Grand Assault in Egypt Started, Rome Indicates

By the Associated Press.
CAIRO, June 27.—British headquarters reported today that Axis forces of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel had moved up to within 15 miles of Matruh, about 115 miles into Egypt from the Libyan frontier. (The Italian high command said Axis motorized forces "have made contact with the defenses of Matruh," indicating that Marshal Rommel had opened his grand assault in the four-day-old battle of Egypt.

Moreover, it was announced in Alexandria, less than 200 miles behind the defense lines of Lt. Gen. Neil M. Ritchie's 8th Army, that speedy American-built motor torpedo boats had arrived to augment the British fleet.

Military observers said they had three possible courses: 1. A frontal attack on Matruh, a fortified port linked to Alexandria by rail as well as sea supply lines. 2. An attempt to negotiate the hill-rimmed salt and sand marshes of the vast Qattara depression, farther inland. 3. To swing south toward the Nile by way of the Siwa Oasis. The British ruled out none of these possibilities, but said that—on the basis of present dispositions-

Helpful to British. "The Qattara depression is a banana-shaped bowl extending neary 200 miles northeastward from the Siwa Oasis area to a point only 40 miles from the coast. Below sea level, its loose, shifting in the Washington area over the sands make tank warfare virtually impossible. Its advantage to the British is that they are able to mass the bulk of their forces in the area between the depression and Matruh, counting on the depression to protect their left flank. If the Axis forces do not choose to attack in the coastal zone they will run up against the natural defenses of the depression or be forced to travel hundreds of waterless miles out of their way in a circle into the desert southward.

Streets Cleared Quickly in New Day Raid Test

Defense Officials Call Drill Here 'Much Better'

Activities in this busy war capital came to a dead halt for 15 minutes today in a practice air-raid drill which civilian defense officials described as "much better" than the first full-scale daylight test held early this month.

Air raild sirens wailed their warnings at 10.05 a.m. and the streets and sidewalks cleared quickly. Traffic halted instantly except for an occasional motorist failing to hear the warning. Street cars stopped whereever they were and in many instances the passengers were evacu-

Taxi Drivers Denounce Hankin Charges of 'Criminal Element'

PUC Chairman Asked In Statement if He Understands Own Rates

Edwin A. Glenn, president of United Taxicab Drivers, Inc., today issued a statement denouncing published remarks by Chairman Gregory Hankin of the Public Utilities Commission about a "criminal element" among Washington's taxi drivers in connection with the strike last Wednesday against the commission's new rate schedule.

Mr. Hankin was quoted as saying he had heard reports some drivers were charging either the new or old rates, whichever happened to be the higher for the particular trip.

Mr. Glenn said he was not sure Mr. Hankin himself understood the new rate structure, citing a statement attributed to Mr. Hankin in which he said Mr. Hankin gave the wrong rate under his new schedule for a designated trip which was itself impossible because it would have ended under the Cap-Itol Building Glenn's Statement.

Mr. Glenn's statement follows in

"Today the chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, Mr. Gregory Hankin, issued a statement to the newspapers in which he openly accuses the taxicab drivers of criminal practices. A few days ago, this same "public servant" through the same newspapers, accused the taxicab drivers of being Axis agents, and endeavoring to sabotage the transportation of the Capital City of the United States. I am very much inclined to believe that the only place where the transportation Into Political Role much inclined to believe that the of the District of Columbia is liable to sabotage is from the office of the chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, in the District Building. As far as the taxicab industry is concerned, there is no sabotage there.

We say that if you wish to use the new rates for a few days, to try to see if you can use them and understand them. do so. But you must use them for the entire day, and not for a same manner.

"This organization, the United Taxicap Drivers, Inc., does not believe there is any attempt on part of the drivers to 'gyp' the riding public, and we certainly would want any such action by any driver properly prosecuted.

"The thousands of visitors to Washington tell us that the taxicab drivers of Washington are the best the most courteous, and the most considerate drivers they meet anywhere, and that we render better service at a rate lower than elsewhere in a city of like size. We would like to refer Mr. Hankin to the writings of a noted columnist in today's paper, under the heading of 'These Charming People.

"Mr. Richardson, former president of the United Taxicab Drivers, was disclosed here today. Inc., resigned this noon at a special meeting of the Board of Directors and was replaced by Edwin A. Glenn, former president and chairman of the Committee on Public Relations."

Tire Sales Legitimate, Hundley Claims, as Trial Is Begun

Accused Dealer Contends Casings Sold Had Mark Of Ration Inspectors

Hiram Ben Hundley, tire dealer here accused of selling new tires in violation of Federal rationing regulations, disposed of stock marked by inspectors acting for the District Rationing Board as used tires and therefore salable, according to the defense outline offered late yesterday as his trial opened in District

The contention was advanced by Defense Counsel Henry I. Quinn, after Assistant United States Attorney John L. Laskey, in charge of the prosecution, outlined the charges contained in the 12-count indictment returned against Mr. Hundley in April. asserted the tires sold were new and declared there is no provision in the law for the inspection marking which the defense says was authorization for the

The indictment charged falsification of records and unlawful sales to the Diamond and Premier Purchasing Cos., affiliates of taxi concerns, and to The Evening Star. Sales Reviewed.

Mr. Quinn, who is associated in the case with Attorney Louis Ottenberg, told the jury that sales, in the early part of this year, were made to "a captain of White House police" and to "Government officials." The tires, he said, were "changeovers"-that is, tires turned in by owners who wanted other types for their cars. He said the authority for the inspection was given by a rationing board official by the name of Brady who was later identified as Eugene T. Brady, former chief clerk of the board.

After the opening statements, cessed the trial until Monday morn-

Mr. Laskey took up the indictment, count by count, in detailing the

He said that after tires had been "trozen" by the Government on December 12, Mr. Hundley, in reporting new stocks, showed 5,005 tires on hand when he had "at least 159 more." Further, he said, the defendant maintained a "false running inventory" that showed new tires as used tires. Under the law, a tire is "used" if it has gone more than 1,000 miles

Then, the prosecutor continued. by the use of a trick device, by a false tire inspection mark" the dealer "represented to purchasers that the tires had been passed by a Government inspector-had been initialed for sale by a Government inspector." This marking, it was explained, "in most instances" consisted of a yellow "O. K. J. M. C." in a bond sales rally, with music nection with the German defense inscribed on each tire.

In this connection, Mr. Laskey pointed out that the law makes no provision for such an inspection. for replacements

Invoices Cited. Alleging that the Hundley company had to account for the disposal of certain new tires, Mr. Laskey said one invoice showed a sale of 288 for "close to $4,000" to the Walton Tire Co. of 639 Broad street. Philadelphia, and that "there was no Walton Tire Co. and had not been for some time.' Replying to this charge Mr. Quinn said that this transaction took place here on February 13, when a truck bearing Pennsylvania license plates came to a Hundley establishment and a man representing himself to be from the Walton Co. purchased the tires for $3,700. In sketching his defense, Mr. Quinn described Mr. Hundley as "a man of little education who built up a large business." He employed men to compile his records. Mr Quinn continued, "and if there were any mistakes in any reports, or in any invoices, the mistakes were honest ones, liable to occur in any large business.'

Explaining how the tires in question came to be sold, Mr. Quinn said that Mr. Brady, the rationing official, called up and asked Mr. Hundley "if he had any good used tires for sale.'

Vice President's Vote Breaks Tie on Giving Agency $76,529,800

By J. A. O'LEARY.

The fate of the Civilian Conservation Corps rested today in the hands of Senate and House conferees, after Vice President Wallace gave the agency a new lease on life yesterday afternoon by breaking a tie Senate vote to put funds for the agency in the Labor-Security supply bill. The House turned down a budget estimate of approximately $80,000,-000 to keep the CCC going, but voted $500,000 to liquidate the camps as non-essential to the war.

After an all-day battle of words between economy advocates and administration forces the Senate divided, 32 to 32, on a motion by Senator McCarran, Democrat, of Nevada to restore $76.529,800 to keep 350 camps operating for another sideration by the conferees. When the clerk announced the stations had swelled the total by result of the roll call. Mr. Wallace cast his vote. A few moments later he again broke a tie on a technical Coinage Subcommittee investigating parliamentary motion, designed to prevent the economy bloc from asking for reconsideration.

Churchill Visit To Fort Suggested By Roosevelt

Prime Minister Churchill told President Roosevelt that he was most impressed by "the faces of the co-pilot, San Diego, Calif. men" during his review of American troops in simulated battle action at Fort Jackson, S. C., last Wednesday, Stephen T. Early, White House secretary, disclosed that the trip bardier, Portland, Oreg. was arranged Tuesday at the suggestion of Mr. Roosevelt, who told Mr. Churchill he hoped that he would be able to see personally one of the great divisions of the American Army in action before he returned to London.

Both the President and Prime Minister, Mr. Early said, were pleased by the co-operation of the American press and radio during Mr. Churchill's visit.

Repairing • Renovizing • Modernizing Homes

"We must be vigilant"

That is a timely patriotic song—a caution to watch out and not let your house go into decline. Yes, there are many priorities that entail restrictions. But they make it all the more important you should keep what you have in good condition. Repairs should be made promptly.

Many features of modernizing can be undertaken that will make the home more livable. If you have excess room it can be converted into rentable apartments, relieving the housing situation.

But consider this-because of the critical fuel situation you should have us look after the doors and windows-see that the cracks and crevices are caulked tight; provide storm windows, etc.—that every unit of heat is made to count. It would be a wise thing to let us. INSULATE the home-not expensive, done as we do it.

Jury Clears Three Doctors Accused After Man Died

A finding in favor of three docors connected with Group Health Association was returned by a District Court jury yesterday in a civil suit in which the doctors were charged with failing to give proper treatment to a man who later died.

The defendants were Drs. Louis B. Bachrach, Charles J. Albright and Gerald Long. Defense Attor-ney H. Mason Welch presented evidence to refute the contention that they were negligent in treatment of Monte R. Kennedy, who died in 1939. Group Health Association, a co-operative of Federal Government employes which offers low-cost medical service, also was a defendant, but was cleared Monday by a directed verdict.

The suit, for $10,000, was brought by Mr. Kennedy's wife, Mrs. Beatrice Kennedy, as administratrix of his estate. Mr. Kennedy, a Forestry Service employe, died following an appendectomy The jury's finding upheld the contention that appropriate treatment was given Mr. Kennedy considering the symptoms and previous medical history of the patient.

The trial was held before Justice Jennings Bailey. The jury deliberated about 4 hours.

Production Record

As President Roosevelt aptly expressed it, there is little to give aid and comfort to the enemy in the production figures released at the White House yesterday. Hitler and Hirohito have been provided with convincing evidence of what one despised democracy can do when it gets fighting mad. The totals announced by the President reflect the reaction of America's manufacturers, technicians and workers to Japan's treachery at Pearl Harbor. That "sneak punch" served as nothing else could have done to unify labor, management and other diverse elements into a determined army bent on attaining "impossible" production goals. Certainly the Axis must have regarded as impossible the 50,000-plane objective announced by the President in his message to Congress of May 16, 1940, and the 60,000-plane goal fixed in his message of January 6 last. It is not surprising that many persons, even in this country, regarded even the first figure as fantastic, in view of the fact that at that time our aircraft industry was turning out only 4,500 planes a year. When it is considered that America produced 4,000 planes during the month of May of this year, the progress which has been made in the past two years assumes startling proportions. At this rate we would produce 48,000 planes in 1942. But May's rate undoubtedly will be exceeded in the months to come, for rate is steadily rising.

Similarly encouraging are the figures on output of tanks, artillery and machine guns. More than 1,500 tanks, 2,000 pieces of artillery and anti-tank guns (not including antiaircraft guns and guns mounted in tanks) and 50,000 machine guns came off the assembly lines in May. And new plants are getting into production almost with every passing week. Ford's Willow Run bomber factory, largest in the world, has just begun operation

The President's aim for 1943 is 125,000 planes, 75,000 tanks, 35,000 anti-aircraft guns and 10,000,000 tons of merchant shipping. In view of what has been accomplished to date, who can say that such totals are fantastic? To attain them, however, will require the best efforts of every one concerned. There can be not the slightest letup in determination, in sacrifice and in hard work by any group or individual. Rather, there must be even greater exertion and even greater sacrifices by every American. There will be need for more manpower, for more materials, for more money and for more of the "will to win." The task that lies ahead is great, but even Hitler must have begun to realize that it will be done. Those 1,000-plane raids on Bremen, Essen and Cologne have given him a preview of things to United Nations is loosed against him and his partners.

Dunbar Unforgotten

There are many reasons why the people of Washington should wish to remember Paul Laurence Dunbar. He was a resident of the District of Columbia in 1897 and 1898 while serving as an assistant in the Library of Congress, and some of his noblest verses were written here during that time

Much more important, however, is the fact that Dunbar was an authentic American singer and therefore enjoyed by birth the right to be appreciated in the Capital of the United States. His life began at Dayton, Ohio, June 27, 1872, and ended in the same place. February 9, 1906 Petween those two datesin thirty-four years-he won for himself as much immortality as any modern bard could hope to gain by the exercise of his art. His achievement is evidence of the reality of opportunity in a democracy.

It likewise may be cited to indicate the contribution which citizens of African descent are prepared to make to American civilization. Dunbar's father was a slave in Kentucky who escaped to Canada and at the outbreak of the Civil War joined the 55th Massachusetts Infantry. The poet's mother also was a chattel in her childhood and youth. No individual, however, could have wanted a richer endowment than Paul had from his parents. He was by nature gentle, modest, earnest and sincere. The one advantage that he lacked most notably was that of robust always, and it probably was largely his intellectual energy that gained him the friendship of such leaders as Frederick Douglass, Dr. Henry A. Tobey, Charles Thatcher, James A. Herne, Major J. B. Pond, Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll and William Dean Howells. How honorably he merited their favor is a matter of history. Few literary characters have been at once closer to the people and more highly esteemed by the cultural aristocracy. Certainly, no other poet more devotedly strove to express the spirit of humanity.

Dunbar would be seventy today if he were still alive. It must ever be cause for profound regret that he was granted so brief a span for the making of music so true and pure.

Sales Tax Needed

In most respects, the new tax bill which the Ways and Means Committee has prepared for submission to the House is a measure in which the committee members may take justifiable pride, and as a result of the committee's efforts several of the original tax proposals have been netably improved.

Among these might be mentioned the decision to authorize a refund of a portion of corporate excess profits after the war is over and to eliminate the requirement for mandatory joint returns by married couples. The refund plan, which has the effect of lowering the excess profits tax to 80 per cent, although it will be levied at the 94 per cent level for immediate purposes, was approved after war production officials had warned that maintenance of the tax at the higher figure, without any kind of relief, might be expected to interfere with the war program. Undoubtedly it would have weakened the incentive for prudent management and impaired the financial capacity of corporations to make post-war adjustments, but the committee plan for a refund tends to meet these objections. There is also good reason to suppose that the committee acted wisely in eliminating the mandatory joint returns provision. Whatever may be thought of this device as a revenue-raising measure, there are many sound objections to it, and there is no doubt that it would have precipitated an extremely bitter fight in Congress, which might well have delayed indefinitely the passage of the bill.

The elimination of these items however, serves to underscore the one outstanding deficiency of the tax bill-namely, that it will not raise the total of revenue so urgently needed in time of war. Adoption of officials have said the production | the refund plan, making it necessary to treat excess profits receipts above the 80 per cent level as a loan, and the dropping of the joint return proposal will reduce total revenue by about $1,300,000,000. Even if the estimated receipts from a 94 per cent profits tax be treated in their entirety as revenue, the bill would raise only a little under $6,000,000,000 in new revenue-$2,700.000,000 less than the amount requested by the

> This shortcoming, coupled with the anticipated delay in final enactment of the bill and the disappointing progress in War bond sales, will operate to the serious detriment of the Government's effort to curb inflation. One of the main proposed phases of this program has been the drawing off of excess purchasing power through drastic wartime taxes. The main purpose of the tax program in this respect is to discourage purchases of scarce goods by siphoning off increased earnings which might otherwise be used in competitive buying. Yet the committee-largely because of the unsympathetic attitude of the administration-has refused to sanction any kind of a general sales tax, which is probably the best type of anti-inflationary levy because its effect is felt at the moment of purchase.

In view of the undoubted need for a stiffer tax bill and the undeniable come, when the full might of the efficiency of the sales tax in any program against inflation, it is to be hoped that the House will add this type of levy to the committee's bill when it is brought to the floor. If there be concern about the possibility of an adverse public reaction in an election year, it might be well to remember that the voters will be hurt much more by a runaway price advance than by a reasonable sales tax.

Transportation Problem

A survey in ninety-three cities just completed by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States reveals a highly disappointing lack of progress in solving the Nation's mass transportation problems. The study discloses appreciable progress in the effort to avoid exaggerated peaks and valleys in the mass movement of workers by staggering hours, but results have been almost negative in dealing with the more important problem of encouraging multiple use of private automobiles. The chamber admits that data on this phase is incomplete, especially for smaller communities, but the showing made by a large number of those reporting leaves much to be desired. Just two cities are able to quote definite figures. From Baltimore, it is reported that a car-sharing program worked out at the Glenn Martin plant has increased the persons per car from 2.6 to 4.1. In Des Moines, the load to and from a war plant is 2.5, and is 1.7 in and out of the business district. Several other cities report satisfying progress in this direction, but more than a score are in the "survey" or "promotion" tage, which prevails here, and about plant, the chamber says, 83.8 per cent of the employes ride in private cars. Now a "survey is in progress" with a view to transporting five passengers to the car, and, concurrently, to extending the plan to thirty-six other war plants. The program, incidentally, was given a boost by a Michigan Supreme Court decision holding a group-riding driver is not liable for injury to passengers. In Canton, another reporting point, 4,000 persons drive to the city daily, but only 15 per cent double up.

Rationing authorities have made vigorous efforts to furnish tires and gasoline to "essential" workers at the expense of those who neither need nor seek to use their cars daily, but the chamber survey does not indicate that the beneficiaries of this policy are doing much in return to help the situation. Until there is a change in this respect, there should be less talk about requisitioning the tires of "non-essential" users.

Eastern Front

Whatever may be the military significance of the siege of Sevastopol, there seems to be no doubt that the German attack southeast of Kharkov is of major strategic importance. Moscow stresses the strength of the German forces and admits the loss of Kupyansk, an important railway junction on the line running north from Rostov to the upper Don. This line was cut by the Germans in their big drive last autumn, but the Russians soon recovered it and have held it through the winter as their main communication behind their southern front. If the Berlin claim to have captured a second railway junction point at Izyum, some thirty miles south of Kupyansk, is correct, the Russians have likewise lost the end of a cross line which served as the chief feeder for Timoshenko's thrust at Kharkov a month ago.

By this latest advance of some sixty miles, the Germans for the first time have broken ground not covered by the high mark of their drive last autumn. Incidentally, the salient which Timoshenko drove into the German front southwest of Kharkov has been abolished. With their lines thus improved and straightened, the Germans are now in a position to drive for the line of the middle Don River, which lies less than 150 miles beyond.

The big River Don in its lower reaches makes a sharp eastward bend before turning sharp westward again and emptying into the Sea of Azov at Rostov. The Russians will thus fighting with their backs to a broad stream with few bridges. That would be a replica of their situation | internment camp. last autumn when they defended the Nevertheless, Timoshenko can be depended on to resist vigorously, because the eastern elbow of the Don is only about 50 miles from the Volga, mightiest of Russian rivers, and in that space lies a region of heavy industry centering around the city of Stalingrad. Lastly, Rostov would then be dangerously outflanked and could be assailed by the Germans from three sides.

The heroic defense of Sevastopol continues amazingly, yet it is difficult to see how the Crimean naval base can resist much longer against sledge-hammer assaults and bombardments of incredible intensity which shake the windows of Turkish towns 200 miles across the intervening stretch of the Black Sea. The fall of Sevastopol would compel the Russian Black Sea fleet to retire eastward and would probably permit the Germans to use the western half of the Black Sea for water-borne transport, thus greatly easing their communications problem.

By and large, the picture on the eastern front is not a cheering one. The Germans seem to have concentrated vast forces along the whole southern segment and to be expending them in a mighty effort whose strategic aim is not yet fully disclosed. It remains to be seen whether the Germans are strong enough to extend their offensive in the central and northern sectors, from Moscow to Leningrad, or whether they have been so weakened by a year of terrific attrition that an all-out offensive along the entire eastern front is no longer practicable. That is a question which the ensuing weeks should answer.

Dozens of Cousins

A specialty of some parts of the South, every bit as distinctive as sugar cane or cotton, is "kinnery." Other parts of the country may not go far beyond grandparents, in either conversation or knowledge, and first cousins are often a practical limit of relationship, but in the South it is a mighty poor amateur genealogist who cannot name all his fifth cousins, even those twice removed.

But for really bringing out cousins by the dozens and dozens and more dozens, the will of the late Mary White set a new record. "To each of my cousins, however remote, I bequeath a thousand dollars," it read, the money to come out of a half million dollar estate, thus allowing for 500 cousins. An ample figure? Hardly. No less than 2,000 cousins showed up. With far more cousins than thousand dollar bills available, some sort of rationing was obviously needed. The Court of Appeals, sitting as the ration board, performed this service. Uncle Sam, the universal cousin who gets first call on inheritance taxes, was not forgotten. and after that, five first cousins shared the remainder. Of Stars, Men And Atoms

Notebook of Science Progress In Laboratory, Field And Study

By Thomas R. Henry.

The sun will eat itself up in about 10.000.000,000 years.

Apparently it already has existed about a fourth of its life span.

Such is the latest estimate of Dr. H. A Bethe of Cornell University, who first propounded about five years ago the "carbon cycle" theory to account for the titanic output of solar light and heat. This seemingly has been going on for about 2,000,000,000 years with no perceptible change in amount.

The interior of the sun, Dr. Bethe holds, is like an enormous atom smasher. Temperature there is about 20,000,000 degrees centigrade. At such a heat all the atoms are stripped of their electrons and only the nucleil remain, rushing about furiously and frequently colliding with each other.

Here is the theory as it now stands: First a carbon nucleus of mass 12that is 12 times the mass of a hydrogen atom-bumps into a loose proton and captures it.

It then becomes a nitrogen atom of mass 13, an unstable form which soon breaks up by shooting out a positive electron or positron. The nucleus then becomes carbon again, but carbon of an unstable form. The positive electron almost immediately unites with a wandering negative electron and the two disappear in a burst of energy.

The newly formed carbon nucleus in the course of time picks up another proton, thereby transforming itself into a nitrogen nucleus of mass 14. More energy is radiated. This new nitrogen nucleus exists for several years but eventually picks up another proton and becomes oxygen of mass 15. This oxygen nucleus is itself unstable, throws out a positron, and becomes nitrogen of mass 15.

This nitrogen in the course of about 20 years will be struck by a hard-hitting proton and smashed. The result will be carbon of mass 12-just as it was at the start, and helium of mass 4.

All that can now happen is for the process to be repeated all over again. Every time a new form of atom is created there is some energy left over to become the heat and light of the sun.

The whole carbon cycle requires about 5,000,000 years. Every time it occurs a little of the sun's mass is lost. * * * *

Robot sentries with "ears" so sensitive that they can hear a whisper or the twitter of a sparrow a mile away now are guarding plants of one of the country's greatest industrial corporations

They would be equally efficient guards for any area which could be inclosed in a wire fence-such as an army depot or This type of mechanical sentry is an invention of an engineer of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., and six months of tests under every conceivable condition have proved it the most efficient ever devised, company officials say. The mechanics of the contrivance have not been revealed. The fence itself acts as the "ears" of the robot and relays instantly to a human watchman, who may be stationed in a comfortable watch station inside the plant, such sounds as the snip of a wire cutter or the sound of a pick. The mechanical sentry, Du Pont engineers say, has the effect of multiplying by many times the number of guards on duty in bad weather and at night. During heavy fogs, blackouts and storms guards would have to be placed almost shoulder to shoulder along fences which often are from 15 to 20 miles long. The robots, however, tell instantly not only of any disturbance, but of its loca-

If necessary, the Du Pont engineers announce, they will overhear voices speaking in whispers, bird songs and the sound of wind blowing and transmit them for a mile. Actually, however, this is more than is wanted and such delicacy would defeat its own purpose. The system is adapted to screen out such sounds and pick up only those likely to be im-

In addition to extending the hearing range of guards, the robots provide a checking-in system. A watchman need only to step up to the fence and tap in an established code. He will be heard in headquarters. He also can use the fenceline telephone to call for help. The line is always open.

The manner of receiving warning signals or the guard's calls can be as elaborate as desired. They can be heard through a loudspeaker or can be made to record themselves silently on a moving tape or drum, showing the exact hour, minute and second received. The signals may also be arranged to ring a bell or automatically relayed to military or police headquarters

Proposes Transportation Favors In Return for Like Courtesies. To the Editor of The Star

I will buy 30 cents' worth of War stamps every day if some one will pick me up between Connecticut avenue and Q and Seventeenth and Q at about 7:15 a.m., and drop me off at Fourteenth and G streets N.W.

After parking my car every morning in the above-named area, I have been taking a taxi for the balance of the distance, costing me from 20 to 30 cents each day. Undoubtedly, a number of autoists take this route every morning and would be glad to give me this lift if it would result in the purchase of nearly $100 worth of War stamps a year.

In addition, I will give a ride to three persons from Forty-ninth and Massachusetts avenue N.W., or any intermediate point, to Connecticut and Q, if they can come down at that early hour I believe that quite a number of people use cabs in about the same way I do, and no doubt would be glad to put this money into War stamps instead. If you feel the idea is worth an experi-

The Star from some village in South Carolina saying the Maryland yellowthroats dropped from the sky, dead and dying, like rain-between 500 and a thousand in this village.

"Could it be this species was largely lost for some reason while migrating? Do you know what killed them, and have any been observed in Maryland this season?

"Very truly, F. H. D." * * * * If intensive spraying of crops had been carried on, and these warblers had eaten shortly thereafter, they could have been poisoned.

The toll of birds by poison must be very large.

It is impossible to believe that yellowthroats, which are warblers, would be lost in wholesale numbers as the result of the rigors of migration alone. Scientists tell us that thousands of migrating birds die annually, but these deaths follow long flights over great stretches of water. The birds, in other words, are so weak-and others eat insects, and it would be poisoned insects and worms, rather than grains, which would do the evil work. Perhaps a bird, finding rather inanimate insects and worms (already half gone through the effects of some poison spray or dust) would think it had come across a real "find." The lethargic "bugs" would be "easy pickings." But they would carry in them the seeds of death.

Discusses Traffic Accidents From Operator's Point of View. To the Editor of The Star

I read with interest the front-page article in The Star for June 23 concerning Maj. Edward J. Kelly's order to the police to "direct every effort and attention" to prevention of traffic violations on the part of streetcar and bus

Speaking for myself and, I believe, for the majority of Capital Transit operators, we have no objection to the most strict surveillance to which Mai. Kelly may subject us

However, in the same article you state: "So far this year 15 persons have been fatally injured in such (bus and streetcar) accidents.

This is a more or less general statement, but the inference it makes is certainly unfair to the Capital Transit Co. and its several thousand operators. If it had been proved by witnesses that any of these 15 deaths were the direct responsibility of an operator, that operator would have been held, at least, on a technical charge of manslaughter. You do not mention any operator being charged with manslaughter in the above accidents. Therefore, it is a natural assumption that the party or parties fatally injured by buses and streetcars were themselves responsible for the acci-The harsh criticism of the Capital Transit Co. and its operators, by both

If a Greyhound bus runs off the highway, overturns and kills several passengers, are all Greyhound operators accused of carelessness, incompetence or inexperience? Is the Grevhound line ridiculed before the public? Of course

If you print this, those readers who give the following paragraphs a little honest thought may be able to prevent similar accidents happening to them or to their friends.

Do you realize that when you step between two "parked" streetcars either to cross the street or to get to a loading platform on the other track you are a potential suicide? In the first place, when you step between two streetcars a third car might strike either of the others and crush you to death between them. Even if you do get between the cars safely you may step directly into the path of an oncoming car and be crushed to death in an instant.

Don't get out of a bus and immediately walk around in front of it to cross the street unless you want to wake up "playing on a golden harp." Suppose some other vehicle collides with the rear of the bus just as you start in front, where are you? Maybe you can get clear of ment, I would be glad to have you pass the bus, but you are very apt to step in the path of oncoming traffic-and there you are!

One last warning: Don't step into the path of an oncoming streetcar or bus with the thought that "they have good brakes, they can stop." Certainly, we have good brakes, but there may be any we had killed you.

I won't mention any "don'ts" for the drivers of automobiles and trucks, but just let me show you a few points you may not know

The average bus, operating at 20 miles an hour, can be brought to a complete stop in 18 to 25 feet on a dry street. However, if a bus with a standing load of people were to be brought to a full stop in 20 feet from a 20-mile speed, every standing passenger probably would be injured, some severely, some possibly killed. A sudden stop at slow speed is apt to cause just as much damage to the passengers.

The above applies also to streetcars. They require more distance to be brought to a full stop, but any sudden stop is liable to injure passengers.

Won't you motorists, taxi drivers, truck drivers, etc., please remember this? Whenever you "cut off" a streetcar or bus you may save yourself 20 seconds and you may send 20 innocent people to the hospital.

Argues for Maintenance Of WPA in Wartime.

ployed persons in this country. This figure is increasing as thousands upon thousands of workers are losing their jobs in manufacturing plants which once produced commodities for civilian use and consumption, but which cannot be retooled for war production.

Today, there are about 4.540.00 unem-

Added to this condition is the fact that there are hundreds of thousands of persons who cannot share in existing was industries because of age, limited skills and the lack of nearby war production manufacturing plants. The gravity of the latter situation is shown by surveys made by the Bureau of Labor Statistics revealing that 93 per cent of the new job opportunities in the next year will be confined to 21 States and 50 per cent will be in only six States. Every able-bodied man and woman in this country will be needed in our war effort. But it will take time to smooth out manufacturing and labor dislocations growing out of our preparation for total war. Conditions of unemployment will not be in the same localities and in the same form as they were in the past. The same people will not be unemployed from month to month. Some industries will shut down and cause unemployment. Others will increase production in other places. These are some of the factors which will account for the constant shift and change in different sections of the

As long as unemployment remains in the seven figures, and all of the factors cited here continue to exist there will be a national need for the continuance of the useful WPA projects. And as long as human rehabilitation is essential, any expenditure made to continue WPA and similar agencies of Government is likewise essential. This fact holds true in one or a dozen other factors which might | times of war or peace. Upon this premise sential to total American progress.

Japs' Attack On Hawaii Called Stupid

Possibility Seen Tokio Could Have Gained By Keeping U. S. Peace

By DAVID LAWRENCE.

By this time-if they can read in Tokio the recent Lindley-Davis "white paper"-the Japanese must realize how utterly stupid their diplomacy and strategy was in the last few months of 1941, culminating in the attack on Pearl Harbor. Here we have a document released to the Ladies' Home Journal as a sort of semi-official story of pre-war diplomacy admittedly taken from White House and State Department files, and it is evident that if the Japanese had played their cards better they might have enlarged their sphere of operations in the Southwest Pacific and vet kept the United States out of the war.

The disclosure that Britain, Australia and the Dutch tried to get President Roosevelt to issue an ultimatum to Japan to stop her encroachments in Indo-China and beyond and that he declined to do so, preferring instead to "baby" Japan along, as he is quoted as phrasing it, means that Mr. Roosevelt was not sure Congress would have followed him had he asked for a war declaration based on Japanese operations in Indo-China

It is plain that Mr. Roosevelt told Prime Minister Churchill last August that he could not join in an ultimatum to Japan because that would involve commitment that might bring "automatic hostlities." Mr. Churchill is reported as having understood that it was a risk but as believing the bluff might work.

Why did the Japanese, when the American note of November 26 was received, consider it an ultimatum and order the attack on Pearl Harbor? They evidently believed that America was going to war any way to protect British. Dutch and Australian intererts in the Southwest Pacific, and that we would enforce by arms the warning originally given by our State Department the status quo in the Far East · must not be changed.

Hitler Pressure Seen.

Had the Japanese known American opinion better or at least the hesitancy which Mr. Roosevelt is now revealed by Messrs. Lindley and Davis to have had about issuing in August 1941, an ultimatum that could be construed by Congress as a commitment to war, they might never have regarded the November 26 note as a final step. They might have gone on with their move to occupy Indo-China extensively and cut off the Burma road. It certainly would have embarrassed the American Government and put it in a difficult position in seeking support for entry into the war on what, up to that time at least, had been regarded as an Asiatic question by a considerable body of American

Why were the Japanese so stupid as to force America into the war by an attack at Pearl Harbor? Probably the answer will not be known until after the war, when some Japanese authors write a "white paper" from the Tokio point of view, but it would appear that Hitler may have been pressing the Japanese to get into the war with a view to absorbing the attention of the British naval units and troops in the Near East and at the same time causing America to divert her armament cargoes and fleet from the Atlantic, where a "shooting war" by submarnes against lease-lend shipping had already begun. What is also difficult to understand is why Prime Minister Churchill wanted a two-ocean war, when the war in the Atlantic had not been won. England certainly ran great risks of seeing American war material turned to Pacific bases and away from British and European areas if the United States entered a war in the Pacific Ocean. A one-ocean war would have been better for Britain-at least throughout 1942. while the American war machine

American Illusions That Must Go As a 'Prelude to Victory'

By GOULD LINCOLN. James B. Reston's "Prelude to Victory"-off the presses this week-is a stark and arresting volume. As the title discloses, it deals with the war. It does not stop there. It tears asunder the illusion that wars settle nothing. What this country and the other countries of the world must do if there is to be no third world war a generation hence is still an open question. Mr. Reston, however, without drawing a blue print, gives sound reasons for definite action.

The author, a newspaper man who has seen the war first hand in England, destroys many of the illustions with which Americans have surrounded themselves. Illusions that led them to believe that this country could remain aloof from the strife that has now engulfed the world. Illusions that still clog the onward drive of the United Nations toward the ultimate defeat of the Axis powers. Mr. Reston does not content himself with merely being critical. He lays a foundation, hard and in some respects ruthless, upon which victory in this war may be obtained.

The story, if it may be called so, bluntly shows the errors both of spirit and of action which have been the cause of gains by the Axis powers up to date. Lack of understanding by England, France and other nations which have been overrun that this is a war of survival is one of the fundamental errors of judgment revealed. Until the United Nations, including particularly the United States, comes to a full understanding of this fact, the victory which we seek will be as illusive as the will o' the wisp.

Fatal Waiting. Always, until now, the socalled democratic nations-and again particularly the United States-have been unwilling to move first. This Mr. Reston insists is due to a certain softness when it comes to political considerations. For example, the British and the French were unwilling to move armed forces into Norway-first, or to move into the Netherlands and Belgium. They waited until it was too late -just as this country waited until Pearl Harbor. Errors of judgment which have been terribly costly.

With the fervor of a crusader. the author attacks one after another "the illusion that time and money will save us," "the illusion that this is entirely a war of guns, tanks, planes and ships," "the illusion that we can win the war with our second team." All illusions that have been with us from the start of the war-and which unfortunately still persist. Mr. Reston. gives due credit to the leadership of President Roosevelt, but he also shows the failings of the administration due to political considerations on the one hand, to unwillingness to take sound advice irrespective of the source, and to mistaken loyalty to individuals who do not belong on America's first team. And while he admits the willingness with which Congress has appropriated vast sums of money for the prosecution of the war, he points was getting under way for the enlarged program. Militarists Gained Upper Hand.

It may turn out that the socalled liberal elements in Japan were holding out for further parlevs with America, while the militarists who were sold on the Hitler point of view were planning, through their control of the navy, an attack on Pearl Harbor and the Philippines. When the strongly-worded November 26 note arrived, the militarists may have gained the upper hand-using the note to confirm their opinion about America's intentions-and prevailed on the Emperor to let them carry out their carefully-arranged plans of attack. The evidence shows, however, that, so far as America was concerned, while our high officials believed war might some time eventuate, they did not expect the sudden attack that came at Pearl Harbor. The Japanese knew, of course, that the United States was sending heavy reinforcements to Hawaii and the Philippines and was already sending supstantial aid to China indirectly, so it is possible that the Japanese authorities came to about the same conclusion that the American officials did, namely, that war was inevitable some day. American strategy hoped that Japan would take the initiative. The Japanese did so, and to lay aside political and personal considerations and to measure every act by the single yardstick-will it help to win the Lack of faith is one of the evils to the unwillingness of that body that still besets this country, and yet faith is the basic element of victory. This lack is at the very heart of all the problems. Mr. Reston contends. "The President's hesitancy to give full authority to strong men in his Government or out of his Government," he says, "the shocking lack of coordination between the Army and the Navy at Pearl Horbor and the endless disputes between the heads of various departments are fundamentally the result of lack of faith in the abilities and intentions of Government officials."

There is another illusion—"that we are fighting to get back to normal." Bluntly Mr. Reston points out that we are not fighting for an idea-for the idea of democracy. We are fighting first because we were attacked. That, too, is the reason that the other democratic nations are fighting. But that is only half the reason. We are fighting for a purpose, "to make sure that we create a world order in which we can never be attacked again." Mr. Reston makes it clear that when this war is over conditions will have so changed, are changing now, that it will be impossible to return to the old order even if the American people desire to do so. One fact alone would make this impossible. The war has tremendously developed the industrial capacity of the nations involved. This individual capacity will eventually be turned from the production of munitions to the production of the peace-time requirements of the peoples. That being the case, it will be much wiser to sit down with these nations and plan just how competition throughout the world must be reorganized, with justice to all. "There is a great opportunity in using these machines wisely.

housing before." In his "Prelude to Victory," Mr. Reston has shown himself able to relate cause and effect, and to link past history with the events of today. If he is impatient with the faults and failures of those who direct the political and the military forces of the United Nations, it is not for the sake of criticism. It is because of an abounding desire that this war shall be won. If he paints a dark picture, and he does, in which the selfish hopes of individuals and of governments prevail, it is in the hope that there will be a cure. There is food in his book for the heads of governments, for the industrialists, for the worker, for the newspaper publisher—and for

Mr. Reston writes. "There are thus enabled a united America to respond not only to a war in the Pacific, but to war with Hitler. It is interesting to speculate, however, as to what might have happened if the Japanese had maintained the status quo in relation to the Philippines and even the Dutch East Indies and had confined their operations to Indo-China and the Burma road. Would America have been drawn into the war? Historical documents some day may throw light on that question when the Japanese records of the secret parleys that preceded Pearl Harbor are made available to the public.

Optimism voiced by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill to a select group of Senators and Representatives apparently was due to their belief that the Axis' gigantic effort on all battlefronts will spend itself, and that the Nazis and Japs will lose their breath after a few more hard blows at the United Nations. Then, they seem to think, the Allies' turn will come to drive the enemy back.

The assumption made by the neither the Russian or Chinese forces can be pulverized in the blitzes which are now taking place. Furthermore, they believe the efforts of the Germans and Japanese to win a decision this summer will peter out with crippling losses to the Axis, with no new resources of manpower and raw materials to draw from. The United Nations led by America, on the other hand, are just beginning to fight.

These are said to be the fundamental reasons for the cheerfulness of the American and British leaders, but whether the war picture will develop as they hope remains to be seen.

Such calculations, logical as they appear, do not always work out in time of war, when many imponderables come into play. Paper calculations gave us every reason to believe that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel would not achieve more than a local and temporary success against the British in Libya, and that Egypt was far from being seriously threatened

By HENRY McLEMORE. For the space of 5 or 10 minutes this morning we thought we were in the Army.

It was all a misunderstanding, but for a while we enjoyed the thrill of being a member of Uncle Sam's armed forces.

Shortly after breakfast there was a knock at the door. We opened it to find a gentleman standing outside. For perhaps half a spoke, and his voice was serious. "The Government needs fats for the war," he said. "Are you willing to serve?" This was a sudden and direct call to enlistment, but, thank goodness we were man enough to respond in the affirmative. "Just a minute, brother." we said, until we get our hat and coat, and

What a letdown! Here we were all set to throw our double chin and the Pacific Ocean between bay window directly against the Axis save greases from the kitchen.

"Isn't there any way the Governthought you meant?" we asked, knowing that in our own circle of friends there were many portly patriots who would love to think that their excess poundage was being fired from mortars, dropped from the skies in bombs, and hurled miles through the air in artillery shells.

Diet of Rabbit Food. We would gladly go on a diet of lettuce leaves and all the other rahbit food if we knew that the poundage we shed would eventually be dropped on some Jap's head. It would give us a tremendous thrill to be able to feel that our third chin had helped to blow up a Japanese transport, or that a section of our bay window had stopped a German medium tank's advance.

Think of the potential firepower in a fellow like Oliver Hardy, of Laurel and Hardy. Babe, a Milledgeville (Ga.) boy who went to waist early, would get a tremendous bang out of a dispatch that read like this: "Shells propelled by explosives from fats contributed by Oliver Hardy halted a German advance near Sevastopol today.'

But this being impossible, the next best thing for us to do is to save the kitchen fats. Being a Southerner, this will come easy. There are but two real Southern mottos. One is, "Take two and butter 'em while they're hot," and "Here, don't waste that grease. Put it in the fruit jar there on top of the stove." In the deep South, kitchen grease is used for everything from shining shoes to killing the natural taste of vegetables.

It is up to all of us to save grease. Remember, it will be used to grease the skids for the Axis. (Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Draft Boards Can Induct Own Members if 1-A

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 27.—In perhaps the first case of its kind under selective service law, Federal Court here has ruled that a local draft board may induct its own members

Judge Simon Rifkind set the apparent precedent yesterday in dismissing a motion by Dr. Frank J. Pirone of Mount Vernon, N. Y., to restrain the board of which he formerly was examining physician from inducting him into the Army.

Dr. Pirone, reclassified by his former fellow officials from 1-B to 1-A had lost his appeal for deferment on the ground that he would be "immediately and irreparably damaged and injured and deprived of his liberty," and brought court action. Judge Rifkind in dismissing Dr.

Pirone's complaint observed: "The courts ought to leave administrative agencies alone. Not until a plaintiff has actually been deprived of something should the intervention of the court be sour

Over-Optimistic?

Read This Timely Warning About War Success Claims

Favorable developments, often overstressed and unaccompanied by words of caution, some times build hopes too high, making deeper the gloom which follows reverses. Felix Morlev, writing in the Editorial Feature Section of The Sunday Star, cites the progress of the Libyan campaign as an example. The fluctuating course of warfare has alternately enthused and depressed Americans who have followed developments closely. Too great optimism over success causes gloom too deep over reverses, he says. His is a common sense approach to the matter of weighing war developments.

Millions of skilled workers are needed in the great war production industries. Richard L. Stokes, surveying the need for labor, has prepared an interesting word-picture of the situation. Sir Bertram Stevens, Australian recently in India, writes warningly of the danger which faces that vital area and gives you his views of possible developments. Constantine Brown stresses the need for united war command. All of these articles will appear

Congregational Majority Adopts Strong Statement on War

By Religious News Bervice The Congregational-Christian Church this week followed its traditional policy on debatable issues by agreeing to disagree over the war situation. The General Assembly of the church, meeting at Durham, N. H., adopted a statement (not a resolution) which set forth the position of both the pro-war and pacifist groups. The pro-war section of the statement received 409 votes, the pacifist section 136 votes, while 35 delegates could not accept either section. A Lesson for the Week

One Leader Not Superseded By Test of Present Crisis

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

For six months past the millions of members of the Sunday school and a vast collateral company have been studying the life of Christ as set forth in the synoptic gospels. By all laws of sound senses and educational principles this is the time for a review, although the Lesson Committee has thrust into the schedule one of the quarterly temperance lessons. We adhere to the tested pedagogical method of a review of the course offered.

This seems especially urgent, for Church tomorrow morning. Young in our unmatched era of human people of the church who have life the need for a fuller underpledged their lives for Christian standing of the one Figure to whom myriads look for leadership is of supreme importance. Nations Freed, jr.; Melvin Carrico, Virginia have changed their military and political leaders in this universal Richard Cole, Jack Wyne, James emergency, but Jesus has not been superseded. His adequacy, and the world's need of Him, appear more clearly as events march onward. He is the Uutimate Deliverer of Christian civilization. Our greatest task is to give Him His rightful place at the forefront of a world made new by His life teachings and spirit. The hymn for the day is, "More, More About Jesus.'

For Coming Week

THE REV. HARRY V. PORTER.

Eighth Anniversary of

The Rev. Harry V. Porter will celebrate his 8th anniversary as pastor of the Westminster Memorial Church tomorrow morning. The topic of his sermon will be "Christ at Grips With Our World."

He is a graduate of Penn State College and received his theological training at Princeton Seminary. In 1934 he was called directly from the seminary to become pastor of the local church. Dr. Benjamin F. Bittinger, pastor of the congregation for 38 years, stated over 50 years ago that "A spirit of improvement seems to be characteristic of the congregation." This spirit was evidenced by the burning of a note just a year ago freeing the church from a $25,000 debt

A short time ago when the old Marvin Methodist Church was closed, because of the widening of Independence avenue, a number of the members transferred to Westminster Church and a very generous check was sent to the church upon the sale of the Marvin property. It is planned that this money will be used by the Sunday school during the coming fall and winter to contact and interest many of the children and families of the community in the work of the church.

A vacation church school is being planned in the early fall before the opening of the public schools.

St. Paul's Episcopal One of the boys of St. Paul's who formerly served on the altar returns to his home parish on Sunday to preach his first sermon. The Rev. Frederic J. Haskin, & graduate of the University of Maryland and of the General Theological Seminary and now curate at the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, New York City, will be welcomed by his many friends in the parish when he returns as guest preacher at 11 a.m.

Religion is powerful because it is organized around certain centers. We speak of personal religion, meaning the religion resident within our personality. We speak of ecclesiastical religion, and we think of the churches with their We speak of ecclesiastical religion, and we think of the churches with their rituals and policies. Far more significant, however, is the religion which has its root in the home. Men live in the homes, are the products of home, and from them springs all of the best that we know. There is no true home empty of religion and religious teaching. What personal religion or ecclesiastical religion we know stems back to the spirit of Christ resident in little families over all the earth.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON,

Navy Football Was Strenuous Back in World War I

Reports sifting in from various naval bases and pre-flight training seeks Plum schools throughout the land indicate the blue jackets are going to play a lot of football this autumn, but Gerard (Eddie) Edwards, veteran Union Printer diamond star, doubts if it'll be the same colorful, hard-bitten

He was recalling some incidents from that conflict today and getting a lot of chuckles out of his reminiscing. An eager-eyed stripling of 17 summers, he was a kid who had joined up on the dare of a couple of schoolmates and served for the duration on the Pennsylvania and a couple

"And were those tars tough," he grinned. "You should've seen the football game between the Indiana and Iowa at Yorktown, Va., for the Atlantic crab fleet championship. Talk about Cornwallis surrendering after the battle of Yorktown, why he didn't even see it."

The crab fleet was so called to distinguish it from the heavier superdreadnaughts carrying crews of 1,700 to 2,000 men and which had a big advantage in this respect. This would have been unfair in athletic competition. Eddie, the handle by which everybody knows him, was a bugler on the Pennsylvania, a super job, and a shipmate was happy-go-lucky Rabbit Maranville, a chief petty officer. Maranville quarterbacked the Pennsylvania's eleven, played shortstop on the baseball team and starred in both

Welcomed Fight or Frolic—and Good at Both

He couldn't keep his team from losing the grid championship to its sister ship, the Arizona, but they invited him to referee the crab fleet title game between the Indiana-Iowa teams the following day. The entire fleet, some 40,000 red-necked, leather-lunged sailors turned out for it. During the week the ships usually were at sea on business and games had to be equeezed in on week-end shore visits, so the mob arrived at Gloucester Point field ready for a fight or a frolic. The boys were good at both.

The score was 0-0 at the half when the rival bands lined up at either end of the field for the usual parade and horn-tooting. The Indiana's musicians were stamping out "The Old Gray Mare" with the stands supplying their own version of the words while the Iowans were sawing on something like "Back Home in Indiana" with a suitable parody from Virtually all the musicians had been pupils of John Phillip Sousa and really knew their notes. They also could handle their dukes in approved Navy fashion although it is fairly well established that the famed bandmaster had nothing to do with this.

"They marched on a straight line at one another and neither gave an inch," Eddie laughed. "They just kept coming and marched into one another at midfield. The next think I knew brass horns and fists were flying in every direction. Bassoon players were conking trumpeters and drummers were rolling their sticks on the nearest head.

Then Spectators Joined In and Made It Unanimous

"Maranville blew his whistle and ran into the melee in an effort to headed by William Du Pont's Superseparate some of them. He disappeared in the mob for a moment and came flying out with his head sticking through a bass drum. Then everybody in the stands piled down on the field and the fun really started. You couldn't tell which ship anybody was from because we were wearing winter stocking caps, and all were swinging on friend and foe alike.

"That night when the motor sailors-they're ship-to-shore launchescame in to pick up men going aboard, the gobs waited for the Marine M. P.'s to call out the ship's name then tossed them into the water and everturned the boats. Officers finally had to turn out to restore order, tention as a Trainer Max Hirsch ranked sixth, for the individual and that ended mass fleet attendance at football games. Thereafter only crews from the competing ships were allowed to go."

The football? Oh, yes. It was a good brand. There were a couple of Outstanding Net Pros. The football? Oh, yes. It was a good brand. There were a couple of exciting duel of fast, well-trained elevens but the grid warfare couldn't hold a candle to the unlisted activities.

Speaking of officers, Eddie knows that if the boys today are getting the same leadership, iron but fair discipline, they'll end up on the win ning side in the current hostilities. He knows from experience,

Salute for President Wilson Leads to Complication

The Pennsylvania led the convoy which escorted President Woodrow Wilson abroad after the war and about 25 miles from port it passed through an avenue formed by United States vessels on one side and Allied ships on the other. All gave the Chief Executive 21-gun salutes so Capt John Nulton (later admiral) ordered Eddie to blow the command "Man the Rails." This required the gobs to stand at stiff attention and salute.

"After a while." Eddic recounted," he ordered me to sound "Stand by," which means relax, and for the life of me I couldn't think how it went. I knew there was some triple-tonguing in it but we had to remember more than 100 cells and I just couldn't think of it. I thought of everything else but it wouldn't come-and the sailors standing at atten-

"I looked around for Maranville-he'd been there a moment before and could have piped the command, but he had disappeared.

"'Bugler,' ordered the captain again, 'Blow stand by.' "Aye, aye sir," I said, but I still couldn't think how it went

"Finally he roared at me. "'Bugler, when in Hades are you going to blow "Stand by?'

Learned Notes of 'Stand By' the Hard Way

"A great kidder, that Maranville."

"I had to confess I couldn't remember it. The next day I was courtmartialed and ordered to spend four hours in the keel of the ship blowing nothing but 'Stand by.' I still remember it." Maranville, Eddie recalls, won a lot of money for his mates in couple of important ball games with the New Hampshire. "Bet everything you've got." he instructed them just before the first game. They did and he belted a homer with two men on to win it in the eighth inning. 3-2. "Double up," he told them before the second. They did and so did he, clouting two homers and winning the game, 2-0.

"He was a great guy and well liked by everybody, although a practical joker. We never knew what was coming next. Just before we were discharged he told me he was going back to baseball and reform. He swore his brawling days were over but the next time I heard about him he was throwing furniture out of a hotel window.

Griffmen, Rated Minor Class, Can't Get Talent; Browns Rap Newsom

By BURTON HAWKINS,

ST. LOUIS, June 27.-With a minimum of weeping, wailing and otherwise unbecoming conduct let's explore the Nats' future, or at least skim the surface of that sad sub-To be blunt, brief and mildly prophetic. Washington's baseball outlook is dreary and is calculated to remain so until three dots and a dash become reality.

The current edition of the Nats is threatening to shatter several traditions. Not since Clark Griffith took command of the club in 1912 have they finished in the basement-1909 was the last time that occurred. In a managerial career that was launched successfully in 1924 Bucky Harris never has piloted a team to eighth place. War has taken a tremendous bit out of the Nats. When Uncle Sam beckoned Shortstop Cecil Travis and Third Baseman-Outfielder Buddy Lewis the Nats were relieved of their two best hitters. Uncle also requested the services of numerous rookies and minor league prospects -the cream of what little talent Griffith had been able to develop.

Nats Classed as Minors. That is as it should be, of course, but it has cheapened the Nats. Pilots Compete in Youngsters like Jack Sanford, Hillis Layne, Dick Mulligan, etc., possibly would have made Washington a more formidable team this year, but they're performing more important chores in more respected uniforms.

More Washington property figures to be summoned for service. and the problem of replacements represents no minor matter. When the Nats call up a shortstop with little more than a year of organized baseball experience and a second baseman hitting .250, times are Sullivan and Second Baseman Ellis Clary doubtless represent the cream of Washington's farm crop.

The poorer clubs naturally will Regatta. feel the pinch more rapidly, but at least one rich owner has expressed baseball next season. Walter O. Briggs, wealthy owner of the Tigers, has confessed to intimates that such a course might be wise and that despite the fact Detroit is drawing more customers this season than in 1941.

Little and Dudley Top List of Linksmen to Battle Great Team

DETROIT, June 27. — Walter Hagen, who should be an authority, says the 1942 American Ryder Cup golf team is one of the best ever assembled, but he has named eight members of a challenger squad that he hopes will score a surprising victory in the Red Cross charity match here July 18 and 19.

In selections announced yesterday Hagen topped his squad with Lawson Little and Ed Dudley, who pers last year that squared the war-orphaned series at one match. The others are Henry Picard and Dick Metz, discarded from the cup squad: Jimmy Thomson, Sam Byrd and two Michigan stars, young Melvin (Chick) Harbert of Battle Creek and the veteran Al Watrous ALEXANDRIA'S CHRIST CHURCH-When Winston Churchill made his first surprise trip to Washington this year, he and Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt went out to Christ Church to worship on New Year Day. They sat in the white pew that once belonged to George Washington. The first President paid 36 pounds and 10 shillings for that seat; nowadays nobody pays.

Another pew belonged to Robert E. Lee, who grew up in the church and was confirmed there. One Sunday morning in 1861 he walked out after services and went to 220 North Washington street, a block away, where he was offered command of the Army of Virginia. War followed, and when Northern troops occupied Alexandria this was the only church in town left open. Others were used as hospitals or closed. After the war, 36 Confederate soldiers were buried in the yard.

This is a beautiful church with beautiful trees around it. An English oak, a silver maple and a willow oak can be distinguished in this sketch by Helen Gatch Durston. James Wren designed the building, begun in 1767 and completed in 1773. The tower was added in 1818. The first rector was the Rev. Townsend Dade, whose salary was 17,280 pounds of tobacco.

In a little sioner Guy Mason yesterday, Chairwhile, Mr. Hipsley's chance friend man McCarran of the committee said he believed it would be a "good idea" to examine records of food purchases and the quality of the food served to the patients. It was indicated Mr. Camalier would be in-

After making the unannounced inspection tour Mr. Camalier told reporters the food at the institution appeared to him to be of excellent quality and he said the patients, although "fully justified" in their complaints of poor meals, were objecting more to the methods of preparing and serving the meals than to the quality of the food

Food Called "Not the Best."

When he returned to the Capitol, however, Mr. Camalier said he had received intimations that the food served to the 600 Glenn Dale patients was "not the best," and Senator McCarran expressed belief the whole question of equipment and food purchases for the institution should be studied to determine the quality and amount of waste, if any, Both Commissioner Mason and Mr. Camalier agreed on two points: 1. ALEXANDRIA'S CHRIST CHURCH-When Winston Churchill made his first surprise trip to Washington this year, he and Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt went out to Christ Church to worship on New Year Day. They sat in the white pew that once belonged to George Washington. The first President paid 36 pounds and 10 shillings for that seat; nowadays nobody pays.

Another pew belonged to Robert E. Lee, who grew up in the church and was confirmed there. One Sunday morning in 1861 he walked out after services and went to 220 North Washington street, a block away, where he was offered command of the Army of Virginia. War followed, and when Northern troops occupied Alexandria this was the only church in town left open. Others were used as hospitals or closed. After the war, 36 Confederate soldiers were buried in the yard.

This is a beautiful church with beautiful trees around it. An English oak, a silver maple and a willow oak can be distinguished in this sketch by Helen Gatch Durston. James Wren designed the building, begun in 1767 and completed in 1773. The tower was added in 1818. The first rector was the Rev. Townsend Dade, whose salary was 17,280 pounds of tobacco.

He added that he wanted to emphasize that the regrouping of 3-A men into categories ordered by Congress did not mean that married men would never be called. He said it just put the married men near the bottom of the list but that they might be called eventually and should plan their affairs accord-

When the pool of 1-A was exhausted, he continued, the boards would then call upon men deferred because of financial dependents other than a wife or children. They are in the second category on the congressional listing.

Col. Stanwood said draft boards had been instructed to sort their registrants into the new groupings at once. Until this was completed, he added, he would not know when the first group of men married before Pearl Harbor would get military

He said that even though local boards were forced to dip into deferred ranks by September, it would not mean the end of deferment

Col. Stanwood said employers would be required to show that no replacement for the deferred man was available. "Then he would ask for and probably get an extension,'

Broader Inquiry Into Glenn Dale Food Indicated

A more extensive study of the food situation at the Glenn Dale Tuberculosis Sanatorium to determine whether patients are receiving "their money's worth" was indicated today after a preliminary investigation brought disclosures of carelessness in the preparation and serving

It was indicated Mr. Camalier would be instructed to continue the inquiry. After making the unannounced inspection tour Mr. Camalier told reporters the food at the institution appeared to him to be of excellent quality and he said the patients, although "fully justified" in their complaints of poor meals, were objecting more to the methods of preparing and serving the meals than to the quality of the food.

Home Seekers Are Attracted To Anacostia

Southwest Section Comes to Attention

Of Builders By FRED H. MORHART, Jr.

The Anacostia section in Southwest Washington is coming to notice of homeseekers, now more than ever since new building projects have been started in that section of the city. There has been considerable building in the area in recent years but it has not been as extensive as in other parts of the Metropolitan

A new interest in the apartment field, however, may stimulate a number of community developments. Heretofore the Anacostia section has been devoted mainly to private home construction, but the new field of apartment dwellings now is expected to be broadened.

Stimulation of interest in apartment building partially is the result of the large number of Federal employes now being assigned to Bolling Field, the Anacostia Naval Air Station and the Bellevue experimental laboratory. In addition, many families are moving into the area because they want to live in the District, but they also want to be close to their jobs in such places as the new Census Bureau buildings in Suitland. Others have found the section convenient to the Navy Yard.

Feature Detached Homes. Realtors interested in the section point out that the new construction probably will not continue recent Sets Hearing July 23 row house development and that comparatively large play areas and yards will be featured. This follows the pattern set many years ago when Anacostia was regarded as "way out in the country. At that time a considerable part of the construction was of the detached house type with spacious grounds. Today, there are many of these plots devoted to victory gardens. In addition some of the deep backyards behind row houses have been plowed up and converted into vegetable

Another feature of interest to from the section to downtown areas. The Capital Transit Co. provides town and go to Bellevue and Congress Heights, while the third provides connections from Nichols avenue to the Sousa Bridge where transportation is provided for Maryland destinations.

Bellevue Gardens may be taken as illustrative of new types of development expected for the Anacostia region.

The first section of the development will include 244 units in nine garden-type apartments in the 100 block of Irvington street, bounded by Bald Eagle Hill Park and Joliet expected to be the largest single development in the Anacostia section. Actual cost of the entire project has not been made public, but it is expected that the outlay will be in excess of $3,700,000, depending on the cost of labor and material. The building permit list recently gave and subject him to the penalties $343,000 as the working basis for the provided in the Zoning Act and first apartment units now under

Five Million Homes Helped By FHA

Agency Reviews Activities Since Its Creation

The Federal Housing Administration, in marking its eighth anniversary, today announced that through peacetime financing some 5,000,000 homes have been built, repaired or purchased. However, it was noted there was a general trend toward war housing efforts, particularly during the last two Abner H. Ferguson, commissioner, stated close to 400,000 new homes have been built under FHA programs in critical war industry areas. He noted that during the early years of the FHA program loan insurance was largely responsible for reopening the private capital market for home financing, stimulating new home construction and expanding the repair field.

FHA during the last eight years provided liberal financing terms for home-buyers and encouraged development of moderate-priced small homes with small monthly mortgage payments.

Aided War Housing.

"With the advent of the national emergency the momentum established during these formative years proved of great value in stimulating construction of urgently needed war housing, financed by FHA-insured loans," Mr. Ferguson declared.

Operations of the Federal Housing Administration have been converted to a full wartime basis, the commissioner said. Under wartime conditions the activities of the FHA are concentrated on the following principal programs: 1. Insurance of war housing loans under Title VI of the National Housing Act. Such loans are confined to new projects in the designated critical areas which are clearly essential to meet the needs should offer less temptation to crete porch steps before you do of war workers. 2. Insurance of Title I loans in the designated areas which provide the patching cements with a plastic additional living accommodations (See FHA, Page B-3.)

Building Permits Show Increase During June

$1,271,400 Certificate Issued to ADA Helps To Swell Total

The value of building permits issued so far this month has nearly doubled that of May, Donald Hipkins, chief clerk of the building inspector's office, reported today. He attributed the increase to the $1,-271.400 permit given for the construction of 629 family dwelling units to the Alley Dwelling Au-

Total valuation of permits for June will run in excess of $3,000,000, as compared with $1,500,000 for May, it is estimated.

Meanwhile the value of permits Issued this week for repairs and construction amounted to $233.880. The largest volume of permits went to W. C. & A. N. Miller Development Co. for nine projects valued at $35.800. These are for home developments in the 3900 block of Forty-seventh street N.W. and the 4600 block of Tilden street

In cash value the two largest permits issued were for $90,000 each to Isadore Young, owner and builder, for nine two-story brick flats of four units each, one to be located at 1200 to 1232 Sixteenth street N.E. and the other to be situated at 1627 to 1659 Holbrook street N.E. New Glass Window Increases Lighting of Room Many Times

80 Per Cent of Beams Is Reflected Indirectly From White Ceiling

By Wide World A new kind of glass window bends about 80 per cent of the daylight upward toward the ceiling.

The result is to make a white ceiling an indirect lighting source and to give the impression that the new window admits many times more light than the most transparent ordinary window.

The window is made of glass blocks devised by the Owens-Illinois Glass Co. They are hollow. The secret of the bending is in ribs of glass which line the hollow interiers. The ribs are prismatic in shape, chosen so as to bend all rays upward, regardless of the angle at which the daylight enters.

The upturn angles of the rays range from 20 to 30 degrees. This throws light in a widespread beam completely across the ceiling of a large room. Shadows are eliminated

The paradoxical impression of so much more light comes from the fact that most of the rays from an ordinary window go directly to the does not impede vision to any apfloor, and usually are absorbed there, because most floors are dark. Actually the glass block window transmits only the same amount of light es any other window

Placing the prismatic ribs on the inside of the blocks protects them from dirt and filming. Outwardly the blocks are smooth. Each is about 8 inches square and 4 inches thick.

The inventors suggest that the blocks will save much metal in con- and other vulnerable parts of houses struction of war plants. Window sash customarily made of metal can be saved because the blocks themselves do away with the necessity for sash. The estimated saving is 2 to 3 pounds of steel per square foot of window opening.

The block windows are not transparent, but neither do they show any glare from intense daylight.

As recorded here previously, the windows of your house can be made as resistant to shock as safety glass by coating the inside glass with a transparent plastic liquid which deposits a tough elastic film on the surface, reinforcing the glass and making it shatterproof. Although the glass can be pierced by flying missiles, it will stay in place and will not scatter. There are a number of excellent products of this type which work on the same principle. The liquids are applied either by brush or by spray. Most manufacturers suggest one coat on the inside glass for residential purposes, although one system employs two coats of plastic liquid on both the interior and exterior.

The window must be clean and dry before it is treated with the liquid. Then apply generously, being careful to overlap the coating well at the edges. (If more than one coat is being applied allow at least one hour's drying time between coats.) The coating is transparent and in every decorating scheme. Just as sunlight does more to make your rooms charming than anything else by day, so does the proper lighting by night. In most small living rooms it is better to light the room entirely by lamps as the low light gives a pleasanter effect than the high light from wall fixtures.

In dining rooms sidelights are sometimes necessary as there is no furniture in a dining room to hold lamps. Chandeliers or ceiling fix- washable they are very practical. tures over a dining table give a hard unbecoming light. All lamp shades in a room should

First Aid For the Ailing House

By ROGER B. WHITMAN.

Q. I have recently purchased an old two-flat apartment house, and am thinking of modernizing the entrance vestibule. What would you suggest?

A. A simple treatment for the walls would be covering them with panels of stiff insulating sheets. You could also use plasterboard which can be had surfaced with wood veneer to show the grain. Calling at the interior decorating sections of any of the large department stores will give you many practical ideas. For he floor, linoleum should be satisfactory.

Q. How can lime and sand walls be sized so that wallpaper will stick? At the present we cannot afford to have the wall replastered.

A. The wall is evidently too rough for papering. A good paperhanger could make it smooth by a coating of plastic paint containing gypsum. An alternative would be to paint the wall instead of attempting to paper it.

Q. After varnishing a piece of furniture, from which I had removed the original finish, I find small bubbles that seem to be formed by a gum-like substance. What causes this and how can I

A. The varnish may be too old. The bubbles may actually be dust that settled on the varnish before it hardened. At the time of doing the job the varnish may have been too cold: the temperature of varnish and of the work should be at least 70 degrees. Air bubbles may have formed in the varnish can by shaking: varnish cans should never be

How to Absorb Sound.

Q. We have an upright piano in our living room resting on a bare section of the floor. In spite of playing softly, the bass notes are distinctly heard by our neighbor below us. Would a rubber mat placed under the piano absorb some of the vibrations?

A. A piece of heavy broadloom carpeting placed under the piano may cut down the transmission of the low notes through the floor enough to satisfy your neighbor. If this is not sufficient, place pieces of heavy sponge rubber or cork under each leg of the piano.

Lipstick Stain Removed. Q. Guests leave lipstick stains on my linen napkins. It seems impossible to wash the lipstick out.

Can you tell me how to do it? A. Washing with hot water is likely to set the stains. Anything done to take them out should be done before laundering. Soaking in a spot remover such as carbon tetrachloride should do the trick.

Q. Our kitchen chimney is outside the wall, and inside plaster and paint crack badly in that part of the kitchen. How could this be stopped?

A. If the inside plaster is applied directly to brick, the trouble comes from the extreme changes in temperature. Your best move will be to cover the part of the inside wall plaster that is next to the chimney with one or two thicknesses of stiff insulating sheets or to apply the plaster to lath on furring strips. For best results, the insulating trope. Keep the jar closely covered sheets should be on furring strips.

any make of asphalt shingles having a mineralized surface. Manufacturers provide liquids for rejuvenating such shingles; inquire of any one of them.

Finish for Pine Floor. Q. What do you suggest for refinishing pine floors? I am afraid of falling on a slippery waxed floor.

Don't Overdo Public Rooms. Doing what you want to do in ome of the rooms of your house s also refreshing. In every home there should be at least one room where the owner feels free to do as he pleases as to decoration. Hall and living rooms, in a sense, are semi-public places. Bedrooms are very personal and yet, as bedrooms should have a serene air, one just does not go fantastic there.

They may be stylized but not too much so. It may be a study, a powder room, a basement playroom, an attic retreat—any one of these is a fit subject. Being picturesque in a rumpus room is accepted by all, but one s likely to be uncomfortable in a dining room that pretends to be something other than it actually is. When you come right down to it, of course, the days of 1917 are hardly to be thought of as a prehistoric era-but so great have been the changes in daily living.

in customs and in fashions that the time of World War I seems definitely remote. Looking through the newspapers of six months after the start of the last war, and comparing them with those of today.

six months after our entry into this one the reader is likely to be startled by the sharp contrast of ways and ideas The lovely ladies of 1917 had silk galore—we have none to speak of. They wore voluminous costumes; ours are to be on the WPB restricted side. Their corset covers, ankle-length skirts and high-buttoned shoes look, frankly, silly in comparison with the streamlined styles of today.

But it is very possible that 25 years hence some other fashion writer will dig out our words about snoods, leg make-up, green fingernails and culottes - and finds the reports as laughable as we find those which in 1917 cited red as the millinery color of the hour-but only a subdued red with mahogany overtones, if you please. As for the gay shade of crimson that you and I have been wearing for the past few seasons, the fashion reporters cringed in horror at the very thought. Said one, "Every one knows that it is only a daring woman who will put on a bright red hat. Only those who are utterly careless and entirely negligent of their appearances rush into the field of red millinery."

So, it was the more subdued, rich tones of red that made news in the millinery world six months after this country entered the First World War. The stores offered dark red hats in roll shapes, mushrooms, side rolls and turbans, created them in Panne and Lyons velvet and trimmed them with ostrich, fur, flowers and ribbons. A little later there was a great trend to the more simple type of chapeau with little or no trimming and much talk of the draped "Rembrandt" style, designed to fit the head so closely that quite a bit of the coiffure was daringly exposed.

It all sounds rather familiar six months after Pearl Harborfor, if you've noticed, there first was a great trend to giddy, bright bonnets with much trimming. Now the millinery world is bragging about its smart but simple fashions that are utterly "feminine." and often "non-priority."

This same trend to the ultrafrilly was evidenced in other accessories of the 1917 era. You could have a Hudson seal stole, cape or "coatee," plus a muff and a full-length seal coat trimmed with skunk. Although there was some mention of curtailing the width of coats, the experts advised collars more tremendous than

The "covered up" look was good then as now, and the sheer blouse vogue flourished. Dark styles in georgette and other flimsy materials were all the rage, but

By Helen Vogt plunging necklines were unheard of. One fashion column commented, "Many of the French blouses are made without collars, but the rather trying line of the collarless blouse is not as becoming to the American woman as is the softer line of a collar that rolls at the back."

a street dress combining satin or velvet with chiffon, georgette or net. Fur trimming around the uneven skirt line was the final touch, and the whole thing was described as a natty little number and "in this fabric combination an excellent suggestion for making over a last season dress."

We "natives" of Washington first time it's not going to be easy to take. There's a certain mental probably find it hard to realize attitude that is imperative, if one what a very real hardship our is to get through the scorching typical summer weather is inflictdays-and several definite methods one may employ to ease the comers to the Capital. By Betsy Caswell work to do, and settle down to really do it, with all your mind on it, you'll find that the day DOES pass, somehow, and the hour for the bathtub and the cool negligee arrives without dawdling a hundred years or so. You may mop your brow just as much while you typewrite as you would while you're cussing the weatherman, but the time will pass a lot faster with the typewriter system!

If you're the wife of a warworker and haven't any outside job, our advice is-first, get one; second, stick to it, despite heat and humidity. Your keeping busy doing volunteer work will make the day pass just as quickly as if you were getting paid for it -that is, if you are a conscientious volunteer. If you're not, you deserve to swelter.

If you have home responsibili-

Smart Washington Is Wearing—

weather descends upon Washington, entertaining takes to the open. Gardens, no matter how tiny, are converted into fiesta spots, and open roofs and outdoor restaurants start hanging out the SRO signs. Wartime has made dining in daylight a matter of course, and it has been interesting to see how Washington lovelies cope with the problem of looking their most glamorousby night-in the full glare of the sun.

They manage nicely, we've decided. Make-up is skillfully applied so that it does not look artificial in daylight, and yet contrives to keep its wearer fresh and vivid later when candles and electric lights take over. And that, incidentally, is no mean achievement, as any woman who has struggled with day-intonight make-up can tell you.

Dresses for the most part also effect a happy compromise, and look equally well on a sunny terfloor. Bright prints and pale colors seem to be the most popular, though some especially clever ladies realize the charm of sheer black lace or chiffon, and delight the gentlemen with gowns of breath-taking sophistication. So far we have seen few gingham or pique evening dresses, but as summer hits its stride they are sure to come into their own. Mrs. Wickard, wife of the dynamic Secretary of Agriculture, wears a most becoming dinner gown of white, splashed with vivid blue flowers, made on slender, simple lines that hint of the future fabric-saving silhouette. ... Lovely Mrs. George Marshall, seen at an official gathering with her distinguished husband, the Chief of Staff, was gowned in a floor-length frock of white, topped by a fitted jacket of pearl gray, embroidered in a scroll of white. . . . Blond Mrs. H. H. Rogers wears long gloves of pale blue suede that exactly match her pale-blue dinner gown. . . . Miss Vera Bloom has a dreamy

Deep in a political discussion the other evening was Mrs. Robert Bacon, strikingly gowned in a bouffant frock of white, thin material, painted with black fringe in a band below the hips, and about the neck and short sleeves. About her shoulders was a filmy scarf of white, edged deeply with white ostrich feathers tipped in black.... Senora de Oreamuno, who has the longest eyelashes in Washington, looked enchanting the other evening in a pure-white gown, with a halter decolletage, and banded in deep fringe. . . . Mrs. Wilder Baker sets off her dark good looks in a dinner frock printed with great, tropical flowers in vivid colors. . . . Mrs. Robert Herrick, who amazed her friends by moving all her lares and penates down from Boston into an apartment here, and getting completely settled in one week, gave her first dinner in her new home a few nights ago. She wore a striking gown of garnet red, with a low decoletage, the color being a perfect foil for her black hair and gardenia-like skin. Incidentally, it is interesting to note the increase in low-cut evening dresses seen recently, as compared with the "covered up" fashion that has been so popular.

Subdeb Joan Tucker, whirling about the dance floor on the terrace at Chevy Chase Club the other night, looked cool and crisp in a blue and white dotted evening dress, made with a full skirt and becoming round neckline. She tucked an orchid back of her pompadour as a finishing touch. Orchids were all over the place that evening, and Mrs. Conway Hunt sported two; one on the shoulder of her severely tailored gray crepe dinner gown, and the other poised in her dark hair. Washington's hottest days in a navy and white print daytime frock, topped with an off-theface hat of navy blue.

The roving fashion reporter also noted a smartly costumed lady on a local hotel roof the other evening. Her white pique dress was worn with purple shoes, gloves and jewelry—and even the wearer's fingernails were the exact shade of plum!

ties, and you can't take on other activities, keep as busy as you can at home. Not necessarily hard manual labor, and, for goodness sake, no extra kitchen police -but get busy at one quiet task or another-even if it is making out budgets and clothing lists and lunch box menus for fall. Catch up on your readingthere's bound to be a circulating library in your neighborhood. And as a good American, it is up to you to be on the alert

Aside from keeping your mind off the heat, there are a few other things you can do to make it bearable. Quick cool showers, sponge baths or cool tub baths are magic pickups, and even if your bathroom facilities are crowded, they take so little time that you should be able to manage a quick splash morning and evening to freshen you. If you find-as we old-timers havethat make-up is next to impossible to apply in the heat, try putting it on while your body is still slightly damp from the bath, or after a spray of cooling cologne, before putting on your clothes. Once on, good makeup will stay quite well-but getting it affixed to a wet face is a hopeless procedure.

Keep your underthings washed just as often as you possibly can, so they are crisp and dry when you put them on. If you like bath powder, use it, but the majority of Washington gals seem to prefer cologne as more refreshing. Have your hair cut short, and brush it often during the day, to get the feeling of air and coolness to the scalp. Take meticulous care of your feet and exercise your ankles occasionally while sitting at your

If you have a slim figure, go without a girdle on the hottest days-if you have to wear a foundation garment, choose one that is as light and cool as possible. There are plenty of them on the market if you will look for them. Wear clothes that are loose, with short sleeves and low necks. (No low backs for the office, please, and keep that neckline a discreet "V" or a moderate

Eat sensibly, drinking plenty of water, fruit juices, milk, lemonade and so on-but little or no alcohol. Salads, jellied soups, fresh fruits, whole wheat breads, and fresh vegetables are good choices for the hottest days. Water ices and ice creams recommended, too-but not to the exclusion of the other items.

Above all-take it easy and don't get mad about it. Washingtonians learned long, long ago that cussing the heat and the humidity only made them hotter, and did nothing to ease the pain. Keep cool mentally and you'll feel a lot cooler physically. And remember, it usually gets better by October!

Victory gardens were popular in 1917, even as they are now, but the attire of feminine gardeners presents a decided contrast to today's. Above, Girl Scouts begin a garden on the grounds of the D. A. R. Building during the days of the last war. Their costumes were correct, but hardly practical for working in what seems to be "difficult" ground.

A far cry from the simple, well-tailored bicycle outfit worn by Deanna Durbin was the costume adopted by a member of the motorcycle corps in 1917. Notice the long, cumbersome skirt, the flowing blouse and the high buttoned shoes. And how that hat ever stayed on is something the photographer did not explain!

Windows May Be Decorative Assets

Skillful Treatment With Draperies Can Change Entire Scale of Room

A window may be just an opening in the wall to let in light and air, and, as such, is able to be disguised to fit almost any interior, for it has no certain period or importance beyond this utilitarian purpose.

On the other hand, a window which has personality or period of its own or is framed in fine woodwork having good architectural detail has an importance which should be considered when it is curtained. Beyond this other factors of climate, exposure, scale of pattern and the purpose of the room all enter into your selection. In some instances there are the "problem" windows which must be planned individually. These are the round - topped windows, the Gothic, the corner modern, and the casement. Certain fabrics, patterns and curtain shapes have become identified with certain periods. With Tudor oak we think of a rough-textured fabric hung straight. Italian furniture seems to call for velvet, country homes for flowered chintz and sprigged nets and voiles. The Victorian

By Margaret Nowell. went in for lace curtains with overdraperies of ponderous fabrics with heavy loops and swags. Knowing the tempo of these times makes it possible to capture the true atmosphere of period rooms.

There is also the atmosphere of purpose-the "rightness" of a formal window treatment in a drawing room, the "rightness" of plain fabric in a library paneled in wood and lined with books, the "wrongness" of a playroom for a romping three-year-old which is frilly and fussy so that each pair of grubby hands pushing aside elaborate draperies leaves its mark.

The matter of proportion is most important. Many a small room is thrown out of scale by curtains with too much or too large a pattern. Many a large one looks unfurnished because the drapery material is inadequate in texture and pattern to the size of the room. Many of these things can not be settled should be hung up and lived with for a few days to find out just how room and curtains go together and what they do for each other. A window with fine architectural trim should utilize this feature as a frame and have the curtains placed within the inclosure. In this case the curtains should be of the simplest so that the fine frame gets its full share of importance and atten-

Curtain shapes produce definite visual effects. If the room has a low ceiling, long curtains hung to the floor will give it height. A too-high room may use a deep valance at the windows to help bring the ceiling down to normal height.

Climate has a great deal to do with the attractiveness of curtains, both in their design and material. The sheerest fabrics which flutter in the breeze with an open, pushed-back effect of overdrapery is the most that is acceptable in hot weather. Dampness and heat are injurious to many fabrics so that the ones which stand a difficult climate are the better choice.

Manufacturers have aided immeasurably by making sheer curtains, both the straight tailored type and the ruffled tie backs, in six or more lengths. In this way almost any window may be "fitted" perfectly without the necessity of even putting in a hem. In hot weather many windows in Washington are well dressed with only these sheer curtains and the addition of a decorative cornice to cover the heading at the top and possibly a pair of interesting, plastic tie backs.

For most round-top windows the fitted cornice with the decoratively curved lower edge is the solution for a graceful appearance. Below this sheer curtains hang to the floor or the sill with the possible addition of side draperies if the windows are wide enough. In any situation where two or three windows adjoin it is much better to treat them as one light opening. Though each window, such as a casement, may have its individual glass curtain to soften the incoming light—the whole bank should have a frame of drapery and valance that incloses the windows in a composition in proportion to the wall it decorates.

Bicycling, destined to become more than a form of fun and exercise, is a favorite pastime of Deanna Durbin. Representing the 1942 version of the cyclist, she chooses well-tailored slacks and comfortable play shoes to illustrate "what the well-dressed modern will wear" during the summer days ahead.

Arlington Fights Plan To Build ADA Homes On Lee Boulevard

County Board Calls Proposal Serious Threat To Zoning Ordinances

Arlington County Board today lodged a vigorous protest against the proposal of the Washington Alley Dwelling Authority to erect 288 family units on Lee boulevard on the ground it would seriously threaten the county's zoning ordinances.

The action came at the weekly meeting of the board in the Arlington Court House after Frank L. Deiter, county planning engineer, had reported the proposed frame dwellings are "absolutely and seriously against our zoning ordi-

The proposed frame structures do not conform to the county building code, he reported to the board, and in addition would be subject to rapid deterioration.

He disclosed that he had suggested to ADA authorities the use of other sites nearer to places of employment, including several within walking distance of the new Navy and War Department Buildings. Unanimous Opposition.

The board unanimously voted to oppose the move, "while there are other and better places for such homes to be built.

Board Chairman Edmund D Campbell stressed that the board fully intended to co-operate with the Government in finding other housing sites in this emergency, but that "we can't countenance these homes on the boulevard." The proposed family dwellings are to be built between Pershing drive and North Filmore street on Lee boulevard.

Winning Contract By THE FOUR ACES.

A Bad Discard

Four cards headed by a sevenspot may not seem important, but in today's hand they were the key to a slam contract.

South dealer. Both sides vulnerable. AQJ8♥ A874 4 10 9 7

♥ J 10 6 2 WE ♦ Q J 10 9 8 07654 4632 ▲ A K 1095 O Q 9 3 AAQJ8 The bidding:

South North West East Pass 34 Pass Pass Pass The bidding was not particularly good, but the contract was fairly logical. With a successful club finesse the slam would have been a laydown, and even when the finesse lost there was still some sort of play for the contract.

West opened the queen of diamonds, South winning with the king. Declarer next drew three rounds of trumps, ending in dummy, and East discarded a low diamond. The 10 of clubs was led for a finesse and West won with the king. He continued with the jack of diamonds, dummy winning with the ace, while South discarded the three of hearts.

Then South re-entered his hand with a club and ran the rest of his clubs and trumps. East discarded a heart on the fourth round of clubs, but parted with a second diamond on the fourth round of trumps and that was the fatal discard which allowed South to make his slam.

For when South led his last trump, dummy had the ace and a low heart and the three of diamonds. East had no diamonds, so West had to save a diamond to stop dummy's three-spot. West therefore had to blank the king of hearts. Dummy thereupon discarded the diamond and declarer made the last two tricks with the ace and queen of hearts. If East had kept one diamond and two hearts West could have discarded his diamonds and kept a small heart, and South would have been unable to make his contract.

By RAMON COFFMAN. While talking with Dr. John L Simon of New York City, I found that he had performed medical service in Spain at the time of the Franco revolt. He helped the soldiers on the Loyalist side; those soldiers suffered many attacks from German and Italian airplanes and tanks, as well as from the forces of Franco.

"While were on the Aragon front." said Dr. Simon, "we turned a kind of cave into a hospital. There were no buildings in the area which could be used for the purpose. Those which had existed before had been bombed heavily. So we used an excavation in the side of a cliff, with an overhanging ledge of rock serving as a roof. The place had been used as a stable, but we made it as clean as possible and laid down fresh hay to serve as bedding for the wounded."

I asked Dr. Simon whether he had gone through any narrow escapes. Here is his reply:

"On March 15, 1938, the remnants of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade were trying to hold the town of Caspe in Aragon. As battalion doctor, I came up to join the forces in the town. When I arrived, an English soldier known as 'Jim' came to my ambulance. He reported that a wounded men had not been brought behind the lines, and asked whether I could send help.

"Instead of waiting to send a first-aid man, I went with the soldier myself. Through the main street o: Caspe we walked, seeing neither friend nor foe. A quarter of a mile down, we turned to the left on a road leading out of town. "As we walked along that road we sundenly saw what looked like a million lights bursting before us.

"Happily for us, the tank was not coming forward. It had turned back! Doubtless its inmates feared there were many dynamiters besides us in the neighborhood.

Miss Carroll and Hope Hit Merry Pace in Earle Farce

'My Favorite Blond' Is Wacky Tale Of Spies and a Talented Penguin With Natural Comedy Skill

By JAY CARMODY.

That great zany, Bob Hope; a penguin named Percy, and Madeleine Carroll pool their comedy skill and beauty-Miss C's. naturally-in "My Favorite Blond," which opened at the Earle yesterday. The result is incomparably silly, but since that is what is expected of Hope, it will have to be taken for what it is. His fans will do that, and yesterday's opening indicated there are enough of them that the anti-Hope set may stay away unanimously without.

ever being missed. "My Favorite Blond," which is somewhat tardy in reaching Wash-many implausible ones creep into it. It has the further virtue that the sheer quantity of its wisecracking dialogue and general produces much that is comic in line and situation. In other words, it is impossible to try that hard to be funny without achieving it upon occasion.

The license of farce writing is utilized to the limit by the authors of "My Favorite Blond." Their general idea is that a beautiful blond agent and her unwilling assistant

A clear intimation of the casualness of "My Favorite Blond" is the sudden appearance of Bing Crosby in it. As a jest one day during the shooting of the picture, Crosby, clad in overalls, crept into the eye of the camera, was picked up by it in the act of lending a match to Hope. It was polished up a bit with a line or two of dialogue and left there to become one of the best laughs of the farce.

Apart from that, the most refreshing notes in the careening course of "My Favorite Blond" are those deriving from the presence of Otherwise when the picture goes all out to be fun it twists into such familiar shapes as the meeting between the hero and the foreign agents, the flight of the pair in a stolen airplane, their arrest on the charge of stealing watermelons by a sheriff who does not know they are wanted on a trumped-up but serious-looking charge of murder.

Miss Carroll and Hope play their respective roles with a fetching lack of restraint, each becomingly aware that the faster they move the less chance the audience will have to brood upon the flimsy structure of the plot.
