticeable, but for Mickey. That young man, who years ago cured stage and camera fright, was positively jittery.

"My, my," he sighed when it was over, wiping his brow.

Not so his blue-eyed, brown-haired bride. She was a vision of poised loveliness in a three-piece blue suit, with blue hat and veil and brown accessories. Her only jewelry was her engagement ring. The simple ceremony was double ring, pronounced while Mrs. Lutz at the piano softly played "I Love You Truly." First thing the newly-weds did after two affectionate kisses—Was call Mrs. Mary Baker Gardner, Ava's mother, in Wil-Gardner. Ava's mother, in Wilson, N. C.

Mickey's parents. Joe Yule and Mrs. Nell Pankey, were in attendance. His closet friend, Les Peterson, was best man. Ava's sister, Beatrice,

The couple left for a honeymoon in Del Monte, Calif., an hour after the ceremony. They'll return to Hollywood next week, then go East to Boston, where Mickey will appear for the Red Cross January 22. The bride, 19, has been in Hollywood only a few months. Eight months ago she left her home for Washington spoiled last week when New York, where she worked as a model. She won a movie contract after a relative sent her picture to a talent scout. She met Mickey at a party, and they became formally engaged on Christmas. She has had minor movie parts.

Mickey, 21, was born in Brooklyn, went on tour with his parents when he was 11 days old, and has been in show business ever since.

Health, religious training and formal education in the schools were stressed as among the most important factors in building a child for good citizenship by Prof. W. N. Rivers of Miner Teachers' College in a talk at a session of the Anacostia Convention of Family Life at the Frederick Douglass Dwelling last night.

Another speaker, Rodger Hodges, urged that parents cooperate with various institutions of the community, such as the school and health departments, as a means of helping their children. A third speaker was Miss Rachel Brown, who discussed character formation of the child. The Rev. Robert E. Ford, pastor of Allen A. M. E. Church, presided. The opening prayer was offered by the Rev. NEW YORK, Jan. 10 .- Canada's air marshal, W. A. Bishop, Army Gets First Giant Gliders V. C., declared tonight that "it is time that a bit of healthy hate for the enemies crept into our war effort." For Use of New Air Infantry

"From my observation," he said in a speech at a dinner of the 1st Reserve Aero Squadron Association, an organization of veteran airmen of the last war, "from all the people with whom I have had discussions. I am more and more convinced that it is a stupid fallacy and sheer nonsense to believe for one moment that we are only fighting the present leaders of the countries with which we war.

"Let us never underestimate our enemies. For the moment Japan looks very prominent on the horizon. where it was in 1933, when all this Crete. was planned in Berlin."

Marshal Bishop paid tribute to the American airmen who flew under the colors of Canada in the last war and said that he felt Canadians had "inherited, perhaps unjustly, a lot of credit that was actually due to those fellows."

Eire Is Called Obvious A. E. F. Training Ground

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 10 .- Eire would be an obvious training ground and battle station for an American expeditionary force, the London Sunday Express said tonight in an editorial bluntly demanding that Prime Minister de Valera of Eire "listen to American sense and welcome an American force for his defense." "If he won't listen, be damned to him," the paper said. "The Allies must defend Southern Ireland."

'Greater Task' Faces U. S. After Victory In War, Pepper Says

Senator and Others Speak At League of Nations Anniversary Dinner

Declaring that "no force can or shall prevail against us," Senator Pepper. Democrat, of Florida called on the American people last night, after the war is won, to embark on "our greater task of building up instead of tearing down."

In addressing a dinner at the Willard Hotel commemorating the 22d anniversary of the founding of the League of Nations, he said that the League, despite its wounds is on the way to a vigorous recovery and predicted "that we can never again be so callous as to ignore the plaintive call of mankind for our hand and our heart in man's cause."

Dr. Frank G. Boudreau, president of the League of Nations Associa-tion, presided at the dinner, attended by about 200 persons.

Other Leaders Speak.

Other speakers included Senator Thomas, Democrat, of Utah; Melvin D. Hildreth, chairman of the Washington committee; former Senator Pope of Idaho, now a director of the Tennessee Valley Authority; Clark M. Eichelberger, director of the League of Nations Association, and Daniel C. Roper, former Secretary of Commerce, who read mes-sages from two members of President Wilson's war cabinet, Senator Glass of Virginia, former Secretary of the Treasury, and Josephus C. Daniels, former Secretary of the Navy. Overseas greetings were read to the association from Lord Robert Cecil, one of the authors of the league covenant; Dr. Edouard Benes, former president of the assembly and representative of Czechoslovakia at Geneva since 1920, and Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, who opened the first assembly in 1920 and who has served as China's representative at Geneva since then.

Back in the speaker's table was a large banner with the words "It Must Not Happen Again."

Tyrants' Challenges Accepted.

"With that grim resolve behind which we have marched to the pinnacle of power, we today have accepted the challenge of every tyrant in every land to battle to death for the cause of man," Senator Pepper said. "When at last our might and right shall prevail, we shall introduction for the work, has dewith that same grim determination scribed it as "the vivid personal set about our greater task of building narrative of a Negro boy and man up instead of tearing down."

Retail Food Prices Rising Moderately, U. S. Survey Shows

Refinery Advance Not Expected to Affect Present Sugar Stocks

Labor Department reports yesterday reflected a moderately upward trend in retail food prices during the last half of December. According to a survey based on reports of prices for 18 foods in 19 cities, the department reported ises in meats, flour, sugar, navy beans and coffee.

Usual seasonal price declines were reported for eggs and oranges, while the price of milk, white bread and lard increased in some cities and decreased in others.

Sugar Unchanged for Present. On December 30 the department reported the price of round steak was up 6.9 per cent in Cleveland over December 16, the highest increase in any of the 19 cities.

White flour showed a top increase of 3.5 per cent in Boston, ranging down to stationary in Philadelphia and Seattle.

Officials of chain grocery stores here said the retail price of refined sugar faces little liklihood of a rise at this time, despite an authorization for refiners of raw sugar to increase the price of the refined product 20 cents a hundred pounds. Price Administrator Leon Henderson announced yesterday that wholesale prices were being adjusted proportionately, but pointed out the action "should have no immediate sugar at retail." Increase Should Be Slight. This was borne out by the local chain stores which reported they were making no plans to advance effect upon the price of refined

Mr. Henderson pointed out that retailers are now selling supplies which they acquired at lower prices. and added that he thought retailers could be depended on to delay any price increase until their present stocks are exhausted.

Other official sources said that when the increase was passed on to the public, it should not amount to more than one cent on five pounds 0 of sugar.

Adjustment of the refining price ceiling was necessary, Mr. Henderson said, because several refiners 0 have exhausted their stocks of lowcost raw sugar. It is intended to 0 compensate in part for a recent 24-10,329 cent increase in the ceiling price of raw cane sugar.

Agriculture Recommended As Vital War Industry By the Associated Press.

A proposal that agriculture be declared an essential war industry came yesterday from the Federal Ad-visory Council for Employment Security which added that individuals employed in necessary industries "should not be inducted into military service if their skills cannot be replaced.'

The council, a 50-member advisory body to the Social Security Board, is comprised of industrialists, officials of the C. I. O., A. F. L. and independent labor unions, and representatives of agricultural, educational and civil organizations. It expressed its opinions through resolutions adopted after a two-day conference with Government labor supply officials.

Discussing labor supply and work inducements, the council said:

"All advertisements, local or otherwise, for workers in occupations essential to war production should be subject to prior approval of the United States Employment Service or the Civil Service Commission, and no advertisement not so approved be permitted.

"This action is necessary to insure that there is full use of local labor resources, to prevent unnecessary movement of labor, to eliminate competition among employers for labor in stringent occupations and to prevent enticement of labor from vital war and civilian industries." Illinois Professor Dies

General Motors President Pledges Firm to Produce Tenth of War Needs

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Jan. 10 .- C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors Corp., announced today the receipt of $769.330.000 in war contracts since January 1 to add to a $1.209.863.173 backlog of unfilled orders.

In making the announcement, he pledged General Motors to produce one-tenth of the materials needed for war and predicted that the peak of peace-time industrial activity would be surpassed by the end of the year or in 18 months at most. Simultaneously, Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co., made known that Army orders for nearly $84,000,000 worth of military vehicles have been received by the company in the last 10 days, and said production rates would be increased rapidly.

Chief of the items to be provided under the new General Motors contracts are tanks and tank parts worth $522,445.000, which will be produced at four centers. On December 31, such orders on hand amounted to no more than $69 .-244.496, Mr. Wilson's statement disclosed

Contracts Detailed. Other new contracts provide for $135,750,000 worth of aircraft parts; $37,730,000 worth of machine guns. rifles, gun mounts and controls; $21,165,000 worth of ammunition (shells, shot, cartridge cases, fuses Under O. P. M. Order $21,165,000 worth of ammunition and other components) and $1.048,-000 worth of electrical equipment. At a press conference attended by Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner, Mayors of Michigan cities in which General Motors plants are located. and military authorities, Mr. Wilson said unfilled orders equalled "six months' capacity production of our plants as now organized," but said the corporation was well ahead of delivery schedules in some essential lines. Aircraft engines, he said, are already being produced "at capacity." General Motors is six months ahead of commitments for anti-aircraft guns and three months ahead on aircraft cannon, he added, as well as "months ahead" in the delivery of machine guns.

Must Double Production. The General Motors head estimated that the United States would have to double its average industrial production to keep pace with the demands of war, but he declared the task set for industry by President Roosevelt's war program was still far from being the bluff it has been termed in Axis propaganda. "We of General Motors can see our way clear to doing about 10 per cent of the job," he said. "That ought to be a good start."

The oulk of his company's con-tracts, Mr. Ford said, is for "blitz 505,556,000 gallons at the end of November-were ample to

Return of Bootlegging

Use of Distilleries to Make Ethyl Alcohol Is Cause of Warnings

By the Associated Press. Return of the moonshine whisky and bathtub gin of the prohibition era was foreseen yesterday by some members of Congress as a possible outgrowth of an O. P. M. order to distillers. The order, issued last week, directed the distilling industry to divert about 60 per cent of its capacity to the production of ethyl alcohol, an important component of explosives. House members from three of the Nation's biggest whisky-producing States, Representatives O'Neal, Democrat, and Chapman, Democrat, of Kentucky; Dirksen, Republican, of Illinois and Boehne, Democrat, of Indiana shared the view that bootlegging might pick up because of the order. Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois produce about 75 per cent of all the whisky made in the United States.

Representative Chapman, whose Kentucky bluegrass district is dotted with huge distilleries, said he cauld see no reason for a shortage or a price increase.

"There is the danger, though," he said, "that fear of a shortage or big price raises might encourage the operation of illicit stills and the production of bootleg whisky."

Representative Boehne likewise said the new order "may start bootlegging like we had in 1920."

"If the public gets worried about a shortage there might be a wave of buying which would encourage bootlegging." Representative Kirksen said. "Of course, we have always had bootlegging."

Association to Arrange For Neighborhood Depots To Speed Pickups

All citizens and civic associations tomorrow will be requested officially by the heads of their federations to appoint salvage committees immediately to handle the Salvage for Victory campaign in their neighborhcods.

Letters over the signatures of Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Dr. E. F. Harris, president of the Federation of Civic Associations requesting campaign co-operation, will be mailed tomorrow by the executive committee of the salvage committee of the District Defense Council.

The association salvage committees are expected to arrange for collection depots in their neighborhoods where enough small contributions of salvage material can be made to warrant pickup by a truck from a salvage dealer—the Goodwill Industries, Inc., Self-Help Exchange, Volunteers of America or Salvation Army. Depots also will Edward Altemus of the Washington Real Estate Board promised.

Importance of Moral † Welfare of Soldiers Now Recognized

By JESSIE FANT EVANS.

To Be Jacks of All Trades

Gone are the days when Army chaplains were expected to be jacks of all trades in addition to their service as spiritual advisers. Army regulations have changed this situation and have lifted from their shoulders their former responsibilities as mess officers, theater officers, athletic director, postmasters or any other similar jobs. The Army is recognizing the importance of moral and spiritual warfare to a selectee's training, and is clearly defining how the chap-and spiritual aspects of the soldier's life in the country's service. To meet denominational needs of the situation, chaplains are being drawn from most of the major religious sects at the rate of one chaplain for approximately 1,200

The Traveler's Notebook Williamsburg Decides to Maintain Its Olden Charm in Wartime, Contributing to Victory by Offering a Quiet Haven for Relaxation

Travel Editor. Century oasis in a world engaged totaling more than 30 miles were in a titanic, machine-age war, has re-opened to through traffic during vetoed the idea of "blacking out" December, serving to eliminate the impressive shrine of American independence and has decided to pursue the sound theory that it is not unpatriotic-indeed, it is a contribution to the war effort-to recreate and build up the physical and mental resources and morale of a people who have been told they may expect a long, driving struggle to maintain their freedom.

In a New Year statement to members of the Restoration organization, Kenneth Chorley, president of Colonial Williamsburg, voiced the belief that "during the war the public will turn increasingly to Williamsburg and other historic shrines with which the Commonwealth of Virginia is so richly endowed; where they can rest and be quiet; where they can be refreshed and reenergized by visiting these historic places where the principles of liberty, freedom and justice were first enunciated as the foundation of our Nation-the very principles we are now fighting to preserve."

been flashed for 1942 on a sleepy Two 41/2-foot shoulders were added little town of quaint grandeur-a "go" signal that means the spirit of the Old Dominion's former capital will be preserved and paraded, with horses and buggies in the streets, coachmen in colors that rival race track jockeys, lighted candles in the windows, a demure night life, billowing dresses that gently forced such personages as founders of the Republic off the narrow brick walks, and bewigged cobblers, cabinet makers and barbers. The 1942 budget sets aside the biggest operating fund the Restoration has ever made.

It seems almost incongruous to speak in business terms of a town that in appearance and tempo is two centuries old, but Williamsburg enjoyed last monthh its best December season in the history of the Restoration - even after declarations by Congress had plunged the United States suddenly into three wars. Large groups of visitors have been booked for 1942, Mr. Chorley states. Under the forward-looking plans, they will find accommodations for travelers increased by the time spring brightens the landscaped gardens, for within a couple of months a new addition to Williamsburg Lodge will be opened, adding 48 rooms and baths. Arrangements have been completed for the spring concerts of 18th Century music in the Governor's Palace, and a commemorative session of the Virginia legislature is scheduled for the one-time capital on Saturday, January 31. Synthetics and Stock Piles Will Offset Some Losses; South America May Help

Most of them are used in relatively small quantities, but they are essential to war industries and many of the comforts of daily life. In a few cases the loss can be offset by fairly satisfactory synthetic products; in others the Government has built up stock piles in the last two years. Development of hitherto unexploited South American deposits eventually may go far to make up some of the losses.

"I must tell mether before I go," she said to herself. But should she awaken her mother? "She's not well," she thought, and then said aloud, "Livia Clarkson, you're a coward."

Her mother would weep and beg her not to go to the studio. And they would have another quarrel. Oh, why was her mother so prejudiced? "After all, it's only a test; I may not get a contract." visible contact with mica in the of the thin, transparent form sheets known as isinglass which formed the windows of the stove doors. But year after year, with the automobile, it has increased in industrial importance and there is no entirely satisfactory substitute for it. The mineral is essential for airplane spark plugs and for radio condensers and tubes.

Mica Comes From India.

Nearly all the mica for these purposes comes either essential from the Bengal region of India or from Madagascar. Supplies from either source will be very difficult to secure. Last year the United States imported 4.335 tons-about twice the normal requirement. Most of it, presumably, has gone into a available for any but essential war screens. industries.

There is some low-grade mica production in the United States and of the 700,000 pounds a year essen-Canada and some in Brazil, but it tial for American industry has been is not considered suitable for the finest industrial uses.

Four years ago there was patented a synthetic mica made from the clay zil. The chief use is in hardening bentonite and it since has been considerably improved. It is not yet considered suitable, however, for high-grade spark plugs and radio tubes.

Antimony From Latin America. American industry uses each year about 12,000 tons of the hard, silverwhite metal antimony. This is almost half the world supply, whereas only about 1 per cent is mined in the total in normal times comes from ain China, which stopped exporting in 1939. There are considerable antimony resources in Latin America whose production has jumped in a few years from about 2,000 to 20,000 tons.

This supply probably will take care of the situation. The Government is believed to have considerable stocks. The general public seldom comes into close contact with antimony, but depends on it every day. The lead used in storage battery plates contains four to 12 per cent of the metal. It forms part of the babbitt metal used in bearings, of the type metal essential for printing newspapers. Small amounts are es sential in safety matches and in paints

The Army needs it for shrapnel balls, bullet cores for rifles and priming mixtures for detonating cans. Fairly large stores are on hand. Processes have been developed by which it can be recovered from battery plates.

Asbestos From Africa. America imports, chiefly from Canada and South Africa, 90 per cent of the 300,000 tons of asbestos used every year. It is essential for fireproof curtains, brake and clutch linings, and covers for heating pipes. For most uses, the Canadian supply is adequate and can be increased.

Indispensable in industry is the heavy metal cobalt, used chiefly in hardening steel. The finest grades cannot be made without it and the average requirement has been about 50 tons a month. All is imported.

About 80 per cent has come from the Belgian Congo after being processed in Belgium. There are large cobalt deposits in Northern Ontario but they are not sufficient to meet American demands and it will be necessary to divert energy and materials for processing plants.

Manufacturers saw the cobalt shortage ahead and, in 1938 and 1939, imports amounted to about 90 tons a month. During 1940, how-

Titanium is essential in higher grades of paints, in the manufac-"This Is My Story." ture of false teeth, and in military smoke screens. There is little hope of obtaining adequate supplies unless Brazilian deposits can be developed. A few tons a year are mined in Virginia. There are, however, fairly adequate substitutes, pile where it hardly will be such as white phosphorus for smoke

> A closely related metal is zirconium. The main source of supply Australian beach sand. It probably can be replaced, if traffic across the Pacific is suspended, from Brasteel for military helmets. It used to be necessary for flashlight powder, but this has been largely replaced by flash bulbs.

Industrial Diamonds.

Of more vital importance are industrial diamonds, of which American industry uses about 1.500.000 carats a year, valued at about $5.-000.000. The chief source of supply is

There are various substitutes, but none so good as the hardest substance on earth. A serious decrease in supply would cripple mining and auto and ship building. Diamonds were one of the first minerals declared essential by the Army and Navy Munitions Board. The size of the present stock pile is unknown. Imports in 1939, how-

Seaboard Alters Policy

On 'Name Reservations'

Because present indications point to increasingly heavy demands of both military and Government traffic on railroad and Pullman equipment under the national defense program, the Seaboard Railway has established a new policy that name reservations will only be held to within 24 hours of departure, which is considered a reasonable length of time to enable passengers to purchase space. In addition, a railroad ticket must be presented at the time Pullman ticket is purchased or coach accommodations taken up.

The old plan of observing the 15day "name reservations limit." and on which no payment was made in advance, has been abandoned in favor of the new time limitation.

The requirement that purchasers must present railroad tickets is intended to prevent the purchasing of space in excess of actual needs and will avoid instances where several reservations have been made for the same patron on a number of different days.

Clashing Personalities at Rio

Possible Pro-Axis Elements to Face Welles Diplomacy

By Marquis W. Childs

lawyer of wide reputation. A more or less

An important American representative will be Carl B. Spaeth, who is going to Rio for the Board of Economic Warfare and Nelson Rockefeller's office. While it is not being announced, Spaeth, working with Welles, hopes to lay the groundwork for complete economic co-operation in the Western Hemisphere. The plan that is contemplated calls for virtually an economic union of the nations in this part of the world to prosecute the war effort with the greatest effectiveness.

In Latin America this would be a corollary of the agreement recently signed with Canada. That agreement, which has received very little notice considering its significance, ties together the entire economy of North America so that there will be no duplication of effort or waste motion. It abolishes customs barriers and puts aside all other obstacles to a united effort.

Economic Co-operation.

While this may be more far-reaching than anything that can be looked for from South America, it is hoped the way can be prepared at the conference for some such basic understanding. The British would be a party to it, too. If it was found that we could better supply the South Americans with something they were now receiving from the British, we would take over, and vice versa. The South American republics are completely dependent on the democracies for most of their manufactured goods and this will be a powerful lever in bringing agreement on a move to set up a convoy system in co-operation with the fleets of Chile, Brazil and the Argentine. With the suspension of the Italian air line to Brazil, the Axis powers were cut off from their last outlet to the New World. As a background the Rio conference will have the long, assiduous cultivation of Latin American goodwill that began with President Roosevelt's enunciation of the good-neighbor policy in 1933. The seventh Pan-American Conference in a series that began before the first World War-the first to meet under the expansive good-neighbor philosophy-was held in Montivideo in 1933. Three years later President Roosevelt took the initiative in calling an extraordinary conference to repair defects in the existing

Allies' Unified Command Seen Offsetting Reverses in Far East

This Achievement Alone Would Have Justified Churchill's Extended Conferences in Washington, Observer Savs

By Felix Morley.

If every cloud has a silver lining, that of the adverse military situation in the Far East may be found in the unified command secured there as one result of the Churchill-Roosevelt conversations. This achievement alone would have justified the risk and effort undertaken by the Prime Minister of Great Britain in making his extended visit to Washington.

The liaison accomplished between the American, British, Chinese and Dutch commands is clearly an indispensable preliminary to more successful conduct of the war in Asia. And it is noteworthy that the elevation of Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell to the position of "supreme commander" in the Southwest Pacific has been accepted without demur by officers of other nationalities who will serve under him.

The same is true of the step whereby Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek assumes direction "over all land and air forces of the United Nations which are now or may in the future be operating in the Chinese theater." In these developments is belated admission that the Far Eastern interests of Great Britain, the Netherlands and the United States are at bottom identical And there is further, perhaps, more significant admission that these colonial interests are not necessarily at variance with those of China. For the first time since the opium wars of a century ago China and the Anglo-Saxon powers have, thanks to Japanese policy, found a mutually acceptable plan of co-operation.

To appreciate the importance of this development, it is necessary to recall the sharp differences which in the past have characterized the policies of the United States and Great Britain toward China. It is necessary to consider what would distinct advantage over our enemies in production of war materials. By the end of next year-provided Singapore and the Netherlands Indies do not fall to the Axis before then-we hope to take the lead in production of planes and mechanized units.

60,000 Planes 1942 Goal.

Never in the military history of the United States have American fighting Our goal for 1942 is 60,000 planes. We must train at least 70,000 young men men shown more bravery than in this war. Those who have had the privilege as pilots for our air force, according to reports from competent authorities. In of reading some of the terse reports written in Gen. Douglas MacArthur's order to do this we must have at least 15,000 training planes. This figure is impersonal style have been deeply moved the minimum required for primary, by the heroic deeds of that handful of basic and advanced training before we men who have been holding off the can allow our flying cadets to join the Japanese in the Philippines, in spite of the enemy's overwhelming superiority ranks of full-fledged flyers.

not only in numbers but in equipment The old saying that one American soldier is worth four Japs is an epic understatement, according to Gen. MacArthur. He has proved in the plains, the hills and the jungles of Luzon that the American is worth twice that number. Japs' Equipment Preponderant.

American and Filipino soldiers, from buck privates to highest ranking officers, are fighting as never before, but what could Gen. MacArthur's aviation, which scarcely exceeded 120 machines, including trainers, do against the waves of planes, numbering sometimes as high as 100, which the Japanese sent against them? What could a score of American tanks do against the avalanche of mechanized units which the Japanese have poured into the islands almost under the eyes of the helpless American naval forces? Admiral Hart probably has a plane carrier or two in his Asiatic fleet, but they are too vulnerable to be risked against the Japs, who are operating from nearby land bases.

Before the war, the Philippines were considered to be a potentially important operating base in the Western Pacific, because American air armadas could have taken off from Philippine airfields to protect naval vessels. But when the time came there were no planes. Our United States must be geared without a term of six years. He was a man of bombers, fighters and interceptors were sent in such numbers to Libya, Russia and the Near East since last July that mighty few were available for defense of our outpost in the Far East. Gen. MacArthur, who foresaw the Japanese attack, pleaded with Washington for an adequate air force. When, finally, a number of planes were sent to him it was too late.

From everywhere that the Allies are sake of what many regarded as futile war preparation. We are now paying the price of our shortsightedness. It will be at least another 12 months before we and our Allies can claim any is not satisfactory. The figures for British plane production are not available for publication, of course, but it can be said that it does not suffice for both home defense and the troops in the field-in Libya, in Egypt, the Near East and the Pacific. The British cannot afford to weaken their home forces lest the Nazis, who are watching them like hawks, attempt an invasion of the islands The British general staff expects to use a large air force in the next few months in the Mediterranean and Near East. There will be substantial losses and undoubtedly these will have to be replaced as soon as possible. Hence, British production is sufficient for home defense and will only partially cover eventual losses on other battle fronts.

The Dutch and Chinese are entirely dependent on us, and the Russians maintain that in order to deal a telling blow to the Nazis they will have to be provided with a number of planes from the United States. They are relying on our promise to let them have them without delay.

Besides providing our Allies-partially at least-with fighting, pursuit and interceptor planes, we must provide our own aviators with adequate fighting tools. To do this the entire industry in the dent of that southernmost republic for are gathering this week for a conference to determine the extent of wartime colaboration in the Western Hemisphere. And the pattern of collaboration that 's hoped for out of this momentous conference may survive to the mutual benefit of all the Americas long after the war crisis ends. That is the objective of members of the United States delegation who are now flying by Pan-American Clipper to Rio. For the immediate future the goal is to persuade all the American republics to sever diplomatic relations with the Axis powers so that not a single official representative of Germany, Italy or Japan will remain in the Western Hemisphere.

Such action would go far, it is believed, to stop the constant intrigue being carried on by the Axis in this part of the world. That intrigue has been directed in recent weeks toward sabotaging the conference which is to open Thursday. Diligently Axis diplomats and undercover agents have attempted to spread the poison of dissension. They will be active in Rio, since Brazil still recognizes Germany and Italy.

Argentina a Problem.

But they will be more than matched by our own top-ranking career diplomat, Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, who is the official delegate of the United States. Welles goes to Rio with a long background of experience in Latin American diplomacy. Many of the forign ministers are his friends. He speaks Spanish fluently and he understands the subtle sensitivities and jealousies which color Latin American relationships. Plus all this, he has the dignity and the bearing of a diplomat, and in Latin America that is a useful bit of stage setting.

Neither Welles nor any of his advisers inderestimate the task that lies ahead in Rio. Argentina—one of the more powerful states in South America-is prepared to oppose unanimous action in severing diplomatic relations with the Axis and in working out a convoy system with the combined fleets of the Americas which is the second immediate goal. The situation in the Argentine is curiously difficult. In February of 1938, Dr. Robert M. Ortiz was inaugurated Presi-ment in the sphere of international unification is found in President Roosevelt's message delivered to the reassembled Seventy-seventh Congress on Tuesday. The central theme of this powerful address was the opposition of the 26 voluntarily "United Nations" to the forceful and dictated unification sponsored by the Axis powers. From the long-range historical viewpoint, the attention to the necessity of unification paid by both sets of belligerents is no less important than the differences between the voluntary and the dictated approach which are at present properly to the fore.

Reconstruction Era.

Even though they are poles apart in philosophy and methods, both the Axis and anti-Axis combinations tacitly agree that after the war extreme political and economic nationalism must somehow be tempered. And from this, even amid the oppressive tragedy of current events, there springs very real hope for the era of reconstruction.

In his message to Congress President Roosevelt again emphasized the necessity of positive conclusions from the bitter lessons of separation and isolationism. Henceforth, between the United Nations, there will be continuous governmental consultation and co-ordinated executive action. American forces will, at sed, serve anywhere on the five continents and the seven seas.

And Mr. Roosevelt further emphasized, in a peroration which crystallized the whole thought of his message, that "we of the United Nations are not making all this sacrifice of human effort and human lives to return to the kind of world we had after the last World War." The fight, he said, is "for security and progress and for peace, not only for ourselves but for all men, not only for one generation but for all generations."

If that end is attained the trea lendous sacrifices ahead, even if as yet only faintly glimpsed by most Americans, will not, in the long account, have been in vain.

As 1942 gets fully under way the great changes brought by the year behind us become more apparent, in spite of the difficulty of focus which always afflicts contemporary vision.

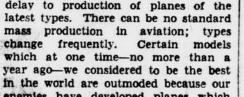

High-ranking Army and Navy officers are well disciplined; they say nothing, and do not complain. They are busy preparing to stem Japanese advances and to fight the war to a victorious finish. But before hostilities broke out they indicated that they did not believe civilians, regardless of how successful they were in business, politics or social works-men like William S. Knudsen, Harry Hopkins and Donald Nelsoncould determine America's immediate war needs.

Specialized Needs Stressed.

War, they maintained, is a specialized and difficult business which requires many years of intense study and preparation. Modern warfare demands technical knowledge, but the fact that a man has been an excellent engineer, salesman or banker does not mean that he knows how to fill the requirements of an Army and Navy.

Despite repeated warnings by military and naval specialists, American business-including both labor and capital -has not been willing to undergo the necessary radical change from profitable production for trade to unprofitable production for war.

All kinds of arguments were offered by business leaders why wholesale transformation could not be immediately effected. Labor went on with its strikes as if we had scores of years ahead to prepare for war. The country at large was fully convinced that we were in no danger of being attacked by any one. Hence, none was willing to curtail drastically what we euphoniously call the American standards of living for the | ravaged by war.

enemies have developed planes which fly much higher and much faster.

Axis Production.

We are the greatest industrial country in the world, but the enemy has several umps on us in the matter of war industry. At present their workmen are better prepared than ours for the type of work required by the military machine. Besides their own factories, which before World War II were reputed to be producing at the rate of 25,000 planes a

The Belgians had two factories and the Dutch a similar number. Their production capacity was about 600 a year and there is no reason to believe that production has diminished. Czech factories are said to be capable of producing a number at least equal to the French, while the two Polish factories have a 300-plane-a-year capacity. The Italians can produce 7,000 planes a year-

if they have the necessary materials. What the Japanese potential is no one knows exactly, but judging from their performance so far it must be assumed that they can turn out at least 10.000 planes a year.

The Russian potential is great, but must not be relied on too heavily because industrial areas at one time in Nazi hands-and now being recaptured by the Red Army-have been completely considerable vision in world affairs, with a realistic view of the need for American co-operation. Two years ago President Ortiz was taken seriously ill and subsequently lost his sight. His illness comcelled his retirement and Vice President Ramon S. Castillo became President in his place. Now in Argentina there is a customand this should somehow have a familiar ring to us here in the United Statesof naming as Vice President some one with the necessary political "oomph" regardless of what his other qualifications may be. Castillo comes, as did our own John Nance Garner, from the remote interior. He has the outlander's prejudice against foreigners and alliances with foreign states. In short, he was the Argentine equivalent of an extreme solationist and he proceeded to reverse Dr. Ortiz's foreign policy.

Guinazu and the Axis.

This compelled Julio Roca, who had been a capable Foreign Minister, to resign in disgust. In his place Castillo named an extreme conservative, Enrique Ruiz-Guinazu, who had spent virtually all of his career as a diplomat in Europe. Guinazu's last post had been that of Ambassador to the Vatican in Rome and there he had come under the personal influence of Mussolini. A devout Catholic, Guinazu nevertheless was not influenced by the attitude of the present

Pope and his Secretary of State, who are in sympathy with the democracies. He believed that the Axis would win the war and that therefore Argentina should cast its lot with Germany and Italy. Leaving his post in Rome last spring to become foreign minister in Buenos Aires, Guinazu passed through Washington and while here he was royally wined and dined. But the attentions showered on him apparently made no impression. Back in Buenos Aires he remained as firmly tied to the Axis as before. The irony of this is that observers in Washington believe at least 95 per cent of the Argentinians favor co-operation with the other republics in the present crisis. Moreover, the pro-Axis element is comparatively small, with most of the Italian population definitely anti-Fascist, according to the best information here. Not more than 100,000 citizens of German birth or German origin are regarded as tied to Naziism. Following the American declaration of war, a series of events took place in the Argentine which had a significance for the whole hemisphere. There was widespread evidence of a popular desire to join with the United States either by breaking off relations with the Axis or perhaps even through a declaration of war. A huge demonstration was planned to honor President Roosevelt.

Majority Is Anti-Axis.

While this big demonstration of solidarity was being planned, the government declared a state of siege to exist, equivalent to our martial law. This was done, it was announced, to stop Axis agitation and Axis propaganda. But under the state of siege one of the first acts was to call off the pro-Roosevelt demonstration. Next a rigid censorship was clamped on such great influential newspapers as La Prensa and La Nacion, which had been backing the demonstration and urging collaboration. Almost for the first time in their history, these papers, which rank with the best of the American press, can neither print the truth nor say what they wish in their editorials.

of the committee in the Argentine which has done a brilliant job of digging up Axis spies and propagandists. Taborda and other members of the Congress paid an official visit to Washington last November.

ENRIQUE DE RUIZ-GUINAZU,

Argentina's Foreign Minister, who

At the Rio conference Foreign Minister Guinazu naturally will try to win as much support among the other delegates as possible. In pan-American conferences in the past Argentina has drawn back from full collaboration. Geographically and culturally the country has been more independent than any of the other South American nations. The British tie has been strong and there has been deep resentment of the American ban on Argentine beef. Guinazu will work this independent, separatist line for all it is worth. He declared publicly last week in an interview in La Nacion that he would oppose any move toward "probelligerency" at Rio.

Failing to win support for a stand in open opposition to wartime collaboration, his next move is expected to be for a weak compromise which would not only damage American prestige but might present real obstacles to the war effort of the Americas. It is here, however, that Senor Guinazu may find himself out-maneuvered. Argentina has never wanted to stand alone in opposing collaboration. It is just possible that this time the Argentine Foreign Minister may find himself an opposition of one. And that might have very serious repercussions back in the Argentine.

Central American Unity.

Leaving out Argentina, the prospects for a far-reaching program of hemisphere co-operation on both the military and economic side are excellent. With several South American countries negotiations are now going forward for air bases to be constructed by the United States and used by the air forces of the two nations. While these are naturally secret negotiations and will not be brought into the discussion at Rio, the conference is expected to further this program.

The five Central American republics, Panama and the three Caribbean countries-Cuba, Dominican Republic and Haiti-have all declared war on the Axis. Mexico, Colombia and Venezuela have severed relations and have declared their solidarity with this country.

Brazil is likely to take the leadership for active collaboration. The Brazilians and the Argentinians have been on opposite sides of almost every question, and this time the Argentinians are certain to imply that Brazil's stand grows out of her nearness to Africa and her dependence for protection on the United States. Welles will work closely with his old friend, Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha, host to the conference and former Brazilian Ambassador to Washington. Aranha, who has a high voltage of Latin charm, is certain to be one of the principal personalities at the conference. Another foreign minister likely to play an important part is Ezekial Padilla of Mexico, who is as handsome and as dashing as Aranha. Padilla was a champion of collaboration with this country when that point of view was decidedly unpopular with most Mexicans, who looked with suspicion on the "Colossus of the North." Close to Portes Gil, Padilla is a man_of wealth. He has served one term in the Senate. His English is fluent and full of Latin gallantries that make his speeches peace machinery of the Western Hemisphere and in December of 1936 he went States, Great Britain and the five selfin person to Buenos Aires to receive governing dominions (including India), wide acclaim there. nine European governments - in - exile,

To Lima in 1938 the President sent a delegation that included his Republican opponent in '36, former Gov. Alf M. Landon. At this conference there was adopted the Declaration of Lims which reaffirmed the "continental solidarity" of the American republics and their determination "to collaborate in the maintenance of the principles upon which the said solidarity is based" and "to defend them against all foreign intervention or activity that may threaten them."

Consultative Parleys.

Since the start of the war in Europe in 1939, two consultative conferences have been held. At the meeting in Panama in September of that year representatives of the American republics agreed to establish a "safety belt" 300 miles from the coastline of the Western Hemisphere. This extraordinary move was intended to keep the war from the Americas.

A second consultative conference was occasioned by the fall of France and the Low Countries, which raised the fear that French or Dutch colonies in this part of the world might be transferred to Germany. The delegates met at Havana on July 21, 1940, and gave unanimous support to American proposals to set up "a regime of provisional administration" over any European territory threatened with transfer from one European power to another European power.

Perhaps the major objective of the Roosevelt-Hull diplomacy has been continental solidarity. Secretary of State Hull attended the Lima conference and there succeeded with remarkable diplomatic skill and patience in overcoming the opposition that had been engendered by Axis interference. Several of the more able permanent officers of the State Department are in the American Republics Division. Laurence Duggan, political adviser for Latin America, is perhaps the most capable of the young officers of the department. Duggan will remain in Washington while Welles is in Rio.

In one respect the coming conference will differ from most of those that have preceded it. Little time will be devoted to tea parties and banquets. Welles, with his astute private secretary, Miss Anna L. Clarkson, close at hand, will be devoting practically 24 hours a day to the difficult task of bringing the 21 American republics-including the Argentine -into line behind a unified war program.

Egypt's Alexandria Spends Madly in Boom

Associated Press Feature Service. ALEXANDRIA, Egypt .- Not since the lush days of World War 1 has this ancient city-Egypt's "second capital"seen such mad spending, such dizzily soaring prices, such roaring night life. The tens of thousands of dollars that pour daily from the pockets of British seamen off warships based here have swollen the cash boxes of theaters, restaurants, hotels and night clubs to bursting. Axis bombing of the battleships in the harbor, the rigidly enforced blackout and the fact that Alexandria, like all Egypt, is under martial law have failed to curb the spending spree.

More westernized than Cairo, Alexandria does most things American style. Men and women wear American clothes. drink American beer, smoke American glish cigarettes and the movies Roosevelt conversations, are the United War Becomes World-Wide.

During 1941 the war, steadily and seemingly by inevitable progression, became literally world-wide. Simultaneously the bitterly ironic fact that both sides seek the goal of greater political and economic unification became more clear. But this similarity of ultimate aim does not diminish-indeed it accentuates-the differences in method and philosophy which make it supremely important that the democratic rather than the dictatorial cause should triumph.

During 1941 there also came, to the American people as a whole, the beginning of a new and infinitely broader conception of their collective destiny as a great nation. In challenging the Axis plan of unification, the United States tacitly pledged itself to develop and make effective a better program of international co-operation. The fact that we failed once before to follow through on a similar challenge serves only to make success in the present undertaking the more imperative.

"The will of the American people," said President Roosevelt in his message to Congress, is "to make very certain that the world will never so suffer again."

To make that will effective, the national contribution to the Allied cause must from now on be not merely gigantic ever, does more than create a wartime but also continuous. It must be not alliance between its adherents. The merely physical but also intellectual and declaration goes further by specifically spiritual.

Present production estimates, wholly in the material field, are a sample of the vast and well-co-ordinated effort now required from the United States. That physical production, necessary to outweigh the Axis reserves, must be achieved. But equally necessary, if victory is to be real and lasting, will be a growth in mental and spiritual stature concomitant with the expansion of war industries and monetary taxation already ordered.

Price Bill Fiasco

The Senate farm bloc, riding roughshod over administration leaders, has dealt an exceedingly heavy blow to the praiseworthy effort to keep wartime prices in this country from rising to dangerously high levels. In effect, the farm bloc has converted the price-control bill into a price-raising measure; or, as Senator Barkley expressed it, a pricecontrol bill has become a farm-relief bill.

This has come about through the enactment of two amendments. The first, passed by a vote of 48 to 37, gives the Secretary of Agriculture a veto power over any ceiling that may be fixed on a farm product. In other words, price-control authority, so far as it affects the farmer, is taken out of the hands of the price administrator and lodged with the Secretary of Agriculture. The greater damage was accomplished, however, through the second amendment, which was passed by a 55-to-31 vote.

The effect of this second amendment is to forbid the fixing of a ceiling on any farm commodity until it has risen to approximately 120 per cent of the parity price. Parity represents the price in relative purchasing power which the farmer received for his products during the base period 1909-1914, selected because it was believed to be a most favorable period from the point of view of the farmer. This means that the parity price is an adjustable price. It rises as the cost of living rises, so that the farmer, no matter what he has to pay for the things he buys, is assured of an income at least equal to that which he enjoyed in a most prosperous period as long as he receives prices for his products equivalent to 100 per cent of parity. But the farm bloc has not been satisfied to achieve parity. The minimum below which ceilings could not be fixed was first raised to 110 per cent of parity and then other qualifications were written into the bill to assure the farmer a higherthan-parity price. And then, on top of all this, came yesterday's amendment which permits farm prices to rise to 120 per cent of parity. For the householder, according to opponents of the amendment, this means that food prices may go 25 per cent higher. For the public generally, it means that final passage of the bill would bring an inequitably depressed standard of living, since everybody would have to pay higher prices for anything produced on a farm while profits from the sale of other commodities-the profits which go into the buying of farm goodswould be held down by a price ceiling. Thus, if the farm bloc has its way, the farmers will enjoy an inflated standard of living while the rest of the country makes the economic saccrifices called for by the war.

purposes is not substantial. Some buildings are new; the larger number are old, rickety and in sorry need of repair.

The government edifices, theaters. department stores, railway stations, piers and dockyards, most of which have been developed during the past decade and a half, probably would survive a first attack: but that certainly could not be said for the residential sections, the homes of the middle class and the slums of Tokio. If bombed, those r tions of the metropolis would vanish almost instantly.

No responsible spokesman for their foes as yet has expressed any desire to blast the capital of Japan as Manila and the cities of China were blasted, but the Nipponese warlords ought not to presume too much upon the patience of the enemies their own treachery and ruthlessness have made.

The departure of the United States delegation, headed by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, for the Pan-American Conference scheduled to convene in Rio de Janeiro this week brings to the fore Latin America's relation to the world conflict. Fortunately, the conference will meet in an atmosphere of basic good will and mutual understanding. The fundamental principle of Western Hemisphere solidarity and defense against foreign aggression was clearly laid down at the previous conference held at Havana, Cuba, in the summer of 1940. Although at that time the United States, like its Latin American neighbors, was neutral and desirous of remaining so if possible, the Havana Conference met in the shadow of sweeping Axis victories in Europe, culminating with the fall of France, and the potential threat of Axis aggression in the New World had become obvious. One of the more important results of the hemisphere defense policy laid down at Havana was the granting of a "non-belligerent" status to the United States by all the Latin American nations. This enabled our ships and planes to use Latin American harbors and air bases without the restrictions and limitations which would be imposed by the rules of neutrality in the traditional sense. It must be remembered that, as yet, no South American country has declared war on the Axis powers, although Venezuela and Colombia have broken off diplomatic relations and Brazil has emphatically declared its solidarity with the United States. On the contrary, all the republics of Central America and the Caribhave hinged on these annual ratings since they were instituted, but there has been little money available for advancement of deserving workers for several years. Consequently, the same weight was not attached to the ratings as otherwise would have been the case. With a definite payincrease program provided by law, however, the ratings take on a new importance, and it is necessary that they be as truly reflective of the worth of each individual as is possible. It was with this end in view that the commission asked administrative officers for suggestions as to changes in the system that had been in use for several years, and their recommendations, which now are being carried into effect, are based on the demonstrated shortcomings of the former plan. In making the changes effective the commission wisely called the attention of the various agencies to the necessity of administering the system carefully and fairly. In doing this the commission followed the lead of the House Appropriations Committee, which provided funds to start the Ramspeck-Mead program with the admonition that the future of the system depended on the manner in which it was administered.

Peace for Finland?

Too much emphasis cannot be laid on that point.

Reports that progress is being made in talks looking toward a peace settlement between Finland and Russia will be welcomed in this country, which thoroughly understands the distressing dilemma in which the Finns were placed by the outbreak of the Russo-German war. When Hitler's armies smashed into Russia last June, Finland had not yet recovered from the battering received at the hands of the Russians some eighteen months earlier. But the Finns, despite their weakness, had no substantial opportunity to remain at peace. Under strong pressure from the Germans on the one hand and threatened with the danger of at least a preventive occupation by the Russians to protect their flank, they had no real alternative but to make a choice between the belligerents and enter the war.

Finland, with fresh memories of Russia's unprovoked assault in the winter of 1939, elected to side with the Germans. As things have turned out, this decision, from every standpoint, was unfortunate. But that does not mean that there is any reason why a just peace cannot be arranged between the Finns and the Russians.

Certainly, such a settlement would be greatly to the advantage of both has broken diplomatic relations and parties. Russia has nothing to fear from Finland, for it is absurd to believe that the Finns have any aggressive designs against the Soviet Union. And Russia, having hurled back her German assailants by almost superhuman efforts, could use the troops now engaged with the Finns to good purpose in pressing home their counterattack on the retreating Nazis. Finland, at the same time, is in a desperate plight, according to reports reaching this country. Her imports have been shut off since June 23, and she has had to depend largely on Germany for food since that time. But she can no longer count on German aid in this respect. Likewise, her military effort is approaching the point of exhaustion. Under these circumstances, there can be no doubt that the Finns, or the great majority of them, would welcome a peace settlement which would restore their original boundaries and give reasonable assurance of security in the future. It is to be hoped that the governments adhering to the United Nations pact will lend their good offices to this objective, and there will be no delay in seeking a Russo-Finnish peace. Not only would a just peace be beneficial to both the Finns and the Russians, but it also would mark a significant first step toward attainment of the goal which the United Nations have set for themselves. And because of the close ties between the United States and Finland, made stronger by the love and admiration of our people for the courageous Finns, this country appropriately should take the lead in working for such a peace.

Henderson's Reputation Enhanced by War

By Owen L. Scott.

Only one among the many high ranking Army, Navy and civilian officials who were preparing this country for war emerged from the recent shocks with reputation enhanced. That person, strange as it may seem, turned out to be a young New Dealer.

When war came, Leon Henderson, who is price administrator and director of civilian supply, found high officials scrambling to try to do all of a sudden what he had been urging that they do for a year. Likewise, when war came, Mr. Henderson was all set with his own plans and wasted no time putting them into effect. His are the orders that put an end to tire and automobile sales and directed sharp curtailment in many other fields. He had his skeleton organization and his regulations all ready.

Mr. Henderson, in his job as price controller, has had very little specific power. Yet, with the power he does have, and by using persuasion, he has managed to hold this country's price structure in a remarkable degree of balance. To do the job he has not hesitated to clash head on with the farm bloc in Congress or to tackle any other bloc or group that might stand in the way.

All of this is in striking contrast to the situation in other fields of the armament effort.

The Army and Navy and O. P. M. hold great powers, directly given them by Congress. Yet, while Mr. Henderson was pushing ahead to do his job with inadequate powers, the others were hesitating to use the powers that Congress had given them. Every sign of political or group opposition led to hesitation. Now that Congressmen are asking why this country has such an unsatisfactory record of military production, there is under way a game of buck passing that probably seldom has been equaled. The buck finally is landing in the lap of the public which is accused of not wanting better results if getting them interfered with the comforts of life.

A moral may be read into this interesting situation.

Leon Henderson is a young man, barely 45, and is surrounded by young men. He and his aides have no particular interests outside of their jobs. They have few preconceived ideas and are not wedded to past methods. They appear ready to fly in the face of the politicians when neces-SALV.

Except for Mr. Henderson, President Roosevelt, rather naturally, in choosing men to direct this country's armament effort and to run the Army and Navy, turned to older men who are fixed in their ways. Ages, with a few exceptions, run from 60 to 74. There is much emphasis in the top ranks on lawyers and on salesmen types. There is very little emphasis upon engineers and managers of the kind who are interested first of all in results.

It required a disaster in Hawaii and defeat in the Philippines to shake O. P. M. and S. P. A. B. out of thei ruts. In the Navy it was not until the experience which the Japanese provided at Pearl Harbor and that the American Marines, with 12 planes, provided at Wake Island that the airplane was accepted for what it is worth. In the Army the leadership recognized some months ago that modern war and modern methods require younger and more adaptable commanders and planners. As a result, the Army is shead of the Navy in its shake-up of personnel and its acceptance of new ideas. Yet, all through the services and the O. P. M. and S. P. A. B. there runs an emphasis on a "can't" type of philosophy Army officials in charge of procurement have argued that you can't get results through forced subcontracting. They have insisted that the country can't speed up production by using small plants or by changing contracting methods. The O. P. M. accepted the argument that the tools of the automobile and other industries can't be converted to use in making armament. Now the country is being told that the 300,000,000 wild rubber trees in South America can't be tapped to produce more than about 15,000 tons of rubber a year. There are all kinds or arguments advanced to show why enough synthetic rubber can't be produced to meet the country's basic needs and why Guayule rubber can't be developed in time. The Navy insisted until the last few weeks that a bomb can't sink a battleship and that planes can't stop a naval offensive. There was a very long argument about why the steel industry can't increase its productive facilities to advantage. Now there is another claim that the country can't find brains enough to plan and execute a vastly expanded shipbuilding program. Emphasis has been, and still is, very often on the negative side. Few officials are insisting that all of these and other problems can be solved with real effort. They are inclined to discover reasons why labor can't be brought into line, or why farmers can't be denied something that they want from Congress or why this or that interest can't be interfered with.

REASONING TOGETHER

manded imperatively today. To attempt to muddle through or to depend upon what we have of genius and experience will not serve us in the present situation. Life is not normal nor can we rest upon what we proudly call our ability to meet any situation that may arise. One of our most kindly critics has spoken of us as "a people singularly self-confident, much given to prodigal ways." This is a just and warranted estimate of us. Life has moved so swiftly and success so conspicuously has marked our course that we have had little time for reflection. These latter years have not been distinguished by habits of reasoning together. We calculate, speculate and project new and magnificent enterprises, but to build them upon the sound basis of a well-reasoned course is not common to us. The recent long-continued depression is in demonstration of this. Our sudden thrust, against our will, into a World War has changed all our calculations, and our boasted American way of face serious days ahead. life suddenly has been halted. On every hand we solemnly are being admonished to be prepared for hardships that will alter many of our convenient and easy ways. Curtailments here and there, enforced sacrifices we shall have to accept and accept willingly. Such conditions force us to think, they call for reasoning: and reasoning must lead us to many wholesome and necessary changes. Any consistent survey of our life these recent weeks makes us conscious of many discrepancies, many deficiencies in our way of life. We have parted company, as some one has said, with the old habits and ways of the fathers, their dress and stately practices, but "let us not part with the strong and wholesome ideals for which they stood." He then goes on to say: "If there be no nobility of descent, all the more reason is there for nobility of ascent."

There is not a department of our life that does not call for serious reflection and appraisal. Take our home life, the average American home life: Is there not much about it that calls for thought and deep reflection? Have we the assurance that in these later years we have used much of reason in the care we have exercised for our youth? Are we finding that the way of life we have given to the young has produced results that fill us with pride? I have talked to hundreds of these young men and women in our schools and universities and I find them largely disillusioned and disheartened by what they find in the world about them. We have given them luxuries, advantages, an excess of

Capital Sidelights

By Will P. Kennedy.

The call to reason together is de- | pleasures, but have we given them by precept and example those vital things that enrich and ennoble life, that give it stability of character, and the Christian virtues that are indispensable to satisfying living? As youth looks out upon this confused. disturbed world he knows, because he is beginning to think for himself, that there are definite causes that have produced the chaos he sees. His home and his home-and-college training have provided much to satisfy his physical desires and his intellectual tastes, but there has been little in it all to satisfy the deeper yearnings of his spiritual nature. He is conscious of the emptiness of his soul. I have had men of distinction who have gained positions of affluence come to me in these recent years to tell me that there is something tragically lacking in life: that there is much that is superficial, unreal and unsatisfying and that there must come, and come soon, a return to old and wholesome ways, or we

"Come let us reason together." is a phrase from an Old Testament book; it is a call to reflection, a call to think through the trends and tendencies and ways we are following today. Facing stern realities, we cannot pursue our course, thinking the while that present serious symptoms will cure themselves without wise and skillful forethought and treatment. We are arming our sons. we are responding to the call for production, we have confidence in the strength of our Nation, and this is well, but, are we beginning to look shead to a new kind of world (and it will be terribly new) into which in some near day we expect to be entering? Guns and ships and planes cannot make this new world, but deeply sober and reflective men and women who reason can. "Come, let us reason together" about the real and valuable things of life. Let us attempt, if only that, to penetrate the heavy mists and dark clouds that enfold us and let us begin, and begin now, the work of rehabilitating, not our spent forces, but our lives for the new day that lies ahead. Our old methods and ways upon which we spent so much have failed to deliver us from discord and confusion. There are new highways to be built for the pressing feet of an eager. oncoming generation. Let us begin to build them. They will not be satisfied with the old highways, they demand better and safer ones. Reasoning together, yet, and reasoning with God in the equation, we will build for tomorrow a better world. If we reason today, we shall be saved tomorrow.

Axis Nations Face Economic Need

By Frederic J. Haskin.

As optimism rises and confidence increases among the Allies that they will defeat the Axis powers, nothing strengthens that faith more than the hungry stomachs and ill-clad peoples of Germany, Italy and Japan. These countries face widespread need of food and clothing, and the peoples of two of them, Germany and Italy, are feeling acutely the economic effects of the struggle. Japan, although war-weary because of her long struggle with China, has not rationed its people as have Germany and Italy, but rationing neverthless is the order of the day. And in each of these countries, with huge war machines to feed, only blind optimism would predict that conditions will not grow worse. There is no record in history of a nation improving its material status under the strain of war. Consider Japan first. She has won many victories in China, a temporary one against the United States, but real victory is so far distant, if it ever appears, that the Japanese people have become irritated with sacrifices which they long have been making. It is believed by many that one of the reasons why Japan attacked the United States when she did was to bolster up the morale of her peo-

The work week in Japan is 72 hours. Four matches a day to a family, milk only in certain areas, no pure butter, no wheat, no cotton or wool for clothes because these two commodities must go to the fighting forces, and the cost of living risen from 300 to 500 per cent, is but a glimpse of internal Japan.

If this thumbnail sketch is not a convincing picture of what the Japanese face, then consider that American oranges or lemons on Japan's markets would sell for a dollar each. Newspapers have been reduced to four pages as a result of a paper shortage, the government is issuing thinner postal cards and the size of telegraph blanks has been drastically reduced. No engraved wedding invitations can be issued, for copper as well as paper must be saved; only 30watt bulbs are permitted after 9 p.m. in Tokio, and the price of a telephone is $500.

Lo g before the war started the Italian people were feeling the hardships of a Fascist regime, but then as now, rallying to sacrifices largely because they periodically are stimulated by a breastbeating leader making promises, none of which has been kept in full. After Italy had thrown her strength to Hitler, or probably on Hitler's orders, the real pinch for the Italians came. Ever a year ago the monthly allowance of sugar per person was only a fraction over one pound. At that time, too, macaroni, flour and rice were cut to 4.4 pounds per person per month. Other commodities are rationed on a similar basis, and coffee cannot be sold to private consumers. Clothing can be purchased only on government approval and then in quantities only sufficient to keep the body warm, for the army has first claim on all wearables and children come second. Totalitarian countries scoff at democracies for what they say are cumbersome governmental activities. But no democracy on earth could possibly have more government machinery than Italy. The various pools, boards and ministries control everything the people eat, wear and most of what they read. The situation in Germany is even more desperate than in Japan and Italy. A country that must uproot, by official decree, the iron fences around private homes and gardens to help keep the steel mills going, resort to substitutes for more than 50 common items of food and clothes, and where no inhabitant can purchase a piece of wearing apparel without an official order. is facing a desperate economic situation. That is the Reich today. Germany's food problem has been acute for many months. The first tangible evidence of this was shown when Holland and other countries were overrun and thousands of head of cattle taken immediately to the home base for food purposes. Gradually young farmers have been drafted into the army, leaving only the older people, women and children to produce. And production is evidently very low, for the German food card now permits the purchasing of only 2.2 pounds of canned vegetables for the entire winter. Obviously all this places a great strain on Germany's finances. And so desperate is the situation in the national treasury that the minister of economics has ordered a registration of all holdings in industrial and bank shares. No reason is offered for this move, but it seems to be clear that when and if Germany must confiscate financial holdings of the masses, it will know where to make the take. Then, too, every German industry has been instructed to invest in government securities a greater portion of its liquid assets. If such a process were to continue, and with acceleration, eventually private funds all would be in the hands of the government, industry would die and workers be thrown out of employment. It is a curious economy which only a leadership in the throes of possible defeat could demand and enforce. It may be a more important sign than it now seems. In contrast to what the people of Japan, Italy and Germany face, the United States is a vast storehouse of food supplies, clothing and billions of tons of raw materials with which to feed the war machine. Poverty often does stalk the land, but nevertheless supplies are here and can be distributed. The Latin American republics that have joined the anti-Axis powers also have large supplies of food and clothing. In Argentina, for example, there are stock farms having more than 1,000,000 head of cattle and 500.000 sheep. Everywhere the reservoir is full, and now America as a united nation, joined by other nations, has set out for what doubtless will prove the most decisive battle of all history. Food, clothing and other supplies may play the most important part.

THE SUNDAY STAR, WASHINGTON, D. C., JANUARY 11, 1942.

This is a most shortsighted legislative step, benefitting a small but influential minority at the expense of the majority. Dangerous economically, the philosophy of this bill is, moreover, a disheartening negation of the national unity that is essential to successful prosecution of the war.

When they ordered the bombing of the open cities of China and commanded systematic aerial attacks upon Manila, the warlords of Japan deliberately placed in jeopardy the existence of Tokio, second largest metropolitan center of the world. The community thus hazarded has a population in excess of 6,500,000 and covers an area of approximately 213 square miles. While it is true that much of the Sitamati or "downtown" district has been rebuilt since the earthquake of September 1, 1923, the outer circle of suburbs or "villages," representing traditional timber and paper construction, would burn like the proverbial matchbox, once a fire were started. Recent efforts to provide control for such an anticipated conflagration-by the introduction of "barriers" of concrete buildings-have been hampered by lack of money.

But it is not merely the humble homes of a vast multitude of people that the Nipponese military clique has gambled. Much more important from a strategic point of view are the mills and factories in the neighborhood of Tokio. The great Fuji-Denki electrical equipment production plant, for example, might be a proper target for raiding American, British, Dutch or Chinese planes. Manufacturing establishments turn-bean, including Panama, have declared war on the Axis, while Mexico is co-operating with us in every respect. There can be no doubt that Japan's wanton attack on us has strongly reinforced the trend toward Pan-American solidarity throughout Latin America. Nowhere in those countries is there any pro-Japanese sentiment. Everywhere the men of Nippon are disliked and their government is feared. There are nearly 500,000 Japanese in Latin America. one-half of these in Brazil, with strong colonies in Peru and Bolivia. But in all cases the clannishness. aggressiveness, and unscrupulous methods of the Japanese immigrants have made them suspect. This is very different from the status of the Italian and German elements, who have entered into the national lives of Latin American nations and made an influential place for themselves.

The outstanding issues on the agenda at Rio will center around such matters as the curbing of Axis activities, further solidarity with the United States against the Axis, and relations of Latin American countries with extra-continental allies of the United States, especially Great Britain.

On the first of these issues there presumably will be little dispute. Even Argentina, which is most inclined to take a negatively independent attitude, has had painful experience with German and Italian propaganda, and has taken effective measures to control it. Whether a solid Latin American front can be established to the extent of breaking diplomatic relations with the Axis is questionable, in view of the strong dissent voiced by the Argentine government. Still less likely is a general declaration of war against the Axis. The question of extending a "nonbelligerent" status to Britain similar to that already accorded the United States has been proposed by Uruguay and will be raised by its delegates at the conference, but Argentina already has voiced dissent, and likewise has criticized the war declarations of the Central American and Caribbean republics as unilateral action not in keeping with the idea of Latin American co-ordination in foreign policy. The Rio Conference thus has important business and real problems ahead of it.

Efficiency Ratings

The efficiency rating revisions just announced by the Civil Service Commission should be valuable to Government agencies in connection with the administration of the Ramspeck-Mead pay law.

Instead of grading all employes according to the same uniform formula, the new system sets up a method by which each individual is rated on factors bearing particularly on his work-a method that should provide a far more dependable appraisal of ability in each case than heretofore has been possible.

This is highly important in view

A Star Fell

Among the saddest sights in the world are the last rites of a newspaper. When a paper is fatally stricken by swollen expenses, deficiency of subscriptions and atrophy of advertising accounts, there is a definite formula for the proceedings as soon as the last faint circulation ceases. It consists of getting out one final edition in a burst of glory, to serve as a tombstone. Not even the nardest hearted sheriff has been known to stop this custom, any more than he would break up a private uneral.

Such was the case of the late Valsetz (Oregon) Star. This monthly paper, the only one in the entire umbering community of Valsetz, had seen edited and published by twelveear-old Dorothy Anne Hobson, ably assisted by Franklin Thomas of the ame age, who served as compositor, pressman, reporter, advertising soicitor and newsboy. For three years t served the log rolling interests of Western Oregon without fear or competition, as a good paper should, until advancing age, with its extra school and social obligations, gave Dorothy Anne the Hobson choice of suspending or else. The final edition of the Valsetz Star is out, with the

It is for that reason that Leon Henderson and his aides take on such importance. They always have practiced the opposite approach.

Mr. Henderson set out to control basic prices when others said that it could not be done. The ceilings that he set, backed with little more power than that of per suasion, are much more effective than anybody thought they would be. He bearded the farm bloc in its center of congressional power and got away with it when officials from President Roosevelt down always in the past have been afraid to make the attempt. He insisted that the automobile industry and other industries could be converted to war work when everybody else was arguing that it could not be done. He now is ready to teach the people of the country what it is like to be rationed-a very unpopular but very necessary procedure. He criticized Army-Navy procurement methods when others shied away.

It is not likely that Leon Henderson will reap many rewards from his record. The fact that he is young and that he has been associated with the New Deal very probably is to stand in the way of his selection for a job of getting results from the whole defense effort. But there is inside agreement that he does deserve at least a measure of recognition for showing what can be done when the word "can't" is forgotten.

Attention of the Downs subcommittee, which for more than two months has been holding hearings on decentralization of Government agencies and which took notable exception to the transfer of the major portion of the Patent Office to Richmond, was directed to an incident in the War of 1812. Dr. William Thorn ton, first commisisoner of patents-"a versatile physician of Tortola, West Indies," who drafted the plans for the Capitol, prevented the destruction of the Patent Office, then housed jointly with the General Post Office in Blodgett's Hotel the first building erected in Washington under the lottery system. The office was created for him by President Madison. After serious damage had been done by the British to the Capitol Building, a loaded cannon was trained on the Patent Office with the intention of destroying it. Dr. Thornton then is said to have taken a stand in front of the cannon and in a frenzy of excitement exclaimed: "Are you Englishmen or only Goths and Vandals? This is the Patent Office, depository of the ingenuity and inventions of the American Nation, in which the whole civilized world is interested. Would you destroy it? If so, fire and let the charge pass through my body." The effect upon the soldiers is said to have been magical and to have saved the Patent Office. The subcommittee was impressed with the recital that the patent law of the United States is the very cornerstone of American industry, and that since 1840 the manufacturers of the United States have looked to the Patent Office for decisions vitally affecting industry. The Constitution itself provided for the granting of patent monopolies and it is the only monopoly acknowledged by this Government: "Congress shall have power to promote the progress of science and useful arts, by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries." This section was inserted in the Constitution at the instance of James Madison and Charles Pinckney. The first legislative enactment was the law of 1790, which was placed on the statute books after George Washington. in his first inaugural address to Congress on January 8, 1790, had said: "I cannot forbear intimating to you the expediency of giving effectual encouragement, as well to the introduction of new and useful inventions from abroad as to the exertion of skill and genius at home."

widespread official acceptance of the "can't" philosophy. It has pervaded most of the Government departments, including the military services. It usually is expressed by the older men who hold the power. Very few men in the prime of life are found in high positions here, even fewer than in the British services and departments.

However, now that the automobile industry no longer can make automobiles and now that other big industries are being denied material to make their peace-time products, there will be released a very big volume of brain power and managerial skill that is going to be centered in the design, production and use of weapons.

The basic strength of the nation lies in this brain power that is concentrated in industry. When that power has had time to center itself on the problems of war production, the record of other nations will begin to look inconsequential by comparison. The sad part of it is, though, that this effort to tap the real

In a harmony, perhaps accidental, with the arrival of a leap year and its legendary special privileges for women, the question of Woman woman suffrage again be-Suffrage came prominent. The Star of January 9, 1892, announced: "The National American Woman Suffrage Association will hold its annual convention in this city at All Souls' Church on January 17, 18, 19, 20. The average reader has grown accustomed to this announcement with the coming of each new year and the presence of Congress in our midst. The two things are synonymous for with each convention there goes forth fresh appeals or, let us say, demands upon the national legislators for the enfranchisement of woman. The suffrage movement is entering upon its 25th year, old enough in years to have itself firmly established as a movement that will not be downed in the public mind, dignified and serious enough a problem to have the best minds of the age engage in its discussion and having achieved results in its quarter century of work that the most sanguine could not have dreamed of, although the great object is not yet attained. The suffrage movement is widespread, 30 States and territories being represented in the last annual convention, and the prospects for this one are that nearly all the 40 States and 6 territories will have a showing in this."

At the time, 350 men were in the shaft, most of whom were waiting for the cage to take them out, and the foot of the shaft is one mass of dead bodies. Eighty-five men came out by an old entry and 42 were saved by the shaft. This leaves about 223 men yet in the mine and in all probability 200 are

U. S. Will Be Industrial Battleground Assuring Victory for Allies

America Must Outbuild Enemy In All Instruments of Warfare

Big Problem Is Time, but This Country Possesses Abundant Resources, Machinery and Man Power to Defeat Axis

By David Lawrence.

The road to victory is a long, hard road. And the victory will be won not on land, sea or air thousands of miles from home but right here in the United States.

For this is a war of materials, of tools, of labor and of production. America has an abundant supply of all four. But can America organize the job and what have we done thus far on which a judgment can be based as to whether we shall organize the job in time to win on the field of battle?

These are the questions that must be answered and it doesn't take a military or naval expert to answer them. For the information is to be found in the offices of the economic experts and production leaders who have been summoned to Washington ever since total war began in May, 1940.

'To understand our progress we must | than anything the world has ever known go back to the summer of 1940. Prior to that date we didn't take the war too seriously. But since that time we have made substantial progress. And it may be said that the United States is better prepared by far than would have been the case if an active public opinion had not insisted on preparedness and lendand-lease aid.

We set for ourselves the task of becoming the "arsenal of democracy" and today we are not only that but the arsenal of defense of our own territory and possessions.

Spurred by Pearl Harbor.

Whatever was accomplished before December 7, 1941, when the attack on Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, by the Japanese came out of a clear sky, cannot be compared with what has happened in the brief interval since. A new spirit of achievement has been born and many of the frustrations of the past are now definitely removed. For in wartime we have national unity and there is less bickering about rationing, priorities and the comparative necessities of civilian and mil-Itary supply. In fact, as William Knudsen, co-chairman of the O. P. M., said the other day: "I used to plead with men to come down here to help me, but now I order them-and they come."

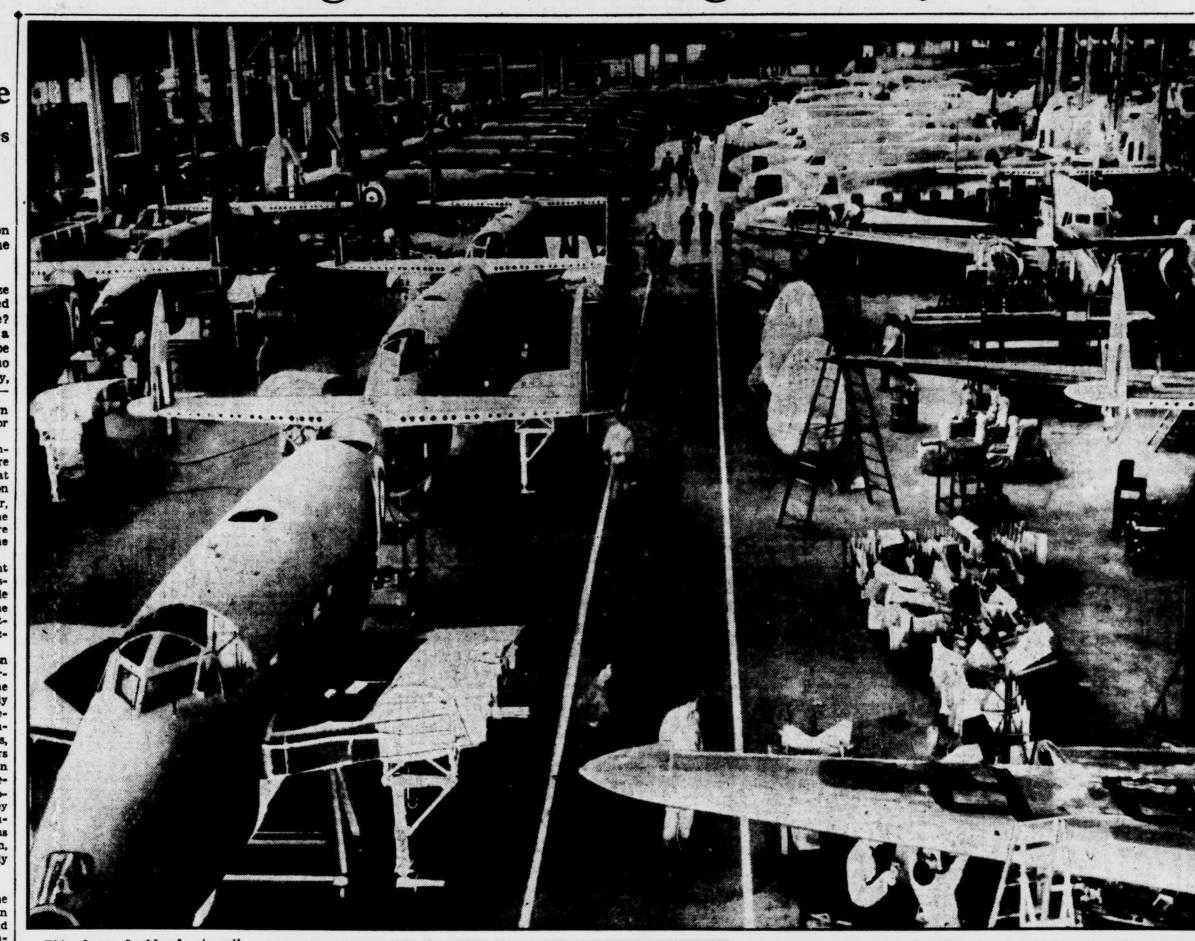

Unless one has a broad conception of the magnitude of the production job we have set for ourselves, there can be little understanding of the inevitable delays, friction and inefficiencies that have almost unavoidably come into the scene. We are not a totalitarian state and cannot do things as rapidly as in Germany, but on the other hand, we have an advantage in the fact that we have a better spirit of co-operation when we do get going on a basis of voluntary organand larger than any other nation or group of nations has ever achieved. These planes are of two kinds-combat and training. The combat planes are of various types, but it is no secret that the British urged us to concentrate on the heavy, long-range cruising bomber, while they stuck to the designs of the interceptor or fighting plane. We are concentrating on both at the same time

On engines we have done a magnificent job. Both Pratt & Whitney and Curtiss-Wright are doing a production miracle on engines, way ahead of schedule. One of these factories alone may soon be putting out more engines than all the factories in Germany combined.

Thanks to the splendid foundation which the United States had in its aircraft industry, it was possible for the two American engine makers to supply Ford and General Motors with the designs and the staff to help the auto industry make standardized airplanes, while the original aircraft engine makers were able to expand their own production and prepare for new and improved designs. While the bulk of the engine production will come from Pratt & Whitney and Curtiss-Wright, the amount of engine production to come from the various auto companies is a substantial addition. and will make the 1942 and 1943 supply of engines more than adequate. Substantial Foundation. On planes, it is fortunate that the United States had pioneers like Glenn Martin and Douglas and Lockheed and Hudson and Bell and Boeing and Consolidated, for they were able to teach assembly and the making of essential parts to other companies like Chrysler, Goodyear, Bendix, Goodrich and Firestone.

This huge Lockheed aircraft plant, at Burbank, Calif., is but one of many sprawling plane factories which are stepping up production at tremendous rates since Here ization.

The job of organization has proceeded fitfully because the program has often had to be changed. Plans have had to be revised as contract requirements have been raised again and again before the first plans could possibly be executed.

Generally speaking, American industry has done a great job, considering all the handicaps, not the least of which was that the military side had not known till December 7 what its true objectives of defense really were and probably does not know yet exactly what all the goals on the offensive side are to be.

But we have a program that will cost about $150,000,000.000 unless the war stops abruptly. That's an enormous sum to contemplate and it will take a long time to spend it. The war, of course, cannot be won by paper plans or by dollars. It requires production and co-ordinating of all materials and facilities and greatly expanded transportation to carry the weapons and supplies to the theaters of war.

Detailed figures are not permitted to be published now as was the case before December 7, but certain figures released before that date, and those supplied by the President in his message to Congress, can give an idea of where we are and where we are going on the whole war program.

This is a war of planes, warships and transports, tanks and guns. Given enough planes, we can fight off invasion and carry the war to the enemy's territory by bombers. Given a good transport system, we can carry men and tanks to key points in North Africa or the Far East and later, perhaps, to continental Europe.

Stated briefly, our program is to build more of everything than anybody else. Our program on paper is such that only the United States could ever produce anything like it. Germany and all her occupied areas can never equal the amount of planes, ships, tanks and guns we are planning to make. Germany does not have either the raw materials or the workers or the plants that are free from frequent harassment by air attack.

Big Problem of Time.

The big question is whether we can get our weapons produced in time.

This has been a grave worry from the beginning. When England begged for help in the summer of 1940, there were many people in America who thought it was too late-that Hitler would be in London by autumn. But the British steadily increased their production in the confident belief that they would have time. And the fortunes of war have given Britain time.

Every single defeat for Britain has vielded time. Hitler is working against time, and the Russian campaign has done more to upset this timetable than has any other factor.

So the first and foremost point about our program is that the best posted officials feel our program will be in time. We may suffer reverses in the interim but, in the end, the Axis powers must meet the most gigantic production of weapons of war the world has ever known.

Take airplanes. The President in June, 1940, said we were making planes of ali kinds at the rate of 12,000 a year and he called for a doubling of that figure. He was a bit optimistic. We were not yet at the 1,000-a-month stage and didn't Fortunately, too, we have an air-cooled engine that can do a job. It is reliable and has, horsepower adequate to equip the heaviest bombers we can make. It is in quantity production. The liquid-cooled Allison engine is coming along at a fair rate of production, and for the uses intended it, too, will do a job.

So America has the engines for the planes—and more than anybody else can possibly make in the next 18 months. Next is the materials for the planes. We have the aluminum and the other basic materials. And we are getting the assembly plants into bigger and bigger production.

It is not easy to make a bomber that weighs 80,000 pounds, but we are doing it in quantity. How many we are making is a military secret, but we want at least 1.000 a month. We will be producing that number late in 1942 or early in 1943. Meantime, on the rising curve of bomber production from 100 a month to then proper distribution by a system of 10 times that number, we can do plenty of damage to the Axis powers. For nobody else in the world is producing even as many as 100 heavy bombers a month, powered as well as ours or with the longrange cruising radius of our new flying fortresses. To put these flying battleships into production is doubtless our most spectacular achievement, and if Germany's population knew what was ahead they might begin to worry now more than they ever did in 1918. In fact, in a few months it wouldn't be surprising if censorship on production figures were lifted as a means of weakening German morale. Tank Prospects Also Promising. The story of tanks is equally promising We are in quantity production now. The remarkable feat of the Chrysler Corp. in building in a few months a tank arsenal for the Government-and not a cent of profit or managerial fee was chargedwill rank in American industry as one of the speedy industrial achievements of the age. Others have done likewise in supplying Uncle Sam with factories, especially in the ammunition field: The tank job is spread over many big industrial companies. American Locomotive, Baldwin and American Car Foundry are names that will be as famous in 'the tank field some day as are Martin or Pratt & Whitney or Curtiss-Wright or Douglas or Hudson or Lockheed or Boeing in the airplane category. By the end of 1942, and perhaps by the middle of 1942, we may find that we have risen from a production of 600 tanks a month to six or seven times that number. The pattern is set. The tools are almost all ready and the assembly line is rolling them out in ever increasing quantities.

Speaking of tools, this is a phase of our production that is not readily dramatized. But it is vital. We have done a fantastic piece of expansion on machine tools. From a few hundred thousand a month to millions and now to billions of dollars' worth of tools a year, we have gone in a relatively short time. These are figures absolutely impossible to visualize unless one has the engineering and machine-tool background to understand the potential capacity of weapons that can be made with such a huge supply of

This is a mechanized age and we are fighting a mechanized war. Machine tools must be precision tools. Machines do the work of many men. We have ample labor to man the tools. We will have to work the tools seven days a week.

Government would like labor to accept time-and-a-half for all overtime irrespective of whether it is Saturday or Sunday. Labor has been asking double time here and there. It is a kink still to be ironed out. But the machine tool industry is doing a remarkable job. Corporations like Warner & Swasey in Cleveland have been able to expand their facilities rapidly. The whole machine tool industry is little known to the average reader but it has leaders who are as much key factors in defense as are the better known names of the airplane or tank field. Subcontracts Let.

With the machine tools available to our industrial managements, we can turn out tanks and engines on a mass production basis. In the making of vital parts the whole program is full of subcontracting. While the Army and Navy awarded contracts to a relatively small number of firms, the subcontracting goes to tens of thossands of small firms.

Politics, however, has been messing the picture somewhat. Some small businesses, regrettably injured by the curtailment of civilian production, are using their influence on Capitol Hill to get contracts. If this war is a huge W. P. A., the war program can be impaired by trying to allot contracts on a relief basis. If it's a serious war, then contract allotment must go to the firms who know how or who have made articles comparable to those now needed. The Army and Navy have favored the expansion of existing plants or the integrating of new units with old. But in the $150,000.000.-000 program there will be work aplenty for even the smaller businesses that have been engaged in civilian production. It will take time to make the transition. But have we the raw materials? This is an all-important question. The answer if that we have more than enough of everything for military purposes, but there will be little in some instances for civilian use. Thus the rubber supply is enough for the needs on a military basis, but unless we can open up a convoy system to the Netherlands East Indies to protect cargoes, we will have little rubber for civilian use.

"Raw Materials Sufficient. Synthetic rubber progress is about as rapid as can be expected and the Government is moving quickly to increase guayue production and other substitutes for the rubber that has been coming to us from Dutch possessions. The central raw material is steel. We have a capacity of more than 90,000,000 tons a year. Military uses might be as much as 60,000,000 tons. Japan has a total capacity of only 8,000,000 tons. Germany and her occupied areas can produce enough for her military needs, but it is doubtful whether special steels are available in as great quantities as the Allies possess.

On fuel we are well supplied. We have more than enough oil for combat and a better quality than any other nation in the world. Our aviation gasoline is unsurpassed. For this the scientific men of the American oil companies are to be commended for their research.

Departments have changed specifications enough materials not only to equip our and quantities in midstream, so to speak. It wasn't always possible to tell the contractors why. They could see only a changing, confusing picture.

But back of it was an equally confusing military picture. Until we formally entered the war planning of an overall nature that curtailed civilian supply and broke right into the normal economic processes could not be done as well as it can be now that the Japanese have forced us into shooting war. Mr. Knudsen, for example, in a public address in December, 1940, appealed for a termination of the week-end "blackout" in industry. But his plea went unheeded. The newspaper files will reveal many such an exhortation along other lines.

But it's war now, and mulling over past mistakes is only important if it prevents repetition. The spirit of war is today in the blood of every important factor in the defense program from coast to coast. We have the tools and the materials. We are getting the mannower ready and the Allies have manpower in big enough quantities for us to arm. If we could arm the Chinese alone, we could vanquish Japan in short order. If we could arm the people of the occupied areas of Europe by safely transporting weapons to them, we could bring about the biggest crusade in all history to restore Europe to its free peoples.

own Army, Navy and Air Force, but all the rest of the Allies. And that's the armament job ahead of us. Britain and Canada's production are big, too, but in relation to what is expected of the United States no program is as big. We have the main task and we must organize it successfully in eighteen months. Our first goal or peak was set for July, 1942. Since our entry into the war became inevitable last summer we changed to a new peak-July, 1943. The biggest program the world has ever conceived of will be rolling on that date. And maybe only half the program will do the trick.

Victory Is Assured.

That victory must in the long run come to us is certain. Defeats in the Far East now or a German push through to Gibraltar merely mean that the war will be longer. In the end Germany will be defeated by the very weapons she thought would conquer the world for her. Germany had seven years in which to prepare and has won the first innings. The last innings, however, will find her outfought by soldiers and sailors of equal or better quality. And they will be equipped with materials better both in quantity and quality than industrial Germany can produce because of her limited resources, her gradually depressing internal situation and the inevitable decrease in the effectiveness of her factories resulting from aerial bombard-

Singapore Gravely Periled as Japanese Army Pushes South on Malay Peninsula

'America's Fifth Week of War (123d Week of World War II)

By Blair Bolles.

The Japanese today stand close to the wealth of the Indies. The Japanese soldiers last week moved steadily down the Malay Peninsula toward the great city of Singapore, which commands the trade between the Far East and the world to the west. It is halfway between China, a part of which Japan holds, and India, which Japan would like to have. It is a mighty naval base, but at the present it lacks a navy. It sits across a narrow strait from Sumatra, largest of the Dutch East Indies isles. It is a city of vast importance in many ways for an Asiatic conqueror. This coming week may bring a mighty battle at the very gates to Singapore.

The Japs have more men and more planes than the defenders of Malay and Singapore. But the Japs are only part of the war. In other sectors, in Russia and in Libya, the Japs' colleagues are taking a beating. The men and planes and ships that could stop the Nipponese in Malaya are stopping-pushing back-the Germans and Italians in Russia and Africa. A beaten Germany would leave Japan alone to face the undistracted democracies, and then Japan might find that today's conquests. extensive though they are, are not for keeps. Even now Japan is not invincible. Gen. Douglas MacArthur still holds his position in the Philippines.

The factories in the end will decide the war. President Roosevelt told Congress last week that America's plan of production for victory calls for output of 125,000 planes, 75,000 tanks, 35,000 anti-aircraft guns and 10,-000,000 tons of shipping in 1943. With such tools the Axis can not compete.

Pacific Front

B-4

The weekend appointment of Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell as Allied commander in the Southwest Pacific did not halt the Japanese advance in Malaya. Gen. Wavell announced that he would direct operations from the Dutch Indies island of Java, south and east of Singapore. One might have inferred that he wished to establish himself in a headquarters he was sure would be available for some time. The Japanese, on Monday, with impunity landed more troops in Malaya at the mouths of the Perak and Bernam Rivers, on the long, bony peninsula's western coast. Allied air power, had it existed, could have thwarted these landings, which made it certain for the Japanese that they would continue to outnumber the defenders of Malaya. Reports say the Japanese are reckless in battle and sacrifice large numbers of their troops. So they need frequent reinforcement. The tide of Malayan battle crept nearer Singapore Tuesday. On the eastern side of the peninsula the British with-Singapore drew from Kuantan, 190 Threatened miles from Singapore.

On the western side the front was pushed southward into the native state of Selangor, along the coast of Malacca Straits, which separate Malay from Sumatra. Japanese appeared in the area of Kuala Selangor, 240 miles from Singapore, and they were believed to be flanking the British out of their positions further north along the Perak River.

back to form a line protecting the rubber center, Kuala Lumpur, capital of the Federated Malay States. At once the British admitted that this new line might be imperiled. The line was set up south of the Slim River, 50 miles above Kuala Lumpur and 290 miles above Singapore. The whole battle line extended unevenly across the Malay interior, through Pahang state to the east coast somewhere between Kuantan and the Pahang-Johore border. The border is little more than 75 miles from Singapore.

In preparation for a battle over Kuala Lumpur, the defense forces imposed a curfew on the city, ordering the residents to stay in their homes between 6 p.m. and 8 a.m. British troops launched a counteroffensive to save this city, fighting the Japanese aggressively in swamp and jungle. The British said the Japanese 5th Division was leading the invaders' drive, which was supported by swarms of bombers and dive bombers. The 5th Division is celebrated by now.

In the fall of 1937 it won battles against Chinese regulars and a Chinese Communist army. In May, 1938, the Chinese beat it at Taerchwang, in Shantung Province. The division led the Japanese torces which captured Canton in 1938 and Nanning, in Kwangsi Province, in 1939. It landed in Southern Thailand a month ago, ready for the move into Malay.

From Kuala Lumpur good roads run to Singapore, from which the Japanese could threaten not only the Indies but Australia and the whole Indian Ocean. The residents of Kuala Lumpur were Stockholm, Sweden, was told that for the first time in months the Russians have strong armored forces at their disposal. The Germans daily grow weaker from the cold and casualties. On the central front retreating Nazis were said to have left 10,000 dead on the battlefield in five days. The pace of the Russian countersweep was reported quickening as reinforcements poured steadily into the Red Army lines. Soviet informants said the Russians expected to drive the invaders behind the Leningrad-Smolensk-Dnieper River line around February 1. That is 200 miles west of Moscow.

In order to insure a steady flow of needed equipment, the Russians opened a drive to clear the rail-

port where ships bearing goods from the United States can unoad. The week's foremost development, however, centered around Sevestopol, since the Leningrad relief move is in its early stages. At Sevastopel the Reds made ready to besiege the besiegers. Sea-borne Red troops landed at several points in the Crimea and proceeded to set a trap around the Axis.

In the Far North the Finns once again are on the defensive against the Russians. In the war of 1939-40 the Finns began with victories, but ended with defeat. In this war, too, the Finns won for a long time, advancing a considerable distance into Russian territory. But on Wednesday the Finnish war communique said that Russian units have penetrated Finnish lines on the east front north of Lake Onega in severe winter fighting. A day later Stockholm reported the Russians were hurling battalion after battalion of troops and armored forces against the Finnish front in Eastern Karelia in order to render secure the Arctic supply ports, Murmansk and Archangel.

The Helsinki newspaper Suomen Sosialidemokratti said the present time seems "a suitable opportunity to break off military operations" against Russia. London began to wonder just how far the Reds might push the Germans back. Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski, Premier of the Polish government in exile, told a press conference in London he was convinced the Nazis would be unable to make a major stand short of Smolensk if the Russians continue to exert their present enormous pressure. Gen. Sikorski, who recently returned from the Russian front, said the German campaign had been poorly planned from the beginning.

"Now Germany is having to pay for it," he said. He went on to say that withdrawal by the Nazis to Smolensk would be tantamount to their complete defeat. But he said the Nazis could be expected to reorganize and strain every resource in an effort to reclaim lost ground in the spring. For that reason he urged British-American aid be hur-

QUEZON-THE MAN THE JAPANESE WANT

Invaders See Philippine President as Wellspring of Island Resistance

By James G. Wingo.

One man the Japanese are more anxlous to capture than perhaps even Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander of the United States Army Forces in the Far East, who is personally leading American-Filipino troops in the battle of the Philippines, is little, mercurial, peppery Manuel Luis Quezon y Molina, President of the Philippine Commonwealth.

The Japanese presumably realize that so long as this 63-year-old leader of the Philippine people remains under American protection, they cannot expect any slackening of Filipino eagerness and willingness to fight side by side with the Americans.

No living Filipino commands greater esteem, respect and loyalty among his people than Manuel Quezon. Not even old Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo, who led the long, bitter fight against the American armed forces at the turn of the century. is a more beloved hero of the Filipinos than he.

In sending a heartfelt, heartening message to the Filipinos, acknowledging their gallantry against tremendous odds and solemnly pledging "the entire resources of the United States" in driving out the invaders of the Philippines, President Roosevelt undoubtedly realized the gravity of the Japanese design to weaken Filipino resistance with either rosy promises or dire threats.

Roosevelt Anticipated Japs.

President Roosevelt's message was timely and reassuring, although there Asia. was no question whatever where Filipino love and loyalty lay. The Filipino desire for independence from the United States was prompted by the natural desire to be free like their American mentors and guardians-never by any grievances against American rule, which they had always considered benevolent.

President Quezon and his staff, as well as High Commissioner Francis B. Sayre and his staff, left Manila to a place of safety shortly before the Philippine capital was declared an open city. Philippine officials apparently did not believe for a moment that the Japanese would respect the declaration.

No place in the Philippines is safer today than Corregidor (kor-re-hee-DOR), the island fortress at the entrance of Manila Bay. Realizing the importance of Quezon in the maintenance of the Filipino's fighting spirit, the military authorities presumably took the Commonwealth's President and his family to the United States Army fort, often described as the strongest single fortified spot in the world, bristling wth antiaircraft guns.

Reason for Bombing Corregidor.

The Japanese apparently suspected that Quezon had been stowed in Corregidor, because not until his departure from Manila had been announced did enemy planes bomb this fortress.

Although Americans who know him well believe that Quezon will never turn his back on the United States, the Japanese, who have the peculiar knack of underestimating the resoluteness and indanao (meen-dah-NOW), second largest Philippine island, where they had illegally acquired vast land holdings and had come to control the strategic Manila hemp industry. When some months ago the Commonwealth government limited Japanese immigration to 500 a year, the Japanese, after some grumbling, consoled themselves with the statement that the measure was not discriminatory, inasmuch as other foreign immigrants were equally restricted and, furthermore, wartime conditions precluded Japanese emigration to the Philippines.

They ignored the imprisonment last year of Benigno Ramos, long-time radical suspected of organizing a fifth column in the Philippines. After organizing a potent party of malcontents in and around Manila, called Sakdalistas, Ramos flet to Japan.

Ramos Sponsored Revolt. Under the protection of the thenpowerful Seiyukai party, he continued his, anti-American activities, charging that Quezon and his henchmen were mere American tools who should be thrown out of office by the liberty-loving Filipinos. From Tokio Ramos master-minded the Sakdalista revolt of May 1, 1935, bloodiest uprising since the American establishment of civil government in the Philippines. The Sakdalistas' coup resulted in the capture of several towns and the killing of 30 persons, including many men of the Philippine constabulary. Both Quezon and Gov. Gen. Frank Murphy happened to be in the United States. In 1938 Ramos returned to Manila full of praises for President Quezon as the doughty leader of Philippine independence. When he was not promptly thrown into jail, Ramos thought he had been forgiven. Quezon did nothing when members of the Ganap party, successor to the discredited Sakdalista party, ostentatiously welcomed Ramos into their organization as a patriotic leader. In 1940, however, Quezon had Ramos imprisoned on charges of swindling. Fifth column activities in the Philip-

The Chinese press described the Changsha triumph as the Allies' turning point from the defensive to the offensive in the Far East, but that was an extravagant statement. Some newspapers urged that the Chinese forces strike into Thailand and French Indo-China to divert the Japanese from Malaya.

Gen. MacArthur in the Philippines detained some Japanese soldiers who might otherwise have joined in the Malaya push. He inflicted one of the most serious reverses suffered by the Japs when his troops repulsed a heavy frontal attack northwest of Manila at the week's beginning. The Japanese lost about 700

The Japanese always mistook Quezon's fiery outbursts against what he believed to be undue interference by American Governors General and High Commissioners with local autonomy as gross dissatisfaction with American rule.

When Quezon passed through Tokio on his way to Washington in 1937 the highest Japanese officials, including aloof Emperor Hirohito himself, sake'd and sukivaki'd him splendiferously. The Japanese told him that they were ready to sign a treaty observing the neutrality of the Philippines after independence in 1946

Thought They Had Convert.

Quezon, as well as the Japanese, knew this was a mere gesture because the United States was, and still is, in full charge of Philippine foreign relations. When President Quezon, who had been bitterly accused in the American press of dictatorial tendencies, was coolly received in Washington, which had not yet fully realized the vital part the Philippines would play in Far Eastern affairs, the Japanese were very happy.

The Japanese applauded him when, in an on-the-record speech before the National Press Club of Washington, he showed his irritation by stating that the Filipinos "must be let alone without interference from the High Commissioner, the Secretary of War, the Secretary of State or even the President of the United States."

U.S. to Build Ships Far From the Sea

By Leif Erickson, Wide World News.

Machinists and steel workers in Denver-1,300 miles from ocean water and a mile above it-will build ships for the United States Navy.

The idea was hatched by a man who used to make incubators. Here's the setup:

The steel hulls for 24 naval escort vessels will be prefabricated in Denver. It's a $55,000,000 job. It will take into 1944 to finish.

During all that time just about every metal machine shop in Denver will be working to capacity on the ship job.

Some of these plants had been close to going out of business because of war priorities. The bulkhead, deck and shell plates out and drilled in Denver will be put together at Mare Island Navy Yard, on California's coast.

The 24 ships, launched and complete, will cost about $144,000,000. Just how big they'll be and exactly what they'll be used for are Navy secrets.

The Office of Production Management regards the project as a model of about the ultimate in contract distribution to convert interior plants to war production.

The way the Denver firms-eight prime contractors and more than 30 subcontractors-handle the ship job is important. If the Denver companies meet specifications in quality and time, similar mass production pre-fabrication contracts can keep shut-down-threatened interior plants busy.

Ship production can be increased vastly without building new shipyards that would require steel essential elsewhere, that might be finished too late, after peace.

picked for the Navy's first big inland shipbuilding order.

How Denver Was Chosen.

Clyde C. Hartzell, the old incubator man, made it happen, with assists from big, painstaking G. H. Garrett, Thompson Pipe & Steel Co. general manager, and Harold F. Silver, purposeful president of Silver Engineering Works, Inc. Hartzell took over as the Division of Contract Distribution's Colorado director last summer. He decided that Denver's relatively small factories-expert in turning out sugar beet loaders, ore-crushing ball mills and irrigations pumps-must be banded together into cohesive teams.

A prime contractor captain over a squad of subcontractors.

It didn't just happen that Denver was contract small enough to handle. Together, they're tackling a $55,000,000 shipbuilding project.

B-5

The big thing in organizing the contracting teams was to make them stick together.

If a contractor captain lined up a job, then found one or more of his subcontractor shops already signed up and working on another, the team idea was no good.

Organizing Machine Shops.

Bespectacled Hartzell, whose enthusiasm cascades in tumbling words, pounded that home-first, in visits to each potential prime contractor, then to every small machine shop operator in town.

Finally, at a meeting of the prime contractors, each selected his own shipcontractor line-up. The smaller firms pledged that they would stick by their big fellow.

The captain firms promised they wouldn't give work to a subcontractor on Silver's team without first getting permission and clearance from Silver. And likewise for all the rest.

There's the key idea in Hartzell's system of subcontracting: Democratic discipline, voluntarily imposed.

Complete inventories of kind and condition of equipment and skill and amount of man power available for each team were translated into charts.

These charts tell a Government procurement officer at a glance what a contracting squad can do.

The Denver firms were organized like this when Garrett, on a trip to Washington hunting business, heard from Lt. Comdr. E. P. A. Simpson that Mare Island Navy Yard was going to need outside help.

Garrett passed the word to Hartzell. Hartzell wrote Capt. F. G. Crisp, Mare Island's industrial manager, and sent Silver to California to tell about Denver's contracting teams.

Comdr. A. S. Petrie came from the Navy Yard to look over the Denver factories. He inspected 23 in three days. It took a few more trips back and forth, but the deal was done.

A few weeks after the contracts were signed, Comdr. Petrie came to Denver again, this time to hand out to each of the eight major contractors a finished set of blueprints for his part of the job.

Work Begins This Month.

The first 3.000 tons of ship steel will arrive from Eastern mills in January. The sheets will be acid-pickled, painted and delivered to the factories by Weicker Transfer & Storage Co., a household goods moving firm picking up a $133,500 sideline share in the project.

The captain firms-besides Silver's company and Garrett's Thompson Pipe & Steel outfit-are Eaton Metal Products Co., Ajax Iron Works Co., Midwest Steeel & Iron Works, Denver Steel & & Iron Works and R. Hardesty Manufacturing Co. Floyd B. Odlum, division of contract distribution chief, asked a Washington radio man what he'd think if "I told you Navy boats will be launched from Denver.'

By J. H. Porterfield, Wide World News,

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 10.-Eleven years after Mrs. Henrietta Schaefer Garrett's strange life quietly ended, thousands of persons throughout the world still are fighting for her unbequeathed millions.

The mystery of the quaint little widow's real identity remains so deep, even yet, that Philadelphia's Bureau of Vital Statistics can't affirm that she ever was born.

So far as the courts have been able to determine, no known heirs were alive when Mrs. Garrett was buried beside her wealthy, snuff-manufacturing husband in Laurel Hill Cemetery, leaving $17,549,642.58, which she hadn't bothered to mention in a will.

Childless, eccentric, clad always in black, she lived and died so unobtrusively that in the 35 years preceding her death in 1930 it is said that she left her brownstone house only once.

Yet the fortune, now totaling $20,000,-000 and still growing at the rate of $500,-000 a year, is claimed by no less than 26,000 persons. They come from virtually every walk of life, from every State in the Union except Maine and Vermont, and from 29 foreign countries.

ent effect either on his executive demeanor-or his bedside manner. Dr. Blood wasted no time in showing how things were going to be.

Soon after he took office, the Governor troduced regularly scheduled press conferences, but one day, the newsmen were left with pencils poised over an unfinished sentence. Dr. Blood got a chone call, and had to hot-foot it to the hospital to attend to a garbage man who had dropped a loaded can on his foot.

A Doctor in the House.

Even political foes of his excellency have to admit that it's pretty handy having a doctor on call at the State House.

A Senator collapsed during a session of the upper house, and a fellow solon yelled. "Get the Governor!"

"I treated him in the washroom," the Governor recalled, and added with a chuckle-"it was funny, he had been one of my most bitter opponents."

Although he keeps his doctor's kit handy in his waiting automobile near the elm-studded lawn of the State House, the Governor, barring emergencies, attempts to divorce his professional life from his political one as soon as he enters the green-domed capitol.

For example, you will find no pill boxes or clinical thermometers on his mahogany desk in the executive suite, but occasionally, the Governor gets his careers mixed up by jotting down a memo to his State House stenographer on a prescription pad.

One such note summed up the whole story. On one side of the paper, written in a doctor's typical hen-scratch hand, was a notation that he was to be reminded to call the State's Attorney General for a conference. On the other side was the legend, "Mrs. B. owes for two calls."

Combines Jobs Well.

Veteran State House attaches say that Dr. Blood is able to carry on two jobs well because he has brought to the State House the scientist's acumen for organization and the doctor's ability to handle appointments with speed and dispatch.

In interviews, the short, blue-eyed, balding executive answers questions readily enough, but meanwhile he glances through his square-top spectacles at a telegram, gives a few instructions to his stenographer, and makes arrangements for a nightime speaking engagement-without losing the train of his thought regarding the interview.

When, however, he thinks that enough time has passed, he arises and terminates the session with one of those enigmatic smiles that doctors sometimes use when they say: "Stay in bed tomorrow, take a couple of these every two hours and give me a ring Thursday if you're worried!"

The Governor says he rises at 6:30 o'clock every morning, breakfasts at 7 and is ready for hospital rounds or surgical appointments at 8. At 10 he goes to the State House, stays there until about 1 o'clock-with a desk-lunch served to him meanwhile and from 2 to 4 receives office calls at his downtown modical offices.

From 4 to 5 he's at the State House again and then at 5:30, if he has cleared his desk, he makes a few house calls. Evenings, if he hasn't any speaking engagements, he goes to his medical office again, but he says his patients

By John Ferris,

Wide World News.

She isn't fat and she isn't temperamental and she lives a fairly cloistered life with her mother. She is slim and unpretentious. She doesn't sleep until noon or take afternoon naps before an evening performance, and she doesn't fret about her singing or her diet.

So people whose ideas of opera singers derive from a reading of books like George Moore's "Evelyn Inness" or Pitt Sanborn's "Prima Donna," are likely to be surprised when they meet Miss Sayao and see for themselves how quiet and unassuming she really is.

The one thing which really absorbs her is her work. She accepts this quietly and with an objectivity which proves a little surprising to an interviewer.

The name Bidu is a diminutive of Baldwine, which was her grandmother's family name. (The grandmother, incidentally, was Swiss-French.) Miss Sayao was born in Brazil and fixed on a singing career at the age of 14.

"I was a very determined little girl and I had only a little voice. a small and light voice," she said the other day as she sat in her apartment in the Hotel Marie Antoinette on upper Broadwav decision as to whether Bidu should go ahead until the girl made her debut in Rome as Rosina in "The Barber of Seville.'

"The notices I received were wonderful." Miss Savao said. "and we were all very happy.

That was in 1927. Thereafter she sang in every major opera house in Italy and in Paris and Lisbon and Buenos Aires. 'In Milan I had met Toscanini. When I came to New York in 1936 I communicated with him and he arranged to have me sing with the Philharmonic Orchestra at Carnegie Hall. There were three concerts." The immediate result of the concerts was that Edward Johnson, general manager, and others at the Metropolitan Opera House gave Miss Sayao an audition and signed her to a three-year con-

She knows 15 French and Italian operas, not all of which she sings at the Met. Her contract now calls for 12 operas a season. She has already sung that many this year since the opening, November 24.

She has no rules for young singers except to sing and study, and she has no rules for health or nerves.

"I go to bed about 1 or 2 o'clock and I sleep about seven hours," she said. "I cat as I please and don't worry about dieting. I like to walk. I am just naturally healthy." The good-neighbor policy appeals to Miss Sayao because she loves the United States. She is a little proud of her unique position as the only South American singer of prominence in the North American operatic field. And she admires American singers like Lawrence Tibbett, Richard Crooks and Charles Kullman.

"They are wonderful men," she says.

Bidu Siyao, the Brazilian soprano and Metropolitan Opera star, pictured in her New York hotel apartment crocheting on a

In a German town a man slew his uncle and aunt in a quarrel over the vast wealth, then killed himself.

Members of a Pennsylvania family forged Bible and birth certificates to support a fraudulent claim. Witnesses have disappeared mysteriously. Hundreds have committed perjury.

Friends knew Mrs. Garrett as the former Henrietta Edwardina Schaefer. daughter of a German-born cabinet maker, Christopher Schaefer, who came to American before 1838, and married Henrietta Kretschmar, also Germanborn.

According to testimony, Walter Garrett, scion of a Colonial snuff family and its heir, saw the apple-cheeked Schaefer girl scrubbing the porch of her home one day in 1872, fell in love and married her a few months later.

Their life together apparently was happy, but after he died in 1915, she became almost a recluse, living with two servants in her red-brick home on then fashionable Ninth street.

Woman of Mystery.

It all seemed simple enough until an inventory disclosed her vast wealth a year after her death. Everything about er became a mystery. Her birth, it was discovered, never had been recorded. Cencus records gave her father a variety of first names. Even his arrival in the United States couldn't be proved.

Up to that point administration of her estate had proceeded smoothly. Then the inventory brought to light the $17,-540,652.58, and the scramble began. Would-be heirs blossomed in clumps.

In Southern Bavaria[®]a "Schaefer Verein" was organized under an agreement to split the millions into 600 parts. A "Wallace Syndicate" appeared in Virginia, more than 200 dues-paying members poined a Harter-Karchner Clan Association in Pennsylvania.

Relatives Ruled Out.

Among the first to jump into the battle were 500 relatives of Mrs. Garrett's wealthy husband. They were quickly ruled out by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, because Walter Garrett had willed his millions to his wife.

He was the first to foresee, 50 years ago, the possibility of a fight over his wealth. He wrote a letter to his wife at that time, telling her of his fortune and urging her to make a will at once.

"I would not like it," he said, "if what I have worked long and hard to accumulate should be squandered by your or my 'sisters, cousins and aunts and uncles.

"Do not let the scalawags get any if you can help it. It is my desire and I trust you will oblige me by making a will at once. Do not put it off. . . . Mrs. Garrett's Letter.

Yet put it off she did-for 26 years. The document she finally did write was her now-famous letter to "Dear Mr. Charles S. Starr," wealthy investment broker and one of the two executors of the estate.

"Give you my estate an belongings which are named in my book per A/C the following amounts:

"Give Henrietta C. Ferguson the sume of $10,000, if living. Give to Mary A. Weaver . . .

To 15 intimate friends and employes she thus disposed of $62,500. She said nothing about the other $17,549,652.58.

him to have the balance. He promptly filed a claim. Then the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania stepped forward with its bid, to be defended by a battling Irishman named Thomas J. Minnick. Few doubt that Mrs. Garrett knew about her wealth. Walter Garrett had received a large inheritance from his father, also a snuff king, and he pyramided it with investments.

The Hunt for an Heir

If there was another will, it never has been found, although investigators searched so thoroughly that even the little widow's grave was reopened. This was to investigate a story that a disgruntled maid hid a will in the coffin as

Mrs. Garrett's body lay in state. The hunt for an heir is just as thorough, and sometimes just as sensational. Minnick is ever on hand as the hearings slowly reduce the ranks of claimants. He attacks every claim as a phony. His suspicion rests, first of all, on simple arithmetic and biological facts. Even if Mrs. Garrett had a normal number of aunts and uncles and children, it is virtually impossible for her to have 26,000 relatives 10 years after her death at 79.

Friendship, which contains about 75 acres, is bordered on the south by Macomb street, on the north by the Heurich tract, on the east by Wisconsin avenue and runs westward for quite a distance. Of course, it is said, and it is very true, too, "that it is an ill wind that does not blow somebody some good." and though the regret be general that this estate must be broken up, yet, the people in this vicinity, particularly those residing to the west of this estate, will undoubtedly appreciate it very much, since, as it now stands, many have to walk or drive blocks out of their way to reach Wisconsin avenue, and naturally, when the McLean tract is developed this will not be necessary.

History of Friendship

The early history of this estate runs and south of Pierce Mill road to Woodley back at least to about December 1, 1711, road, were the farms of John Noonan, when a tract of land was granted to the H. James Stoddert, by his will dated on or about March 29, 1726, willed his part of Friendship to his sons, William, Benjamin and Thomas. These advantages have been so poised in my mind as to give it different tendencies at different times. one for whom the property was being purchased until the deed was recorded in his own name as trustee, when he immediately transferred the title to the President. In the tract of land secured there were 231/2 acres, and a roomy stone dwelling of no particular historic interest, though nearby was Rosedale, the early home of Gen. Uriah Forrest.

At the death of Gen. Forrest, his estate was left to his sons and two daughters, the latter being the wife of Dr. Bowie of Georgetown and Mrs. Green. The sons died without heirs, and the property descended to the two daughters. . In 1868, Rosedale was subdivided, and upon the 231, acres purchased by Mr. Cleveland, there was erected a two-story stone house. To the east of this was another subdivision, consisting of 16 acres, which belonged to Mme. Iturbide. one of the daughters of Mrs. Green, who had married Count Iturbide, who was then the Minister from Mexico. The son by this marriage was adopted by King Maximilian, and in this way became the heir to the throne of Mexico before the republic was established.

Thomas Stoddert sold his share July 31. 1747, to James Wardrup. Wardrup in turn sold to Richard Clagett, jr., 250 acres, and Richard Keene Clagett, son and heir of Richard, jr., conveyed same to Nathaniel Slicer in 1767, and Slicer transferred to Charles Beatty same acreage in 1782.

The foregoing is taken from what purports to be an abstract taken from a deed in the Land Office of Montgomery County, Md., loaned to the writer by Mrs. Hedley V. Cooke, a descendant of James Stoddert. However the writer fidant of President Washington, who frefinds it stated by another source that the land was first patented in 1695 by Col. John Addison and William Hutchison and later sold to Col. James Stoddert, grandfather of Benjamin Stoddert, and in turn was given to the colonel's daughter, Mrs. Murdock, and that in the early 1800's the property was acquired by Georgetown College. This authority also says that 90 of Friendship's original 1.571 acres, including the site of the original mansion, were sold in 1888 to the American University, and that another 350 acres had been sold in 1805 to Nathaniel Loughborough for Grasslands.

Origin of Name

There may be several reasons why this tract of land was named Friendship, but the one that seems the most likely is the statement made that it was because of the close friendship that existed between Col. Thomas Addison and James Stoddert, the early owners of this estate.

A map of the District of Columbia, compiled in 1857, lists the McLean property in the name of Georgetown College Villa, and in 1862 it is called Georgetown College Farm. In 1878 it was held by the Georgetown College Association and Wisconsin avenue was known as the Rockville road. At this time a stream known as Foundry Branch separated the College property from that of Louis Means, and ran southeastwardly to the canal and the river, crossing before reaching the latter, the old Green Spring Scheutzen Park, which, no doubt, many an old-timer will recall. It was a picnic grounds where dancing and bowling were the principal amusements in summertime, and of course, there was always plenty of lager beer on hand.

By 1878, the large holdings in the area between the Rockville road (Wisconsin avenue) and the Loughboro and Foxhall roads to the west was showing the effects of being broken up into small farms, and beside Louis Means, before mentioned, T. Rosenbush had 50 acrs; Thomas T. Varnell 63 acres, and lived on the place and had a slaughterhouse nearby. Coming south and facing the Rockville road were the homes of Martha Keiss, Rose Nourse, Robert Kengla, Mary Poore, William Poore, John Poore, Jacob H. Kengla, C. H. Brooke, Benjamin Hunt's slaughterhouse, residence of Mrs. M. A. Hunt, Michael C. Weaver, John Snyder and others.

Between the Foundry branch and the Loughboro road, was the residence of P. L. Brooke. Thomas Hume apparently had the Tunlaw farm: H. Blundon, Au-been born in Charles County, Md. As the date of his birth is given as 1751, and as Bladensburg was in Prince Georges County at that time, the placing of his birth in both of these places, must manifestly be an error. However, the date, 1751, is no doubt correct, for the inscription on his tomb tells us he was 62 years old at the time of his death in 1813. At the beginning of the struggle for independence he joined the Continental Army in 1776. In Jauary, 1777, he became a captain, and was severely wounded at the Battle of Brandywine the following September, necessitating his resigning his command less than two years later. Capt. Stoddert was a friend and conquently called upon him for advice and assistance and in the difficult task of negotiating with the original proprietors, in order to locate here the Nation's Capital.

That Washington did seek his opinion and help, would, without any further as being a person of character, wisdom and ability, and worthy of the high honor of being the President's confidential agent in such a great undertaking. town.

By Stanmore Cawthon, Wide World News.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 10 .- A. F. Scherr imported monkeys and alligators for his parrot jungle so the birds would feel at home, but he aid the job so well the parrots quit talking.

"We made things too natural for them," Scherr explains. "Parrots don't talk when they are away from humans and don't have to perform in return for food and other things they want. So we had to start requiring ours to say something before we would give them nuts, grapes and other tidbits they like." Scherr, who put some 600 parrots and other tropical birds on a densely-wooded tract and opened the parrot jungle as a tourist attraction, says age is the biggest factor in teaching them to talk. "I've never seen a parrot unable to talk if you started teaching it young enough," he says. "You ought to start when they are about eight months old. Parrots sometimes live to be quite old information about the man, stamp him and if you get one of 25 years or more you'll have a tough time with it.

"Teaching them to talk is all a matter of repitition and of keeping them away from distractions while they're learning. That's why we frequently put a black cloth over a cage and talk to the bird through it.

"Another method is to take the bird with you wherever you go and talk to it constantly, repeating often the words you are trying to teach. "Most birds learn easily from children. Another strange thing is that they seem to have a much easier time imitating the sounds of other animals-such as the bark of a dog-than they do in learning the language of humans. I have seen a parrot that has been around a certain dog imitate the bark of that dog almost perfectly."

Some of the birds speak two or more languages fairly well, but Scherr is convinced that words mean nothing more to them than associations with physical objects, such as food.

"They don't possess any great intelligence," he declared. "We can teach them to talk because they have an imitative faculty and properly-constructed vocal chords, but when a parrot says hello is means no more than when a dog wags its tail.

Walking through the parrot jungle gives you a strange sensation. You shout hello and promptly answering helloessome guttural and some falsetto-start coming from the trees and thick foliage. Then you meet some of the parrots and most of your new acquaintances look at you with a cynical eye. They see more than 40,000 people a year, and their opinion of the human race doesn't seem very high-perhaps because the conversation of most visitors begins and ends with the inevitable "Polly want a cracker?"

You meet Joe, an exceptionally sophisticated specimen, and like as not, he greets you with:

"Don't like him! Don't like him! Don't like him!"

A little nettled by such candor, you start to move on without giving him a peanut or a grape or anything but a cold stare. He immediately changes his attitude, gets a cunning, grasping look in those yellow-green eyes and says coyly: "Polly want a cracker!"

You meet Genevieve, a bright green cockatoo who shrieks a demand for a grape or a peeanut. A little wooden bucket hangs on a cord under her cage, and if you put anything edible in the bucket she hauls it up, eats it and rewards you with an ear-splitting scream

Oak View

At the time President Cleveland purchased Oak View, The Star printed an interesting account of the place, from which the following is taken:

"One of the pleasantest drives in this vicinity is out over the Military road from Georgetown to Tenleytown and by the winding county roads through the beautiful scenery of Rock Creek Valley to Brightwood and the Fourteenth street road in the return to the city. Any pleasant evening carriage after carriage may be seen rolling along these roads, the occupants enjoying the fresh, cool air and the picturesque views which came in sight at every turn. The beauty of the scenery and the healthfulness of the locality are not a recent discovery, as any one can see who glances at the fine old houses which may be seen along the road, surrounded with fine lawns and forest trees. In fact, as soon as Washington was located these sights were taken up by people, in some cases of wealth, who preferred a residence in the country to one in the city.

"It is in this paradise of suburban homes that the President has selected his country residence, and the people who drive out along the Tenleytown road may see the two-story stone house with its old-fashioned hip roof, nestled among the old forest trees where the Woodley lane intersects with the Tenleytown road. The house is now occupied by Mr. A. R. Green, and it has come to him from his grandfather, Uriah Forrest, who, in 1790, purchased a large tract of land known as Pretty Prospect. This tract extended down nearly to the city limits. and has since been very much sub-

"The house occupied by Mrs. Green, as well as the grounds, will need some improvements before the President can take possession. The house is already roomy, there being a wide central hall and rooms on each side with spacious porches. It is understood that it is the intention to replace the present high roof with a mansard, and at one corner build a tower from which a view can be had, it is said, as far down the river as Mount Vernon. The elevation of the house is 388 feet above the tide."

"The article in yesterday's Star, December 28, 1941, was especially absorbing. as my mother and sister were both in the Terra Cotta wreck. My mother's name was not mentioned, but it was she and not a man that was taken from under the wheels of the engine, for I was right there on the bank beside the track. My sister was badly injured and eventually died from the effects of her injuries.

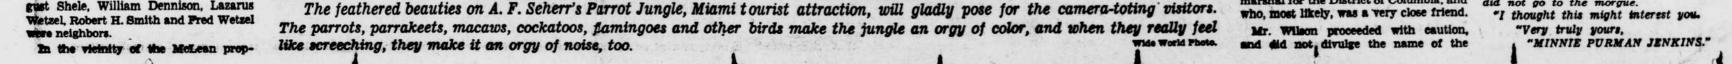

"After she was thrown from the car, she was in the last seat that was left. she had the presence of mind to telephone me at our home in North Takoma, and my husband and I went to her aid. When my mother's body was taken from under the engine he identified her and stayed with her while my sister and I were taken home; then I telephoned the undertaker, Mr. Speare, and my mother was the only one killed that night that

Model Bills to Be Taken Up Dealing With Raid And Health Matters

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 10 .- Only five States-Maine, Illinois, California, Massachusetts and Michigan-have called special legislative sessions to deal with problems arising from America's entry into the war, a survey by the Council of State Governments showed today.

However, eight other States will act on emergency war measures in regular sessions this year, and special assemblies are under consideration in Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Colorado.

The council said governors today possessed far more powers than dur-ing 1917-18. The governors of 14 States are authorized to move the State capital and in 26 States, the governor may order the militia to duty in a neighboring State.

Model war bills will be considered in the eight States holding regular sessions this year, the council said. and perhaps in some of the five States which called special assemblies.

These measures were drawn up at a conference in Washington recently attended by representatives of the States legislatures, the State attorneys general, the Commission on Interstate Co-operation and representatives of the governor's conference, assisted by the special defense unit of the Justice Department.

These bills deal with air-raid precautions, fire defense, highway traffic control, health, sanitation and housing and Federal grants and will be submitted to the Legislatures of Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island, South Carolina and Virginia.

California legislators appropriated $500.000 for a State guard and another $500,000 for war emergencies. Although the specific subjects in the Michigan call have not yet been announced, administration leaders indicated funds would be sought for State troops. State police, the State Council of Defense and the State Labor Mediation Board. Illinois legislators appropriated $5,000.000 to expand the State reserve militia and $750,000 for the State Defense Council.

Win, Lose or Draw Four Big Crown

After the Brawl Was Over, Etc.

Buddy Baer walked swiftly from the elevator when it stopped on the 25th floor, squeezed into a chair in his hotel room and Are Called Off jammed his first cigar in weeks into his mouth. We taked to a state of the jammed his first cigar in weeks into his mouth. He tried to grin without success and then stared at the carpet for several minutes. The telephone rang and it was his brother Max calling from California.

"What did he say, Buddy?" asked Ancil Hoffman, manager of the Baers. "Oh, just to keep punching. He said better luck next time," answered Buddy, throwing away the cigar and pacing the room.

"Will there be a next time, Buddy?" asked-a reporter. "Against Louis, that is?"

Baer sat down and ran his fingers through his prematurely gray hair. "Why should there be?" he asked. "I've had two chances. After the first fight I thought I had a chance but now . . . well, I'm not fast enough to all four of its national championbeat Louis. We fought less than three minutes. He must have hit me 30 or 40 times and I only hit him twice, once with a punch to the body and once with a short uppercut that cut his lip a little."

Buddy Came Along Eight Years Too Late

Louis had done a masterful job on Buddy. Less than an hour before Baer had been suddenly but systematically destroyed, like a heavy tank that had been surprised and hit broadside by a 16-inch gun. But there was only a single mark on his face and none on his body. Under his left instead of cups and trophies, planeye was a slight swelling but, otherwise, he might have just returned from ning a nation-wide series of club a movie show or a dance.

Louis soored a bulls-eye practically every time he shot a punch-right on the chin. That's the mark of a fighter who is razor sharp. Louis didn't miss and cut up Baer. He simply exploded his fists on his chin and down Buddy went.

Looking at Buddy sitting abjectly in a chair or morosely pacing the floor you felt sorry for him. Here was a physical giant with a concrete chin and plenty of moxie. Give him a heavy bag or a wall to hit and the chances are that he will punch as hard as Louis or anybody else. He is one of those athletes who takes care of himself and, also unlike his brother, he is serious about the fight game.

Buddy's crime was coming along eight or nine years too late. Had he the Carneras, Braddocks, Sharkeys and Schmelings to whip the young man might well have been the world champion for at least a short length of time. But he is competing now in a field dominated by a Negro only a year older than himself . . . a champion who may Tulsa. Okla. be the greatest of all time . . . a fighter who hits with unparalleled speed and force.

Louis Was Stepped Up, Emotionally Inspired

Baer is sensible and forthright enough to admit now that he can't beat Louis. He never has been afraid of Louis. He wasn't before and after their first fight in Washington, nor was he before Friday and early Saturday morning when we talked with him in his hotel. That blow after the bell last May was hard enough to kill the average man. That cated the U. S. G. A's cancellation blow, brutal as it was, wasn't as hard as any of the three punches that sent Baer crumbling to the canvas the other night.

In other words, Baer has taken the best blows in Louis' repertoire and either he got up or tried to get up. But he realizes that enough is enough. What was troubling Buddy was the echo of the boos he got when he left the ring at Madison Square Garden.

"Tell me," he said, "was it really that bad? Was Mr. Willkie just

This action was decided upon by the Executive Committee yesterday and approved by the association today. Several reasons were advanced for the course, which dupliof its national tournaments during the last World War.

First was the desire of the officers to give their complete attention to exhibitions and other golf competition for the benefit of war charities. After Forfeiting Two Bouts Joseph C. Dey, jr., executive secre-

Heavy King Is Eager To Go; May Be Put In Morale Branch

By SID FEDER,

Associated Press Sports Writer. NEW YORK, Jan. 10 .- Less than 24 hours after doing a pretty fair fighting job for the Navy, Joe Louis completed arrangements today to join Uncle Sam's Army next Wednesday and do his battling in khaki from here on. The Brown Bomber, who reached a peak in his blasting career for the second time last night in felling Buddy Baer in 2 minutes and 56 seconds, will be given his final physical examination Monday, will be inducted in the service Wednesday at Camp Upton, Long Island, and probably will make his next fist-tossing start in late March for an Army fund.

This one will be against one of a list of prospective opponents Promoter Mike Jacobs has drawn up, headed by Bob Pastor, who fought Joe twice and who was rated by boxing writers as the top fistic comeback for 1941. If Pastor can whip Lem Franklin in Cleveland late this month, he probably will get the shot. Otherwise it may be Gus Lesnevich, the rugged light-heavyweight champion, if he tops Lou Nova February 6: Southpaw Melio Bettina, ex-175pound poss, or ample Abe Simon, who went 13 rounds with Joe a year

German Ski Terms To Be Anglicized

BEAR MOUNTAIN, N. Y., Jan. 10. — Six common German ski terms will be anglicized if the Bear Mountain Sports Association suggestion is adopted nationally.

Here are the words the association would change, and the new terms it would use:

Gelandespring (spring jump), kanonen (dynamic skier), langlaufing (cross-country racing). nasenspring (nose dive), schuss (straightaway), vorlage (forward lean) and sitzmark (bathtub). They are all very clear except sitzmark, which means sitting down and leaving a clear impression in deep snow.

Tall Penn State Five Entirely Too Good For American U.

> Eagles Never in Game After Byham's Free Toss Gets First Score

A squad of clever young giants from Penn State outclassed American University's hapless basket ball team last night at the A. U. gym to ring up their fifth victory in six starts. The final count was 53 to 26, the Nittany Lions definitely coasting after they had increased a 34-17 halftime margin by 18 points while limiting their hosts to a single foul shot. At no time after "Bing" Byham's free toss opened the scoring were the Eagles in the game, the visitors overcoming that slight deficit almost immediately and running up Joe turned up at Army Draft an 18-6 lead after eight minutes of Wendell Willkie had visited his dressing room after it that preparations for and handling being nice?" was over and said, "I know just how you feel. I met a champ and got of the qualifying tournaments and the big national events ordinarily licked, too. But you made a great fight."

Buddy was ready to quit the fight game then and there. At least that was the impression. He was embarrassed, but needlessly. The Louis who knocked him out in 2:56 would have knocked anybody out in quick time. This was a stepped-up, inspired Louis, carried away emotionally by the reception that was given his gesture in turning over to the Navy Relief Society his share-40 per cent-of the receipts.

A Task No Challenger Could Accomplish

In that hotel room yesterday morning Mr. Hoffman and Buddy's trainer, Izzy Kline. probably kept the younger and bigger Baer in the ring game. They simply stated a probable fact, i.e., that Louis belongs in a class by himself. "You can lick Lou Nova and practically all of the rest," Hoffman said. "A fast fellow like Billy Conn might give you trouble but you won't have to worry about the rest." Kline nodded in agreement. "Louis," he said, "is just in a class by himself." We have no way of proving it but these could have been the greatest tributes ever given a champion by his most severe critics.

You could see the word "thanks" in both of Buddy's eyes. He never had made a good fight in New York. He realized his fight with Louis was a near-sellout because he had performed heroically in Washington and because most of the proceeds this time were to be turned over to the Navy Relief Society. He had hoped to duplicate, at least, his Washington stand; instead, he was booed by buyers of the cheaper seats who were too far away to appreciate the terrible beating he took.

But he did the best he could . . . probably he offered as much as any challenger could have offered. He went out, all 250 pounds of him, and took a brutal beating. By his courage he cut out a task for Louis but it so happened that the Bomber was up to the job. Now Buddy will have to start all over again, this time with no hope of winning the title unless Louis abdicates. That's about the way the heavyweight situation stands.

Boxing Is Close Second In Call for Condition And Self-Discipline

By GRANTLAND RICE, Special Correspondent of The Star. LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10 (N.A.N.A.). -What sport offers the best training for war? What game will be better for the physical and mental toughening up needed by the youth of the country? What game does a nation need most?

After getting in the returns it seems to me that football coaches have made a better case for their sport than any other could do. It was not so much a matter of building up winning or undefeated teams. It was the matter of mass play, of getting many more thousands into some form of football from the ages that range from 10 to 20 years.

football they can get." Curly Lam-beau said. "I am saying this for the general good of the country today, not with any idea of concentrating on championship teams. That is unimportant now. But football carries most of the elements needed for war-physical fitness. physical toughening up, team loy-alty, discipline, sacrifice and the ability to think under pressure."

More Should Be in Football.

The astute Curly is 100 per cent correct. And again he isn't referring to any concentration on the few players needed to win a championship. Every football coach I've talked to, at least 50 in the last two weeks, believe there should be a big increase in the number of young people playing football, even though they have no chance to make any first, second or third team. Boxing ran football an extremely close second. Here is one sport or competition in which the entry strictly is on his own.

It doesn't develop team play or team loyalty as football does, but it calls for condition, sacrifice and selfdiscipline if one is to keep his features intact.

No one can deny the fact that the fight game is the toughest of them all-the hardest in which to excel or reach any high peak.

The Colonials' triumph in the first game of the basket ball series in 1940 was its last at the Hilltoppers' expense.

Coach Elmer Ripley isn't taking the downtown dribblers too lightly, but he's got to think about Temple first. The Owls have virtually the same team that played here last year, losing only Howie Kahn, regular guard, and Max Wharton, a reserve center, by graduation or in the draft. The Eastern Amateur Hockey League, which would like to be taken seriously, gravely has decided to suspend for the remainder of the season any coach guilty of taking his team off the ice and refusing to permit it to continue play. Navy Beats Columbia Basketers by Rush Late in Battle

Speeds to 44-34 Triumph In Last Eight Minutes After Trailing 32-34

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 10.-Gene Huntemer's spectacular mid-court flips carried Navy to a 44-to-34 victory today over Columbia's quint as Middie sport teams opened their winter season.

Huntemer pumped in almost half of Navy's baskets in the initial half, giving the Tars a 17-15 intermission lead, and then continued his barrage of long shots in the final period for a total of 19 points.

Les Martens, Columbia guard who sparked the Lion's offensive in both halves, was runner-up with 13 points

Because of wartime regulations governing entrance to the Naval Academy, the court battle was witnessed only by naval officers, civilian instructors, regular and reserve midshipmen and their guests. The general public was excluded. Navy had difficulty finding the basket in the opening minutes of the closely fought title and Co-lumbia took a 6-0 lead on Bob Fallot's foul and double deckers by Harry Allison and Marten S. Huntemer broke the ice for the Middies and scored his team's first 7 points to deadlock the game 7-all after 9 minutes.

Columbia spurted into a slim lead on Steuart McIlvennan's tosses but Navy came back to knot the count 13-all. Martens got a 2-pointer but Huntemer netted two field goals for Navy's 17-15 halftime advantage. Martens and McIlvennan's four double deckers pulled Columbia into a 22-22 stalemate after 5 minutes of the final half. The quints matched baskets and were tied 32all with 8 minutes remaining. Martens' shot under the upright

By the Associated Press

NEW YORK, Jan. 10 .- Long Island University, beaten only once this season, chalked up its fourteenth basket ball victory of the season tonight with a 46-to-38 decision over Georgetown at Madison Square Garden.

The victory, coming after St. Joseph had scored a surprise 44-33 triumph over City College, gave the metropolitan fives an even break in the double-header, played before a Long Island took command early in the game and held sway throughout as Georgetown rang up only three field goals in the first half and trailed, 22-14, at the intermission. The Hoyas came back strong before losing three of their regulars, Ken Eagles, Bill Bornheimer and Charles Schmidl, on fouls. They trailed by only four points, 33-29, at the midway mark, but Long Island refused to give any more ground. Thirtyfive fouls were called on both teams. Nineteen of them were against Georgetown and Long Island cashed in on 12.

Lanky Dick Holub paced the Long Island scoring with 15 points, three more than Howie Rader racked up. Dan Gabbianelli, a sub, dropped in

Mid-Atlantic, District Organizations Expect To Hold Title Play

By WALTER McCALLUM. Decisions of considerable importance to guite a segment of the linksmen around town will be made at the winter series of golf association annual meetings to start this week and to continue into early February. Four association meetings are scheduled within the next three weeks, three of them during the next seven days. Two important gatherings of the golf solons are to be held this week.

Here is the golf association meeting schedule:

January 16, Maryland State Golf Association annual meeting, Baltimore Country Club, 7 p.m. January 17, Middle Atlantic Golf Association annual meeting, University Club, 8 p.m.

January 19, Women's District Golf Association, first Executive Committee meeting, Kenwood Club, 2 p.m.

February 3. District Golf Association annual meeting, University

Club, 8 p.m. In addition to these meetings the greenkeepers of this section will greenkeepers of this section will the Golf Club, said today that in view of the cancellation of the 1942 U.S. G. Maryland to Hold Meets.

Before all the organization meetings will be the question of whether for carry on their usual schedules, the United States Golf Association to carry on their usual schedules, to curtail them for various reasons to transfer its 1942 amateur chamor to eliminate them entirely. The solons at present seem disposed to carry on their golf events throughout 1942, with possible rearrangement of schedules made necessary by the fact that many people will not be willing to take long automobile trips when they won't be able to get tire replacements.

The sensible way to handle this contingency would be to arrange pect large out-of-town groups of give away a lot of $100 Defense bond entries. Detroit Eager to Get Duel Between Ryder, Walker Golf Teams

y the Associated Press. DETROIT, Jan. 10 .- Sponsors for the last two years of the war-orphaned Ryder Cup matches, Detroit today proposed to restock the depleted 1942 golf calendar by matching next July the Nation's top amateur stars on the Walker Cup team against the professional Ryder Cup squad.

J. Russell Gnau, automotive executive who engineered the Ryder Cup charity matches, said the Oakland Hills course, scene of the 1937 National Open, would be selected for the match. His announcement followed the United States Golf Association's decision to drop major competition for this year.

"We have been thinking c! the Ryder Cup-Walker Cup meeting for some time," Gnau said, "and now that the U.S.G.A. is going to concentrate on charity matches we are ready to proceed at full speed." The Walker Cup team is unnamed, but Gnau said he expected

Woman Has Perfect

Score With Rifle; Also Leads Men

> Mrs. Donie Shoots 271 Firing for Male Team; Aggies, Arlington Tied

Not satisfied with recognition as the top feminine rifle shooter in this section, slim Lois McDonie of the National Capital Rifle Club invaded the ranks of the men this year and, judging from results of District of Columbia league activity last week, is making most of them blush.

Firing with the National Capital Club's No. 2 team in the Thursday night District Rifle League, Mrs. McDonie turned in a top score of 271 in her squad's 1,063-to-1,045 victory over G. P. O. Her three stage scores were 100 prone, 90 kneeling and 81 standing. The latter two stages are what makes the jump from women's to men's competition all the more prohibitive for even an experienced feminine sharpshooter who is used to the conventional women's course of all prone shooting. In fact, holding up an 11 or 12 pound rifle in either of those positions and attempting to put 10 shots in a .15-inch bullseye taxes many a man.

Still keeping up her activity in the Wednesday night Washington Women's Rifle League, Mrs. Mc-Donie showed the girls how easy it can be over the 30-shot all-prone course when she finished with a perfect 300 tally. This led the Na-tional Capital squad to an easy opening victory in the second half over the Eastern Lights. The N. R. A. Girls trimmed G. P. O., the S. Aggies beat the Maritime Commission and Bureau of Engraving trounced National Capital No. 2 in other Wednesday matches.

The Arlington Rifle Club and the U. S. Aggies in the Thursday league continued to race along with perfect records. Meeting little opposition, Arlington outshot Taylor Model Basin, with William Archi-bald's 274 the high individual effort, while the Aggies hardly needed Nick Kroeze's big 287 to rout the Federal Marksmen. Fred Duke's 282 paced National Capital No. 1 and Richard Bates' 269 led Greenbelt to other victories.

The Middle Atlantic Golf Assodation undoubtedly will hold its Women's Golf Association, said to-1942 championship, as scheduled, day she saw "very little possibility" at Manor Country Club.

Harry G. Pitt will become president of the Mid-Atlantic and Dr. A. Thomas Utz will become president of the District Golf Association. The Maryland State Golf Association, which proclaimed last year that Dr. R. A. Keilty of Congressional would pects to make a definite announcebecome 1942 president of that organization, has nominated Edgar A. Lucas of Baltimore for that post. retaining Dr. Keilty as first vice president. The Middle Atlantic Professional Golfers' Association will not hold its first meeting of the year until April, but Wiffy Cox, prexy of the sectional pro body, says they plan to go through with a curtailed schedule, eliminating some of the big outof-town tournaments and asking the boys to arrange their own affairs under P. G. A. auspices.

Bradley Hills Course Long.

Tommy Doerer, golf manager at Bradley Hills, has measured the whole course and says it will play, when opened in the spring, 6,572 yards in length. That is quite a chunk of golf course, as Doerer measured it from the middle of the tees to the middle of the greens. It can be lengthened by moving back the tee markers.

Washington Golf and Country Club players will have a new 11th green ready for use in April. Dave Thomson, pro and greenkeeper, has built a new green 20 yards to the right of the old green, to be opened in the spring. The hole is a single shotter, and will play around 150 yards from the middle tees.

Eddie Stevens, Manor Country Club assistant pro, has been called back into uniform and will report January 21. Eddie served several months in the Chemical Warfare Service at Edgewood Arsenal, Md. His brother Claggett, who has been with Bob Barnett at Indian Creek, Miami Beach, has gone to Boca Raton, where Tommy Armour is the pro.

Wood Has Hip Ailment.

That much publicized back in-jury of Craig Wood, the National Open champ, was not a sacra-iliac condition, according to Ralph Trost, Brooklyn newspaperman, who stopped here last week on his way South to interview Craig. It seems that Wood had hip joint trouble, instead of sacra-iliac trouble, according to Trost.

Congressional Country Club members will compete in their usual club tourneys this year, but under a schedule calling for prizes in Defense bonds and stamps. The club Golf Committee has recommended that prize payoffs be made in this manner, which is sure to be O. K. with the membership. The Women's District Golf Association also is planning to give Defense fund savings as prizes,

Bieber Horse Scores 8-Length Triumph Over Histrionic

Paid With Bonds, Owner Jokes About Waiting 10 Years for Purse

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 10 .- Phil Bieber's Maechance scored an eightlength victory in the Defense Handicap at Tropical Park today, capturing the winner's share of the $3,000 purse which was paid in defense bonds

Rushing to the front in the run for positions, the 5-year-old son of Chance Shot stretched his lead with every step and completed the 11/8 miles of sloppy going in 1:51%. Jake Freedman's Histrionic was second, half a length in front of J. E. Widener's Jezebel 2d. City Talk, a slight choice over the winner, was outrun all the way. The split of the purse was $2,250, $400, $250 and $100.

Must Wait 10 Years for Purse.

Herbert Bayard Swope, in the presentation ceremony recorded for the crowd over a microphone, had said Bieber's horse won decisively as the Allies will do, Bieber got a big laugh when he thanked the track's chairman of the board and said, "This is the first time I've won a race and had to wait 10 years for the purse!"

Maechance had been racing in sprints for some time, but he had shown on occasion last year that a distance was not too much for him. Ken McCombs just nursed the veteran along today and never had to take his mount out of wraps.

Jockey Tossed Over Rail.

A spill that was more spectacular than disastrous threw a scare into the crowd in the seventh race. Mack's Arrow, while racing up with the first half dozen of the limit field between the eighth and sixteenth poles in the stretch, suddenly swerved into the rail. Jockey Gustavus Moore was tossed over the rail onto the grass in the infield and was removed on a stretcher.

The report soon came up from first aid quarters that Moore quickly revived and seemed merely shaken up. However, the jockey was taken to a hospital for observation.

Hada Moon won the race, leading all the way and scoring by a half length.

Savold was one of a number of fighters considered as a possible opponent, following the signing of Pastor Friday. "Tiger" Neville Beach of Memphis, Southern ensation.

But of all the men Villar seemed to appeal most to Promoter Turner and Matchmaker Menedez because of his color and great stand against Savoldi. In other American matches, Villar kayoed Jay D. Turner and won from Buddy Scott.

The Spaniard escaped from a Spanish concentration camp to South America, thanks to some aid from Jeff Dickson, famous European promoter. After fighting in South America, he shifted to Havana, where he is training for the Pastor fight.

Selections for a Fast Track at Tropical Park

BEST BET-OLD BOOK.

FIRST RACE-OLD BOOK, GAY BALKO, PATROL FLIGHT. OLD BOOK copped his last with speed to spare and right off that crackerjack showing he deserves the call as the best bet of the afternoon. GAY BALKO has worked well and he could be right. PATROL FLIGHT should be dangerous.

SECOND RACE-TEE MIDGE, TRIPPED, HERE NOW. TEE MIDGE finished with the leaders in both of his Tropical tests and he may be able to earn his graduation papers. TRIPPED has threatened and appears strictly the one to beat. HERE NOW is improving with every outing.

THIRD RACE-BRIGHT ARC, GENERAL JACK, DOWN SIX.

BRIGHT ARC has threatened in his recent tests and he should be able to master this select sprint field. GENERAL JACK is dropping down the class ladder a bit. DOWN SIX is due to show an improved effort.

FOURTH BACE -- MUSKRAT, JACOBELLE, SPEEDIER.

MUSKRAT copped his last with speed to spare and off that effort must be selected. JACO-BELLE drops much weight and should have plenty to say about the result. SPEEDIER could share in the prize money.

Army-Navy League Maps Campaign

Drive Opening Friday Will Aid Service Clubs

The Washington members of the Woman's Army and Navy League have organized their campaign for funds to maintain the high standard of valuable service rendered by the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club. Plans were completed at a tea at the quarters of the Chief of Staff, U. S. A., and Mrs. George C. Marshall at Fort Myer with Mrs. Marshall presiding. Mrs. Harold R. Stark, wife of the Chief of Naval Operations, with wives of other ranking Army, Navy and Marine Corps officers were present to assist in formulating and completing plans for the drive.

Drive to Open Friday Headed By Mrs. Blandy.

The drive will open Friday under the chairmanship of Mrs. Blandy, wife of Rear Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, Chief of Ordnance, U. S. N Mrs. Blandy has as co-chairman for the drive Mrs. McCook Knox, who will have charge of the Civilian Committee.

Mrs. Marshall and Mrs. Stark gave short talks on the value of the work at the meeting at Mrs. Marshall's and introduced wives of officers who head the various departments of the Army and bureaus of the Navy who are assisting in the newly organized campaign for funds for the club.

Mrs. Raymond F. Fowler is president of the club, which was founded 42 years ago by the Woman's Army and Navy League. At the meeting at Mrs. Marshall's she spoke of the magnitude of the task the club now has to accomplish.

Well-Equipped Canteen Serves 3,000 Men in Month.

Last spring all the available funds of the league were used to repair and redecorate the old buildings at Eleventh and L streets and for the remodeling of the ancient stable into a charming lounge or recreation room.

Now there are beds for 180 men and meals are served from a wellequipped canteen at a minimum charge. Dances are held Wednesday and Saturday evenings, sight-seeing trips Sunday mornings and open house Sunday afternoons with a picnic supper of coffee, doughnuts or hot dogs. That these services are much appreciated is testified to by the fact that 3,000 men used the club last month and more are expected in the future.

New Zealand Minister And His Wife Expected In Washington Soon

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Nash To Occupy James C. Dunn Residence as Legation

By KATHARINE BROOKS.

Plans for the new Legation of New Zealand are taking form, the house for the Legation definitely having been selected. Mr. Walter Nash, the newly appointed Minister, is expected to arrive within a few weeks, although transportation is difficult and no one-except an enemywould tell the exact date. When he comes he will be accompanied by Mrs. Nash, but their three grown sons, two married and the third who was to be married before the parents start for the United States, will remain in New Zealand.

New Minister's Wife Is an Englishwoman With Talent for Music and Welfare Work.

Mrs. Nash is a native of England and a typically interesting and delightful Englishwoman with a love of the out of doors as well as the cultivated tastes with which her well educated countrywomen are endowed. To indulge in sports she would feel a bit undignified, but she follows them intelligently and gives more thought and time to music. She plays the piano and sings-now only for her own pleasure and that of her family-but her keen interest in the art has not dimmed, if her active participation in it has lessened. She always has had a keen interest in the welfare of children and has taken part in the furtherance of their betterment. Also she has been a leading spirit in the various activities which have promoted women in many fields of endeavor.

James Clement Dunn Home Will Be Their Residence.

Mr. and Mrs. Nash will find a charming house awaiting them and one which has been the scene of much delightful entertaining in the past. The Adviser on Political Relations to the State Department and Mrs. James Clement Dunn recently sold their house on Observatory Circle to the New Zealand Government for &- the Legation, and here Mr. and Mrs. the house or in some more con-venient downtown location is one of the questions awaiting the arrival of the new envoy.

entertainment and canteen work at the club is done by volunteer workers who put in an estimated 1,800 hours of time last month, there are many salaries to be paid and large operating expenses to be met.

In the past the club, supported entirely by donations and small membership fees, has tried to make money by rummage sales, horse shows and fashion shows. Help has been received from other organizations, including the U.S.O. The Soldiers, Sailors and Marines' Club, along with many beneficiaries of the U.S.O. carried out the sole purpose of the latter's formation, the stitution Hall to hear Arturo Tosfurthering of the welfare and rec- canini conduct the Philadelphia reation of the enlisted men of the

Social Activities Of Official and Resident Circles

The Chief Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone will be honor guests at dinner Saturday evening, when the Norwegian Min-ister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne will be hosts.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull had as their guest for a few days last week the latter's niece, Mrs. Paul Hays, who returned to her home in Staunton, Va., yesterday.

Mrs. Enid Sims Snow was hostess at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon in her apartment.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Mack have closed their home here and gone to their winter place at Miami Beach, Fla., for the season. They will return to the Capital in April.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Stickney Coombs have had as their guest through the autumn and early winter the latter's twin sister, Mrs. William W. Cedarholm, who left the end of the week to return to her home in California. Mrs. Cedarholm and Mrs. Coombs formerly were Miss Cora Edgington and Miss Clara Edgington and lived here before their double wedding in 1936. Their wedding took place in Long Beach, Calif. Mr. and Mrs. Coombs have entertained their guest in their new home at 6417 Thirty-third street and she also has been extensively feted by many friends here as well as by the D. A. R. and P. E. O. groups, of which

President Roosevelt's Motto Bars Worrying; White House Guests Praise Mrs. Roosevelt

By ROBERT CRAWFORD.

"Every day must be lived. You must accept what comes. Do what you think is right or best. Decide what should be done-and stop worrying."

This is Franklin Delano Roosevelt's motto. Print it in large letters and hang it in a prominent place where you can see it each morning before beginning the day's work-it helps a lot.

It is belief in this motto voiced by President Roosevelt sometime ago that has evidently been the means of carrying him through nine of the most tempestuous years that have ever fallen to the lot of a President of the United States. He fortunately possesses a follow-up mind and a keen analytical attitude toward the many things to be

It must be that this motto is also the guiding rule of Mrs. Roosevelt, and what enables her to get through ul the public and private activities all the public and private activities which are a part of her daily life.

Mrs. Roosevelt Won British Admiration.

Both Mr. Churchill and his staff expressed amazement at the many and various duties which Mrs. Poosevelt crowds into a 24-hour day. Her unfailing courtesy, her gracious hospitality, the little things she constantly did for the personal comfort of her guests and the warm friendliness of both the President and herself, as one expressed it, tors, parties and debuts is over and was the brightest picture they had to carry back to England. The British visitors found that while the talk of democracy was rampant in the world, the Roosevelt family not only preached it but practiced

It was only a few days ago that we visited the collection of war por-traits made in 1919 and 1921, which are exhibited in the national collection of fine arts at Tenth street and Constitution avenue. We were specially struck by the truthfulness and clarity of the work by John C Johansen, whose portraits of Field Marshal Haig, the peasant-faced old Marshal Joffre, the Italian Premier Orlando and the beautiful portrait of Gen. Diaz, commander-inchief of the Italian armies in 1917 are outstandingly fine. Mr. Johansen, born in Copenhagen, was brought to this country as a child. So don't think for one moment that your duty as a patriot should limit the normal interest you usually take at this time of the year in the advance news of fashions for Spring. True, there's been a spartan discipline used in the manufacture of these fashions ... a careful rationing of materials that are essential for war industry. But the American manufacturer is a wizard, indeed . . . by improvising new methods, new styles, new combinations, he has created Fashions for 1942 that are gay, beautiful, and above all, functional! Dr. Helen Constance White To Preside at Sessions Of A. A. U. W. Board

Meeting to Be Her First as National President; Studies Women's Role in War

By FRANCES LIDE, omen's Club

When the national board of the American Association of University Women assembles here January 30 for a four-day meeting, the new national president, Dr. Helen Constance White, will preside in that capacity for the first time since her election in May.

Professor of English at the University of Wisconsin, Dr. White is the author of several books and critical studies and is engaged now in work on a series of studies on certain aspects of popular 16th century religious literature.

Twice Held Fellowships

Of Guggenheim Fund.

The new A. A. U. W. head also has traveled extensively, both in this country and Europe, twice while holding a fellowship from the Guggenheim Foundation.

Her own experience with fellowships has given Dr. White a personal appreciation of the value of the project which for more than 50 years has been a major interest of the A. A. U. W .- its fellowship fund for women scholars.

Nor has the war reduced the importance of fellowships, in her estimation.

"Tool up for the future-that is the task of every one who can look beyond the day's need," she says. "Fellowships are our way of insuring that what the trained and en-o lightened woman can do for the making of a new world will not be lost in the destruction of the old."

While the A. A. U. W. will continue its work for women scholars, it will also continue to encourage its membership to participate in community defense services.

Preliminary to the board meeting, the association prepared a series of "check-list" questions on what individual branches are doing in their respective localities.

Wide Variety of Community Activites.

Members are asked if they are or-ganizing and conducting community forums, co-operating in consumer information centers, taking part in salvage campaigns, furthering defense savings, conducting classes in conservation and repair of household appliances and clothing, and organizing volunteers to help welfare agencies, hospitals and recreation centers among others. Special attention is given to activities in safeguarding the public schools, and the university women are charged with the responsibility of informing themselves on international issues.

"We are at war," Dr. White declared in a special message. "The long debate is over; we know where we are. This is total war. Not only are we all of us involved, but we are called upon to play our part. The only question is what that part shall be. There is no necessary work that is not a privilege for any American woman to undertake, but women with special capacity, training or experience owe it to the common good to make sure that their this volunteer work."

A native of New Haven, Conn., Dr. White received two degrees from Radcliffe College and her Ph. D. Radchine from the University of Wisconsin. Active in many educational organizations she is president of the University of Wisconsin Teachers' Union and served on the A. A. U. W. Committee on Fellowship Awards for several years prior to her election as president.

Insurance Women Frank A. Powell, local manager of a national fire insurance company, will speak on "The Personal Property Floater" at a dinner meeting of the Insurance Women's Club of Washington at 6:30 p.m. tomorrow at the Silver Bowl Tea Room, 1644 Connecticut avenue N.W. He also will discuss the educational program of the club.

Uses Popular Song To Dramatize Address.

Senora Ester Neira de Calvo, Panama's delegate on the Inter-American Commission of Women, recently borrowed a popular song to dramatize her remarks in the interest of inter-American solidarity. Addressing the installation banquet of the Soroptimist Club of Washington, Senora de Calvo asked members and guests to join again in singing "The More We Get Together"-which had been featured earlier in the program. As the guests participated in the little ceremony of clasping hands in friendly circles as they sang, the smiling Panama delegate could feel that her "request number" invoked, better than words, the feeling of solidarity she wished to convey. A display of flags of all the Ameri-

Writers to Hear Mrs. Salamanca

The Professional Writers' Club will present Mrs. Lucy Salemanca as guest speaker at a meeting at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. Salamanca will discuss "Writers in War Times." The speaker, who has written for magazines and newspapers, lived for some time in South America. She is now chief of a research section at the Library of Congress, and has written a book on the library to be published in the spring. Miss C. V. Diedel, the president, will preside at the meeting.

The club will hold a white elephant sale for the benefit of the library fund January 26. Refreshments will be sold and members will exhibit some of their hobbies. Legionnaire Urges Group To Buy Planes for Army

Suggests Squadron Be Flown as Far As Possible by Sons of Members

Comdr. Frank Buckley of Na-tional Cathedral Post, District of Columbia Department, American Legion, has submitted a resolution to the Department Executive Committee which proposes that all posts in the Nation contribute to a fund for the purchase of an "American Legion Pursuit Squadron."

Planes so purchased would be presented to the Army with the suggestion that each bear the Legion insignia and be manned so far as possible, by sons of Legionnaires.

The resolution will be considered at the next committee meeting and if favorably acted upon will be transmitted to the national body.

Four Legion national committees dealing with problems of national will meet at the Mayflower defense Hotel for a three-day conference starting January 19. These committees are on naval affairs, merchant marine, civil defense and national aeronautics. National Comdr. Lynn U. Stambaugh will make the principal address.

This year, for the first time, the Legion's National Rehabilitation Committee's annual winter meeting will not be held here. Because of the increased war activities and the housing shortage, the committee plans to meet at the Southern Hotel in Baltimore, January 19 and 20.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue Post will meet January 21 at Stansbury Hall. Past Comdr. Charles E. Wolf, captain of the blood donating squad, will preside. Guests of honor will be the members of the squad. The post will hold the sixth annual coronation ball at the Mayflower Hotel January 23, when "Miss Internal Revenue" will be crowned. The proceeds will be turned over to the blood squad. Tickets may be obtained from any member of the post or at the door.

Lincoln Post will meet in the American Legion Club on January 12 at 8 p.m., with Comdr. John D. Germer presiding.

Junior High Radio Program Tomorrow To Deal With Peru

Terrell Pupils to Tell Story of Descendant Of Inca Indians

The junior high school radio series, "The Americas," focuses tomorrow on the republic of Peru, when pupils of the Terrell Junior High School tell the story of "Goyo, Child of the Sun." The broadcast, sponsored by The Star and Radio Committee of the District schools, with the co-operation of the National Broadcasting Company., will be carried over Station WMAL starting at 2 p.m.

The story of Goyo, descendant of the Inca Indians whose great civilization flourished in Peru centuries ago, encompasses many interesting and adventurous events and facts about the country. The script, adapted from an episode in the "New World Neighbors" series of D. C. Heath Co., publishers, tells of the experiences during a trip through Peru by the young Indian and his American friends. Bushmaster snakes and jaguars frequent the travelers' trail, as well as the considerably less dangerous tapir and howling monkey. Noted also are the luxuriant balsa-tree groves and ancient Inca ruins. A brief dramatic flashback reveals the trials of the Incas under their oppressive Spanish conquerors in 1533.

Miss Vida L. Porter is chairman of the Terrell School radio group. Music for the program is directed by Mrs. E. S. Thornton, while the lesson plan, to be distributed among the District's junior high schools, was prepared by T. E. Batson, Miss G. L. Collins, Mrs. J. C. Bradford and Miss F. D. Graves,

Welfare Workers Pay Visit to Mrs. Roosevelt

Twenty-five members of the Save the Children Society, a child welfare group from the Appalachian Moun-tains, paid a visit to Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday in the Office of Civilian Defense.

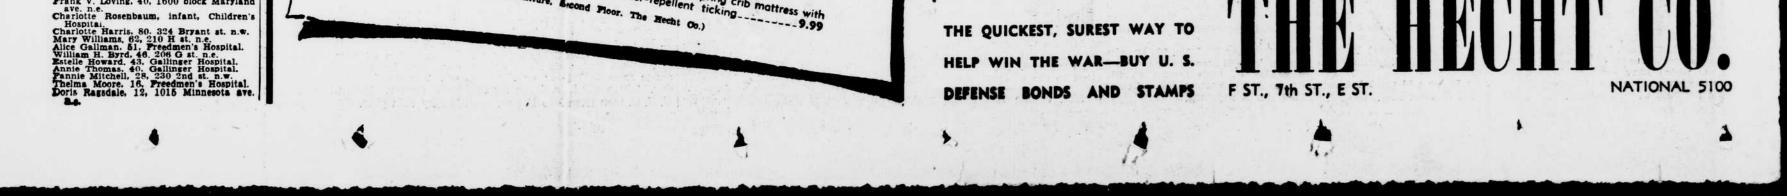

On their way to their 10th annual convention in New York City, the welfare workers explained to Mrs. Roosevelt how they provided education, school lunches and clothing for mountaineer children of Kentucky, Tennessee, West Virginia and North Carolina.

Mrs. Roosevelt said the group could be of invaluable assistance to families whose sons had entered the armed services and were experiencing difficulties in providing for the remaining members. She stressed the importance of seeing that local defense agencies had representation from all branches of community life.

History May Repeat Itself In Newest Guild Drama

'Papa Is All,' Quiet Story of Family Life in Pennsylvania, May Score As Did 'John Ferguson'

> By Mark Barron, Wide World News.

NEW YORK. When, almost a quarter century ago, the New York Theater Guild was starting out upon its highly meritorious career, its directors chose for a first production a homely, unpretentious drama called "John Ferguson." It was a simple story of an obscure family in a small village and not too much was expected of it.

Nevertheless, "John Ferguson" had a quietly winning quality that made it a hit and earned enough? profits to start the guild well on its or parties. Hollywood Once More Pauses to Consider the Year's Academy Awards For Too-Rated Performances and Best Photoplay

By Harold Heffernan.

It's almost "Cscar" time in Hollywood again and the townsfolk-some 12,000 of the voting element, anyway-are giddy with excitement over prospective winners ci the 1941 academy awards.

Annually, for the past 13 years, the academy feast and statuette party has been recognized as the most important even on movieland's calendar The approaching affair, in spite of the war, promises to be no exception.

After a hast and ill-advised decision to cancel the dinner portion

More than ever before perhaps, the 1941 statuette chase looms as a hoss race in which almost anything is likely to happen.

A long shot won the "best actress" trophy last year when Ginger Rogers rushed out of nowhere at all to get the nod on her "Kitty Foyle."

Selecting the Top Film

Will Be No Easy Task. The same thing can be repeated this time in the feminine division, with any one of a half dozen actresses looming in the contention. To a slighter degree, he same is true in the "best actor" department. Also, any one of a do en productions seems to have a chance of grabbing the "best-picture" flig.

Foremost contenders among the pictures would appear to be "Sergeant York," "Citizen Kane," "The Little Foxes," "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," "The Lady Eve," 'Meet John Doe" and "How Green Was My Valley," and if you have seen al these epics you understand at once what a job is cut out for the voter .. Any one could be oscared without stirring up too much adverse criticism

Most confounding dark horse in the line-up is Orson Welles' controversial "Citizen Kane." This is a movie that either aroused its onlookers to superlative plaise or left them cold. There were few in-betweeners. And, significantly, most of Hollywood's workers were practically speechless in their praise of the Welles' effort. Whether the bulk of the academy members feel that way remains to be seen. If they do, look for "Citizen Kane" to score a sweeping victory.

Under ordinary circumstances, however, "Sergeant York" should reign as the logical betting choice. It has the benefit also of wartime atmosphere and significance, which may collect a lot of votes.

Among the lady stars, Ginger Rogers, last year's "Kitty Foyle" champion, carries little chance of repeating. Her only 1941 offering was "Tom, Dick and Harry" and a performer must have an exceptional picture to score a repeat.

The trick was turned just twice in academy history. Luise Rainer Gibbs in the current New Yorker. scored a double in 1936 and 1937 and Spencer Tracy did it in 1937 and 1938.

Three scintillating performances in successive box office hits may turn the trick for Barbara Stanwyck in the women's division as it may

Barbara had, in order, "Meet John Doe," "The Lady Eve" and "Ball of Fire," marking up her biggest, most successful year in the movies. This week the North American Newspaper Alliance ballots were passed Her work in "The Lady Eve" stands out as an unforgetable performance

In two of her three pictures, Barbara played opposite Cooper. If

Like Cooper, Barbara is extremely popular with her fellow workers. Also like Cooper, she has never collected an Oscar. Both factors can and do contribute to a contender's vote total.

Half a dozen other actresses can't be completely counted out, however. Joan Crawford had an acting field day in "A Woman's Face," in which she dared appear with a wicked scar slashed across her face. You can't dismiss Greer Garson's pathetically moving heroine in "Blossoms in the Dust." And what about Bette Davis in "The Little Foxes" and "The Great Lie?" Or Ida Lupino in "Ladies in Retirement" and Vivien Leigh's "That Hamilton Woman?" To make it more complicated, Claudette Colbert must be rated a wholesome chance because of her kaleidoscopic school ma'am in "Remember the Day."

Nothing is for certain in an academy balloting. Each year there has been an upset or two.

And the premier danseur is Anton Dolin, who completes a triumvirate considered to be three of the leading dancers of the moment. American dancers in the Ballet Theater company include Karen Conrad, who calls Philadelphia and Catherine Littlefield's ballet home.

Choreography has been designed by both Americans with experimental thoughts and by such ballet veterans as Michel Fokine and Bronislava Nijinska. Music ranges from scores by such old masters as Tschaikowsky, Chausson and Debussy to the moderns, Schoenberg, Respighi, Kurt Weil and Prokofieff. Outstanding, perhaps, among the new numbers to be presented by the Ballet Theater, is "Bluebeard," new comic version of the old story of the man who knew how to handle his

The Neck, In Hollywood, Is Worth $200 That, at Any Rate, Is the Average Fee Which Is Paid

The Stunt Man Who Risks His for a Film

Wide World News.

HOLLYWOOD. Cliff ft's probably pretty impolite to ask a stranger how much he earns, but once you've seen a Hollywood stunt man do his bit in a picture you just have to know. So I asked around. It looks like Hollywood values the average neck at $200. It can slip to $35. It runs up to $1,000. It depends on how close a brush with death the stunter has to take. A few times they have died right in front of the camera. You probably thought it was fake.

I saw three stunts done on the R-K-O Ranch during the making of "Valley of the Sun." Before thee afternoon was over I was jumping up and down with my handkerchief stuffed in my mouth.

Yakima Canutt did the best thriller. He's a big-I mean big-quiet, humorous man. Started in rodeos. Became a stunt man 18 years ago. Comes from Colfax, Wash. Down for the count only once-when a norse rolled on him.

This "Valley of the Sun" is laid in a small Western town—you know the kind-wooden store fronts, dirt roads, wooden sidewalks. stunts. There were a thousand people on the set. So there was a lot of noise between shots. But when it came time for Canutt's stunt, the place quieted down. The air was tense. Canutt climbed into an old-fashloned wagon, picked up the reins.

intersection with another street. Right at the corner Canutt jerked the reins hard. The horses looked up the other street at breakneck pace. The wagon flopped through the air. Canutt and Lyons flew out, and by the miracle they know they both fell free of the wagon and the flying hoofs of the horses. They picked themselves up, brushed off their pants and sauntered to a store front to roll cigarettes. "Cut," yelled the director. I went over to Canutt. "How much do you get for that?" "That? Three hundred and fifty. Each of us," Canutt grinned. "Besides we get $200 a week salary. This $350 is an 'adjustment.' It means we get special pay for special Next, "Iron Eyes" Cody was up.

for the houses. Finally They Used Dummies. But what happened? Somehow smoke rolled over them. The picture didn't register. So again. They missed the houses. Again. This time the car slid, and turned over halfway down the hill. They had just one second to decide, Both scrunched down on the bottom of the car and let her slide. They climbed out finally, hardly scratched. But at the top of the hill the director and the cameramen couldn't take it. They wouldn't let Pomeroy and Parry do it again. The scene you finally saw used dummies. But Parry and Pomeroy got $1,000 apiece for the hour's oudspeaker. "Iron Eyes" was hiding behind a building. He aimed his long arrow. It's the real thing, too, because the script called for it to stick in the building across the street. "Iron Eyes" aimed straight at a pretty girl standing across the street. The arrow whizzed just 4 inches from the girl's

Then it was Fred Kennedy's turn. He has a horse trained to do falls. He charges $75 a fall. You see him in a scene of Indians aiding the town, hundreds of them racing their horses up and down the street. It's dangerous enough just riding in such a scene. But Kennedy raced his horse to just 12 feet from the camera. Then he pulled the reins to one side. The horse reared, plunged, rolled over. Kennedy, somehow, catapulted through the air, and fell clear. He missed a tree trunk by a footand he missed a broken neck. There's an inner circle in this stunt world. About 20 men and six women can do any stunt. They know how to handle spilling cars, fight, take dives, do trick parachute jumps. They figure out each stunt, everything that could happen, and then they prepare as best they can. Alan Pomeroy is either top on the list or second. He's a Suffield (Conn.) boy who came here playing professional football 18 years ago. The movies tapped him. He nets about $10,000 a year for stunts, lives on a ranch, owns a famous loft of racing pigeons that excite

News of the Philatelic World, Its Interests and People--Review of the Stamp Press-List of Local Meetings.

By James Waldo Fawcett. Readers who favor a stamp in tribute to the heroic marines who defended Wake Island against the Japanese from December 7 to 22 are invited to say so. Letters on the subject may be addressed to Harold F. Ambrose, Senior Administrative Officer to the Postmaster General.

It is not unlawful to list or to describe stamps issued by enemy or occupied countries since December 7. The 'Irading With the Enemy Act does not mention philatelic material, and the boycott initiated by the Scott Publications, Inc., is merely a patriotic gesture of an entirely personal character.

Now that the first wave of hysteria has passed, the average collector probably will be content with a less passionate attitude. No American should buy the recent mint stamps of Germany, Italy or Japan or those of the governments they control-but there is no danger in reporting such philatelic news as may be obtainable from Axis territory nor any risk in reading such reports. In the interest of the future prosperity of the one universal hobby known to the human race, there is need for "sweet reasonableness, even now when it is so popular and so convenient to be extravagantly emotional.

A Washington dispatch to the New York Sun, published December 26, says: "Inquiry at both the Treasury and Post Office Department indicates that the operation of the Trading With the Enemy Act will not prevent the publication in newspapers and philatelic journals of illustrations and descriptions of postage stamps emanating in enemy or enemy-controlled countries of Europe or other foreign countries. . . It is said by those legal authorities obligation and responsibility of who would be called upon to decide every postal employe to make cersuch matters that there does not appear to be any reason why newspapers should not be permitted to under any conditions that may print illustrations and descriptions arise, and that the mails be proof postage stamps of enemy countries, holding unofficially that such procedure could not be construed in gency, maintainance of uninterany way as giving aid or comfort to any nation at war with the United States.

Harry L. As a matter of fact, such persons are a great menace to the general well-being at the present time. So encourage your friends to take up stamp collecting as a sedative and calmly and courageously face the problems that come up.'

Washington players have been invited to match their skill against The free lessons in chess play that the talent which Baltimore presents the events.

Local players have taken steps to prevent as far as possible any interruption to their favorite pastime because of "blackouts," which may be frequent in Washington in the near future. The Cheeks Club has been equipped to meet the situation. Windows and sky lights have been so darkened that no ray of light, Here's how to take of ugly fat-without strict diet lists, no strenuous exercises, no drugs. The easy Welch Way! And intelligent, cooperative people who faithfully followed Dr. Frederic Damrau's instructions lost an average of 7 pounds a month. Amazing results sworn to before a Notary Public. And listen how easy it is. Just mix 1/4 glass of Welch's Grape Juice with glass water, and drink before meals and at bedtime. Then this happens: First, you have less desire to eat sweet, fattening foods-thus reducing caloric intake. Second, the natural dextrose in Welch's is quickly consumed. This regime actually helps nature consume excess fat. Yet you needn't suffer a hungry moment. So start re the Welch Way today.

By Alice Eversman,

Last Thursday a selebration was held in New York and New Jersey that should have been Nation-wide. It was the observance of the 150th anniversary of the birth of Lowell Mason, founder of music in public education and of American church music. True, his hymns were sung in the schools over the country on that day but there was little public recognition of this great man except in New Jersey where a bronze tablet was placed on top of the simple monument that marks his grave in Rosedale Cemetery, East Orange-Montclair. Chiefly concerned with this celebration were the Lowell Mason Memorial Committee of the Music Educators National Committee and the Hymn Society of America. It is a question which branch of Mr. Mason's life work benefited the country most. His well known hymns such as "Nearer my God to Thee" "From Greenland's Icy Mountains", was taken from an old French "Work for the Night is Coming", "When I Survey the Wondrous civic center in the country had mu-In programming his concert with "Work for the Night is Coming", ers have brough TOSS"

German Poet Is Subject of Psychological Biography

Rainer Maria Rilke, Though Acclaimed in Europe, Is Little Read in U.S.

By Mary-Carter Roberts.

Rainer Maria Rilke

By E. M. Butler. Macmillan Co., New York.

The German poet, Rainer Marta Rilke, though he was acclaimed in Europe even in his lifetime, has not been popularly recognized in America. And, indeed, it seems unlikely that he will acquire a considerable public in our country, for some time at least. This observation has nothing to do with the fact that Germany and the United States are now at war. It rests instead, on the condition that Rilke is a poet's poet. Appreciation of his genius seems likely to be limited to centers of culture where literary sophistication is old and taken for granted and such centers are rare in our country. Our sophisticates are still individuals; they tend to scatter rather than to herd. As for the general public, even the qualified general public which reads current poetry and fixes current poetical reputations, it is hard to imagine it taking Rilke to its heart. His work, for one obvious thing, is extremely difficult of translation. And, for another, it has about it a continuity of development which virtually requires that it be studied. The probability, therefore, of Rilke being widely known in America is small. But if anything can overcome such obstacles as stand in the way of his general recognition, it will be such a work as this one, a combination of critical study and psychological biography, written with the aim of bringing this great poetic mystic within the range of general understanding.

As Prof. Butler observes, Rilke, even in his lifetime, became vir-tually a cult among young European intellectuals, and a legend as various, as confusing and as awesome as those which sometimes surround religious personalities grew up about him. His successive volumes were received as words of the prophet, and his personal qualities were magnified into almost superhuman proportions. When he died, in 1926, he left further mystification behind him, for his published works were in a chaotic state and the vastness of the correspondence which he had carried on made a collection of his letters seem likely to require years of labor. The present book consequently is not offered as a definitive work, either in the biographical or the critical sense. But it is a highly important preliminary to such a work. As far as it has gone, it is exact, and its primary aim seems to have been to clear up confusions and reduce the magical Rilke legend to its factual components. Approaching Rilke as a man, Prof. Butler tries to get at the psycho-logical roots of his nature and what he brings forth is merely reminiscent of the histories of a striking number of poets-an unhappy home environment made worse by the desertion of the mother, a warping experience in a military school which was totally unsuited to the poet's capacities, and a grotesque introduction to love by way of a youthful elopement with a woman superior in years and inferior in birth and breeding. Sensitive in the extreme, the poet left childhood and youth behind him with a feeling of horror and a conviction that he could live only by deliberately forgetting his past.

His efforts to adjust himself to rational society thereafter took the course of a search for a strong supporting personality which he could believe to be incorruptibly good and benevolent. He was fortunate enough to find such a one in a woman, Lou Andreas-Salome, with whom he maintained a lifelong friendship; other women friends, generally older than himself, subsequently gave him like sustenance and added to their spiritual help practical assistance in means and publicity. Indeed, it was almost wholly due to the efforts of women that his work became known. But to these devoted friends, Rilke gave little. He could bear ho imperative claims upon himself. He was a verse-producing plant. Human sympathy was no more than the soil from which he drew his poetic nourishment.

His instinct to cling to some one stronger than himself appears again, but more consciously in his artistic development, according to Prof. Butler's interpretation. Early in youth, he fixed on Tolstoy as his chosen master-in-art, and even made a youthful pilgrimage to the novelist's home to pay homage and receive inspiration. It was a sad affair. Tolstoy barely noticed the obscure German versifier, and the Countess Tolstoy, in exasperation, finally ordered the young man from the house Rilke's next ideal was Rodin. He went to Paris to be near the sculptor and formed an association with him which lasted some years, though not always without acrimony. By the time it came to an end, Rilke had absorbed enough strength to know himself sufficient. His life thereafter took an exactly opposite course-he began to seek solitude, and the closing years of his life are a history of a quest for an environment in which he could feel himself utterly alone.

In tracing this development, Prof. Butler adheres admirably to verifiable facts, and by no means idealizes Rilke as a human being. The poet was selfish, sometimes ungrateful and quite capable of cruelty to those who, even unwittingly, disappointed him. He had little capacity for understanding common suffering and he admitted his i love any one. As an artist, however, he compassed a great world vision, a vision of the cycle of life in which life and death are inextricably and harmoniously interwoven, a vision which transcends those concepts which, by analogy, might be called three-dimensional and sees phenomena in something nearer godlike terms. Prof. Butler's book is an effort to bring man and genius alike within common understanding.

Kieran Meets His Match In Illustrator of Book

The American Sporting Scene

Text by John Kieran. Illustrated by Joseph W. Golinkin. Macmillan Co., New York.

After an hour's look-see at "The American Sporting Scene," even the most enthusiastic of John Kieran's admirers will be ready to concede that the wizard of "Information, Please," has been held to a draw for once. The man who accomplished this feat is Lt. Comdr. Joseph W. Golinkin, this country's outstanding artist of the sporting scene, who trained both for the Navy and for an artistic career and now is back in the Navy.

Comdr. Golinkin contributes more than 80' splendid pictures - nearly half of them in full color-to illustrate as entertaining a book on sports as one would ever hope to find. Naturally, since there are only 212 pages and many of these contain full-page drawings, the book merely hits the high spots of sports and is not in the least statistical. Much of the material in the text had appeared in Mr. Kieran's column in the New York Times. A foreword also states that many of Mr. Golinkin's works reproduced in the book have been shown previously in a number of New York art galleries.

The personalities who stand out most in the Kieran text are Babe Ruth and Big Bill Tilden. Jack Dempsey gets his share of attention among the ring's champions, but doesn't rate the wordage given Ruth, Tilden or Lou Little, Columbia's colorful football coach.

On the other hand, Artist Golinkin's favorite subject undoubtedly is Joe Louis, for at least one-fourth of the book's illustrations show the current champion in one pose or another. The Galento bout alone resulted in five drawings, one a swell full-page work in color.

No other sports writer since the days of Ring Lardner has been able to portray ballplayers in quite the manner that Mr. Kieran does. He is at his best in Ruthiana. One of the book's better tales concerns a five-week vaudeville tour for which Babe was paid $25,000. It was during the prohibition period, and Ruth, not a prohibitionist, managed to spend $30,000 on the tour. On another occasion, Babe received a $25,000 check for doing a movie in Cuba and carried the check around in his pocket until it was just a scrap of paper.

Bucky Harris probably will relish the chapter entitled "Spring Song." but it is questionable if Al Schacht will. Probably every one except Clem McCarthy, who is the butt of a few gentle jibes, will enjoy the chapter in which the author deals at some length with his trip to the 1935 Grand National at Aintree.

One of the Kieran columns reprinted from the Times tells the tragic story of Maryland's great horse, Chase Me, whose owner, Mrs. Elizabeth Bosley, was killed not so long ago in an automobile accident

"The Curious Game of Golf" is the title of the Kieran contribution o tales of the fairways, and the author provides a couple of dandies. There also are three or four bits of verse, with apologies to Kipling and John Masefield.

No sport, indoors or out, is overlooked, either by Mr. Kieran or Artist Golinkin. The latter is just as effective in a bowling alley or at a six-day bicycle race as he is at a Louis bout with the title at stake. Although his drawings of fights are outstanding, all his pictures are crammed with

Lincoln: His Life in Photographs

By Stefan Lorant. Duell, Sloan & Pearce, New York.

Lincoln was perhaps the homeliest man who was ever President. Later generations have seen in his face the beauty of nobility and greatness and sorrow. But to his contemporaries, he was just the President and to photographers a trial.

The first known pictures of Lincoln was taken in 1846, only six years after the photographing process was introduced in America generally. He was at that time 37 years old, just elected to Congress and a stark, gaunt-looking man. After his return to Illinois, he was photographed several times during the era of the Douglas debates. He still looked pretty sour. Then came Matthew Brady, the photographer of Civil War fame, who took a picture of Mr. Lincoln in his New York studio in 1860, on the eve of the Cooper Union speech. Of all the pictures of the leader, this one makes him look best, although it is hardly handsome. The Illinois lawyer was nominated for the presidency, and Alexander Hesler of Chicago went down to Springfield and made the campaign picture of him, good and firm-looking, but it was not a remarkable likeness. Then two things happened to Lincoln; he was elected President, and he grew a beard. Brief Reviews

Thus Far

By Harry Wickey. American Artist's Group, New York.

This book belongs to the series recently inaugurated by the American Artist's Group which has for its aim to furnish the public with the lives and reproductions of the works of contemporary painters. There have been four preceding volumes-"The Gist of Art," by John Sloan; "He Sat Among the Ashes" (a biography of Louis M. Eilshemius), by William Shack; "Artist in Manhattan," by Jerome Myers, and "Artists Say the Silliest Things," by Guy Pene Du Bois. The idea is excellent, though the works so far have been of an uneven quality.

Mr. Wickey's story is about as American as one can imagine. He was born in 1898 in a small Ohio town; he was poor and had to work his way through all the art schools which he ever attended. There were no artists in his family, and he was obliged to rely on his own determination for encouragement. He went to Detroit first, to Chicago next and finally of the successive issues which have to New York. He worked as a car checker in railroad yards, as a dishwasher, as a doorman, as a guard on the elevated, and as whatever came up. Then he went off to France as a doughboy, managing to get sent to an officer's school about the time of the armistice. In Greenwich Village, he had a studio next to a young woman with whom he argued. After arguing with her for some time, he decided, he says, that they ought to get married so as to have no interruptions to their disagreements. They did.

The turning point of his career came when his father-in-law offered him a country place up the Hudson River, and there he settled down to curately visualized Anerica's future his true artistic bents-etching and painting, and eventually sculpture. and that our naval strength must His work has steadily grown in reputation, and now, in his early 40's, he is recognized as an American artist of genius. that

His method of telling his story is about as naive as can be imagined. When he writes of his methods in art, however, he uses authority.

Hail to Yesterday

By Mara Miller, as told to Page Cooper. Farrar & Rinehart,

This is a woman's biography which has no particular purpose. Mara New York. Miller has had an adventurous life and has lived through a long span of years. But she has not achieved fame or even success-her story, indeed, reverses the popular tradition and takes her from riches to poverty. Her reason for putting herself into print, therefore, seems to be only that she has had a very good time and seen a lot of things and feels it worth her while now to make a record of it. There could be reasons much less admirable.

Briefly, she was born on a Kentucky farm, grew up with a black mammy, married when she was 17 and went with her husband to the newly-opened Oklahoma Territory, where she lived in a typical frontier town, with Indians, cowboys, bad men and dubious women for her neighbors. While she was still in her early 20s, her husband died and, a wealthy widow, she went to New York where she found entree to the then fashionable world. Bicycling in the park dining at Delmonico's, going to see Maude Adams at the theater, meeting such celebrities as Ella Wheeler Wilcox, and having a great many beaux-these were her diversions. Then she married again, and her charming Irish husband was such a man as is always full of schemes for getting rich and consequently they both got poor with disconcerting speed, after which the husband made his exit by way of delirium tremens. Mara, wiser but certainly no sadder, began to live on a less expansive plan.

The charm of her book-and it does have charm-is its inconsequentiality, and its revelation of a spirit which was genuinely unimpressed by material and practical values. Gayety-that overworked qualityseems quite real in this book. For a work without a purpose, it is remarkably satisfying.

Mr. Simon, president of New York's famed Carnegie Hall, herein presents his selection of the best lectures in a series given during the past season in commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the institution. Designed primarily to benefit the layman, the series featured some of the most eminent musical authorities in America. If the essays contained in this book are a true indication, the purpose of the program had successful fulfillment

Every one of the 11 discourses which Mr. Simon has collected is couched in terms easily understood and of high interest to those having something more than a passing concern in music. It is the elements of the art that each contributor deals with, concisely, humanly and authoritatively

Among the contributors are Olin Downes, who speaks on musical criticism; Edward Johnson, on styles in singing; Egon Petri, on piano playing and teaching; Albert Spalding and Albert Stoessel, on the violin and other strings; Georges Barrere, woodwinds; Modeste Alloo, brass and percussion: a discussion of the relationship between orchestra and conductor by Leon Barzin, and finally, a view of the evolution of orchestral styles by Harl McDonald. Valued Platinum Was Once Used

For 'Gold Bricks'

When platinum was first discovered, about 200 years ago, it was one of the cheapest of metals. Swindlers covered bricks of it with gold plate, and sold them as gold. Platinum was used by the Russian government for small coins, like our pennies and nickels. The French used it as an alloy with more valuable metals such as gold and silver. just to harden the coins and make them more serviceable.

But, as platinum's values were realized, this all changed. The French called in all the platinum coins and replaced them with money of the same denomination, just to get the metal that had once been so lowly regarded. In a period of less than 30 years, platinum's price jumped from $16 an ounce to $105 an ounce. Platinum has many valuable properties. It is very ductile. That means it can be readily drawn into wire. An ounce could be drawn so fine that the resultant wire would stretch from New Orleans to New York. It expands less when heated than any other metal, and for that reason is used for thermometers that will be subjected to very high temperatures. It is almost chemically inert, and thus will not readily combine with any other substance.

Last, it is often used in setting up standards for weight and measures. Since, when combined with ridium, Complicated Passes By Charles "Chick" Davies, As Told to Haskell Cohen. (This is the second of a series of articles on playing basket ball by Chick Davies, coach of the

No matter how well your team can shoot, it can't get along without players that set up shots with skill-ful passes. Since saving time means a great deal in making plays, a complicated pass is taboo. I advocate the baseball pass. Players should devote their passing practice almost exclusively to this throw. The palm of the hand is stretched across the sphere in making the pass, and it is propelled straight out from the houlder just like a baseball. However, when the scoring area is packed with players it is often essential to resort to the bounce pass. Perfection is attained by actual contact work. In practicing it, the pivot man stations himself along the foul line. He is normally behind a fellow teammate and a defensive man, so that it is difficult to give him the ball, unless the bounce pass is used.

Alleged Surplus Revealed as Bar To $800,000 City Participation in President's Emergency Fund

By JOHN W. THOMPSON, Jr.

In the main, the $54,548,562 District budget for 1943 now before Congress represents the composite opinion of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, the Board of Trade and the various civic units.

The overall civic position on the estimates revealed in testimony before the Commissioners last fall was:

1. Keep within anticipated revenue from present taxes and tax rates. 2. Postpone all except absolutely essential capital improvements until after the emergency.

3. Avoid a boost in the water rates.

Civic Problems, Civic Bodies Discord in Utilities Circles;

Transportation Problem Increasing

By JESSE C. SUTER.

No longer is there ground for complaint of a lack of interest by District residents in the local program for civilian defense. The work of organization and training is going forward by leaps and bounds. Entire civic meetings are being devoted to defense information and instruction. This is true whether it be a meeting of the Board of Trade. Federation of Citizens' Associations, Federation of Civic Associations, the neighborhood citizen and civic associations or other organizations.

Some of the neighborhoods have attained so complete and thorough organization as to be complimented highly by the District Civilian Defense officials.

Those who know the voteless and unrepresented District of Columbia community and its reputation for always proudly and ungrudgingly bearing all the burdens of American citizens either in war or in peace, are not at all surprised. District residents have always excelled in doing their part even though denied all participation, through their own chosen representatives, in the councils of the Nation. Like the heroic Six Hundred in Tennyson's "Charge of the Light Brigade,"

> "Theirs not to make reply, Theirs not to reason why, Theirs but to do and die."

The President's budget message, which went to Congress on Wednesday included as one of its smaller features the District of Columbia budget for the fiscal year 1943. The great national budget of $59,000,000,000, the largest in history, dwarfs into insignificance the District budget of $54,548,562. The national budget is beyond all comprehension and reflects the colossal scale upon which the war is to be prosecuted.

The District budget carries increased amounts to satisfy emergency demands because of the war and these will further delay provision for urgent and long delayed unmet needs. The budget recommendations are based upon a Federal payment of $6,000,000. Even though the service and protection of the expanded Federal establishment has increased largely the District's burden, there seems to be no disposition on the part of Washington's largest business to increase its share.

As usual, the hardest hit in cutting are the school building items. Only one new building is provided though five buildings under construction are to be given funds for completion.

Funds for continuing work on the new Northwest Health Center and the new central building for the Public Library are to be provided. Progress on all of the buildings will depend upon the granting of material priorities for their construction.

Another Public Utilities Open Forum Held

Chairman Gregory Hankin of the Public Utilities Commission held his second open forum in the auditorium of the National Archives Building on Wednesday night. It was attended by the public utilities chairman of various civic and business committees and organizations as well as by representatives of the public utilities companies.

The meeting is reported to have lasted for three hours and was featured by a bitter attack by Chairman Hankin on the District Commissioners. The alleged tardiness of the Commissioners, as members of the Joint Board, to approve the order of the Public Utilities Commission for the operation of the new crosstown bus line was roundly denounced. Other grievances against the Commissioners were aired.

In civic circles the open rupture, in this public manner, between two branches of the District government, which are required by law to act jointly upon numerous problems, is regarded as unfortunate. The inability of the chairman and the Engineer Commissioner to agree on some matters before the commission shows why the law provides for three members.

Chairman Hankin, at the open forum, announced his approval of the nominee, for the vacancy on the commission, whose nomination is now pending before the Senate District Committee. There have been heard expressions of keen regret that a local man, familiar with local conditions, was not selected for the existing vacancy.

A strong feeling exists that the two civilian members of the Public Utilities Commission should be local men who are fully qualified and, if possible, acceptable to both the citizens and the utilities companies. All either side should want is a local man, who knows what it is all about, and who is practical, honest and fairminded. There can be seen no reason why the appointee should have the approval of either the Engineer Commissioner or the chairman of the commission.

A number of important matters are pending before the commission representing accumulations as well as new problems. Taxicabs rates, stock issues and other items are included.

Problem of Moving the Heavy Rush Hour Traffic

The Capital Transit Co. has been increasing its large fleet of cars and buses as fast as it has been possible to obtain them from the manufacturers. The promised early delivery of both types of conveyances is expected further to relieve the situation.

With the rationing of rubber tires and the expected retirement from use of many taxicabs and private automobiles there is seen a prospective added burden on the transit company. The company proposes to order additional cars and buses to take care of the expected increased load.

Chairman Delano of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission has suggested that the cabs may be made to carry an important part of the rush hour load. This would be done by routing some cabs, from the intermediate sections beyond the downtown area, to a common destination. Such cabs would carry three passengers at a reasonable fare. A similar system is in operation in some cities where there are two types of cabs, one of which is exclusive and the other will pick up its quota of three passengers who will all be discharged at the same predetermined destination.

To insure the continued use of the taxicabs in the performance of this suggested part of the mass transportation it would be necessary to get through a change in the tire rationing rules. Now public conveyances of 10-passenger capacity and over are the only ones entitled to preferential treatment under the present rules

Speeding up the cars and buses would be most helpful in the carrying of the mass transportation load. Improved timing of the traffic lights probably will help a lot, but the passengers, who always are complaining about the long time it takes to get any place, could with little effort shorten considerably the running time of every line.

Many persons board a car or bus, apparently, without the slightest idea that they will have to pay their fare or show a pass or transfer upon entering. A man will hold up the line of passengers, waiting to get aboard, while he searches all of his 15 or more pockets. After taking account of stock of contents he may pull out a ten-dollar bill for change or purchase of tokens. Members of the fair sex make similar search of the contents of enormous pocketbooks of many compartments. They may discover a token, a transfer or even a pass or present a bill for change while others wait to get aboard.

A few simple rules for each passenger to follow might be equivalent to a material increase in equipment and in speed. It would also save the disposition of many a passenger waiting in the cold or rain, even though that same waiting passenger may be of the never-ready-with-fare class.

These rules would help: 1. Have your fare ready. 2. Have exact change ready for tokens or pass. 3. Do not hide your tokens, your transfer or your pass. 4. Remember that every time you delay the starting of the vehicle you are making some other passengers as sore on you as you are sore when it is some one else causing the delay when you are in a hurry.

. . . . Board of Trade Committee Sells Many Defense Bonds

The Membership Committee of the Board of Trade is always the most "live-wire" committee of that organization. It adopts many novel methods for keeping the members on their toes in securing new members. They have recently been conducting a Defense Bond selling campaign among members of the organization and their friends.

The original goal which the committee set for itself was $1,-000,000, but at the meeting on Tuesday night they reported a total of $1,326,200. Most of the purchases were made by the more than 1500 members of the board.

The committee will continue its efforts on a more informal plan and expects to attain a grand total of $2,000,000.

Junior Board of Commerce Doing Important Work

The Junior Board of Commerce Bulletin publishes an interesting report on the work of its team in the Community Chest campaign. The less than 100 workers secured 974 pledges totaling $14,589, which was 10.83 per cent in excess of its quota.

Few Capital Improvements.

Whether or not there is any District money left over and whether or not the Budget Bureau of the District Building interpretation is correct, there are many who feel that the Federal Government has a purely national obligation to bear some part of the expenses of the National Capital. Government build-Kalorama-John Quincy Adams ings are not immune to bombs, nor School, Nineteenth and California is Government personnel. District taxpayers will have to dig into their pockets to pay for that $1,000,000 which is now being spent.

As the budget now stands, few capital expenditures outside defense needs are provided but efforts have been made to complete projects now under way, such as the new Public Library, several school buildings, and the Northwest Health Center. Other construction is limited to one new school, water supply improvements and sewers in recently developed area, mostly in Southeast.

Civic spokesmen in recommending general postponement of capital improvements had in mind that the material probably could not be obtained, that it probably should not be obtained if they drew from any defense needs elsewhere and, furthermore, that it would be a good idea to have an employment cushion for post-war days when many defense jobs will be eliminated. The thought obviously was, in the latter instance, that the capital improvement jobs such as those included in the Whitehurst highway report, for instance, would provide employment for many persons and thus prevent any large unemployment problem developing suddenly in the Capital.

P.-T. A. to Help Families Here Serve More Nutritious Food

Survey of School Lunches to Be Made; Pupils' Need of Proper Diet Stressed

By MRS. P. C. ELLERT, President, D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers

This is the story of a soft drink, a hot dog and a candy bar sloshing unhappily around together in a school child's stomach on any afternoon of the school week. This student may have seen another pupil drinking a glass of milk and eating an egg and vegetable sandwich, with a bowl of hot soup for lunch, and resent the fact that this classmate makes grades of A and B while he of the quick, indigestible lunch gets C or D, but he never connects the circum-

may do brilliant work on inadequate lunches and others who cannot keep up to them in spite of the most careful counting of vitamins and calories by food-conscious mothers. But their success is not because of sweets and fats they eat but rather in spite of them. Or perhaps because care-fully planned breakfasts and dinners at home offset the hot dogs and

and attractive, as witness the pictures of succulent looking foods in advertisements. We need to educate children from the earliest possible period to choose the fruits, vegetables, cereals and sweets that are "good for them" without branding these sturdy allies of disease resistance with that particular phrase which never serves to popularize a food or a pastime.

A meeting was held last week of our Emergency Nutrition Committee and Mrs. Ola Day Rush, homemak- row at 1:30 p.m. at the Rudolph ing and home education chairman, to hear her explain the plan for a District nutrition program and to learn in what way the parentteacher organization could take part. practical directions for effective as families. The Noblest Act

A SOLDIER IS BORN by Erskine Caldwell

IN EVERY war-scarred land there have been moments of heroism and sacrifice which prove that horror and brutality cannot snuff out the nobility of mankind. To record such great moments, we have asked famous authors and war correspondents to describe for us the noblest acts — by soldier or civilian — that they have asitnessed. Here is the second of these articles. — THE EDITOR.

NE hundred miles west of Moscow there was a village. It had been quiet and peaceful there for a long time. The people lived in small cottages with straw-thatched roofs and worked in the fields. They spent most of their time raising potatoes and cabbages and raking hay for their cows.

When the young men went away to the army, the women and children milked the cows and the old people took care of the crops. The Germans were over the hill not far away.

Then one morning, just as the sun was rising, the crashing thud of exploding bombs jarred the earth. I sprang from bed and looked out the window. Across the street I saw a woman with a white scarf over her head milking a cow, and near by in the back yard a man was chopping wood. From the kitchen flue a tall column of blue smoke curled slowly upward into the still air. A girl in a brightyellow dress ran to the porch and called her mother. The girl, who was about 15, pointed to the sky. The roar of German bombing planes directly overhead drowned out their voices. The woman picked up the milk bucket and ran towards the house The man suttiered in armeful of wood and started running behind her. A deadly, half-ton demolition bomb whistled earthward from the pale-blue sky, striking the porch where the girl stood. A shower of dust and debris higher than the house itself enveloped everything in sight. Then suddenly the air was filled with hundreds of whizzing broken bricks. After that there was a calm stillness everywhere.

When the dust and splinters and chaff of straw had finally settled, all that could be seen of the house was a jumble of broken bricks and shattered timbers.

Neighbors were running towards the wrecked house when I reached the street. In the crowd were several girls with firstaid kits and Red Cross armbands.

A dozen or more men carrying shovels and picks and crowbars hurried into the yard and went to work uncovering the bodies. The first-aid girls knelt on the jagged bricks waiting to see if anything could be done. But nothing could be done. The lifeless, broken bodies were dug out and laid on the dew-damp grass. Nobody spoke at all. The bombing planes had left, and there was silence everywhere.

A TRUCK was backed into the yard and several men got out and stood waiting to take the dead away. A doctor knelt on the ground beside the body of the girl.

Just as the doctor stood up, a boy who was about 10 years old ran breathlessly into the yard. He was carrying a loaf of bread under his arm.

"Where's Mama?" he asked, looking from face to face in the crowd around him. Then he turned and saw the three bodies on the grass.

A menue tools him he the area and tried to lead him away. He pulled himself away and ran to the truck. Some of the men were lifting the body of his mother. The boy bit his lips.

One of the nurses put her arm through his and started to walk away with him. The boy pulled frantically to free himself, and went back to the truck where the body of his sister was being placed inside.

After all three bodies had been put into the truck, the boy turned and walked towards the ruins of the house. A blackand-white cat, meowing, crept out of the wreckage and came towards him. He picked up the cat, shifting the loaf of bread to his other arm.

THE boy's grandmother ran panting into the yard. She talked to him, trying to persuade him to go home with her, but he shook his head.

The truck moved slowly out of the yard into the street. Tears came to the corners of the boy's eyes.

A Red Army officer came up and put his arm around the boy's shoulder. They stood that way for several minutes, gazing at the heap of broken bricks and splintered wood. Neither of them said anything.

Brushing the tears from his eyes with the back of his hand, the boy looked up into the officer's face. Silently the officer unbuckled his belt and fastened it about the boy's waist. The holster, heavily weighted by a pistol, swung at the boy's side.

The boy tucked the cat under his arm, handed the loaf of bread to the soldier and fell into step beside him. Without speaking, they marched down the street towards military headquarters. A new Red MONOTONOUS. A Nazi flyer met a friend he hadn't seen for some time on a Paris street corner.

"Well, well," said the Luftwaffer, "what are you doing here?"

"My job," answered the friend, "is to sit on the Eiffel Tower and keep a pair of strong binoculars peeled on London — and give the word when they raise the white flag."

"That's a terrible job," heckled the other.

"Yes, I know — but it's permanent."

SAMPLE. A five-year-old girl we know who spent a recent week end on a farm watched her grandfather come out of the henhouse with a glass egg in his hand.

"Don't take that away, Granddaddy," she said, "the hens won't have anything to measure by!"

Say, did I tell you the one about me and when I was a brand-new baby.

FIRST CAME OLIVE OIL,

Then came Palmelive, 'cause it's made with Olive and Palm Oils.

"Mother got the idea from Dr. Dafoe. He bathed the famous Dionne Quintuplets first of all with olive oil. Mother always says 'there's nothing too good for my baby', so it was olive oil first for me, too. Then, when it was time for soap-and-water baths, Mother chose Palmolive, like Dr. Dafoe did for the Dionne Quins. Palmolive's made with olive and palm oils, you know.

"Well, Palmolive and I have had many a good splash together. It lathers up so thick and creamy, and it gets me clean so quick that bath time is fun!

"The ladies have always said the nicest things about my peachy skin. Now Mother's taken to Palmolive, too. She says this: 'If Palmolive's good enough for Baby, why then it's good enough for me!'

"And by the way, Daddy's showersinging's louder and happier with my Palmolive in the soap-dish.

"We're a Palmolive family now. All because Mother thinks that anything you put on your skin is pretty important, and you ought to know what your soap is made with. She knows Palmolive is made with olive and palm oils. And Daddy and I know something else, too. Gee, is Mummy pretty these days! And is her skin soft and smooth when you touch it! You can tell Daddy's proud of her, just the way he looks at her and whispers nice things to her...

PALMOLIVE for your lovely skin too! It's made with olive and palm oils... Nature's finest beauty aids.

"So I'm glad I came along and brought Palmolive to our house."

What is America's biggest military asset? General Steve Henry knows one answer, and is doing something about it — in a hurry

by Arthur Bartlett

CREATOR and boss of Tank College

An Article Complete on Two Pages

THE General was happy. After much red tape he had managed to get to a vicepresident of the railroad. He had sworn away in advance any claims to damages in case anything happened to him. And now ... he was being allowed to ride in the cab of the locomotive!

Kid stuff? We!!, Brigadier General Stephen G. Henry does have the enthusiasm of a boy. But that ride through the night wasn't just for the thrill. This was a Diesel-powered locomotive. He had never seen one in operation before. And General Henry is one of those machine-minded Americans who aren't content until they have wrung the innermost secrets out of everything mechanical.

That is why he is one of the most important men in our Army right now. "Everybody knows," a general in Washington told me recently, "that Americans are the most machine-minded people on earth. Modern warfare being what it is, that is just about our greatest military asset. But tinkering with the family car is one thing, and understanding the complicated mechanism of a modern war machine is something else. You ought to go see what Steve Henry is doing about that."

General Henry is the commandant of the Armored Force School at Fort Knox, Kentucky. This is the school for specialists in everything pertaining to mechanized warfare: mechanics, motorcycle men, radio operators, electricians, even the clerks and cooks that the Armored Force must have. Nowhere ∞ such is these another institution like it. for this Blitz College is the crystallization of America's genius for working with machines.

It doesn't matter what these soldiers were doing in civil life. They have a flair for machinery. I remember one group we questioned as to their previous occupations. The tally showed two truck drivers, one farmhand, one schoolteacher, one factory worker and one youth who had just graduated from Harvard. And they were so completely absorbed in a tank engine when the General and I walked up behind them and stood looking over their shoulders that not one of them even noticed that we were there.

The General liked that. It made them men after his own heart.

At 47, Steve Henry is one of the youngest generals in the Army. An erect, quick-stepping man with a square jaw, piercing eyes and a graying military pompadour, he is very much the soldier; but he has never been handicapped by stodgy, militaristic self-importance. When he was a captain, teaching in the Army Tank School at Fort Meade, Maryland, he spent one summer furlough working as a helper in a garage, just for the experience. And though he started by changing tires and washing cars, he got promoted to shop foreman before the management found out that he was an Army officer. Another summer he got jobs, successively, in the factories of the three big motor-manufacturing companies in Detroit. The summer after that he signed up with General Motors as a test driver.

The General's Secret

ONE of his ex-students, a colonel now, told me: "Steve Henry is the best instructor I ever knew in the Army, any time, anywhere." And a master sergeant who has served with him most of the time for the last 20 years summed up the reason: "He makes you like it because he likes it so much himself." The sergeant added, "I remember cold winter afternoons at Fort Meade when one of those old-fashioned tanks would break down. Everybody would pitch in and work until nine or ten at night getting it fixed up, even though we had to be up again at four in the morning."

General Henry was one of the little group of Army officers completely convinced of the overwhelming possibilities of mechanized warfare long before events in Europe made them obvious. And in the American genius for organizing the use of machines, he has found many lessons that are adaptable to Army use. Riding in a taxicab one day, he began to think about the organization required to keep a big fleet of cabs in operation; so he went to a leading taxi company and made a thorough study of how it trained its drivers and serviced its vehicles. Then he made a similar study of a big cross-country bus company. Discussing with some fellow officers, some years ago, the problems involved in rapid movement of a bulky military outfit, he recalled that there was a circus in town and spent the next four days and nights with the circus roustabouts, learning how they managed to pack up and move from town to town with such rapidity and precision.

When the General was called from the command of a tank battalion in the summer of 1940 to create the Armored Force School, the facilities he found available consisted of an old, dilapidated summer mess hall and a lot of discouraged-looking red-clay land. No equipment, no metructors. Differ Configer was to be built from scratch. And in a hurry.

In a corner of the old mess hall the commandant worked out the organization of the school, placed orders for five million dollars' worth of equipment, supervised building operations, interviewed officers and non-coms who might fit into his faculty.

In November his first students arrived. A skeleton faculty was on hand — reserve officers who had been with the motor companies and the rubber companies, who had owned radio shops, who had taught in the big universities; non-coms with plenty of Army experience. Some of the new buildings were up, but they were still without heat, water or electricity. The men lived in tents, and carpenters hammered over their shoulders in the classrooms and shops.

It was over a year later that I saw the

EXPERT MECHANICS are vital. Breakdowns cost more tanks than gunfire school in action. Here was a group learning to be tank mechanics. In the shop was a tank which had been out on maneuvers. Mud-caked and bedraggled, it had obviously been through the wars. But with their check lists and wrenches and screw drivers and hammers, the boys were swarming over it with businesslike assurance. "When they're done with her," said the instructor in charge, "she'll be as good as new. And it won't be guesswork. Every last screw and bolt will have been checked."

From Theory to Practice

IN THE Wheeled-Vehicle Department a class was studying the skeletonized chassis of a half-track — a combination of tractor and truck. In the Communications Department was a class of embryo radio operators, practicing code signals. Soon they would progress to earphones, taking down messages. And still later they would be out in jolting, bucking scout cars, hanging on with one hand and sending messages with the other on keys strapped to their legs.

The progress Blitz College has made in one short year is almost unbelievable. But Steve Henry ducks the credit, insists it belongs to the officers and men who have worked with him.

All the students at the school are picked men. Some come from the Regular Army or National Guard, but more of them are selectees assigned to the school after aptitude tests have indicated their flair for mechanics, radio, or some other specialty. And after they have completed the course they go out into army of military technicians in the world. At first the goal was to turn out 800 commissioned officers and 7,200 enlisted men a year. Then the Army decided to triple the Armored Force. That meant the school would have to triple its output, at least.

the Armored Force to make it the greatest

General Henry took another page out of the book of American mechanical genius. In mass-production industries, he reasoned, you don't wait for one batch of products to be finished before starting another. Why couldn't the school have a continuous production line? So he broke down all the courses into phases, starting a new group every week or so and moving them on in a continuous belt. In addition, he put the school on two ahifts. These changes more than tripled capacity, without any increase in plant size.

"Most people don't realize," my General Staff friend in Washington told me, "that failure to handle and maintain mechanized equipment efficiently has caused more losses of vehicles in this war than actual shooting has. That goes for the Russians, the British and the Germans. A stalled tank is just as useless as one that has been battered out of action — perhaps even a liability, for the enemy might put it into action against you with a few quick repairs. I would rather have a hundred tanks in the hands of men who know how to keep them going than a thousand handled by incompetents."

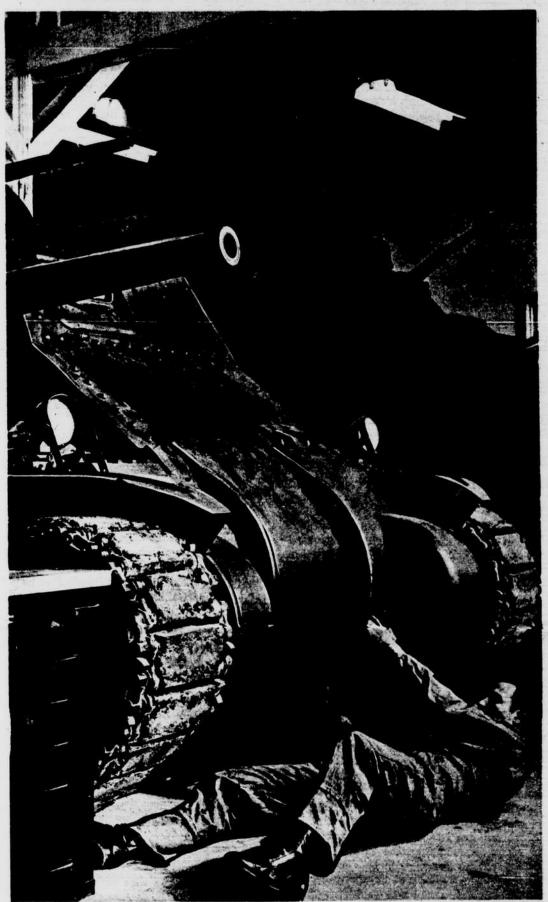

General Henry's Blitz College is giving us the men to drive our war machines — and they can keep 'em rolling.

et Story Complete on Two Pages

AN MCGARRY never wants to be anything but a good plain-clothes cop, and it is nothing but an accident that turns him into a specialist. The accident happens like this:

He is walking home one afternoon when he sees a crowd around a telegraph pole, looking up and pointing. A scrawny little cat is doing a balancing act on the very top of the pole, and yowling its head off. The black and white mutt that causes all this trouble is sitting on the ground wagging his tail happily. A few excited females are saying, "Poor little pussy, poor little pussy." And someone says they will have to send for the fire department to get her down.

At his Dan gets mad and loses his head. He asks in a loud voice, why do they want the fire department when there is a cop right on hand? Don't they know one cop is worth two fire companies including a deputy chief?

Before he has finished talking he has his coat off and is on his way up. He climbs and he climbs. He rips his trousers but he keeps at it, calling out all the time at the top of his voice, "Here, pussy-pussy-pussy!" When he gets to the top, that cat lets go with a right jab and leaves her claw marks all across his cheek. But he grabs her like it is all good fun, and comes down with her inside his shirt, kicking away with her hind feet like she is on a treadmill.

The crowd all try to slap him on the back, and one nosy little dame keeps asking questions. Dan tries to be polite like the commissioner wants, and says yes, he likes cats all right, but he wishes they would stay on the ground where they belong. Then someone else aims a camera and takes some pictures of him holding this cat and bending over her while she laps up a saucer of milk. All the time the nosy dame is asking him questions, and before he can escape she has his whole life story. He doesn't find out who she is until the next afternoon when the Evening Globe hits the street.

He and pussy are on page three, with photos. The little dame is a Globe feature writer, and she knocks off two columns about this hard-boiled plain-clothes cop that is such a great lover of animals, and especially cats. It seems there is such a sob in Dan's voice when he calls out, "Here, pussy-pussy-pussy!" that there isn't a dry eye on the block. Dan reads the whole thing and gets red in the face. He hopes the boys in the squad room skip Will allow this might and turn right back to the sports page.

H- should have known better. As soon as he puts his head through the door Sergeant Hansen grins happily and sings out, "Here, pussy-pussy-pussy!"

The lieutenant comes in. As soon as he sees Dan he starts snickering. "The cat-snatcher himself! Come in here and look what I got to show you!"

Dan goes into his office and there are about eight cats purring around. "They are all yours," says the lieutenant. "All sorts of people bring them in for you when they read in the paper you are so fond of cats. Also, there is a lady that wants to give you a pet monkey and an old guy that has a flock of Great Dane pups for you."

"I do not see what is so funny," says Dan, going dignified in a big way. "I tear my pants rescuing that cat, and then she cuts me up like a rookie in the barber's college."

There is a knock and in walks the inspector. When he sees Dan he starts laughing. Finally he pulls something out of his pocket. "I was bringing this home for my Persian," he says. "Take it with my compliments, officer."

So DAN takes the catnip outside and throws it in the street. Three times on the way to his Kitty's house traffic cops that know him sing out, "Pussy-pussy-pussy!" He punches Kitty's bell and steps inside, and before he even kisses her he says, "Have you a cat anywhere around that I can kick?"

"I was afraid of something like this," says Kitty, "as soon as I read the paper."

"They are calling me Pussy," growls Dan. "It's nothing to be ashamed of. You are fond of animals and you know it."

"Not any more," snaps Dan. "I hate animals and especially cats."

Kitty frowns. "There are two ways you can take this, Inspector. You can fold up under a little kidding, or you can be big enough to rise above it."

"I did not join the cops to be a cat-pulleroff-of-poles," says Dan.

"I thought you were above such petty vanity," says Kitty coldly. "Perhaps we had better drop the matter.'

It is all very well for Kitty to look down the most and say to will dop the mother, but the boys in Headquarters don't feel the same way. The next morning there are meows from all sides as soon as Dan comes into the squad room. There is a lot of talk about the new Treed Cat Squad and what its insignia will be, and someone suggests a coat-of-arms with two milk bottles rampant against a field and pounds Dan on the shoulder. "I just got a tip," he says. "The commissioner is forming a brand new squad to go along with Narcotics, Homicide, Pickpocket, and Missing Persons. It will be called the Treed Cat Squad - and you will be it!"

The sergeant has to wipe the tears out of his eyes he is laughing so hard. "Pussy McGarry!" he roars, slapping Dan on the back. "At the police parade next year you will march with a cat under each arm and a couple of litters trailing behind."

For the whole next week no one calls him anything but Pussy. Dan has to grit his teeth. He knows if the name doesn't wear off soon it will stick. The main reason it doesn't wear off is because the lieutenant and the inspector go along for the ride. They think it is very funny for a red-faced mug like Dan to carry around a handle like Pussy. But then one morning they are in no mood for laughing and are very solemn instead.

called into the office and get their orders. They are to spend all morning in the Whitefields section, which is a stretch of desolate country twenty miles outside the city limits, and are to keep their eyes peeled for any suspicious characters. Why there should be any suspicious characters in Whitefields Dan cannot guess, because it is just hundreds of acres of sand lots and swampland without a house on it and hardly a tree.

"What goes on this afternoon at Whitefields," explains the inspector, "is mighty important and strictly hush-hush. There is a certain guy and he invents a certain Something" — the inspector says it with a capital S — "and they are going to test that Something this afternoon."

"There will be important people there to see the test," adds the lieutenant. "In fact, there may be a certain Someone making a quick trip from Washington — incognito."

"If there has been a leak on this," says the inspector, "there may be some guys nosying around to see what this Something is and how it works, and these guys would not be loyal citizens of the United States. That is why they are testing this Something here instead of at a regular proving ground. We will have plenty of cops on hand for the test, but you boys are to take a preliminary look around."

A CAR takes them out to Whitefields and they scatter. It is about the dullest morning Dan ever puts in. He doesn't see a soul, and Whitefields is a dreary stretch of land, hot under the morning sun. About noon, he makes for the shade of a tall maple tree which is about the only shade in sight. He comes up mopping his brow and fumbling for his pipe — and then he sees the little blonde kid.

She is some farmer's little kid, maybe ten years old, straw-blonde and tiny, and she is sitting at the foot of the tree crying her eyes out. She is sobbing so hard she doesn't know Dan is there until he bends over and pulls her curls. "Cheer up, Blondie," he says. "If you are lost I will set you straight. The state road is only a quarter of a mile away, though you would think this dump is in the middle of nowhere."

 I was taking a short-cut home." She mops her eyes with her dress. "It's my Bopsy."

"I do not see any Bopsy," says Dan. The kid points straight up into the tree. "Bopsy's up there," she says.

Sure enough, there is a kitten about the size of a doll's muff 'way up on a branch half way to the top. Dan groans and gives a quick look around. He's in luck so far — the nearest cop is a hundred yards away and isn't paying any attention. "I got to be going, Blondie," Dan says. "Your Bopsy will come down by himself."

"He will not! A mean old dog chased him and he's scared. Oh, what will I do?"

"Send for the fire department!" says Dan.

"He'll die of fright before they get here," sobs the infant, and starts crying some more. Dan looks at her, thinking it is tough the way kids have such bad times with their Bopsys. This is where he makes his big mistake, because before he can get moving the kid lets him have it. "Won't you please save Bopsy for me, mister?" she says.

Dan knows if he is caught saving another cat he will carry that "Pussy" handle to his grave. So he shakes his head. "I will find someone to save him, Blondie. I got sort of an allergy for cats myself."

"Does that mean you don't like them?" "Not in trees," says Dan.

"You would like Bopsy," says the kid, "if you climbed up and saw how cute he is."

"Blondie," says Dan, "it's hard for you to understand, but if there is another cat in my life I am a marked man. I'll take you to the movies on my day off, or play hopscotch with you. But count me out in this Bopsy business. Get the fire department."

Her eyes flash. "You're mean and I hate you! You're probably a criminal. Oh, I wish I could find a policeman!" And she cries harder than ever.

It is more than Dan can take. The tree looks like an easy one to climb. He figures he can make it up and down again in ten minutes. "Blondie," he says, "if I save your Bopsy, will you tell anyone?"

"If you save Bopsy you will be a hero, and I'll tell everybody. I'll write letters about you to all the newspapers."

"Stop it!" cries Dan. "Cross your heart you won't breathe a word!"

The kid crosses her heart and Dan strips off his coat. He gets through the lower limbs and keeps climbing until he sees this ball of fur only four feet above him. But the way Dan looks at Bopsy does something to that cat. Bopsy does a running broad jump and lands on a lower branch. The next second he is on the ground; the kid is gathering him up in her arms and screaming with joy.

Dan sighs with relief. "Now scram, Blondie. Mum's the word or I'm a ruined man!"

She laughs and kisses her hands to him. "I'll give Bopsy a big hug for you!" she calls back, and off she skips.

Dan starts to come down. But before he can move he spots them. His blood runs cold. He's too late. He's trapped! A parade of cars and motorcycles is coming across the sand lots toward him at top speed. The motorcyc'e cops are his buddies from downtown — he can recognize the inspector's car. He cannot get down without being seen. That means he will have to explain; before night the word will spread all over town — Pussy McGarry does it again!

He flattens up against the trunk of the tree and doesn't move. Behind four carloads of local cops comes two cars full of army men, and behind these a car filled with out-of-town plain-clothes dicks. Then comes a long open car that looks official and Dan gets a glimpse of the Someone from Washington.

Drawing up in back are two army trucks. One is filled with soldiers and the other has the certain Something, which is the size of a trunk and is bedded down under canvas.

THE cops spread out all over the place, and the generals and colonels pile out of their car right underneath Dan's tree. The trucks pull off about fifty yards; everyone gathers 'round and all look very mysterious.

There is nothing Dan can do now, so he straddles a limb comfortably and watches what goes on. One of the generals starts making a speech that Dan can't hear because the general keeps his voice real low. Then he blows a whistle and the soldiers stand ready around the truck that has the Something under canvas.

Dan is now so interested he forgets all about cats. The whistle blows again. The soldiers jump on the truck and tear away the canvas. What they uncover isn't so much from where Dan sits it looks like odd pieces of scrap iron and steel junk.

Then the soldiers fall to. They pull that junk to pieces and put it together again with as nice a piece of teamwork and timing as Dan has ever seen. In less than one minute the Something begins to take shape. Before Dan realizes what is happening, it turns into a sleek three-inch field piece mounted on wheels and ready for business.

There is an excited buzz of talk from the generals, and they stand around that gun patting it and stroking it like it is Whirlaway and has just romped home in the Derby. Then the whistle blows again; the soldiers take a running leap at the gun and pull it to bits and pack it up. Then, just to show how easy it is, they put it together again. This time they swing it around and raise it and lower it. Dan hopes he is going to see it work, and sure enough the very next moment the general sings out, "Load!"

Dan is terribly excited. He is at the world premiere of a gun that may help make history! He is sure getting a kick out of it even if he is up in the balcony. "Aim!" barks the general. "Take the top off that maple!"

Dan grins. He looks around for the poor maple that is going to have its head chopped off. He can't see it anywhere, so he peeps back at the gun, which is now swinging around until he can look straight into its ugly snout. He wonders why it stops there, and all of a sudden he realizes that when the general says "maple" he means Dan's own personal reserved seat. He is a stand-in for the bull's eye and that three-inch gun is just about fifty yards away!

There isn't time to move. Anyway he is scared stiff like the petrified forest of Arizona. The whole world suddenly blows up, and a locomotive screeches by above him with its whistle wide open. He has both arms around the tree trunk, and his face is pressed up against it. The only way he can tell he is still alive is by the taste of some bark that he bites off the tree when the gun goes off. A shower of leaves and small branches drift down from above. Then something else comes down from the top of that tree and it's not leaves. It's a guy.

This guy comes sliding down, legs locked around the trunk. He is as scared as Dan, but he is doing something about it. What he is doing is getting behind Dan and at the same time pointing a revolver at him. "Silence!" he whispers. "Not a move!"

Looking into a revolver is a relief after looking into a three-inch gun, but still it is not the thing Dan would pick to have pointing at h's stomach. The little guy looks like he means business. He is dressed in brown coveralls the same shade as the bark, and has leaves stuck in his hat. Around his waist he has a camera strapped tight, a camera with a telescopic lens in front. He digs the gun into Dan's ribs and he whispers, "You will stay here without a sound until they have all left." "And then?" Dan whispers back.

The guy grins. "And then you will continue to stay. Stay permanently, if you get what I mean." He twists the gun a little, and pushes his camera in back of him so that it is out of Dan's reach. "I made a few snapshots of that noisy little fellow down there," he says happily. "The enlargements should be excellent."

Dan glares. "You-you-wise guy, huh?"

"Very wise," says the little guy, grinning. "And very clever. In my profession, if you are not wise and clever — Himmel!"

The world blows up again. The locomotive rushes past over their heads. The tree groans. They freeze stiff with fear. But it is Dan that comes out of it first this time. He throws both arms around this guy and gets the revolver pinned to the guy's side. The guy swears and they teeter on the limb. But not for long. They roll off together, bounce off from the limb below and land together in the rear seat of the general's open car, parked below.

Dan is the one underneath. He is out but not like a light. It is a slow fade. And just before everything turns black he hears a voice. It is the gun-shooting general and he yells, "What was it — crows?" Then comes another voice. The Someone who is incognito shouts, "Crows? Eagles at least!"

The inspector is slapping a wet handkerchief against Dan's forchead when he opens his eyes, and Sergeant Hansen is on the other side looking worried. "Easy does it," says the inspector. "When you feel well enough Mr. You-Know-What wants to shake hands with you. That guy you nabbed had filmed the whole show." Hansen pats Dan's back. "A nice piece of work, Pussy," he says. The inspector frowns. "Forget the 'Pussy' stuff, sergeant. That is no name for a cop like McGarry." Then he looks at Dan. "But just what were you doing up that tree?"

Dan is getting red. "Well, I-I just climbed up to -I just sort of -I just -". The inspector grins. "You were just catching a spy," he says. Then he winks. "We will let it go at that," he says. The End

ALLA came to the White House about two years ago, and sat right down by the President's bed. That was the beginning.

When he started traveling with the President by train, a porter had to drag him to the baggage room. He cried, and tears ran down his little black face. One night F. D. R. said, "Well, would you like to stay here?" Falla almost wagged off his tail. "Take his leash off," said the President. Falla dashed back to him, snuggled up close, and pretended to go sound asleep. Since then, on the train he has always slept in the President's car, and goes nearly everywhere with him by auto and ship.

He's a Presidential adviser, too. Wags his tail at some visitors, ignores others.

DOG-IN-WAITING . . . Falla's job, as he sees it, is always to be on hand. He never misses, if he can help it. The President made it clear that TAKING THE AIR with the President is Falla's favorite outdoor sport. He missed out on one ride, though. When the Boss was starting for his third inauguration, Falla jumped in. "Sorry, old man," said F. D. R. "Not this time."

UP! . . . Falla doesn't really have to be bribed by a tidbit to stand on his hind legs. The sailors on the Presidential yacht have taught him to do it at the command: "Attention." But, bribe or not, he always finds time to make friends in the galley.

UNTIL OCTOBER, 1941, Patricia Peardon was just one of the 1,220,790 seventeen-year-old girls in the United States. She had a swell mother and a dad who is a Navy commander. She was beginning her second year at Columbia University. She had a nice little allowance. She had all the dates ahe wanted. She was doing well with her dancing classes. She was beginning to get a glamor complex and was doing a fair job of imitating Veronica Lake. Then — bang! — it happened. Every schoolgirl's dream came true for her: she was made the star of what is now one of Broadway's biggest hits — "Junior Miss," adapted from one of the season's biggest book hits.

FOR YEARS, after school, she had played roles in radio dramas. But, until "Junior Miss," she had been back of stage footlights only once — a bit part in a road company. That meant nothing to the producers who had tested 800 girls for the part of Judy Graves, 14, dumpy, ugly duckling. Pat was No. 801.

She is still the same appealing junior miss but stardom has affected her in a lot of ways:

1) She had just started a diet. It was working. But Judy Graves is plump. She eats continuously throughout the play. Since the show . must go on, Pat's diet went off.

2) Her contract came as she began her second year at Columbia University. Homework stopped. But she plans to start again in February.

3) Her mother raised her allowance. She now gets $7.50 a week. The rest of her star's salary gove inter Defocue Prude and the back

4) All her life she's wanted a purple-and-gold evening gown. Now she has it. Of course, she's in hock to her mother for it until her birthday in April. But it was worth it. Above — the ugly duckling. Below — the result of four months' allowance. — JERRY MASON

IS IT POLITE TO ARGUE?

HERE is nothing I like better than an ardent come-back-atme letter from a none-the-lessfriendly reader.

One such correspondent writes:

"You said recently that 'to smile, to look interested, to say what is agreeable and to avoid contropersial topics that might sive offense, are the ordinary exactions of courtesy expected of each one who is either a guest, or a hostess or host.'

"Well, excuse me, please, for differing with you! As a result of these precepts people are so bored with life that 10,000 of the well-to-do commit suicide every year in the United States, not counting the half-way dissatisfied who try a new shuffle in Reno.

"If these could have the monotonous pattern of their thoughts shaken up by listening to new ideas and arguing, they might have the satisfaction of finding backing for their views, or of changing their opinions for the better. Instead, following your advice, everybody smiles and talks about nothing. No wonder Cafe Society smokes and drinks!

"And what is the result in our country of dodging the two great subjects most vital to our existence - politics and religion? Graft in politics. The great danger of lost faith in religion. "I quote your advice to the tactless hushand:

" 'On ordinary social occasions, it would not be a mark against his integrity, but rather a credit to his intelligence to turn the conversation into shallow channels."

Yes - if you pick the right time and place, says this authority

by Emily Post

"Why isn't it intelligent to shake an unconcerned person out of his placid sleep? You wouldn't indulge in shallow conversation with someone whose house was on fire.

"That is the condition our country is in. Politics being controversial, people of social advantages, education and intelligence play cards and talk pleasantly about nothing. But it is of vital importance that those who can think shall not only do so, but shall try to put their thoughts across. "Why don't you draw up some rules for discussion so it won't be an unpleasant argument or a fight? Tell us how we can think and at the same time be pleasant."

In answering this, Dear Mr. X -. I agree with you, if you merely put in a few qualifying hows and wheres and to whoms! The point where we seemed to disagree is that I was discussing a group of dinner guests not well known to each other; you, on the other hand, interpret conversation where strangers are present as being the only occasion when conversation is possible.

I must repeat that, at a party among strangers, a tactful person should think softly lest he unknowingly say something, to him unimportant, which to one of another religion, race or creed, might be annoying, upsetting or even wounding.

However, when we are with those whom we know well, the only limits upon what we say are those made by consideration for the individual feelings of our friends. To discuss a subject seriously - all? And energetically too! But our energy should carry our arguments smoothly forward. No. I don't believe in weak, idealess people any more than you do. But I insist that the rules of courtesy must tabu certain topics in order that conversation may be kept out of unpleasant channels.

SWORDFISH have rammed their swords through as much as 14 inches of hard wood. In fact, they have attacked ships so effectively that sailors once grouped them with such dangers of the sea as icebergs and storms.

PICTURES of Theodore Roosevelt's Rough Riders charging up San Juan Hill on horseback during the Spanish-American War are based only on the fact that it was organised as a cavalry unit. Actually, the horses were left in Florida and the "Riders" carried out all of their Cuban campaigns on foot.

"MISS" was considered a flippant, childish and unflattering title — until recently. During colonial times, all ladies were called Mrs. — even at the tender age of six!

A WOMAN'S clothes, on the average, weigh only one-fourth as much as a man's. But the miscellany she carries in her purse are twice as heavy as the articles in his pockets.

PLAYING CARDS served as the first paper money ever issued in North America. When French troops in Canada mutinied in 1685 because their pay had not arrived, the governor wrote a money value on playing cards, signed them and paid off the men. This "pay-off" currency remained in circulation for almost a century.

EYEGLASSES were considered such necessary accessories to dignity in 17th century Europe that some artists painted them on portraits of St. Peter and the other Disciples.

"I'm going to redesign our house it looks too much like Hitler!" For this "new-type" cleanser combines speed and safety in a way less modern cleansers have never done before. It contains a special agent to dissolve grease! Hence even greasy pots and pans come clean and bright without hard scouring. Sinks, stoves, bathtubs fairly gleam without the drudgery of hard scrubbing.

So you're through far faster—actually 50% faster than with the former Old Dutch, America's favorite for years. Equally important, new, improved Old Dutch is SAFE for porcelain, metal or painted surfaces. It doesn't scratch because it's made with flaky Seismotite. Economical too, a little goes so far. POULET MADRAS

disjointed	14 cup almonds, blanched
Seasoned flour	1 cup seedless raising
2 tablespoons butter	14 cup boiling water
1 cup giblet stock	1/2 cup sherry or sherry
3 large onions, sliced	flavoring to taste
6 firm tomatoes	14 cup bouillon

Dredge chicken with seasoned flour; place in baking pan; dot with butter. Bake in hot oven (450° F.) 20 minutes; lower heat to moderate (350° F.); bake 1 hour longer. Baste occasionally with giblet stock. Meanwhile, sauté onions, tomatoes, green peppers, almonds and raisins in a little hot fat or salad oil. Add boiling water; cover and simmer 1/2 hour. Remove chicken from pan. Pour sherry and bouillon into pan; thicken slightly if desired; add chopped giblets; simmer 5 minutes. Arrange chicken on platter; top with sautéed vegetable mixture. Served with rice, this makes a one-dish meal. Yield: 6 portions.

Few grains pepper Wash rice; dry thoroughly. In a large skillet sauté onion in butter until soft but not brown. Add rice and sauté 2 minutes, stirring constantly with a fork. Add bouillon, salt and pepper. Cover closely; cook over low heat until rice has absorbed bouillon and is tender (about 45 minutes). Yield: 6 portions.

SUNEDO SOUP

This is one of the most popular dishes of the deep South. It is found on the tables of people in every walk of life, and is a special favorite with fishermen and others living near the sea and the many bayous.

1 soup bone (314-4 1	oounds) Salt and pepper
1 knuckle of veal	2 pounds fresh or canned
1/2 cup sliced onion	okra, cut in rings
1 stalk celery	2 cups tomatoes
8 cups cold water	2 cups kernel corn
1 cup tiny	green lima beans

Place soup bone, veal knuckle, onion, celery and water in large kettle. Bring to boil; simmer four hours, adding more water as necessary. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Add okra, tomatoes, corn and lima beans. Simmer four hours longer. Remove from heat; chill over night. Skim off excess fat. Simmer four hours before serving. Remove bones and most of meat. Shred one cup meat and return to soup. (If desired, flaked cooked crabmeat may be added just before serving, using one cup for six servings.) The soup will keep in a refrigerator 3 to 4 days, but if crabmeat is desired, it must be added fresh each day. Approximate yield: 12 portions.

BOTTLENECK. When my wife called out, "Honey, please come here a moment," I should have been on my guard. A woman simply can't be married to a man 24 years and call him "honey" without wanting sugar.

But all unsuspecting I went — and there stood The Woman of My Choice with a bottle of olives in her hand and Defeat chiseled on her face. "Please open the olives for me."

Will someone kindly tell me why olive growers put their olives in non-openable bottles? Some of them have cork tops — the bottles, not the growers... although I wouldn't be surprised. All you've got to do with the cork tops is to jab 'em out with a fork. But the kind with metal tops you couldn't jab open with a canthook.

"Just give me a wet towel," I said. I took the bottle firmly in my left hand and the towel in my right hand and twisted — my face. That's all. I twisted, I struggled. But the metal top didn't budge.

Still full of fight, I turned to my wife and said, "Haven't you anything to open bottles?"

"Yes," she said sweetly. "You!"

I finally found a gadget and put it around the neck of the bottle. But it didn't fit. No oliveopener gadget in the world fits! I haven't the statistics, but I'm ready to fight for this belief. "Why don't you heat the neck of the bottle?" I asked.

"I did before I called you."

I flew into it again, my own neck pretty well heated now. But not a yield.

"I'll take it down to the basement."

I gave it the works - and it gave me the laugh.

"I'm going to break the cursed thing," I said.

"Don't," said my wife. "That would get glass • in them. Just leave the bottle here. I'll get along some way."

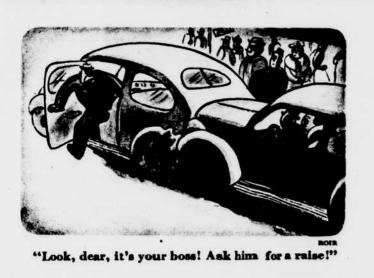

I sure left it there.

After a while my wife called out, "Conne to dinner." When I went in, danged if the olives weren't heaped temptingly on a plate. "How did you get it open?" I gasped.

"I don't know. I just gave the lid another twist and it opened."

Loyal wife

That was her pose at the murder trial. But now it was over . . . and she could tear off the mask

by Sewell Peaslee Wright

Illustrated by George C. Garland

HE NEWSPAPERS called Elaine a "loyal wife."

She had read about other loyal wives, of course, but not with any particular interest, because murders and police and trials had seemed so utterly remote from the pleasant and peaceful orbit of her life.

Even now, after her picture had been in the papers time and again - a formal portrait, a snap of her in a bathing suit, a flashbulb newspaper shot of her getting out of a taxi - it all seemed impossible, unreal.

The captions under the pictures were still unbelievable: "Mrs. Gregory Hammond, wife of accused man, is loyal to mate"; "Hammond's wife sticks; says husband's story true"; "Lovely wife of alleged love-slayer has unshaken failh'."

"Unshaken faith?" What bitter, bitter irony ! Faith in the man who had so brutally deceived her . . . betrayed her? There was no faith left in her. nor love, nor anything except loneliness and emptiness.

But Mr. Stevenson, Greg's lawyer, had been utterly merciless:

"In cases of this kind, Mrs. Hammond, the attitude of the wife is the greatest single factor in determining the ultimate reaction of the jury. If you desert your husband now, repudiate him, he will go to jail for the rest of his life, at very best. It is even quite possible he will go to the chair. If you stick with him, the loyal, courageous, believing wife, we can win a verdict of not guilty. It's as simple as that, andit's entirely up to you."

But how about the evidence? Can't it be proved that --

"Murder trials, my dear Mrs. Hammond, are not always won or lost on the factual evidence," he had interrupted, his eyes hard and cynical. "The psychological factors are often the determinant vort it jury might send Gregory Hammond to jail, or to the chair, for example, but they would not be likely to convict the husband of such a charming, devoted, appealing young woman as yourself. Is my meaning clear?" "I - I think so."

"Then you'll forgive and forget and be the loyal wife?" "Forgive? Forget? I can't!"

Mr. Stevenson had shrugged, and his lean face had set in sharp, hard planes. "You're pronouncing sentence on your husband, then. Is that what you wish?"

"No! Oh, no. You tell me what I must do. I'll do my best - "

So Stevenson had told her what to say and what to do and even how to dress and make up, and she had become the "loyal wife" of a man who had shot down a rival for the favors of his mistress. That was the way one of the tabloids had put it.

It wasn't, really, quite like that. Greg had told Elaine the whole story - told her with his great haggard eyes pleading desperately for understanding and forgiveness -- and Elaine believed him. Greg had never been a convincing liar, and his whole account of what had happened that night rang clear with truth.

"It was - just one of those things,

Elaine. You remember when I hired her; after Miss Dawson got married and quit.

"I was a fool, of course. Rita was pretty and she always wore — well, you know what I mean. She made a man pay attention to her; look at her. And she — well — she knew what she was about, exactly. Rita never pretended anything else.

"Anyway, that's the way it started. She had been going out with this fellow, Gibson, and he was pretty crazy about her. When he found out about about us, he waited for me outside the office one night and told me I'd have to stop seeing Rita or else.

"Gibson was a big, ugly-looking brute, with a police record, but Rita laughed it off by saying he was always talking big and never doing anything about it, and when the weeks went by without hearing anything more from him, I came to believe her. But I got a gun, just the same, and carried it in the car.

"Then, that night, I was taking her home. It was pretty late; after two. Rita and I had — had been quarrelling. She had drunk too much, and made a spectacle of herself, and she didn't like it when I told her about it.

"When we drove up in front of her apartment and stopped, Gibson came out from behind a tree and ran up to the car. 'I warned you, Hammond,' he said. 'Now you're goin' to get it!' He made a quick movement, and Rita screamed. I was pretty badly rattled. I reached for the gun, and fired. Twice. Gibson went down, clawing at the sides of the car. I can still hear the sound of it, in my sleep —

"That — that's all there was to it. It was self-defense, even if he didn't have a gun on him. And even if Rita has turned on me and lied about the whole thing; said that I was jealous of Gibson, and had dared him to do anything about it — "

"Of course, Greg," Elaine had said. "You believe me, darling? You know I'm telling the truth? You—you forgive me, Elaine?"

She had told him yes. That was only in keeping with her role of loyal wife. Actually, of course, it was a lie. She did not forgive him. She never could. Not ever...

THE jury was out only a couple of hours. When they filed in, they were smiling — not at Stevenson or Greg, but at Elaine.

"I told you! I told you!" whispered Stevenson triumphantly. "Listen!"

Listen? It was such a silly thing to say. Elaine could even hear the men breathing in the hushed silence of the room.

"Not guilty!" said the foreman. He addressed the judge, but the other eleven men looked at Elaine, still suiting, making her a present of their verdict — of her husband's life.

And Elaine smiled back at them through a sudden rush of tears, and then there was a crowd around her and flashbulbs flickering, and a tumult which seemed to revolve around her, crushing her.

She tore herself away, forced her-any more. It was just a furnished house, which would soon be bare and ugly as her life was bare and ugly now, with a "For Rent" sign in front, and naked windows staring at the street.

She would get a tiny apartment somewhere, and start picking up some few of the old threads of her life. Perhaps she'd even put out new lines, make new friends.

Elaine went into the bedroom, hastily stripped off her clothes, and took a shower. The action was symbolic ritualistic.

She wanted to wash herself clean of the trial, of everything connected with it, of Greg, of all the things that had been part and parcel of their life together.

A phrase Greg often used came to mind as she scrubbed her body dry: "All washed up." That was the utmost in finality; it meant a complete and irrevocable ending.

CAREFULLY she dressed herself again, fresh from the skin out. She was all washed up.

Everything was going to be new, and different, and separate.

Elaine thought of things she had seen under the microscope in college: amoebas or cells or something that swam slowly in the bright circular field of the instrument, and then elongated, drew together in the middle, and divided into two separate cells, each with its own nucleus, each with its own protoplasm, each going its own separate way.

That's exactly what had happened to their marriage — to her and to Greg.

Only it hadn't been a natural process. They had been driven apart by the thing Greg had done. But the result was the same; they were two entities now, and not one...

It was nearly dusk when Greg came home. There were still dark circles under his eyes, and the lines that bracketed his mouth had deepened. He had lost weight, and his clothes hung loosely from his frame. Elaine hadn't noticed these things before, but in familiar surroundings they were startlingly apparent.

"It doesn't seem real yet," Greg said wearily. "I can't realize it's true. That it's all over — that I'm free to look at the sky and the trees and walk down the street and breathe fresh air. Nobody knows what those things can mean to a man until he's been in — in jail."

"I suppose that's true." Elaine's voice was calm and utterly without emotion. "I'm very happy over the outcome, Greg."

33 succeed toward her kelding out his arms. "I owe it all to you," he said. "I -- "

Elaine moved away from him swiftly.

"Don't, Greg. You mustn't. I'm glad I could help; I believe you were justified in — in doing what you did. But surely you realize we — can't go mixed up, dragging you through a thing like this just to save my own hide. All I can say is I'm sorry. I'll go, right away."

"There's no hurry, Greg." Elaine moved toward the door — away from the slack, sagging figure in the old chair.

It was hard to talk like this to someone you had loved. Hard to crack the whip over a head already bowed. Hard to desert the ship.

But she mustn't weaken! She must remember her pride and her hurt and all those staring eyes in the courtroom.

She must remember the thing that Greg had done to her, to their life together...

"No hurry." Greg nodded, repeating her words drearily. "That's right. No hurry. There's nothing left to do, is there?" He started to lift himself out of the chair, but Elaine shook her head quickly.

"Sit still," she said. "You're tired. I'll pack a few things for you. You can send for the rest later."

She hurried out of the room, but on the stairway ahe paused, listening.

The sound came again, and it stabbed her in the throat. Silently, actuated by some compelling inner force, she retraced her steps until she stood unseen in the doorway.

Greg's face was buried in his hands, and his bowed shoulders were shaking.

It was the first time Elaine had ever seen — and heard — a grown man go utterly to pieces, and it was terrible. The sobs that wracked his body were like claws tearing at her heart.

If only he had defended himself: argued, bluffed, pleaded, argued, bluffed, pleaded, done something! She could have answered his arguments with cold logic, called his bluffs, denied his pleadings, turned a cold shoulder to anything he might have done—save this mute and helpless admission of his fault.

'He was so much like the little boy they had wanted and who had never come to them; the son who was to look like his dad, and be called Gregory also, and Greg, Junior, was to be the big brother of the little girl who was to look like her mother and be called Jeanne...

"Greg, darling!" she whispered. "Please — you mustn't. You'll hurt yourself. Oh, Greg!"

SHE was kneeling beside him now, her arms were about his shaking body, and there were tears coursing down her cheeks.

Incide also not not more and the bitterness had gone from her.

"Elaine!" He swept her to him, and his arms were brutally strong, holding her with a fierce possessiveness made iron-hard by fear. "You — you don't want me to go?"

"No, Greg," she whispered, running her fingers through his hair. The years self through the crowd. She had done what she had to do. She had been the loyal wife.

Now she could go somewhere, anywhere, and find peace and quiet and strength again.

It was a strange place to her, now, this place which had been home. The furnishings, the very walls, looked different, and Elaine knew that was because she looked at them through different eyes.

Well, it didn't matter. This was not her home — her home and Greg's — "We can't — Why, Elaine! What do you mean?"

But the forced look of hurt surprise faded swiftly under Elaine's steady gaze. "All right," he said, and he sagged more deeply in the chair. "I understand. I deserve that — and more. Much more."

HEROES OF THE FISH NET

Bombs, bullets, mines can't frighten Britain's refugees from across the Channel

The little French fishing boat was lounging home under sail with the season's best catch of lobsters when the black Dornier came round the corner of a cloud, and dived on them. The first blast of bullets missed clean and ripped up the choppy sea on the starboard bow. The plane banked and turned, but instead of coming back for a second go, the pilot put her nose up, and took her away.

The fishermen, who had thrown themselves flat, got to their feet, ready to duck, apprehensive of some trick. Then they saw the other aircraft — a big Catalina of the British coastal patrol service — and they knew why the Nazi plane had not come back. Dornier 115's don't like the big, heavily-armed "cats."

And so I had rescued langouste for supper in the inn that night, and Pierre, skipper of the boat, downed two bottles of my burgundy in toasts to "la victoire." We might have been supping in a Breton fishing village. Actually we were in a blacked-out inn in a little port "somewhere in England." But on a day when the fishing fleet is riding at anchor in the little stone harbor, the blue-and-yellow-bloused fishermen patching sails, coiling lines, mending nets, and tinkering with Diesel engines, the women clumping over the cobbles, the children running around, you might easily imagine yourself in le Treport or Painpol.

One Jump Ahead of Hitler

THE presence on Britain's coasts of French and Delyian Sching schemion is nes of the great sagas of the war. About 2,000 of the fisherfolk from the opposite shore have found refuge on the English side since the Nazis overran their countries, and are now helping to keep the British in sea food. Most set out just a jump ahead of the Nazi invader. Some were sunk by U-boats or planes in the Channel. Some got over with all their equipment; others with none, engines out of action, sails perforated, and corks plugging up bullet holes below the water line. Ordinarily, the British wouldn't have welcomed a new addition to the fishing industry, which has been declining for years. But the navy has made heavy demands on trawlers, and hundreds of Englishmen who would normally be fishing are mine-sweeping and hunting "tin fish." Air-raiders have taken their toll of the fishing force left. And fish can ease the strain on Britain's food supply. So the refugees and their boats were welcome enough. But they had to be settled and re-equipped; this took time and money. American dollars helped — dollars raised by the "Refugees of England" organization headed by the Honourable Mrs. Jack Crawshay, with J. B. Priestley and Somerset Maugham (himself a refugee from his Riviera home) helping, and the Countess of Abingdon heading the American committee. The fisher refugees would have had a lean time but for this help.

It was a good investment. They're as ready as the local fishermen to brave mines, bombs and bullets. What's more, they have been able to teach the natives a thing or two about fishing.

Tricks of the Trade

FOR instance, in one fishing port the weather was rough and the British hadn't been out in weeks. One morning, to the astonishment of the natives, the Belgians put to sea. What did the "furriners" think they'd catch? It wasn't fishing weather. The fish had all cleared out to parts unknown.

But the newcomers had spotted something the natives hadn't seen — because they'd never looked for it. They were sprats, quite close inshore, a huge shoal of them. Sprats never had been a catch in those waters. The Flemish nets took in the shining little fish until the boats were loaded to the gunwales. The villagers gaped when they came back and spilled the silver flood on the quayside.

In another fishing village there were some unhappy Bretons. They wanted to fish, but everything was against them. They had engine troubles, and no bait. Winter was en route, and the British fishers, an easier-going let that the newcourse had already stored away their lines.

Then the Belgians up the coast sent word they had made a good catch of squib. The Bretons bought it for bait, went out and came back with fine catches of cod, plaice, turbot and sole. The natives were a bit shamefaced when authorities suggested they change their habits and emulate the more enterprising Bretons.

The new settlers live in little houses on the beach rim, mostly, but their tang and color permeate the neighborhood. They're great toast drinkers, these Bretons and Belgians. They drink to the weather, to a good catch, and to the coastal-command flying boats that keep a weather eye on them in the fishing fields. They don't drink to "after the war"; it's always "après la victoire," when they will joyfully set their sails for home — in a boche-free land.

Jillows. There is betrayal if your hands reveal unquiet nerves or a lack of repose. What other tale can these wound-up fingers tell but that their owner is tense?

Al'Ease. For a lesson in screnity, note the graceful pose of these tranquil hands. They depict the poise and power that come from self-confidence and quietness.

Snobbish. A down-turned palm is right, if a visiting diplomat wishes to kiss your hand, but this is a sorry - even snobbish - way to extend greeting to a guest.

Hassdy! An upturned palm is your gracious expression of friendly intimacy, a gesture of welcome and warmth handed down to us by our hospitable ancestors.

Stip. Nothing is so unattractive to gase upon as a sprawling feminine hand in which the cigarette is seized, man-fashion, with thumb and fingers in a tight clutch.

Stacs. See the graceful arch of the hand that holds a cigarette, like a tiny torch, between two fingers. Such a pose helps you to safeguard fingers from brownish stains.

Affected. The baby finger that springs out of hand, when lifting a coffee cup and saucer, or other objects, is mark of silly affectation - a lady will have none of it.

It's a scientific fact: Abrasives con-tained indentifrices are causing millions of people to slowly injure their teeth.

These abrasives consist of tiny, hard particles so small you can't see or feel them. Yet as you brush them back and forth, they gradually wear away the softer part of your teeth wherever this part is exposed.

Not a paste-not a powder-Teel is a ruby-clear LIQUID containing ab-solutely no abrasives. Thus, it cannot injure your teeth.

Teel uses a new-type, patented cleansing discovery that bursts into thousands of tiny, cleansing bubbles in the mouth which instantly go to work to help remove the daily accumu-lation of decaying food particles and dulling surface film. Thus your teeth

HOW WELL do you know the law that protects you and your neighbors? It can be tricky at times. Take the "SERVANT" PROBLEM for instance: next time you hire a man to fix up that piazza railing, remember the Plight of Mrs. Porter:

Mrs. Porter employed Mr. Saterno to paint her cottage. Besides the pleasure of having the job done, she enjoyed the satisfaction of bossing Mr. S. Alas...

... Mr. Saterno carelessly tipped over a pail of paint — and unfortunately Henry, the milkman, was walking past the ladder and the paint pail fell on his head.

The disgruntled Henry had to spend a good deal of time home from work while his scalp wound was healing. Is Mrs. Porter liable for his injury?

Decision

Mrs. Porter is liable under the particular circumstances of this case.

HERE's the point to remember: Under the law, there is a vital difference between a servant and an independent contractor. Mus. 1. is DOBUTICS was no Cownital. if she basis hired Mr. Saterno to paint the cottage with the understanding that he was to use his own methods, and that she would not exert any control over those methods, Mr. S. would have been acting as a "contractor," and he alone would have been liable to Henry the milkman. But Mrs. P. insisted on having Mr. S. do things her way — therefore he was her "servant." And the law says, under these circumstances, "The act of the servant is considered the act of the master."

AMERICA is pushing its production of "land battleships" to record heights. Light, medium and heavy tanks are all now in production at seven American plants, with output at about onethird of the projected peak and expected to reach at least 4,000 tanks a month by the end of this year. Light American tanks already have proved their tough fighting qualities in the British sweep across Libya. Their bigger brothers in the medium and heavy class are just as good. In fire power, armor and engine performance there is no better tank made than the American product and probably none as good. And, without slowing production, improvements are constantly being made. These pictures show production of medium tanks in the Chrysler tank arsenal.

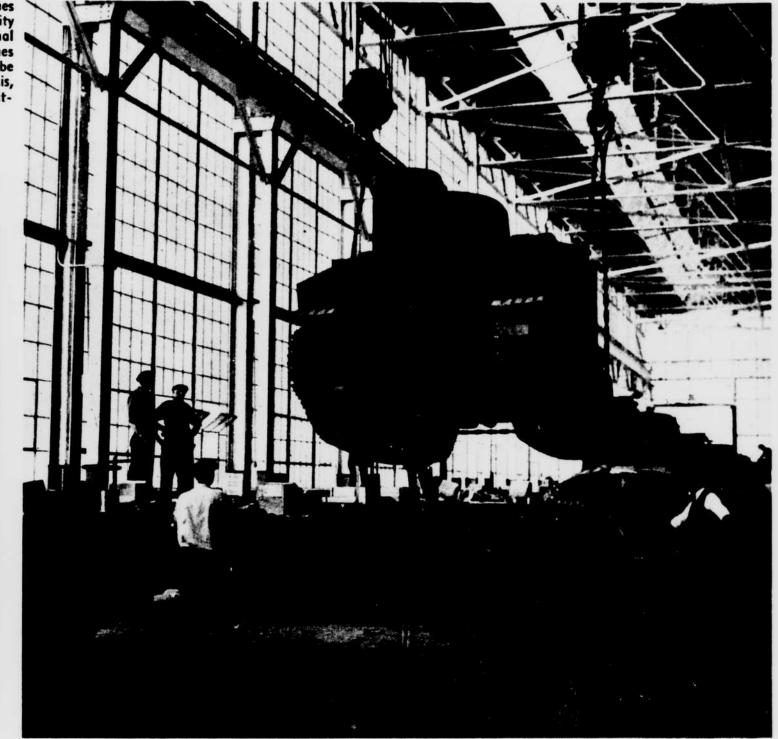

Installing a handy little gadget—a machine gun—under the instrument panel. It is so arranged that the driver may operate it almost as a part of the tank's driving mechanism.

This picture illustrates what a heavy job tank production is from the standpoint of tooling a plant. This giant tool is machining the two tons of touch steel in the turret of an M-3 tank as the turret is carried at an angle against the cutter. The workman does it with electrical buttons—after the tool has been made.

An M-3 tank, completed and tested, swings high from a shop crane to be loaded on a flat car for shipment to the Army. And it has really been tested—put through a grueling 75-mile run over terrain tougher than any likely to be encountered in battle. Photos From O. E. M.

DEEPWATER COLLEGE

A BOUT 10 years ago students of marine biology at the University of Miami, Fla., were per-mitted to make ocean dives to study their subject first hand. This gave such impetus to the course that diving since has become a regular part of the study for all who want to pursue it to that depth! Some 200 students have since made more than 5,000 descents to depths of around 40 feet. The professor, F. G. Walton Smith, London biologist, has held many classes among tree-like reefs of living coral to show students "the effec." on sea life of its living conditions, its struggle for life and food." Several graduates of the course are professional biologists. A recent session in the clear waters of Rainbow Springs (and a submarine port-hole) made possible these pictures. hole) made possible these pictures.

On with the helmets. Jean Fitzsimmons and classmate, Sidne Michael, prepare for a 30-minute underwater study. The 80-pound helmets are heavy out of water; submerged they become light.

In Salinas, Calif., where Guayule has been in cultivation for 3C years, this special planting machine rolls the growing beds, drops the fine seed and then covers with sand. Seedling plants are later transplanted to fields.

RUBBER has become one of America's gravest problems. Uncle Sam, faced with the possibility of having supplies from the Far East cut off, has stepped out to meet the situation with substitutes and rationing.

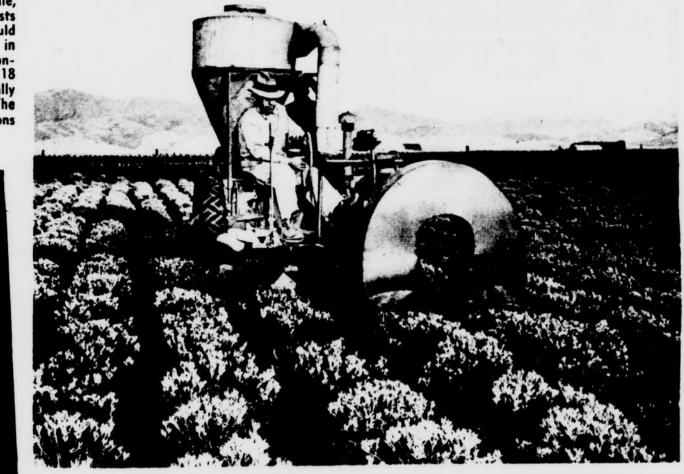

Production of domestic rubber on a large scale has been ordered into full speed by Secretary Jesse Jones under a plan sponsored by William O'Neil, president of the General Tire and Rubber Co. Guayule, a scrub growth indigenous to Mexico, produces rubber little different chemically from the imported Hevea type. Mr. O'Neil believes this shrub can be cultivated here to the extent of supplying a great part of our crude rubber needs. Every available Guayule seed has been ordered into the ground.

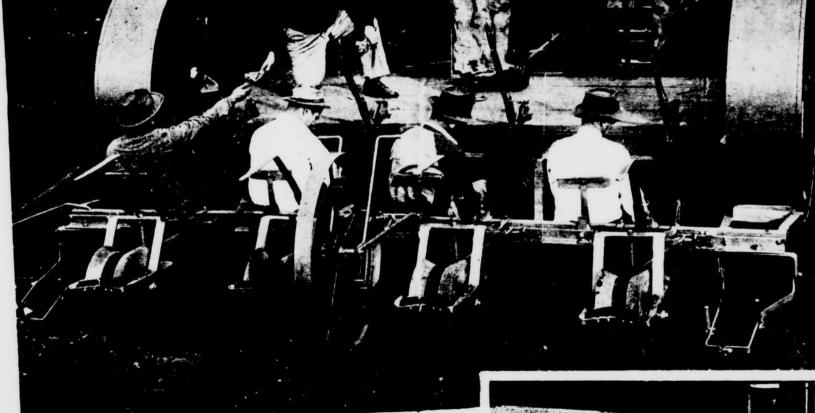

Hevea in peace times can be imported profitably for 10 cents a pound. Guayule, in our small-scale production today, costs 15 to 19 cents. Mass production would lower this rate. The plant matures in seven years to its maximum rubber content, but may be harvested after 18 months' growth. Mexico harvests annually about 10,000,000 pounds of gum. The United States must have thousands of tons to meet her needs.

A 'Weed' Becomes Vital

Close-up of the Guayule plant. This shrub, which grew wild in Mexico 40 years ago, produces the only natural rubber in the United States. Cross breeding has increased its yield.

This seeding machine is working overtime to produce seed and more seed. One-year plants produce at a ratio of 10 to 1. Estimates place our seed supply high enough to plant 110,000 acres.

Seedlings are transplanted to larger fields with this "Rube Goldberg" contraption. It furrows as men drop plants. Wheels at rear tamp soil around plant. Each man can place 60 seedlings a minute.

One of the uses for Guayule is the manufacture of tires such as these. According to tests made under supervision of the United States Tariff Commission, these tires give 90 per cent as much wear as the Hevea product.

Workman taking a Guayule rubber block from a curing oven. At this stage it has a resin content of 18 per cent as compared with Hevea's 4 per cent. Further processing, however, removes this resin.

Pulp from crushed plants is placed in huge vats with cork. Rubber and cork rise and rubber is skimmed off. In another operation water is forced into cork, making it sink, leaving a layer of rubber. THE SUNDAY STAR, WASHINGTON. D. C. -GRAVURE SECTION-JANUARY 11, 1942.

OUR INVESTIGATION HAS BROUGHT TO LIGHT MANY FACTS WHICH, PIECED TOGETHER, EXPLAIN EVERYTHING QUESTIONING OLD INMATES OF THE WORKHOUSE WHERE OLIVER WAS BORN, TWO OTHER WOMEN WERE FOUND WHO WERE PRESENT WHEN OLIVER'S MOTHER DIED MRS. BUMBLE, THE MATRON, WAS FORCED TO CONFESS THAT SHE HAD SOLD YOU THE STOLEN LOCKET, WHICH YOU DROPPED INTO THE THAMES, HOPING TO CONCEAL THE BOY'S REAL IDENTITY

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE LOCKET ENGRAVED "AGNES" WAS THE CONCLUSIVE LINK IN THE CHAIN OF EVIDENCE I WAS A FRIEND OF YOUR UNHAPPY FATHER, EDWARD LEEFORD, AND KNEW HIS STORY WELL . HE WAS FORCED BY HIS PARENTS INTO A LOVELESS MARRIAGE WITH YOUR MOTHER, A WOMAN MUCH OLDER THAN HIMSELF.

FROM THE FIRST YOU WERE A VICIOUS, UNRULY BOY. YOUR MOTHER PAMPERED YOU, PROTECTED YOU FROM PUNISHMENT YOU DESERVED, AND TAUGHT YOU TO HATE YOUR FATHER YOU WENT FROM BAD TO WORSE. YOUR VICES AND CRIMES AND YOUR MOTHER'S VINDICTIVE HATRED MADE YOUR FATHER'S LIFE MISERABLE

YOUR UNHAPPY FATHER TURNED FOR SOLACE TO OLD FRIENDS, ONE A RETIRED NAVAL OFFICER WITH TWO CHARMING YOUNG DAUGHTERS. AGNES, THE ELDER, PITIED LEEFORD, AND PITY RIPENED INTO A TRAGIC

LEEFORD TOOK STEPS TO DIVORCE HIS WIFE THAT HE MIGHT MARRY THE LOVELY, SYMPATHETIC AGNES. HAPPINESS WAS IN SIGHT, BUT FATE WAS CRUEL. LEEFORD DIED SUDDENLY. IN A PANIC AGNES FLED FROM HOME TO ESCAPE SCANDAL AND DISGRACE. THEY NEVER SAW HER AGAIN

YOUR FATHER HAD LEFT A WILL BEQUEATHING THE BULK OF HIS ESTATE TO AGNES AND HER UNBORN CHILD, IF A SON, ON CONDITION THAT HE REACH HIS MAJORITY UNTAINTED BY VICE OR CRIME YOUR MOTHER, HAVING INTERCEPTED YOUR FATHER'S LAST LETTERS TO AGNES, DESTROYED THE WILL, NOT KNOWING THAT A COPY HAD BEEN DULY DECORDED."

YOUR MOTHER TOLD YOU ALL BEFORE SHE DIED BY ACCIDENT YOU LEADNED OF THE EXISTENCE AND WHEREABOUTS OF YOUR LITTLE HALF-BROTHER WITH THE AID OF THE LOWEST CRIMINALS YOU SOUGHT TO DRAG THE UNFORTUNATE WAIF INTO A LIFE OF CRIME SO THAT HE WOULD FORFEIT THE INHERITANCE THAT HE NEVER DREAMED HE WAS HEIR TO
