'Dereliction of Duty' Charged By Roberts Commission, Citing Failure to Act on Warnings

Non-Com Detected Planes' Approach, No Alert Ordered

(Text of Report on Page A 6-7.)

By JOHN C. HENRY. An appalling "dereliction of duty" on the part of the two commanding officers of America's Pacific defense forces, Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short. was charged yesterday by President Roosevelt's special investigating commission in a report fixing responsibility for success of the shattering surprise attack by Japan on Pearl Harbor on Admiral Kimmel, who was commander of the Pacific Fleet and commander in chief of the United States Fleet and Gen. Short, who was commander of the Hawaiian Department of the Army, have been under suspension from their commands since Secretary of Navy Knox made a preliminary report in mid-December that defense forces in Hawaii were not "on the alert" when the Jap assault came.

Subsequently, the President named the investigating commission headed

Although not cited as an excusing circumstance, the Roberts commission asserted pointedly in its 50page report that the derelictions of these two officers stemmed largely from the false sense of security "due to the opinion prevalent in diplomatic, military and naval circles, and in the public press, that any immediate attack by Japan would be in the Far East."

Warnings Ignored. This sense of security revealed itself in failure of the Army and Navy to maintain its agreed aviation patrols, despite adequate warnings

Most ironical, however, of the fateful factors which immediately preceded the assault of 150 to 200 Japanese warplanes on peaceful Pearl Harbor at 7:55 o'clock that Sunday morning was the circumstance that an ambitious non-commissioned officer, who had requested extra training time, picked up on aircraft detection devices at 7:02 a.m., the sounds of an unidentified flight of planes proceeding toward Oahu and then about 130 miles

Conclusions of the President's Commission investigating Pearl Harbor attack follow in full. Other parts of the report appear on Pages A-6-7.

ings and to adopt measures enjoined by the orders given them by the chiefs of the Army and Navy commands in Washington. 13. There were deficiencies in personnel, weapons, equipment and facilities to maintain all the defenses on a war footing for extended periods of time, but these deficiencies should not have affected the decision of the responsible commanders as to the state of readiness to be prescribed. 14. The warning message of December 7, intended to reach both commanders in the field at about 7 a.m. Hawaiian time, December 7, 1941, was but an added precaution, in view of the warnings and orders previously issued. If the message had reached its destination at the time intended, it would still have been too late to be of substantial use, in view of the fact that the commanders had failed to take measures and make dispositions prior to the time of its anticipated receipt which would have been effective to warn of the attack or to meet it.

15. The failure of the officers in the War Department to observe that Gen. Short, neither in his reply of November 27 to the chief of staff's message of that date, nor otherwise, had reported the measures taken by him, and the transmission of two messages concerned chiefly with sabotage which warned him not to resort to illegal methods against sabotage or espionage, and not to take measures which would alarm the civil population, and the failure to reply to his message of November 29 outlining in full all the actions he had taken against sabotage only, and referring to nothing else, tended to lead Gen. Short to believe that what he had done met the requirements of the warnings and orders received

16. The failure of the commanding general, Hawaiian Department, and the commander in chief, Pacific Fleet, to confer and co-operate with respect to the meaning of the warnings received and the measures necessary to comply with the orders given them under date of November 27, 1941, resulted largely from a sense of security due to the opinion prevalent in diplomatic, military and naval circles, and in the public press, that any immediate attack by Japan would be in the Far East. The existence of such a view, however prevalent, did not relieve the commanders of the responsibility for the security of the Pacific outpost.

Peril Grows Worse As Warcraft Shells MacArthur's Forces

The United States Navy capped a day of victories for the United Nations by announcing late yesterday that a flotilla of destroyers had blown up one enemy ship, sunk a second and battered others with torpedo and close-range gun hits in a night attack on a convoy in the Macassar Straits, between the Netherlands Indies islands of Borneo and Celebes.

This latest proof of United States co-operation with the Allies in the Southwest Pacific was the climax to a rollcall of smashing blows which included a successful Dutch bombing attack on a Japanese invasion fleet-possibly the same-off Borneo and other successes in Rangoon and Malaya.

Congress Will Check War Costs Closely, Recent Moves Show

Four Committees Keep Eye on Progress of Nation's Prorgam

By GOULD LINCOLN. The determination of Congress to keep a close watch on the progress of the war program-with particular reference to expenditures has been vigorously demonstrated.

It is operating through four committees. They are the special Senate Defense Investigating Committee, headed by Senator Truman of Missouri; the House Naval Affairs Committee, the House Military Affairs Committee and a special joint committee of the Senate and officials of executive departments to determine what non-defense expenditures of the Government may be eliminated or reduced. Senator Byrd of Virginia heads the joint committee.

The Truman committee has just been granted an additional $60,000 to continue its work. Its preliminary report, recently published criticizing industry, labor and Government for failure to speed up the defense program, received wide publicity. It charged "inefficiency and Drops Admission Fee licity. It charged "inefficiency and self-interest" and claimed private interests of those concerned hindered the defense program.

Labor and Industry Blasted. The report of the House Naval Affairs Committee, made by Chairman Vinson, blasted both industry and labor, charging both with undue profits and accusing labor particularly of being responsible for delays in the program because of The immediate aftermath of the Vinson report was introduction of a bill by Representative Vinson to file financial statements. The measure was referred to the House Judiciary Committee. Mr. Vinson said yesterday he would ask for an early hearing and that he intended to press for action on the bill.

Mr. Vinson is preparing a second bill, designed to prohibit and prevent profiteering on war contracts. He expects to introduce the bill in the House this week. Already it has been indicated the bill will have have been replaced by other works strong support in the House and the of merit and interest which will Senate as well. Chairman George 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. of the Senate Finance Committee is also taking an interest in this is closed to the public, but on other proposal. The plan suggested by public holidays it is open from 2 to Senator Walsh is to have a special 5 p.m. tax levied on persons and concerns holding war contracts, over and in the income tax law.

Senator Walsh pointed out that Congress had written into law a provision limiting profits on defense contracts with the Government to 8 per cent. That, he said, had lasted only a few months. It was repealed in an appropriation bill, after complaints had been made that it was hindering the progress of the defense program. The Vinson report, however, showing that excessive profits have been made on a number of naval contracts, has strongly revived interest in this matter.

The opinion was expressed by members of Congress that only by the closest scrutiny of war contracts would it be possible to prevent waste and extravagance in carrying forward the program which calls for the expenditure of billions of dollars during the next two years. Some of the members, including

Senator Vandenberg, Republican, of Michigan, have taken the position that something drastic should be done about both contractors who have profiteered and officials of the Government who have allowed such profiteering to occur. His point is that the Truman Committee should not be merely objective, and disclose what has been going on, but that where there has been waste and profiteering, the matter should be followed up with recommendations that steps be taken against both the concerns and the officials. Churchill May Stake Prestige to Protect Cabinet Members

Commons and Public Demand Answer to Australia's Plea for Aid

LONDON, Jan. 24.-Australia's stirred Britain tonight and imperiled what most Parliamentry circles regarded as Prime Minister Churchill's plan to protect criticized cabinet members with the mantle of his prestige.

Members of Parliament, the press and the man in the street united in looking searchingly at Whitehall for definite news of help dispatched to the far-flung A. B. C. D. Pacific front-news that may be forthcoming in Mr. Churchill's report to Parliament early next week. Critics in Parliament took potshots at Sir Archibald Sinclair, air minister, and others of the Cabinet

Even Sir Strafford Cripps, recently returned from Moscow as retired ambassador, took a slap at Whitehall with the suggestion that certain countries might follow Russia's lead in ousting old generals and giving younger officers a May Demand Confidence.

The long silent political bureau of the Communist Party of Great Britain bluntly asked for the ousting of "the men of Munich" from the cabinet as responsible for the critical situation in the southwest Mr. Churchill, it was reported, planned to head off his critics by demanding an immediate vote of confidence Informed quarters said the Prime Minister was certain that his immense prestige would assure him a comfortable majority in Commons which would protect his ministers. But Emanuel Shinwell, Laborite member of Parliament, declared today that "to challenge the House on a vote of confidence is a waste of time. It may afford the Prime Minister a measure of satisfaction to know that a majority of the members of Parliament * * * support government's policy, but that will not bring us nearer to victory. • • • "It is unthinkable that this country, the heart of the empire, can refuse this urgent (Australian) demand," Mr. Shinwell said.

Suggests Empire Cabinet. Edgar Louis Granville, Liberal M. P., urged Mr. Churchill to respond immediately to the call of the dominion. Mr. Granville suggested an empire war cabinet. He also announced his intention to attach a rider to the Churchill demand for a vote of confidence which would request the Prime Minister to "reconstruct his ministerial team by replacing those who no longer enjoy the confidence of Parliament and public opinion."

Debate Opens Tomorrow; Major Controversies Held Unlikely

Prompt Senate passage of the new war powers bill early this week, to strengthen the Government's war effort in many directions, appeared likely last night, with debate schedule to start tomorrow

Reported favorably from the Judiciary Committee by Senator O'Mahoney, Democrat, of Wyoming, the measure makes 14 separate changes in various laws, most important of which put more teeth in the enforcement of priorities and broaden the Government's power to take over the machines in a factory when such action is deemed vital to the defense

There were no indications in Senate circles yesterday of any major controversies developing over the bill. After the Senate acts, it will go to the House, where it still awaits consideration.

Mobile Camps to Furnish Labor to East's Truckers

The Agriculture Department announced yesterday it would help meet threatened farm labor shortages in Eastern seaboard commercial vegetable, fruit and sugar cane producing areas this year by operating 18 mobile camps equipped to shelter 2,700 migratory farm laborer families.

The camps will be moved from one crop area to another as the growing season advances, thus enabling farm workers to shift from sections where they are not needed to those where expansion of war industries threatens to cause a lack of hands at peak seasons.

Areas to be serviced by the camps include the sugar cane and truck crop producing parts of Florida, the vegetable-producing areas of North Carolina and Virginia and the fruit and vegetable areas of Maryland, New Jersey, Connecticut and Upper New York. The department said the 18 new camps would increase to 101 the number of stationary and mobile migrant labor stations operated or under construction in various parts of the country. These camps have facilities for 75,000 families in a 12month period.

Shelter in the mobile camps will consist of army-type tents with sidewalls or platforms. Each of the camps will be staffed by Farm Security Administration personnel.

Chairman Reynolds of the full committee said Friday that a number of telegrams had been received protesting the appointment of a civilian to such a military post on the ground that it might be adverse to Army morale.

Senators Kilgore, Democrat, of West Virginia and Holman, Republican, of Oregon served on the subcommittee with Senator Chandler.

Would Be Difficult Move. Many expected him, in the last eventuality on the mainland, to withdraw as many of his troops as possible to the island. It would be a difficult operation, with boatloads of men exposed to aircraft fire, particularly if the move were attempted by daylight. But at night especially if helped by fog or storm, it could be done, military experts thought.

The entry of the Japanese warships into the Batan fighting was a new development, and may well have been a controlling factor. Throughout the fighting, American artillery and the accuracy of American artillerymen have proved vastly superior to those of the Japs.

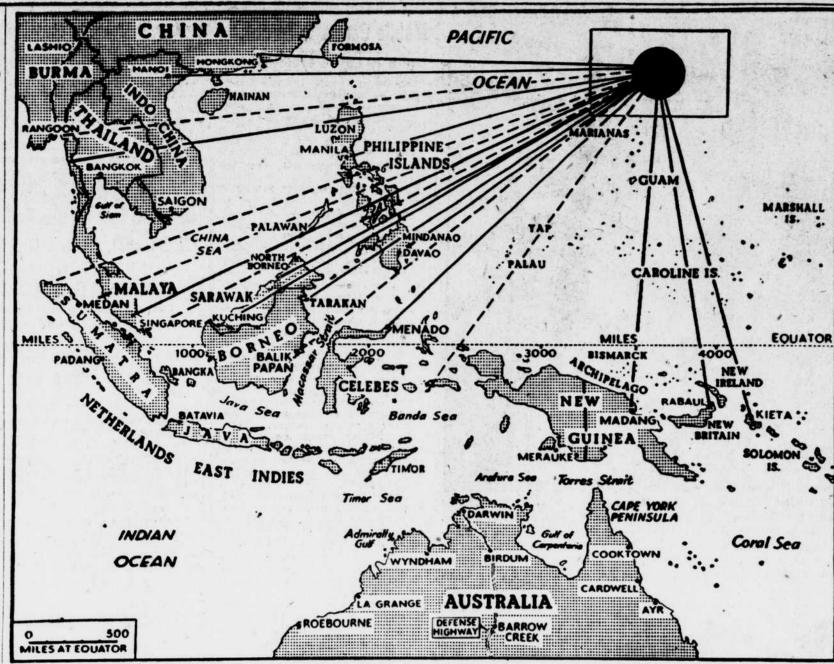

A fortnight ago, the enemy attempted to blast it out with big guns, and got unmercifully smashed for it. The warships were brought up, it was generally thought, to offset this one advantage of the American and Filipino forces.

Cathedral Choral Group To Seek New Members

A membership drive to fill va-cancies in the National Cathedral Choral Society was announced to-day by Paul Callaway, director. Auditions will be held for the next few weeks to bring the group up to its full strength of 200 voices.

Formed last November, the organization will present its first concert in April. It will be accompanied by the National Symphony Orchestra in nging Verdi's "Requiem." Applications for auditions should be made to Mr. Callaway, organist and choirmaster of the National Ca-hedral.

Don Gurley Trades Job In U. S. for One With Chiang Kai-shek

By a Staff Correspondent of The Star. ALEXANDRIA, Va., Jan. 24.-Don Gurley, 24, who once dispatched huge trailer trucks along the Atlantic seaboard for the Barnwell Bros. Co., is doing the same job now for Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek on the Burma road.

According to word received here by one of his friends, Fire Chief James M. Duncan, Mr. Gurley has arrived at Lashio, the transfer point where supplies consigned to the Chinese armies under the leaselend program are removed from the freight trains coming up from Rangoon and put aboard trucks for the perilous route to the interior of China.

Mr. Gurley was one of 43 transportation specialists selected from companies in the United States to go to China to straighten out the traffic situation along the Burma road, under fire recently for alleged inefficiency and graft. The group got as far as Manila when the Japanese attacked and how they finally escaped and reached their destination has not been made pub-

Athletes of Britain Take Active Roles In Fighting Forces

Many, Well Known In U. S., Now Part Of, R. A. F. and Army

By BLAIR BOLLES. England has its athletic stars in the fighting forces-in plenty. Some of the men with great sporting names are departed heroes, killed in action, like the R. A. F. bombardier Bryan Black, who won fame in peacetime as a rugby player with the Blackheath team. Some of them have been wounded. Many have been decorated for gallantry.

One of the latest to be decorated is Lt. Robert Everett of the Royal Navy, the gentleman jockey who won the Grand National on Gregalach in 1929—the year the American horse Billy Barton was the early pre-race favorite. Lt. Everett was gazetted D. S. O. with this citation:

"For bravery, skill and tenacity in many hazardous operational flights in protection of shipping."

He operates a fighter airplane that is catapulted from a merchant vessel, and he won his award for sending into the sea an enemy airplane approaching a convoy he was protecting. His own aircraft fell and sank, but he was rescued from the open ocean.

Have Given Up Play.

Golfers, fighters, track and field men-the whole complement of athletes-have given up their play for the grim business of fighting to the death. The complete roster of professional fighting champions has gone off to the wars. And the women have not stayed at home with their knitting. Pamela Barton, the women's golfing champion of England, has a commission in the Women's Auxiliary Air Force.

Among the golfers, Henry Cotton, 85, twice the British Open champ and the Ryder Cup captain in 1939 -when the war's arrival forced abandonment of the Ryder Cup matches—is now a flight lieutenant in the R. A. F. Early in the war he gave a magnificent demonstration of control over his nerves, which are supposed to be jumpy in a golfer, when he played a beautiful 18 holes during an air raid. Since athletics are an international affair and never recognized the philosophy of isolation, England's sporting famous are pretty well known in the United States. There is Don Finlay, for instance, the high-hurdler, who ran in the Olympics at Los Angeles 10 years

Finlay, as an officer in the R. A. F., led the fighter squadron which H. G. Bently, his brother A. L. won the race to be the first to bag 100 German planes. He is an acrobatic flyer. Now he flies for blood, but in less lively fighting times he liked to be the middle man heart for America since he ran in man amateur champion in 1936, are the 110-meter hurdles at Los An- in the English Army. geles in 1932. The judges placed him fourth, behind Jack Keller of Ohio State, by a whisker. But motion pictures showed that he had finished third. The judges reversed their decision. Keller handed over the medal without a murmur.

The fifth man in that race was Lord David Burleigh, who now is a colonel in the English Army. An old man for the track-he set the high hurdles mark at Amsterdam 14 years ago. He pulled a couple of charley horses recently when he ran in a hurdles relay for the Brigade of Guards. He fell over the last hurdle and had to get about with two canes for a while. Lard Burleigh could run at sea as well as on land. He held the informal record for running once around the deck of the Queen Mary.

Of more recent track vintage, Sid Wooderson, whose half-mile mark set at Princeton in the summer of 1938 was accepted officially as the English record, has been in the Pioneer Corps of the army. The corps' members do jobs vaguely related to the work of our C. C. C. They make up the army's labor battalions and are subject to army discipline.

Wooderson, one of the best distance runners of the last decade, tried to join the fighting forces. But the medical men turned him down on account of his weak eyes, which he keeps covered always with thick glasses. Apparently his running days are over. It is said that he has put on weight, and he has trouble with both Achilles tendons.

Fighters in Service.

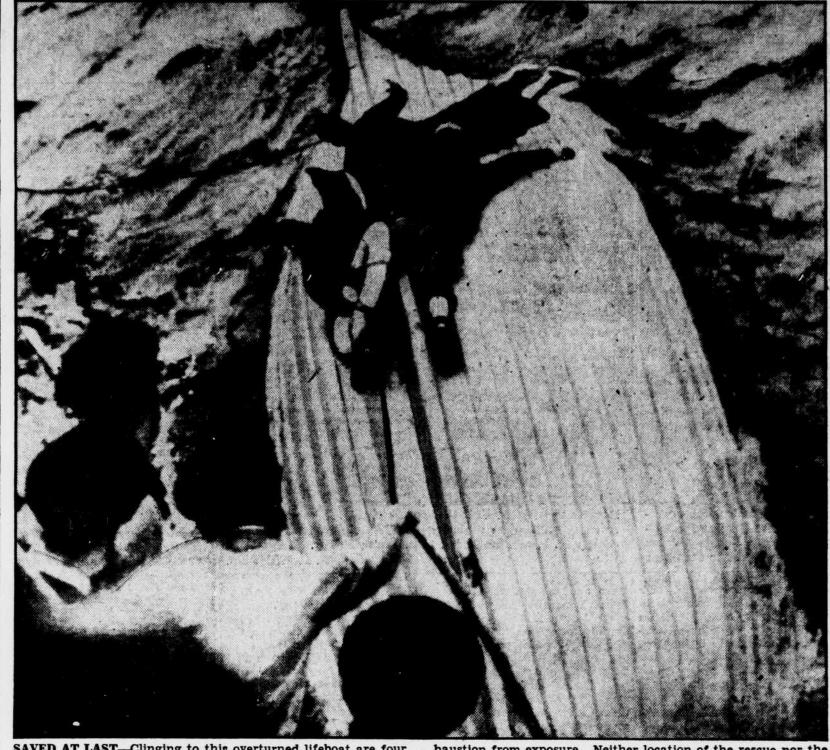

The athletes like adventure. Probably that is why so many of them have joined the R. A. F., especially the prize fighters. Len Harvey, heavyweight and light heavyweight champion of England and the empire, is an R. A. F. officer. R. A. F. non-coms are Ernie Roderick, welter champ; Eric Boon, lightweight champ, and Nel Tarleton, feather champ. Jock McAvoy, who holds the middleweight title, is doing industrial war work. Capt. Jack Petersen, former heavy champ, is a staff officer for physical training among the anti-aircraft crews.

Another man lending his athletic skill to military physical culture enterprise is Walter Beavers, the old Yorkshire distance runner. He tried to set the pace for Paavo Nurmi. the tireless, in the 5,000 meters at Amsterdam in 1928. Poor Beavers. Nobody ever tried that stunt and

Tommy Martin, the British heavyweight who fought a couple of years ago in Los Angeles, is a ranker in the R. A. F. He would like the title held by Officer Harvey, but it is unlikely that the ranker and the officer will have a bout before the war is over. England has some other fighters it fancies, but the chances are they will all be too old for much action by the time the war is ended and they can go back to fighting each other instead of the Germans.

The titleholders don't care now for hastily arranged title bouts because they can't make the money they can obtain in peacetime, when taxes are lighter and more people can pay their way to see a prize-

Even more surprising, perhaps, was the disclosure that an American patrol plane and the destroyer Ward had co-operated between 6:33 and 6:45 that morning in the sinking of a small Jap submarine in the prohibited area off Pearl Harbor.

Action Reported Early. A report of this action was made to the naval base watch officer at 7:12 a.m., and immediately transmitted to his superior officers, "but no alert warnings were issued based upon this report." A third ironical circumstance was disclosed in the fact that a final warning message to both Army and Navy commanders in Hawaii had been dispatched from Washington about 6:30 a.m. (Honolulu time) on the day of the attack. The message indicated an almost immediate break in Japanese-American rela-

Acknowledgement of this warning was made by Secretary Stimson and the commission found that copies of the letters exchanged were supplied to Admiral Kimmel, Gen. Short and Rear Admiral C. C. Bloch, commander of the 14th Naval District. Adequate defense

Meanwhile, the commission pointed out, Secretary of State Hull was keeping Secretaries Knox and Stimson constantly informed of the course of diplomatic relations with Japan, information which was in turn being passed along to Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, and Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations. Warned November 27.

Major part of the damage to ships.

Other messages of this period, in-cluding authorizations for the destruction of confidential documents, "did not create in the minds of the responsible officers in the Hawaiian area apprehension as to probable mminence of air raids," the commission found.

"On the contrary they only served to emphasize in their minds the danger from sabotage and surprise submarine attack. The necessity for taking a state of war readiness which would have been required to avert or meet an air raid, attack was not considered."

"All That Were Intended." In this connection, incidentally, it was noted that Gen. Short twice outlined to the War Department the precise steps being taken to guard against sabotage or subversive activities—and received no acknowledgement of these reports. Consequently, the officer testified to the ommission, he considered there had been "tacit agreement that the measures taken were all that were intended by the department."

Referring to incomplete liaison between the two commanding officers the commission reported that they precise implications of messages received from Washington on or subsequent to November 27.

In fact, during a discussion of another matter—the possible replacement of Marine units by Army units on Wake and Midway Islands -Admiral Kimmel reportedly inquired of his war plans officer, a Capt. McMorris, about probability of a surprise air attack on Oahu.

"According to Gen. Short," the commission declared, "Capt McMorris replied there was no probability of such an attack; and, acording to Capt. McMorris, his reply was that the Japanese would never so attack."

In bluntly damning words, the commission then asserted that after November 27 the two responsible officers "independently took such action as each deemed appropriate to the existing situation. Neither informed the other specifically of the action he was taking, and neither inquired of the other whether or not any action had been taken, nor did they consult as to the appropriateness of the actions taken by them respectively."

In brief, what was done follows: Gen. Shore ordered alert No.1against acts "of sabotage and uprisings within the islands, with no threat from without"-and directed that the aircraft warning system This failure, the commission be operated daily from 4 a.m. to added, "demonstrated on the part 7 a.m. The attack came at 7:55 a.m. Admiral Bloch called a conference of destroyer commanders of the inshore patrols and directed them to be on the alert.

Major part of the damage to ships it was found, resulted from aerial topedoes of an obsolete type—altered to increase their explosive load and their adaptability to the harbor attack.

Devastating effectiveness of the attack, however, was traced in large part to Japanese espionage, operating principally out of the Jap con-sulate in Honolulu, and flourishing under peacetime restrictions on United States counter measures.

"They evidently knew," the report said, "that no task force of the United States Navy was anywhere in the sector northeast, north, and northwest of the Hawaiian Islands. They evidently knew that no distant airplane reconnaissance was maintained in any sector. Once the attack came, the commission found that conduct of officers and men of both services was beyond criticism, demonstrating excellent training and high morale. Ground grouping of military planes as a precaution against sabotage was fatal, however, and brought destruction of so many aerial units that no effective air resistance could be operated nor could planes get away soon enough to trail the Jap attackers back to their carriers.

Failure of the aircraft detection system to furnish reliable information later in the morning also contributed to inability to locate the attacking forces although searches were made and at least one false chase undertaken.

Although a considerable number of Army and Navy personnel were on liberty on the night of December 6, it was found that "with imma-

Text of Commission's Report on Pearl Harbor Debacle

The full text of the report of the Commission appointed by the President to investigate the attack made by the Japanese on Pearl Harbor last December 7, follows:

The President, The White House.

The undersigned were appointed by executive order of December 18, commission thus:

"to ascertain and report the facts relating to the attack made by Japanese armed forces upon the Territory of Hawaii on December

"The purposes of the required inquiry and report are to provide bases for sound decisions whether any derelictions of duty or errors of judgment on the part of United States Army or Navy personnel contributed to such successes as were achieved by the enemy on the occasion mentioned, and if so, what these derelictions or errors were, and who were responsible therefor."

The Congress speedily supplemented the executive order by granting the commission power to summon witnesses and examine them under oath.

First Three Meetings Held in Capital.

The commission held three meetings in Washington December 18, 19 and 20, and on the latter day proceeded to Honolulu, Territory of Hawaii, where the commission arrived December 22 and held meetings December 22, 23, 24 and 26 at the headquarters of the Hawaiian Department, Fort Shafter, and December 27, 29, 30 and 31, 1941, and January 2 and 3, 1942, at the Submarine Base, Pearl Harbor, and January 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel, Honolulu. January 10 the commission left Honolulu for Washington, D. C., held meetings January 12, 13 and 14, arrived at Washington January 15, and held further meetings January 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22 and 23.

The commission examined 127 witnesses and received a large number of documents. All members of the military and naval establishments, and civil officers and citizens who were thought to have knowledge of facts pertinent to the inquiry were summoned and examined under oath. All persons in the Island of Oahu, wno believed they had knowledge of such facts, were publicly requested to appear, and a number responded to the invitation, and gave evidence.

Various rumors and hearsay statements have been communicated to the commission. The commission has sought to find and examine withave knowledge respecting them. We believe that our findings of fact sufficiently dispose of most of them. Evidence Touches Some Subjects Kept Secret.

which in the national interest should remain secret. We have, therefore, refrained from quotation of testimony or documentary proof. Our findings, however, have been made with the purpose fully and accurately to reflect the testimony, which as respects matters of fact is substantially without contradiction.

It is true, as we have found, that due to the enormous demand on the Nation's capacity to produce munitions and war supplies, there was a deficiency in the provision of materiel for the Hawaiian area. This was but natural, in the circumstances, and was well known to the Government departments and local commanders. We have made no detailed findings on the subject, since as will appear from our report, we find that this deficiency did not take appropriate measures with the means available.

Regrettable loss of life and extensive damage resulted from the air raid. The nature of that damage and the details of the measures taken to repair it have no direct bearing on the execution of the mandate appointing this commission, and the subject is dealt with in our report only to the extent that it bears on questions of responsibility for the disaster.

All Testimony Invited

In Wide Inquiry. The evidence taken covered a wide scope. The commission intentionally invited such latitude of testimony and inquiry in the belief that thereby incidental light might be thrown upon the main issues involved. As an example, the commission heard evidence to show what had been done at Pearl Harbor and on the Island of Oahu by Naval and military commands subsequent to December 7, 1941, in the view that this might throw some light upon the matters submitted for our consideration. Again, the commission heard much testimony as to the population of Hawaii, its composition, and the attitude and disposition of the persons composing it, in the belief that the facts disclosed might aid in appraising the results of investigative, counter-espionage, and anti-sabotage work done antecedent to the attack of December 7, 1941.

All Posts Visited

By the Commission. The commission visited the naval base at Pearl Harbor and air fields of the military and naval establishforts and certain of the coast fortifications on the Island of Oahu.

The minutes of each meeting of the commission are of record. The statements of witnesses received in the meetings previous to that of December 22 have been recorded in summaries. All testimony received at the meeting of December 22 and the subsequent meetings was stenographically reported and transcribed.

The oral evidence received amounts 1941, which defined our duties as a to 1.887 typewritten pages, and the records and documents examined exceed 3,000 printed pages in num-

Findings of Fact

December 1, 1941, the director of Naval Intelligence issued a bulletin which, under the caption "Japanese Naval Situation," stated: "Deployment of naval forces to the southward has indicated clearly that extensive preparations are under way for hostilities. At the same time troop transports and freighters are pouring continually down from Japan and Northern China coast ports headed south, apparently for French Indo-China and Formosan ports. Present movements to the south appear to be carried out by small individual units. but the organization of an extensive task force, now definitely indicated, will probably take sharper form in the next few days. To date, this task force, under the command of the commander in chief 2d Fleet, appears to be subdivided into two major task groups, one gradually concentrating off the Southeast Asiatic coast, the other in the mandates. Each constitutes a strong striking force of heavy and light cruisers, units of the combined air force, destroyer and submarine squadrons. Although one division of battleships also may be assigned, the major capital ship strength remains in home waters, as well as the greatest portion of the carriers."

Action Is Taken After Messages.

After receipt of the messages of November 27 the following action was taken:

The commanding general, Hawaiian Department, ordered alert No. 1 (see next succeeding paragraph) into effect on November 27, and it was maintained in effect until December 7. At the same time he ordered that the aircraft warning system operate daily from 4 a.m. to 7 a.m. The commandant of the 14th naval district, in his capacity ference of all the destroyer commanders of the inshore patrol, advised them that something might happen, and that they should be on chief of staff that negotiations with tage and surprise submarine attack. the alert. This order went beyond the authority given him by the Navy Department.

Operating Procedure For Air Alerts.

In the Hawaiian Department's standing operating procedure governing the defense of the Hawaiian coastal frontier, three states of readiness were prescribed, known as alert No. 1, alert No. 2 and alert No.

3. Alert No. 1 was thus defined: "This alert is a defense against acts of sabotage and uprisings within the islands, with no threat from without."

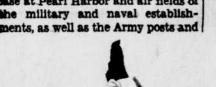

Alert No. 2 was thus defined: "This alert is applicable to a condition more serious than alert No. 1. Security against attacks from hostile subsurface, surface and aircraft, in addition to defense against acts of sabotage and uprisings, is provided." Alert No. 3 was thus defined:

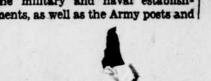

"This alert requires occupation of all field positions by all units, prepared for maximum defense of Oahu and the Army installations on outlying islands."

By CLARE BOOTHE and BRIG. GEN. HENRY J. REILLY.

Last May 6 Senator Claude Pepper of Florida made, on the floor of Congress, a fierce and fiery speech against the Japanese. Demanding that "we turn a searching inquiry to this bandit of the East . . lurking behind the door to stick a stiletto in our backs," he suggested as one easy solution of the problem sending Chiang Kai-shek "some gallant American boys at the controls of some first-class bombing planes • • • in my opinion," he said, "50 of them can make a shambles of Tokio!

And 130,000,000 Americans not only applauded the incendiary Floridian's personal opinion in their hearts, but also believed it was a fine picture of the just fate that awaited "the bandits of the East" if they should choose—as the popular phrase was to commit "national hara-kari" by warring on the United States of America.

Today 130,000,000 Americans are asking in bewilderment and rage, where are the avenging flames from the funeral pyre of Tokio? Why hasn't the Japanese fleet been sunk "within a couple of weeks" as many a tablecloth admiral-and a couple of bona fide ones, too-so often predicted it would be? Why is it, on the contrary, roaming at will in the Japanese and China Seas? Where is the "distant blockade" based in Hawaii and Singapore which was so soon to bring Japan to her economic knees? Where are "Japan's feet of clay" about which a whole book was written? (Can it be that our heads, not her feet, were made of clay?)

Why has the Japanese Army, which "everybody" knew was bled white and thin by four years of the "China incident," still got enough military "oomph" to attack not only United States possessions in the Far East, but also the colonial jewels of the Dutch and British Empires? Why did "imp egnable" Hong Kong fall in two weeks? And why, oh why, if it is still true that Japan is committing hari-kari, is she doing so in such a messy fashion on soil under our flag, instead of being forced to expire on her own doorstep, or before the bloodstained altars of her own pagan gods?

The bitter answers to these bitter questions lie largely in an understanding of the military situation implicit in the disaster which has overtaken American arms in the Philippines. Had sufficient planes, troops, warships been available to Gen. MacArthur in the early weeks

Because Gen. MacArthur and the gallant soldiers under his command were faced with a hopeless military assignment. Senator Capper, Republican, of Kansas last night asked President Roosevelt to veto the liberalized civil service retirement bill because of the provision allowing members of Congress to go on the retirement roll without making any back payments into the fund. In taking this unusual course, the Kansan went on record against pensions for members of Congress, but made it clear he had no objection to the remainder of the bill, designed to give civil service employes generally more liberal optional retirement opportunities. The Senator said he did not want pension and would never ask for one, but understood that, as the bill now stands, he could receive a pension for the rest of his life on payment of $1.39, or 5 per cent of his salary for one day.

Byrd Amendment Rejected. Before the bill passed, Senator Byrd, Democrat, of Virginia tried without success to have it amended to require elected officials, in obtaining the option to enter the retirement system, to deposit in the fund back payments for at least five years. His amendment was beaten.

As the bill passed, members of Congress were given the remainder of this calendar year to exercise the option of entering the system and pay the 5 per cent salary contribution only between the time they enter the system and retire. The $1.39 payment is based on the assumption a Senator or Representative who has reached the required age (62) and served for at least five years, waited until the last day of the year to join and then retired

Senator's Letter. Senator Capper's letter to the President yesterday follows:

"Dear Mr. President: "I am taking the liberty of making what may seem to be an unusual request. I am asking that you return to Congress, without your approval, a bill on which I am recorded in the Senate as having cast an affirmative vote.

'I refer to H. R. 3487, an act to further amend the civil service. In section 3 of this bill there is a provision for pensions for members of Congress, which I believe is contrary to public policy, and should not become law.

The measure would increase from 31/2 to 5 per cent the premium deductions of Federal jobholders and which can be purchased by any one would make 70 the uniform retirement age for civilian employes. They could, however, retire voluntarily on pension at 62 after 15 years of service and at 60 after 30 years.

In his warning to hoarders, Mr. Henderson said "consumers who are in possession of abnormally large trator, the basic sugar facts are stocks of sugar" will not be allowed "to gain an advantage by their supposed foresight." He did not amplify his meaning, but O. P. A. officials pointed to it as one of the most important statements in the rationing announcement. Action against hoarders, they indicated, will be an Cuba, other foreign countries, and important part of the program.

Basic Needs to Be Filled. Although rationing is being undertaken "to insure that all customers Wickard's Talk Recalled. Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, order limited the amount of sugar in speaking on Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's weekly commercial program last Sunday night, called the sugar situation "critical."

Mr. Wickard pointed out that this country producers only about onethird of national requirements and depends on Cuba, the Philippines, Hawaii and Puerto Rico for most of the rest.

Mr. Wickard did not specify a date when the country would have to start cutting down on its "usual consumption," but the overall shortage came into effect the day shipments from the Philippines and Hawaii were severed and the day the United States decided to share its supply with its allies.

Grocers Here Limit Purchases. Many District grocers have limited purchases to 2 pounds per person, but no check has been kept on whether a customer comes in once a day or once a week. Only a few have resorted to requiring customers to buy at least $1 worth of other food before they can get a pound of sugar.

Under the rationing already in effect on jobbers, industrial users and wholesalers, all stocks in excess of 60 days' supply were frozen immediately, and no receiver may accept delivery of additional sugar from a refiner or importer if his stock on hand exceeds 30 days' supply. Further, no receiver can accept delivery of more sugar in any one month than he received in the corresponding month of 1940. Officials said the order would prevent further increases in 500,000

Wickard May Order Grower Referendum About May 15

With ample wheat supplies in prospect, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard will issue an order soon, aides said yesterday, calling for a Nation-wide grower referendum about the middle of May on marketing quotas designed to keep part of the 1942 crop off the market. Crop authorities said that despite the need for a record output of food this year to meet demands arising from the war, the United or in any way use more than their marketing quotas. Approval by twothirds of the growers voting is required to make the quotas perative.

The penalty is fixed by law at half the Government's loan rate on the grain, and last year was 49 cents a bushel. Officials said it probably would be 5 or 6 cents higher this year, inasmuch as the loan rate is expected to be higher than the 1941 rate of 98 cents.

Last year's marketing quotas and penalties aroused criticism among farmers, particularly in Ohio, Indiana and Pennsylvania, where considerable quantities of wheat were subject to the penalty. Officials said the department had received reports of organized opposition to quotas for this year's crop. Present conditions of the winter wheat crop and prospective plantings of spring wheat point to production of 800,000,000 bushels. While this would be about 150,000,000 less than the 1941 crop, officials had hoped to hold production to about 650,000,000 bushels.

Red Armies Planning Drive on Smolensk as Nazis Still Retreat

Fall of Kholm Breaks Hitler Line in North; Huge Stores Taken

MOSCOW, Jan. 24.—Russians declared tonight that Red Armies beating the Germans back with ever-increasing momentum have cracked the northern an-chor of Adolf Hitler's winter line at Kholm, and cut deeply into his winter reserve supplies as well, in the farthest advance of a brilliant general offensive conceived and directed by Joseph Stalin himself.

With achievement of this stunning victory, which imperiled the Germans south of Leningrad and on the central fronts, the newspaper Pravda said the Russians now would concentrate on clearing the Nazis out of occupied southern areas between Kursk and Orel and at Smolensky, west of Moscow,

The Soviet midnight communique said the advance up and down the front continued today and that numerous localities were reocccupied. but it gave no clue as to where of the Commissioners shows that they were located. It said three German planes were shot down on the approaches to Moscow during $12,362,000 under various acts of Conthe day.

Most of Losses Regained. It took just over a month for the charging Soviet forces to cancel out some two-thirds of the invaders' gains between Moscow and Leningrad and send them reeling back to Kholm, only 120 miles from the poorly they succeeded was manifest by the Netherlands air force in returning to the attack today. Actually, the Dutch planes are believed to be operating from secret airdromes so well hidden in the inland jungles that the Japanese have not been able to spy them out.

At Counterattack of Germans in Libya Nazis Apparently Hit At Supply Depots

Set Up in Desert

British Smash Back

CAIRO, Jan. 24.-Mobile columns of the British 8th army smashed tonight at the counterattacking forces of Nazi Gen. Erwin Rommel in a hard and sprawling battle of tanks on the eastern side of the Cirenaican desert hump.

The engagement was on a battlefield of great size, in a triangle bounded by Agedabia, Saunnu, 42 miles to the east, and Antelat, 30 miles to the north.

British Near East headquarters was without word of precise results, but felt able to report that the strong R. A. F. forces in the desert had done "great execution" in the bombing and strafing assaults on the enemy's mechanized transports all around Agedabia.

Using Several Columns.

Gen. Rommel's force was split in several columns, each with tanks. His immediate objection appeared to be destruction of the big depots of supply which the British are said to have established in the present battle area as a preliminary to continuation of their general drive on Tripolitania.

Gen. Rommel began his eastward thrust Wednesday, and the forces which he now is deploying at Agedabia have covered some 125 miles from their Gulf of Sirte base at El Agheila. British forward troops withdrew Thursday from Agedabia, and the fighting now is in an area somewhat more than 80 miles below

British-held Bengasi. While the Nazi general obviously has received appreciable reinforcement in air power, man power and probably tank power, his supply condition probably does not compare with that of the British.

R. A. F. Hits Tripoli. In addition to its own ample stores the 8th Army captured enormous amounts of supplies from the Axis during its 400-mile advance westward. Against this is the factor of the long British lines of communication through Egypt and eastern Libya, but steps to ease this position have been taken recently. Behind the Axis forces meanwhile the R. A. F. kept smashing at Tripoli, the enemy's only sizeable supply port, and a communique said a bomber raid Thursday night scattered dockside fires and set flames apparently an anti-aircraft ship.

Randolph Seeks Quick Action on Tire Theff Bill

A. D. A. and 'Baby Broker' Measures Also to Come Up

House approval of legislation making tire thefts in the District punishable as felonies, a step deemed necessary because of 33 such offenses here since January 1, is anticipated tomorrow by Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee.

Although the price-control bill will have the right of way, Repre-sentative Randolph hopes to have the tire bill called up for consideration. Under it, the theft of tires and other automobile accessories, made doubly dear by rationing, would call for penalties up to 10 rears in prison.

Other D. C. Measures

Three other District measures Mr. Randolph expects to present for passage by unanimous consent

1. Authorize the Alley Dwelling Authority to borrow from both private and public sources to carry forward its $15,000,000 low-rent housing program. 2. Outlaw "baby broker" concerns by requiring licensing of all childplacement agencies and prohibiting them from charging fees for finding foster homes for youngsters. 3. Permit the vestry of Rock

Action on the Schulte bill providing $300 annual salary increases for District firemen and Metropolitan, Park and White House police will be sought later, Mr. Randolph said, but because of its controversial nature this measure will not be permitted to delay consideration of other legislation.

In urging favorable action on the tire bill Mr. Randolph's report says: ernment is a matter of vital con-"Transportation at the seat of govcern and importance. This bill is designed to protect this transportation during war or other emergen-cies. Parking Bill to Be Pushed.

Voicing hope that the legislation would be enacted without delay. Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer yesterday urged motorists to keep a record of the serial numbers of their tires for their own protection. He pointed out that, in the event a driver's tires are stolen. he can aid police by giving them District officials still are consid-

This was suggested about a month ago, but Mr. Van Duzer said action on the proposal had been withheld pending a check to see how much additional had been a guest of licensees on work the plan would entail at the inspection stations.

Mr. Randolph said late yesterday that he also will seek committee action this week on the bill authorauxiliary buildings at Gallinger Hospital and Glenn Dale Sanitorium to accommodate some 1,000 additional patients. Mr. Randolph said that after the tension in the House on the price control legislation has been eased, he expects to have a District Committee meeting on several measures. Included are hospital facilities legislation on which he expects early advices from the District

Transportation Hearing Due. Another hearing during the coming week is also planned by Mr. Randolph on the District transportation problem. He has invited officials of the American Automobile Association, Keystone Automobile Club and other organizations and citizens' associations to attend. Correspondence made public by Mr. Randolph yesterday discloses that Congress has for years violated one of its own laws. It has refused to make appropriations for equipment to eliminate a smoke and cinder nuisance at the Capitol power plant. This was admitted in a report by David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, replying to a letter by Chairman Randolph which contained a complaint by Representative Dewey, Republican, of Illinois. Mr. Lynn recited a series of unsuccessful efforts since 1935, when the smoke law was passed, to obtain funds from Congress to install machinery to abate the smoke nuisance and catch cinders. Such funds, he said, have been refused for the last six years by the Capitol Building Commission, of which the Speaker, chairman of the Rules Committee and himself are members. Louis Rodis, president of the pharmacy company, for many years, and assumed he was asked to serve as its legal counsel in the case for this reason.' The pharmacy has an offsale class A liquor license. The Annapolis Hotel has an on-sale class C permit.

As Mr. Lodge described the issue, the hotel had air-conditioning equipment but the pharmacy did not. Mr. Lodge said he negotiated, from his private law offices, with the Manger hotel chain and succeeded in getting an agreement for installation of air - conditioning equipment for the pharmacy. He said his legal fee was paid by Mr. Rodis for the pharmacy company.

The request for air-conditioning equipment, he explained, hinged on possible loss of customers to the

On completion of that part of the temporary building program announced thus far there will be 29.100 employes working in these structures. That more "tempos" are coming may be gathered from the fact that the Public Buildings Administration still has left a large portion of the $25,000,000 deficiency appropriation earmarked for office expansion here. The 23 buildings wil! contain 2,582,000 square feet of floor space, about 200,000 feet more than the last war "tempos" had.

The Capital did not quite rid itself of temporary buildings in the 23 years which elapsed between wars. For two of the old ones are standing and, of course, in use today. These are those designated as accommodate about 2,000 additional workers. No. 2 houses the Federal Surplus Commodities Agency, which to many, is a rather strange name

Two are appropriately lettered; N, just behind the Navy Depart nounced the Government will have ment is being used by Navy, and its neighbor W, just back of the buildings than it did in the first Munitions Building, is occupied by the War Department. But, in try ing to work out some pattern, one is stumped by the fact that W is long since completed, while A, B and C will not be finished on the War College grounds until early March. The issue is further confused by Fourth street, complete and occupied by Leon Henderson's O. P. A. Then

Whitehurst Predicts Contracts Will Be Awarded by August

The colossal problem faced by the District in meeting traffic conditions was illustrated yesterday by Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst, when he forecast that by next August $8,000,000 in contracts would be awarded for highway work and bridge projects.

The statement was issued in connection with approval by the District Commissioners of revision of the 1943 fiscal year highway estimates, which had been delayed to await the 1-cent increase in the District gasoline tax and the latest judgment on Federal-aid road work here in keeping with the emergency

The revised program provides $1,-000,000 for starting construction of a $4,500,000 bridge over the Anacostia River on the line of South Capitol street, which is to connect with new traffic arteries by-passing Bollng Field, the Naval Air Station and other important areas near the southern point of the District.

Also included in the new program is a request for $150,000 to cover the cost of engineering studies and plans for four large traffic relief projects outlined in the Whitehurst survey report given to Congress late last year.

Federal Approval Given. Those projects are:

1. A trunk highway to the Northeast from the vicinity of Twelfth and K streets N.W. to Fifteenth street and Benning road N.E., which includes consideration of suggested grade separation devices and routings at or near the old Central Library Building at Massachusetts and New York avenues, Seventh, Ninth and K streets N.W.

2. A trunk highway to the Northwest from the vicinity of Connecticut avenue and K street to Twentyseventh and K streets N.W., including consideration of a depressed highway along the K street line between Connecticut avenue and 24th street.

A grade separation structure at Thirteenth and H streets N.W.

4. A grade separation structure for Dupont Circle, similar to developments now in service at Thomas and Scott Circles. In addition, Capt. Whitehurst announced that the District government had received official approval of the Public Roads Administration for four major wartime traffic relief projects, to be financed jointly by, the Federal and District govern-

'Job Insurance' Bill Is Offered in Virginia House

State Workers' Posts Would Be Waiting at End of War Service

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 24. - A "job insurance" bill for county, city or State employes called into the armed forces or civilian defense work was introduced in the House of Delegates today as the 1942 General Assembly met briefly for its first Saturday session.

The measure provides that no such employe of the State or its divisions shall forfeit the position he leaves, and that his job shall be held for him until the termination

Delegate Charles W. Moss of Richmond, sponsor of the bill, said its terms would apply to volunteers as well as those drafted for service and, if adopted, would be retroactive to the beginning of the Indorsed by Gen. Bright. Mr. Moss said he introduced the bill after talks with Brig. Gen. J Fulmer Bright, State administrator of commodity distribution, who indorsed its intent of assuring post war security to public employes who were called or volunteered for

The effective period of the bill would be terminated by a proclamation of the Governor.

During the brief sessions todayfive minutes in the Senate, 15 in the House-several bills dealing with schools were introduced.

One, by Senator R. R. Parker of Wise, would concentrate authority for local school budgets more fully in the hands of school boards. It would provide that local school budgets be drafted by the board rather than the superintendent, as is done at present, and that the Board of Supervisors, receiving the budget estimate, could accept it in full or raise or lower it by a flat percentage, but could not act on items separately.

Would Increase School Loans.
A House bill by Delegate E. Floyd
Yates of Chesterfield would liberalize literary fund loans to localities by setting a limit of 85 per cent of the total cost of proposed school buildings, additions or building sites. $100,000. Localities at present may borrow 80 per cent of the cost, providing it does not exceed $100,000. Delegate W. N. Neff of Abingdon was the sponsor of a measure to permit counties not necessarily adjacent to one another to build and operate consolidated high schools for mutual economies.

Development of State regional public libraries by means of a $50,-000 a year appropriation for the next biennium was proposed in a bill introduced by Senator William A. Wright of Tappahannock.

A survey by the Chevy Chase Fire Department of available water supply in case water mains are bombed has revealed the following figures Columbia Country Club Pond 2,500,000 gallons; Castle Moat, 5,000,000 gallons; Chevy Chase Club swimming pool, 100,000 gallons; Columbia Country Club swimming pool, 90,000 gallons, and the Chevy Chase Circle fountain, 43,000 gal-

The department also has ordered and obtained a priority rating for delivery of two portable generators, one of 1,000 watts and one of 1,250 watts in the event of disruption of the electric service in the area. Salaries Increased.

In addition the department has installed an electrical system enabling it to recharge simultaneously all four batteries on the four pieces of fire equipment.

Additional beds, blackout curtains and other equipment have been purchased, while salaries of the paid firemen have been raised to insure retention of experienced men. Members of the class to be graduated Wednesday are Henry Ravenel Gregory Prince, Francis Defandorf, James Tully, George H. Virginia Groups Await Darden's Defense Plans

Bill to Be Offered; Mann Quits Post At Arlington

Civilian defense organizations in Virginia were marking time today pending introduction in the Legislature tomorrow of Gov. Darden's "streamlined setup" for handling defense preparations.

The Arlington County Board adjourned after a session lasting only about an hour during which views were expressed that county civilian defense officials no longer had any authority, and Harrison Mann, county co-ordinator of defense activities, stepped out of the civilian defense picture, explaining that he would be glad to co-operate in the future as a private citizen.

In Alexandria, Albert V. Bryan, Commonwealth's attorney, appointed chairman of the air raid organization two weeks ago, resigned yesterday, explaining to City Manager Carl Budwesky that he believed the two jobs were too much for one man to administer adequately. Mr. Budwesky said that he would not name a successor until Gov. Darden's program had been announced, and that meanwhile the two assistant air raid wardens, Robert S. Lyles and Henry T. Moneure, would continue to function.

Activities Are Continued. So far as the Northern Virginia Regional Defense Council is concerned, activities are continuing as in the past and are expected to go on without interruption until the new setup is announced and new officials take over.

Mrs. Alma Ramsay, executive secretary of the council, which has taken the lead in defense prepara-tions in the Virginia metropolitan area, said that whatever organization the State decided is best would be supported by the personnel of the present council, and that officers would serve until relieved.

Just what the changes will be is a matter of speculation, but it is not believed that they will affect the major portion of the present

F. Freeland Chew, member of the Arlington County Board, said he belived the reorganization would be principally directed toward centralizing responsibility in elective officials or bodies, such as mayors, city or county managers or county boards, which in the last analysis would have to be responsible for the civilian defense organization and for providing funds to make it

Organization Used as Model. Dissolution of the civilian defense organization in Northern Virginia will mark an end to what has been considered one of the most progres-sive groups in the country, and one which was used as a model in many other parts of the State and Nation Most of the personnel is expected to be blanketed into the new organization, however, so that any changes brought about in the new setup will be principally along the line of administration rather than personnel, except in the top positions.

Mr. Chew and Mr. Mann agreed that no reorganization of the air raid warden and the auxiliary services established to supplement the departments was in prospect. In announcing that he was stepping out of the county defense picture, Mr. Mann appealed for additional volunteers to serve as attendants in base hospitals and for recruits in the Virginia Protective Force. It was also announced that base hospital No. 3 would be in St. Thomas More Church, 133 North Thomas street. The other hospitals in Arlington County will be at the Washington Golf and Country Club, Washington-Lee High School and the Calvary Methodist Church school building, South Twenty-third and Grant streets.

Montgomery Schools' Song Contest Closes

A contest in the Montgomery County High Schools for the best county school songs written by a student closed yesterday. The winner in each school will be announced January 30 and the county-wide winner will be selected the following week.

Sponsored by the Inter-Relations Committee of the Inter-School Council, the contest is designed to encourage closer relations among the schools and portray in the song the spirit and purpose of the county schools. The contestants could either compose both the words and music or fit words to music of a familiar song.

The finals will be held February 5 at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School when Miss Mary G. Cross, supervisor of music in the county schools and a committee of three elementary school teachers will meet the Inter-School Council to choose the winning song.

Burnette to Speak On Raid Protection

Melvin Burnette, chief training officer of the Prince Georges County air-raid service, will address a meeting of Edmonston citizens at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Edmonston School. He will tell citizens how to protect themselves against gas and bombs in an air raid. Next Sunday Mr. Burnette will address colored residents of Edmonston at the same time and place on the same subject.

Mr. Burnette also will speak at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the College Park School on gases and bombs before citizens in that area. It is expected Emanuel F. Zalesak, chief county air-raid warden, also will

Helen Keller to Speak Here Tomorrow in Victory Book Drive

Will Address Closed Meeting of Library Association

Librarians aiding in collections for the national Victory Book Cam-paign, which already has yielded 25,000 volumes here, will tomorrow gather at the Library of Congress to hear a talk by Helen Keller, noted author who was stricken blind, deaf and mute at the age of 19 months.

On behalf of the nation's sailors soldiers and marines who will receive the 10,000,000 books expected to be collected in the drive, Miss Keller will describe to a closed meeting of the District Library Association what books mean to her. Librarians at all public libraries and at George Washington, American and Catholic Universities have been volunteering their services for the past two weeks to sort the thousands of books deposited at the libraries for the soldiers. In addition, volunteers from the District Volunteer Bureau with library experience have been working at the Southwest Library branch, main storehouse for the 12,000 books brought by ones and twos to the public libraries.

Admittance Restricted. Admittance to Coolidge Hall, where Miss Keller will speak at 8:30 o'clock, will be restricted to members of the association who can show membership cards, according to John Russell Mason. president. The hall will seat only 511 of the association's 682 members.

After Miss Keller, her secretary, Miss Polly Thompson, and Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, chairman of the District book drive, have discussed the campaign, color films of Hawaii taken by John V. Hansen will be shown.

Success of the Maryland campaign was predicted yesterday by Mauritz Hallgren, chairman for the counties. Quotas of 6,000 for Montgomery County, 6.500 for Prince Georges County, 1,100 for St. Marys County and 1,250 for Charles County have been worked out on a per capita basis by Mr. Hallgren.

First reports indicated books collected were far exceeding these quotas, according to the county chairmen, Mrs. Louise C. Ferguson of Silver Spring; Carl W. Hintz, University of Maryland; Mrs. Mitchell Cochrane, La Plata, and Miss Lettie Dent, Leonardtown.

Music Also Donated. . Although most of the books will be routed through the 3rd Corps Area headquarters at Baltimore, Mrs.

Smith has already given 500 books directly to Bolling Field soldiers and is considering giving some to Arlington Cantonment men seeking some of their share in advance. Besides the nearly 25,000 books collected here, including 5,000 from the Library of Congress and 5,000 from Theaters and the National Newspaperwomen's Club, 547 records and 30 pieces of music have been

Ralph Thompson, central librarian, has kept a careful watch for collectors' items, which will be sent to New York and sale proceeds used to purchase more books. He has found an 1826 Philadelphia edition of James Thomson's "The Seasons," a Greek testament published in Philadelphia in 1833, a bound volume of the Century Magazine from May to October, 1884; a private printing of "A Rabble Came to Trenton," by Paul McCres.; a book for juveniles written by Wal-ter Wentworth in 1890 and a collection of poems by an author calling himself the "shop philosopher."

During the last 11 days of the campaign, to end February 4, contributors may leave books at District Grocery, Safeway and Brentano's Book Stores as well as the libraries. Volumes may also be

F. C. C. Plans Appeal From Rider Barring Watson From Pay Roll

Monitor Service Analyst's Case May Be Heard Before Apropriations Unit

The Federal Communications Commission is expected to appeal to the Senate Appropriations Commit-tee for elimination of a rider in the independent offices appropriation bill, which passed the House Thursday, prohibiting the payment of the salary of Dr. Goodwin Watson, chief analyst of the Foreign Broadcast Monitoring Service.

Robert G. Seaks, special coun-sel to Chairman Fly of the F. C. C., said yesterday that the commission at its Friday meeting considered an appeal to Chairman Glass of the Senate committee, for a hearing. The commission did not take action, but Mr. Seaks said he believed representations would be made on Dr. Watson's behalf.

Dr. Watson appeared before the commission at the meeting and was said to have been questioned closely. Added by Subcommittee.

The rider to bar Dr. Watson from the pay roll was added to the bill by War Output Alibis the House sub-committee on appropriations for the F. C. C. In debate on the measure Representative Wigglesworth, Republican, of Massachusetts, said he wished all House members could read the record of the sub-committee's hearing on Dr. Watson.

Representative Wigglesworth referred to matter introduced by Representative Starnes, Democrat, of Alabama, a member of the Dies Committee, which he said "leaves absolutely no doubt that Dr. Watson is totally unfitted for the position."

The controversy over Dr. Watson began on November 19, when Representative Dies attacked the former Columbia University psychology professor in a speech on the House floor.

Mr. Dies said that the appointee was "a propagandist for Communism and the Soviet Union for many years." He listed 13 alleged Communist organizations with which he said Dr. Watson had been asso-

Mr. Fly, replying in a letter to Representative Dies, denied that Dr. Watson was a redical. He pointed out that he had been carefully investigated by trained civil service operatives before his appointment. Mr. Fly said that he had studied the evidence cited by Representative Dies against the appointee and had satisfied himself that it was not

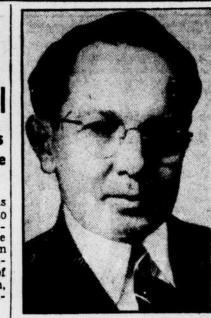

Of the 13 organizations which Representative Dies charged Dr. Watson was associated with, Mr. Fly said he learned that the appointee belonged to only one-the Consumers' Union, which he declared was not a "Communist front" organization. Mr. Fly said that Dr. Watson was "one of the outstanding social psychologists of the coun-

Pastor Sees Litvinoff On Plan to Visit Russia

Dr. J. Frank Norris, Baptist clergyman who expects to hold revival services in Russia next summer, yesterday discussed his plans with Soviet Ambassador Maxim Litvinoff and reported the envoy had assured him the Russian people would extend him a hearty welcome. Dr. Norris, who has held pastorates in Fort Worth, Tex., and De-

New Production Chief Says From Now On 'Only Results Count'

By THOMAS C. HARDMAN.

War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson declared vesterday that from now on "only results count" and "no alibis will be accepted" in the task of converting American industry to quick, all-out production of war

Calling his executives and branch and sections chiefs together for the first time since he was handed "blank check" authority by President Roosevelt, Mr. Nelson declared that "what we do in 1942 is allimportant."

"There's no use for us to talk about the great production we are going to have in 1943, 1944 and 1945 if we don't first meet the goal set for 1942," he said. "Those goals can be met. They will be met. If any of you have felt that they are impossible, I can only say that from now on we must do the impossible." More than 200 staff members heard their director warn them

For 18 months, production of war materials has been impeded by overlapping of responsibility, insufficient authority where authority was vitally needed, bureaucracy and red tape. Mr. Nelson diagnosed one of the principal troubles up to now as an inability to reach decisions quickly.

Auto Leaders Pledge Use of All Equipment For War Production

Problems of Swinging Into $8,000,000,000 Program Outlined

By DAVID J. WILKIE, Associated Press Automotive Editor,

DETROIT, Jan. 24.-Heads of the Nation's automotive industry pledged themselves today to set every item of production equipment in their possession to the task of maximum armament output in the shortest possible time.

The pledge was given at a meeting of the industry's Council for War Production, called to co-ordinate the listing of all machine tool equipment to the use of all companies, erstwhile competitors within the industry and concerns outside but engaged in war work.

More than 800 company heads. engineers, production experts and others heard outlined some of the problems involved in swinging into an $8,000,000,000 arms output program and also heard Ernest C. Kanzler, new chief of the automotive division of the War Production Board, tell what the Government

Mr. Kanzler-slender, baldish, bespectacled and with closely cropped black mustache-met with most of the car manufacturers for the first time since his appointment by the war board. He spoke bluntly of the board's objectives and of the task ahead, but won a standing pledge of full co-operation from all the automobile companies, body manufacturers, tool and die firms and other allied industries, all represented on the Council for War Pro-labor, rules will have to be changed. Educational leaders, including Mr. Jager, cannot see the advantage of accelerating high school courses. In the first place, they say, a large percentage of high school graduates never go to college. In the second place, employers are not likely to want 16-year-olds for work of any consequence, and in the third place, even under best conditions, many students have too short an exposure to education. There is no sense in hastening failure, these educators

A 16-year-old out of school, unable to get a job, unable because of priorities and material shortages to get a tennis ball or a golf ball with which to play, unable to find space in which to play, becomes a juvenile

Of course, it is pointed out, certain selected high school students can have their educational tempo stepped up if they desire it, and this places an especially important guidance problem on the teachers. They must see that these pupils are carefully selected and directed toward the proper educational exits.

In the case of the universities and colleges, it always has been possible for students in most institutions to finish early through summer study. The fundamental change for the colleges announcing accelerated programs will be the maintenance of full summer facilities and a longer summer program.

Among the coleges already announcing accelerated programs are the University of Maryland, Johns Hopkins, Wilson Teachers College, and Henry, University of California, Kavier University, six teachers' col-leges in New Jersey, Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Syracuse, Cornell, Col-gate, City College of New York, and

One of the problems arising beween college and their students is the question of credit for military service. England has developed a war-time degree which carries less prestige than the regular degree, but under which military service counts a little less than half of the number of credits required, according to Dr. Lund. This country's institutions have agreed to count military service only wehere the student asks that it be counted and to issue the degree only in cases where the student meets certain teachers, accelerated prorams will place them on a 12month rather than a 10-month The problem of physical strain and additional compensation is raised in this change, and many institutions running close to the line financially may not be able to stand the additional expense. Non-war research projects probably will be eliminated to give instructors more teaching time. The man who taught half time and spent the other half ooking into the derivatives of the adverb will become a full-time teacher, Dr. Lund says. The financial problem presented many institutions by increased salaries and by decreasing enrollments because prospective students are called to military service raises the issue of Federal aid. This will be handled by the Office of Education, as tactfully as possible, to avoid any suggestion of Federal control of education. In the same manner that engineering and vocational courses were subsidized before the war, Federal aid will be used to help institutions meet some of their financial difficulties. Many proud private institutions are now unwilling to accept the precedent of Federal aid. War is being felt on the college campuses in a number of smaller ways. Materials for laboratory experiments are scarce and this requires doubling up in the work. It is difficult, in some instances, even to replace broken crockery in college mess halls. Easter vacation trips to Washington are being canceled.

But despite the emphasis on preparing for war, neither military nor college leaders are forgetting the post-war period. For this reason the basic liberal arts courses in the colleges will continue, regardless of additions of those subjects specifially related to war and officer training. The Marine Corps needs approximately 3,000 seniors, 2,000 juniors and 500 sophomores under circumstances similar to those for the Navy. Marine officers will go to colleges in February and March to explain the plan and advise applicants.

Mrs. Robert H. Jackson And Douglas Fairbanks Speakers at Luncheon

Dimes and dollars for children afflicted with infantile paralysis constitute the Nation's pledge of faith and loyalty to President Roosevelt, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the Supreme Court justice, said yesterday at a luncheon held at the Hotel 2400 in honor of the President's diamond jubilee birthday an-

"Only by building stronger Americans can we make a stronger America," she declared. "In the past three years, 26,000 of our fellow countrymen have been struck down by infantile paralysis, and most of them, as usual, are children. Surely in this time of overwhelming responsibility for the President, it must be a joy and a comfort to know that we of healthy America are carrying on the crusade which he so bravely began.

REPORT TO THE NATION

Third Installment of Archibald MacLeish's Statement on Status of War Effort

IV. The Joint Effort

The sun never sets on the men and materials of the Lend-Lease Act, passed by Congress a scant 10 months ago. It is a unique war weapon. The men who fight or labor under the banners of lend-lease range from young British pilots, trained in the United States, to steam-shovel men at work on bases in the cold and fog of Northern Ireland. The materials vary from vitamins for the babies of besieged England to bombers and tanks.

The theater of lend-lease is the world itself. Thirty-three governments, in addition to the British Empire, are eligible for benefits. The United States, with roughly 7 per cent of the world's area and population, has pledged itself to become the arsenal of democracy for 72 per cent of the world's area and for 64 per cent of its peoples. To this end almost $13,000,000,000 has been appropriated.

Does the Axis plan a push eastward? We are preparing for such thrust. Out of lend-lease funds, British bases are being built at Rangoon in Burma, at Karachi on the Arabian Sea, and other vital outposts on the Persian Gulf and in Eritrea. Planes already bought by the Britsih are being delivered by the Army Air Corps Ferrying Command; new planes are being purchased. Pan American Airways has received a subsidy for a new route across the South Atlantic. Another lendlease air line reaches to Iceland. Trucks supplied with lend-lease fuel and oil careen over the crazy twists of the Burma Road, China's main life line. The United States Public Health Service is battling malaria among the 250,000 Chinese laborers who are building a railroad, paralleling the Burma Road.

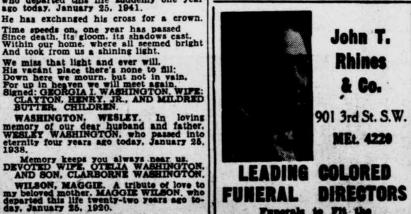

Wide Needs Outlined.

The "relatively small trickle" of assistance—so it was described last September-can hardly be called a river now. But it is a stream and it is growing fast. Last March only $18,000,000 in lend-lease aid were given. By November, 1941, this swelled to $283,000,000 a month. A grand total of 1.2 billion dollars has been spent, which is some 10 per cent of all we have spent for defense and war since the Lend-Lease Act was passed.

The stream must become a river, a torrent, and then a flood. Training British pilots, guarding the health of those who labor on the Burma Road, repairing war and merchant vessels—all must continue and be augmented. Planes, tanks, guns, ammunition and food must flow in even greater quantities to Russia, the Dutch East Indies, Australia. Burma, China, Africa, the Middle East, the British Isles and South America.

The story of lend-lease goes back to the collapse of Europe. France had been buying here. Great Britain, to a much greater extent, had been exchanging her credits in this country for munitions and other supplies. The spring of 1940 brought disaster. An invasion of England seemed certain. We did not wait upon technicalities. The British received all the guns, munitions and other supplies which we could spare. The guns were of World War vintage and their value had been written down from $300,000,000 to $43.-000,000. Yet they might well have saved the British Isles had England been invaded.

That summer the American people awoke to their own danger and the first of the defense billions was provided. Our policy was defined by the Presidentdefense of the Western Hemisphere, continued and increasing aid to Great Britain, the freedom of the seas, denial of appeasement to Hitler.

Historic House Bill 1776. By now it was a joint effort. The winter and early spring of 1940-41 made it apparent that the joint effort would fail unless the hands of Britain were upheld. The British, who had continued to buy their necessities of war. were running out of dollars. Ships were being sunk in the Atlantic at the rate of 5,000,000 tons a year. On January 10, 1941, a bill with the historic number, 1776. was introduced in the House of Representatives. This was the Lend-Lease Act. It was followed by an appropriation of $7,000,-000,000. Seven months later a second appropriation of nearly $6,000,000,000 was approved.

It was relatively easy to appropriate the billions; it was infinitely more difficult to transform the dollars into weapons or serv ices or food-and, finally, to get them on ships en route to their destinations of desperate need. No Government agency existed to do the work. Our industrial productive system was already jammed. The shortage of ships grew hourly more grave as the sinkings continued. The first organization created by Executive order was the Division of Defense Aid Reports. Subsequently, the division's name was changed to the Office of Lend-Lease Administration. A clearing house for requests for aid from the nations which are fighting the fight of the democracies, the Lend-Lease Administration buys nothing, produces nothing, delivers nothing. The purchasing, producing and delivering are done by the War and Navy Departments, the Department of Agriculture, the Treasury Department and the Maritime Commission. The State Department makes the agreements whereby nations receiving assistance clearly understand their rights and obligations. The Board of Economic Warfare is consulted, as is the Office of Production Management. Final determination of the countries to be assisted rests with the Presi-

Actual exports sent abroad thus far hardly exceed $600,000,000. The balance of the 1.2 billion dollars already spent went for services rendered, for air and other training programs in the United States, for the repair of ships, the construction of munitions plants. Future exports will be gigantic when we achieve allout war production.

Big Sum for Aviation. Of the total of 2.8 billion dollars appropriated for aviation, 2.7 billions already have been earmarked, and contracts up to 1.8 billions have been let. Few of these airplanes have been shipped abroad as yet, but they are beginning to come off the assembly lines.

Other aerial warfare activities financed by Lease-Lend include the Army Air Corps Ferrying Command, new air lines across the South Atlantic and from West Africa to Egypt, new airports, the training of thousands of British pilots.

For lease-lend ships and shipping, nearly $2,000,000,000 has been authorized. On our East and West coasts, on the Gulf of Mexico, and on the Great Lakes 26 shipyards are turning out leaselend ships. Existing yards are being enlarged and new ones built. Sailors of British war vessels and merchant ships have been fed and housed here while their ships were being repaired.

Lease-lend appropriations for war on the land total almost $5,-000,000,000. This will go for ordnance, for tanks, for miscellaneous military supplies, and for expanding production facilities in the United States. All this is aside from supplying food.

To Great Britain have gone guns, tanks, medical supplies, raw materials, and machine tools. These necessities are to go also to Australia, New Zealand, India. and South Africa. Several hundred American tanks have already been in combat in the North Airlean campaign. Aid to China is far from adequate. But heavy machinery of still far from large enough, are expected to be stepped up rapidly. This will include large quantities of oil and gasoline.

Huge Food Supply Shipped. The millionth ton of American food has safely arrived in England. This has defeated Hitler in his attempt, through submarines and aircraft, to starve England into submission. For a time this was a real threat. As long as present shipments are maintained, Hitler will never starve England. More than that, with fuller rations, British workers will be able to increase their production of munitions. Food for England was a primary objective of the Lease-Lend Act and is one of the most successful parts of the entire program. Over half a billion pounds of meat and fish products had been provided by the end of November, 1941, in addition to hundreds of millions of pounds of sugar, eggs, milk, fruits, vegetables, cereals, and grains. We have undertaken to do much more. By the middle of 1942 we will have supplied these totals: dairy products equivalent to 5.6 billion pounds of milk; meat and lard from 9,000,000 hogs; eggs from 40,000,000 hens; 45,000,000 pounds of chicken-among other items. As a whole, food shipments will represent 6 or 7 per cent of our total farm production. Weather permitting, production of those foods most needed for human health will be greater than ever in our history. No touch of altruism lies in the lease-lend program. We have been sending supplies to the nations which have fought a delaying action while we were getting prepared. In exchange for leaselend aid, American airfields have been permitted in British territory in Africa; from all over the world we are getting vital supplies of essential war materialschromite, asbestos, platinum, tung oil, tin, tungsten.

The purpose of the Lease-Lend Act is military. It is a war weapon. Methods of repayment have been left until after the war. The law says, "the benefit to the United States may be payment or repayment in kind or in property. or any other direct or indirect benefit which the President deems satisfactory."

The first benefit is to be the defeat of the Axis.

Failure to Register as Foreign Agent Laid To Naturalized Citizen

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24-The Federal Bureau of Investigation announced today the arrest of Richard Ernst Weber, 55, a naturalized German, on a charge of failure to register as a foreign agent.

P. E. Foxworth, assistant director of the F. B. I., said Weber, also known as Richard Dick, was manager of an aircraft parts company at Babylon, Long Island, for a year prior to last Labor Day. Since then he had been a fugitive.

Mr. Foxworth said the arrest was linked to a recent spy case which resulted in penitentiary sentences for 33 men and women convicted in Brooklyn Federal Court of espionage on behalf of the German govern-a hideout at Three Bridges, N. J. He was held in $25,000 bail for a hearing February 17 when arraigned in Brooklyn Federal Court today. Conviction would carry a possible prison and a $5,000 fine or both.

A former member of the German Army who came to this country in 1908 and was naturalized in 1928, Weber was arrested during the World War as an enemy alien and was interned at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. said. For much of the time since his release in May, 1919, he had worked as a mechanic in radio and airplane parts plants in this country.

Senators to Launch Army Camp Heating Investigation

Reynolds Asks Officers And Others to Testify About Conditions

Chairman Reynolds of the Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday appointed a special committee to investigate reports of improper heating conditions in Army encampments and cantonments.

Armed with letters and telegrams, Senator Reynolds named Senators Wallgren, Democrat, of Washington and Thomas, Republican, of Idaho, with himself as chairman, to "air the charges" of "inadequate and antiquated heating systems installed in Army barracks."

Hearings will begin the first part of next week, Senator Reynolds stated. He has asked Army officers and civilians, many of them con-nected with the medical, engineering and ordnance corps to appear. Senator Reynolds said charges have been placed before the Military Affairs Committee that a number of American soldiers have been asphyxiated because of poor ventilating systems recently installed. Infections Traced.
Also, an epidemic of sore throats and serious nose infections have been traced directly to the breathing of coal gas and other obnoxious poisons through faulty outlets. Poorly trained personnel—soldiers made into firemen without proper apprenticeship—is partly to blame for this, he said.

The North Carolina Senator said his office has received numerous complaints from Army officers, civilian employes at camps, soldiers themselves, their families, and doctors who claim even the common colds suffered by the soldiers can be traced, in part, to lack of proper

In explanation of this Col. G. F. Lewis wrote the Senator: "I is the usual practice to detail a soldier fireman to care for three or four furnaces during an eight-hour period. These firemen are instructed in the method of firing, but in many instances in the past furnaces have been operated in a careless manner. It is a common shortcoming among the soldier firemen to overfire the furnaces to reduce the necessity for frequent firing."

Senator Reynolds pointed out that, because of this practice, accumulation of gas, which was subsequently ignited, resulted in ex-

Nation's Biggest Task Is to Fill War Needs. Jones' Report Says

Secretary Cites Progress In Speeding Output; Co-operation Stressed

Pointing out that only one-eighth of the goods and services produced in the United States were going into defense use at the end of the last fiscal year, Secretary of Commerce Jones, in his annual report made publ's yesterday, declared the country's "one impelling task" is to increase this proportion to the level required by the war program.

The bulk of the Secretary's report was devoted to a review of economic developments for the 12month period ending June 30, 1941.

"In meeting the great demands made upon us, it is essential that the new problems arising from the intensive mobilization of our resources be faced squarely and solved promptly," Secretary Jones warned. "Usual methods must more and more give way to speedier devices, and the guiding beacon must be the national interest. Decisions should be directed toward the realization of the paramount objective-increased output. The task before us requires co-operation of business, labor and consumer with the Gov-

Sheean Says Allies Hopes in Pacific Lie In Aid to China

Separate Peace Might Follow Closing of Burma Road, Writer Warns

The hope of an Allied victory in the Pacific lies in "intelligent collaboration with our Chinese ally," in the opinion of Vincent Sheean.

In speaking before a Bryn Mawr College scholarship benefit yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel the writer gave a realistic estimate of Japanese victories and prospects in the Pacific on the basis of an extensive tour he made of danger spots shortly before the outbreak of the war.

Mr. Sheean warned that China might be forced to accept a separate peace if Japan succeed in closing the Burma road, now the last source of supply from the outside world. He expressed the hope that substantial numbers of bombers and fighters are en route to re-inforce Rangoon, and Singapore. Co-ordinated Plan For Conquest

Japan and Germany are pressing a "co-ordinated articulated plan for world conquest" which appears to be "working perfectly, with neither making an important move without the knowledge of the other, he declared.

Mr. Sheean said Japan, no less than her Nazi ally, is embarked on "racial superiority." He said this long-range plan of conquest was launched as early as 1895 when Japan took the island of Formosa from China.

The rise of Japan's military power in the Far East is now sustained by a trained and equipped army of 4,000,000 and from 12,000,000 to 15,000,000 trained reserves, he said, adding Japan has some 5,000 modern warplanes and numerous guns. tanks and ships, "the extent of which we have never been allowed

Loss of Singapore and Burma, he said, would be a severe blow, but even worse would be a Japanese edvance across the "stepping stone" islands leading to Australia. The United Nations, he said, "must cling to the islands between Australia and Hawaii at all costs.'

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. Howell Moorehead, honorary

Morgenthau Demands Closing of Loopholes In New Tax Law

Says Tax-Free Bonds Give Wealthy Refuge From Income Levies

By the Associated Press

CLEVELAND, Jan. 24.—Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau de-clared today "the very first billion" of President Roosevelt's goal of $9.000,000,000 in new revenue should be obtained by closing remaining loopholes in our tax system.

Blasting tax-exempt State and municipal bonds and other "glaring examples" as dangerous "to the unity we need to win this war," Secretary Morgenthau pledged himself to "fight for the speedy removal of any defects in the tax laws which may injure our national morale.

"This is not the time for me to discuss the new tax program," he told Cleveland's City Club. "The President has said that we must have $9.000,000,000 in new revenue. We have no more right to fall short of that goal than we would have to fall short of the President's announced goal of 60,000 planes and 45.000 tanks in 1942."

Refuge for Wealthy.

Delivering his first address in more than a month, Mr. Morgenthau asserted - apparently with presidential approval - that taxfree securities provide "wealthy taxpayers a possible refuge, not from some income tax, but from all in-

"No matter how much money may be needed for the war, no matter how high the tax rates may be for others, a taxpayer is not obliged to contribute anything in this hour of his country's peril, if only he can afford to lay his hands upon a sufficient amount of tax-exempt securities. • • • It is high time, in my opinion, to tax the income of State and municipal securities—not only the income of future issues, but also the income from those issues now outstanding.

He declared this loophole cost the Treasury, at present tax rates, about $200,000,000 a year; that another $55,000,000 escaped in the nine States having the community property system; that separate income tax returns for husband and wife caused a $260,000,000 leak, and that $80,000,000 was lost because under the income tax law's "percentage depletion provision" owners of mines and oil wells are permitted to dethe amount of money" they put into

Other Glaring Examples. "I have pointed out the most glaring examples of these loopholes." Mr. Morgenthau said, "but there are others" which cause almost a

We gave that a lot of thought." he told reporters, "but we had a poll taken which showed two-thirds of the people prefer to have them called Defense bonds. They've been going so well that perhaps we have become a little superstitious about changing."

Red Army Confident of Crushing Germany in Year, Cripps Says

LONDON, Jan. 24.-Sir Stafford Oripps, returning from 18 months drive. as Britain's ambassador to Moscow, predicted today that war between R sia and Japan was inevitable and said the Red Army was confident of crushing Germany by next fall and winter.

9,000,000 well-equipped men in their still growing armed forces, "intend to make the conquest absolutely complete and thorough." Sir Stafford did not elaborate either on this phase of his tribute to the fighting strength and heart of the Soviet Union or on the potential Russian-Japanese strife in the

Russia and Japan, he declared, have long standing differences which never can be settled except by force.

Intimates Full Preparations. That was his only allusion to Russian-Japanese relations, but he intimated that the Red Army, with twice the number of troops it had at the start of the war with Germany last June 22, was prepared to deal with its enemies either in the east or the west

The British labor leader, who is at the height of his popularity because of his successful mission to Moscow, attributed much of the Red Army's success to the Russian policy of shunting older generals into minor jobs and giving younger men a chance to show their mettle. "Some other countries I know of might well follow this policy of giving youth its chance," he re-marked tartly.

In some political quarters it is believed that Sir Stafford may plunge into the parliamentary fight over changes in Britain's war cabinet, but his reference to the gen-

Russia's successes, Sir Stafford also told a press conference, can be traced to the directing genius of Joseph Stalin, whom he described as a "great strategist" and the principal author of Russia's master war

Stalin, he said, is 10 times as strong with his people now as he was at the start of the struggle seven months ago.

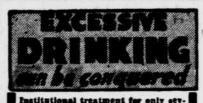

Although Russia will have twice as many men under arms by spring as she had then, Sir Stafford warned against any misconception of the Red Army's resurgent winter The Germans are not routed, he said. "Losses on both sides are extremely heavy and the Germans are fighting to the last man."

Excellent Spirit. The chief factor behind the Soviet successes, he declared, was the spirit of the Russians, giving them And, he said, the Russians, with strength to withstand enormous suffering. In some areas, he de-clared, food is scarce because transportation facilities have been given over to war uses and in others blasted buildings give poor shelter from the bitter cold.

The former Ambassador said Rusdans generally were friendly toward the British and profoundly im-pressed by American mechanical genius but, as a rule, were poorly nformed on affairs abroad.

Strasser's Activities in Canada Questioned by H. G. Wells

'Free German' Movement Declared Recruiting Aid of Refugees to Save Reich From Russia, Now British Ally

By H. G. Wells,

LONDON.-I want to know everything I can about Otto Strasser. Ever since this war began I have wanted to know clearly what we are supposed to be fighting for and what we are fighting against.

By chance, in the house of the Foreign Minister of Bermuda, I encountered Otto Strasser, and the manner of our meeting and one or two things about it aroused my curiosity so violently that I have gone on accumulating material about him ever since. I am going to summarize here for the convenience of Mr. Anthony Eden (for whom my respect grows by leans and bounds) and of any member of Parliament who may want to make use of it. I want to know why Otto Strasser is not in a concentration camp and why he has been petted and encouraged by a number of people in responsible positions in Britain and Canada. He and his brother Gregor were bloodstained Nazis. He makes considerable claim to copyright in the Nazi idea, and he was the close associate of Goering, Hess. Hitler and the rest of them for some years. Gregor Strasser, Hitler, Hess, were all together after the abortive Munich putsch in the free and easy prison of Landsberg, where "Mein Kampf" was concocted. (Goering had bolted abroad.) Strasser tells the story with obvious resentment and a sort of scandal-making malice in his "Hitler et Moi," and particularly how his brother discovered those charming people, Himmler and Goebbels, and how basely these valuable finds betrayed him and preferred to follow Hitler's star. Remarkable Propaganda.

There is a considerable Otto Strasser propaganda going on; you can get a whole row of it in uniform bindings, and one of its leading books, "Nemesis," by Douglas Reed, gives the story of this "man that Hitler fears" in a color far more flattering and acceptable to the English turn of mind than Strasser's own self-revelation. He has translated "Hitler and I" into spirited English and there you can read a lot of stuff that I, for one, am disinclined to believe, about Hitler's unspeakable vices. This sort

"'And to think,' Paul murmured one evening, 'that Gregor once stopped Hitler from committing suicide.'

"'When was that?' I asked, not very attentively.

"Paul hesitated, then continued in low voice: "'After Hitler murdered his niece Gely.' "At this I started.

"'Did Gregor tell you that?'

"Paul nodded. "'I swore to keep it secret. Gregor spent three days and three nights with Adolf, who was like a madman. He shot her during a quarrel. Perhaps he did not realize what he was doing. As soon as he had done it, he wanted to commit suicide, but Gregor prevented him."

And so forth. He explains how he came to know such remarkable particulars. He knew Gely. "I used to pay her attentions. She was no prude." And by a singular coincidence he knew all about it from a certain photographer's daughter. She, too, was no prude. There are also long conversations between Strasser and Hitler, told with a marvelous fullness-Strasser's memory must be wonderful-in which Adolf gets told Met Strasser in Bermuda.

Strasser and, for that matter, his friend Douglas Reed write better when they refrain from autobiography. Strasser is a well-read man and he can run a "philosophical basis" for his views as convincingly as most of us; he can generalize about secular movements of power as wildly as that industrious propagandist of pro-German inevitability, Rudolf Steiner, and he has even a "law of triune polarity" of his very own. It is the old question of the one and the many, beaten up with Hobbes and that ersatz history which Germans affect. Like prohibition whisky, it looks

I met this remarkable man at the end of 1940 on my way back from America, where I had been lecturing and talking upon the absolute necessity of co-operation between the English-speaking world and Russia. I was held up by the weather in Bermuda and, as I had heard in America of a notion for dealing with U-boats that seemed to be good, I went to the Foreign Minister of Bermuda, for Bermuda has a foreign minister of its own, to get him, inter alia, to send a cipher message to the Admiralty about this notion.

all right until you come to tackle it.

I need not have bothered. At Whitehall I was handed over to a sort of professional snubber of no scientific standing whatever that I could discover, who conveyed to me that the navy did not want to be bothered with this notion, and when I protested to the first lord he told me that the notion had been considered but that all experimenting with it had been stopped at the outbreak of the war. (Oh England! My England!) The only things for me to do seemed to be to break windows or shrug my shoulders. I did the latter. Insanely Anti-Bolshevik.

The navy is learning, as it prefers to do, in the expensive school of experience, and we have got to build a lot more battleships. But that is by the way. If nothing came of that anti-submarine notion (unless it got to the Germans or Japanese) it did at least lead to my discovery of Otto Strasser in Bermuda.

I was told of the great and wonderful secret and in an atmosphere of hush, hush, we met. We shook hands-I knew very little of him then except as a distinguished German refugee from Hitlerand he knew still less about me and the lectures I had been giving in America groups, favored by the State Departabout Russia. Finland and all that—but | ment, for blueprinting the new Central as we talked this discord in our attitudes | Europe. became apparent and our conversation warmed up. I realized he was quite insanely anti-Bolshevik and soaked to the marrow with the idea of the German people being first and foremost in Europe and the world. Most of his declarations of opinion conclude with "Heil Ger-

It seemed to me that our worthy but, as it was then, rather alien-spirited foreign office at home, must be more or less aware of the activities of its little brother in Bermuda, and, as I had already been denouncing Lord Halifax and Lord Lothian as misrepresenting the general ideas of the British common man to the American common man, I pursued my inquiries into this new piece of diplomatic idiocy with alarm.

Raising Armed Force. And here are the essential facts. I will not comment on them; they speak for themselves. We British are allies of the Russians and we are bound in honor for this war and after the war to stand by them as stoutly as they are now standing by us. This adventurer is now in Canada, raising an armed force to save Germany from Bolshevism, and the government is allowing that to happen. He is getting arms, while many of our airfields are still very short of defense

His latest book, "L'Aigle Prussien Sur L'Allemagne" (The Prussian Eagle Over Germany), is an impudent attempt on the soundest Nazi lines to exploit the religious feelings and prejudices of the French Canadians for his projected revival of Germany. "In spite of my short stay in this country I cannot doubt that Quebec will play a great role in the reconstruction of Europe wherein the French spirit will have a large share."

. . And he has a great scheme for a pseudo-fragmentation of Germany, leaving it in fragments to come together again with a thunderclap whenever they have sufficiently recovered from their coming defeat to be disposed for further mischief. He goes on-forgive my vulgarity-to lubricate the suckers. "It is my duty as European, as German, as Catholic, to demonstrate without relaxation that it will not suffice to conquer Hitler and Nazi-ism" - "Prussianism also is execrable."

Authorities Acquiescent.

And this is going on now, and it must be going on with the acquiescence of our authorities. This Strasser movement is to be called the "Free German" movement. And when at last the break comes, then, so as not to hurt the fine feelings of the German people, already deeply wounded by the writings of Lord Vansittart, this Strasser army, enlarged by that time by an ever-increasing accession of "Free Germans," pseudorefugees and tourists, is to be conveyed across to Berlin to protect it from the unforgettable indignity of being occupied, as it might be otherwise, by Poles, Palestinians, Greeks, Serbs and even (Pah!) godless Russians.

The "Free Germans" will understand their unfortunate fellow Germans, and, except for a little cleaning-up of the early feuds of Strasser & Co. against Goering & Co. and Goebbels & Co. and the like, and an expropriation of Protestant Prussia by a swarm of carefully selected Catholic peasants, nothing will occur to arouse that deep resentment for defeat that, we are assured, is one of the noblest of German characteristics.

But it may be that it is not the Atlantic powers who will get first to Berlin, and it may be that peoples who have learned at first hand what the German considers suitable treatment for an invaded people will anticipate them. Strasser's propaganda is incessant. He writes articles in our advanced journals upon the decay of morale in Germany and the necessity of Otto Strasser. This copy of "L'Aigle Prussien Sur L'Allemagne" before me is addressed to one of them and it is autographed with a flourish, "Hommage de Otto Strasser." Manifestly he must have supporters in high places, or he would be disarmed and put into a concentration camp

No comment from me is necessary. Merely I call attention to the fact that this is going on while we are in alliance with Russia, and that Russia is behaving with the utmost punctilo toward us. (Copyright, 1942, by H. G. Wells, Translation Rights Reserved.)

Visa Denied Strasser For Entry Into U. S.

Otto Strasser has applied for a visa to enter the United States, and his application has been refused, it is learned from authoritative sources. Strasser's haven now is Canada.

Representatives of Central European governments in exile have been instrumental in preventing Strasser's admission to this country, where his brother, Paul, a Benedictine monk, has found sanctuary. They are said to consider him only an unsuccessful Nazi, deserving of no special consideration, who might endanger their hopes for the restitution of their countries.

The State Department, it is reported by persons close to that agency, fears that Strasser would lay the groundwork here for undemocratic plans calculated to give him a high degree of authority in the reconstituted post-war Germany. State Department conversations with respected German refugees have convinced the department that Strasser has

Strasser is anti-Hitler, but not anti-Fascist, the State Department suspects. He has a program for the reconstruction of Central Europe, and the United States Government is eager that he be kept from promoting his program here and thus complicating the activities of other

Wars Shaped Roosevelt's Destiny

Birthday Finds Him Fit for Exacting Tasks of World War II

By Marquis W. Childs

SIXTY years ago this coming Friday
Franklin Delano Roosevelt was born into the comfortable squirarchy of the Hudson River Valley. No one, unless it was his mother, a woman of extraordinary character and prescience, felt the shadow of the wing of destiny over that

The man who will be 60 years old this week is known as few Americans have ever been known. He is known to the meanest coolie on the Burma Road. His is a name that issues familiarly from the rare loudspeaker in the Moroccan desert. On ships at sea and under the sea, in the far strange places of the earth you hear those Dutch-sounding syllables . . . Roosevelt.

For millions of men and women in the prison that is Europe it has the quick connotation of hope. For other millions it is a name of fear and hate. On the world stage this man is now front and center. It is his destiny, a terrifying and wonderful destiny, to stand there almost alone, unsmiling, grim, resolute.

The curious thing is that he should have gone so long before the mark of his future was obvious on him. In more ways than one his illness of 20 years ago was a turning point. He was close to death. He was threatened with an invalid's existence. And something happened within the man, something that was to alter his life entirely.

Has Stuck to Pledge.

It is what gives his birthday a special significance. The day is dedicated to the crusade that he started against the scourge of infantile paralysis. Having suffered from this scourge, he resolved to do everything in his power to help other sufferers and he has never, even in all the press of world affairs, forgotten that pledge. On Friday night in every city and village in the land Americans will dance in order that other Americans may be helped to walk.

Not long after Pearl Harbor the President, as he shaved, was talking with his press secretary, Stephen Early, about the reaction of the press to that national tragedy. Early pointed out that editorial writers, columnists and correspondents almost without exception had commented on the calm way in which the President had come through that ordeal. He doesn't seem to have any nerves was a frequent comment in the aftermath of the trying week that began on December 7. Well, why not, the President said, reminding his friend and adviser that war was not exactly a new experience to him. Actually he saw probably a greater part of the general war area in 1918 than any other American. So much has happened to Mr. Roosevelt in the intervening years that the public has more or less forgotten that chapter in his life. But not Mr. Roosevelt himself! His service as Assistant Secretary of the Navy from 1913 to 1920 was one of the great adventures of his life and particularly during the war years.

Moreover, he reminded Mr. Early that his speeches in recent years have contained repeated warnings of the peril America was in. Others preferred not to believe this, but the President was firmly convinced that the Nazis meant soon or late to strike directly at this country. Therefore when it came he was less surprised than perhaps any one else.

Renewal of Career.

To the President it meant taking up again a career that had been broken off in 1920. Today he is Commander in Chief and his word is final in all departments of the Government. During the World War he had to make decisions only for the Navy Department where, incidentally, his chief, Josephus Daniels, entrusted him with the lion's share of responsibility.

In 1913 when he became Assistant Secretary of the Navy Mr. Roosevelt was 31. He was only 38 when he finished his tour of duty in that office. An active, energetic young man, he managed during those seven years to see for himself virtually all of the American defense bases. He visited the Canal Zone and the West Indies. In charge of procurement, supplies and transportation, he inspected plants and Navy yards throughout the country.

But the real adventure came when he boarded a destroyer in the spring of 1918 for Europe. It was a rough crossing with the ship blacked out and the menace of submarines always present. His was a roving commission of inspection and the first port of call was the Azores. From there the destroyer took the young Assistant Secretary to destroyer bases in Ireland and then to destroyer, subchaser and air bases in England.

It was more war, in terms of geography and even in terms of peril, than most professional sailors or soldiers get out of two or three wars. And it is small wonder that after such an excursion the young Assistant Secretary should have contracted double pneumonia on the homeward voyage on the Leviathan. He was carried off the ship at New York on a stretcher and when he had recovered after a long convalescence he began a new phase of his life.

Was Stricken in 1921. The new phase began with the attack of poliomyelitis which came in 1921, for no one had taken too seriously the trial flight into politics in 1920 when he had been the Democratic vice presidential candidate. That was the turning point, that ordeal by suffering and invalidism. He came out of it in many ways a different person, more disciplined, more mature, a man with depth of character that had not been visible before.

No one has ever heard him whine: His old teacher, the Rev. Dr. Endicott Peabody, venerable headmaster of Groton Preparatory School until a year ago, tells of his first meeting with Mr. Roosevelt after his illness in the library at Hyde Park. Dr. Peabody started to express his sympathy to the young man in the wheel chair. But Mr. Roosevelt

"What a chance it's given me," he said. "Look at all the books I've never had always wanted-I have the time."

In 1924, three years after he had been | first year in the White House. paralyzed, Mr. Roosevelt first heard of During the past year there have been Warm Springs, Ga., an unknown health | two blows. The President's mother, Mrs. | resort 75 miles south of Atlanta. He was persuaded to try a cure there. The possibilities of the place captured his ready imagination. He felt that physical exercise in the warm spring water and repeated massage definitely helped him and he wanted to help others.

Two years later through his efforts experimental work under expert supervision was begun when 23 patients were placed under observation for periods of from 5 to 17 weeks. The following year the Warm Springs Foundation, a nonprofit organization, was formed to promote what was fast becoming a center for the treatment of sufferers from infantile paralysis.

Yielded to Smith's Plea.

Believing he would be able to walk again if he persisted in his cure, Mr. Rosevelt resisted all efforts for many months to draft him as a candidate for the race for Governor of New York. But when his old friend, Al Smith, put it on the basis of party loyalty and helping along the national ticket he yielded.

Thereafter he was to see Warm Springs only on vacation and at more and more infrequent intervals. Each time he went there he was restored in body and spirit. The President had a remarkable capacity for putting aside one set of preoccupations and taking up another. Coming from Washington, he left behind the burdens of state and threw himself enthusiastically into the development of the health center. He took a personal interest in each new building that went up, in each new patient and doctor. Out of this project he drew a warm sense of contributing toward helping others who had suffered from the same disease. During the crowded years in Washington—it's nearly nine years now—one imperative demand has been an occasional interval of escape. To get away on a boat was almost as curative as Warm Springs. The important thing has been the respite. And when the presidential conscience held him to his desk, the President's personal physician, Admiral Ross McIntire, was stern. His old sinus trouble, the only chronic ailment he has, flared up when he got too tired. Then he was told to cut down on cigarettes. The President has always been a source of amazement to the men around him. Working tirelessly, he saw other perfectly normal, healthy individuals fall away with fatigue or with that change of purpose and direction which is a kind of fatigue. Through the intensive campaigning of 1936 he rode with a light-hearted gaiety, not really extending himself in a contest which he knew to be one sided.

Seldom Showed Worry. As the shadow of the coming European war grew longer across the world, the President now and then let his close advisers see the worry that gnawed at him. But for the most part the public at large, in spite of the increasing gravity of his references to foreign affairs, saw no change in the blithe campaigner who could laugh at his stuffy critics and make millions of people laugh with him.

Outwardly the change has been slight. For those who have seen him week in and week out it has been almost imperceptible. To realize the difference you have to turn back to the pictures of that still young looking man who was inaugurated for the first time on March 4, 1933. He had then quality of youth which has been supplanted by a look of settled maturity. Above all it is perceptible in his head which in a curious way seems to have grown more massive. It was always an outside head. Now it seems to have taken on heroic proportions; the jutting brow with the now almost white hair that has grown sparser: the often caricatured jaw; the broad expanse of cheek and the Roosevelt drama recall only one period when his manner seemed to undergo a definite change. That was in September of 1939. Rumor had him jittery. Grim was a better word, perhaps, to describe the mood that came over him. Two months passed before he was his normal, casual self again.

In the spring of 1940 he underwent his longest White House illness. An attack of intestinal influenza sent him to bed for 10 days, and there followed an eightday convalescence at Warm Springs. Up to that time two weeks would have covered the entire period of "in bed under doctor's orders" during his two

First, of course, vital decisions were being reached on the whole conduct of the war-decisions which will affect the future of virtually every human being in the entire world. Then, like any other house guest, Mr. Churchill made demands on the time of his host.

Schedule Often Upset. The two men lead dissimilar lives. Mr.

Roosevelt has a fairly regular daily schedule, waking between 8 and 8:30, going to bed around 11, working at his stamp collection or reading for an hour or so and then dropping off to sleep about midnight. Of course, this schedule has been upset many times in recent months, but when he can the President adheres to it. Mr. Churchill has no regard for the clock whatsoever. He works in long, hard spurts and sleeps when he happens to feel like it. In London his cabinet ministers are called out of bed at any hour of the night. Naturally Mr. Roosevelt tried to accommodate himself to his guest and friend. One result was that he lost considerable sleep. He had a brief interval of rest away from the White House while the Prime Minister was in Florida, but this was not sufficient to pick him up again.

While no one has discussed it, the possibility is that the President will try to get away again in the early spring, perhaps before. His destination will probably not be announced, but a good guess might be Warm Springs. He needs the tonic for mind and body that that extensively in the Far East knows that prestige is the foundation of the empires which the white man has established there. And it is this fact which makes the series of Japanese successes a much more significant matter than the loss of territory involved.

Territory that is conquered can be reconquered. But when prestige is lost it is at least fundamentally impaired. This is particularly true when prestige has come to be associated primarily with military, government and commercial superiority. These characteristics, rather than his attempts in moral and ethical leadership, have unfortunately tended to characterize the dominance of the white man around the fringe of Asia.

So implications of the rapid Japanese conquest of Hong Kong, most of the Philippines, the Malay Peninsula and several outposts of the Netherlands Indies cannot be assessed merely in strategic and economic terms. These are important. But more important is the present evaporation of that legend of white supremacy which for two centuries has enabled a relative handful of alien officials, traders and soldiers to rule the teeming millions of the East. It is a legend which will not be easily restored. Nor is the problem made easier by evidence that the Chinese armies, alone of those resisting Japanese aggression, have so far been able to throw the invaders back. It does not help white prestige to have it whispered throughout Asia that it takes one yellow race to check the conquest of another.

Power in Japan's Slogan. Japan may not definitely hold Hong Kong. But it is doubtful that any responsible Chinese could today be found to predict the eventual return of this former Crown Colony to British rule. There is revolutionary power in the Japanese slogan of Asia for the Asiatics, not less so because it does not specify which Inconscipuously tucked away amid news of more dramatic events there have lately been numerous items tending to confirm the opinion that movements of a most far-reaching character are becoming operative in the Far East. And since some of these trends were pronounced even before the war, it is not surprising that they should be accentuated by the present upheaval.

An incident which promptly made the front page this week was the arrest of the Prime Minister of Burma, who recently vainly endeavored to persuade Winston Churchill to grant dominion status to this important outpost of British India. The place of Premier U Saw's arrest has not been made public. But the reason, as announced from London, is that "he has been in contact with Japanese authorities since the outbreak of war with Japan."

This particular Burmese leader may be, as alleged, a bad egg. The British refusal to let him return home may be wholly justified as a defensive measure. But if this is accepted, the incident still remains disquieting. And it is difficult for one imperialism to write off as a Quisling the spokesman of a subject people who shows himself willing to listen to the blandishments of a rival imperial power.

Statement Is Not Alone.

Equally disconcerting was the almost simultaneous statement from Chungking of Dr. Sun Fo, chairman of the Legislative Assembly of Nationalist China and son of the revered Sun Yat-sen. If the United States and Great Britain are content with waging defensive war in the Far East, said Dr. Sun, there will be "grave doubt in Chungking as to the wisdom of China continuing to fight."

Dr. Sun is not the head of the Chinese government. He owes his position in part to his father's reputation. What he says is subject to discount. But this remark from Dr. Sun is not the only one of its kind.

There have been other recent indications that a not inconsiderable element in China would be willing to consider a reasonable peace with Japan, if that were offered. Such an attitude cannot be called surprising, considering that this is now the 55th month in which imperialism in the Far East.

Every one who has ever lived or traveled , Nationalist China has maintained continuous, heroic and for the most part wholly unsupported resistance to Japanese attack.

There are many evidences of an enduring solidarity between the white rulers and the subject races in the Far East. The stand of Filipino troops in the Batan Peninsula is one notable illustration. The loyalty of large native forces in the Netherlands East Indies is another. Many more could be cited. But as against these must be counted the growing evidence that there are many people in the Far East who are simply not interested in the perpetuation of white empire.

Thai Co-operation. The Siamese, for instance, are known as a peaceful and unaggressive race. So there was little surprise when Thailand. like Indo-China, submitted without even a show of resistance to Japanese occupation. The pacific nature of the Thailanders, however, makes their present co-operation with Japan in an attack on Burma the more disturbing. Probably, like the Koreans, they are being forced to fight for the Mikado. However that may be, they are fighting for him. The same, according to the report of an unnamed official of the conquered territory of Sarawak, is true of the said a dispatch from Batavia on January 18, "to believe that Manchukuo soldiers under Japanese officers were among the attackers" when that part of the great island of Borneo was invaded. Similarly, there are indications that some Malay tribesmen have been easily won over to serve as guides and spies for the Japanese in their rapid advance down that long peninsula. And, finally,

Manchurians. "There was good reason,"

there are reports that certain units of British Indian troops have not proved reliable in this fighting. Stories of Indian desertions come from Japanese sources and may be nothing but propaganda. On the other hand, there may well be as yet undisclosed factors behind the ineffectiveness of British resistance in the Malay Peninsula. There have certainly been some unexpected surprises since December 8, when Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, then British commander in chief in the Far East, an-ced at Singapore: "We are ready, We have had plenty of warning and our preparations are made and tested." When the available evidence is scrutinized it gives ground for some uneasy surmise. This includes belief that the power of the Japanese attack may be in part explained by a relative indifference of many Eastern peoples to the change of overlordship which Tokio is trying to effect. Such an attitude would be most shortsighted. But human reactions are foolish from a long-range viewpoint. The indications of very considerable Asiatic apathy towards Japanese conquests are at least strong enough to justify more attention to the diplomatic as well as the military aspects of the problems. It would, for instance, do no harm to Chinese morale were the British government to announce that if Hong Kong is recaptured its transfer to Chinese sovereignty, with due compensation for the huge British investment, would be favornone the less real because they are often ably considered. After all, the picture of white imperialism in the Far East is not so pretty in all its aspects as to make unqualified restoration appealing to the subject peoples of that area. And there is very reasonable doubt that the cause of freedom and democracy would be furthered in Southeast Asia by re-establishment of the status quo which was so satisfactory to Rudyard Kipling.

Sympathetic consideration of native aspirations in the Far East might also have some constructive influence on the very enigmatic Russian attitude. For the Communists have their own ideas about the future in that area and they are not those of the Malayan planters and treaty port merchants. Indeed it becomes daily more clear that Russian assistance against Japan need not be expected if the underlying purpose is merely to bolster what Mosco has many times denounced capitalistic

Pearl Harbor Report

As one reads the coldly factual report of the Pearl Harbor naval disaster which has been submitted to the President by Supreme Court Justice Roberts and his associates on the investigating commission it is difficult to avoid a sense of bitter frustration.

It is an old story of human frailty, of the inability of men to comprehend that which they prefer to disbelieve. The officers named in the report as responsible for the disaster -Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Lieutenant General Walter C. Shortknew that war with Japan was imminent, and adequate plans for such a contingency had been made. But the plans failed to save Pearl Harbor, not because the planning was faulty, but because the officers charged with its execution simply could not or would not bring themselves to believe that the Japanese might strike from the air. And, over and beyond this human failure, there is the plain suggestion, certainly valid to the superstitious, that the hand of Fate was raised against the United States on the morning of December 7. Three distinct opportunities to reverse the course of the battle presented themselves and all were muffed-first, when a lastminute warning from Washington went astray; second, when an air raid listening detail was discontinued just two scant minutes before the approach of Japanese planes-then nearly an hour away-would have been detected, and, third, when a Japanese submarine was discovered off the harbor and sunk more than an hour before the air raid without resulting in the issuance of an alert order to the defending forces.

These eleventh-hour mischances, however, do not go to the heart of the fumbling which brought on the disaster. The record shows clearly that the danger of an air attack on the fleet and the naval base was fully anticipated in Washington a year ago, and that the Secretary of the Navy warned at that time of the "inherent possibilities of a major disaster" in the situation. This view was communicated to both Admiral Kimmel and General Short. The Secretary of State kept the War and Navy Departments fully informed of the worsening character of diplomatic relations with Japan, and these notifications were passed on to the commanders at Hawaii.

On November 27, just ten days before the attack, Admiral Kimmel and General Short were warned that hostilities on the part of Japan were momentarily possible and were instructed to take defensive measures which they deemed appropriate. Further warnings followed, but, since available information indicated the Japanese would attack in the Far East, the warnings, according to the report, "did not create in the minds of the responsible officers in the Hawaiian area apprehension as to the probable imminence of air raids." They discussed air raids, it is true, but, to quote again from the report, "without exception they believed that the chances of such a raid while the Pacific Fleet was based upon Pearl Harbor were practically nil. The attack was therefore a complete surprise to each of them." As a matter of fact, the report shows that the responsible offiers not only failed to expect an air attack, but that each neglected to maintain proper patrols while assuming that the other was taking the precautionary steps which were within his province. General Short, to cite another example, was maintaining the air raid warning system, for which he was responsible, only from 4 a.m. to 7 a.m. Admiral Kimmel assumed that the warning system was being fully operated, but made no inquiry to ascertain the fact.

The report suggests that there was some culpability in the War Department for not being more aggressive in seeing to it that greater precautions were taken at Hawaii, but it is the field commanders-General Short and Admiral Kimmel-who are accused of a "dereliction of duty" and with demonstrating "a lack of appreciation of the responsibilities

There is not a great deal more to be said of the report, except that it is a forthright, impartial document, and the members of the commission and the President are to be congratulated for refraining from any suggestion of a "whitewash."

'It may be assumed with confidwill take heart from what is obvi-

Given an end to the unimaginative and unenterprising leadership which caused the disaster at Pearl Harbor. the American people will carry on to victory despite the magnitude of this initial defeat.

Local Police Academy

One of the major faults found with the Metropolitan Police Department during the congressional investigation several months ago was the lack of an in-service training program designed to keep members of the department-including veteran officers-abreast of latest developments in the realm of law enforcement. At that time the department not only had no adequate refresher course of its own, but had failed to take full advantage of the free training facilities offered by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. It is reassuring, therefore, to know that one of the first achievements of Major Edward J. Kelly as police superintendent has been the establishment of the Washington Police Academy, organized along lines of the F. B. I. National Police Academy.

The student body of this academy is composed not of rookies but of policemen having the rank of sergeant or higher, and privates who have had more than six years of experience on the force. The twenty-eight policemen who are taking the 107-hour course of eighty-five subjects are not being instructed in the fundamentals of police work. They are taking a highly specialized course in advanced law enforcement, conducted by qualified experts chosen from the department itself and from outside fields of endeavor. The lectures and demonstrations are intended to familiarize the policemen with modernized techniques with respect to detection, apprehension and preparation of evidence in crime cases. These procedures and techniques have improved radically since some of the old-timers on the local force made their debut as officers. Unless the police officer keeps pace with the cunning and resourcefulness of the underworld, he is at a disadvantage in attempting to cope with today's criminal element.

It is noted that the academy is laying emphasis on relations between the police officer and the public. This is a phase of police responsibility which too often has been overlooked in times past, yet experience has shown that effective law enforcement depends on wholehearted cooperation of the public. A proper understanding by policemen of their duties and obligations toward the people who employ them to protect the community is essential if there is to be proper respect for law. Major Kelly has exercised good judgment in stressing this important aspect of police work.

Canada's Referendum

The announcement that the Canadian Government is preparing to hold a referendum to determine whether Canadians should be conscripted for military duty overseas teaches a lesson in statecraft which should not be lost upon this country.

It is considered necessary to hold the referendum to release the government of Prime Minister Mac-Kenzie King from political assurances given the Canadian people. Prior to the outbreak of war, he issued a public pledge that his government would never draft Canadians for service outside the Dominion. This pledge was renewed in the wartime election of March, 1940, and as recently as last November the Prime Minister said: "So far as conscription for overseas service is concerned, that question was submitted to the people of Canada at the last general election * * * and the people of Canada decided against conscription for overseas service."

Since then the war has spread to the Pacific, the United States has been attacked and the security of Canada hangs in the balance. And so the Canadian government, at a time when every energy should be devoted to the prosecution of the war, finds it necessary to call for a troublesome referendum on a question of legislative power which properly should be vested in the elected representatives of the people and which should never have been bargained away in a political campaign.

On the basis of Canada's splendid record in the matter of volunteers for overseas duty, there seems small doubt that the referendum will bring a decision in favor of full conscription. But the mere fact that such a step has to be taken before Canada can make her full contribution to the war effort illustrates the disadvantages which may be expected to result from anything that denies to a duly elected government the right to make prompt decisions bearing on the security of a democratic state.

Proud to Serve

The announcement by Joseph P. Lash, protege of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, that he looks forward to entering the Army and will be "proud to serve with the millions of other young Americans in this great struggle for human freedom" seems to put a period to a controversy which had presented certain disturbing implications.

Mr. Lash had figured prominently in investigations by the Dies committee of left wing youth organizations, and at one time he wrote an article for a magazine in which he ence that the people of the country said: "American youth does not in- America. This would work beautitend to lay down its life in shell- fully, if Tokio were correct in its American Student Union (a youth organization in which he formerly was active) states that we will not support any war which the United States Government may undertake for we recognize that such a war would be imperialistic in character." He was also a contributor to The New Masses, Communist monthly, and had been commended by Earl Browder, Communist leader in this

Despite this background, Mr. Lash had been on friendly terms with Mrs. Roosevelt, was an adviser to the Youth Division, Office of Civilian Defense, and had been her guest at the White House. Later, upon applying for a commission in Naval Intelligence, he is said to have given her name as a character reference. Last week, at a secret session of the Dies committee, said by some officials to have been held at the instance of Mrs. Roosevelt, he testifled that he no longer sympathized with any leftish or pacifist views. The Navy, however, rejected his application for a commission and it is expected that Mr. Lash will be reclassified 1-A for induction into the Army.

This is a wholly sensible disposition of Mr. Lash's case. Regardless of the identity of his sponsors, it would be impossible to justify the granting of a commission to any one who, after reaching a mature age, had entertained such views concerning the armed services as those expressed by Mr. Lash. It is desirable that he should give effect to his announced change of heart by service in the ranks and it is gratifying that he has announced himself as fully prepared to do so.

The P-40 Pursuit For a ship that was described in the recent Truman committee report as "little better than a good pursuit trainer because of its limitations in speed, ceiling and fire power," the Army's P-40 seems to be giving an exceedingly good account of itself. During the past two days Allied fighter squadrons based at Rangoon and composed largely of P-40s, have shot down thirty-two Japanese raiders with a loss of only two Allied planes. Furthermore, not a single Japanese bomb has been dropped on the city, the enemy bombers, despite fighter protection, being forced to jettison their cargoes far from Rangoon.

This performance on the part of planes supposed to have been virtually useless for combat purposes should be something of an eyeopener to the Senators subscribing to the Truman report. The reference to the P-40s, it is true, was based on a sentence lifted out of its context in a speech made last October by Lieutenant General H. H. Arnold, deputy chief of staff for air, and, standing alone, would have had at least that justification. But the committee went on to say that "unless service procurement policies are changed this ship will constitute more than half of our total pursuit production until the end of 1942." In other words, the American people were being told that half of the pursuit ships built this year in the United States would be unsuitable for combat purposes.

That is an alarming, not to say demoralizing, charge, and no responsible agency should have made it without the fullest verification. Yet it now appears that the statement not only was inaccurate, but was made without any serious attempt at verification. The House Appropriations Committee was told last week by both General Arnold and Undersecretary of War Patterson that neither they nor any one else in charge of the aircraft program for the War Department made any statement to the Truman committee or was called on in any way to disclose or make any statement about the aircraft program. And General Arnold also pointed out that, while his statement regarding the original P-40 was true, there have since been six new models of that ship which have proved very

This information easily could have been ascertained had the Truman committee taken the trouble to consult those officials responsible for the program which was so severely criticized in the report. In the future. as the committee continues its investigation of national defense with the $60,000 which the Senate has provided for that purpose, it is to be hoped that the temptation to indulge in sensational and ill-considered charges will not be permitted to becloud the really useful purpose which the committee can serve.

Sunk—on Paper

For the third time the Tokio press has sunk the plane carrier Lexington. Cheerfully Tokio writes multiple obits of vessel after vessel of our fleet. Before the war is over, each unit of it will need at least as many lives as a cat to remain afloat.

There are certain advantages, however, in having a propaganda bureau finish off a war vessel. No risk is run, and nothing can be lost save truth, which has been lost in Japan for years anyhow. Furthermore, while the navy can sink a ship only once, the press can do it over and over again and liven up dull moments in Nippon until the United States is in a position to eliminate the dull-moment problem for the

Heavy Taxation Versus Socialization

By Owen L. Scott

All planning in Washington now is on the basis of a war that will last at least three years. By that time the Government's debt will approach $200,000,000,000 and will be rising rapidly.

A debt figure of that size is beyond comprehension, even after the rising debt of New Deal years. It leads naturally to the question of whether the Nation is not on the road to bankruptcy. The American people for a number of years have expected that the Germans or Italians or Japanese would go bankrupt, thereby making unnecessary their defeat on a battlefield.

The trouble is that these enemy nations apparently refuse to blow up financially. It is highly doubtful that, the United States, with all of its slack, will be less able to stand the strain of a debt that reaches astronomical proportions. It too, will refuse to go broke.

That raises the question of how nations avoid bankruptcy in financing the preparation for and then the fighting of these highly expensive modern wars.

An answer is found in the Government controls that now go along with preparation for war and waging of war. Government takes control over the labor supply and the raw material supply and directs that labor and material into production. It controls prices and output and trade and investment, using its sovereign authority to get results. Money tends to become little more than a mechanism for carrying out the wishes of the Government itself. An example of what happens can be seen in the United States itself The people of the Nation are at work producing goods and services. That production will yield an income in 1942 that is being estimated at about $100,000,000. 000. This is referred to as the national income. Normally it would be available. in large part, for spending on things that people want and use. But this year, with war, the Government is trying to devote at least half of the Nation's productive effort to arms making. It seeks $50,000,000,000 worth of armament.

People with income to spend cannot spend that income on the arms they produce, because the arms are not for sale. The result is that there will be produced only $50,000,000,000 worth of civilian goods and there will be $100,000,-000,000, minus taxes, to spend. People will have pockets bulging with dollars and yet will find fewer and fewer things on which to spend their dollars. This normally would be a highly inflationary situation.

But here the Federal Government steps in again. It now is taking away $16,000 .-000,000 in taxes. President Roosevelt is asking that Congress provide another $9.000,000,000 in taxes to bring the total to $25,000,000,000. State and local governments take another $10,000,000,000. This means that $35,000,000,000 is extracted from the $100,000,000,000 of income produced, leaving $65,000,000,000 to spend on $50,000.000.000 worth of goods.

Sale of Defense savings bonds will take other billions. Others may be absorbed in checking accounts that are allowed to grow larger or in other ways. Some will react on prices, forcing a measure of inflation Essentially, however, Government is going to limit severely the volume of the goods that the public can buy, both by taxing away income and by directing the flow of raw materials, and labor into weapons which the public cannot buy. This limitation will mean that the standard of living is going to fall back gradually to about the 1932 level.

In reality, it is this decline in living standards that will represent the means of paying for the war.

The issue then becomes: Should the Government tax away the bulk of income over and above that which can be spent on available goods, or should the Government borrow a big slice of that income. through one means or another, and then go on paying interest on that borrowing once the war ends? This Government is striving to find a happy medium in answering that question.

The most conservative approach—the one that will assure the greatest prospect of returning to the normal process of capitalism after the war-is to place every emphasis on taxation. Reason is that the alternative is an immense debt. and debt is going to impose a very heavy burden of interest that will force the Government to intervene after the war to maintain a high enough rate of operation of the economic system to permit the servicing of the debt.

A debt of $200,000,000,000, already within gunshot, would cost at least $5,000,000,000 annually to carry, just for interest alone.

To manage a debt as huge as that which apparently is going to grow out of the present war may force the Government to maintain many socialistic controls that are used in wartime. Those controls over prices and investment and production and foreign trade will all be in effect when the war ends and it will be very easy for Government officials to gear them to peacetime use.

As a result, the danger is not so much that war may cause the Government to go bankrupt as it is that war may cause the Government to embark, of necessity, upon a program of control over industry and finance and trade that will be retained permanently. The larger the debt, and the bigger the problem of handling that debt, the greater the prospect that Government controls will be enlarged and maintained.

In war, the problem is to center effort on the production of weapons. The Government solves this problem with a relative degree of ease by telling industry what it must do and by controlling the flow of raw materials and of labor. There is little or no resistance because the Nation is united in its desire to win the war in the quickest possible time. Danger that the war might be lost if an effort is not made is a spur to effort. In peacetime, however, the goal of a planned effort is not so simple. It is difficult to convince groups in the population that they should sacrifice or should devote their effort to providing the abundant life for some other group. The controls and regulations that are accepted without question in war are the object of resistance in peace. Yet, in the postwar period, if the Government pulled off its controls and permitted the sort of adjustment that goes along with deflation, it would have very past largely determines our future course of action. What we have of strength and greatness comes to us from those who, in their day and generation, gave of their best, frequently even of life itself. We may not assume, especially in such days as these, that what we have of genius and power is solely of the present; it would be the part of folly in shaping our course to forget the wisdom, the chivalry and the spirit of those who in other days gave inspiration and direction to the State and Nation

There is a fine word in holy writ that expresses the spirit and prevailing power of those who gave their selfless and heroic service that the principles for which they stood might live. The passage in question fellows the recital of the noble deeds of men who counted not their lives dear unto themselves that they might serve a righteous cause. At the climax of this recital the writer sums up his high praise with these words: "Wherefore, seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us." It is an appeal to recognize the responsibility that rests upon those who share the blessings of a noble past.

We of this favored land have a tradition and a record of courageous service that may well inspire us in the present crisis. It is not what we have of worth and skill and power today that alone constitutes our strength; it is what we have of inheritance from the past. It is the incomparable record of daring exploits, of heroisms, of virtue that has been transmitted to us as a rich legacy, that arms us with fortitude and courage to face the future. The memory of other days, when trials and hardships were the lot of the Nation, nerves us to meet new perils and new disciplines unafraid. We are compassed about with a mighty cloud of witnesses, witnesses whose authentic testimony, written at times in sacrificial blood, speaks of days when the Nation was made strong to meet and resist every force that threatened

The legacy we have received from the, its security and permanence. The sons of this generation are the legatees of the noble men and women who bequeathed to them this priceless heritage. These eloquent and splendid witnesses were possessed of something more than a sword, a property, a genius for building and preserving an estate; they were possessed of a virtue, a quality of character that made them invincible. Behind every deed of accomplishment and every new advance, they felt the stirring, driving power of a deep religious conviction. They had no fear for the success of the cause they espoused, for they were Godempowered and God-directed. While they served with fidelity the state, they had the deep conviction that they were serving a high and holy cause.

This generation has great need of their spirit. The consciousness of the trust committed to us must move us to a finer consecration and a more selfless service. We shall use every means at our command to effect the high ends we seek, but we shall be mightily strengthened and stabilized if we can experience again the strong motives that dominated those of other generations. It may be that what we have entered upon is, in reality, a new crusade for those ideals and principles for which Jesus Christ came to earth. It may be that this is a new fullness of time in which the world is to witness a fresh demonstration of Christ's power. If such a conception could lay hold of the minds and hearts of men it would do more to inspire them to fullness of devotion and service, and inflame them with a passion for a righteous cause, than all the material and physical forces they are calling into Increasingly, there is developing a sense of dependence upon God. The very magnitude and scope of a world conflict compels us to look to sources of strength that in other days served the Nation, and that in periods of ease and selfconfidence we have neglected.

The names we most cherish are those who endured greatly because they believed and loved greatly. Let us believe that their spirits live again, and that a great cloud of witnesses compasses us about in these anxious days.

Thus, a "toggle" was something a pioneer wanted, which he made with his hands out of whatever materials he had where he happened to be. Britain, France and Germany after the last war. In Germany and France there was currency inflation of a rather violent nature. The Germans, defeated, wiped out their debt by means of a deliberate inflation that carried away all values as represented in money terms. It is probable that the defeated mations in this war will go through with a policy of repudiation, probably in the form of currency inflation.

Those who win the war, however, will face a problem of debt only relatively less troublesome, unless they tax away a very large proportion of the cost while the war is being carried on. Very high taxes in wartime may save the Nation from controls in the post-war period that would go much farther than any of the controls of the New Deal years.

Washington and Post-War Activities

By Frederic J. Haskin.

Aside from war, probably the most discussed subject in Washington today is the city's immediate future after the emergency is over. The topic is not engaged in by Federal jobholders alone, but by almost every one from street cleaners to top men in Government agencies and private enterprise. Since Government activity is the very life of Washington, this. local interest is understandable.

Apparently there are two reasons why this discussion of how Washington will be affected when Hitler is collared, Mussolini caged and the Japs brought to a full realization of their greatest mistake, has taken on its present proportions. When the first World War ended there was great cessation of activities in the Nation's Capital. Thousands were released from emergency. work fostered by the Government, and, a large number of employes in private business no longer were needed. The war was over and almost everything else was over, it was thought, and there was a tendency to return to what Warren G. Harding later coined as a phrase, "back to normalcy." So persistent was this belief that minds which thought otherwise were swept into oblivion. The other reason underlying the present discussion is the thought that, following the war's close, the country will face its worst depression. And since Wash-1 ington does not have sufficient private enterprise to absorb its greatly increased population the city will be the first to feel post-war effects.

But these two thoughts are due a second consideration. The present worldwide conflict is different from the other and seems destined to bring in its wake a demand as well as a need that a new business and social order be established. and for this the help of the Federal Government will be needed. At the close of the first World War, business sought, but mostly in vain, to go back to the place where it had left off. And in most instances, too, business thought it had taken up where it had left off, only to discover later that the habits of a people had changed so radically that old patterns of service no longer sufficed. Thus, "return to normalcy" was found to be only a catch phrase, whose author, like millions of others, believed that the country could return to its former pursuits with the same tempo. But time wrote a different story.

The possibility of a depression follow-p ing the present war is deserving of more than a passing thought. The country was barely emerging from the greatest. economic upheaval known to the world. when hostilities broke out. America. naturally enough, because of its then neutral attitude, spent relatively little for defense. But, as the conflict in Europe spread, Congress voted more liberally for As the European war theater widened and Congress was in almost constant session, an ever-increasing number of appropriations for preparedness helped to substitute for the emergency relief funds granted so generously in previous gress voted funds for relief employment in the name of a national emergency. Curiously enough, bitter debates and political differences on emergency measures almost ceased, but the country at large profited by the new face which Congress had acquired in the transformation of its votes from relief funds to money to carry out a program of national defense. In essence, the depression of the past decade was not over. Only a circumstance had changed the form of appropriations with which the country continued to carry on.

But since pay rolls for defense work have been substituted for those instituted for relief purposes, the question naturally arises as to what will inevitably follow the emergency. The answer 'o that is the answer to Washington's question of what will happen when the Allies have won their victory. It is an answer which concerns not only the Nation's Capital, but the country at large, for never in the history of the United States have so many people looked to their Government for help in some form. Consequently Washington as the Nation's administrative center is ever increasing in importance. People have come to realize that, after all, their Government functions for them, and they support it for that purpose. Thus the citizen who signs on the dotted line on March 15 and transmits a certain amount for income taxes to help support his Government, feels he has a right to seek help or advice from that same Government on the difficulties he faces.

That comes down to the question of Washington's future as the central point. from which national activities and benefits of the future will be administered. There seems to be more than a likelihood that there will be more, not fewer, Government bureaus and agencies after the war is ended. Names and functions of some will be changed, but the Nationwide service they are rendering will be either requested or demanded. For instance, civilian defense activities will likely be transformed into civilian education so that pupils in public schools, from the first grade upward, will be taught the principles of first aid. selfprotection and self-reliance in all types of emergencies. This will appeal not only to the children but to their parents,

With, perhaps, millions of disabled exservice men, pensions and social security will become more important and extended. With increasing taxation, the United States Treasury will need additional workers. The Department of Commerce in its efforts to keep and stimulate foreign trade will demand a larger personnel and other old line agencies will likely be called upon to increase their services. Agencies which have come into being in recent years, and which are no longer considered emergency units, also may be expected to expand their operations. Hence, the country may suffer an economic setback when the war is over. but Washington probably will continue to expand its service to the Nation.

Allied Cause Suffers Reverses in Far East and Africa, but Russians Drive Ahead

'America's Seventh Week of War (125th Week of World War II)

By Blair Bolles.

It was a gloomy week for those who hate the Axis. The Japanese spread their conquests farther than it was thought they could. The British moved backward instead of forward in Libya. U-boats continued to torpedo merchant ships off the American East coast.

The surprise of last week was the Japanese approach to the vast island of Australia, a continent as well as a country, lying so far down in the South Pacific that its nether portions are near the Antarctic. While they bombed the Indies and pushed forward on the land of Malaya and Burma. the Japanese made landings on the islands of New Britain and New Guinea-territory under Australian control and only 450 miles from Australia proper-and the Solomon archipelago. Some calm observer's saw in these undertakings only an effort to set up Japanese bases for striking at supply routes from the United States to the Far East. Reports from Australia indicated the expectation there that the Japanese would try to

But all is not dark. Every day the Japanese forces on Luzon Island, now numbering 200,000, struck at the troops of Gen. Douglas MacArthur on Batan Peninsula, and every day they failed to shake him. His courage inspired all Americans with resolution and confidence. The Russians, driving onward against the Germans who not so long ago were driving onward against them pushed to within 120 miles of the Latvian border on the coldest day of this cold winter. Donald Nelson, chief of war production in the United States, shook up the old production administration with a vigor which filled the Nation with trust that the figures of planes and tanks and guns which the White House hopes will be reached actually will be reached.

Far Eastern Front

For a month Australia has been uneasy, and in her concern she has complained more than once about mother England's lack of understanding of the problem in the East. Last Tuesday Australian concern was vindicated. On that day the Japanese sent a full-scale attack against the city of Rabaul, the capital of New Britain, which is an island mandated to Australia and sitnated 850 miles north of Australia. New Britain is the largest member of the lost to Germany through the last war. It was presumed in Australia that the bombers of Rabaul were brought close to New Britain's waters on an aircraft carrier, much as the bombers of Pearl Harbor on December 7 were brought close to Hawaii on the same sort of craft. The attack

Bombed marked an extension of Japanese activity to an area 3,500 miles east of Singapore and about 4,000 miles southwest of Honolulu. A German attack on Cuba would take place about the same distance from Germany that New Britain lies from Japan.

The next day the Japanese demonstrated their real interest in the Bisnew and heavier bombing. The principal Bismarck target was Kavieng, on the northern tip of New Ireland (just north of New Britain), but the range was extended to four New Guinea cities -Madang, Salamaua, Bulolo and Lae. The British on Monday relinquished to Japan the port of Tavoy in Burma. This is one of the fruits of the conquest of Thailand, which was the first accomplishment of the Japanese war against the world. Burma's southern arm, never more than 75 miles wide, runs alongside Thailand. The British had been using Tavoy-200 miles from Rangoon-as an air base for attacks on Bangkok, Thailand capital. It is also a center of Burma's tin industry. The Japanese drove westward from Thailand in four days to take the town after fighting with imperial troops at Myitta, 12 miles inside the Burma frontier. It is near the top of the Gulf of Mataban, around which the Japanese would have to drive to reach Rangoon, capital and chief port of Burma and supply harbor for the Burma road. By Wednesday the Thai troops had advanced 15 miles to Kawkareik.

Just as they herald their approach in ther regions by bombing Rabaul and Singapore, the Japanese have been bombing Rangoon. They have found it costly, however. The Japanese lost 17 of 60 planes in a raid on Rangoon Friday. In the midst of all this good fortune, the Japanese had some bad luck in the Indies waters. The Dutch bombed Kuching, the Sarawak capital held by the Japanese. Five American-made bombers fighting for the Dutch downed nine Japanese interceptor planes in an aerial dogfight over an airfield held by the Japanese at Menado in Northeast Celebes. North of the Celebes, around the Jolo Archipelago of the Philippine Islands, in the Sulu Sea, six American Army bombers sank a Jap cruiser. Other Fronts

The British Army's main task is to organize a continental offensive, Sir Archibald Sinclair, Air Minister, told the British House of Commons Thursday in opening debate on the adequacy of British airfield defense against invasion of the British Isles. When the offensive will come nobody predicts in public.

In the meantime, the Russians are carrying out their part of the war by continuing to push the Germans back and weakening the Nazi position against the hour when British troops will reappear on the European continent. Russian troops are fighting across the ice of Lake Ladoga to relieve Leningrad. They took Kholm, south of Leningrad, 120 miles from Latvia. They took Mozhaisk and beyond Mozhaisk, in the center front, they are pressing the Germans toward Vyazma, perhaps to Smolensk. In the south they are pushing the Germans back in the Donets region.

It's been like this for nearly 10 years. Mr. Steinhardt, a tall, dark, genial, shrewd former New York lawyer, who looks much younger than his 49 years, started off in 1933 as Minister to Sweden, was made Ambassador to Peru for the important Lima Pan-American Conference of 1937; and in 1939 was whisked o Russia, where he handled the United States' important, ticklish interests involved in the Russian-Finnish war, the City of Flint affair, and Germany's in-

It is traditional that being a diplomat is an unprofitable occupation, but Mr. Steinhardt has not found any difficulty living within his $17,500 salary. He refuses to have a personal secretary, explaining, "I like to be responsible for any mistakes I make." He dictates his correspondence to Embassy clerks, answers his phone himself and even writes out his own invitations, menus and place cards for ambassadorial dinners.

Mr. Steinhardt acquired a bare working knowledge of Russian, although his wife-daughter of a New York investment banker-picked it up quickly. This resulted from the fact that, due to family illnesses, he spent most of his time for five years around the Lenox Hill Hospital, and boned with the successive classes of interns until he knew more than they did, and wound up by conducting cram sessions for them.

States and Great Britain to cope with the Japanese attack in the Far East may have grave consequences for both in the political as well as the military sphere.

Orientals are impressed by displays of force, and already the failure of the United Nations-with a few exceptionsto provide that forceful exhibition is having repercussions. The arrest of the Burmese Prime Minister, U Saw. on suspicion of having connived with the Japanese to open Burma to Nippon's army in the way the Thai government did, is reported not to be an isolated incident.

Many dissatisfied elements in India are wondering whether, if Singapore falls, their country would not be invaded by the Japanese. There is a group of agitators in India who believe it might be wiser to assist the Japanese, if they ever reach India's frontier, than to fight

The public explanation for U Saw's dealings with the Japanese was that he was disgruntled over the refusal of the British government to grant Burma dominion status at this time. This, however, is believed to be a mere pretext, the true reason being the proximity of Japan's forces to Burma's borders.

Needed Airplanes.

Incidents like that involving U Saw make it more and more evident that the combined efforts of the United Nations to stop Japanese must be multiplied tenfold in order to retain the Allies' political hold in the Far East.

Despite the reported dispatch of reinforcements to the South Pacific, the Japanese still have the upper hand. The Australians were rushed into the battle in Malaya and they achieved temporary success, but their bravery could be of little avail against the overwhelming air superiority of the Japanese.

According to eyewitness accounts, the Aussies rushed superior Japanese forces with bayonets and had them on the run until air reinforcements reached the retreating enemy. Then the old story was repeated: Men against airplanes. The support given the Australians by the available aviation was of little help and they were forced to abandon the ground they gained and joined the British in

It is also believed that in the event all the necessary air force is rushed to Burma and India, the Japanese will be prevented from penetrating deeply into those regions. But if these territories were to fall into the hands of the Japanese the situation of the United Nations would become most precarious. Any victories that the Russians win in Europe would be of little avail either to us or the Chinese Have Big Role.

In the long-range planning to defeat the Axis, the Chinese have a definite and most important role. The Burma road is the only remaining line of communication between China and her Allies. Should this fall into the hands of the Japanese, there would be little hope for Chiang to continue his resistance. He has rejected all kinds of proposals submitted to him by the Japanese through the Nazis. He knows that peace with the Axis would mean the end of all his hopes for a really independent China. So long as there is a glimmer of hope he will fight. But should the Japanese succeed in gaining a foothold in Burma, it is questionable how long the Chinese generalissimo would be able to continue the struggle. While the plans of the Axis can be only guessed at, the Japs appear from their position to have two roads open to them. If Singapore and the Indies fall into their hands, they may advance westward, attempt to stir up trouble in India, invade Burma in the hope of crushing Chiang Kai-shek's resistance and organize a vast sweeping movement from Asia to Europe.

The other possibility is to strike at Australia. This is worrying the Canberra government considerably, and its fears have been communicated with unmistakable force to President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill. The possibility of a Japanese move toward Australia is no longer hypothetical.

Under these circumstances, whatever the future plans of the Japs may be, produce, but it will take time and mean- on the prompt arrival of large naval and even more compelling than ever.

The following year Warm Springs got no part of the proceeds of the birthday parties, most of the money being left in local communities for work on infantile paralysis there, the balance going to research. In 1936 and 1937 the money was divided, 30 per cent for Warm Springs, 70 per cent for the localities where it was raised.

It was in the latter year that the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis was formed. In 1938 all the money from the birthday celebration went to the national foundation which has sponsored a wide range of research in universities and public laboratories throughout the country. For example, the Michigan Department of Health at Lansing, Mich., was given $12,900 in 1941 "to continue studies of the prophylactic and therapeutic action of a variety of substances on St. Louis encephalitis and poliomyelitis infections in mice and cotton rats."

So successful have the birthday celebrations been as a money-raising device that jealousy has inevitably been aroused among other charitable and research organizations. The amount raised in 1938 was $1,010,378. For 1939 it was $1,349,383, for 1940, $1,423,924, and for 1941, been to divide the money 50-50 between as in the world of peace.

Epiphany Church Celebrates Centennial By John Clagett Proctor. What an interesting edifice is the old

Church of the Epiphany, in G street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, now right in the middle of Washington's downtown business center, where thousands of people pass it daily. It is not quite as old as the congregation itself, which recently celebrated its 100th anniversary, but it is nearly so, having been under construction in 1843 and completed the following year.

Some people do not believe in keeping records, but, fortunately others do. And John Sessford was one of those public servants, who not only believed in keeping records, but in passing them on to future generations, affording them accurate information about their early Washington.

For nearly 40 years this very thoughtful citizen gave to the press his annals, and the National Intelligencer published them. Though it remained for Wilhelmus Bogart Bryan, some years ago, to bring them together and publish them in the records of the Columbia Historical Society.

Mr. Sessford passed away on February 23, 1862, three years after his last chronicles were published, and of him the Intelligencer said: "Of pure, moral. blameless life, intelligent and useful as a citizen, he was respected by everybody

Thus, it was in Sessford's annals, for the year 1843, that the writer found the date of the building of Epiphany Church, which says: "* * There has been erected a new Episcopal church on G street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets," and the following year: "The new Episcopal church on G street is finished."

However, the congregation had formally organized the year before the cornerstone of the church was laid, August 14, 1843, as the minutes of the church vestry tell us: "A meeting of persons desirous of forming another Protestant Episcopal church in the city of Washington was held in St. John's Church on Wednesday afternoon, the 30th of March. The Rev. John W. French was called to the chair and Gilbert Rodman appointed

"A committee appointed at a previous meeting, composed of Messrs. Goldsborough, Edwards and William James, to prepare a plan for the proper organization of the church, with suitable rules and articles of association, was called upon for its report. A report was accordingly produced and read by William Goldsborough, chairman of the committee. During the reading of the report, the Rev. Mr. French vacated the chair and called on the Rev. Mr. Hawley to preside, who, on taking the chair, stated that he wished it to be understood that the object of the meeting met with his most hearty approbation and good wishes."

Trustees Named.

On motion of Thomas H. Gillis, who we find was then serving the Government as chief clerk of the fourth auditor's office, the meeting proceeded to the election of five trustees, and the following were selected: Mr. Gillis, chief clerk, fourth auditor's office; William M. Morrison, bookseller: W. B. Berryman, clerk, Treasury; Charles H. James, apothecary and druggist at the northeast corner of Fourteenth and E streets, and James Morss. John W. French was elected the first pastor. His salary was pledged at $600 a year. But the real beginning of the church, it seems, was a mission enterprise in 1841, under the charge of the Rev. French, the first meeting being probably held on January 6, 1842, at the residence of Mrs. Sarah Easton, a widow, whose home was on the northwest corner of Nineteenth and I streets. Here those attending agreed to associate themselves as a new congregation and adopted the name of Epiphany Church.

At first the meetings were held in Apollo Hall, then on the south side of E street between Thirteenth and Thirteenth-and-a-half streets, on the site of what was formerly the Southern Railway Building. The Apollo Building had quite a history. As early as 1838, as a one-story frame building, it was located on the north side of E street, near the National Theater. It was then occupied as a wheelwright and blacksmith shop by a Mr. Brockway, and about this time was purchased by William Morrow and removed to the south side of E street, where it was raised and a story placed under it, when it became known as Apollo Hall, where numerous societies met. Of it an old account says:

"There the eloquent George W. Briggs of Massachusetts, Thomas Marshall of Kentucky and others were wont to expound the benefits arising from the abstinence from alcoholic beverages. Here our esteemed friend, George Savage, Esq. (the Father Mathew of Washington), used his best endeavors to rescue his fallen brothers and by kind admonitions and a helping hand succeeded in saving many from a drunkard's grave, some of whom are now among our most worthy and influential citizens."

It does look as if the work done by these good men will have to be done all over again.

Apollo Hall.

According to James Croggon, "Apollo Hall was long a place for public meetings and entertainments, and played an important part in the early history of the city. Erected in the early 30s on the south side of E street, the lower portion was used as a grocery store by W. M. Morrow, who also for a time conducted there a broom factory. * * *

"Theatrical performances were also given in the hall in the 30s. There were many fairs and lectures held there, and in political campaigns the hall was a

"Apollo Hall was burned twice, late in the 40s, the last time being completely destroyed. Its blackened walls stood for many years as a reminder of what it had

The writer finds the date of the last burning of the hall to be June 6, 1855. According to an old account, probably written by an early parishioner, "the hall accommodated about 300 or 400 people. A reading desk was at the minister but on his robes for service, fellows, as he i by a tuning fork. There were benches arranged along the sides, and chairs in the middle of the room. Dr. French commenced to hold service there about three other Episcopal churches in the city at that time-Christ Church, Navy Yard; old Trinity on Fifth street and St. John's Church.

"Among the congregation of the mission at Apollo Hall were the following named families: James, Ames, Gilliss, Goldsborough, Edwards, Morrison, Berryman, Brown, McIntyre, Fitzgerald, Dorsey, Davis, Clubb, Keller, Maynadier, Krafft, Fillebrown, Burroughs, Todhunter, Lenthal, Rodman, Dow, Dickens, Washington, Stellwagen, Parriss and others whose names I cannot recall."

was wont to start the singing with the aid of a tuning fork."

The church records disclose the fact that the first meeting of the vestry after its election was held at the home of Mrs. E. James (who, by the way, was a widow residing around the corner on the east side of Fourteenth street between E and F). On August 10, 1842, James I. Edwards Richard Burgess and Gilbert Rodman were appointed a committee to secure a site. Apparently they were limited to contract for a lot costing not more than 20 cents a foot, for at the next meeting they reported their inability to secure a desirable lot for this amount, when the amount was increased to 25 cents. On August 22, at a meeting of the choir for some time, pitching the tune vestry, a resolution was adopted directing the committee to wait upon Gen. Van Ness for the purpose of having him donate a lot for the church, and, although the general is known to have the winter of 1841-42. The services been liberal in donating lots for church were well attended, as there were but purposes, yet upon this occasion he declined to do so.

Site Selected.

No rapid progress seems to have been made in this respect when it was reported at the meeting of *October 24 that a Miss Louisa Harrison had offered to donate to the vestry, as a site for the church, ground on G street, being the present location of the church edifice and specified as being Lots 3 and 4 in Square 252. Wavering in their conclusions, it was suggested to the committee streets could be purchased. But apparently this could not be done, and the site offered by Miss Harrison was accepted. Bids were taken for erecting the church, and John W. Harkness, who drew the plans, was the successful com-

Following Dr. Hall came Rev. Thomas A. Starkey and then Rev. Wilbur F. Watkins D.D. Rev. William Paret-well known later as the Bishop of Maryland, to which high office he was elected, and consecrated in 1884-followed Dr. Watkins as rector.

Dr. Samuel Hansel Giesy was rector from 1885 to the date of his death, May 27, 1888, and was beloved by all who knew him. His successor was the noted Washington divine, Rev. Randolph Harrison McKim, who was called from Trinity Church, New Orleans, in November, 1888, and assumed his duties the following month.

Then came Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., who left there in 1923 to become Bishop of Washington. His place was taken in 1924 by the Rev. Z. B. Phillips, Mrs. Elizabeth Stone, whose country estate included all of what is now Columbia Heights, attended there, and Mrs. Philip J. Ryan was for years interested in the work of the parish. Many other old Washington families have attended this church, and it still numbers in its membership some of the foremost people of the Federal Capital.

The old church could relate quite a bit of history if it could talk. Indeed, it would be interesting to know just how this street looked at the time it was erected nearly 100 years ago. Then G street was almost the northern boundary of the city, for there was much vacant ground, even close to this old edifice. church, the National baseball club had its grounds at the corner of Fifteenth and L streets, so G street, at least at that time, was almost suburban. It was twenty years before the first street cars ran on the Avenue, while there were practically no street improvements in this part of Washington, and very few in any other part. Pictures made before the Civil War show cows grazing along K street, three blocks to the north, and muddy roadways just above Thomas Circle. The springs in the vicinity of Franklin Square then supplied much of downtown Washington with water for all purposes. Many graveyards were still in the city limits, for many of the churches still had their own cemeteries at this period.

It was a neighborhood of churches. Down at Tenth and F streets (F street side) was old St. Patrick's: below this. on Tenth street, the Baptist Church, where preached the Rev. Obadiah Brown, and which later moved to the site of the telephone office on Thirteenth street. At Eleventh and H was St. Paul's Lutheran Church; on New York avenue between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church and just around the corner on F street, where stands the Willard Hotel, was the F Street Presbyterian Church, where Dr. Lawrie preached and which later became Willard Hall.

Nearly all of these early churches have been removed, but old Epiphany still remains as a monument to Christianity,

It is customary to try out a new typewriter with the standard words "Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party." In their surge of power, certain elements in the 1911 Congress totally reversed the maximthey decided that now was the time for the party to come to the aid of all good men, "good" being defined as loyal party

The slaughter was terrific. One stray finger of the patronage system plucked a plum for Mr. Ramspeck, who was offered the position of chief clerk in the House post office. The incumbent, who had put in 15 years of satisfactory service; was removed for the unexpressed but none the less fatal crime of being a Republican. Right then and there Mr. Ramspeck saw the gross injustice, but accepted the position, inasmuch as the Republican was out in any event, and any quixotic refusal on Mr. Ramspeck's part would merely have meant that some other Democrat would get the job.

Quite by accident he was in a position to do something constructive at last about such deplorable conditions as those which had prevailed in the House post office and the marshal's office in Atlanta.

> The opportunity was there, but the means and the power had to be developed. His trained legal mind cast about for the best weapons to use. He was delighted to find a good one in the old Civil Service Act of 1883. All employes to which it applied were amply protected by this statute, regardless of how often the party majority in Congress might change. Incumbents got their jobs by merit alone and kept them the same way. But the trouble was that not many employes came under its classification. Considered as an artillery weapon, the Civil Service Act of 1883 was a gun which fired a powerful shell, but fired it only a short distance.

So Mr. Ramspeck, instead of trying to forge new ordnance, at first set about extending the range of the old. His task was hard, and he met much opposition, but in the end he succeeded. His favorite bit of legislation, the one of which he is proudest, the Ramspeck-O'Mahoney Act, effective June 28, 1938, extended the Civil Service to first, second and third class postmasterships—formerly the juiciest political patronage plums of all and the most potent vote getters in the entire tackle box. It took great skill and perseverance to get it enactedalmost as much as would be necessary to induce fishermen to give up using bait and fish with bare hooks.

This and other Ramspeck bills have brought under Civil Service 90 per cent of Federal employes, exclusive of such agencies as W. P. A. and N. Y. A. and the like. Very sensibly old incumbents took non-competitive efficiency examinations, while applicants were and are on a competitive basis.

Having established job security, Mr. Ramspeck then worked successfully on annual and sick leave provisions for employes of the District government and later in collaboration with Senator Mead of New York, got automatic salary increases for all Federal workers and most employes of the District of Columbia.

America Graduates First R. A. F. Cadets

By Ben H. Pearse.

The first Royal Air Force cadets, who arrived here seven months ago as "guests" of their Army Air Force "cousins," will soon be starting the long voyage back to the front for a longawaited go at Jerry.

For some the front will be home, England. For others, the Near East, Libya. Doubtless some may find the "front" in the Far East, Malaya or the East Indies. For wherever there is a front, R. A. F. flyers will be needed to give battle to Jerry and his Italian and Japanese satellites.

When they arrived last June, a pamphlet prepared by a thoughtful Air Ministry reminded them they were "guests" in a land still divided on the war question. They were advised to think of Americans as "distant cousins" whom they did not know well but would like to know better. Since then the conflict has spread to the remotest corner of the globe. First Russia, then the United States was drawn in. The cousins who came as guesta depart as brothers-in-arms.

They came because there simply was not enough room in England to train them. Then, too, the weather and constant bombing attacks cut down flying time. And so, after a few weeks of ground school training, they were packed off to Montreal and there assigned to various civilian and Army flying schools throughout the South, where they encountered such Americana as watermelons, hot dogs and soda pop and wrestled with the puzzling American accent of which the Air Ministry pamphlet had made no mention.

With commendable foresight and an eye to morale, their Army hosts did everything possible to make them feel at home. They were permitted to retain the long, easy stride, the shoulder-high swing of the arms characteristic of the British Tommy on the march. Regulations were abridged to permit mustaches. British cooking and food, games and even phonograph records were imported to simulate the home atmosphere. But the whole illusion, so carefully fostered, was dispelled all at once by the size of their first serving of butter. Back home, butter was measured by the ounce. Here there was all one wanted for the asking. Home wasn't like this.

After a while they got used to the abundance of butter and eggs, fresh fruits and vegetables. They learned by sometimes painful experience how many bottles of soda pop could safely be absorbed by the human system under the hot midsummer sun. They learned to call petrol gasoline, and finally, to get the hang of the American accent that made familiar words sound so strange. It was well they did, because they were soon up to their collective necks in one of the most intensive training courses ever designed by the Army.

The new environment had its effect at first. The British cadets took from two to four hours longer to solo than the American student flyers. They lacked a certain mechanical facility that was almost second nature to the American cadets. Perhaps it was because 90 per cent of the British trainees had never driven a car. They did not have the same sense of mastery of the machine that makes for self-confidence. Once it had been acquired during their initial training period, however, they progressed rapidly. Their records for the primary and advanced flying training show little if any difference from those of their American "hosts."

As a group, they were both younger and older than our Army and Navv student pilots, ranging in age from 18 to 30. But for all the disparity in ages, in the walks of life from which they came and the schooling they had received.

of ruined villages and wrecked cities.

"The character of the Second World War, in which air power is so clearly a deciding factor, necessitated an enormous expansion of the Royal Air Force. As facilities in the British Isles were limited by physical and practical considerations, training establishments were set up, first in Canada and later in Australia, New Zealand, Rhodesia and elsewhere, until the program for producing crews for the planes being turned out in ever-increasing numbers became one truly embracing the whole British Empire.

"The arrangements for extending the program to the United States, launched with the arrival of the first group of flying students last June, marked a new phase in its development. The Royal Air Force, both through the United States Army Air Forces and private contractors, now has the advantage of modern training fields and equipment in the nearest approach to ideal conditions to be found anywhere. While the training here is thus one part of a much larger whole, it is a most important part and one which will help to provide the margin of superiority needed for victory.

"As these new arrivals of only seven months ago leave to take their places over the battle lines others will come to replace them. Over and above the direct present value to the common cause of thousands of well-trained pilots and crews, there is an asset, less tangible, but no less valuable for the future of the world in the associations which they have formed; the resulting increase in the mutual understanding between the United States of America and Great Britain and its empire, and in the Donds of friendship and respect will help to win the war. What is more, we must see to it that these assets are used to further the joint effort by which alone our nations can win and maintain the peace."

impelling desire to get at their jobs that set them apart.

It is the same desire the Air Ministry speaks of in its little pamphlet in describing the American idea of sports, which differs in some respects, it is pointed out, from the British.

"The average American," the anonymous Air Ministry spokesman pointed out, "has inherited something of the tradition of the American Indian, through the redoubtable frontier fighters who beat the Indians at their own game, and used the same methods against our troops in the War of Independence. There is the same preliminary war dance and concurrent excitement, the same love of violent action and no less violent speech, the same war cries, and the same concentration on the scalp as the object of the expedition.

"The idea is to win, not just to have a game. That idea is not altogether unknown in some games in other parts of the English-speaking world-and it is not a bad idea for a fighting man."

Whether or not they got it from American sports, as they scatter to R. A. F. fighter, bomber or patrol quadrons in all parts of the globe, they have but one idea, that the Nazi scalp is the object of the expedition.

Airplanes for Tomorrow's War

By Devon Francis,

Warplane fleets of a size and striking force exceeding the most sanguine dreams of air power's proponents probably will be employed in World War II before the battle flags are furled.

A hint of what they will be like exists in current designs and in the production goal which this Nation has set for itself-185,000 planes in the next two years.

Further hints are on engineers' drawing boards. Most of the designs in contemplation are, of course, secret. But some are not, and from these can be sketched a picture of the future.

Faster airplanes of longer range unquestionably will come. Higher speeds will be attained through better designs, greater engine power and operation at higher altitudes. The designs resemble somewhat the visions of the future presented by the English novelist and historian, H. G. Wells.

Greater engine powers are fast being developed, and as for high-altitude flight, one type of American fighter plane already in production can be flown at a height in excess of eight miles.

To Europe and Back

Rangier planes, being developed both by the United States and its enemies, has ocean ramparts on both sides, an experimental bomber developed before the war began is capable—the engineers who developed it say-of flying from continental United States to Europe and back. Whether it can carry an effective bomb load on such a trip has not

But it is inevitable that whole fleets of long-range planes will be built as the war progresses. In numbers, the air forces in the offing will make today's look puny. On extraordinary occasions flights of 300 to 400 planes have been used in recent months in Europe on a single raid. Soon a flight of 500 bombers probably will become a commonplace.

In the field of warplane design sero-ginning to tap the possibilities of the

Two years ago a leading American engineer took a model of a proposed warplane to the wind tunnel laboratories of New York University for testing. A wind tunnel is just what the name implies-a device to simulate speeds and air conditions under carefully controlled laboratory conditions.

Weeks later he emerged shaking his "It doesn't seem possible," he said.

Unheard-of Speed

The model plane indicated a fullscale speed unheard of in aviation.

To double-check his findings, and suspicions that the wind tunnel itself was at fault, the engineer took the model to another tunnel, at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Weeks of work followed. The results were almost identical.

In looking at tomorrow's airplanes, we must bear in mind that for all their knowledge, engineers are still groping in the dark in trying to find out what makes a plane behave as it does at high speeds and high altitudes. Improvements are made gradually.

Neither the Northrop nor the Burnelli design is a production type as yet, even though experimental planes in both classes have been flown. How long it would take to create production types of them is a matter of conjecture. Burnelli proceeds on the theory that the conventional airplane "has gradually been patterned from the inherited idea of a streetcar or motorcar body arrangement with wings applied."

Clyde Pangborn, who in 1931 flew nonstop from Japan to the United States and now is ferrying American-made bombers to England, has strongly recommended to the War Department the development of combat airplanes on the Burnelli principle:

Burnelli has had his troubles over a period of years which have prevented a more rapid development of his design for the United States armed services, but now he is ready to proceed with his development work.

"Due retaliatory measures" against Japan have been promised for the bombing of Manila. The airplane designers, making today's fantasies tomorrow's realities, and the manufacturers, pressing for a production of more than 10,000 planes a month in 1943, will help the Army and Navy to make good on the promise.

Office of Production Management officials, co-operating with the Fish and Wildlife Service of the Department of the Interior, have been urging rabbit breeders and trappers to increase the domestic supply of rabbit pelts. This is an attempt to bring civilian demands in line with supply by increasing the supply rather than by controlling the demand. The primary object for increased production in domestic rabbits is to produce more meat and fur.

The supply of shearlings (sheared lambs), which are in heavy demand for aviation suits, Arctic clothing and other defense requirements, is likely to prove inadequate unless every possible measure is taken to conserve and find substitutes whenever possible.

Students Being Accepted Now for November Term Under New Ruling

The school of foreign service of Georgetown University announced yesterday that it is accepting a limited number of students qualifying as freshmen for the spring term beginning February 1, when a newly adopted program of acceleration goes into effect.

Dr. Thomas H. Healy, dean of the school, said the plan follows closely the program approved by the university for the college of arts and sciences, which is designed to permit students to complete the regular four-year course in two and two-thirds years by the addition of Registration of incoming students at the foreign service school will continue through Friday. Since high school graduates are qualified for admission, the average full-time student should be able to obtain his degree by the time he is subject to military call. The college, however, is not accepting freshmen at this time, but they will be admitted to the summer course starting July 6, which will start the new academic year for the duration of the war.

Late Afternoon Classes. The foreign service school, which also conducts courses in business and public administration, has rearranged late afternoon classes for part-time students. These classes will now be held from 6 p.m. to 7:30

The new three-year term basis will enable freshmen to be admitted to the school on July and October 1 as well as on February 1. The school's summer session will continue to September 18. For the convenience of students and faculty, the summer classes will be held from 8 a.m. to 12 noon, leaving the entire afternoon free for recrea-tion and study. As in the case of the college, the new schedule advances the date of the commencement exercises somewhat.

Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., regent of the foreign service school and vice president of the university, is expected to announce this week the program of his annual series of public lectures on national and international affairs. The series no doubt will be held as usual in Memorial Continental Hall of the D.

Georgetown's varsity intercollegiate debating team was selected last week and comprises eight members, a sufficient number from which to draw for a very heavy schedule. One of the members is Robert B. Neu of Washington, who was adjudged winner of the Merrick debate last Monday. The others are William V. Finn, president of the students in the advanced R. O. T. C. courses are attended by juniors and heretofore have extended for six weeks. The War Department was reported to be considering an extension of the training period to 10 weeks, which would interfere seriously with the regular summer classes many colleges are adopting for the first time. Some suggestions have been made to permit the juniors to attend an intensive period of training at Army camps after their senior year and before they are commissioned in the Reserve Corps.

No official decision has been rendered on any of these suggestions.

Enrollment Increases

Registration of women last fall at the Benjamin Franklin Accountancy School more than doubled the previous year. One hundred and two women began accountancy study in the day and evening divi-sions last September. Many of these enrolled for the short course in accountancy for women but most indicated their intention to qualify for a degree.

SCHOOL OF FOREIGN SERVICE SPECIAL BULLETIN

To meet the needs of the existing national emergency the School of Foreign Service is accelerating and revising its curriculum. Under the new plans it becomes possible for full-time students to complete the courses in three years and part-time students in four years. The courses will be given on a three-term basis starting approximately Februray 1, July 1, October 1. Part-time students can take courses in either the day or late afternoon hours. Day courses start at 9 A.M.; late afternoon courses are from 6 to 7:30 P.M. (These hours for the duration of the emergency only.)

Registration is now open for a limited number of qualified students for the Spring term—last day for completing registration is Friday, January 30. Those interested should file registration documents immediately.

Courses for Foreign Service and Business and Public Administration; preparation for careers in Foreign Trade, Diplomacy, Shipping, Banking, International Relations, Domestic Business, Government Service and Professional Accountancy.

All courses are being revised to meet special war and post-war needs. Pending release of revised catalogues, information can be obtained on request from the Secretary of the School.

Dean Campbell Announces Means for Cutting Lay Terms From 4 to 3 Years

To make Catholic University's recently announced accelerated program of studies during the war emergency apply to all full-time undergraduates in the college of arts and sciences, the Very Rev. James M. Campbell, dean of the college, announced yesterday two methods by which the school term for all lay students may be reduced from four to three years.

Freshmen who enroll in the college next June may attend the sixweek courses in the summer sessions of 1942, 1943 and 1944, plus an additional course in the accelerated program of study in the same years to qualify for graduation at the end of the academic year 1944-5 instead

Those who enter the college at the opening of the regular term next September on an accelerated program must attend the summer session of 1943 for 12 weeks and the summer session of 1944 for six weeks and be graduated at the end of the academic year 1944-5 in-

Arrangements for Seniors. Students now enrolled in the college may also advance their grad- Plans 2 New Courses uation day by fulfilling certain requirements. Seniors who complete 34 basic courses at the end of the present semester, which terminates Saturday, may elect one extra basic course of study for the second semester, which begins February 2, and thus qualify for graduation on May 29. Seniors who have completed less than 34 basic courses at the end of the present semester may also be able to work out a program of extra courses during the second semester which will qualify them for graduation by the end of the summer session in early August. Similarly, members of the junior class who may have deficiencies at the end of the first semester of this year's school term may participate in the accelerated program and reduce the four-year term to three. And members of the sophomore class of 1944, by taking the accelerated program, could finish in August or September, 1943, while freshmen could complete sufficient credits in the summer sessions to graduate in May or June, 1944.

Defense Courses Open. Dean Campbell also announced that non-credit national defense courses in navigation and fundamental electronics will be open to lay students of all the schools of the university during the second semester, beginning February 1. These studies will be helpful in equipping students to pass Naval Reserve and other defense examinations. A primary course in the use of logarithms, solution of triangles and other material plane trigonometry will be available for students from 5:10 to 6 p.m. Wednesdays and Fridays. A second course adapted to aircraft navigation will be scheduled for the same period Tuesdays and Thursdays. The course in fundamental electronics, designed to familiarize the student with radio and allied devices, and entail two hours of lec-tures and two hours of laboratory work from 7 to 9 o'clock each Monday and Wednesday evening. These courses are open to fulltime students without extra charge while part-time students will be required to pay a nominal fee.

G. W. Education School

Two new courses have been announced in the school of education George Washington University by Dr. James Harold Fox, dean, for the new semester beginning the week of February 2. Mrs. Lu Verne Crabtree Walker, lecturer in education, will offer a Budget course for elementary school teachers concerning "New Developments Children's Literature."

The course involves the study of creating an environment for the enjoyment of literature; satisfying and stimulating interests through books; developing children's tastes in reading, and use of various media such as movies, radio, magazines and agencies in the field.

The other course, "Administration of Secondary Education," will be Edy of the Federal Works Agency, taught by Dr. Chester Winfield and "Distribution and Promotion," Holmes. Previously it was offered as a one-semester class, but this year it was increased to a full year, with Dean Fox giving the first half and Dr. Holmes the second. The first part of this course deals with the scope and function, administering the program of individual differences, extracurricular ary 11. activities and public relations. The second semester, under Dr. Holmes. will be concerned principally with school policies, studies, schedule technique, vocational education and office management.

Boys' Club Drive To Start Wednesday With Mass Meeting

Several Hundred Business And Civic Leaders to Help In $100,000 Campaign

Several hundred business and civic leaders will help this week in the annual drive for funds for the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club. Their goal is $100,000.

This drive will open with a mass meeting Wednesday night in the Willard Hotel. Brig. Gen. Lewis B. of the parent-teacher association Hershey, director of selective service, are women) as chairmen or members will speak on the importance to the of the emergency feeding units and war effort of the proper care of underprivileged youth.

Ralph L. Goldsmith has been appointed chairman of the Campaign Committee seeking funds to operate the five boys' clubs and their summer camp at Scotland, Md.

James E. Colliflower, past presiwill be given by Mr. Goldsmith. Morris Cafritz, president of the club, and L. Gordon Leech, campaign director. Exhibitions of the makers, as never before, are awake Max Farrington, executive secre- know-for one thing-the necessity tary, and Sergt. Mr. Goldsmith issued an appeal last night to all citizens interested it will be readily eaten. in the work of the club among deserving boys to volunteer as campaign workers.

to the campaign as they have in previous years.

"The police," said Mr. Goldsmith, "who founded and maintained by their efforts for years these havens for boys, are engrossed with the task of protecting the city. We cannot ask them to make further sacrifices of their time for this work, even though we know that many of them willingly would do so.

Advance Gifts Encouraging.

"This condition puts it squarely up to the citizens to raise the money necessary to meet the expanding budget of the clubs. We need more workers in all of the campaign divisions and I hope that any one who has a little time to spare will come to the meeting Wednesday night or communicate with campaign headquarters at 2020 Massachusetts ave-

The Advance Gifts Committee of the campaign has been at work for two weeks under Chairman Paul D. Sleeper and is reporting encouraging increases in donations, according to Mr. Leech. The citizens' unit under Kirk Miller will go into action Thursday, as will the downtown committee under the chairmanship of Thomas P. Morgan, jr.

New Class Starts Feb. 10 Registration Proposed

A Nation-wide system of registration and identification of every child in the United States has been called for by the National Congress of Parents and Teachers in a petition sent from headquarters in Chicago to the Office of Civilian Defense here. Mrs. William Kletzer, Portland, Oreg., president of the national congress, in a letter incorporating the motion of the organization's Executive Committee, declared:

"From Europe's experience we know that air raids, sabotage and other catastrophes to which the community may be exposed in time of war can cause the separation of children from their families. "We believe this matter to be of such great national importance that we are petitioning the Office of Civilian Defense to establish a Nation-wide system that can be used by all communities and all defense councils, including a system of reg-istration that would make it possible to reunite children with their parents and to locate relatives of children in case of death of

Jefferson Students To Give Radio Drama On Argentina

Program Is One in Series By Pupils Here to Aid Hemisphere Solidarity

Pupils of Jefferson Junior High School will present a radio drama-tization entitled "A Yank in Argentina" over Station WMAL at 2 p.m. tomorrow. The event will be one of a series of broadcasts by junior high school groups, sponsored by The Star and the Radio Committee of Washington public schools in the interest of hemisphere solidarity. Radios in junior high schools throughout the city will be tuned to the program, and a discussion period of half an hour will follow in the classrooms. Pupils will follow a lesson plan prepared by a committee headed by Mrs. Margaret time he might have played ball. Chevrier of the faculty at Jeffer- She was attractive and she was son. Anti-Vivisection Measure To Wait, Burdick Says

Representative Burdick, Republican, of North Dakota, speaking yesterday before a session of the International Conference Against Vivisection, said he could wait until conditions are more favorable to seek action on his bill to prevent vivisection of dogs in the District.

The conference opened a two-day meeting at the Continental Hotel with an address of welcome from James P. Briggs of Washington. President Thomas W. Pond of Baltimore presided.

After hearing reports of officers and committees the conference conducted round-table discussions on "What Anti-Vivisection Societies Are Doing" and "How to Discourage the Supply of Animals to Laboratories, Hospitals and Vivisectors.' Mrs. Frederick Bertram and Joseph L. Strickland were in charge of the discussions.

A series of forums and addresses were held in the afternoon. At 11 a.m. today the conference will hold memorial services for Charles Edward Russell.

He meant to kiss her lips, but Livia's sudden twist gave him her cheek instead. Type No. 3, he decided. He classified all women into three groups — the very easy, the easy and the less easy. With the latter group, you usually let them have dinner first. He was a good talker and unlike most executives in Hollywood, read books as well as scripts.

"I really would like you to see my library," he told her and laughed. "I mean really to see the books." He had many first editions, among them a red, leather-bound complete set of Dickens for which he had paid $750. "And it was a bargain." The dining room was empty. And So in War and in Peace . . .

It is perhaps reassuring to realize that while races, nations hemispheres are trying to wipe all others from the earth crises whether the and hemispheres are trying to wipe all others from the earth Americans still find time and the inclination to argue whether the 1919 White Sox were greater than the 1927 Yankees, and whether Jack Dempsey could have whipped Joe Louis.

The other day Jumping Joe Dugan, the old Yankee third baseman, who played with Ruth & Co., in '27, was quoted as calling the Black Sox of '19 the best of all baseball teams. Not to restrict such things to the lay mind, Lt. Comdr. Gene Tunney of the Navy, who holds several magazine knockouts over Louis, recently reversed his field and called Louis the best heavyweight of all times. Lt. Comdr. Tunney's only qualification was that he did not see Ruby Rob Fitzsimmons. Now the mails bring a letter from one A. G. M. of Arlington, Va. (doesn't anybody live in Washington any more?) and enclosed is the versity's quint clinched the unsuggestion that Dempsey's memory lives so vividly because the Manassas official collegiate championship of Mauler had more color than Louis. "Color is one thing," he writes, "and this area last night before 4,100 ability is another. Too many people are confused on this point."

Ah, yes. But Dempsey had both color and ability. Not very many great athletes could combine the two, but most of those who did fared very well indeed, not only in leaving behind some lasting fame but taking big arena, remained to watch the with them large rolls of that vile green paper.

Dempsey, Ruth, Hagen and Holm Had Color

Pressing a hidden nerve near the base of our skull, we have come up with a private all-color team composed of Dempsey in boxing, Ruth runner, for Maryland took the lead in baseball, Tilden in tennis, Holm in swimming, Gipp in football, Nurmi against the Colonials on the court in track and Hagen in golf. Gipp we never saw but lots of people have been known to go off the deep end without learning how to swim.

All of these athletes had ability. Each ranks among the all-time runners, however, was in the same greats in his respective field. But it seems senseless to try to name any one of them as the absolute best, not even Ruth. His home run record never has been beaten, but there are people who rate Cobb, Gehrig, Joe Jackson, Lajoie, Mathewson and even Di Maggio over the Babe as an all-

The Colonials and Hoyas He had more color than the impassive Louis because he was a snarling still have another game to play, but tiger who asked no quarter and gave none. One thing Dempsey could do even a Georgetown victory couldn't better than Louis was take punches. Joe still is affected by a belt to displace the H Streeters. the head, as Billy Conn proved last June.

Whether Ruth was greater than Lajoie or Gehrig, or whether Dempsey was greater than Louis or Fitzsimmons, always will be argued but, because they had color, Ruth and Dempsey made more money than any ball player or fighter in history. At his peak, Babe was more highly paid than the President of the United States. Dempsey drew four gates of more than $1,000.000 and another of more than $2,500.000.

The Haig Made It and He Spent It

Hagen was a great golfer and still can trim a lot of present-day stars, but Jones is one who ranked above him and Ben Hogan probably is another. Yet no golfer made the money (nor spent it) as did the colorful all times. But this is not unanimous. There are plenty of others, from half a dozen foul shots but Zunic Larned to Budge, who have their supporters. But Tilden was the big made one more field goal.

Many of Eleanor Holm's backstroke records have been wiped out. Offhand, we couldn't say how many. But among the Dutch lassies of scored their 10 consecutive points. pre-World War II and Gloria Callen & Co., many of the marks have been erased. Yet it may be a long time before another swimmer, male or female, makes the money that Miss Holm drew down before retiring to become the wife of the long-lashed Romeo, Billy Rose.

As for Nurmi, in some ways he scarcely belongs. Ruth, Holm, Hagen, this style, too, and continued to Dempsey and Tilden were good copy. They talked and said things, outpass, outshoot and outhustle Nurmi hardly could speak a full sentence in English. He was a morose man, rarely quoted. But he was the greatest runner of his time and when he got on the track, wearing the emblem of Finland on his chest and a stop-watch on his wrist to set a new and romantic style, he, too, was colorful. He also did all right financially. It might be interesting to compare Paavo's old expense accounts with those of Riggs, Kovacs and the other amateurs who have been wrist-slapped by the Wearers of the

What If Battles Had Played Knute Rockne

This rambling epic isn't proving anything, nor was it intended to. But the fact remains that unless an athlete has ability he almost never is considered among the greats. Possessing color isn't enough in itself. You almost never hear of Art Shires, for instance. He had color but he couldn't play ball well enough.

The happy combination, perhaps, is ability plus color. Walter Johnson had little color and he never came close to making the money that Inger and Gustafson a trio of sharp-Ruth made. But he was as great, if a pitcher can be compared with a shooters who split apart the Terps' hitter, or possibly greater. In golf Byron Nelson perhaps is better than was Hagen but Nelson, for all of his triumphs, hasn't cashed in as has the Haig. Little Nancy Merki, the swimmer, still is an amateur and a healthy, robust girl who conquered infantile paralysis in story-book fashion but Miss Merki probably will complete her tank career without getting offers from Hollywood, Ziegfeld and, of course, the aforementioned Nurmi was the fabulous Flying Finn. But Greg Rice, who hasn't commanded similar attention, probably is as good as the long-distance bony New Kensington, Pa., star to many cities of the United States star whose shoes he has filled. The same holds, more or less, in the case of Tilden vs. Don Budge. Finally, and pressing an even more secret spring, we offer the case of George Gipp vs. Cliff Battles of West Virginia Wesleyan. Nobody is going to tell us that Battles, playing for Notre Dame under Knute Rockne, wouldn't have been as good or better than

And, to repeat, we never saw Gipp. Isn't it easy to get oneself involved in something like this?

G. W.'s Early Spurt Tells.

Ten straight points scored by G. W. early in the opening period gave the Colonials an edge they never lost. The heralded battle between Matt Zunic of the downtown school and Ernie Travis of the College Parkers was not overrated, each scoring 12 points in the first half, which ended with George Washington leading by 29-19, and both carrying on during the final 20 minutes despite increased defensive pressure.

Lynagh's Draw Tells.

Kysczewski's quick kayo saved the night for the Cards-officially-but t was Bernie Kelleyni's draw with George Barnes in the lightweight argument and Jimmy Lynagh's surprising stalemate with Capt. Mike Yelvich in the 155-pound class that enabled the host punchers to come out even.

As a whole, Catholic looked a lot better than Coach Eddie LaFond's pessimistic forecast indicated it would, but it was evident that the Cards are not up to their usual strength. And it was Lynagh's terrific fight against tremendous odds that stood out.

A Brookland-bred boy, Lynagh suddenly opened up with a vicious counter-attack near the end of the first round that completely took the veteran Yelvich by surprise and continued to hold his own throughout the second round. Yelvich may have had a shade the better of it in the final canto, but Lynagh's game stand in the first was sufficient to warrant a draw.

Kellevni's Draw Is Tainted. Kelleyni's draw was tainted, both lads retiring near the end of the first round with cut eyes after colliding with a bang. It was an automatic draw under the rules, although Kelleyni more than held his own during the fight. It was his first appearance in formal combat. Charley Riehl, Catholic's muchmproved 165-pounder; Capt Huck Hughes, 145 pounds, and Kysczewski came through with colors flying, but Teddy Mandris, 127-pounder was too anxious and too wild and went down to defeat in his bout with Randall Clees. That bout,

302 Prizes Announced in Unique List of Star's Defense Bond Pin Tournament

Payoff in Giant Event Slated This Week; Duffers Enriched

Majority of Recipients Never 3efore Have Collected in Game

By ROD THOMAS. What is believed to be the most unusual prize list in the history of duckpins was announced last night by the management of The Star's Defense Savings Tournament, recently ended after a month of competition in which nearly 10,000 men and women rolled. In keeping with the record size of the field, by far the largest ever assembled in an entry-fee duckpin event, the list is one of the longest ever presented, including 302 awards.

For the first time, Defense savings were used to pay off in a major tournament, with the National Defense Savings organization initiating a move to make the affair a model for the Nation's bowlers. Dozens of tournaments following its pattern now are being held throughout the country and defense coin raised on the mapleways is expected to hit an astronomical figure. Although virtually every star of both sexes in the Metropolitan Washington Area competed, only one captured a major prize. In the qualification test, Lorraine Gulli, former No. 1 woman duckpinner of the country, rolled the high scratch set of 401. Stars Eliminated Early. His score from scratch was 388. To this he added a handicap of 117 for a gross tally of 505, which topped by 20 sticks the count of 72-485 rolled by Bob Williams, Rosslyn entrant, best score at the time, which wound up second.

Also unknown to duckpin fame was the winner of the women's roll-off, and a $500 bond, extremely attractive Lucy Trundle University of Maryland graduate, who laughed: "I hope I'm not dreaming." Shooting at Silver Spring, Miss Trundle teacher and girl athletic coach at Rockville High School, won the tough way. Her handicap of 69 was the smallest among the top 25 women in the gross-set standing and her scratch tally was the best in the entire field. Miss Trundle's score read: 376-69-445.

Moyer's Scratch Set High. Moyer's Scratch Set High.
Outstanding performer of either Rassling Match sex in the giant tournament was Wendell Moyer, who performed at the Arcadia. Moyer, who last season set an alltime District record with a game of 217 in the B. Y. P. U. League at the Arcadia, rolled 450 from scratch in the final. For this, however, he received only $150. Of interest to metropolitan bowlers also will be the Hyattsville Recreation Handicap carded from 2 to 9 and the fifth annual Julian East-erday Open at Baltimore's New Highland drives, which promises to lure most of the city's top-notchers.

The Silver Spring three-game event from, which Arbaugh expects to gain a tidy sum for the Montgomery County Mile o' Dimes, will be caried over to next Sunday for its windup. The entrance fee is $1.50, including cost of games. Scratch for both man and woman contestants will be 129. A three-fourths handicap will be allowed. Entertainment on Penn Card.

Fifteen cents from each entry will go into the paralysis fund. This amount will be matched by Arbaugh, who for seevral years has equaled the contributions from the leagues rolling at Silver Spring. Approximately $150 was raised last season.
Gracing the Penn Recreation card will be Grace Vitality, talented radio singer; comely June Fontana, who recently won the sobriquet of Miss Penn Recreation; Jay Wolfe, 12-year-old bowling sensation, and the Masked Marvel, who will pit his duckpin skill against Abe Weinberg, Penn's top-average District League team roller. In the feature attraction, the Penn All-Stars will engage Roger Peacock's Bethesda stars.

Open to both men and women, the Hyattsville handicap entrance fee is $1.60. Scratch is 125 for both man and woman contestants. Bowlers receive a three-fourths handicap. Tom Greiner and Sam Venesky were the latest winner and

Two Difficult Courses Selected for Fort Myer Horse Show Challenge Match

Riders Are to Battle Under International, American Rules

Big Difference in Tests Between Women's, Men's Teams Is in Scoring

By LARRY LAWRENCE. Margaret Cotter and Mrs. Fred J. Hughes, jr., representing The Star's equestrienne team, and Mai. C. B. McClelland and Lt. Fred J. Hughes, jr., of the men's team which accepted The Star's challenge issued on behalf of the horsewomen, met yesterday at Fort Myer to decide on the courses to be used in the match

at the President's Birthday Horse

Show next Wednesday and Thursday at Fort Myer. Two different courses will be used. That for the initial encounter on Wednesday night is a sporty run governed by the American Horse Show Association rules. For the climax Thursday night there will be another tough course to be negotiated under the Federation Equestre Internationale rules. The difference between these two sets of rules may decide the issue.

Scoring Is Main Difference. The American Horse Show Association rules are used for scoring hunting and jumping classes in practically all horse shows. The Federation Equestre Internationale rules were devised for the Olympic games and other international con-

The latter are more often used in America to govern team matches than for any other purpose. As far as the spectator is concerned, the difference between the two is in the scoring.

Though the match between the famous horsewomen and their equally notable men opponents will be the headliner on both nights of show, there will be other events to bring the spectators to their feet for the list of outstanding horses for the list of outstanding horses entered in the various classes insures the best of competition.

When the Whitney, Greenhalgh, Perry and O'Keefe stables enter North Carolina, 5-3, their prize-winners in the same show the spectators get an eyefull show the spectators get an eyefull of the most beautiful horse flesh in America.

Merricks, Rens Gain Court Triumphs by Decisive Margins

One-sided scores were registered in both feature 135-pound section games yesterday at Eastern Branch Boys' Club in the city-wide basket ball league. Merrick B. C. swamped Northeast Owls, 69-28, and the Rens sank the Celts, 54-25.

In the 120-pound division games. the Crows topped the Zips, 42-12, while Daly Food Shop won over Lincoln Park Aces, 32-28. One 105pound game was played with Dux topping St. Charles, 30-25, while in the 90-pound section. Ants downed Merrick B. C., 18-10, and the Quins Selmer Cracks Navy rolled over Gnats, 86-20,

Hockey Slate Makes Week's Going Rough For Capital Clubs

Lions Meet Troublesome Bisons, Bears; Eagles Tackle Tough Rovers

The Lions and Eagles, who are naving trouble making the community hockey-conscious, are in for no easy time of it this week, if past performances are a criterion, for both outfits will be facing clubs who have treated them rudely.

Twice this week the Lions will be battling the Buffalo Bisons in American League games, colliding tonight at Buffalo and at Uline Arena on Wednesday night. In two previous games the Lions located Buffalo's net only once, dropping 1-0 and 8-1 decisions.

The Lions otherwise are slated to tangle with the Hershey Bears at Hershey on Saturday night, and neither is that good news for their well-wishers. Four times the clubs have scrapped this season, and Hershey owns four victories.

On Tuesday night at Riverside Stadium it will be the Eagles against the New York Rovers, who have won four, tied one and lost two in games with Washington. Ten per cent of the proceeds of this game will be donated to the Mile o' Dimes fund for the fight against infantile

The Rovers-Eagles series has offered some of the Eastern League's finest hockey. Five of their games have been decided by a margin of one goal, another by two goals, and still another ended in a tie.

The Eagles will hop over to Baltimore to meet the Orioles on Wednesday night, then will face the Johnstown Bluebirds at Riverside on Friday night and at Johnstown, Pa., on Saturday night. Johnstown thus far has won five, tied one and lost one in games with Washington.

D. C. Golf Leaders Out of Step Recommending Cancellation of Title Tourney

Would Leave Capital High and Dry Amid Wealth of Action

Maryland, Mid-Atlantic Championships Among Those to Be Held

By WALTER McCALLUM. If the delegates to the District Golf Association annual meeting accept the recommendation of the association Executive Committee and cancel the 1942 District amateur links championship it will leave Washington in an unusual spot. The District of Columbia will be the only spot in this red-hot golf territory without a championship tournament on the schedule. The annual meeting will be held Febru-

Championship affairs already have been scheduled by the Middle Atlantic and Maryland golf organizations, the Mid-Atlantic event being slated to come up at the Manor Country Club June 2, 3, 4 and 5, with the Old Line State affair due to be played at an unnamed Washington club June 18, 19, 20 and 21 These organizations formally have O. K.'d their full slate of tourneys this year. So has the District Women's Golf Association, the most active group of all among the golfers in and around the Capital. On top of all this activity, the Chevy Chase Club will stage its invitation tourney for the Taft and Sherman Trophies on May 13, 14 and 15.

Backed by Precedent.

The local fathers of golf have plenty of precedent backing their stand on the recommended cancellation of the District championship The tourney was canceled in 1917-1918 and before they made their decision the United States Golf Association had canceled its four national tourneys. Since then, howpeople regard as a face-saving move on the heels of a storm of protest a "Hale America" Open tourney, to be run along lines almost identical with the former United States Open championship. The winner will be the National Open champion in Leaves Decision to Sections.

Indeed, many people have recalled that when the U.S.G.A. canceled its four national events the national golf body said its decision did not necessarily bind sectional associations and urged that these organizations make up their own minds on cancellation or carrying on of regular schedules.

The District amateur championship, of course, is purely a sectional event and rates no great fuss. And activities during the coming year. if it is played this year it will be held without a defending title hold- hold its international championship er, for Ralph Bogart, who has won as planned for next September in it for the last three years, is in the Navy and will not defend. Draft Unlikely to Hit Baseball Heavily Until War Reaches for Married Men

Big Leagues Have Few Bachelors Subject To Service Call

More Than 90 Per Cent Of Hurlers Exempted

By Current Ruling By GAYLE TALBOT,

Wide World Sports Writer. NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Big league baseball, now that it has been given the go-ahead by President Roosevelt, should sail almost normally through the coming year, at least, largely because ballplayers as a class are about the marryingest young men there are. For the time being, until Uncle Sam starts digging much deeper into his bag, the draft is going to touch the bulk of diamond stars very lightly. It will not be until the Army begins taking married men in a big way that the game will feel a serious crimp and the caliber of play will deteriorate marl.edly. I have just looked up the marital stalls of 100 big league players, men who were regulars last year, The, were chosen at random. Only 20 of them were unmarried a year ago and some of those doubtless have taken the plunge since then.

Five of the 20 have joined the service since the World Series. That leaves, at the outside, only 15 of the original 100 who face possible conscription in the immediate future, and probably half of those have dependents. Pitchers Are Marrying Lot. Few ballplayers come from famffies with money. The composite big leaguer, as a matter of fact, would come close to being a young man who bought his mother and father and two sisters a home with his first season's salary and then

second year in the majors. Even a higher percentage of pitchers are married than the players of other categories, probably because their pay is a little better. The average salary for the curvers must be around $10,000 a season, which is "marrying" money. Of 77 regular pitchers whose private lives | By the Associated Press. were pried into 67 were married men at last official account. Of the remaining 10 one, Bob Feller, pass his physical exam because of

So it is apparent that pitching will present no serious problem this year. For instance, every regular on the staff of the champion Yankees is 000 Santa Anita Handicap lopped married, except Donald. Offhand off any chance of Whirly topping it appears that only one club, Cleve- the $437,730 record in one race, land, has had its hurling corps but Calumet has announced its faruined by the loss of Feller. American League Suffers.

Some clubs, naturally, will be hit much harder than others, and up to this point the American League has taken a beating out of all proportion to that suffered by the rival National. The American has lost its greatest pitcher, Feller; its leading batter, Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox, and its No. 2 batter for 1941, Cecil Travis of Washington. The Detroit Tigers lost Hank Greenberg, their great $50,-000 slugger, last summer. It was for their respective clubs a sad coincidence that these four top men had evaded matrimony. The National League thus far has lost practically none of its star talent, and there is no immediate prospect that it will until the draft boards make some important revisions in their classifications. Thus far players with dependents have received deferred rating, but there are indications this will not last forever.

Brooklyn officials, for instance, are nervous about the status of their outstanding star, Centerfielder Pete Reiser, and about Shortstop Peewee Reese. Some baseball men, in fact, are leaning toward the Cincinnati Reds as probable National League champions because they come nearer to being a completely married, settled club than either Brooklyn or the St. Louis Cardinals. Big Chance for Veterans. About the only serious worry the Yankees have is the possibility of ings. losing their clever little shortstop, Phil Rizutto, who is the main support of his family. They already have lost Johnny Sturm, their first baseman, but they have Buddy Hassett on deck for the job. In time, as more and more big leaguers are called up, the war will prove a boon to a large group of veteran players who either were barely hanging on in the majors or already had dropped back into "double A" company for a final few years of competition.

Eventually a good, sound 40-yearold pitcher like Freddie Fitzsimmons or Ted Lyons is likely to be regarded as especially valuable property, and a first baseman like Dolf Camilli, with a wife and five children, worth his weight in auto

An interesting possiblitiy lies in the necessity for conserving rubber, even the small amount used in baseballs. Whether league presidents make it an official order or merely tell their umpires under the grandstand, it is likely that balls will be made to last longer and will not be tossed out of the game because of the merest scratch.

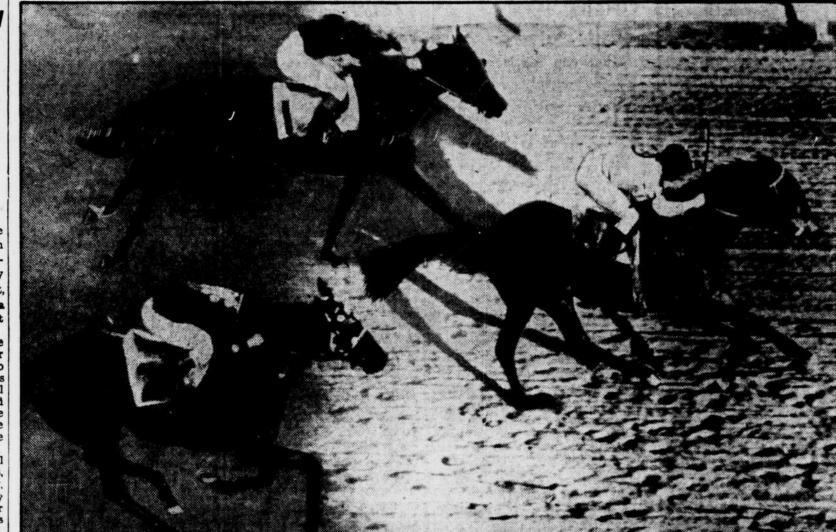

The older pitchers in particular will like that. They can do things with a slightly used baseball that put murder in a batter's heart.

To Attack Seabiscuit's Record by Running in Smaller Stake Races

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 24.—The decision of Calumet Farms stable is in the service, and another, Atley to take the hard way of sending Donald of the Yankees, failed to its star, Whirlaway, after Seabiscuit's money-winning record may restore the Clark Handicap, companion race of the Kentucky Derby, to its former monetary importance.

Cancellation of California's $100,mous 4-year-old would seek to break the mark by competing this spring and summer for stakes ranging from $2,500 to $50,000. Hope for Boost in Stake.

Formerly offering a purse of $10,-000 added, the Clark has been cut to $2,500. Inaugurated in 1875-the same year as the more famous Derby-the handicap is a regular opening day feature at Churchill Downs, over 11-16 miles.

The one-time eminence of the race is attested by the list of its winners, graced by such names as Exterminator, Hodge, Old Rosebud, Midway, Boniface, Audacious, Helen's Babe and Jock Horsemen around the Downs express the belief that Col. Matt Winn, head man at the track would be willing to sweeten the Clark if assured Whirly and other top horses would be entered.

It is a pretty safe bet that, should Churchill Downs boost the Clark ante, officials at nearby Keeneland would be quick to come through with another worthwhile race to attrack Whirlaway, a native of Keeneland's bluegrass neighborhood

By Eddie Mead Former Armstrong Pilot Claims He Can Bring

Ace Boxers Here

Eddie Mead, the stout fellow who piloted Hammerin' Henry Arinstrong to three simultaneous championships, may be the next promoter at Uline Arena if negotiations now pending with Proprietor Mike Uline are successful.

The two were closeted an hour vesterday while Mead unfolded his latter finally prevailed and was plan of action. Previously it was moving away at the end. Red Dock rumored that Goldie Ahearn, aide de camp to Johnny Attell, would get the post, but Mead with his far-reaching connections in the fight game believes he can stage more attractive matches and show more profit than could Ahearn.

"I told Uline what I wanted to do," he said before departing for New York last night. "I wouldn't fool with any trash in a place like that, but give the fans high-class shows. The kind I have in mind would gross $18,000 or $20,000.

"If we can get together I'll be ready to go in a couple of weeks and I'll move to Washington and make my permanent headquarters Mead said he has ample financial support from several Washington business men.

Uline, giving the matter careful consideration, is supposed to have an answer to the proposition next Tuesday or Wednesday. Whether Mead's scheme sounds better than the setup Uline was said to have decided on last week by which he would back Goldie Ahearn as promoter was conjectural.

Deemed Widener Threat After His Good Score

Over Sweet Willow

By the Associated Press. HIALEAH, PARK, Fla., Jan. 24.-Get Off, which last winter finished second to his stablemate, Big Pebble, in the Widener Handicap, today served notice that he has designs on that rich fixture this season when he defeated 13 rivals in the Palm Beach Handicap. Flying the Circle M Ranch silks of the Edward S. Moores of Wyoming, the 6-year-old son of American Flag wore down R. W. Collins' top-weighted mare, Sweet Willow, to take the $4,990 first money by a length. He completed the 7 furlongs in 1:25%. Red Dock lost the place by a head, while Allessandro, coupled with Get Off, was a close fourth. The win-too strong.

There are, however, indications that the opposition is growing stronger. For example, the Japanese advance from Davao to Jolo, from Jolo to British Borneo, was a quick and easy succession of steps. From British Borneo to Tarakan it took longer. The small Dutch garrison on Tarakan put up a fierce fight, Dutch and American planes cost the Japanese heavy losses. From Tarakan to the next point southward along the Strait of Macassar, Balikpapan, has proven very much tougher going. Dutch planes smashed heavily at a Japanese convoy in the strait, making hits on eight ships. Off Balikpapan itself, the Dutch air force has struck

In the Molucca passage, east of Celebes, the Japanese having established themselves on the Minahassa Peninsula, they do not seem on the general line Singapore, Surabaya, Amboina, the centers of Allied resistance, are growing stronger, and if this strength continues to increase, the Allies will be able to develop offensive power which will begin to make itself felt.

It should be remembered that the Japanese were able to overwhelm our fighter force in Luzon and drive away our bombers because of the comparatively few airfields available to us. On the other hand, they have been able to do nothing to diminish the vigor of the Dutch air opera-

Now the Japanese, in stretching out the operations of their air force to such distant points as Tarakan, Jolo, Kuching, Davao, Minahassa and Fabaul, become themselves dependent on a few fixed locations, as opposed to an enemy which has many emergency fields and possesses the direct backing of powerful concentrations of aircraft at large defended bases such as Surabaya, Amboina and Port Darwin.

One danger is that the Japanese may occupy several points on the big island of New Guinea, but this island, having no interior communications and no available military resources, is not to be compared with Australia as a base. Hence, given time, the Japanese cannot to stay where they are. Allied air power must move forward from Australia, north and northwest, covering and supporting the advance of Allied naval power.

The difficulty lies entirely in the time factor. If Singapore is lost while all this is going on, if the Japanese can move into the South China Sea in full force, attack Java and Sumatra, dominate the Strait to be able to develop operations to of Sunda and send their cruisers the southward. All this means that into the Indian Ocean, our problem becomes immensely more difficult.

If, on the other hand, the Japanese can be driven out of their advanced positions and Allied air and naval power can again approach the South China Sea, the far-flung Japanese sea communications will immediately become precarious and their whole scheme of operations will be in danger of collapse.

New Orleans to Hold 3-Week Spring Fiesta March 8 to 29

Visitors May Tour Charming Old Homes And Colorful Gardens

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 24 (Special). - Soon many persons who treat themselves to a trip in the latter part of the winter will begin to think longingly of the early spring in the deep South, with all its balmy, fragrant enchantment. And thousands, at that time, think of New Orleans and its annual spring flesta, with its tours of homes and plantation, art exhibits, strolling tours in the French Quarter, concerts, opera, outdoor artists' ex-hibit in the French Quarter, garden tours, the 60-mile floral trail, as well as a mammoth flower show, net proceeds of which will go to war relief.

March S Through 29. This year the dates of the pres-entation are from March 8 through 29. The Spring Fiesta Association co-operates with a number of other Southern non-profit, civic organizations to provide entertainment, not only for the pleasure of visitors, but to inspire a greater morale.

The first weekday of the flesta starts the French Quarter strolling tours in the morning and the home tours in the afternoon. Visitors find in the French Quarter (Vieux Carre) a little foreign city, with all the Latin characteristics which go back some 200 years. The homes, patios, churches and public buildings reflect honor on the memory of the Spanish and French archi-tects who designed them so long

Old Homes Visited. One of the principal purposes of the flests is to recreate the most interesting historic periods, in which New Orleans is so rich and so different. This is achieved in the home tours, as well as in a number of other features. Some of the residences go back to Colonial years. In these glamorous mansions fiesta visitors are received by hostesses dressed in costumes which strike an authentic note in the surroundings of the South's olden days, rare treasures in period furniture, art objects, paintings and decorations. Assets of Loan Groups Reach New Peak Here

Associations Reveal $14,805,762 Gain During Year

By EDWARD C. STONE. Member associations in the District of Columbia Building and Loan League had combined resources of $172,338,992 on December 31, 1941, an all-time peak, and an increase of $14,805,762 over the previous year, F. Willson Camp, league secretary, reported last night. Nearly a million gain was registered in December, he stated.

Mortgage loans outstanding were shown to be $162,363,269, up $13,626,-230 over the comparable month in 1940. Despite construction restrictions based on war priorities, loan activity exceeded that of December, 1940, a total of $4,267,050 in real estate loans being handled.

Member share accounts reflected a healthy gain, rising $11,679,357 to a new high of $149,466,548. However, a sharp decline in new share accounts was noted during the month, while close-outs were slightly greater. This is attributed largely to the emphasis the members are putting on the sale of Defense bonds. All the associations have qualified with the Federal Reserve Bank to Being Retooled handle the bonds and many are using newspaper advertising to urge their purchase. Sales have been very heavy. The league itself is also releasing newspaper advertising copy urging the public to buy the bonds, Mr. Camp added.

Potomac Power Sales Soar. Reaching the highest mark in the history of the company, kilowatt hour sales of the Potomac Electric Power Co. in the District of Columbia in 1941 amounted to 1,008,-460,174 kilowatt hours against 856,-493,937 kilowatt hours in 1940, a sharp increase of 151,966,237 kilowatt sales, or 17.74 per cent, officials announced yesterday.

Railroads and railways used 103,-239,057 kilowatt hours, which was 13.616,117 more than a year ago and an increase of 15.19 per cent. Public street and highway lighting, owing to the present policy of dimming the lights as a war measure, used a little less electricity than in 1940, a drop of 1.34 per cent, the report

Bonneville Bid For Utilities Is Reported

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.-The Herald Tribune said today that Dr. Paul J. Raver, administrator of the Bonneville Power Administration, has been in New York negotiating for the acquisition by Bonneville and other public agencies of several privately owned electric utilities in the Pacfic Northwest.

Among companies involved in the conversations, the Herald Tribune said, was the Puget Sound Power & Light Co.

The newspaper added that while Dr. Raver was unwilling to divulge the full scope of his negotiations, he let it be known that the price involved for the purchase of Puget and the other companies would be abcut $100,000,000, probably to be financed by the sale of revenue

Puget Sound Power & Light Co., a subsidiary of Engineers Public Service Co., sells power at retail to communities and at wholesale to 16 in Central and Western Washington. In some of these counties are so-called public utility districts which have the power to condemn the company's properties and issue obligations in payment thereof.

All Auto Factories Making Arms or

Changes Accomplished At Less Cost Than In Other Industries

By the Associated Press. DETROIT, Jan. 24.-Virtually all the automobile industry's plants now are being utilized or will be in use for the production of war materiel when necessary retooling is completed, the Antomobile Manufacturers' Association reported today. The statement said that in obtaining war production from the automobile industry, the Government has had to invest only half as much in new facilities as was spent for plants and tools in the heavy goods industries as a whole.

War Work Speeded. Asserting that eight out of every 10 existing plants of the motor industry had war work in progress or assigned to them at the end of November, the association statement went on:

"While a few spectacular new plants producing tanks, airplane engines and guns have caught the public's attention, actually the automobile industry had 150 plants producing war goods or being retooled for such work on November 30. At that time the automobile output was running at a rate 50 per cent below the previous year."

dustry that output for this week totaled 72,317 cars and trucks. This compares with 73,070 units reported by the trade paper for last week and 120,070 this week a year ago.

The survey credited General Motors with 26,333 units this week, compared with 28,224 last week; Chrysler with 18,175 this week, against 18.018 last week, and Ford divisions with 12,375 cars and trucks, compared with 12,322 the previous Production of the other companies, the publication said, remained steady, with Willys turning out war materials only.

From now on operations, especially in the cotton and woolen divisions extent of Government orders for war needs. As our military forces are increased by the addition of milwill be mainly influenced by the lions of men, Government needs for all kinds of textile products will expand considerably. The Government Procurement Division has allocated to the product of the control ment Procurement Division has already stepped up orders for textile Recent Peaks goods, and further acceleration in the pace of new buying is in prospect. In fact, demand for military purposes will be so great as to cut down the amount of goods that will be available for civilian use. Under existing conditions, the textile industry is assured of a high rate of operations for some time to come, but the experience of the various divisions will vary because of raw material problems and Government allocations to assure adequate output for military needs. Operations to Climb. Because of the extremely large supplies of raw cotton in this country, cotton mills should not be troubled by raw material difficulties and they are in a position to operate to the full extent of available machinery and man power.

Indications are that the industry

erations at the highest levels possible to fill Government orders and regular civilian demand. Moreover, a larger part of operations will be concentrated in the production of the heavier cotton constructions, such as ducks, osnaburgs and denims, which will require greater use of raw cotton in their output. Government needs for sandbags alone will require a large volume of cloth, a good part of which must be made from cotton because of the uncertain supplies of burlan. Efforts are being made to have the industry operate at maximum capacity by adoption of a 24-hour day, 7-day week basis. Such a schedule presents difficulties, howmachine equipment, the strain on machinery resulting from continued skilled labor. It is probable that mental bullish factors. Automotive News said today in its such a rate of operations will not levels in coming months.

Price Ceilings Extended. The price ceiling placed earlier on certain cotton constructions have been extended to cover numerous other items, including such finished goods as towels, table cloths, bed sheets and pillow cases. While many items are based on a sliding arrangement under which prices will vary with changes in raw cotton prices, others are limited to the highest sale price obtaining during the November 1-December pending more detailed

The present price basis provides reasonably good margins under existing conditions. Any later increase in costs, particularly labor however, would narrow margins unless compensating adjustments in selling prices were allowed.

Wool Curbs Likely. The high rate of wool consumption in the past year has necessitated large imports to meet domestic mill requirements. So far, imports have been sufficient to meet all needs and provide a backlog of stocks for medium term requirement. The war in the Pacific, however, and the further tightening in shipping facilities threatened, have caused some doubt regarding the adequacy of future supplies to meet the sharp expansion in demand for wooler goods for military purposes.

Accordingly, it has been ordered that wool consumption by any first quarter of 1942 to 80 per cent of the quarterly consumption rate for the first half of 1941. The order also limits the amount of new wool used for civilian goods by manu-of woolen goods that will be turned out for civilian purposes, no definite ment can be made as yet. Producers working on civilian goods may partly offset this limitation on new wool usage by greater utilization of reused and reworked wool (See TEXTILE, Page C-9.)

Traders restrained buying enenthusiasm to some extent because of likelihood of continued Commodity Credit Corp. sales of old stocks of wheat and corn due to the fact that present market prices are above minimums at which this grain is offered for sale. Large sales of Government grain were reported at some terminals but some traders placed a bullish interpretation on this because of evidence that the C. Lewis Loses Appeal In Utilities Case

By the Associated Press. CHICAGO, Jan. 24.-The United States Circuit Court of Appeals yes-terday upheld Federal Judge William H. Holly's order last May 15 denying Frank J. Lewis, Chicag financier, permission to file a petition seeking to require that the Central States Utilities and the Central States Power & Light Corp. ne sold to him for $1,600,000. Lewis, chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, had alleged that a contract for such a purchase was made in December, 1939, between himself and the Utilities Power & Light Corp., a bankrupt concern which the Ogden corporation succeeded. The Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the District Court had no jurisdiction because a purchase by Lewis was not pertinent to the U P. & L. reorganization. Nation in Grip Of Buying Rush; Results Feared

Both Retailers and U.S. Officials Face New Supply Problems

By FRANK MACMILLEN, Wide World Business Writer.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 .- The country, for the second time in six months, is in the grip of a wave of buying in retail stores and both merchandisers and Government officials are worried about some of the likely consequences.

The drop in store business after Christmas was brief and less than normal and within the last two weeks a strong buying tide has set in and is embracing not only poten-tially scarce goods but nearly everything Mr. and Mrs. Householder buy.

The experts call what is going on a "consumer inventory" problem which means only that Americans are on a buying spree and that a substantial part of what they are buying is going into the pantry, the clothes closet, the tool chest and a dozen other home hideaways and not into immediate consumption. In normal times many of these goods, ranging from canned foods still would be on merchants' shelves, not destined actually to be used for weeks to come. Covers Wide Field. This sweep of money is flowing into more kinds of things than the wave which hit the stores last August and September, but, retail men say, it seems to have a less "pan-

icky" quality than last summer's The character of things being bought, except sugar, pineapple juice, spices and a few others, indicates rather a planned stocking of things that may be scarce or of inferior quality later, retailers reported. But, they pointed out, the unusual buying has caught many retailers off balance, creating problems for them and their suppliers. And, if it continues too long, it may bring a whole host of price and civilian supply questions to Leon Henderson's division of the new War Production Board.

Merchandise experts had been reconciled for months to the scarcity bound to develop in many kinds of "hard goods" as war drained the supplies of metals, building supplies and similar things. The hope they express now is that

"soft goods," foods, clothing, shoes, metal notions of many kinds, hotwater bottles and household rubber goods, drugs, radios and soap, can be marketed in a sufficiently orderly way so that there is a fair chance when people buy things they may But recent trade reports indicate it is exactly this sort of merchandise being taken from the shelves. Difficulties Needless. The resulting shortages, often temporary, create needless difficulties both for merchant and customer, it was pointed out.

Trade journals in recent weeks have emphasized repeatedly the role the previous year, an increase of the merchant ought to play in discouraging customers-even good ones-from buying things they do The sugar industry, from refiners through wholesalers to retailers, has been developing an informal rationing in which each seller is expected showed an increase in excess of Procedures have varied considerably from area to area and store to store it was said. A Government rationing system is acknowledged to be in preparation. But, even considering sugar as a more or less isolated case of consumer buying "gone wild," the gen-> dash to the stores is disturbing, businessmen said. Business Week said today: "In an orderly, unhurried market, the supply of necessary consumer goods * * * would be, if not plentiful, at least sufficient to go around. "But the current scramble may reduce store inventories so sharply that the stores themselves will be rationers of goods-picking and choosing their best customers-and the temptation to raise prices will be hard to resist." Canada Reported Weighing Higher Price for Wheat

Rail Issues Register Further Advance On Bond Market

Corporate Obligations Remain Uneven at Week's Close

By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Rail issues continued to hold a favored rating in today's bond market and, despite some late irregularity under profit selling, the Associated Press average of 20 carrier loans rose 2 of a point. Except for Wednesday's setback the rails made good progress throughout the week, aided considerably in the later stages by the Interstate Commerce Commission's decision authorizing a 10 per cent increase in passenger fares. Other corporate departments had no noteworthy feature. Latin American issues again claimed a lively speculative interest but at the end prices were somewhat mixed. Australian issues were down a point or so and the foreign composite dipped .1 of a point.

Rails showing final gains of fractions to a point or more included New Haven collateral 6s at 51%, convertible 31/2s at 271/2, Rio Grande Western first 4s at 46, Wabash assented 5s at 28, Northern Pacific 4s at 75, Erie 4s of '95 at 90, and Lehigh Valley stamped 41/2s at 363/4.

Closing prices were moderately lower for Anaconda Copper 41/28, American Telephone 31/28 and Delaware & Hudson refunding 4s. Commercial Mackay incomes dropped 134. United States Governments were unchanged to a shade lower in the outside market.

Baltimore Markets

Special Dispatch to The Star. BALTIMORE, Jan. 24.—There were only slight changes in the quotations on live poultry during the week. Most young chickens displayed greater strength, with prices about 1 cent per pound above last week's quotations. However, fowl was somewhat dull and in some instances quotations declined slightly. Prices fluctuated rather frequently, but the net changes were confined to a nar-row margin. Roosters, ducks, guineas, capons and geese held practically steady throughout the week, but there were slight changes in the prices on turkeys. Some young hen turkeys were a little firmer than a week earlier, but some toms, especially the very large birds, declined slightly. a week earlier, but some toms, especially the very large birds, declined slightly.

Demand throughout the week was fairly good and although early receipts were only light they increased in volume later and were about sufficient to meet requirements. Most of the demand was for the better-grade stock.

Young Rocks sold 22a24, but a few of the larger birds brought a little higher figure. Both young Reds and young erosses moved out well at slightly firmer prices, both bringing 22a23, with larger stock selling at slightly higher prices.

Ordinary stock of all kinds also showed greater strength at 16a20. In fowl, Rocks weighing 4½ pounds and up brought mostly 21a22, and mixed colors sold 20a21 for large stock and 18a20 for smaller. Leghorns continued to bring 18a19. Roosters were still rather slow to move at 12a14 for mixed colors and 10a12 for Leshorns.

Quotations on ducks were about steady at 20a21 for young white Muscovys weighing 5 pounds and up most of them bring the lower figure: 16a18 for mixed colors and 10a12 for the bring the lower figure. 16a18 for mixed colors and 19a20 for young Pekins. Guineas were little changed at 21a22, most of the stock being of quality to bring the higher figure. Large capons weighing 7 pounds and up continued to sell 27a28 with smaller stock bringing 25a26. Livestock Market.

Demand for steers slacked off and most sales were made at 25 lower levels than late last week, according to the Agricultural Marketing Service. Department of Agriculture. C. C. Green acting local representative. Cows fluctuated unevenly but closed stronger while sausage bulls ruled steady to lower. Trading on top medium and good-grade steers was at least moderately active at downturns and best finished yearing offerings in the run sold rather readily at prices upward to 13.00. The vealer market was dull and lower with the closing trade on a "catch as catch can" basis even on small numbers. Declines measured 1.00 to 2.00 and more from a week ago. Hog prices fluctuated unevenly and closed mostly 5 higher than Thursday and a week ago. Practical top for the week was 12.15 and practical top for the week was 12.25. Fat lamb prices showed little change with good to choice offerings selling 13.50a14.25.

Bulk of the week's steers were medium and low grades around 11.00a12.15 with good grade yearlings scaling 1.026 to 1,115 pounds, 12.75a13.00. Scattered odd lots and part loads of common grade steers sold downward to 10.25 and occasionally 10.00 or below. Most common to good-grade fat cows sold around 8.25a9.00 with good 1.585-nound Holstein cows at 9.60 and good grade 1.317-pound Hereford heifers, 10.00. Canner to common cows frequently sold 6.50a8.25 with only "shelly" lightweight descriptions available at 6.00 downward to 5.00 or under. Sausage bulls cleared mostly 9.00a10.75 with lightweight offerings only occasionally downward to 9.00 and below.

Price levels on vealers literally fell to pieces, with late sales 1.00 to 2.00 and more below a week ago. Week's top, paid early, stood at 16.50 but at the finish the market was on a dull "catch as catch can" unevenly lower basis with clearance incomplete. Late sales of common to good-vealers were 10.00a15.00. whereas 16.00 had moved a fair percentage of the week's crop.

Friday's hog market ruled mostly 5 higher than Thursday with practical top had moved a fair percentage of the week's crop.

BALTIMORE.—Consumer buying is nearing record levels for the month, stimulated by steady purchasing of items for which a scarnity is anticipated. As dollar volume maintained a sharp lead over last year, to do with the increasing demand for prepared foods that can be stocks of merchandise in retailers' hands continued to diminish. Thus far in January wholesalers' sales have not come up to expectations, although they exceed the like period last year. Bank clearings were 29 per CHICAGO.—Shoppers are spending more freely in a steady, quiet effort to stock up on staples such as shoes, clothing and food. Dollar volume of retailers showed a very good gain over last year. To replenish diminishing stocks retailers are again ordering from wholesalers in good volume, with sportswear lines particularly good. Buying at the Furniture Show, although below last year, compared favorably with major markets prior to the defense program. Bank clearings were 26 per cent above a vear ago.

CLEVELAND.—Consumer buying continued unusually heavy for this time of year as consumers purchased ahead steadily in lines such as textiles, rubber goods, clothing and groceries. Although sales gains were uneven, retail trade generally showed a very good lead over 1941, with department store sales up more than 40 per cent. The steel rate advanced one point to 97 per cent of capacity. Bank clearings were 37 per cent larger than 1941.

DETROIT.—Anticipatory purchasing by consumers in a wide variety of lines and the temporarily improved employment situation in the automobile factories has combined to boost sales well ahead of last year's totals. Wholesalers report a high percentage of orders for deferred deliveries; a mild buying wave carried shoe volume 20 per cent above last year; brisk purchasing at retail was reflected in an active call for winter wear and white goods. Automobile output rose to 75,625 units from 60,190 in the preceding week. The tight scrap situation continues, holding steel mill operations at 94 per cent of capacity.

INDIANAPOLIS.—Expanding about 5 per cent in the week as consumers bought steadily in anticipation of shortages, retail trade continued to run well ahead of last year, with some increases as high as 35 per cent. Jobbers also reported a sales gain over the previous week estimated at 5 to 10 per cent, and a rise of 15 per cent over 1941. Manufacturing and construction of war facilities is increasing steadily. No decided curtailment of non-defense output has been noted as yet.

KANSAS CITY.—Business activity continues at a high level. Re tailers report a brisk interest in textiles, woolen wearing apparel, rubber goods and other items in which a possible shortage is anticipated. Department store volume was estimated more than 40 per cent above last year. Wholesalers reported little change in activity with turnover well ahead of 1941. Flour milling is 15 per cent ahead of 1941, bank clearings 26 per cent.

LOUISVILLE .- A steady pressure of anticipatory buying aided in boosting department store sales an estimated 55 to 60 per cent ahead of 1941 last week. Retailers of men's furnishings reported sales moderately higher than last year; sales of furniture and electrical appliances were about on a par with 1941. Wholesale dry goods concerns reported volume 25 per cent better than 1941 as retailers requested immediate delivery of spring merchandise. Bank clearings were 33 per cent above 1941.

PITTSBURGH.-No let down was noticeable in the exceptional volume of sales thus far in January. Department stores in the latest week were estimated more than 50 per cent larger than last year, but general retail trade shows less spectacular gains. Central shopping stores drew trade from a wider radius and in outlying districts the gains were not uniformly maintained. Wholesalers were more active as spring orders were received in geater quantity. The steel rate held at 97 per cent of capacity.

ST. LOUIS.-Vigorous buying of textiles, woolen clothing, rubbe goods, staple groceries and other items in which consumers anticipate a shortage, as well as good response to seasonal promotions, boosted retail volume sharply higher than last year. Dollar volume was estimated as much as 60 per cent larger than 1941 in some lines. Wholesalers of apparel were more active as spring orders were received. The shoe industry continues to operate at a high level. Bank clearings were 35 per cent above

TOLEDO.—Stimulated by forward buying in textiles, woolen clothing, rubber goods, groceries and other selected lines ret 1941 widened from the 20 to 25 per cent gain reported last week. The change-over from civilian to war production continues, with one automobile plant reporting completed conversion to 100 per cent war basis.

YOUNGSTOWN.—Buying "runs" on commodities in which scarcities are anticipated boosted sales gains sharply in special lines, but in general

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—The entire Nation's food - consuming habits from soup to nuts, are being revoluionized, according to a survey made by the Market Research Corporation of America among 102 of the leading food manufacturers. "The principal change will have preparation, since more and more housewives will be doing their own cooking," says a large manufacturer Says another: "The boys in camp are being fed much better than were those in the first World War. I do not mean only the quantity and quality of food, but more attention is being paid to the proper nutri-tional balance. All of this cannot help but affect the food habits of our people. If the war brings an expeditionary force from America to Africa, the boys who come back will bring a taste for, which will develop into a demand for, the kinds of food which are eaten in North

Manufacturers who believed the war would affect food production processes spoke of specific changes necessitated by heightened demand for new kinds of foods, such as those suitable for use by the Army or for export. The trend toward more concentrated foods was the mosttalked-of processing change. Mentions were made not only of "shortage of tin" and other "packaging problems" but of the need to "conserve freight, handling and distribution costs." Ruling in Georgia Case Says Jurisdiction May Extend to Elective Officers

The Civil Service Commission yesterday recommended removal of two officials of the Georgia Bureau of Unemployment Compensation who were accused of violating the Hatch "clean politics" law and at the same time laid down the broad principle that under a certain condition its jurisdiction in such cases applies to elective officers.

The removal order was directed at E. B. Stewart, director of the bureau, and Marion A. O'Connor, director of the division of unemployment service of the bureau, who were charged with attempting to coerce employes under their supervision to contribute to the re-election campaign of Ben T. Hulet, commissioner of labor in 1940.

It is the second time the commission has taken ouster action under provisions of the Hatch Act baring political activity by those employes of State and local governments, whose functions are in any way financed by Federal funds. If the commission recommendations are not carried out, the Government can withhold from the State grants

The labor commissioner was cleared of the charges although the ommission said there was "substantial evidence" tending to prove vioations of the act. At the same time. however, the commission rejected Mr. Huiet's contention that he was not subject to the law. Elective officers, the commission said, interpreting this section for the first time, are exempt solely from the provision of the act forbidding a State officer or employe to "take any active part in political management or in political campaigns."

The exemption does not apply, according to the ruling, to an indi-vidual using "his official authority or influence for the purpose of interfering with an election or nomination for office, or affecting the result thereof" or who may "indirectly coerce, attempt to coerce, command or advise any other such officer or employe to pay, lend or contribute any part of his salary or compensation or anything else of value to any party, committee or organization. agency or person for political pur-

The labor commissioner had denied wrongdoing.

Ruling on Other Employ The commission stated also that Alfred F. Scogin and Rex P. Huffman violated a section of the act, but held that the violations did not warrant their removal from employment by the Georgia bureau. It also found that George W. Atwood and Ralph Macon did not violate the act and proceedings in each case were ordered dismissed. All four are connected with the Unemployment Compensation Bureau.

The commission said there were about 400 employes in the Bureau of Unemployment Compensation. which is part of the Social Security Act organization, and that its work is Park Hotel. financed largely by Federal funds. The charges were based on the allegation that all employes receiving more than $150 monthly were being required to give half a month's salary to Mr. Huiet's cause. A collection arrangement in the Cincinnati office of the Ohio Bureau of Unemployment Compensation to help the State ticket in 1940 resulted in a commission order for removal of Harry J. Patterson, office manager.

Mrs. Lionel Atwill Helps Defense Corps; Women in House Back Mrs. Rogers In Plea for War Organization

By ROBERT CRAWFORD.

Mrs. Lionel Atwill, for the time being, has given up her hobby of naking over old Georgetown houses and is one of the newest recruits in the women's auxiliary police corps. She has entered into the work with all the enthusiasm and energy for which she is noted.

To old Washington society Mrs. Atwill is still referred to as Louise Cromwell, and is remembered as one of the Capital's most popular belies. Just now the thing she is most interested in is canteen service for soldiers policemen and volunteer guards who are on 24-hour service on bridges and highways entering the city. Mrs. Atwill, explained, however, that any such service cannot be organized &- of paid workers who have been serving Government employes on night duty. Being possessed of a good business sense, as well as plenty of executive ability, she believes the greatest care should be used to avoid the overlapping of work. To her there is nothing glamourous about the tasks the women of America will be called on to do in this until it is made clear that volunteer until it is made clear that volunteer in the House is rallying around canteen work will not conflict with Representative Rogers' bill proposing organization of a woman's army auxiliary corps. When Mrs. Bolton, a Representative from Ohio, appeared before the committee to plead for the bill she grew posi-tively eloquent in pointing out the necessity for its immediate passage.

"Mission to Moscow" is rich in historical detail, giving a compre-hensive picture of the attitude of the Soviet government to which he was United States Ambassador from 1936 to 1938. Mr. Davies, who is of Welsh blood, must have inherited it is becoming scarcer every day. In the collection of china downstairs in the White House there are several pieces, but it is not known whether or not they are originals. There is a dark blue platter with the old Cantonese willow border that has been said to be an original Staffordshire; also a fruit dish used in the time of President Fillmore. It seems that Staffordshire pottery was not known in this country until 1836. Up to that time much of the pottery imported here was from Enoch Wood of Liverpool and the two potteries sometimes are

Mary Ainsworth, Lt. J. M. Tabb, Jr., Are Married

Two well-known Virginia families were represented at the marriage last evening of Miss Mary Monroe Ainsworth of Lexington and Lt. J. Mackenzie Tabb, jr., U. S. A., of Middleburg. The wedding took place at 8 o'clock at Silverwood, the home of the bride's grand-father, Mr. Edward Trent Robin-son, in Lexington, where her parents were married 30 years ago. The bride is the daughter of Mr. Ben Pushmataha Ainsworth and the late Mrs. Ainsworth. Lt. Tabb is the son of Mrs. J. Mackenzie Tabb of Middleburg and the late Mr.

Bride Escorted By Her Father.

The bride was escorted by her father to an improvised altar in the living room, where white calla lilies, ferns and Southern smilax were placed. Tall cathedral can-dles shed a soft glow during the ceremony, at which the Rev. J. Edwin Bethea, rector of Robert E. Lee Memorial Chapel at Lexington, and Dr. J. J. Murray, rector of the Lexington Presbyterian Church, officiated. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Almand R. Cole-

Ivory colored satin formed the bride's wedding gown, which had a V neckline, puffed sleeves and a skirt which flared into a long, graceful train. Her tulle veil, which fell to the bottom of the train, was held by a coronet of heirloom lace, which also formed a short veil that fell below the waistline. The bridal bouquet was of white orchids and of honor and only attendant for her sister, wore a rose chiffon gown made on simple lines with a matching hat. She carried a bouquet of rose color snapdragons. Frank C. Littleton, Jr.,

Serves as Best Man. Mr. Frank C. Littleton, jr., of Middleburg was best man for Lt. Tabb, who had as ushers Lt. Carl J. Lang and Lt. Flournoy H. Barksdale, both instructors at V. M. I. Following the ceremony the couple received the guests as they stood in front of the altar. In the dining room, where white flowers decorated the tables, the bride's table was centered with a bowl of bride's roses and a tiered wedding cake was placed at one end. For her going-away costume the bride wore a blue wool suit with a white silk blouse and long blue tweed coat. Her accessories were British tan. After a Southern wedding trip the couple will visit in Middleburg before returning to reside in Lexington, where Lt. Tabb is stationed at

Virginia Military Institute. Through her maternal grandmother, the late Mrs. Mary Monroe Robinson, the bride claims kinship with President James Monroe and is a direct descendant of Col. Joseph Ball of Wakefield, where George Washington was born, and of Samuel Kercheval, historian. Through her maternal grandfather she is a descendant of William Graham, founder of Liberty Hall Academy, now the Washington and Lee University. Lt. Tabb is a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. J. Prosser Tabb of Middleburg and Baltimore, and of Col. and Mrs. R. Welby Carter of Crednal near Upperville. She is a descendant of John Tabb of White Marsh, in Gloucester County, and of Robert ("King") Carter of Corotoman in Lancaster County, Va.

Miss Frances Simmons, Capt. McConnell Married

Chapel at Walter Reed Banked With Many Flowers for Ceremony; Couple to Live Here After Trip

The marriage of Miss Frances Scott Simmons, daughter of Col. James Stevens Simmons, Medical Corps, U. S. A., and Mrs. Simmons, to Capt. David Moffatt McConnell, U. S. A., son of Mrs. McConnell and the late Dr. Harvey E. McConnell of Chester, S. C., took place at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the chapel at Walter Reed Hospital, with Chaplain William A. Gamble officiating. The chapel was decorated with palms, fern and a profusion of all-white flowers. A program of nuptial music was played by Miss Ann D. Kirk, who also accompanied the soloist Miss Harriet La Roche.

Escorted by her father and given by him in marriage, the bride was lovely in a gown of ivory satin fashioned on princess lines with long fitted sleeves, a heart-shaped neckline and a flaring skirt ending in a long train.

Her voluminous veil, which fell from a cap of rare lace, was held in place by a halo of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Martha Louise Short Serves as Maid of Honor. Miss Martha Louise Short, daughter of Capt. E. T. Short, U. S. N., and Mrs. Short, was the maid of honor and only attendant of the bride. She wore a coral chiffon gown and carried a bouquet of briarcliff roses. Dr. H. Russell McConnell of Gastonia, N. C., served his brother as best man. The ushers were Lt. Harold Underhill, Lt. William Voigt, Lt. Harry Rhett, Lt. Frederic Steiwer, decorated with palms, fern and varithe traditional Army custom and cut the three-tiered wedding cake with the bridegroom's saber.

Those assisting at the reception were Mrs. Josiah William Bailey, Mrs. James C. Magee, Mrs. S. U. Marietta, Mrs. George F. Lull, Mrs. Arthur Johnson, Mrs. Harold W. Jones, Mrs. Franklin C. Martin, Mrs. Laurent La Roche, Mrs. Norman T. Kirk, Mrs. James Kimbrough, Mrs. George Callender and Mrs. Samuel

Other friends of the bride who assisted were Miss Peliz Bailey, Miss Eleanor Darnall, Miss Mary Louise Hillman, Miss Mary Ann Sommerville, Miss Ann Kirk, Miss Jane Kirk, Miss Harriet La Roche, Miss Betty Bartelt, Miss Catherine Estes, Miss Margaret Baker, Miss Marjorie McAfee, Miss Ruth Mee han, Miss Elizabeth Shepherd and Miss Suzanne Randall.

Rector's Aid Plans Novel Arrangement For Luncheon Party

Members of the Rector's Aid of St. Margaret's Church are planning an unusual arrangement for their luncheon Friday in the Parish House on Connecticut avenue at Bancroft place. Twelve tables forming rays from the round center table will represent the 12 months of the year and guests will be seated at the tables representing • their birthday months. A hostess has been chosen for each of the 12 tables and each is planning decorations in keeping with the seasonal characteristics of that month.

The center of the round table will be filled with a large birthday cake while smaller birthday cakes will decorate each of the other 12 tables. During the luncheon there will be a fashion show.

Mrs. Willoughby Chesley has charge of reservations which also will be taken by the secretary at the church.

Must Your Daughter Risk Happy Marriage on Half-Truths?

Many a mother, reared in days of false modesty, dreads to "tell her daughter." Little wonder so many young wives unknowingly risk happiness by using overstrong solutions of acids for the douche which can actually burn, scar and even desensitize delicate tissue.

Today such doubts and unhappiness, such risks are needless. Science has given womankind Zonite. So powerful, it kills instantly all germs and bacteria with which it comes in contact. Deodorizes—by actually destroying odors. Protects personal daintiness. Yet! Zonite is non-poisonous, safe for delicate caustic, non-poisonous, safe for delicate tissues. WALTER HUSTON Wears a satanic grin if ever there was one. He plays a certain Mr. Scratch in "All That Money Can Buy," motion picture version of Stephen Vincent Benet's "The Devil and Daniel Webster."

The Critics, Poor Creatures, Are Again Being Criticized

Mr. Pemberton Thinks They Should Come Unly on Order, Like Groceries, and Actress Wants Them "Less Honest"

By Jay Carmody.

The theater is never in a more anemic condition than when its children ask mercy for it at the hands of its best friends, the severest

In recent weeks, much to the embarrassment of the sedate and nonhysterical elements of show business, the suggestion has been made again that what is wrong with the theater is the reviewers. Not the playwrights, the producers, the actors, the stagehands, or the box office staffs. understand, just the reviewers.

First to utter the complaint was Producer Brock Pemberton, who used to be a critic himself, but who has so completely forgotten that fact that in the past two years he has produced two such memorably awful items as "Glamour Preferred," a thing about Hollywood, and "Cuckoos on the Hearth.

Mr. Pemberton broods morbidly upon the state of criticism every time he produces a failure. At such a time, it always seems to occur to him that criticism is not what it used to be, that the boys are more dyspeptic and undiscerning than when he was one of them. Mr. Pemberton's musings invariably lead him to a suggestion which has become an inevitability in a bad Pemberton year. It is that producers should have the right to decide for themselves whether their shows should be criticized, that reviewers are something which should be kept in stock in newspaper offices, ready for instantaneous delivery to any producer who puts in an Producer Claims the Critics Deny Public Entertainment.

He has not said anything yet about keeping them in varying sizes, dispositions and degrees of gentleness, a concession no doubt to the press' notion of freedom. Or, if not that, a desire perhaps to move slowly in the demolition of an old and respected institution in the theater.

It is Mr. Pemberton's idea that the critics are denying the public a lot of entertainment, and the producers a lot of profit, by not perceiving there is a difference between art and simple (sic) amusement. It is a polite and devious way of calling them incompetent and entirely overlooks the fact that a critic's standards, preferences and prejudices are no mystery to those who read him consistently. It is one of the things that permits him to sleep at night that it takes two kinds of readers to make up his audience, those who think his judgment is sound and those who recognize him as a fool. He feels that he is equally useful to both groups as an adviser on entertainment investment, that those who believe him will go to see the play because he recommends it, that the others will stay away because they dislike everything he likes.

It Is Not That Simple,

But It Is Some Solace. It is not, of course, altogether that simple, but it is close enough to give a reviewer solace when he remembers the harsh things Mr. Pemberton may be thinking about him.

In implying that the critic's approach to the theater is baleful, if hot actually murderous, Mr. Pemberton does the poor creature a grave injustice. There are seasons when it takes an almost simple-minded devotion to the theater to survive the disappointments and disillusionments which the successive weeks bring. But the poor reporter does survive the most protracted periods of amazement that the talents of even the greatest dramatists and the luckiest producers can lead to almost endless betrayal. In the most seemingly hopeless periods, he keeps hope in his heart that Maxwell Anderson's next play will be another "Winterset," and that Mr. Pemberton will never make another mistake like "Cuckoos on the Hearth." At Least Mr. Pemberton

Is More Artful Than Miss Landi. He even goes on hoping that some day Mr. Pemberton will stop nagging and blaming the critics for bad business when the quality of plays is so low that the movies won't even buy them.

Perhaps it should be said of Mr. Pemberton that he is more artful in revealing his feelings about reviewers than is pretty Elissa Landi. In her gentle, artless way she made the week brighter by coming out in favor of "less honesty" on the part of drama commentators.

In recommending this doffing of moral standards by reviewers Miss Landi made it clear that she did not suggest it as a permanent policy, but "only until the theater again flourishes." She was graceful enough, too, to add that she was not suggesting tempered honesty toward actors and actresses, but for the sake of the

That, of course, would leave the critic free to say that the play was wonderful, that only the acting was superficial, immature or imbecilic. "You find out I am a patri-ot." She tossed a glance at a half dozen grip men. It must have been a left-over glance from the evening in the Army camp. The grip men shifted their feet and grinned. Nobody spoke. They all waited for Dietrich. She pursed her lips, swept her lashes down, and started over again on "love."

Her Face Looked Sad.

She was dressed in a gay ninetles blouse of very peekaboo white lace over flesh-colored net. I kept wondering if it really was flesh-colored net. I suppose the grip men did, too. Her golden hair was pulled up over a pompadour rat which stood up three inches from her thin forehead. The hollows in her cheeks made big, sad shadows.

Film About Holland From Errors

It is a good thing for a certain motion picture that Alfred S. Karlsen took the "underground" out of Holland a few months ago and found his way to a suburb of Hollywood

Otherwise this movie might have been so full of inaccuracies that it would have fitted its title in more ways than one. "Highly Irregular" is the handle. The fellows who wrote it never have been in Amsterdam, but it seemed to them like a good idea to play a story of love and intrigue involving Joan Bennett, Franchot I co-o-o-dent remember. It went like Tone and a Nazi general in occupied Holland, even though they were totally without local color. They just used their imaginations. Richard Wallace was getting ready to direct the piece when he read in a local newspaper that refugees Karlsen and his wife and two children had recently arrived here. Karlsen was summoned, in the imperious way that Hollywood gets what it wants. The idea of being an adviser appealed to Karlsen ("I am without funds") so we will now fade out and fade in again on the scene after Karlsen has perused the script. To put it mildly, he was shocked at

lace's writers had so glibly drawn it. Too Nice to Nazis. Being new to this business (he was a textile manufacturer), Karlsen was reluctant to tell his first interviewer how he had changed "Highly Irregular." But assured by Wallace that anything can be said about a motion picture, just so the name is spelled correctly. Karlsen

Dietrich is the wonder of other actresses here. She's married to Rudolph Sieber, a former German director, who seems to prefer New York. Dietrich battles lonesomeness by showing up in the town's kinds of goings on in the streets most expensive night clubs with whatever male star is the talk of the town. That Play About a Critic Pleases a Critic Highly

'Jason,' Who Might Be G. J. Nathan, Is Hero of a Drama of Wit, Intelligence and Honesty

By Ira Wolfert.

Although William Saroyan hasn't been able to get any of his unproduced plays on our stage yet this season, his memory is being kept green for us-this time by Samson Raphaelson who tosses a wreath upon him, making sure there are thorns in it. Mr. Raphaelson has written a play about the boy, a much wittler if less humorous play than Mr. Sarovan ever wrote and also a much more intelligent and, oddly enough, for all its gloss, dexterity and graceful manners, a much honester one than Mr. Saroyan ever wrote. In addition to being all this-witty, glossy, dextrous, graceful and honest . . . well, anyway, carnest-the play is interesting, too, and has the further remarkable quality of being as much a piece of criticism as it is a play involving plot and characters.

No doubt, all creative work is a criticism of life, but this I think is the first criticism of the drama or, anyway, a dramatist that ever got up on a stage and made an evening bounce.

way actresses should act. I wanted Raphaelson's Play Hero Is an Oddly Rich Critic.

Mr. Raphaelson's pleasant piece of work is called "Jason," after the leading character who might have been called George Jean Jason, but isn't. Mr. Jason, a fastidious and sophisticated man, cleverer than all get out and richer than any drama critic I ever heard of, is set upon by a Saroyanish playwright who sings of life in the heart-breaking way in which a man on a four-day drunk sings of his mother.

Jason falls for the playwright with as goo-goo sounding a thud as some of our sophisticates back here fell for Saroyan. And in detailing this, Mr. Raphaelson makes the interesting point that when a sophisticate falls for the boozy, uncomprehending, unrealistic and lyric sentimentality of a Saroyan, he is completing the cycle and going beyond knowledge to adolescence. The adolescent trembles and yearns for life. He doesn't know what life is except that it is spelled with a capital "L." He is sure it is beautiful and wonderful, but one may doubt his love for it since he makes no attempt either to live or understand life, but is intent only on being

All Qualities of Adolescence, Including Stupidity, Are There,

And so, according to Mr. Raphaelson, with the sophisticate-especially the brilliant kind whose mind has been dazzled to the state of numbness by itself and who finds Saroyan giving him back the vitality of adolescence and also, alas, its stupidity.

As stated here, this may not seem like very much of a point to you, but really it digs very deep-particularly deep into a Broadway firstnight audience-and is high comedy, too. Perhaps satire is the better word for it, for it takes a satirist to take the polish off a brilliant and show the apple-knocker underneath. And the point is quite important to the play. For the plot hinges on it. Jason is not only a critic numbed by his own brilliance and habit of tasting life, but he has a wife, too, and a fascinating relationship with her. He is married to her tightly enough, but he hasn't fallen in love with her yet nor has she with him. The massage the couple's emotions receive from the healthy rhapsodies of the playwright manage to make them fall in love with each other and, presumably, live happily ever after. Mr. Raphaelson has directed the play as expertly as he has written it, and Nicholas Conte as the Saroyan, Alexander Knox as the George Jean Jason and a new girl named Helen Walker as the wife say their words with style.

Maybe I liked the play so much because it's about critics and has a lot of private, malicious shop talk in it. But I think not. I think I liked it because it is both interesting and expert.

The fact of the matter is that Richard Brinsley Sheridan's "The Rivals" is not such a much, and not even Bobby Clark at his wonderful best and Mary Boland as Mrs. Malaprop can make a riot out of the Theater Guild's revival of it. There is fun in the show and an overload of winsome charm, but the charm is of the old-fashioned music box variety-powdered-down kiss of death stuff for most modern audiencesand the fun is kind of banty-sized and bow-legged and creaky-kneed at this late date.

At last he won a contract at R-K-O Radio and appeared with Ginger Rogers in "Fifth Avenue Girl." Then he became a Western star, not winning any fans among those who attend only the big downtown theaters, but getting a lot of valuable experience. Now he is using the experience on one of the choice roles of the year, the male lead in "The Magnificent Ambersons." June Has Sister Trouble. It was sister trouble in the case of Joan Fontaine. When she embarked on a screen career, and for some time after she embarked, Joan found herself considered just Olivia de Havilland's little sister. That didn't get her very far, but Alfred Hitchcock came along and selected her as the star of his "Rebecca."

Hollywood noticed her then. And just to prove that he still approved and that Miss Fontaine could repeat again and again, Hitchcock cast her in the recently seen "Suspicion." Another girl who suffered from the same sister trouble is June Havoc. June. now 23, was a star at the age of 3, but has since had her share of ups and downs. Tyrone Is Another. In spite of the difficulties which have faced them, the list of those bearing famous names who are getting along in their own right is a long one.

A notable example is Tyrone Power. In his first few films, you will remember, he was Tyrone Power, jr., son of the famed Shakespearean actor.

Another is Douglas Fairbanks, jr. At the age of 15 he made a premature appearance in an item called "Stephen Steps Out," and all Hollywood felt he was trying to capitalize on his father's name. He finally lived that down, went to England to pick up a British accent and some film experience, returned to start a movie career that was progressing nicely when he became a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve on active duty. Lon Chaney, jr., also has demon-strated his right to be considered as himself and not as his father's son,

Margaret Steen's "The Sun Is My Undoing" is in the process of being purchased for a big scale adventure film by either Paramount or Twentieth Century. The attractive Mrs. Zanuck got up a committee of producers' wives, who established a canteen which they stocked with coffee and doughnuts and sandwiches and producers' wives. Few days later the commandant called to thank Zanuck and to suggest that the doughnut dispensers ought to be attractive young film lovelies instead of the "nice old ladies who have been coming down." Zanuck shocked the committee by telling them what the commandant said, but war is war, and the canteen now is well decorated.

'Maybe We Could Put an End to War'

Alan Hale, Hollywood's Leading Gadgeteer, Voices Approval of Encouraging Inventors

By Harold Heffernan.

"Give these so-called screwball inventors a chance and you don't know what new sensation we might develop. Maybe something that would stop this war in a hurry. Maybe something that would put an end to war for all time."

Alan Hale, actor of many parts and Hollywood's foremost inventor, spoke that enthusiastically of the United States Patent Office's recent action in establishing a round table where ideas (no matter how fantastic at first glance) that might be useful to our armed services could be thoroughly checked.

Mr. Hale, as this department has mentioned many times before, is movieland's greatest gadgeteer maybe the world's greatest gadgeteer, and as such he receives almost as many screwball invention ideas, perpetual motion machines and devices to heat the Empire State Building with sun's rays, as the Patent Office itself.

The actor operates in Hollywood, where as a serious and profitable avocation he manufactures theater seats and fire extinguishers and is willing to consider almost any idea that has a chance of working. The Patent Office sticks to its knitting in Washington but is about to expand its activities, thus encouraging Mr. Hale and winning his applause. It may, if things work out, take a lot of trouble off Mr. Hale's hands.

"Look What Happened!" In other words, the Federal agency is about to recognize the crackpots who have been Mr. Hale's confidants for these many years. The National Inventors' Council, just getting under way, with no less than the famous Dr. C. F. Kettering, vice president of General Motors, as its head, is throwing the doors chip uses the protein of the skin, participated in more than 150 pic- me things from all over. Most of wide open and inviting all inventors to start inventing.

"Yes, we ought to take these fellows a lot more seriously," said put up in cans. Some crackpot Bros. are preparing to world pre-machines. I got hold of a dilly just thought of that one. Hale made miere simultaneously in four widely the other day. Wouldn't it be wonbrothers nuts, didn't they, when it practical and is going on the scattered world areas in a few derful if it worked?" they tried to fly their box kite at market with it. It can a splendid thing. I wouldn't be be turned into an arsenal on very too surprised if it came up with something important."

The inventors' council, incidentally, is under the Department of Justice. It is willing to consider, seriously, all possible machines, "secret weapons" and other suggestions for winning the war. According to its announcement, it is quite willing to consider ideas of a radical nature.

He's Not Astonished. Hale considers that this clears the way, removes the red tape and impediments in the way of inventors, many of whom are not tech-nically trained and thus do not follow set patterns of improvement. It is no secret that all belligerent nations are racing to find a means of tapping the almost inconceivable power of U-2335, the form of uranium which would, potentially, make all conceivable forms of power raphy. obsolete. Some obscure amateur might just as well stumble on the solution, Hale points out. Hale himself is astonished by nothing. Currently, he is exploiting a radium active disc that glows in the dark, useful for blackouts, perhaps. He also has a new ultra violet ray lamp that glows with a constant 2,637 angstrum units important because most lamps vary in intensity and can't be used for delicate medical work. Hale's chief pride at the moment is a new and patented process for transferring photograph prints to almost any surface. On metal or agateware, for instance, the photographs are practically indestructible. The Smithsonian Institution is interested in this one as a means of preserving historical documents. Still another invention, which came from nowhere, is an idea for making color prints by simple exposure of negative and paper to the

Tin Pan Alley in There Fighting With a Song

In Fact, It Has Several Dozen Tunes To Prove That It Reads Papers And Can Find Easy Rhymes

By John Ferris,

NEW YORK.

Tin pan alley is in there fighting, too. It is too early to compare the merits of the present-day crop of war ongs with those of the last war but the energies of the song writers oday stand up well when set against those of the earlier conflict

When the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor December 7, Tin Pan Alley was ready. For example, Sammy Lerner heard the news on that fateful Sunday afternoon, immediately sprang to his piano and in no time at all had turned out "The Sun Will Soon Be Setting for the Land of the Rising Sun."

In the first three days of the war in the Pacific, one music publisher reported, the percentage of patriotic numbers increased from one-third to more than one-half the total number of songs received.

All over the country song writers were turning their hand to the business of winning the war with a song (and, of course, winning some of the big money commonly attributed to successful songs).

They had one thing in common: All quickly discovered that "Jap" rhymes with "sap" and that "taps" were cramming on paper songs like "Let's Take a Rap at the Japs" and "Taps for the Japs." And because the idea of filial affection is always popular with song writers there was shortly in the hands of a publisher a number entitled "Good-by, Mama, I'm Off to Yokohama." For a long time after the beginning of the war in Europe, there was, a dearth of new war songs. The British marched off in September, 1939, to "Heigh-Ho, Heigh-Ho," from the Walt Disney picture, "Snow White," substituting "war" for "work" in the line: "It's off to work we go." And in the Libyan campaign a year ago the Australians sang "We're off to see the Wizard, the wonderful Wizard of Oz." In the long period of uncertainty in the United States, Irving Berlin took a strong hand in the situation. Out of a trunk where it had lain since 1917 he dug "God Bless Amer-Then he turned to other themes—"Any Bonds Today," "Arms for the Love of America," "Angels of Mercy" (his Red Cross song), "I Paid My Income Tax Today" and "The President's Birthday Ball" (for the infantile paralysis cam-

Other songs, of course, were being played and sung—"There'll Always Be an England," "The White Cliffs of Dover," the refugee song, "My Sister and I," and the one that hit a new high in sentimentality, "The Shrine of St. Cecilia"-but it took the attack on Pearl Harbor to set things going. R. C. A.-Victor reports now that it receives an average of five patriotic songs a day and Old Ones Sell. Too. Columbia says the old patriotic numbers in their stocks of records umped about 100 per cent in the first weeks of the war, but notes that the increase isn't so significant ecause sales in that line were fairly low anyhow.

On the other hand some of the new recordings are selling as fast as they can be turned out. One of these is the Okeh record of "Keep 'Em Flying," which has been designated as the official song of the Army Air Corps. It is being used with the Air Corps drive for 30,000 recruits.

Okeh has issued "Good-by, Mama I'm Off to Yokohama" and "The Sun Will Soon Be Setting for the Land of the Rising Sun"; Air Corps of Uncle Sam" and "I've

Columbia has prepared a new Kate Smith record of "The Star Spangled Banner" with "America, I Love You" on the other side; "You're a Sap, Mr. Jap," and "Goodby, Mama"; "They Started Some-thing" and "We're All Americans," and "Remember Pearl Harbor" and "We Did It Before."

Decca lists "Patriotic Songs for Children," "Any Bonds Today?" "The Army Air Corps," "He's 1-A in the Army and He's A-1 in My Heart," "Caissons Go Rolling Along," is as good a ryhme for "Japs" as "We're in the Navy," "What'll I Do if I Marry a Soldier?" and some revivals like "Pack Up Your Troubledgang Amadeus Mozart, the boys Long, Long Trail," "Where Do We Go from Here" and "The Old Gray

Warners Tackle Tale of Wings

Adhering to the topical policy for which the studio is noted, Warner Bros. will produce the first motion picture based on the all-out effort of the American airplane industry to provide the huge number of warplanes President Roosevelt has set as the Nation's goal.

The picture, scheduled to go into production immediately, is entitled "The Shadow of Their Wings." Its cast is headed by Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan, Dennis Morgan and George Tobias. Lloyd Bacon is the director. Casting of Miss Sheridan and Reagan marks the third successive picture in which they have been teamed, the two others being "Kings Row" and "Juke Girl," both still unreleased.

The vantage point from which audiences will be given an insider's view of the wartime operation of a big airplane factory will be the collective eyes of the film's chief male characters, four Midwest youths who come to the coast for jobs in the plant. Their adventures are told in the screen play, adapted by Richard Macaulay from an original by Harrison Orkow and Byron Morgan.

AMONG THE STAMP COLLECTORS Hobbies and Hobbyists

News of the Philatelic World, Its Interests and People—Review of the Stamp Press-List of Local Meetings.

By James Waldo Fawcett. A series of stamps representing. heroic scenes from American history has been proposed to President Roosevelt. The subjects to be considered for interpretation in the designs include "Washington Crossing the Delaware," "The Bombardment of Fort McHenry," "Capture of Chapultepec," "The Monitor and the Merrimac," "High Tide at Gettysburg." "Rough Riders at San Juan Hill." "Dewey at Manila Bay," "Battle of Belleau Wood," "Battle of Chateau Thierry," "Defense of Wake Island," "Lt. Kelly Sinks the Haruna," "Lt. Bulkeley at Subic Bay" and "Gen. MacArthur at Corregi-

Collectors approving the plan see invited to communicate with Deputy Third Assistant Postmaster General Roy M. North.

Treasury Department press releases dealing with stamp collecting hereafter will be checked by a representative of the philatelic public before being distributed. This concession has been granted by Charles Schwarz, director of public relations, as one result of widespread criticism of the circulation of unproven charges that Axis postal paper to the value of $20,000,000 was being marketed in the United

A scheme for the building of 5,000 public schools is to be financed by the issuance of 2,000,000 postage stamps authorized by the government of the Dominican Republic.

Philippine stamps, including even the long-neglected Aguinaldo issues of 1899, are headed skyward in the philatelic market.

Officials of the Post Office Department are reported to look with tional defense units for the United States Navy." It is pointed out that no citizen need wait for the manufacture of a set of semi-postal adhesives in order to contribute to the naval establishment. He can buy Defense bonds or Defense stamps already available.

Margaret Kernodle, writing for the Associated Press Feature Service, says: "One of the three Pacific war fronts, the Malay Peninsula, furnishes good news for collectors by sending two new stamps to this "Actually the stamps-from Pedesign or value, but they are new in color. They were printed in London and are reported to have reached the colonies just before the 85, Route 5, Anacostia, D. C.

"The Perak stamp, bearing a pic-ture of the Sultan Iskandar, was green in the old issue and is orange in the 2c just arrived. The Pahang 8c formerly appeared in gray and now is red with a picture of Sultan

Elmer C. Pratt, editor of the News Bulletin of the Association of South Jersey Stamp Clubs, declares: "With all this turmoil, upset condition, talk and work, we collectors are just a little better off than many others, for we have our stamps * * to help us to keep our balance. This is just where our stamp clubs, stamp exhibitions and stamp friends fit in and help us to carry the job along with a lighter heart."

War conditions have made it necessary to cancel first-voyage covers planned for the new ships of the United States Lines and the American South African Line. Collectors who had sent money for these souvenir envelopes are requested to permit it to be turned over to the welfare fund of the Seamen's Church Institute, but those who wish their remittances returned will be accommodated if they will send stamped, self-addressed envelopes to the Cover Agency, 25 South street, New York City, not later than February 28.

A commemorative has been requested for the 400th anniversary of the discovery of California.

Designs for Free France stamps for St. Pierre and Miquelon have been submitted to Admiral Muselier by H. F. Warner, an English signaler serving on the submarine Representative Sol Bloom of New York, who sponsored the George Washington bicentenary and Constitution sesquicentenary stamps of series of propaganda adhesives. His mens are torn beyond acceptance for purpose on the present occasion is philatelic purposes. to gain publicity for the 450th anniversary of Christopher Columbus' first voyage to America in 1492.

City, will sponsor a two-color printed cachet cover to mark the 150th anniversary of the New York Stock Exchange on May 17. Readers interested are asked to send names, addresses and 10 cents for each en velope wanted. Profits, if any, will be assigned to the Red Cross.

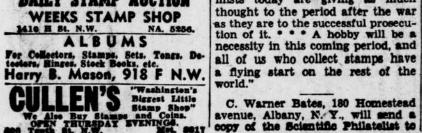

Vance Holden, secretary of the Garfield-Perry Stamp Club of Cleveland, died January 5. He had been a collector of the postal issues of France and of the United States and was widely known for his constructive service to philatelic organizations of every useful sort.

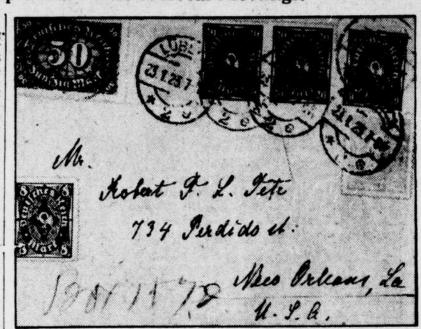

George W. Linn, editor and pub-lisher of Linn's Weekly Stamp News, Columbus, Ohio, remarks that the original V for Victory stamp was the 3c baseball sticker issued by Postmaster General James A. Farley in 1939. Sure enough, there

This symbolic cover raises the question of what will happen in Germany at the end of the Second World War. Franked with stamps which at an earlier time would have represented a small fortune, the pictured envelope was mailed as catastrophic inflation swept over the Reich, impoverishing millions of its people. Such, in part, was the price for having failed to win a decisive victory. American economists believe that history may repeat in the defeated countries in the years that lie ahead. -Star Staff Photo.

The Secret Service has been "checking up" on violators of the law forbidding the publication of pictures showing United States currency. Collectors and philatelic writers consequently are advised to obey the spirit as well as the letter of regulations relating to stamp illustrations. The existing law is liberal and for that very reason should be observed scrupulously.

So-called "war effort" stamps of the Union of South Africa have been overprinted "S. W. A." for use in South West Africa.

The story of Rudolph Thomas, stamp forger, was dramatized on the "Missing Heirs" program Tuesday evening. If no other beneficiaries are discovered, the philatelic public which he victimized might claim the $250,000 he left.

> The third of the big trio repre-sented in this exhibition is David Alfaro Siqueriros, an innovator in techniques and media, notably with spray gun and Duco—in connection with the painting of murals on outside walls—who, for political reasons, is now an exile in Chile.

He was a member of the international jury for paintings at the great Olympic exhibition in Los Angeles in 1932. When asked at that time what influence he thought the art of the United States would have upon that of Mexico, his reply was, with a shrug, "None." It was the other way round, he thought, as Mexican art had already made, and would continue to make, a deep impression upon the art of the United States of America. This was true then and more true now.

Union of Swing and? Symphony Featured Here Tonight

THE SUNDAY STAR, WASHINGTON, D. C., JANUARY 25, 1942.

Washington's first union of symphony and swing will take place to-night when Benny Goodman and his orchestra join forces with Hans Kindler and the National Symphony Orchestra in a sepcial con-cert at 8:30 o'clock in Constitution

Dr. Kindler will conduct the first half of the program with the na-tion's No. 1 clarinetist appearing as soloist in the Mozart "Concerto for Clarinet and Orchestra in A Major." The National Symphony will be without Mr. Goodman's assistance in two of Dr. Kindler's arrange-ments—Frescobaldi's "Toccata" and excerpts from Moussorgsky's "Boris

The second half will be given over to Mr. Goodman and his own orchestra, which recently won, for the seventh consecutive year, Met-ronome's annual poll for the best band in the country. Mr. Castro has not limited himself to composers of the New World. South American interest and participation in the music of classic composers will be demonstrated by Castro's choice of his own outstanding transcription of "Three Chorals for Organ," by J. S. Bach, to be followed by Cesar Franck's "Sym-

Economist Sees Modern World in Age of Fable

Former Member of Reichstag, Now U. S. Citizen, Defends Democratic Government

By Mary-Carter Roberts.

This Age of Fable

By Gustav Stolper. Reynal & Hitchcock, New York.

Occasionally there is a book by an economist which makes sense to an ordinary person. To this rare species belongs the present work by Dr. Stolper, noted German editor and writer, who fled his country on Hitler's accession to power and has since taken on American citizenship.

Dr. Stolper is a former liberal member of the Reichstag, was Berlin correspondent of the London Economist and, during the first World War, head of the Imperial Austrian General Commissariat for War Economy. With so imposing a record behind him, he ought to be dull as ditchwater as a writer, but the cheerful fact is that he not only should be read, but Without attempting to be bright or popular he still is entertaining, for the theme of his book is so unorthodox as to be refreshing. We live, he says, in an age of economic fable; we fill our thoughts and conversation with economic catchwords which have only fabulous meanings, and pass our days in awe of fabulous economic monsters which have no existence. He has set out to expose such vulgar errors.

"The fables embraced by our age," he says, "are equally shared by the so-called best people, by the leaders of science, business, finance, art and literature. Not all believe in the same fables. Not all people are fooled by all fables all the time, but everybody is fooled by some fables at Capitalism Fights Against Imperfection.

He taken up then the "fable" that holds that capitalism is chaotic and that a "planned" socialistic state is inevitably orderly. Up to the present day, he says flatly, the capitalist democracy is the only kind of government which has ever worked on a plan, whereas the dictatorships (the Socialist states) are invariably marked by definite hostility toward planning. They talk plan, as he duly notes, but what they mean by the word is to freeze all activity at a given point. The capitalistic society, however, is always branching out in new plans for growth, and so its people have hope. It has never eliminated imperfection, to be sure, but it constantly strives to that end and its sins can be laid to simple human fallibility, for which, of course, there is no escape this side of Paradise. Contrariwise, the totalitarian state, aiming to hold all endeavor at a fixed point, substituting militarism for progress, destroys its people's hope and initiative The present genius of Germany's war machine, Dr. Stolper observes, has derived from men who grew up before the Nazi dictatorship came into power. Within another generation, he feels, the stultifying influence of National Socialism will be apparent.

Another "fable" which comes in for Dr. Stolper's attack is the popular notion that capitalism "produces for profit" and is therefore evil, while Socialism "produces for use" and is therefore good. Capitalism does produce for profit, says the doctor, but the evil motive does not follow. His thought is that profit is the only motive apart from terror which is sufficiently strong to make mankind produce at all. As he puts it, a "society built on and dependent on the voluntary co-operation of its members has to rely on a motive or a combination of motives strong enough, compelling enough and common enough to make the system work." . . "The alternative to the profit motive is not 'use'; the alternative is dictatorship and terror." This is reminiscent of the conclusion reached by Max Eastman in his final revulsion from collectivism. He, too, noted the alternative and observed that a socialistic state was inevitably a dictatorship, and not a land of greater freedom than has heretofore been achieved, as its advocates would have their followers believe.

Ascendancy of Nationalism Causes Wars.

The "fable" of the "have and have-not" nations is another popular one which Dr. Stolper summarily disposes of. The basis of this notion, he says, is that strong nations seize markets and raw materials, leaving weaker powers with no such advantages, and that, as a result, most wars come from economic rivalries. "History," he says, "proves exactly the opposite of what this fable tells us: Not a single major war in the last 150 years—the capitalist age—had its origin in economic causes or was waged for economic interests." And then, after reviewing the wars which were waged in that period, he states: "* * All European wars, without any exception, had one cause and origin, only one: The ascendancy of nationalism as the determinant force of history.

Another "fable" which annoys this authority is that of British "degeneracy". He holds that, in the period between the two World Wars Britain quietly made enormous progress in modernization and internal consolidation. "Criticism abroad ran in exactly the same ruts as if nothing at all had happened," he remarks, "and Hitler's informants seemed to find comfort and reassurance in the lore." But the facts are all to the contrary, at least in his interpretation. Likewise, he attacks the "fable" of British imperialism, that of the gold standard, of inflation, of the alleged inefficiency of democracies and the awesome opposite of the dictatorships. These ideas are all unable to meet the test of facts, in his Thy derive from propaganda, fears, hopes, jealousies and hatreds, and thrive by repetition.

His arguments are well brought off, and his book has an astringent commonsense quality which refreshes the cliche-weary soul.

By Miguel Angel Menendez. Translated from the Spanish by Angel Flores. Farrar & Rinehart, New York.

This is the second novel to be published of those submitted in the Latin American Prize Novel Contest held last year under auspices of the Division of Intellectual Co-operation of the Pan American Union. Its author is a Mexican, and its subject is the life and customs of extremely backward Indians of the jungles of Nayarit.

It is easy to believe that the book was a beautiful piece of writing in its original Spanish. But its plot is frail and disconnected, its characters undeveloped. It seems to have rested on beauty of language alone to make of Amy, who was a mouse. its case, and beauty of language is, of course, the first dye to wash out in the translation process. What remains of this work is pathetically weak.

The very slight story is organized about the flight of two friends from their home-village, where one of them, Ramon, has been forced to commit a crime. Ramon is a half-breed, and the friend who flees with him, and who tells the story, is a white man. The pair plunge into the jungle and was near and were terrified of wander about among the Indian tribes, trying different occupations in order to keep alive, as salt-making, hunting and begging. Finally, they are they did not flee. They were rea small Indian community whose chief they have aided in a fight with white soldiers. They witness Indian ceremonies and learn the routine of the tribal life. Hard times come on the group when civil war breaks out between the anti-clerical government forces and the Christian population; the Indians, being pagan, are indifferent and only want to keep out of trouble. They hide in caves, and, in the meantime, the floods wash out their crops. When the war dies down, the tribe emerges, ruined, and turns on an innocent member as a scapegoat. They are in process of murdering this unfortunate when Ramon interferes and is killed for his pains.

The book ends in misery and despair, with the chieftain in jail and the tribe broken and starving. Yet, with all this tale of suffering, the author never creates reality. No character in the tale is more than a colorless shadow, and no event has more substance than the flickering of

Guatama the Enlightened

By John Masefield. The Macmillan Co., New York.

This is a book of four fairly long poems. The first, which gives the volume its title, is a soliloquy in which Guatama explains his renunciation of the world. The second is a highly personal poem in which Mr. Masefield puts down the delights of shopping in Oxford and tells us what he likes to buy and in what stores. The third is a ballad on the theme of the rescue of an Indian princess from would-be murderers by her lover. And the fourth is another soliloquy, this time by a little London artist's model, who describes her life after her working day is done-its pleasures and its hopes.

None of the four are eventful verse. All follow simple forms and express simple thoughts. But there is a benignity about them which is altogether pleasant.

Arms and the Aftermath By Perrin Stryker. Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston.

This book was written before America actively entered the war, and so some of its statements are now out of date. But it is a recommended work, just the same, for those who want a picture of the production part of the defense effort. It goes into the problems which have risen through the sudden speeding up of the arms industry—the problems of plant expansion, tooling up, design freezing, subcontracting and the like.

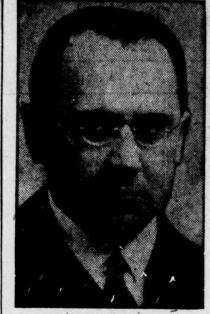

These are matters which, to most people, are mysterious. The taxpayers who foot the bills are, in general, quite ignorant of the things for which they are paying and incapable of knowing with certainty whether the needed processes are being carried out efficiently or wastefully. Mr. Stryker does not attempt to answer this latter question. He limits himself to describing the scope of the industrial problem and to advising his readers as to what points are most likely to give difficulty. The failure of the Government to acquire stocks of certain strategic materials, the inability of engineers to agree on designs, the technical objections to turning out airplanes on the assembly line system, the pitfalls in the way of the manufacturer who gets a Government contract, the disabilities which bar many small businessmen from receiving such contracts—these are the points which he studies. He feels that, in many ways, the mistakes of World War I are likely to be repeated. He warns that great privations are involved for the common people of the country this before we actually entered the war. As to the eventual effect on our American system of life, he contents himself with quoting A. R. Glancy, chief of the O. P. M.'s Ordnance Production Division:

There is talk that a certain group is fighting two battles, the war and for further so-called social gains and concentration of political power—that labor is fighting two battles, the war and for further union capitalism—the American way—or whatever you may call your manner of life—should also be fighting two battles, the war and for the preservation of free enterprise for free men."

Edited by Anne Fontaine Maury. The Dietz Press, Richmond,

The Maury family is a large and distinguished one in Virginia. This an informal, entertaining collection of letters and diaries of some of its members covering, approximately, the century from 1790 to 1890. The size of the family would make it impossible for all its branches to be represented, so the book centers largely around James Maury, who was born in 1746 and was United States consul at Liverpool for 40 years. He attended a school conducted by his father in Albemarle County, and fellow pupils were Thomas Jefferson, James Madison and James Monroe. His friendships with these and other noted Virginians of his day continued throughout his life.

James Maury had four sons and, what is more important to future historians, a daughter, Ann, who carefully preserved all the family papers. Her descriptions of the Grand Tour in Europe and her visits to this country are notably good commentaries on the manners and society of the pre-Civil War era. She was the great-great aunt of the editor of this book, Anne Fontaine Maury, who lives near Charlottesville.

Ann's four brothers traveled as brokers and salesmen, covering the entire Atlantic Seaboard from New York southward. Their letters give a superficial picture of young gentlemen of fashion in the middle of the Victorian century, but they do not have the perception and punch of their spinster sister's.

Mrs. Maury has appended a casual family tree which is impressive but bewildering to her unknowing readers, due to the great similarity in names in different branches of the clan. There is quite a collection, for instance, of gentlemen named Matthew Fontaine Maury. The Pathfinder of the Seas, according to this outsider's interpretation of the family tree, was a nephew of the Liverpool consul's and thus a first EDWIN TRIBBLE. cousin of Ann and her traveling brothers.

Lonely Parade

By Fanny Hurst. Harper & Bros., New York.

In this novel Miss Hurst undertakes to present a study of American women in the early years of the century, when womankind was emerging from Victorian "femininity" into a somewhat more normal humanity. It was the period when the phrase "bachelor girl" was new and endowed with interesting ambiguity. Miss Hurst takes for her demonstration three women - a theatrical producer, an interior decorator and a social worker-who set up a home together in New York and, through the charm of their establishment and the strength of their personalities, become a famous Manhattan institution. What she tells us of the inside of their lives, however, is that, though materially successful, these three women consider themselves failures because they live without love.

To the best of the reviewer's understanding, the novel resolves itself into two disconnected parts. There is a great plethora of physical scenesetting of a violent and grotesque weepy story. The three heroines are hown alternately as charming, fascinating and conquering the world's most hard-boiled city by their intelligence, great-heartedness and glamor, and then as taking down their hair in their boudoirs and lamenting the absence of romance from their lives. In the reader's mind, the question naturally comes up as to why, if they felt that way, they did not do something about it, but to this Miss Hurst offers only the reply that no man ever cared for them. They were too brilliant, in her interpretation. Men, she estimates, care only for the

Dakar Is Subject of Fine Study by Emil Lengyel

Dakar—Outpost of Two Hemispheres

By Emil Lengyel. Random House, New York. Dakar, the French nagal base on the extreme west coast of Africa, has received so much attention, both as a potential jumping off place for a German attack on the Americas and as a possible landing place for an American expeditionary force to Africa, that just such a comprehensive—in fact, encyclopedic—work as this is quite timely.

Mr. Lengyel, noted correspondent and author, sums up the strategic importance of this metropolis of black Africa in the following words:

"Dakar is the spearhead of the Old World into the Atlantic Ocean. She is a bridge made by nature for a modern conqueror with designs on the Western Hemisphere. She is vital to us as a bulwark of our own national defense, as well as the defense of the entire Western Hemisphere. Behind this epitome of Dakar's place in a world at war lies much more than appears on its face. First of all, there is the geographical strategic element. Dakar is only 1,620 sea miles from South America—five hours by bomber, Mr. Lengyel points out, and closer to the Western Hemisphere than either Iceland, which the United States has occupied, or Hawaii, which is a fortified possession of this country.

Harbor Can Accommodate Largest Battleship.

Its position at the western tip of the African bulge is strategic, too, nasmuch as it gives its possessor command of the Atlantic sea laneslanes which Britain must use for maritime contact with South America, from which she is drawing supplies, and with the Orient, from Suez to Singapore, which she is striving to defend against Axis assault. Even for the United States, these lanes are important. Over them go our lease-lend supplies to the Near East, our traffic with the east coast of South America; and, in the event the Panama Canal is ever closed by enemy attack, our fleet will have to use this route, around the Horn, for passage between the Atlantic and Pacific.

This is the significance of Dakar, whose harbor can accommodate the largest battleships afloat, and from which enemy planes, submarines and surface ships can operate into the bottleneck between Africa and the Germans; it is a prize which the regime of Marshal Petain is holding out to the Nazis as the reward for favorable treatment. French history there is long, going back to 1677, when the nearby island of Goree was occupied. Dakar changed hands several times between the British, who were snapping up choice points of vantage for their new empire, and the Dutch, who, with the French, were in competition Dakar did not begin to take on the aspect of an important African port until 1880s, 30 years after Louis-Leon-Caesar Faidherbe, the creator of French West Africa, became governor of Senegal. It assumed importance in World War I as the port of debarkation for thousands of Senegalese troops whom the French shipped to Europe to battle the Germans. After the fall of France in 1940, it came to the fore again when the British and Free French shelled it.

The cue for Dakar to assume its fullest role in this war has not yet been given. The American Government continues to maneuver at Vichy to keep the Petain regime from full collaboration with the Nazis. That effort appears to be approaching futility. When it is clear that we can do no more good at Vichy, and an open break occurs between the United States and the Petain administration, prompt Allied action to remove the menace of Dakar may be expected. Until that time, Dakar remains in the hands of Vichy, which is a thin veil for actual German occupation.

Equally to be looked for as the signal for Dakar to become a theater officials. The solution is made by a of war action is the completion of the Trans-Saharan Railway. A chapter on this project is one of the present volume's chief contributions to public understanding of Dakar's strategic importance. Nazis Will Have Direct Route to Spearhead.

The idea of a trans-Saharan railway, even in peacetime, is a fertile subject for speculation; but, at this point in the war, it assumes positively gigantic proportions. The true significance of the Trans-Saharan, in spite of Vichy's window-dressing, is that it will by-pass Gibraltar and permit the transportation of troops and war equipment direct from Germany to Dakar by way of France, the Mediterranean, French North Africa and the Sahara Desert. The Germans, if they retain their hold on the French, will not have to run the perils of Gibraltar to get to Dakar. They will have a direct route to this spearhead into the Atlantic.

The circumstances of the railway's construction arouse the gravest suspicions of Axis inspiration. For years, ever since the inception of ish bombings, short on cigarettes the plan in 1879, the project was thwarted, first by what appear to be and soap and often compelled to valid objections to such an undertaking, later by general opposition to work seven days a week — but still the French steel trust, which was believed to be behind the scheme. not doubting. Says Mr. Lengyel: "France really did not need it. * * * The Trans-Saharan would have been merely a luxury for her. But for the Germans it is a necessity. That is why the Trans-Saharan is such an important factor in the

Mr. Lengyel's work is the first comprehensive book devoted entirely to Dakar to be published. The general reader will find much of interest in the background of the history, economic and social structure of the port and the hinterland which it serves. CRESTON B. MULLINS.

From the Land of the Silent People By Robert St. John. Doubleday, Doran, New York.

Mr. St. John's vividly written story of what he saw and heard as the Nazi divisions swept down over Yugoslavia and Greece is not always pleasant reading. The brief Balkan campaign was not a pleasant war. St. John, now an N. B. C. commentator from London, was the Associated Press correspondent in Belgrade when the war came. He saw what happened to the Yugoslav capital that bloody Sunday the Nazi bombers struck without warning. His experiences in the next four weeks, as he and three companions-Leigh White of C. B. S., Russell Hill of the New York Herald-Tribune and Terence Atherton of the London Daily Mail tried to reach a point from which they could send a story, is one of the epics of journalism.

What he saw on that trip by auto through Yugoslavia, and then by boat and train through Greece, left with him a series of unforgettable pictures of what modern war is.

He recalls the man he saw lying on a sidewalk in Greece, with a hole through his skull and both hands blown off, screaming because he couldn't reach into his pocket to get a drachma to buy aspirin tablets to stop the funny feeling inside his head . . .

And the sickening smell that permeated all Corinth the day the Stukas dive-bombed a hospital train and cremated wounded soldiers in And the sound those other Greek soldiers made when the Messerschmitt came alongside their train and pumped death from machine guns into every car, and their screams for an hour after the planes went away, as they hid in trees and crouched behind rocks . . The Yugoslavs never had a chance. Their planes were destroyed on the ground, their ox cart-supplied armies cut to pieces by the German mechanized forces. The British and American help on which they had depended never came.

Skoplje had fallen, cutting the road to Greece, when St. John reached Sarajevo after a hazardous auto trip just in time to see the Easter Sunday bombing of the mountain city. The government already had fled when the four newsmen, none of them sailors, set out down the Adriatic in a 20-foot sardine boat. Greece, too, was lost by the time they reached Corfu, and the British were trying to salvage what they could of the pitiably small force of some 40,000 men-mostly Australians and New Zealanders-they had sent to stem the German advance. But the four managed to get to Patras, then Corinth, where they had to leave White, badly wounded when German planes strafed a train. St. John, also wounded, and his two companions got to Crete on the destroyer Havoc, last British ship to leave Greece. They were still ahead of the Germans, but not of the bombers. And, finally, they reached Cairo, where they could put a story on the wires-but not the whole story of how two divisions of empire troops, standing alone as their Greek allies fled, were cut to pieces for lack of air support, and then slaughtered by Nazi planes in an evacuation far more costly than Dunkerque.

"From the Land of the Silent People" is a great adventure story by a man who remembers too much for his own peace of mind. But it is even more important as a picture of what happens to the little, unimportant people when war sweeps over their country and the bombers bring terror

And from any angle it is as fine a job of reporting as has been done in World War II.

Passenger Pigeons. Once Billions Strong, Killed by Hunters

The story of the extinction of the passenger pigeon is one of the sadwildlife. Once it was estimated that there were 2,000,000,000 pigeons in a single flock. Now, the species is apparently gone forever, as the last one known died in a Cincinnati zoo

The flocks were sometimes 200 "Some of my uncle's patrons, who of the birds' nests. It is said that 50 to 100 nests in almost every tree over a 150,000-acre forest tract were counted. The noise made by the birds could be heard several miles from the edge of the nesting place. But the birds' very numbers made them easy prey for hunters. A shotgun fired into a tree would bring down enough birds to fill a game bag. Hunters followed the flock from nesting place to nesting place, often traveling on trains and tracing

Today, in nearly every home, there is a china closet. The modern ones, however, are not all glass. The one my grandmother has is surrounded by plate glass. In this, she has a white china cream pitcher which has been in the family for five generations.

Going through the pantry, what should my eyes discover but an old coffee grinder. In the old days you had to grind the coffee. We also have an old griddle on which eight or nine griddle cakes could be fried at once. No modern housewife would want such a piece of junk in her pantry. The dough tray, which was made of wood, has long since been done away with.

Many people have valuable relics in their home and, thinking them trash, throw them awey. So, if you have any old treasures, keep them. Who knows but that some day they may prove to be very valuable, especially in case of a long war.

Outdoor Campers Can Sleep Well in

Ever hear of a Klondike bedroll? Probably not, unless you have spent considerable time in the mountains during cold weather and know most of the tricks of comfortable camping in any kind of weather. A good sleeping bag is expensive, but you can make a Klondike bedroll, which is just as good, for practically nothing. Three or four warm blankets and three 3-inch safety pins are all the materials needed. Spread the blankets out flat. Put them evenly on top of each other. Fold the top blanket the long way, and once. Pull the entire blanket over to the edge of the second blanket, letting the folded edge of the first blanket lie along the edge of the second. Fold the second blanket in half, letting the edge of

Civic Problems, Civic Bodies

Crosstown Bus in Operation Today; Fiscal Equity Problem Acute

By JESSE C. SUTER.

Civilian defense problems, very properly, continue to occupy first place in the activities of the civic groups. Even other matters considered in meetings of the bodies last week, in most instances, had a civilian defense slant.

Proper control or elimination of the so-called penny arcades for protection of the boys and girls; streetcar and other street noises and the night riding of bicycles without lights, riding bicycles against traffic and riding on sidewalks were among the subjects considered. Protests were promised in some of the associations against the rezoning of the Friendship tract for a low-cost housing development which, it is contended, will destroy values in the "A Restricted Area."

A demand was made for heated school buildings for the allnight air-raid watches and that no women teachers be required to remain on such duty later than 8:30 p.m. This latter demand is supported by the Board of Education.

The Board of Trade has been handed a special job of inducing business firms to stagger their business hours so as to assist in the effort to better handle rush-hour street traffic. An able committee under the leaderhip of President Fred A. Smith is working earnestly on this difficult problem and receiving fine co-operation from busi-

District legislation continues to lag but gives promise of early action on several bills which represent urgent needs. The Senate Committee on the District of Columbia has issued a new edition of the committee Legislative Calendar under date of January 9, 1942. It is No. 1, of the Second Session of the Seventy-seventh Congress. It is a very informative publication. From it we learn that, up to its date of issue, 41 bills considered by the Senate and House District Committees in the Seventy-seventh Congress, have been enacted into law. Of these 26 were House bills and 15 originated in the Work continues in the Senate Committee on the court consolidation and recreation bills. Both of these measures are expected to be soon in proper form for action.

In the case of the court bill it was found, upon close study, to require the change or amplification of a number of administrative and other details which had been overlooked. In working out a cure of these defects the committee has been having valuable assistance of both bench and bar.

New Crosstown Bus Line Begins Today

Today is a red-letter day with a number of the neighborhood citizens and businessmen's associations for the crosstown bus line between Westmoreland Circle and Catholic University began operation. This line is expected to save considerable time for persons in the extreme western and northeastern sections of the District.

It will prove particularly valuable to students at both the Catholic and the American Universities. Another prediction of the proponents of the line is that it will eventually reduce some of the load through the downtown by permitting passengers, who are not bound for city destinations, to transfer to one of the several intersecting car and bus lines.

Encouraged by the success in getting the Public Utilities Commission to order the first crosstown line, the Federation of Citizens Associations and some of its constituent bodies are now urging the establishment of a second line over the Military road route. This northern line was recommended by the Public Utilities Committee of the Federation of Citizens' Associations last year. The advocates of the route which was opened today succeeded in getting the Federation to simply favor a crosstown line without specifying the route. The Federation at its recent meeting voted unanimously urging the establishment of the Military road line.

Population Growth Makes Fiscal Equity Problem Acute

The rapid and enormous increase in the population of the District of Columbia increases and emphasizes the fiscal inequity under which that voteless and unrepresented community is required to operate. To the already large population of Federal employes and their families there are promised further increases during the year

In a normal community, where large business is subject to taxation and free lists are very limited, it would be a difficult job to take care of such large growth in a short time. Such a normal community would, however, have the authority through the free exercise of the taxing power and appropriation to finance the required expansion of the municipal services.

Here the situation is entirely different for several reasons. First, the population growth is to meet the expanded needs of the District's largest industry which controls the community and declines to pay its share of the municipal costs. Secondly, the Federal Government, represented by Congress, is in complete control of the finances of the District. It lays the taxes and appropriates the resulting tax money.

Possessing this autocratic power Congress exercises it with great partiality in favor of the United States Government, which is not only the District's largest business concern, but is responsible for the present municipal overload.

The question arises continually in all of our local civic groups as to what the District people can do about this fiscal inequity. Possessing only that constitutional, but very unsatisfactory, right of petition they have from time to time gone to great trouble and expense to make accurate showing of fiscal conditions here and elsewhere. The fairness and accuracy of these exhibits have been confirmed by the study of experts employed by Congress. They indicate clearly that equitable treatment of the National Capital community would result in an increased Federal payment toward the support of the District and the enactment of taxation laws, which would impose a burden upon all District residents alike. The fight for fiscal equity has been a long one and the problem continues unsolved and at present much more acute.

Unlike most other communities the assessment of real property, for taxation purposes, in the District is on a basis of 100 per cent of actual value. In other communities such assessments usually represent a much lower percentage of actual value. The present Distax rate on real estate, $1.75 per $100 of assessed value, is a low rate, as compared with some other places, but no idea of the burden of the tax rate can be had unless one knows whether the assessment to which this rate is applied is high or low as compared with the real value of the property.

The District citizen in his plea for fiscal equity is confronted continually by men in Congress who will look only at the tax rate and ignore entirely the very important factor, which is the rate of Another matter which is avoided completely in considering District affairs, particularly at this time of extraordinary burden, is the large contribution made to the United States by District taxpayers in Federal taxes. The District pays annually more than each of over one-half the States. But there seems to be no chance for redress available to a community having no voice or vote in the councils of our Nation unless, through some miracle, the Congress would have a complete change of heart and resolve to deal justly with their voteless and unrepresented, involuntary constituents of the District of Columbia.

City Refuse Division Handicapped by Lack of Funds

Board of Directors of the Outdoor Cleanliness Association met last week and heard reports of a comprehensive survey of the activities and capabilities of the City Refuse Division. The important tasks of the department have increased largely as the population has grown. But the funds are inadequate for carrying on this necessary work of street cleaning and the collection and disposal of garbage and refuse.

The prospect for the fiscal year 1943 is little, if any, better than the present. More manpower is needed and only a small increase can be made under current budget figures. The estimate of the division was cut by the Commissioners about $80,000. Restoration of this amount would be a big help.

Inquiry at the District Building gave the very interesting information that the salvage campaign has made a noticeable showing in the material collected by the division. The amount of paper, rags and metals has diminished substantially and that of worthless trash has increased enormously.

Another interesting fact learned by the Outdoor Cleanliness Association is that Supt. Xanten has turned into the District a handsome profit on grease reclaimed at the garbage reduction plant at Cherry Hill. Va. He has been holding this accumulation of grease for a higher market and recently sold the accumulation of several years for $35,000.

Public Utilities Hearing Announced

Three public hearings have been announced by the Public Utilities Commission. The first, on January 29, will be a resumption of a hearing adjourned last March on the rerouting of some of the Chevy Chase buses. Merchants on lower Connecticut avenue are demanding that, despite traffic congestion, buses be returned to that thoroughfare.

On January 30, at 2 p.m., there will be a hearing on the petition of the Federation of Citizens' Associations for the required sale of tokens at the rate of three for 25 cents. At present, six for 50 cents is the smallest quantity to be purchased on cars and buses.

On February 12, at 10 a.m., there will be a hearing on all phases e by the Canital Transit Co. to Takoma, Petwo Chillum areas, including rates, routing and service.

All of these hearings will be held in the new headquarters of the commission in room 203, District Building.

Tucker Sees Defense Work As Big Civic Job Opportunity

When Leonard L. Tucker began his work with the Social Security Board six years ago-almost at the inception of that New Deal agencyit indirectly launched him on his civic career. Rush for Enlistments Fills All Shore Jobs In Naval Reserve

Specially Trained Mer Needed, However, for Ship, Outpost Service

Men seeking enlistment or commissioning in the United States Naval Reserve in a specialist caacity, which insures practically that they will remain on shore for the duty for which enlisted, will not in the future find much encouragement when they visit the local Reserve recruiting headquarters. According to officers, about all of the billets have been filled in the rush which followed the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, and hundreds more are daily seeking to get into this

What is more needed now, it was sserted, is men for service either aboard ship or at the stations and outposts of the Navy. It was added ing of a kind which the Navy can use will be enlisted into the Naval Reserve, they will be immediately sent into the training station distributing pools, from which men are selected for the general combatant pl. n.e. KENNETH V. JONES, 557 25th service.

Among this class, it was said, are yeomen, which is the naval clerk and stenographer rating, and for storekeepers, the latter the aides to the Supply Corps officers in the distribution of supplies at the station and aboard ships to which they are attached. The men who now are taken into this class will be sent to the schools for yeomen and storekeepers maintained by the Navy and, after a course of instruction into naval procedure, will be distributed to the ships and outpost stations.

100 Will Be Selected. Members of the Naval Academy Candidate Division at the local Reserve now have less than three months of study in order to be prepared for the tests which will determine whether they will be among the 100 enlisted men who will be selected from the Naval Reserve this year to enter the Naval Academy July 1. Those who go to the Academy this year have already the background of eight weeks of training as enlisted men at the Naval Training Station.

In order to comply with the statute and the regulations governing admittance of men to the naval school through the Reserve, candidates must serve one full year, which means that they must be enlisted by June 30 next for the 1943 entrance. Men contemplating seeking this career should file their applications early in order that the paper work can be carried on in time to permit enlistment within the specified time Soon after the 1st of July those an eight-week course, after which they will be returned to the inactive list with the requirement that they attend some preparatory school at their own expense to make Those who cannot afford to pay the school cost, it was pointed out, should not attempt to get into the group. If they enlist and then find out that they cannot attend the schools they will be kept in the Reserve and sent to duty aboard ships or at shore stations as seamen, second class. STORE OR OFFICE SPACE AVAILABLE APRIL 1, 1942

This property is situated in growing business center of the Georgetown section of Washington, D. C., on M Street.

Five years ago it was designed and erected new for a retail store for the Sears, Roebuck Company which has now outgrown it. Consisting of three large floors, of about 4,000 square feet each, in good condition, having an up-todate heating and lighting system, a freight elevator, and a rear entrance on an alley, it is, without changes, available for a retail store, or any chain store, or for office space. Prefer a "net lease" for term of years.

On April 1, 1942, it will be vacated and available for lease. Consult your own broker.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

READY! America is all set to meet mechanized attack. We have "tank destroyers" - experts to man them

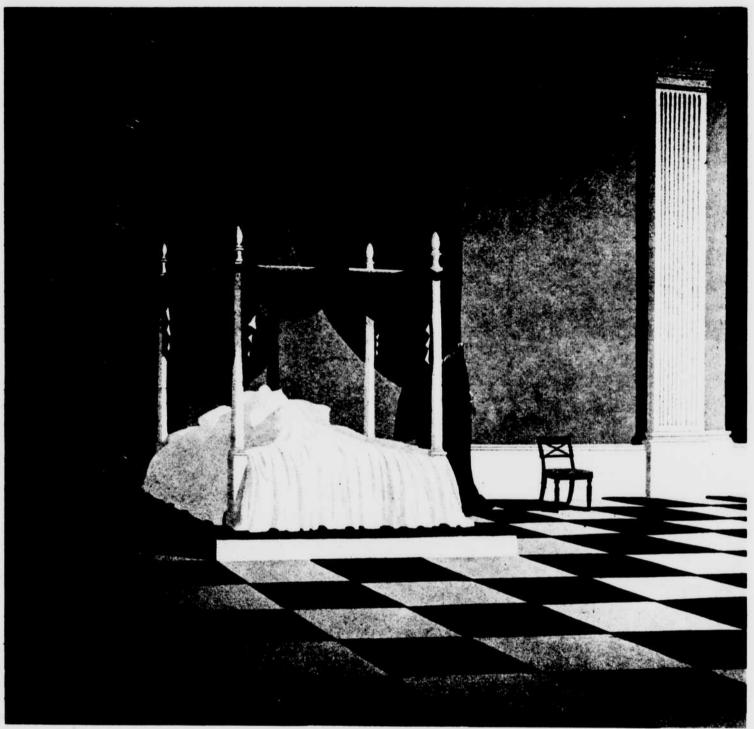

AIM! Months of intensive drill have perfected the smooth, swift teamwork that can put armored forces to rout

FIRE! In pioneer days America was a nation of sharpshooters. Now we are putting our heritage to work again

MINUTE MAN - 1942! The American soldier's costume and equipment have changed in a century and a half - but not his courage, his doggedness, or his cold fighting efficiency. The tanks can be taken, and the Yanks know how

DRAWING BY JOHN ATHERTON

HE LONELY KING

Many centuries ago, there came to the throne of a small kingdom a shrewd and warlike genius. His name is preserved in history books to this day.

He found his country happily poor, and drove his subjects into the mines and fields and factories to make it unhappily rich. He took its gold and iron and grain and turned it into the mightiest army of that age. He turned that army on his neighbors, and made them into slaves. He plundered the wealth of all that fell before him. He spread his power from sea to sea. And then one day, he failed to rise from his bed. From far and near came the greatest healers to tend him. In every corner of his empire, the populace was ordered to the temples and altars to pray for their King. But still he languished. He was wasting away. The wise men were puzzled.

The end was not far off. Around the royal deathbed stood a host of servants.

"Is there anything Your Highness needs?" they asked.

"Yes," whispered the King. . . "A friend."

SIDELINES

DEFENSE. A man we know has found a new way to greet friends on holidays and other festive occasions. We think the idea should be passed on to every American:

Instead of sending form greeting cards, he mails a Defense Savings Stamp book, with the first 10c stamp already pasted in. He tried out his idea first with Christmas and New Year's cards. It worked so well that he's carried it over to all occasions.

He calculates that for each $10 he invests in Defense cards, he can start 100 people on the way to buying a Defense Bond. His $10 investment can thus sell $1,875 worth of bonds. He calls his idea "killing three birds — Hitler, Mussolini, Hirohito — with one stamp."

PROGRESS. Despite the state of the world, science keeps right on marching ahead. One of the newer important discoveries has come out of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology: outdoor air conditioning. M.I.T. scientists now report that they can disperse fog.

Greatest beneficiaries are aviators. By spraying large quantities of calcium chloride through the fog, a mile-long path, 100 feet high and 100 feet wide, can be cleared. All the pilot has to do then is steer his way through the corridor. Cost of keeping such a path clear is about $5 a minute.

HABIT. Friends call Bill Shirer one of the shyest newspapermen in the profession. His wife Tess — once a Viennese newspaperwoman — is even more self-effacing. She read the manuscript of her husband's famed "Berlin Diary" and painstakingly tried to cut every reference to herself.

But her chief problem these days—aside from raising two little daughters—is trying to break Bill of the wartime habits he picked up in Berlin. Greatest offender among them shows up every Sunday evening when Shirer goes on the air with his weekly comment program. Tess, watching him in the New York studio, notices that he keeps patting his left shoulder with his right hand.

She couldn't figure out what prompted it until Bill himself dug down into his subconscious and supplied the explanation: the habit began during the first days of war in Berlin when the correspondent was merely trying to make sure that his gas mask was where it should be in case he needed it.

EXTRA FLAVOR MAKES KRISPY CRACKERS EXTRA GOOD!

ANT to solve the problem of grumpy, hungry youngsters easily and quickly? . . . Just give them a few Sunshine Krispy Crackers spread with jam, jelly or peanut butter and you'll get a happy answer every time. For children, like grown-ups, love these crisp, crunchy crackers. And for good reasons!

You see, Sunshine Krispy Crackers are different from similar crackers. They have a mouth-watering, nut-like goodness that makes them taste unusually delicious. That's because they're made by Sunshine Bakers' Accordion Fold Process—a patented baking method that makes them extra crisp, extra flaky, extra flavorful.

So, whenever you have an eating problem, take advantage of the convenience of these food-favorites... And when ordering them, be sure to ask for Sunshine Krispy Crackers!

Bill sent an uneasy glance over his shoulder. "I thought I heard someone!"

THE SCHOOL library seemed, to a casual eye, completely deserted. The books slumbered on their shelves and the eyes of seven presidents gazed bleakly from the walls. The very air was freighted with a sad and musty silence. Yet a closer scrutiny would have brought to light a solitary scholar - a woebegone youth in his teens, dipping dispiritedly into a stout volume of faded brown.

Bill Newcomb had forgotten to turn in his considered opinion of Samuel Johnson. It was this neglected task which held him now, long past the usual hour of release, and was keeping him from a date with Marty Thayer in the back room of Mrs. Moody's grocery, the place of the moment for Carterville's younger set. His thoughts wandered from the coffee shops of the eighteenth century to Mrs. Moody's infinitely more interesting rendezvous, with its new twentieth-century juke box. He dwelt, for a time, on Mrs. Moody's particularly toothsome potato salad, and her flaky wedges of blueberry pie à la mode. The whole crowd would be there. Marty might even have gone there with somebody else.

He emitted a self-pitying sigh. Then he stretched, yawned, and scratched the back of his head. Only half a page to go — but a neat finish, somehow, was so hard. He permitted a bored gaze to wander about the room. It was at this point that his eye fell on the bronze bust of Curtis A. Hibbert - gracing a fluted column back of the main desk.

It was inevitable that Bill Newcomb should have brooded over this displeasing object; old Curtis was directly responsible for his presence here. Bill's English teacher was a reasonable man, but old Curtis, principal of Carterville High, was not. It was old Curtis who would not stay in his office and tend to his own affairs, who made a practice of pouncing into a person's classroom at the worst possible moment. Bill considered the bust critically. It sure did look like the old guy. Looked like an old walrus. So did old Curtis. Ought to be in a zoo instead of a school - the old walrus!

Bill's smile broadened as a wonderful idea took shape in his mind. It was not an idea that needed any great thought or complicated maneuvering. Its virtue lay in its simplicity. When Bill had put his name and room number on a hastily completed theme, he had merely to pick up the bronze bust and slip it under his coat. Old Curtis - in replica, at least - was on his way.

THE zoo had been laid out, with great enthusiasm, several years before; but since that time it had become a sort of stepchild of the town fathers. It now boasted a fairly respectable aviary, several peevish monkeys and one moth-eaten old lioness, but most of the cages were standing empty.

Bill found a cage for Mr. Hibbert right away, and had no difficulty getting Mr. Hibbert into the cage unobserved. There was no one at the zoo at this hour but a nondescript colored man, languidly clipping the hedge around the keeper's cottage. Tomorrow morning, though, bright and early, people would be coming in droves.

finish. But it almost finished him

by Josephine Bentham Illustrated by Earl Cordrey

> He was telling Marty Thayer all about it a few minutes later. "And they absolutely can't miss it! Because there it is in a cage right alongside of the monkeys!"

> He became aware suddenly that his hearty laughter had found no echo. Marty was eyeing him in consternation. "Oh, my goodness!" she cried. "We've got to get right over there right away! Oh, Bill, we've got to get right over to that zoo!"

> She was already on her way to his car. He hurried after her. "Wait a minute! You mean that thing - you mean it's worth anything?"

> "OH, MY! Of course it is! It's supposed to be a work of art or something! I suppose it's worth thousands of dollars!"

> Bill pushed the old car up to forty - its best. "I still think you're kidding me!" he said desperately. "You must be!"

> "No, I'm not! Oh, Bill, if you'd only been here last year - then you'd have known! Why, they had this famous sculptor - did you ever hear of Bellamy Davis?"

"No."

"Well, he's a famous sculptor, and he went to college with Mr. Hibbert. So he got the idea of sculping a bust - '

"Oh, my gosh!" moaned Bill.

"Well, he made this bust of Mr. Hibbert and gave it to the school. They had a ceremony about it. All the faculty and students were there and we sang America and Old Carterville Forever, and Mr. Davis made a speech, and Mr. Hibbert too. That bust was supposed to be something pretty wonderful!"

"But how was anybody to know? It certainly didn't look like anything wonderful! Why didn't they put a sign on it?"

He was still holding forth as they jumped out of the car. Marty ran on ahead. "You said right next to the monkeys, Bill — "

"Yes. Sure! It's in there —"

"Here?"

"Sure!"

He stared into the cage. "Why, I'm absolutely positive that was the one! I - Marty! Do you suppose -"

'Oh, Bill! You might have got mixed up! You might have put it in another one!"

But the faint hope faded away. Mr. Hibbert's bust had completely disappeared. A search of all the cages confirmed it.

They knocked timidly at the door of the keeper's cottage, but he knew nothing of any foreign object in any of his cages.

"It hadn't ought to have been there," he said. Then, very firmly, he closed the door. "Oh, my!" cried Marty. "Oh, my goodness! What in the world are we going to do now?"

"I don't know," said Bill, "but what gets me is — who would want that thing? I mean if it was Carole Lombard or somebody — but old Curtis! Who would want that thing?"

"Well, somebody must have wanted it! It must have been somebody — Oh, Bill, do you think it could have been somebody who came in here and knew that bust belonged in the library? And just naturally took it back?"

He stared at her. "Why — say! It could have been! Why, Marty, I bet that's just exactly what happened!"

They took fire from each other's enthusiasm—and the more they thought of this new theory, the more plausible it became.

As a theory, it was very sound. It was too bad they had built it on the wrong premise. When they arrived at school next morning they found the whole campus seething with excitement. Rumors concerning the mysterious disappearance of Mr. Hibbert's bust had seeped right down to the lowliest pig-tailed freshman. Then there were fresh rumors of a special assembly called for the whole student body — rumors quickly verified.

Bill, ambling into the auditorium at Marty's side, assumed a faint, supercilious smile, meant to indicate his complete indifference to the matter at hand. He was unique in this attitude.

Mr. Hibbert announced the disappearance of the bust. He called upon the responsible person to rise and confess. Naturally no one responded to this appeal—but every one glanced covertly at the person on either side of him, and a few unnerved young people tittered helplessly.

Marty looked at Bill again. He was still smiling sarcastically. His face, however, had turned a painful red, blazoning his guilt to the world—if all eyes had not fortunately been riveted on Mr. Hibbert.

"Very well!" that autocrat continued. "Now I have one more announcement to make. If that bust is not returned within twenty-four hours, the whole school will be penalized. Unless the restitution is made within that period of time, I am afraid we shall have to cancel our mid-semester dance." Mr. Hibbert lifted his hand, quelling the anguished murmur that had risen. "We would not be happy about having that dance. We would take no joy in any such merry and carefree event when a situation as disgraceful as this was weighing on all our minds. I am sure you will all agree with me—after a moment's sober reflection."

That was all. No one agreed with Mr. Hibbert, even after a moment's sober reflection — but no one, of course, dared to say so. The assembly broke up. Bill and Marty slipped away for a conference.

"I've got to tell 'em!" Bill cried. "I can't let the whole school miss out on the dance on account of me. I'd be a rat!"

"No, you wouldn't!" cried Marty. "It isn't your fault, is it, if Mr. Hibbert has to go and punish the whole school for something you just happened to do without even knowing what you were doing?"

There was a flaw in Marty's logic, but Bill couldn't put his finger on it. He looked at her uncertainly.

"Anyway I feel like a rat," he said. "I feel like one — me not saying anything."

"Well, you're going to feel a whole lot worse if you're expelled! And your family's going to feel worse! Why, just think of your mother, Bill Newcomb!"

"Sure I'm thinking of my mother — but I've got to think of my own peace of mind!"
"I don't think it matters so much about your peace of mind — But there's the bell. We'll talk some more about it after school. We'll maybe think of something," said Marty.

But after school they had to drive over to Francine's house for the Thayers' laundry. Francine was late with it again.

Francine lived in a shack in the colored section, but she greeted Marty and the young gentleman who accompanied her with a bright and beautiful smile, and ushered them into her humble abode with all the graciousness of her race. It was very embarrassing for Marty to discover all her intimate garments, freshly ironed and draped all over the room. She blushed furiously and did not look at Bill until a sort of strangled yelp from him brought her eyes swiftly to his face.

He was staring with dazed eyes at an object resting on the ruffled shelf over Francine's gas plate. That object was the bronze bust of Curtis A. Hibbert.

"Your papa's got to have his collars just so," Francine was saying, amiably. "Not too much starch nor too little. Got to be just so!"

"Yes — " Marty said, breathlessly. "I know my father's very particular, Francine, but you always do such wonderful work — My goodness, I don't see how you do so much wonderful work and keep your house so — so neat and clean!"

Francine cackled. "It's a little bitty house! And that Mist' Abbott — he asks a heap o' rent for it! Twelve dollahs a month!"

"Yes —" Marty floundered on. "But it's such an attractive little house, Francine — and you've got so many attractive things to — to dust and keep clean. Well, like that — that bronze thing over there —"

Francine rolled her eyes towards Mr. Hibbert's unsmiling countenance. "My gem-mum friend give me that. Ain't it somep'n!"

Marty looked at her anxiously. "You mean you really like it very much, Francine?"

"Sure I do! I've took a fancy to it."
Bill coughed. "Then you wouldn't consider selling it? I've got three dollars."

"And I've got eighty cents!" cried Marty.

"Would you sell it for three dollars and eighty cents, Francine?"

Francine turned the matter over in her mind. "I dassent. Alexander Brown wouldn't like for me to sell that there little bust he give me. He wouldn't like that."

Marty started. She knew Alexander Brown. He was the amiable and charming little colored man who mowed the Thayers' lawn. She frowned at Bill, significantly. "I think," she said, "we'd better be pushing along."

THE next step was obviously an interview with Francine's fiance. They found him pensively considering a rather bedraggled flower bed in Mrs. Henry Webster's garden.

Bill was thrown, immediately, into a state of wild excitement. "Why, my gosh!" he said. "That's the colored man who was in the zoo! That's the very same man, Marty!"

"Oh, dear! I wish it wasn't!" faltered Marty. But she approached the culprit resolutely enough.

"Alexander!" she said.

He looked up and touched his tattered old hat, his face shining in innocent delight. Marty traced for him, diffidently, the misadventures of the bust.

Alexander considered her with grieved eyes. "Why, Miss Marty, I wouldn't take no bronze bust out of no zoo! This here bronze bust I give Francine — I took it out of an old junk heap back of Cassidy's feed store! I could take you there and show you!"

"But," Bill said, "that bust was in the zool" Alexander gave him a forgiving smile. "Not this one. This bust I give Francine — it was in that old junk heap."

"But I saw you there! I saw you working in the zoo!"

Alexander was plaintive. "Ain't no crime — workin' in a zoo."

"No, but -- "

"Sendin' a poor colored man to jail! A nice young gem'mum like you!"

"For Pete's sake! Nobody said anything about jail!"

But Alexander was hurt. "Just takin' a funny-lookin' thing like that out of an old junk heap! Thinkin' that just nachally somebody must 'a' throwed it away!"

"Well, all right!" cried Bill. "I put it in the zoo and somebody took it out and put it on an old junk heap and you took it off the junk heap and gave it to Francine! But listen! Do you think you can get that bust away from Francine and sell it to me?"

"Oh, yes!" cried Marty. "For three dollars and eighty cents! Please, Alexander!"

Alexander's brown eyes gleamed for an instant. Then, mournfully, he shook his head.

"I dassent. I give one or two other little concerns like that to Francine — and then I took 'em away. Francine was mighty sore at me. But she didn't like anything I ever give her the way she likes this here bust. She's took a fancy to it. I dassent."

They were no match for Alexander.

After they had left, Bill said, "We haven't a chance, Marty. There's no way we can get that thing back on that pedestal before nine o'clock tomorrow morning! No way!"

"But, Bill, he stole it! He must have!"

"Sure. But I stole it first, didn't I? Gosh, Marty, this is a spot!"

"Yes," Marty said, thoughtfully, "but Alexander just kind of slides out of everything you say. I think we'd better go back and talk to Francine. We'd just better go and tell her the plain and simple truth!"

Bill looked faintly alarmed. "Well, don't queer things between her and Alexander! I wouldn't feel right about it."

"No," Marty said, "I'll put it in some kind of a roundabout way, Bill. I'll say it isn't that we think Alexander took it, but it might look to other people as if he had. It might look kind of suspicious if she had a bust of Mr. Hibbert on her wall that ought by rights to be in the high school library—"

"Yeah! That's the angle! And then you can say we want to pay her for any little trouble she's been put to."

Marty ran over the argument. It was not a bad little speech that she finally rehearsed — but, like most rehearsed speeches, it never reached a human ear. By the time Marty and Bill got back to Francine's house, Mr. Hibbert's bronze bust was gone.

"It was that Mist' Abbott!" Francine wept. "He took it for the rent!"

"The rent, Francine?"

"Well, I've been owin' him, and I tol' him I couldn't pay him an' he kind of looked aroun' here — an' he saw that there bust — "

"And he wanted it?" Bill demanded, incredulously.

Francine looked at Bill in honest wonder. "Why, o' course he wanted it!" she said.

Marty sighed. "What's Mr. Abbott's first name, Francine? And where does he live?"

MR. MATTHEW ABBOTT opened the door to his young visitors. He said at once that he didn't want to buy anything—and that, furthermore, he didn't want any tickets to anything. Reassured on these points, he let them in—though looking a little baffled.

They saw the bronze bust right away. It had a very prominent place on Mr. Abbott's mantel. Mr. Abbott saw them looking at the bust and he beamed on them broadly. "That," said Mr. Abbott, "is my old granddad!"

Marty and Bill looked at him, and looked at each other, and looked at him again. It was Marty who first regained the power of speech. "Your — your what, Mr. Abbott?"

"Why, my old granddad! Natural as life!"

Bill eyed him in a kind of despair. "Had that bust very long, sir?"

"Long? Must be thirty years!"

"Well," Bill said, dazedly, "that's certainly a funny thing! I mean it kind of looks like somebody I know."

Mr. Abbott nodded complacently. "That may well be, but just the same it's the spittin' image of my old granddad. Cyrus Abbott - fought through the whole Civil War - knew Lincoln like a brother. Gen'ral in the Army. It was Lincoln give him the idea for that bust. 'A lot of worse men than you. Cy, have had busts of theirselves,' Lincoln said. You have your bust made, Cy - you do that.' And here's the bust to prove it. And another thing that might be interestin' to you young people - Lincoln saw that bust with his own eyes. 'Cy,' he said, 'it's the spittin' image of you — it sure is!' What do you think of that?"

Clearly they didn't know what to think of it. Neither Bill nor Marty had ever heard so unabashed a lie a lie stripped of the last, lingering vestiges of truth. It was impossible not to be a little impressed.

"Well," Bill mumbled, "that's very interesting all right — isn't it, Marty?"

Marty gathered all her courage. "Yes," she said. "I guess you think an awful lot of that bust, Mr. Abbott. I guess you wouldn't care to sell it?" She held her breath.

But Mr. Abbott was not looking particularly outraged. "Sell it?" he echoed.

"Well, a distinguished citizen like your grandfather—!" Bill put in, hastily. "He ought to be in some kind of public building, I should think like a museum or maybe a high school — wouldn't you say so, Marty?"

"Oh, yes! But not just in one of the classrooms; I think maybe the library—"

"I'd put it there myself!" Bill said.
"Well, I hate to part with it," Mr.
Abbott said. "But — as you say — a distinguished citizen and all that —"
The inflection left a tactful way open for the mention of some sum — which turned out, after a certain nerveracking interval, to be $3.80.

"Now!" Marty said. "Now we've just got to get it back on that pedestal without anybody seeing us!"

"That ought to be simple!" Bill assured her. "I bet there's nobody in the whole school this time of day—except maybe the janitor."

Marty looked at him excitedly. "Old Mr. Peters! He wouldn't say anything — Bill!"

Bill pulled the car to the curb and picked up the bust.

"Well, remember!" Marty said.
"We'll just walk in — in a perfectly natural way — and then, if anybody sees us, you get behind me and I'll stay in front of the bust. Remember, Bill!"

They were conversing in whispers by this time, and walking on tiptoe toward the library. Bill sent an uneasy glance over his shoulder. "I thought I heard someone!"

"Probably Peters."

The corridor, and now the library itself, seemed to echo with ominous footsteps. Bill had been carrying the bronze bust as if it were a football. He shifted it as he hurried toward the pedestal, assuming the attitude of one about to make a basket.

"If you bring in one more midget, Mullaney — you're through as truant officer"

"Hurry!" breathed Marty. "I do hear somebody!"

Bill started. Then, with shaking hands, put the bust where it belonged. Marty clutched his sleeve. "Oh, Bill! It's Mr. Hibbert! Quick!"

They just had time to slip behind the nearest stacks as Mr. Hibbert approached and stopped short, face to face with his own lost image.

For a long moment all was silent. Then Mr. Hibbert did an incomprehensible thing. With the utmost caution he edged nearer the pedestal. Looking hastily to left and right, he took the bust in his arms and started to move stealthily toward the door.

It was at that moment that Bill Newcomb's elbow accidentally knocked a volume of Pendennis to the floor.

"Who's there?" cried Mr. Hibbert. There was only one thing, then, for Bill and Marty to do. They came out into the open, trying to seem casual.

"Oh, it's only me and Bill!" stammered Marty — with a rather reedy little laugh. "We just happened to be here sort of early. That is — "

Her voice trailed off. There was something very queer about Mr. Hibbert. He was holding the bronze bust with an air of embarrassment, as if it were a very large hot potato. At the same time he was smiling at them in a way unmistakably sheepish.

"About this little affair — "he said, hastily. "I was — uh — I was going to announce in assembly that a satisfactory explanation had been made about the bust — that the entire matter was closed. I would have let you have the dance, of course!"

He was looking, now, a little bit wistful. "It seemed such a good chance to get rid of the thing!"

"You mean the bust?" croaked Bill.
"You don't like that bust?"

"Like it? I detest it!"

"But it's a work of art!" cried Marty. "At least — isn't it?"

"I don't care if it is or not! It doesn't do me justice — nobody can say so!"

Marty opened her mouth—and left it open. It was incredible that Mr. Hibbert should have felt about his bust the way she felt about her picture in last year's Year Book. She was beginning, to her amazement, to be quite fond of Mr. Hibbert.

Bill was rousing himself, in the meantime, from a sort of stupor. "Well, I'll tell you!" he said excitedly. "You leave that bust on the desk, sir, and then you kind of walk on out of here. You don't ever need to know what happened after that!"

Mr. Hibbert hesitated. He glanced uncertainly over his shoulder. His voice was like a conspirator's. "Do you hear somebody?"

"No!" Marty said. "That's just the janitor."

Bill stepped to the door. "The coast is clear, sir." He moved back, making way for the principal.

"What'll we do with it?" Marty whispered, then, in some anxiety. "You wouldn't want to take it back to the zoo, Bill?"

"Of course not! A nice guy like that!"
"Well, then, / know! It would make a wonderful wedding present!

He stared at her. "Wedding present!" he said. "For who?"

"Why — " cried Marty, "for Francine, of course!"

FAREWELL IN POLAND

by William L. Shirer

"The Noblest Act I Witnessed in the War" — the fourth in a series of articles by famous authors and war correspondents

ROBABLY not many of them are alive today. The Nazis would not give them enough food, and the two winters - especially the first, which was the coldest Europe had seen for a century - must have killed off a great many of them. "Died of exposure" would be the technical term for those who did not starve to death. For what most of them lacked was shelter after the Nazis drove them from their homes. In that blizzardy winter of 1939-40 in Poland you had to have a roof over your head and a fire in the stove once in a while to keep alive.

But they were very brave while they lived. They were very brave, the Polish women of Gdynia, on the day I saw them — September 19, 1939, it was — while the battle raged on the ridge two miles north of the town.

It is difficult to describe. It was a peculiar battle. It was one of the few you really saw in this war. In a way, that was the ugly part about it. Not for us, but for the women of Gdynia. They saw it too, saw their own menfolk fighting it, their hard Slavic faces frozen in bitter fascination as they watched. You have to grasp the geography of Gdynia and environs. You have to see the ridge just north of the port which runs for seven miles inland from the sea, and which can be seen from any place in the streets of the town.

Hopeless Stand

You have to remember that Gdynia itself already was in German hands and that on this chilly September day the remnants of the Polish Army of the North (reinforced by the men of Gdynia who had not already been called up) were making a last stand on the heights against an overwhelming force of the German army. Their position was hopeless. Their backs were against the sea. They had no artillery, no tanks, no planes. But all day long they fought on, with rifles and machine guns. And down in the town their women, with whom they had seen Gdynia grow from a tiny fishing village to the leading port on the Baltic, a port of hope for Poland, watched them.

The women did not cheer as, say. American college women do at a football game. Neither did they whine or weep. All day long they stood in the streets as if their feet had been glued to the pavement, their heads upstretched, their eyes concentrated on the heights. They would disdain to look at you when you passed them. They were bitter, but they were also proud. As they gazed at the smoke the German bombs and shells made, did they hope for the sight of the white flag that would mean that some at least of their men would survive, living still? If so, they made no sign to show it.

Revenge Was Only Hope

PROBABLY in the brief period of the war, which had come so suddenly three weeks before, they had become too numbed by what had happened to hope for anything beyond the sight of dead Germans. For the killing that they saw going on up on the ridge, the slaughtering of their men, was only part of what was happening.

A few days before, the Germans had swept into Gdynia and had evicted these women from their homes, the modern, American-like homes which had been built in Gdynia — almost the only ones like them in the whole impoverished country. They had been ordered to leave the furniture just as it was, including the radio and bedsheets and silver, so that the new German masters who were being brought into the town should not be inconvenienced.

From their belongings of a lifetime they could take 22 pounds—in one small suitcase. And down at the freight yards, these women knew, the Germans were assembling the boxcars that, as soon as the railroad had been repaired, would take them to the wasteland of Eastern Poland.

Frost was in the air, and it would be a cold ride, they knew, and without their men, and where would the food come from, and the shelter? And with winter almost on them. I passed them for the last time that afternoon. They stood in the streets, still, their faces uplifted, proud, defiant, bitter.

I'll wager they were that way to the end, full of a noble dignity until the last hunger that Hitler forced on them came, and the killing cold.

"NOTHING SO DELICIOUS HAS ANY BUSINESS BEING GOOD FOR YOU!"

- YOU: M-m-m! That was swell! You know, it never occurred to me to combine crisp, nutty ALL-BRAN with California prunes. It's luscious! Thanks for suggesting it.
- WE: Do you mind if we also mention that KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is awfully good for people? Helps so many to keep "regular," by supplying more "bulk" in their diets.
- YOU: There you go! You manufacturers are never satisfied. Why, nothing half so delicious as ALL-BRAN has any business being good for you!
- WE: You may be right! But helping people to keep

- "regular" is ALL-BRAN'S main purpose in life.
- YOU: Sounds mighty fine! Do go on.
- WE: Look! Many folks who suffer from constipation have the common kind that's due to lack of "bulk" in the diet. Purgatives can't give anything but temporary relief. ALL-BRAN gets at the cause and corrects it—by supplying the missing "bulk." Eat ALL-BRAN every day, drink plenty of water and "Join the Regulars."

our southern neighbor. But these daringly conceived plans have been frustrated. And one who played a most important part in upsetting Hitler's plans is a man so unpretentious in manner and appearance that if you passed him on the street you might hardly notice him. He is General Manuel Avila Camacho, President of Mexico.

Hitler's attack on the Americas was to be an inside job. He has said so on many occasions. German fifth columnists and saboteurs would undermine the Americas by destroying their unity. Class would be set against class, nation against nation. And the countries of the New World would fall into his lap like ripe

Able Nazi agents began organizing the thousands of German nationals in Mexico, began setting up front organizations, attempting to influence reactionary politicians, recruiting minority groups and individuals who opposed the ideals of democracy.

Part of their campaign was to create fear and suspicion of the United States. The Nazis screamed against "Yankee imperialism," "dollar diplomacy" and "the colossus of the north." Uncle Sam was painted as a greedy, bullying tyrant who waited only for the right moment to seize the Latin-American nations and enslave their peoples.

This campaign was gaining headway when General Avila Camacho came into office in 1940. Certain ostensibly Mexican newspapers already were haranguing against "Yankee imperialism.'

The story of how Avila Camacho helped to thwart that Axis offensive in North America is one of the most vital chapters in the history of the Western Hemisphere.

Wastes No Time

EVEN before he became President, Camacho had seen through Hitler's plans. And, once in office, the practical Chief Executive immediately started his drive against Nazism.

His answer to German propagandists who sought to spread disunity and distrust was to proclaim forthrightly his support of Pan-Americanism and his close friendship with the United States. "The destinies of the United States and Mexico," he stated, "are common geographically and politically. Mexico has nothing in common with Nazism or Communism. Mexico is a democracy."

It would be hard to find two men who differ more sharply than the Fuehrer of Nazi Germany and the President of Mexico. The Nazi is brilliant, erratic, cruel, dictatorial, fanatical and unpredictable. The Mexican is calm, deliberate, kindly, democratic and logical.

There is more common sense than fireworks about the President of Mexico. Soldier, farmer Der Fuehrer had it all planned - he was to strike at Uncle Sam through Mexico! Then a man named Avila Camacho got busy

by Henry C. Wolfe

and family man, he is a sound, stable, hardriding Chief Executive. And that is a definite asset now. This is no time for flamboyant politicos and comic-opera dictators. What Mexico needs in the presidential saddle today is a sober citizen of simple tastes and outlook.

President Camacho's social and economic views are middle-of-the-road. This is an asset, too. It has helped him to unify Mexico's classes and factions, has won him as a nickname the "great conciliator." While he has pledged himself to uphold the political and economic progress of the revolution, he believes that capital has its rights as well as labor. When people try to pin an ideological tag on him, he insists, "I am a democrat."

He has another asset that makes him especially valuable today. He is a soldier. "A soldier's soldier," they call him in Mexico.

He was born 44 years ago in the little town of Chiapas. His father was a farmer and businessman. But such a life did not appeal to Avila Camacho. He wanted excitement and adventure. He found both in the revolution of 1914, when at the age of 17 he joined Carranza's cavalry.

He came out of the war a lieutenant. Thenceforth his rise was rapid. He became a major at 19, a colonel at 23, a brigadier general at 27 and a major general at 32. Hard work was his stock in trade.

Dark-haired and black-eyed, he is one of the few unmustached Mexican generals. He is a powerful man physically, solidly built, with heavy jowls and the neck of a wrestler. He is a forceful, unrhetorical speaker. He uses no impassioned gestures; his words are deliberate, his manner sincere. He conveys to the audience his own confidence and practical optimism.

But the President of Mexico knows that words are not enough to combat totalitarian aggression. They must be backed up by practical action. To guard against fifth-column dirty work, he has proposed a joint intelligence service for the United States, Mexico and other Latin-American nations.

On the day that the United States declared war, Mexico broke off diplomatic relations with the Japanese Empire. Three days later President Avila Camacho severed relations with Germany and Italy. Mexico's part in the conflict, he told a nation-wide radio audience, "under present circumstances will not be in the trenches but in the factories and fields" to further production and "contribute to the security of America."

He's Co-operating

 $\mathbf{T}_{ extsf{ODAY}}$, United States warplanes are allowed to fly over Mexican territory on their way to and from the Panama Canal, under a reciprocal convention between the United States and Mexico. Avila Camacho has initiated legislation to the effect that Mexico shall not regard as a belligerent any American nation at war with a non-American nation. Airplanes, soldiers and ships of American belligerents are now allowed to use Mexican ports, waters and terrain. Certainly he is making good on his pledge that the United States can rely on Mexico's "solidarity and co-operation."

He is modernizing the army as rapidly as possible, increasing its mobility and striking power. As a soldier he knows the advantages of organization, speed and fire power. The Republic is believed to have at present about 60,000 regular troops and 75,000 reservists. There are also the air force, marines and navy.

Just how the Mexican and United States navies are co-operating to protect the coasts of North America is an official secret guarded in Mexico City and Washington. But it is known that their joint activities are farreaching.

As the United States girds itself for a great struggle against the European and Asiatic powers of the Axis, we can look with confidence to our neighbors. Never have relations between the republics of Mexico and the United States been so cordial. In a large measure Avila Camacho's insistence that "the defense of America is a common cause to all of us" has effected that cordiality. He has wholeheartedly reciprocated our government's policies of Pan-American solidarity and friendship.

Such a working example of Good Neighborliness cannot but foreshadow failure for the Axis offensive against the New World.

The Fire Clown. But over 3,000,000 school children have. And they know and love him.

Smoky is tall, slim, fit-looking Harry K. Rogers, whose lifework is fire prevention. Right now he's up to his ears in national defense, teaching civilian groups and other fire fighters how to combat sabotage and incendiary bombs. His chief interest, though, has always been fire-prevention work with kids.

The records bulge with stories of lives he has saved. Smoky considers them as rich dividends paid on years of hard work.

He was born in Marion, Kansas. In short pants, he was the fire-department mascot. At 12 he became a messenger, wore a red hat and a silver badge. Later he was made Chief, a job of high honor and no pay. By then, Rogers had become an actor, but what time he had between shows, he gave to the Department. Fire fighting and acting may seem like a strange combination, but it served him well. For in road companies with Otis Skinner and David Warfield and in early movies with William S. Hart, he learned what entertained and moved an audience.

One hot summer day in 1921, attending a. Kansas firemen's convention, he heard a fire chief complain to his fellow red-shirts that he couldn't seem to interest children with his lectures on fire prevention. The youngsters just wiggled, squirmed and paid absolutely no attention.

Rogers thought: "We're going at this thing all wrong. Why doesn't someone talk to these kids in their own language?" Then he thought some more, and asked himself: "Well, Harry, why don't you do something? Use theater methods. Don't talk - act." He conferred eagerly with other chiefs about his new idea. Most of them discouraged him, but Rogers decided to go ahead anyhow.

Making his own stage "props," he worked up a clown act. He used his five-year-old daughter Jean and her playmates as a testing audience for every trick, every joke. If they didn't laugh, he threw it out. If they did, into the act it went. Consequence: the show has delighted children ever since.

At first, Rogers paid his own expenses, and took what civic groups could pay him. In three years, he spent $3,000 of his own money. Fortunately, an insurance-company representative saw him at work, and hired him to spread the gospel from then on.

Audiences of Every Size

HE's still doing it, in addition to his extensive field work in training firemen for national defense. His audiences have varied from a dozen kids in a village schoolroom to 120,000 in Soldier's Field, Chicago. He has spoken from platforms at county fairs, in hay barns, from teachers' desks, in hospital wards for crippled youngsters, in schools for the blind. (Afterward, the blind children often come forward and feel his clown costume.)

Stage properties for Smoky's act are simple: stepladder, set of steps, bucket, mop, two large matches as big as policemen's nightsticks, huge clock which rings a loud gong every minute during the act. That last drives home to the children a startling fact: every 60 seconds an American home burns because of carelessness.

Plenty of Color

ONTO the stage prances Smoky, resplendent in a brilliant red coat, a huge, flapping white collar, sky-blue pants and a toy fireman's hat perched on top of his head.

Smoky climbs the stepladder, tangling one foot with the other, then sits on the top step. He asks:

"How many of you children ever saw a stick of dynamite? (A few raise hands.) It's terrible stuff, isn't it? One stick would blow this building all to smithereens, wouldn't it? Now, how many of you ever saw a gallon of gasoline? (All raise hands.) Oh, everybody has. Now, I'll tell you something about gasoline. One gallon of gasoline will tear up just as much, when it explodes, as 87 sticks of dynamite!

"Now, when you go home, I want you to tell your mothers and your big sisters that whenever they use gasoline to wash their gloves or to take grease spots out of their clothing, that they should always go out in the back yard. Or, better yet, send the stuff to the cleaner - let him worry!"

Seated atop the stepladder, Smoky now rocks back and forth. At each rock the children think Smoky will fall, but he doesn't until finally over he goes, turning two back somersaults and coming up on his feet, unhurt and grinning.

In another sequence, Smoky explains spontaneous combustion, the dangers of storing oily rags or mops under stairs. Dramatically, he sets off some flash powder underneath himself, while sitting on the prop stairs, then hurriedly turns in a fire alarm - the wrong way. He then does it the right way.

Using that same graphic technique Smoky teaches children to be careful in handling matches, how to roll in a rug if their clothes catch fire, the dangers of bonfires, rubber gasstove connections, and all the other common dangers.

Elementary? Of course. Funny? Not to adults - but it is to children. And they remember.

As a matter of fact, during his act he does not wish teachers to discipline the children. He says that if he can't hold their attention, he is the one who ought to be corrected, not they.

Smoky is businesslike, too. To each of his listeners he gives a Home Fire Hazard checklist, which each child fills out after a home inspection. Six million of these have been filled out and turned over to local fire departments. It would be impossible to estimate how many home fires those lists have prevented.

If Smoky has had phenomenal success with the youngsters, his success with grownups has been no less amazing. Today, with civilian defense a No. 1 job, he is training fire fighters all over the country. He has aided corporations in organizing their own brigades. Smoky says that elaborate equipment is not necessary - if you fight fire with knowledge. Or better yet, prevent it.

Rogers was the first field instructor of firemen in this country. He organized the first regional training schools. Last year 76,000 firemen were enrolled in them; 20 years ago there were no schools and no students. Since > 13,000 of our 14,000 fire departments are volunteer, this advanced training means far greater protection for your life and property in either peace or war.

> With his heavy work schedule, Rogers himself does not have much leisure. But when he is tired, he just looks at the newspapers and finds plenty of refreshment in stories like this:

At Ashland, Ohio, Anna Louise, aged eight, saw her little brother stumble into a gas heater. His bath-robe caught fire. Calmly, the little girl unbuttoned the garment, snatched it off, rolled it in a rug to put it out. The boy was unhurt. Anna Louise then went upstairs and told her mother what had happened. Anna Louise said she had learned what to do in an emergency from Smoky, the Fire Clown.

That's the kind of a testimonial that would make anyone feel pretty good.

parked signals. The weatherman's forecast of continued fair and mild did not please my wife at all.

"It isn't good for people," she said. "I'm longing for snow, and lots of it. Let's go up to Quebec for the winter sports."

Personally, I like ice — by the cube.

By the acre it leaves me cold in every sense of the word, but I was overruled.

"Besides," my wife went on, "it will give me a chance to brush up on my French. We'll stay at a little inn where they speak it."

"How far did you get in French?" I asked.
"To Racine."

"No kidding? As far west as Wisconsin?"

"There was a seventeenth-century poet by that name," she replied loftily. My own theory has always been that you don't need to know the language in order to make yourself understood by foreigners. There is a universal language of signs for all ordinary communication, and you can always get your meaning across by simple and appropriate gestures. Maybe I could test out the idea in Canada.

"Pantomime won't get you very far," my wife warned, "except in the wrong direction."

We took two adjoining single rooms, the only ones left, in an inn that met all my wife's specifications. The English was rare and the French was well-done. When we were settled, she went to her room and I perched on the edge of my bed to unpack a suitcase. There was a sound of splingering wood as one of the slats gave way, and the mattress sagged under my weight.

Instead of calling my wife, I rang the bell. The situation was obvious; gestures would explain it — I didn't need an interpreter. So when the little bonne à tout faire — maid-of-all-work to me — opened the door, I gave her a reassuring smile. She was buxom, apple-cheeked and aproned.

"Something seems to be wrong with my bed," I announced.

I pointed to the bed, and let my muscles sag — like the mattress.

"You can see for yourself," I said.

But she didn't see for herself, as I could see for myself. I would have to be more specific in my pantomime.

I went over to the bed, motioning her to come closer, and patted the offending mattress energetically. The reaction was instantaneous.:Her eyes grew wide, her apple cheeks turned redder, her smile vanished—and so did she. A few moments later the proprietor—who happened to be the girl's uncle—stormed into the room. I understood him perfectly. He was going to throw me out on my ear—with gestures.

Fortunately, my wife arrived at this point to correct the wrong impression I had made. Apologies accepted, the proprietor smiled and corrected the wrong impression the mattress made.

"In the future," my wife suggested, "don't try to talk with your hands — in any language."

SAILOR 1942 * *

He's college-trained for America's merchant marine: Ready to sail, save lives or fight!

He needs them just as fast as he can get them. He needs them to man the two merchantmen that are sliding off the ways each day—ships which will carry the stuff of life and the munitions of war wherever we can use them against the Axis.

Time was when these sailors would have been shanghaied in waterfront bars. Not today. This year many of them come from college—sea college.

Meet a typical 1942 sailorman.

Freckle-faced, blue-eyed. A shy, friendly smile. Just 21 years old. You'd never spot him as a sailor. He speaks with an inland twang, is blushingly uncomfortable with most girls. But he's a sailor; make no mistake about that. Aboard ship he can show many an officer a thing or two about the fine points of the profession.

Folks back home always said he was "one of our nicest boys." Trustworthy. Ambitious. Got out of high school and worked around for a while. He had hoped, once, to go to college, but that was out. No money.

A recruiting officer for the Maritime Service came to town, talked to him. The boy had never seen salt water, didn't know the difference between a hawser and a half hitch. "That's okay," the man said. "When you graduate from Hoffman Island you'll know as much as Old Man Neptune himself."

Hoffman Island is in New York Harbor. It used to be a quarantine center. Today it is one of the six training stations which the United States Coast Guard operates for the Maritime Service. Others are at Gallups Island, Boston; St. Petersburg, Fla.; Point Hueneme, Cal., and Fort Trumbull, New London, Conn. And it's no exaggeration to call them sea colleges. In an intensive seven-months course, partly in the classrooms and shops on the island, partly on training ships at sea. Students learn more seamanship than oldtimers used to pick up in years. Being taught to be sailors in a world at war, they get a complete course in gunnery — everything from how to operate the range finder to shooting daylight through kite-pulled targets. Which will come in handy now.

Uncle Sam pays the tuition — and gives them $21 a month to boot, with the assurance of much more as soon as they qualify for an A.B. (And aboard ship, that means Able-Bodied Seaman, not Bachelor of Arts.) Most of them are enrolled in the Naval Reserve; all of them, when they graduate, become members of the Maritime Service.

They usually get better than a hundred a month on our new merchantmen. And they can take free correspondence courses — given by the Coast Guard — to qualify for a still higher rating, and better pay.

Students range from 18 to 23 years of age. They come from everywhere—farms, villages, cities. Few have ever been in anything more nautical than a rowboat. But they hear of this opportunity through local State Employment Offices, and sign up.

They study everything from arithmetic to maritime law. They learn to row and sail, to save men overboard, to man the guns.

Ahoy, sailor! Keep 'em sailing!

This kid an' me made a business deal

ON THE HOUSE. One of the troubles with always bein' warm an' well-fed is that it blunts your feelin's.

Around seven o'clock last night a scrawny-lookin' kid about eight or nine came in an' sidled over toward the vacant end of the counter. He had on a sweater that looked like a regiment of motorized moths had passed through it.

"Evenin', bud," I said to him when I gave him a glass of water. I noticed how bad he needed a

"I'm just waitin'," he said, before I could ask him for his order.

"Sure," I say. An' then I go on back to the other end to talk to Bushy Barnes. Kids come in quite often while they're waitin' for a pal. So I don't pay much attention.

Bushy, as usual, has got his head buried in a newspaper an' don't even look up. I got plenty to do cuttin' up some French-fries an' cleanin' the grill, so it's 20 minutes before I notice the kid again. He has moved where the crullers are under a glass frame on the back of the counter an' is just sittin' there inhalin'.

I go back to him an' say, "Would you like a cruller, bud?"

He looks up a little startled an' says, "No, thanks. I just like to smell Seems his ol' man is workin' on a shift that doesn't get him off until 10 o'clock. They live alone in a little room over by the railroad an' the kid ain't got no place to go from after school until his ol' man gets home.

This was payday an' the ol' man was comin' home with some food. But there hadn't been anything for breakfast except a cup of coffee, an' no lunch or dinner. An' the kid was nearly starved. He told Bushy his ol' man would sock him if he caught him bummin' food.

"But Mister Wally won't mind, I guess, if I just sit here an' smell it for a little while," the kid says to Bushy.

Bushy came back up to tell me and we started to dish out some grub for him. An' then we had a better idea. I went out an' got the broom an' dustpan and let him sweep up the trash around the stools while I was gettin' some milk an' a lamb chop an' some spinach an' potatoes all heaped up on a plate. By the time he was through, his food was ready an' we told him he'd earned it. An' then everybody was happy.

Maybe I kind of dented the childlabor law, but I reckon I saved the self-respect of a young fellow too proud to beg an' too good a soldier to squawk.

ending. An especially important one arises from the sudden marriage of two young people before the man goes into the Army. If his salary was not enough to marry on before, what will they do if his pay is $21 a month?

Probably John leaves his bride with her parents. Or it may be that he takes her to his own home.

This last situation is bringing me an increasing number of letters. I want to answer one that comes from a bride who is a complete stranger to her husband's family. Her problem is a challenge:

"I have been reading your chapter on Tact and I'd like to know how I can become an echo and a chameleon and yet keep my individuality. I don't want John to come home and find an altogether different person from the one he fell in love with. I would do much to have John's mother and sisters like me. And so far I really like them — but on certain points I do not hold with them at all."

In addition to its wording, the small, clear, almost printed handwriting of this letter suggests capable traits of mind and character, but perhaps also self-opinionatedness. And since I am sure Mary does not want to be answered with polite platitudes, I must say that tact and adaptability—difficult, probably, for this particular bride—are of first importance.

In this case, Mary has married into a big family, and little more is needed than reasonable adaptability on her part and friendliness on theirs.

The best answer I can make to you, Mary, is to adapt yourself to his family as a skillful traveler adapts himself for a long stay in a foreign country. This only means avoiding tactless comments, or discussions which lead nowhere and do good to no one.

If it becomes really important to give your opinion, give it truthfully, of course. But under most circumstances you can good-temperedly say: "I refuse to be drawn in," or, "I don't know enough about it to discuss it!" Answer lightly, smilingly — not with a cold, hard, captious attitude. It will help if you realize that many of the qualities you love in John are duplicated in other members of his family.

It is scarcely necessary to say that the most tactless thing you can do is to run your arm through his with a gesture that announces to his mother or his favorite sister: "He is mine." Of course he is! But don't stand on the hearth that has always been home to him and announce by your manner: "This isn't 'home' to John any more."

The most difficult of all motherin-law situations arises when the bridegroom is the only son, possibly the only child of a widow, and has been her closest comrade. Yet considerateness can make this relationship perfect.

There is one last point which seems to me of importance: All four parents — hers and his — have had to give up their children. The really happy parents-in-law are those who feel that they have not lost a son, but have gained a daughter. Turning it into a gain, however, lies largely with the bride. It is not possible to turn a strange young woman into a daughter unless she accepts the role gladly.

SINGER RISE STEVENS is like Mickey Mouse: everybody likes her. Young, old, lowbrow, high-brow. She demonstrates why in M-G-M's "The Chocolate Soldier" and regularly as a Metropolitan Opera star.

An amazing young woman. No glittering background surrounds her. Her life fits into no movie scenario. Her family is strictly average American — not a trace of musical talent in it. She's as normal as apple pic. All she did was work hard.

RISE (pronounce it Ree-sa) was born in Manhattan, went to school there, studied music there. Left to study in Europe. Came home in 1938 and a Metropolitan Opera contract was waiting for her. She did well. In 1941, she was singing in San Francisco. M-G-M executives took a trip to hear-see her. Sequel: Rise took a trip to Hollywood, made "Chocolate Soldier" with blond, booming, bouncing Nelson Eddy.

At the Met, she's versatile. They like to dress her up in boy's clothes and turn her loose as a waif, page or courtier. But they also like the results when she appears as the highly seductive Delilah of "Samson and Delilah." At home, she's just a nice American girl with a nice Hungarian husband whom she met in Prague. That romance started when he rushed up just before her Prague debut, pushed a big gingham rabbit into her hand. He had heard that Americans thought a rabbit's foot brought luck. So four bunny-feet should quadruple it. They did.

The gingham hare has been a Stevens mascot ever since. But — looking at her carefully — is there any reason why she should need a mascot? — JERRY MASON

Loveliness may soon be Yours! go on the CAMAY MILD-SOAP DIET!

This levely bride, Mrs. Robert G. Johnson of New Orleans, La., says: "The Camay Mild-Soap Diet is such an easy way to help bring out the loveliness of one's complexion."

Follow this way to a lovelier complexion—based on skin specialists' advice — praised by lovely brides!

"I'm so thrilled...being a Camay bride! When people tell me that my skin is lovely, I'm rewarded in full for my persistent devotion to the Camay Mild-Soap Diet. Many nights I was so sleepy

... many mornings I was in such a hurry, but never once did I neglect to follow the Mild-Soap Diet routine faithfully." So says lovely Mrs. Robert G. Johnson.

A little time...a little care ...and you, too, can be lovelier with the help of the Camay Mild-Soap Diet. For no woman's skin can be truly beautiful if, perhaps without realizing it, she fails to cleanse it properly. Or if she uses a beauty soap that isn't as mild as a beauty soap should be.

Skin specialists themselves advise a regular cleansing routine with a fine mild soap. And Camay is more than just mild ... it's actually milder than the 10 famous beauty soaps tested. That's why we say "Go on the Camay Mild-Soap Diet to-night!" Give your skin a thorough beauty cleansing with gentle Camay, night and morning for 30 days. Then, as the days go by, thrilling new loveliness may be yours!

GO ON THE MILD-SOAP DIET TONIGHT!

Work Camay's milder lather over your skin, paying special attention to the nose, the base of the nostrils and chin. Rinse thoroughly with warm water and follow with thirty seconds of cold splashings.

Then, while you sleep, the tiny pore openings in your skin are free to function for natural beauty. In the morning – one more quick session with this milder Camay and your face is ready for make-up.

O LEARN the secret of keeping the profile young, actresses and wealthy women cheerfully write out checks in four figures to those contour-experts who are skilled in the strategy of outwitting age.

But what these wealthy women with a reputation for youth and beauty to defend - do, with the aid of experts, is something that you can do on your very own. Here is the three-step

First, good posture. Any neck carried high gives a youthful effect, no matter what the vital statistics say. So, watch out for a turtle-neck posture that nullifies the appearance of youth. All you have to do, to keep a neck out of a collar and a chin at a sharp right angle to it, is to keep yourself mentally aware of good posture.

Second, keep your skin supple and soft by the daily use of an emollient. Skin, like fine leather, stays flexible and resistant to wrinkles as long as you'll take the trouble to keep it oiled. Moreover, certain creams can be absorbed by the skin, thus giving you more than surface protection against dryness, tautness, or lines.

Third, make every day moving day for neck muscles. A lazy lack of movement is what contracts that young, fluid line from collar-bone to chin, causes cushions of flesh to sag, and makes creases or pleats in the skin.

But worse than no exercise at all is the wrong kind that jerks or strains muscles - or even the right kind of exercise that you take up with seal and drop, as interest wanes. What happens when you are a light o' love about exercise is that you loosen and lengthen muscles and then abandon them.

So, here is a series of the right kind of exercises to be taken in the right kind of way. Do them nightly.

1. SLIPPERY: Skin should have the slip of a wet seal's for our muscle-moving so after bathing your neck, put on plenty of rich throat cream in brisk upward and outward motions, preliminary to your exercises.

2. ACROBATICS: Be willing to look ugly. Turn neck full left, then right. Easy goes. No jerks allowed. As head pivots, screw up your mouth in same direction. This gives good pull to too rarely-used jaw muscles.

What's America's favorite cake?

Try this Spry Old Fashioned Chocolate Layer Cake

THE cake's so delicate-tasting, the frosting so rich and chocolaty. With purer Spry you get the FULL FLAVOR, not dulled as it might be with ordinary shortenings. Spry cakes are lighter, too, tender and velvety. Yet Spry costs just about half what expensive cake shortening does! Change to Spry.

1 teaspoon vanilla 1 cup sugar

Combine Spry, salt and vanilla. Add sugar gradually and cream until light and fluffy. (So quickly done with triple-creamed Spry!) Add eggs, one at a time, beating thoroughly after

Sift flour and baking powder together 3 times. Add small amounts of flour to creamed mixture, alternately with milk, mixing after each addition until smooth. Pour batter into two 8-inch layer pans greased with Spry. Bake in moderately hot oven (375° F.) 25 minutes. Spread Chocolate Frosting between layers and on top and sides of cake.

Chocolate Frosting

Melt Spry, butter and chocolate together over hot water. Pour hot milk over sugar and stir until sugar is dissolved. Add vanilla and salt. Add chocolate mixture and beat until smooth and thick enough to spread. Makes enough to cover tops and sides of two 8-inch layers.

See what creamy-smooth frosting Spry gives, how it lets the FULL FLAVOR of the other ingredients come through. Use purer Spry for all cakes, frostings, pastry, frying!

Gargle LISTERINE-QUICK!

Prompt germ-killing action on mouth and throat surfaces may head off a serious cold or the sore throat that accompanies it

When somebody has coughed or sneezed in your direction, gargle with Listerine Antiseptic as quickly as you can and continue to use it every few hours. Colds can be contagious. This prompt precaution may spare you a mean cold.

Listerine reaches way back on mouth and throat surfaces and kills millions of germs, the so-called "secondary invaders," that accompany a cold, and are responsible. in the opinion of many noted laryngologists, for so many of the miserable sensations that usually go with it.

Just think! Germ reductions on tissue surfaces have ranged as high as 96.7% even 15 minutes after the gargle, according to scientific tests, and up to 80% an hour after. (See panel below.)

In view of the above you can understand how important it is to gargle immediately when you feel any symptom of a cold. Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, Mo.

NOTE HOW LISTERINE GARGLE REDUCED GERMS

The two drawings illustrate height of range in germ reductions on mouth and throat surfaces in test cases before and after gargling Listering Antiseptic, Fifteen minutes after gargling, germ reductions up to 96.7% were noted; and even one hour after, germs were still reduced as much as 80%.

OR just a moment, when he realized that he had committed murder, Gilbert Logan was panicstricken. His knees went weak, and tears of self-pity burned in his eyes.

Then, suddenly, his mind was clear and cool and as precise in its working as the ticking of a watch.

Why, he was clever, civilized, intelligent; he was Gil Legan, and he knew the answers. What had he to fear from a backwoods law officer like old Clare Beldon?

There wasn't a particle of evidence to connect him with - with this. At least, there wouldn't be when he left. Nobody up here knew about Elsie. Mark Talbott had simply given out the information that his wife had decided not to come north with him this year. So far as the natives knew. Gil Logan and Mark Talbott were still friends.

This part of the north woods was still fairly wild; why, only a year before, a gangster had denned up just a few miles away and it had taken the law a month and more to smoke him out. There were plenty of people who could have killed Mark Talbott. He always carried several hundred dollars on his person, and to some people that was a lot of money.

There was Ben Grear, for example, Ben was the son of the Mrs. Great who came in to take care of Mark's camp. Ben was a sullen fellow with a reform-school record, and was around the place a lot, paddling Mark up and down the river and doing odd jobs.

Swiftly, his teeth clenched, Logan went through the dead man's pockets. leaving a litter of small possessions on the rug. The billfold was in Mark's hip pocket. Logan shucked it of a thick wad of bills, carefully wiped the shiny leather with his handkerchief, and threw it aside. Then he wiped the poker which he had crashed against Mark's head. That was the one thing he must watch: fingerprints. Even a hick north-woods sheriff like Clare Beldon might look for fingerprints.

With painstaking thoroughness, he relived the entire scene, from the moment he had entered the room until the present moment, making sure he had touched nothing else which might take a damning fingerprint.

His visit had been as unpremeditated as it was unwise. He had been driving in the cool evening air when he had suddenly decided to find out just how much Mark knew; to have it out with him, ence and for all. From what Elsie had said, Mark hadn't been sure of anything - just suspicious.

Perhaps, Gil had thought, it might be possible to gless the whole thing over, sell Mark on the idea that he was barking up the wrong tree completely, and thus extricate himself from an awkward situation.

But Mark had shown no signs of friendliness. He had stood there in the doorway, with the lights blazing behind him, and said, crisply and curtly,

"I want to talk to you, Mark," Gil had said earnestly. "You're all wrong about a lot of things, fellow!"

"So?" Mark had hesitated for a moment, and then he had opened the door wider, and permitted Gil to enter the huge living room of the lodge; a room which ran from the front to back of the entire building, with windows looking out across and up the river, and a balcony along one side, serving the second story bedrooms.

But the situation had been impossible from the start, and it had gone from bad to worse. In a blind rage, Gil had ended it by snatching up the poker and bringing it down on Mark's head. Mark had just grunted, and Signal in fallen where he stood, on the big bearskin rug before the fireplace.

There would be no fingerprints. The motive would look like robbery. That would leave him, Gil Logan, who had more money than he could use, completely out of the picture.

But that wasn't enough. Not only must the finger of suspicion not point at him - it must point directly away

Gil strode up and down the room, thinking. The phone on a stand in the corner gave him the idea - perhaps because a modern dial phone seemed so out of place in this barnlike, ornately rustic room.

He glanced in the directory, and swiftly dialed a number. After an interval, Sheriff Clare Beldon's voice came over the wire:

"Beldon speakin'."

"Sheriff, this is Gil Logan." Gil made his voice urgent, shaky. "I'm afraid something has happened to Mark Talbott. We were talking a few minutes ago, when all of a sudden he cried out something. I couldn't catch the words - and then there was a crash and some confused sounds, and then the instrument apparently was replaced, for the dial tone came on again. I rang him and rang him, but there was no answer."

From a distance came the familiar hooting of the streamliner, and automatically Gil glanced at his wrist watch. It was exactly quarter after ten. He held his breath, waiting for the sheriff's reply.

"Sounds bad," Beldon said. "Mark always was a one to pack a wad of bills on him. I'll go right away."

"I'm starting too, Sheriff. You'll beat me there, of course, but I can make it in a quarter of an hour, maybe less."

"I'll be seein' you, then," said the sheriff, and hung up.

Gil looked around the room once more, while the train rumbled across the bridge and on into the night, to make sure there was no vestige of evidence to betray him, and then hurried outside to his car, parked in the gravelled driveway.

Swiftly he drove south along the private road that followed the river, and then turned west on the concrete. Less than half a mile away was the intersection which led to town, four or five miles away - the road by which the sheriff would arrive. Gil sped on for a couple of miles, then he turned off onto a crossroad, switched off his lights and parked, out of sight of the highway.

Fifteen minutes, he had told the sheriff, and it would have taken mighty fast driving to do it in that length of time, for there was no direct highway between his place and Mark's. As the crow flies, as the railroad ran through the bush, it was only three or four miles, but by road it was at least fifteen. From Gil's place the dirt road ran south and west until it intersected with the main highway; then it was a straight run almost due east to just this side of the river upon which Mark's camp was located. The two reads and the railroad made a triangle, the railroad being by far the shortest leg.

It seemed like hours before it was time to start back, but Gil forced himself to wait. At last he drove slowly to the highway, waited until there were no headlights in sight, and then swung on to the concrete and put the accelerator all the way down.

The sheriff met him at the door. "You were right, Mr. Logan," he said grimly. "Somethin' did happen. He's dead."

"Dead?"

"Yes. Head bashed in with the poker."

Gil. stared around the room. There was a big divan in front of the fireplace; the body wasn't visible from where he stood.

"Where?" he asked shakily. "Where is he, Sheriff?'

"Over there. In front of the fire-Slowly Gil crossed the room. He saw Talbott's body, and looked away. "That's - awful," he said, "Poor

"He was robbed," said the sheriff. "Pockets turned inside out, and his wallet stripped clean."

Gil dropped into a chair, one facing away from the fireplace. "Imagine killing a man for a hundred dollars or so! Who do you think it was? That jailbird Grear boy?"

"There's some pretty low characters in this world," Beldon said. He kept on walking around the room aimlessly - trying to act like a real detective in search of clues, Gil thought disdainfully.

The old boy would do his best, of course. He had liked Mark. Mark had loved to hear the sheriff tell his varns about the old days, when this country was really wild; about his days in the logging camps, and on the railroad, and the time he went to California to visit his sister, and had a chance to buy for a couple of hundred dollars a piece of land that sold for "nigh onto a quarter-million" a few years later.

Mark and Gil and the sheriff had sat for hours in this very room while Mark led the old man on and on with his wild tales.

"Funny," commented the old man, "that Mrs. Talbott's picture ain't on the mantel. Remember that big photo he always kept there? And it ain't anywhere else in the room."

"That's right; I hadn't noticed. Maybe he broke it."

'Maybe. He could 'a had it fixed, though; there's a store in town that does framing. He seemed to think a lot of that picture. And besides, he used to have three or four enlarged snapshots of the two of them fishing and swimming and things like that, here between the windows. They're gone, too."

"So what? I'm not worrying about pictures and snapshots. What I want to know is, who killed him?"

"I guess you're right, at that," sighed the sheriff, sitting down opposite Gil. "We better get our facts together. Let's see —"

He fished out a soiled envelope and a stubby pencil. "When you was phoning I heard the streamliner whistlin'."

For just an instant, Gil froze with fear; then he remembered that the streamliner went by his place, too. But a little thing like a train whistle, overheard on the phone, could have put him in the chair!

"I was so rattled by your call I didn't think to look at my watch. Just what time does she go by your place, Mr. Logan?"

"Ten twelve," Gil said promptly.
"I almost always glance at my watch, just to see if she's on time. She always is, within a minute or so, anyway."

"And how long before you called me was it, would you say, that you were talking to Mr. Talbott? I want to fix the time of the murder, if I can."

Gil frowned, pretending to concentrate.

"Well, when I heard his shout, and the crash, I listened for — oh, maybe half a minute. Then the phone was hung up, and I dialed his number again, twice. I'd say that I was talking to you within three minutes, four at the most, after it happened."

"That would make it eight or nine minutes after ten. Now that we've got that much settled, we'll have to fish around for the reason."

"Haven't you already established the motive? Didn't you say he was robbed?"

"He was robbed right enough," Beldon said thoughtfully. "Only—that diamond ring of his was plain as the nose on your face, the way he was laying, and I'd say it was worth a lot more than all the money he was likely to have on him. Seems to me I would have taken that, too—if I was so hard up I'd kill a man for his cash."

"Probably the murderer was rattled, and didn't notice the ring."

"Maybe so." The sheriff glanced up sharply.

"Have you any idea why Mrs. Talbott didn't come up here this year?"
"Why no. Just what Mark told me:

that she had other plans."
"I see. They were getting along all right? No trouble between them, I mean?"

"I really couldn't say; after all, that's the sort of thing a man doesn't talk about much." What was the old fool driving at? Gil was beginning to feel uneasy — caught and bound in an invisible snare.

Beldon rose wearily. "I never was much good beatin' around the bush. Look here, Mr. Logan, Mr. Talbott's wife doesn't come with him this year. He takes down every picture of her, like he doesn't want to even be reminded of her — yet he was always plain crazy about her, and jealous of every little thing. And I've seen the two of you makin' eyes when you thought no one was lookin' — you and Mrs. Talbott. It seems to me—"

"Just what sort of ridiculous story are you trying to cook up?" Gil sprang out of his chair and almost stumbled, for his legs had suddenly lost their strength. "If you're trying to say that —"

"Sit down, Logan, sit down." The sheriff's voice was calm, but cold as ice, and his eyes had a snaky look. "All that's just guesswork, although it can be checked, later on, to establish a motive, as you was sayin'—a few minutes ago.

"But there's one thing that ain't guesswork, Logan; that train whistle. You didn't call me from your place — you called from right here in this very room!"

"You're crazy!" snapped Gil, feeling himself go sick and helpless inside. "Sure you heard the train whistle; it always whistles for the crossing right back of my place, a couple of hundred yards."

"Sure; I know. For the crossing. But she wasn't whistling for a crossing when I heard her; she was whistling for the drawbridge, and there's no bridge on the line nearer to your camp than the one over the river right out there!

"Different whistle signals mean different things to a railroader, Logan, and I rode the crummy for quite a few

"And don't look so wild and mad, because it ain't goin' to do any good. Your number's up!"

Gil nodded weakly. He hadn't realized he was looking wild or mad, as the old man put it.

He didn't feel that way. He didn't feel anything at all . . . Just numb all over. . . .

FOOD FOR THE GENERAL

Dinner for 75 — at a moment's notice! Such an order can't faze Mrs. George C. Marshall, wife of U.S. general No. 1. Here's how she does it

by Grace Turner

BREEZY day last summer; the United States still formally at peace but preparing for possible war. The General and his wife go from Washington to Fire Island, just off New York's Long Island. On the sands, boys are flying kites. The General's wife looks at them — smiles inscrutably. The General asks what she is smiling at.

"The kites," she answers him.

"The boys, you mean?" He is puzzled.

"No," she says. "The tails on the kites. There they are, never knowing where they're going, but always trailing along — just like officers' wives."

"Well," says the General quickly, "how far could a kite fly without a tail?"

Here, in short, is a disarming candid-camera view of our Army's big man — Chief of Staff, General George C. Marshall — and his wife.

General Marshall is noted in Washington for always taking people to lunch or dinner at his own house, instead of whisking them off to the Club as most officials and officers do. The reason is Mrs. Marshall — slender, pretty, a wife, who has learned how to serve lunch or dinner to any number of people on a quarter of an hour's notice.

"The General's secretary telephones when he leaves the office and tells me how many he is bringing. That gives me fifteen minutes," Mrs. Marshall says. "One day they phoned that the General was bringing a visiting Governor and about two friends. But when they walked in, there were 75 people — the Governor's entourage had come along, too."

But Mrs. Marshall does not think "rising to an occasion" like this is wonderful at all. "All Army wives do it," she says.

Mrs. Marshall's secret of being always ready is only as hidden as her emergency cupboards and shelves — stacked with the making of an unexpected meal.

With a house geared all the time for service like this, Mrs. Marshall has time and unruffled spirits to be a good companion in every hour the General can share with her.

When Mrs. Marshall gave us her pet recipes, she recommended especially the soufflé-like baked hominy grits, and the tomatogreen-pepper aspic — a "wonderful recipe."

THE RECIPES

HOT CHERRY SAUCE

1 (No. 21/2) can pitted black Dash of salt cherries 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon 1 tablespoon sugar 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg

AFGHANISTAN weddings don't go in for much fuss or feathers. If a man sees a girl who suits him, he simply cuts off a lock of her hair or throws a sheet over her headand that's all there is to it. She's his.

BEST MAN at a wedding in Greece is, in one way, the lucky man. He gets the bride's first kiss!

RICH HUSBANDS are a must in India. If a girl fails to find one she is married to a bunch of flowers! Then the "husband" is dropped into a well. And presto! the bride is a widowwith the privilege of marrying again. For some reason, the "second" husband doesn't have to be rich.

PRINCESS MARY, daughter of Henry VIII, had one of the smallest wedding rings ever worn when she was married to the Dauphin of France. The bride was two years old - the groom, nine months!

THEME SONG in an Armenian wedding might easily be "I Married an Angel": part of the bride's wedding costume is a pair of cardboard wings covered with feathers which she wears fastened to her head.

The good news of skating on the Reflecting Pool spread rapidly. In a couple of days it was almost a case of standing room only, as shown in this view from the Lincoln Memorial Terrace.

Miss Dorothy Snell, Washington's own champion figure skater, cuts a few on the Reflecting Pool ice. In this stagg jump there's a slight illusion of going over the Monument, in the shadowy distance.

It seems that before long this youngster at Children's Hospital will be riding a real bicycle. This bike, however, is stationary and is used as an exerciser to strengthen the legs.

THIS little 7-year-old, sitting in the Whirlpool Hubbard tank, is one of the patients at Children's Hospital here that you'll be helping, through the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, by joining in the celebration of the President's birthday at the Birthday Balls next Friday night, January 30. The hospital's maintenance of the most advanced treatment and clinical equipment means that the little paralysis patients there are given the very best chance of recovery for full and useful lives.

War Booms Flag Business

N contrast with many businesses that have been hard hit as the Nation swings into a 100 per cent war economy, the flag-making business is hitting a new all-time peak. That's the story at all flag factories, and these pictures taken at one of the smaller ones, the Dettra Flagg Company at Oaks, Pa., illustrate the boom times.

Another Vonds Bride-to-be

EUGENIA J. LOUGHLIN-

Vivacious, lovely-to-look-at Eugenia Loughlin met her fiancé at a party in Houston when she was visiting there. Four days later they considered themselves engaged!

Eugenia has a true SOFT-SMOOTH Pond's complexion-fresh, sweet, pink and white as apple blossoms! "I'm absolutely devoted to Pond's Cold Cream," she says. "It's so silky and light, and keeps my skin feeling so soft and clean."

It's no accident so many lovely engaged girls use Pond's!

NEW YORK-TEXAS ROMANCE

A New York City girl, daughter of Mrs. Aubrey Culberson Loughlin, Eugenia is popular in Houston where she frequently visits at the home of her mother's family.

This beautiful Pond's Bride-to-Be will be married this winter, after her fiancé completes his officer's training at Fort Riley.

She's ENGAGED! She uses Pond's!

See how Eugenia Loughlin's SOFT-SMOOTH Glamour Care will help your skin ...

1. Eugenia SLATHERS Pond's Cold smitch of soil and leave her fine-Cream thick over her lovely face and throat. Pats it on briskly with quick little upward pats. This softens dirt and old make-up. Then she tissues off the cream. "I adore the cool, clean feel Pond's gives my face," she says.

2. Eugenia RINSES with lots more Pond's. Tissues off cream again. This second time helps clean off every little textured skin flower-soft and dewy.

You'll love Eugenia's soft-smooth glamour care with Pond's Cold Cream. Use it every night-and for daytime clean-ups. See your skin look softer, smoother, prettier. You'll know then why so many more women and girls use Pond's than any other face cream at any price. Buy a jar today-at any beauty counter. Five popular-priced sizes. The most economical—the lovely big jars.

HER STAR-SAPPHIRE and Diamond Engagement Ring is perfectly beautiful. The platinum and baguette diamond setting was designed by her fiancé. "I guess Borden and I made over a hundred sketches for it," she says.

TO THESE

Clifton FADIMAN

He is not only the wittiest master-of-ceremonies in radio's history, he is also Literary Editor of The New Yorker. He has edited a new anthology, Reading I've Liked, which is now to be found on all the best-seller lists.

Carl VAN DOREN

Editor of The Cambridge History of American Literature, winner of the Pulitzer Prize for his best-selling biography, Benjamin Franklin, he has just published The Secret History of the American Revolution.

Sinclair LEWIS

America's winner of the Nobel Prize in Literature, the author of such great and famous books as Main Street, Babbitt, Elmer Gantry and Arrowsmith, Mr. Sinclair Lewis is now on a country-wide lecturing tour.

Alexander WOOLLCOTT.

The man who, with his "Town Crier" program, gave radio its first literate broadcasts; wit, raconteur and critic of good books, he has just returned from delivering a series of eight broadcasts for the B.B.C. in England.

This is because they want to tell you about some unusual, entertaining, beautiful books which you may now purchase for only

Doren and Alexander Woollcott want to get in touch with you. They want to share some of their favorite books with you. They want to invite you into a new world of reading pleasure.

In short—they want to tell you about some entertaining and excellent books . . . books which they are quite sure you have never read before.

You may ask:—"What kind of books are they? If they are so good, how is it possible that I have missed them?"

Some of America's BEST alreadypublished fiction and biography

Well, it is possible because of a curious circumstance: this is, that some of the best books sometimes fail to come to your attention when they are first published. Lost Horizon, just for one example, was quietly gathering dust in the bookstores until Alexander Woollcott talked about it over the radio. Of Human Bondage was virtually unknown for years until Carl Van Doren joined with a few others in acclaiming it as the masterpiece it is.

There are many reasons why fine books do not at first gain recognition. A book may lack proper advertising or publicity. Or, a book may be published at a time of world crisis when people are too worried about the news to feel like reading. Or, again, a book may appear when the reading public has all it can do to handle one of those "runaway best-sellers" like Gone With The Wind or Anthony Adverse.

Now, these four men know about this state of affairs. It troubles them. They want to do something about it. For they know that, among these

"undiscovered" books, are some wonderfully delightful ones; books everybody can enjoy; books which would give you unforgettable pleasure.

That is why they have formed The Readers Club

It is in the spirit of the man who has made an exciting discovery, and wants to tell all his good friends about it, that these four men have formed The Readers Club. Now, every month, Mr. Fadiman, Mr. Lewis, Mr. Van Doren and Mr. Woollcott vote to select one of their special favorites. This book is then re-published and offered to you for only $1.00.

Consider what this means to you! Here are books chosen by four men who know a great deal more about good books than most people—and you get these books in handsome, new editions for just $1.

You can be very sure that when Mr. Fadiman, Mr. Lewis, Mr. Van Doren and Mr. Woollcott—all four of them!—recommend a book to you, it is worth reading, worth owning. These books are a good, permanent investment for your library.

Handsome, well-made books ornaments for your bome

The Readers Clus editions are in no sense of the word cheap reprints or pocket editions. Each book is a large, beautifully-made book—a fine example of the bookmaker's art. Each is designed by one of America's foremost book designers. Each book is set up in new type—printed from new plates on fine quality paper and bound in staunch cloth. Actually, because so large a quantity of books is printed (there are already far more than 100,000 members of the Club) it is logical that the new edition at $1 should often prove a better-made book than the original edition at $2.50 or $3. Yet, these books cost you only $1! And most important—

Buy ONLY the books you want -for one dollar

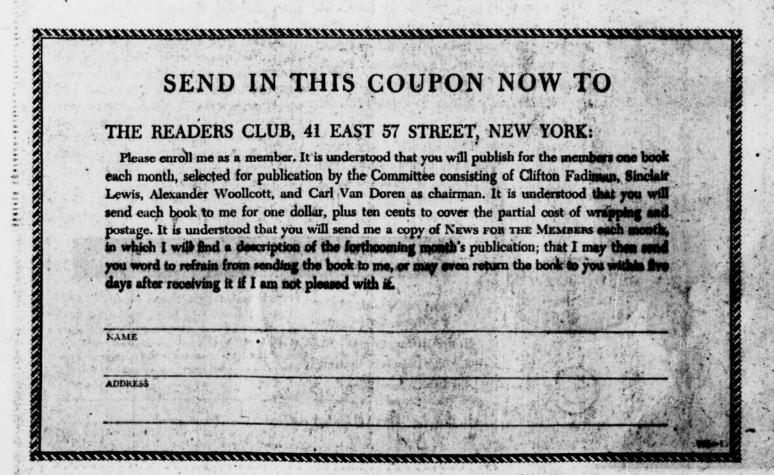

The four men tell you about the book they select by sending you, with their compliments, a little magazine. In this magazine the book is fully described. If after reading the description it seems to you that they are right, that you will enjoy having this book, you will receive it during the coming month. If it seems to you that they are wrong, that you won't enjoy it, you may reject the book in advance.

But more than that—each book is guaranteed. Even after it reaches you, if you find it does not please you, you may return it within five days. That shows you how sure these four men are that the books they choose are books which you will want. They take the risk. As for you, you can't lose.

Thus in this new kind of book club you do not obligate yourself to buy books you do not want. You do not even obligate yourself to buy a specified number of books a year. All you really do is to give your name and address to these four famous men so that they can find you and tell you about their choices.

Send your name and address to these four famous men

You would be wise, indeed, to send in the Coupon immediately so that these four famous men may have your name and address. It is likely then that you will find yourself reading better books than you have ever read before, enjoying the reading of books more than you ever did before, and all for one dollar a book.
