Six Billion Tax Bill Reported, Fund Cuts Kill Income Rate 6%, Surtax 7% Up; Price Control, Excess Profits Levy Is Set at $87\frac{1}{2}$ Says Henderson

Measure Still Short Of Treasury Needs

A record-breaking $6,250,000,-000 wartime tax bill, falling heavily on both corporations and individuals, was approved finally by the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday. Product of more than 18 weeks of work, the 325-page measure proposes to raise $2,485,400,000 in corporation taxes and $2.958.000.000 in individual income taxes.

The final draft of the bill provides in general as follows:

1. Individuals—Increase present normal tax rate from 4 to 6 per cent and the present surtax graduated scale of 6 per cent on the first $2,000 of net income to 13 per cent. Beginning in January, 5 per cent of each person's taxable income would be deducted from paychecks or pay envelopes, with the accumulations used as a credit against 1943 taxes due in 1944.

2. Corporations — Increase in the present normal and surtax from 31 to 45 per cent and substitution of a flat 871/2 per cent excess profits tax rate for the present scale ranging from 35 to

3. Excises—Increases in excises on liquor, wine, beer, tobacco, cigars, train fares, telephone bills, freight and express shipments, race track bets.

Far Below Treasury Figure. Huge as it is, the bill is short of the Treasury's goal. Secretary Morgenthau asked the committee to raise about $8,700,000,000 in additional revenue to swell to $17,000,-000,000 the Federal Government's prospective receipts this fiscal year.

But the committee chose to go only part way in that program, and defeated attempts to write in a 5 per cent retail sales tax which experts estimated would bring in about $2,500,000,000.

Chairman Doughton said that the $6,250,000,000 yield from the measure-computed by Treasury experts -probably was too low. He made the personal prediction that the revenue would be closer to $7,000,-000.000.

"The Treasury was too low last year by about $1,000,000,000 in estimating the revenue from the 1941 bill," he commented. "My opinion is that if business continues as it now appears it will, this bill will raise $7,000,000,000.

Representative Cooper, Democrat, of Tennessee, speaking for Representative Doughton, said the committee had adopted a motion as its a mission of destruction will learn last action making all of its decis-ions final. Farm Federation

Amendments attached to the OPA appropriation bill by the Senate Appropriations Committee restricting the agency's operating funds would destroy its program for controlling prices and fighting inflation, Price Administrator Henderson said last night in a sharply worded state-

Mr. Henderson accused the American Farm Bureau Federation of sponsoring a "co-ordinated program" to destroy effective price control not only on farm commodities "but on all things made from farm products."

The committee amendment, which the OPA head held would give Secretary of Agriculture Wickard virtual veto power over price ceilings set by OPA upon processed and finished agricultural products, Mr. Henderson said, was "proposed and drafted" by the federation. If it becomes law, he added, it will be necessary to repeal immediately the Deputies Suspended general maximum price regulation, Pending U. S. Probe which fixes ceiling prices for most things people eat, wear and use.

Fund Set at 120 Million. OPA's budget for the year was Of Ekland's Escape set by the committee at $120,000,000, about $41,000,000 under the figure approved by the Budget Bureau and $30,000,000 under what Mr. Henderson later said he could "skim by" on.

This reduction could be met, the administrator said, by eliminating 96 planned district offices, by cutting out eight expected rationing programs, by eliminating rent control in 100 of the already-announced around it, the two deputy marareas (affecting a quarter of the shals from whom the alleged country's population), by eliminat- sniper-slayer escaped were orrationing boards and by a complete ing investigation by the Justice Ramspeck to Propose change in compliance and enforce- Department.

Mr. Henderson said he believed it would be necessary to return to Congress later for additional funds even though we shall go to the limit of our administrative ingenuity in attempting to work under the limitations of the appropriation." He said he would intensify efforts to administer rent, rationing and price control within any appropriation allotted by Congress, but that he felt "a deep sense of personal failure in that I did not convince the Congress that inflation can run like wild fire here and now, and that my estimates of administrative needs were moderate."

Sees Policy Abandonment. The price administrator held his sharpest criticism for the series of restrictions the Senate committee placed on use of the proposed appropriation. He said these "would require reversal in actions alreadtaken so broad as to constitute abandonment of policies already written into the price control act

The committee amendment which requires Senate approval of all OPA employes earning in excess of $4.500. including those now on the payroll, also would cripple the agency, Mr. Henderson said, and, in some instances, would inject politics into the administration of price, rent and rationing control. Wait of Two Months Is Abandoned Under New Procedure

Lost, stolen or destroyed war rationing books may be replaced promptly under new procedure announced by the Office of Price Administration. Heretofore, consumers who were so unfortunate as to lose books were forced to wait two months before obtaining new ones.

The amendment authorizes local rationing boards to issue new books before the end of the two-month period in cases where the boards are convinced that books actually were lost. Local boards also are permitted to issue replacement certificates to those whose sugar purchase certificates are lost, stolen or destroyed. This applies to commercial and industrial users.

In another amendment, persons living in remote areas, who are handicapped by transportation difficulties, are permitted to buy sugar in quantities up to 12 pounds per person at one time.

123,000 Motorists In District Register For Gasoline Books

OPA Reported Planning To Eliminate Rule For Buffer Zone

Registration of motorists under the permanent gasoline rationing plan ended yesterday with 123,000 District car owners, some with shiny imousines and others with jalopies, in possession of A coupon books.

Those who failed to register in the three-day period must wait until July 24 and apply to a local rationing board, OPA regulations state The period is designed to afford the boards opportunity to consider applications for supplemental rations and other matters before permanent rationing becomes effective July 22. Meanwhile, it was learned from OPA sources that the part of rationing regulations setting up a 50mile buffer zone flanking the re-stricted Eastern area will be eliminated. Such an amendment of regulations is expected early this

Officials felt, it was said, that the rule prohibiting dealers in the 50mile zone from selling gas to motorists from the rationed section was too drastic. A plan which pos-sibly would extend the zone and place some restriction on sale to rationed drivers will be substituted.

A Book Good for 192 Gallons.

The buffer plan was to prevent motorists from burning up valuable rubber in the quest for gas. It was also a protection to dealers just within the rationed area who are new virtually without customers. while dealers over the line are doing a boom business. Registration in the District ended at 1 p.m. yesterday. In other parts of the metropolitan area schools were open until late last night. Lawson J. Cantrell, District supervisor of registration, said the total figure was approximately 15,000 short of the total signed in May under the temporary card plan U. S. Will Replace when trucks and bus owners also were registered at the schools. The number of applicants increased as the registration deadline neared, Norse Ships Lost in though Mr. Cantrell reported no serious jams as occurred in May.

most mortorists will be good for 192 gallons of gas, which will carry him at 15 miles a gallon a total of 2,880 miles. The A book allotment must last for a year. Each page of eight ecupons represents a two-month supply and must be used in that period to be valid. Four gallons of gas may be purchased on July 22 and thereafter with each coupon. The unit value may be increased or decreased at any time by OPA in accord with the over-all supply.

Gas Situation Called "Tight." engaged the last three days registering owners of trucks, buses, ambulances and non-highway users of gasoline, such as boat owners, already are receiving a number of applications for supplemental rations. Extra gas will be given to preferred classes already announced and to others for occupational driving who have formed car-sharing clubs and whose needs exceed the 150-milesper-month of occupational driving provided by the A book.

Of more immediate concern to motorists, the gasoline supply situation for the week end was reported "tight," but not so short as on re-

Some stations were closed; just what percentage could not be determined. However, Harry Wainwright, director of the Retail Gasoline Dealers of the District, said motorists "should have no difficulty obtaining fuel." He explained the second third of the July quota of gasoline was delivered to most stations yesterday.

Mr. Wainwright said he was not notified of any rush at stations for

Meanwhile, in Maryland, Col. OPA had acted to assure extra gas rations for Maryland's 15,000 volunteer air raid spotters. The plan, Col. Barrett said, would apply throughout the rationed area. Observers first would submit application to district commanders or chief observers. These officials would determine the amount needed for civilian defense work, then local rationing boards would act on the certified applications.

Laval-German Deal On Expanding Nazi Controls' Reported

Government Would Go Back to Paris Under Accord, Bern Says

B) the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, July 11.—The Moscow radio tonight broadcast a dispatch by the official Soviet news agency Tass from Bern, Switzerland, reporting "competent French sources" had declared that the Vichy Government had agreed to give Germany control of all important war installations, railways and ports in unoccupied France.

The dispatch said the Germans in return had agreed to a request of Chief of Government Pierre Laval to transfer French Government offices from Vichy to Paris.

These sources were represented as saying the removal of the demarcation line betwen the occupied and unoccupied zones was a part of the

Tass said Laval also was reported to have granted the Germans permission to establish a naval commission at Toulon, French Mediterranean base, with extensive powers, including the right to maintain 4,000 soldiers in a special zone near

Laval also was said to have promsed to militarize 130,000 members of French Youth Associations, which would be armed and trained by the Germans into "mobile defense" units to be stationed along the coast. Most of Nazi Demands.

Laval, since he became chief-ofgovernment, has spoken openly in favor of collaboration with the Germans. If the Tass reports are borne out it appears that he has given the Germans most of what they had been demanding from Marshal Petain in vain for more than a year.

There was no mention in the Bern report of the fate of the French Navy, but virtually all the French naval units in home waters were stationed at Toulon, which was said to have been turned over to the Germans.

It also was not clear whether the surrender of ports would include those in the French colonies as well as on the continent, but it seemed likely that this would be

If so, Germany would be free to use miles of French North African colonies, such as Tunisia. This would greatly simplify Marshal Erwin Rommel's problem of getting supplies to his hard-pressed forces in Egypt, for he could ship from Marseille, Toulon and other French ports directly across the narrow Western Mediterranean to French North Africa, avoiding the dangerous trip past Malta.

Significant Development. The arming of French youth organizations also was regarded as pare a tho significant, since the Germans up to now have been careful to keep arms | world conditions at the fingertips of out of French hands. The Germans evidently believed Laval could control these groups and use them to help repulse an invasion, but the newspaper said, "We have all the fact that they would take this possibilities not only of holding the chance seemed to indicate the Germans were desperately short of men in western Europe. One of the important factors which Marshal Petain had always injected into any discussion of collaboration with the Germans was the release of the 1,500,000 French soldiers who have been prisoners of war in Germany since June, 1940. No mention was made of this in the Bern account of Laval's agreement.

Brig. Gen. Ira C. Eaker Heads U. S. Bomber Command in Europe

Decorates Flyers Who Participated in Raid On Netherlands

By the Associated Press.

UNITED STATES ARMY AIR BASE IN BRITAIN, July 11. -A bronzed Texan who learned flying tricks as a test pilot was disclosed tonight as chief of the United States Army bomber command in the European theater, entrusted with the task of blasting an invasion path in Western Europe.

He is Brig. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, native of Llano County, Texas, and is second in command to Maj. Gen. Carl Spaatz, newly named commander of the growing United States Army Air Forces in Europe.

For two months now, stocky Gen. Eaker has been whipping the American bomber command into shape and his men are impatient to "get at 'em and get it over with." It appeared that their wish would not be long in coming true.

Thus far, they have taken part in only one small bombing of German-held airdromes in the Netherlands, but they've heard German aircraft in the distance and, on one night, the dull "crump, crump" of exploding bombs some miles away. Aside from that, the men have been "shaking down" in their new sur-

The decorated men said they were of 1,000 feet, landing safely in the "too busy to be scared" during the rear of the 3600 block of Nichols action for which they were honored. Kegelman, a major at 26, brought back his Boston bomber from the

Pan-Americans Plan To Enforce Anti-Axis Manifesto Drawn Here

Treasury Counsel Calls Resolutions 'Dynamic'; Many Delegates Linger

Delegates from the 21 republics this hemisphere to the Inter-American Conference on Systems of Economic and Financial Control soon will begin planning ways to implement in their own countries the eight resolutions adopted here last week to restrict Axis influence. The resolutions were character-ized by Edward H. Foley, general counsel of the Treasury Depart-ment and president of the conference, as "dynamic, bristling with the call to real and positive action.'

Called Answer to Axis. "This is the unanimous and militant answer of the 21 American republics to the Axis aggressor," declared Mr. Foley. "The program as adopted by the conference if put into effect will give the Americas a unified system of finacial and eco-nomic controls that should result in breaking off all trade and negotiations with the Axis powers and go a long way toward supplementing controls in existence in some of the countries of the Western Hemisphere at the present time."

Warning that the aggressor country representatives in the Americas blows meekly," Mr. Foley declared, They will fight back with all the viciousness of a cornered rat, and with all the intrigue and pressure tactics symbolized by totalitarian aggression and cunning. It will take real courage for us to discharge our duties in the spirit and with the determination evidenced at this con-

Speaking for the Latin-American delegates at the closing session Friday, Dr. J. J. Gonzalez-Gorrondona of Venezuela declared: "We must strive to destroy utterly all instru-ments forged by the aggressor nations to subvert our institutions and fight us in our own land . . . We still have a difficult task ahead, not only in the enforcement of the suggested measures, but in the adoption of any other complementary measures that may be necessary."

Hope for Increase In Sugar Allowance Held Out by OPA

U. S. Obtaining 300,000 Tons a Month More Than Amount Consumed

Hope for further increase in the sugar ration was held out yesterday by the Office of Price Administration in announcing results of a survey which showed that the United States now is obtaining about 30,000 tons more sugar a month than is being consumed.

The survey, in which the OPA said sugar consumption was shown to be "only slightly less" than the total of production and imports, was designed to end rumors that the supply is sufficiently large to make sugar rationing unnecessary.

OPA said, however, that the excess of supply will enable the Nation to bring carry-over stocks, now far below normal, back to a sound level. If there is any remaining excess when this has been accomplished, additional allowances will be distributed to consumers.

Plan Reported Working Well.

Rationing has prevented a national sugar disaster, and the plan is working well throughout the country, it was said. The ration must be continued on approximately the same basis "to assure every one a fair share of the commodity,' OPA added.

The country now is consuming about 475,000 tons of sugar a month. This includes supplies in the armed services and lease-lend shipments. The supply from crops in this country and all imports totals about 504,523 tons a month. Estimates are based on figures supplied by the War Production Board, the Department of Agriculture, the Shipping Priorities Committee and upon OPA's own studies.

The bulk of the sugar supply is brought in ships from Puerto Rico and Cuba. If the rate of imports can be maintained at the level of the first half of the year the sugar situation, with each consumer on a restricted ration, will be considered basically sound. However, if warfare cuts down the rate of import. or if the yield in this country falls below expectations, the rationing system will have to be tightened. OPA said.

Visible sugar stocks now on hand total 1,654,000 tons compared to 1,-968,000 tons this time last year, a decrease of 16 per cent. Imports for May and June were 200,000 tons more than officials had counted on, it was explained. This accounted more than is being used a year at current rates. OPA said this margin is too dangerous for normal times, but not so dangerous under rationing where immediate curtailment of consumption can be put into effect when the need arises.

Synthetic Auto Tires Will Equal Natural Rubber, Experts Hold

But Expected Output of 800,000 Tons by 1944 May Not End Rationing

By DAVID J. WILKIE. Wide World Automotive Editor.
DETROIT, July 11.—When synthetic rubber finally gets into the tires of the average motorist, those tires to all practical purposes will be just about as good as any made wholly of natural rubber.

That's the conviction of experts of the rubber industry who right now have the responsibility of developing the synthetic program to the point where production will approximate 800,000 tons a year.

But while these rubber authorities see the way clearing, they emphasize that it will require time.

Since military and essential civilian needs will increase as present tires wear out, even an 800,000 ton synthetic rubber production by 1944 -supplemented by an intensified scrap rubber roundup to sustain the production of reclaimed rubberdoes not assure the average motorist of anything like an unrestricted supply of passenger car tires.

See 350,000-Ton Total. The rubber experts say that from one and one-quarter pounds of scrap rubber they can reclaim about one pound of the urgently needed substance, and that with existing facilities approximately 350,000 tons of reclaim can be made annually— if a steady flow of scrap rubber can eting cost of the tires.

One company made up and distributed for test purposes a couple of years ago tires in which about 50 per cent of synthetic was used. Another produced and successfully tested passenger car tires in which synthetic replaced all the natural rubber ordinarily used except for approximately one ounce in insulation around the bead wire.

The cost of the synthetic used in these tires ranged up to nearly 60 cents a pound. The industry leaders believe, however, that on larger scale output synthetic rubber could be produced for as low as 25 cents a pound (Standard Oil, in a house organ, has published 11 cents as the cost of butyl rubber). They point out that in normal times rubber grown in the Orient could be sold commercially in New York at a price of 10 to 12 cents a pound.

Scout Destruction Tales. This natural rubber, leading rubber industry executives assert, will have to be reckoned with in the post-war period by any interests considering construction of large scale synthetic producing factories. They discount reports that widespread destruction of the rubber Japanese occupation of Malaya and the Netherlands East Indies.

The motorists' quick hopes rest largely on development of a rubber substitute that will provide satisfactory recapping material for an "interim" tire.

The most promising progress in this respect has been made through a modification of thiokol, one of the oldest of the rubber substitutes, but heretofore impractical for use in

600 Volunteers Open Share-Car Drive This Week

Cards to Be Left at D. C. Homes Urging Autoists to Enroll

Six hundred "Victory Volunteers" of the Metropolitan Area Civilian Defense will begin this week to carry the District's part of national "share your car" program into every block of the city under a program announced yesterday by Civilian Defense Co-ordinator Young. "To bring the 'share your car' program to full fruition as an effective and necessary war effort requires the combined efforts of us all -governmental and private agencies, volunteers, the newspapers, radio stations and every individual," said Mr. Young. "I am sure that every car owner and resident of Washington will co-operate with our civilian defense Victory Volunteers in this new undertaking."

The program will get under way with meetings in areas throughout the city, starting tomorrow night with a meeting in the Howard Park area, followed by one Tuesday in the Foxhall area. Machinery for bringing about the general sharing of cars will be set up at the various meetings, it was explained.

Young Calls Conferences. Plans for the Victory Volunteers, which do not mean that other "share-your-car" programs already under way are to be supplanted, were worked out at the direction of Commissioner Young at conferences among officials and volunteers of the various agencies concerned, it was said.

The Victory Volunteers, part of the Civilian Mobilization Division, carried out their first assignment Wednesday in the distribution to retailers of ceiling price instructions for the Office of Price Adminis-

The plan for the car-sharing drive, it was said, is to divide the work of covering the city according to the 66 civilian defense areas, with a chairman for each area. In most areas it is planned to follow the civilian defense system of zones and sectors, with an area subchief in charge of each sector. Workers are to report, the local OCD office said, to their area chiefs, who, in turn, will report to their zone, and so on up the line of command to the Consumers' Committee, headed by Mrs. Charlotte Warner.

Cards to Be Distributed. Mrs. Anita Sufrin is chairman of the "share-your-car" subcommittee.

Each worker will be provided with cars, prepared by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, for distribution to each home in her sector. Car owners will be asked to all in their name, address, telephone number, capacity of car, address of employment, times they leave home. and work, whether they rotate the use of the car at present and space for extra passengers.

Housewives will be "invited," if was said, to answer questions about shopping, where they go, how many other shoppers they can and will take, when they go shopping and the question, "do you carry liability

Pointing out that there are 5,700 blocks in the city, Conrad Van Hyning, chief of the Civilian Mobilization Division, issued a call yesterday for more men and women to enlst in the Victor Volunteers so that this particular participation in the war effort can be brought about effectively and as quickly as possible.

Co-Operation Sought. On the reverse side of the card, signed by Commissioner Young, Mr. Van Duzer and Mr. Van Hyning, is the new building and the District, the following appeal for co-opera-

Hunter Moves to Get Institutions' Status Clearly Defined

Possible tax relief for hosiptals, charitable, patriotic and educational institutions, recently placed on the tax rolls by the District Commissioners under strict interpretation of tax laws, is promised by Representative Hunter, Democrat, of Ohio, chairman of the fiscal affairs subcommittee of the House District Committee.

He has asked Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech to draft new legislation specifically defining and clarifying the District tax provisions with respect to such institutions. He said last night his purpose is to use that draft during a thorough study of the tax law, to determine to what extent various institutions should be exempt. Mr. Hunter was aroused to take such action by many protests re-

The specific total property valua-tion involved in those actions which will result in revenue to the District was $1,034,805. In some cases the Commissioners found that part of the property belonging to an institution could properly be considered tax-exempt under the law, while the rest of it should pay taxes. Girls' Seminary Involved. In the matter of Mount Vernon Seminary, a girls' school "for wealthy pupils," at Nebraska avenue and Ward Circle, which had been in the courts for several years over tax cases, the Commissioners decided that two parcels belonging to the institution were "excess land and over and above that required . . . for educational purposes, and therefore not entitled to exemption." With the exception of Anne Arundel Countly, the partial blackout will last throughout Maryland from 9 p.m. Wednesday to 5 a.m. Thursday. As a result of a compromise agreement between Col. Barrett and Col. John de P. Douw, Anne Arundel County defense director, that county will black out from 9 p.m. to midnight with voluntary co-operation thereafter. Col. Douw has declared the county has insufficient air-raid warden strength to enforce the all-night test. Planes Make Check.

Col. Barrett said the civil air patrol would check the success of the blackout throughout the State if weather permitted flights. Objectives of the test, Col. Barrett

To mobilize and employ all units of the citizens' defense corps; to test communities' ability to function normally during the blackout; to test the obscuring of visibility; to check citizens' co-operation during an unannounced total test, and to check the adequacy of the warning

At some time during the partial blackout, he announced, there would be an unannounced air-raid warning test lasting one-half hour. During the partial test, street and care will make Quota Set at $200,000 lights will burn and cars will move.

Railroads Are Exempted. When the total blackout is signaled, all except emergency traffic will be stopped. Official and emergency vehicles will be allowed to move with dimmed lights at 15 miles

Fire apparatus functioning for defense drills must use depressed lights and move at reduced speed. If they are called to a fire, they will move normally. The blackout bulletin exempts industrial plants on war orders, rail-

Not only would Virginia passengers be greatly inconvenienced should the proposal be carried out, Mr. Geldman explained, but they also would be forced to pay a double fare, since there is no transfer reciprocity between the Arnold bus lines and the Capital Transit Co. by public transportation systems to regularly established bus lines. The proposal was discussed at the last meeting of the Fairfax County School Board with representatives of the Arnold Line and it was believed that a system can be worked out satisfactorily, with regular school bus drivers operating the

Arlington's War Bond

Arlington County's quota for the sale of War bonds and stamps in July is $200,000, it was announced yesterday by J. Foster Hagan, local committee chairman. This is a decrease from the June quota, he said, when the figure was $229,300.

Reports from six local issuing agents reveal that the June sales in "E" bonds was $107,368.75, which was slightly under May sales. Mr. Hagan said this doesn't mean that Arlings ton County has fallen short of it quota, since sales of "F" and "G bonds are included in the quota and the report on the local sales in thes two classifications has not been re ceived from Richmond. Mrs. Virginia Ekstrand, chairman

Shortage of Tubes Threatens to Close 570 Radio Stations

Stocks Running Out As Manufacture Is Halted by War

By WILLIAM J. WHEATLEY. More than 570 of 906 radio broadeast stations will be forced off the air within another year, Federal Communications Commission officials estimated yesterday unless steps are taken promptly to provide replacement tubes for transmitters. With a view to presenting the problem to the War Production Board, the Board of War Communications yesterday sent to the stations a questionnaire on tubes. Earlier in the defense program when the supply of strategic materials became tight, plans were formulated to guard against such a situation by working out a tentative plan of pooling tubes.

Plan Failed to Work. But the plan proved increasingly ineffective because stations with spares did not desire to give them up to some station whose tubes had failed, particularly since the manufacture of tubes for commercial broadcasting was halted.

All the transmitting tube manufacturers now are said to be engaged in the manufacture of such equipment for the Army and Navy. This, however, it was said, has not closed the commercial broadcasters absolutely, because they are able to get tubes rejected by the Army and Navy because they do not meet the rigid specifications of the services. But, officials pointed out, even this as more and more tubes end their period of usefulness. These large tubes, ranging in price from $1,000 to $5,000 apiece, hours of use, but it was said that actually they serve from 5,000 to 9.000 hours, and in some cases as will not take care of the situation long as 20,000 hours. May Be Nursed Along. But many of the present tubes in use, it was said, may be made by careful "nursing" to last longer under war conditions. To remedy the situation, the WPB may be asked to provide for a period of manufacture. The materials situation is not as serious as the manufacturing. Each of the tubes, according to engineers, uses no more than a pound of copper and a small quantity of tungsten Stations expected to be hit hardest are the smaller ones, because their financial condition has not permitted them to keep spare tubes in

In District Gathered 2,010,995 Pounds

Depots to Remain Open For Additional Gifts To Campaign Here

Although District scrap rubber depots will discontinue paying 1 cent a pound for salvaged rubber, the collection centers will be maintained to receive donations from citizens eager to help the war effort, Chairman James E. Colliflower of the District Salvage Committee said vesterday.

Final collection figures for the drive which ended Friday showed the District contributed 2,010,995 pounds of rubber, 1,910,396 pounds being received at gasoline stations and 100,599 pounds from other depots, such as shoe shops, police and fire stations and garages. In addition, rubber dealers have on hand about 311,450 pounds.

Draws Throng To Water Gate

Argentinità's Aides, Conductor Share Plaudits With Her

By ALICE EVERSMAN. The fame of Argentinita, Spanish dancer, drew a large audience to the Water Gate last evening in spite of the fact that the concert by the National Symphony came on an off night due to the rain of Friday. The latter part of the program was almost exclusively for Argentinita and the two dancers of her group, Pilar Lopez and Fredrico Rey. Their success, which was more than ordinary, was enhanced by the expert conducting of Francis Garzia, who from his long residence in Argentina, has the sense of the rhythms of Spanish dances to a high degree.

The exquisite grace of the three dancers and the complete harmony of all bodily movements were climaxed in those of Argentinita herself. #### How Many Tons of Blood Does the Heart Pump Daily?

Although the average person has only 6 to 7 pints of blood normally, it circulates through the body so fast that the hear: probably pumps 9 to 10 tons of blood daily. Many people never realize that the blood stream must travel at this terrific speed in order to keep you alive. As you know, blood is made up of millions of tiny red blood cells. Each of these cells picks up a load of life-giving oxygen from the lungs—then rusnes off to all parts of the body and releases its cargo to hungry living tissues. When the oxygen is burned up, the cells then carry off waste substance, called carbon dioxide, back through the lungs where it is eliminated.

AUE, ROY A. In loving memory of our dear son, ROY A. AUE, who departed this life six years ago today, July 12, 1936. It is not the tears at the time that are shed
And tell of the heart that is broken,
But the silent tears in the after years
And remembrance fondly spoken. God knows how much I miss you. Roy,
Never shall your memory fade:
Loving thoughts shall ever wander
To the spot where you are laid.
MOTHER. MARTHA E. AUE.

BROWN, GRIFFIN. In loving remembrance of my dear son. GRIFFIN BROWN, who passed away fifteen years ago today, July 12, 1927.

Plane Makers Ask OPA to Suggest Stabilized Wage

Labor Assails Proposal, Throwing Los Angeles Parley in Deadlock

By the Associated Press. LOS ANGELES, July 11.-Warplane makers asked the Office of Price Administration today to suggest a stabilized wage scale after the Government rejected labor's plea for an estimated $125,000,000 annual increase.

Labor representatives at the Government - sponsored management labor conference to fix wages promptly assailed the manufacturers' suggestion and threw the parley into a deadlock at the end of its first six days.

Paul R. Porter, wage stabilization chief of the War Production Board, told the conferees that pay boosts jointly requested earlier in the week by both the CIO and AFL "would not only contribute to an upward spiral in the cost of living, but would unstabilize employe' relations in other war and essential industries.'

Wants Big Turnover Stopped. Foster W. Harper, deputy chairman of the War Manpower Commission, demanded that a great turnover of labor in war industries be stopped. He attributed the turnover both to labor migration and to enlistments in military services. Management, representing nine

Soldiers Held on Check, Impersonation Charges

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 11.-Two soldiers arrested by FBI agents in a beach-front hotel pleaded guilty today before United States Commissioner C. Bruce Surran to charges of impersonating officers and obtaining funds in violation of the Federal Criminal Code. They waived extradition and were taken

Mr. Surran said the soldiers, Kenneth W. Mead, 23, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Frank J. Lee, 23, New York, had admitted quitting Fort Bragg. N. C., a month ago without official leave. He said both Mead and Lee admitted cashing "rubber checks," as many as 15 in one day and ranging in value from $10 to $73, in New York, Brooklyn, Newark and other Northern New Jersey communities.

ark, E. E. Conroy, assistant FBI director, said checks totaling more than $700 had been traced to the pair, although the amount might go higher. He said Mead and Les had posed as Army lieutenants most of the time, but that Mead recently had "promoted" himself to captain.

Community War Fund Receives Its Papers Of Incorporation

Group Can Now Proceed With Plans for October Drive, Chairman Says

With the receipt this week of its incorporation papers, the Community War Fund of Washington becomes the largest single private fund-raising organization ever launched in the District, according to Edward C. Graham, general chairman of the fund.

The incorporation, Mr. Graham said, makes it possible for the War Fund to proceed with planning all the details for the beginning of the campaign in late October.

Drive Organization Needed.

The incorporation invests in the fund's board of trustees authority to "establish and provide an efficient and practical mode of collecting and to collect and receive voluntary contributions and donations, and to distribute the same or the proceeds thereof to selected institutions, organizations and agencies of Washington, D. C., and the suburbs thereof, for their use, operations and maintenance in the doing of charity relief, recreational and welfare work and to national and international organizations and agencies for their use, operation and maintenance of medical, recreational, charitable and relief work connected with the state of war now existing * * *."

"Our most pressing job right now," Mr. Graham said, "is the setting up of a campaign organization. This will recruit well over 10,000 volunteers to raise, in one single appeal, funds for relief of suffering here at home and abroad, as well as for service to our fighting forces.'

Score of Honor Students Receive Academic Awards at Ceremony

Georgetown University observed the formal opening of the College of Arts and Sciences yesterday with convocation in Gaston Hall at which the new dean, the Rev. Stephen F. McNamee, S. J., presented a score of honor students for academic rewards. Five of the students are from the District. Dean McNamee, whose appointment was announced about two weeks ago, took over his duties Friday, when the usual Votive Mass of the Holy Ghost was celebrated in observance of the new academic term. A native of Washington and graduate of Gonzaga, he had been chairman of the faculty of philosophy at Georgetown for a number

The Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president, presented medals and awards at the morning convocation. Fourteen students on the year's honor list, received the grade of "A" in all subjects of their respective classes during the previous semester. They were:

Juniors: William L. Amoroso, Washington; Edward J. Callahan, Minnesota; Charles W. Daly, jr. Connecticut: Edward J. Gorman New Jersey; Leon A. LeBuffe, Washington; John F. McArt, Washington; Samuel P. McCarran, Washington; John M. McLaughlin, Pennsylvania; Carlton R. Sickles, Washington, and William A. Spencer, Oklahoma. Sophomores: William C. Redman,

Washington, and William L. Hard-P. Maloney, New York, and James A. Schroer, Texas. Special undergraduate prizes were awarded to the following: The Edward Douglas White medal for debate, Vincent J. Mulvaney, '44, Dahlgren Medal.

The Dahlgren medal on integral and differential calculus, William C. Redman, Washington. The Kidwell medal in junior physics, Carlton R. Sickles, '43, The Quicksall medal in Shakes speare, James A. King, '43, Hawaii. The Horace medal for translation of odes of Horace, Robert C. Danaher, '45, Connecticut. The O'Brien medal in junior philosophy, Edward J. Callahan, '43,

It was announced that the former for a while longer in connection with the opening of the term before going to New York City to take up new duties there. He will be parish priest of St. Ignatius Loyola Church.

31.041.61 Nurses Ordered to Help Relieve Hospitals' Needs

Because of the serious shortage of nurses for general duty in Washington hospitals, the Nurses' official Registry here sent notification yesterday to all graduate nurses that all private duty nurses will be asked to perform one month of general duty annually.

They will do this work at the hospital rate prevailing at the time their services are requested, it was

The registry announced all private duty nurses are being asked to accept daily relief at the prevailing private duty salary. Any request for a nurse for two weeks duty or for a shorter period will be considered on a daily basis.

If private duty nurses are unable to go on duty for the month requested by the registry, they will be responsible for providing a substitute. Requests for exemptions will be considered by the governing body of the Alumnae Association.

Silber had lived in British South Africa so long that he spoke English like a native, and the few who knew he had been born in Germany had either forgotten or discounted that fact. He fought for England against the Boers, and his record was enviable. Becomes British Censor.

But Jules Silber was a German. When in 1914, the first World War began, his only thought was how he could best serve the land of his birth. With Silber, thought and action went hand in hand, so next we find him in England, armed with ing, Nebraska. Freshmen: Edward his flawless English, and documents testifying to his deeds for England against the Boers. That German was his native tongue never occurred to the English, and his command of German, plus his record, placed him on the spot he most desired—the Censor's Office. For Silber, the post was perfection itself. Giving him access to vast amounts of confidential information, it also immunized him to the three greatest risks facing all spies. These are: Accounting for the spy's presence in the country where he works, accounting for his income, and the sending and receiving of messages.

Reported by Shopkeeper. Silber's presence in England was legitimate. He worked in the censor's office. His income from the censor's office was sufficient to keep him. As he sent Berlin only such dean of the college, the Rev. John information as came to his hand as Grattan, S. J., will remain here censor he had to receive no order from his German chiefs. And, as censor, he could pass his own spy messages under his own official seal. He was suspected only once. Sil-

National Secretary, University Director Named as First Step

To enable Catholic University lumni Association to have a more mportant part in advancing the ffairs of the institution, the Board of Governors of the graduate body has ena fulltime national secretary and established the new post of university director, representing the alumni, to carry forward the enlarged program planned by the men and women who have received their deschool grees from the Father O'Connor.

Wilfred D. Howell, a graduate of the school of arts and sciences in 1928 and who has long been identified with Catholic University in administrative capacities, has assumed the post of national secretary. The Rev. P. J. O'Connor, who likewise received his bachelor of arts degree at the university while a lay student in 1924 and who since his ordination to the priesthood has been engaged in various teaching posts on the faculty, has become university director.

Mr. Howell will deal directly with the alumni and alumnae of the university, while Father O'Connor will serve as liaison officer between the graduate groups and the administrative body. ## Bill to Give District Congress Delegate Draws Support

Representative Paddock's Proposal Backed by Organization Leaders

Support for the bill introduced by Representative Paddock, Republican, of Illinois to give the District an elected delegate to Congress was voiced yesterday by leaders of influential organizations.

Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, said that setting up the ballot box in the District of Columbia is a "fundamental step in practical democracy.'

Leader of a group representing 66 organizations, Mr. Stull said giv-ing District residents the right of suffrage would not change the form of local government. He said he believed it desirable to write into the bill some educational requirement, such as ability to read and write, as a condition of voting, but said he opposed any property own-ership qualification as a necessary voting requisite.

"Our Federation has approved the plan and it is needless to say the bill is a step in the right direction." PTA to Study Bill. Mrs. P. C. Ellett, president of the District Congress of the Parent-Teacher Association, which has 18,873 members, said the association is on record as favoring the election of a member of Congress by the people of this city. She said the association's Executive Com-mittee would be called in session Mihailovic's Patriots this week to consider the bill introduced by Representative Paddock. en's Clubs, said Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, president, consistently has cone on record as approving suffrage for the District, although a minority of the membership felt a more effective plan might be de-rised to give the District an inuence in the halls of Congress. Another civic leader, who preferred not to be quoted at this time, pointed out that if District residents could be permitted to choose the State in which to vote and be ermitted to vote by mail it would ive the District more influence than

Two Major Struggles Are Being Fought; Heavy Toll Of Enemy Is Reported

By the Associated Press. ISTANBUL, Turkey, July 11 .-Fearless Yugoslav patriots, a quarter of a million strong, have opened widespread offensive operations of their own with sharp, deadly assaults on their would-be Axis "pacifiers" in the south Serbian mountains and across the Croat frontier into Italy, official Yugoslav informants reported today.

Under the command of Gen. Draja Mihailovic, these hardy men of the mountains were slugging it out with German, Italian, Bulgarian and Hungarian forces numbering upward of 100,000 in two major struggles which began late in June.

One force of 10,000 Yugoslavs is taking a heavy toll of plane-supin Croatia, informants said.

Attacks Smashed.

In another major clash Gen. Mihailovic's men were reported to have smashed attacks on their mountain stronghold by Axis forces Additional pledges of support have come from the National Federation made up of one division of Hitler's picked Blackshirt Elite (SS) corps, important point in this campaign. Latest accounts from Yugoslavia said the battle in Croatia began discovered massing near Banjaluka, 90 miles southeast of Zagreb. The Yugoslavs were declared to have surrounded the Croats there and at Sanksimost, 28 miles west of Banjaluka. Fighting is in progress at both these communications centers, according to this information.

Sorties Into Italy. Other Yugoslav units were making sorties across the northeast frontier into Italy, and some of these raids had carried to the vicinity of Trieste and Fiume, the informants said. From these accounts it appeared that Gen. Mihailovic's forces were divided into two distinct fighting groups, one holding the mountain fortress in Southern Serbia and the other, a fluid, roving band, preying on Axis communications in the

Bustling City Becomes Resort as Solution To Travel Handicaps

Ties and Coats Taboo, While Girls Adopt Shorts, Bathing Suits

By the Associated Press.

ALHAMBRA, Calif., July 11.—This Southern California city has adopted a modern version of the Mahometand-the-mountain theme for the summer, only it has included the beaches for good measure.

The idea is that most people are going to have to stay away from the vacation spots, so Alhambrans conceived the plan of making their bustling inland city of 42,000 population as much like a resort spot as Neckties are under a strict ban and there's no telling what the Chamber of Commerce would do if they caught a man on the street wearing a coat. A committee of Vigilantes roamed the town yesterday, gaily ripping off neckties whenever they found one.

As for the girls, they're all wearing shorts, bathing suits or other abbreviated costumes. There are two reasons for this: It's hot here, as even the Chamber of Commerce admits, and second, there's a suntan contest on, with most of the lassies entered. They have to swear it's an Alhambra tan-the beach variety doesn't count ther, practically all the businessmen have placed beach umbrellas in front of their establishments along with camp chairs in which the passersby can loll at ease.

Periodically during the summer, said Paulsen Visel, Chamber of Commerce managing secretary, there will be community campfires, barbecues and the like.

"We've all had to change our mode of living," Mr. Visel explained. "Out here in Alhambra, we're going to have fun anyway."

Blue Ridge Parkway To Be Record Road

BLOWING ROCK, N. C., July 11.—The Blue Ridge parkway is the longest new road planned as a single unit in American highway history When completed it will connect the Shenandoah and Great Smoky Mountains National Parks, a distance of 485 miles. Following the crest of the Blue Ridge Mountains at an average of 3,000 feet above sea level, it will traverse portions of the George Washington, Jefferson and

Pisgah National Forests. One hundred and forty miles of the paved parkway are now open between Roanoke, Va., and Blowing Rock and an additional 20 miles beyond Linville, N. C. Recreational areas are being developed at Smart View and Rocky Knob in Virginia and at Cumberland Knob (where a sandwich shop is now available) and the Bluffs in North Carolina. Here picnicking facilities, comfort stations and drinking water are available.

Without warning, the peaceful little town is quickly occupied by the invaders. Col. Lanser, commanding officer of the enemy forces, informs Mayor Orden that they want coal from the local mine and that the townspeople must continue to work the mine. He urges the Mayor to order the people to submit, but the Mayor says that they must decide for themselves what they will do. The next day a rebellious miner, Alex Morden, kills an officer. He is executed, leaving a widow, Molly. The execution only leads to further violence and further punitive measures. The Mayor has warned Col. Lanser that it is impossible to break a people's spirit, but the colonel, though personally realizing this, is a tool of an inexorable military system. As the months pass, continual acts of sabotage obstruct the mining of the coal. Worse than this, the cold, silent hatred of the people begins to get on the nerves of their conquerors. Officers and soldiers long for home and friends

Movies Designed to Help Instruct Troops in Use of U. S. Weapons

The War Department yesterday informed Latin American military attaches that 150 Army training films are being made available in Spanish and Portuguese editions. One of the major purposes of the movie is to train Latin American soldiers in the use of weapons sent them by the United States under

At a showing of half a dozen of the pictures in the Archives Building, the attaches saw how the films can be instructive—in learning how to recognize an enemy plane, how to trap a heavy tank, how to fire a 60 mm. mortar, and even in understanding how to ride a motorcycle. All the movies were originally made for United States troops, under direction of Col. Richard T. Schlosberg. Five weeks ago in the old Paramount studio on Long Island, N. Y., the Army began dubbing Spanish and Portuguese voices into the films. To do the job, they picked Aldo Ermini, a civilian with the Signal Corps a linguist born in Italy who has been an ace cameraman and director in Hollywood and London. He called for the services of foreign broadcast announcers in New York and put their Latin words into the mouths of American soldiers in the films.

Col. Theodore Babbitt, Army liaison officer, is making arrangements to ship the films.

By HELEN KIRKPATRICK. Correspondent of The Star and

Chicago Daily News. LONDON, July 11.-The establishment of a United States Office of War Information under Elmer Davis will bring with it-it is profoundly hoped here—the establishment of a United States information bureau in London

The vital need for such a bureau grows daily and the already overworked American officials here are hoping for reinforcements from the United States. The United States needs no propaganda here, but it does require a co-ordinated and concentrated source of accurate information. There are several semi-American organizations which have paved the way for such a center, but which are themselves the first to admit the necessity for American material and qualified speakers.

'Little Steel' Wage Case Ruling Held Important to All Industry

Political as Well as Economic Factors Enter Into Controversy; WLB Must Consider Inflation Possibilities

By Charles G. Ross.

The importance of the "Little Steel" average of $40 a week; they are asking case, which the War Labor Board is expected to decide this week, reaches far beyond the confines of the steel industry. Two issues are involved: (1) Whether the wages of the steel workers should be increased $1 a day; (2) whether the steel workers' union should be granted some form of "union se-

Although only four companies, with approximately 160,000 employes, are immediately concerned, the board's decision unquestionably will set the pattern for wage adjustment in the whole of the steel industry, employing some 600,000 persons, and it is likely to have ramifications throughout industry in general. The four companies-Bethlehem, Inland, Republic and Youngstown Sheet & Tube-contend, with the support of a considerable amount of economic opinion both inside and outside the Government, that the grant of the requested wage increase would seriously endanger the Government's anti-inflation program.

Unspoken political considerations enter into the equation. At the head of the steel workers is Philip Murray, who is also the president of the CIO. Mr. Murray and the CIO are in bitter conflict with John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers.

Mr. Murray, a supporter of the President's foreign policy before Pearl Harbor and now a key figure in the drive for maximum war production, has gone allout for the union's demands. The wage increase, he says, is necessary in order to repair inequalities and to maintain an essential group of workers in full health and vigor.

Board Confronted With Dilemma.

Mr. Murray's position confronts the board with a dilemma. On the one hand, the board would like to strengthen his prestige with labor-an understandable desire in the light of the trouble-making capacities of Mr. Lewis. On the other hand, the board has the responsibility of "stabilizing" wages to prevent infla-

One speaks of the War Labor Board as the entity that will resolve this politico-economic problem, and so it will. chamber affair, and speculation concerning its decision centers about the middle chamber-the four members representing the public. The employe members stand with the union, and the equal number of employer members stand, if not at the opposite pole, at least a long distance in that direction. To a very large extent, these two groups offset each other on issues so crucial as those now pending. The four men in the middle, headed by Chairman William H. Davis, will determine the decision.

On the wage side of the case the decision may be for the full increase sought by the union, or a lesser increase, or complete rejection of the demand. The recent report of the board's fact-finding panel stressed the arguments in favor of an increase, but President Roosevelt told a press conference that any general wage boost at this time would increase the cost of living.

Workers Interested in Wages.

If the board decides to grant "union security," that is likely to be given in the form of a maintenance-of-membership provision, with an escape clause permitting union members to withdraw during a two-week period after the board's ruling. Such a decision would be in accord with a pattern which has gradually been established by the board.

The union is asking for the maximum the complete union shop, with dues check-off-but has indicated that it would regard the maintenance-of-membership compromise as satisfactory. Under this device a member of the union must remain a dues-paying member throughout the life of the contract as a condition of his employment.

Although the "union security" demand has been pressed, it is in wages that the union-especially the rank and file-is mainly interested, and the wage aspect is what gives the case its chief significance for the public. The steel workers are now getting an omy.

for $45. They base their claim on five arguments: (1) That the steel worker has not received his fair share of the savings through increased productive efficiency in the steel industry; (2) that the wages in steel are inadequate when judged by standards of health and deceny; (3) that the companies are well able to pay the increase; (4) that comparable wages justify the demand; (5) that the change in the cost of living

The fact-finding panel, on which workers, employers and the public had one representative each, ruled out the first two contentions. There was no persuasive evidence, the panel said, that wage rates had not kept pace with productive efficiency in steel over the last decade. The panel accepted the companies' contention that the workers' average annual income of $1,926.72 for 1941 was sufficient to meet "health and decency" requirements.

Ability to Pay Ruled Out.

The panel found, and the companies freely conceded, that there was full ability to pay the proposed increase-$23,000,000 in the case of Bethlehem; $16,500,000, Republic; $4,700,000, Youngstown; $3,300,000, Inland. The panel pointed out that on the basis of the new excess profits tax rates as tentatively approved by the House Ways and Means Committee, the proposed increase would cost the companies only 6 cents on the dollar-a total of $2,850,000-with the balance being absorbed by diminished taxes.

Ability to pay, however, as the board itself has ruled, cannot of itself be taken as justification for a wage increase that would tend to nullify the wage stabilization program.

It is around the last two points-those having to do with comparative wages and the cost of living-that the controversy mainly revolves. Though it made no specific recommendation, the panel supported the union on both counts. The companies strongly demurred.

The companies state (to use the language of Bethlehem's brief), that "it would be economically unsound to grant a general wage increase in the steel industry on the ground that, because of steel's 'spread the work' policy, average weekly earnings of employes in that industry are less than those in other industries. To do so would be to invite employes in such other industries to transfer to steel, where they could obtain the same weekly earnings for less time

Panel Doubts Inflation Threat.

The union contends that the rise in the cost of living-13.3 per cent-since the steel wage increase of April, 1941, warrants the increase. "The workers are merely seeking," says Mr. Murray, "to obtain a wage adjustment which will correct the injustice created during the

The companies reply that changes in the cost of living should not be considered in fixing wages unless these changes result in substandard pay. To grant the $1-a-day demand, the companies say, would be to threaten the country with a disastrous inflationary spiral. Attention is called by the companies to the President's April 27 statement that "our standard of living will have to come down," and that "stabilizing the cost of living will mean that wages in general can and should be kept at existing Dealing only briefly with inflation, the panel doubted whether the evidence "sufficiently supported" the companies' contentions. "General economic conditions," the panel said, "are the principal cause of changes in wage rates, rather than any specific change in a particular

Such, in rough outline, are the conflicting arguments in the steel case. Not since the "captive mines" dispute, which wrecked the old National Defense Mediation Board, have Mr. Davis and his colleagues been put to such an exacting test of their wisdom, or one with such a profound bearing on the national econ-

Technicians on the March

Management, Not Ownership, Rules Nation's War Plants By Richard L. Stokes.

TWENTY-THREE years ago Thorstein Veblen wrote a series of magazine articles which in 1921 were published as a book, "The Engineers and the Price System." So obscure was the treatise that a second printing was delayed until 1932. It purported to map for engineers what the Communist manifesto charted for proletarians. The thesis was that mastery of the industrial plant should be wrested from financiers and bankers and delivered to the technological virtuoses who alone, in the auther's judgment, could build, operate and understand the machine.

It remained for the war to set Veblen's revolution of technicians on the march. A recent inspection trip of correspondents, including the writer, covered 63 factories. At none of them was a capitalist, financier or investment banker placed on exhibition. Serving generally as hosts and spokesmen were designers, chemists, metallurgists, engineers and industrial executives.

Henry Ford, it is true, welcomed the visitors to his Willow Run bomber plant, and Edsel Ford entertained them at breakfast. But father and son appeared as operators rather than possessors, and quickly yielded the spotlight to Charles E. Sorensen, their production ace.

Management in Saddle.

Here and everywhere ownership was in abeyance, with management exultantly in the saddle. Mr. Sorensen of Ford, K. T. Keller of Chrysler, Charles F. Kettering of General Motors, Charles E. Wilson of General Electric, J. H. Kindelberger of North American Aviation, Eugene E. Wilson of United Aircraft, Homer L. Ferguson of Newport News, Frederick V. Geier of Cincinnati Milling Machine-these and scores of other top specialists became visible as the true field staff of the Nation's industrial command, warring at first hand on the production battleline.

That the picture resembled something like a Utopia for technicians was made clear by the newspaper tour. They had been provided with a fathomless purse and enjoined to boundless production. At a pace rapidly quickening, direct command of the country's major resources, of materials, factories and manpower, was being pressed into their hands. From the seats of effective control had vanished the entrepreneur, the captain of industry, the commercial-ist the banker chairman of the board. What manner of men are these who are accomplishing the one job of outstanding success in the national war program? They are self-made or university-trained. Many have fought their way up from the ranks of labor, and a few owe much to the accident of birth. They range from Mr. Keller of Chrysler, with his tongue of beinations, to Raiph F. Peo of the Buffalo Arms Corp., who is rumored to have held prayer meetings in his factory for the sale of War bonds; and from the mild, scholarly inventor, Dr. Kettering, to Ernest T. Weir of National Steel, a man as hard and tough as one of his own ingots. All in all, they impressed the writer as the country's ablest and most

Several Are Annapolis Graduates.

Following are sketches of representative individuals in this class, who stand today as immediate directors of the war industrial effort, and therefore, to an important extent, as keepers of the national security. If certain notables of aircraft manufacture and shipping are omitted it is because the tour's scope did not include the Gulf and Pacific Coast

Not a few of the group sprang from the armed services. Graduates of the Naval Academy at Annapolis are President Eugene Edward Wilson of the United Aircraft Corp, President Lawrence York Spear of the Electric Boat Co., and President Homer Lenoir Ferguson of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. Edgar M. Queeny of St. Louis, president of the Monsanto Chemical Co., enlisted as a seaman in the Navy when this country entered World War I, and rose to ensign and then lieutenant, junior grade.

Frederick Brant Rentschler, chairman of United Aircraft, was a captain in the AEF Air Force. James Howard ("Dutch") Kindelberger, president of North American Aviation, Inc., joined the Army Air Service in 1918 as a pilot, and served as flight instructor at Park Field, Memphis. The president of Beech Aircraft, Walter H. Beech, spent the five years, 1917-21, in the Army Air Corps. Burdette S. Wright, vice president in charge of the airplane division of the Curtiss-Wright Corp., was a flyer in France, winning the Distinguished Service Cross and the Croix de Guerre.

Model for Pearl Harbor Raid.

One of the more picturesque of these executives is Mr. Wilson, and the highlight of his career came in March, 1929, when he was serving as Chief of Staff, with the rank of commander, to Rear Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, now retired. Both were aboard the carrier Saratoga, which started far down the coast of South America, steamed northward at full speed, penetrated a screen of warships and land-based military aircraft, and launched a triumphant "attack" on the Panama Canal with carrier-borne

In this operation, Admiral Reeves developed for the first time the modern tactic of employing aircraft carriers as the spearhead of a naval task force. The lesson was pigeonholed by "battleship brass hats" in the Navy Department, but not by the Japanese. The maneuver was observed by the inevitable Jap tankers and fishing boats, and was used 12 years later as a model for the raid on

While in the Bureau of Aeronautics, Mr. Wilson had a primary part in establishing the Navy's policy of making exclusive use of radial air-cooled motors was president of the Wright Aeronaut- Glenn L. Martin, a native of Iowa, ical Corp., and later founded his own company, the Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Corp., now a subsidiary of United Aircraft. Both Wright and Pratt & Whitney have specialized in air-cooled en-

Around these motors the engine section of the Bureau of Aeronautics developed the Boeing and Curtiss fighter planes, the Vought "Corsair" scout plane and the Martin torpedo and bombing craft. At Mr. Rentschler's instance, Mr. Wilson resigned from the Navy in 1930 to become president of the Hamilton Standard Propellers division of United Aircraft. He was soon appointed president of two other subsidiaries, Sikorsky Aircraft and the Chance-Vought Corp. On May 6, 1940, he was elected president of United Aircraft itself.

United Aircraft Products

During these years United Aircraft promoted the controllable-angle propeller, considered one of the foremost contributions to modern aviation; the Sikorsky S-42, built for Pan American Airways, which pioneered transoceanic passenger and cargo flight; the two-seat dive-bomber, which added a machine gunner to its protection and the Sikorsky helicopter.

The latest achievement of Pratt & Whitney is the Double Wasp, an 18-cylinder job of more than 2,000 horsepower, which made possible the Army's ace among high-altitude fighters, the Republic Thunderbolt. United Aircraft will build and operate the new $85,000,000 plant in Kansas City for making Navy

But Mr. Wilson and Mr. Rentschler are proudest of the claim that they saved a year's time in the country's airplane engine program by freely turning over to Ford, Buick, Chevrolet and Nash-Kelvinator their designs, machine tool models and technical "know-how." They were aware, the aircraft executives said, made by the automotive industry to swallow their business, and that their only hope of survival, against resources so vastly superior, would lie in keener engineering originality.

Mr. Wilson and Mr. Rentschler give credit to the Ford Motor Co.'s production wizard, Mr. Sorensen, for his quickness is seeing what William S. Knudsen of OPM and motor makers in general were blind to-namely, that the industry could not be converted to manufacture of airplane engines and airframe sections by closing down a month or so for installing new jigs and dies, but that it would have to be made over from top

Trained as Pattern Maker.

Mr. Sorensen sent engineers to the Pratt & Whitney and Consolidated plants, and on receiving their reports instantly pronounced that "this is a new job." From his decision grew the Ford works building Pratt & Whitney motors, and the Ford Willow Run factory, biggest machine shop in the world, which a few months from now expects to be turning heavy bombers off the assembly line at a rate of 15 to 18 a day. Mr. Sorensen, with a steelier temper and more ruthless mouth, is in several respects a younger Knudsen. Both are physical giants. Both were born in Denmark, started their careers at the workbench and became top production men for huge automobile companies-Mr. Sorensen for Ford and Mr. Knudsen for General Motors. Incidentally, Mr. Knudsen's fate is one of the motives actuating industrial companies in keeping their best men at home and lending to the War Production Board only second-rank officials and often their deadwood.

While Mr. Knudsen came to this country when 20 years old, Mr. Sorensen arrived at the age of 4, attended public school in Buffalo and went to work as a boy in a stove factory. He was trained as a pattern maker. The turn in his life came when he migrated in 1900 to Detroit. There he was employed by various a few years he was head of the department. Then he became assistant super-made bi-plane kites as a boy and at the age of 11 built a glider. When he was 20 years old he took possession of a tiny abandoned church in Santa Ana, Calif., and there constructed his first airplane, in which he taught himself to fly. Two years later he was barnstorming at country fairs with such daredevils at Glenn Curtiss and Lincoln Beachey. In 1912 he flew the first airmail, and in 1913 dropped the first bombs from an airplane. During the same year he made the first extended overocean flight, to Catalina Island and return.

His career has been a parade of such "firsts." He is credited with building the Army's first training and bombing plane, the famous model TT; the earliest twinengine bomber, the first night plane, the first all-metal seaplane, the pioneer dive bomber and the first transoceanic air leviathans, the China Clipper and her sister craft. Today, at an enormous plant near Baltimore, the Glenn L. Martin Co. is turning out a great volume of B-26 medium bombers for the Army. Mariner PBM patrol bombers for the Navy and Baltimore medium bombers for Britain.

Woman Among Other Officials.

Proud of his record in keeping far ahead of the procession, Mr. Martin had no sooner launched the world's largest flying boat, the 70-ton Mars, on its trial trip, than he announced that his designers had completed blueprints for a plane of 175 tons, able to carry 102 passengers, half a ton of luggage and 12 tons of mail and cargo from New York to London in 13 hours.

Other heads of old-line aircraft companies met on the trip included Mr. Kindelberger of North American Lawrence B. Bell of the Bell Aircraft Corp. maker of the Airacobra strafing plane; Guy W. Vaughan, a famous automobile racer who has become president of the Curtiss-Wright Corp.; Burdette S. Wright, vice president in charge of this company's airplane division in Buffalo, and the country's only woman magnate in the airplane industry, Mrs. Olive Ann Beech, secretary-treasurer of the Beech Aircraft Corp. at Wichita, Kans., who held directors' meetings by telephone while she was in a hospital having her

Mr. Vaughan is also president of the Wright Aeronautical Corp. of Cincinnati, the largest manufacturer of aircraft enines in the United States At this plant, as a model for the industry, was worked out the first assembly-line technique for making airplane motors. It has specialized in the celebrated series of Wright Cyclone engines. The nine-cylinder Cyclone powers Flying Fortresses; Gen. Doolittle and his men rode over Tokio behind 14-cylinder Cyclones, and the newest product, an 18-cylinder prodigy of 2,400 horsepower, drives the Martin Mars flying boat and the 62-ton Douglas B-19 bomber, both of which are the world's largest planes of their type.

Under Burdette Wright, the Buffalo plant manufactures the Navy's Helldiver bomber; the greatest of twin-engined transport planes, the Curtiss Commando, and the P-40 series of fighter planes. The newest of the line, Warhawk, is the Army's sole high-altitude pursuit craft now in "battle production."

After learning to fly in the Army, James Howard Kindelberger served as a draftsman for the Glenn L. Martin Co., then in Cleveland; and next became chief engineer for the Douglas Aircraft Co. in Los Angeles. In 1935 he was appointed president of an obscure concern called North American Aviation, Inc., which was trying to build trainer planes in a small plant at Inglewood, Calif. Today the plant at Inglewood ranks among the country's great shops, and two other North American factories, in Kansas City and Texas, are bigger than the parent works.

"Larry" Bell, who had put into service 2,000 Airacobras prior to Pearl Harbor, was born 48 years ago at Mentone, Ind., the tenth of 10 children. An elder brother, Grover, became an exhibition flyer, and Larry, in his teens, went to work as a mechanic for him and Lincoln Beachey. Grover was killed in an accident in 1913. Larry was associated with Glenn Martin in the latter's early career, and in 1928 joined the Consolidated Aircraft Corp., in which he rose to be vice president and general man-

When Consolidated removed from Buffalo to San Diego in 1935, Mr. Bell remained behind with little money but an idea. This was that pursuit craft should not be airplanes with guns, but firepower on wings. Acting as his own stock salesman and buyer of used machinery, he formed the Bell Aircraft Corp. Pioneered With Airacuda. During two years he fought to keep it going with subcontracts while he built the company's first ship, the twin-motored Airacuda, mounting two 37-mm. cannon. This still remains experimental. and Bell passed on to the Airacobra, a single-engine job with one 37 and numerous machine guns. It is the most heavily armed of American fighter planes, and has been used on many fronts for strafing troops and installations, and for combating tanks.

Mrs. Beech is half-some say, the better half-of Beech Aircraft, one of the country's largest manufacturers of trainer planes. She was Olive Ann Mellor of Waverly, Kans. After getting an education in night school and business college, she became private secretary to Walter Beech, then president of the Wichita Travel Air Co., making small command of Nazi Germany and is still directed intelligently as well as ruthlessly by Nazi leadership. That is the unwelcome but inescapable conclusion to be drawn from the smashing attacks which have now brought large additional sections of Russia under enemy domina-

Only two months ago the Russians were "battering at the gates of Kharkov." Exultant commentators assured us that the German armies, exhausted by astronomical losses and unendurable privations, were definitely on the defensive. Offhand predictions of a second front encouraged popular belief that the tide of war had finally turned against the Axis. If Stalin's urgent requests for aid were based on desperate need the American public certainly had no intimations to that effect.

Now, as so often in the course of this war, grim reality has again tripped up light-hearted anticipation. And the resulting picture is the more somber because of the unexpectedness of the

The recent German victories in Russia demonstrate the same careful planning. the same tremendous driving force, the same ability to capitalize on every weakness in the opponent, which throughout has characterized Nazi war-making. Again the United Nations must confront not merely another defeat, but also the

when optimism has been overplayed. Axis Gains Held Vital.

bitter disillusionment which is inevitable

With the capture of Sevastopol control of the Black Sea passes to the Axis. The same outcome for the entire Mediterranean is threatened by the invasion of Egypt, in spite of the heroic manner in which the British have rallied to check the formidable Marshal Rommel. In the Don Basin severance of the last good rail connection between Northern and Southern Russia is threatened. In the Far East Japan has in seven months transformed a vulnerable position into one which will be exceedingly difficult to undermine.

These facts can no longer be obscured by merely refusing to confront them. And since this is the case it is becoming in the way of results contributing to that

One major reason for the continuing strength of the Axis certainly deserves more attention than has as yet been vouchsafed. It is found, somewhat paradoxically, in the prospects of defeat for Germany and her partners in international crime. All of the Axis nations, including democratic Finland, have been clearly given to understand that they need expect no consideration whatever if they lose the war.

This is true even in the case of Japan, a nation toward which Americans have certainly no heritage of ill-feeling. Our intentions with regard to a defeated Japan are not as yet officially defined. But enough has been said to indicate that we propose to deprive that country of any future striking power, and to see that its virile, ambitious people are henceforth blocked up in their own volcanic, relatively barren and overpopulated chain of islands.

Italy's Future Disregarded.

There are also no commitments with regard to the future of Italy. This may be due to the unfortunate assumption that the Italians are a wholly unimportant people, more sinned against than sinning, whose nationalistic pretensions had best be treated as a joke. It does not seem to occur to us that a large number of anti-Fascist Italians may find this intolerably humiliating, and that they may resent our patronizing attitude as bitterly as we would were the shoe on the other foot: For the Germans, who are too dia-bolically competent to be either despised or patronized, the shape of things to come has been defined. That nation is to be permanently disarmed, indefinitely policed, deprived of any possibility of again asserting itself as an important political force. Moreover, the Germans have more than a little reason to believe that the control of their destinies is to be handed over to the Russians, a people

Enormous striking power is still at the , for whom they have never felt either respect or cordiality.

The suppression of Japan, the humiliation of Italy and the debasement of Germany may in each case be wholly justifiable, desirable, even essential. But the point at issue is that we can scarcely expect many nationals of the Axis nations to view it that way. It follows that our war aims, as so far outlined, have efficiently served to unite the Japanese, Italians and Germans behind their respective governments, even though many of our enemies undoubtedly dislike these governments as much

Some of the unexpected Axis strength is undoubtedly attributable to our evident intention to dictate the peace along such lines as are from our viewpoint fair and reasonable. An equally potent source of power may be found in the Spartan life and drastic self-discipline in which the people of these economically deficient nations have been schooled, by grim necessity as much as by totalitarian indoctrination.

Privation Helps Endurance. It has long been our somewhat dubicus boast that the American standard of living, measured largely in terms of available luxuries, is far superior to that of the average Japanese, Italian or German. To protect our workers against such "sweated labor" has long been a cardinal point in American tariff policy.

What we have falled to emphasize, though we might have remembered it from our own early history, is that privations themselves provide a capacity to endure and achieve which is not measured by the salaries of movie stars, by the normal output of pleasure cars or by the distribution of telephones.

It was on the German shortage of raw materials that most of our calculations of an early Nazi collapse were based. If we had been less pleasure-loving and sybaritic ourselves we might have realized that in the very deficiencies of German, Italian and Japanese economy lie the greatest reserves of Axis strength. We might have earlier realized that however brutal the Nazi schooling it has turned out a generation which does not merely talk self-sacrifice, but also practices and glories in it.

encourage our opponents to fight to the bitter end and have at the same time placidly assumed that the very factors which make them tough will somehow lead to their speedy collapse. This attitude on our part has been called complacency. Perhaps stupidity would be a more accurate description.

We Have Refused to Learn. Our propagandists, moreover, have mistakenly refused to admit that we can learn anything from our enemies. Their objectives have been uniformly depicted as the epitome of all that is vile, while it is all but fifth-column to suggest that here and there our practice has failed to conform with precept. The contrast is justified if we remember that it has dangers. For the armor of perfection, as seen in the mirror of self-esteem, may seem far more impervious than is actually the case.

The frequent satirization of Hitler as a "paper hanger," bearing the slightly comic name of Schickelgruber, is a minor case in point. Under the system which we fight to defend, a paper hanger is for that reason no less honorable than is a college president.

By traditional American standards the one achievement for which we should honor Hitler is his self-accomplished rise from obscure and socially questionable origins. That this is instead a cause of ridicule is in itself a trifling matter. But if the underlying arrogance evinced were to become habitual and to be deemed a desirable type of propaganda it would give grounds for real anxiety.

It is scarcely coincidence that the persistence of an attitude of extreme selfesteem has so far, for the United Nations, been paralleled by an almost unbroken sequence of serious military reverses. And if it is fair to find a relationship between our bland assumption of moral superiority and our apparent inability to demonstrate military efficiency, then the time for a change in our methods of psychological warfare would seem to be

A Scandalous Exhibition

Three and a half years ago a scandal in the United States Marshal's Office here, involving jury tampering and the acceptance of gifts on the part of deputy marshals, resulted in a shake-up which cost more than half a dozen deputy marshals their jobs. It also served to focus light on a curious relic of the spoils system under which men and women, charged with highly important duties in connection with the Federal administration of justice, were selected purely on the basis of political preferment, without regard to merit or ability.

Former Attorney General Murphy announced at that time his intention of placing deputy marshals under civil service. And that needed reform took place early this year when deputy marshals were "covered" into the civil service by the Ramspeck Act, with subsequent appointments to be made from candidates qualified through competitive examination. In time, the corps of deputy United States marshals—numbering some 1,100 for the country-should be composed of non-political appointees, selected on the basis of merit.

The incredible escape of a handcuffed prisoner from two deputy marshals Friday night may have been the sort of accident that happens once in a lifetime. But it also suggests carelessness and incompetence—two ever-present earmarks of personnel selected through the spoils system. Certainly it suggests another housecleaning. The marshal's office in the District of Columbia is probably the largest in the United States and certainly the busiest. It is charged with an extraordinary degree of responsibility, not found in such proportions in other jurisdictions. Its organization and administration should maintain a standard which would eliminate the chances for any repetition of the slipshod exhibition of Friday night.

War Information

The eminently sensible tone of Elmer Davis' first public statement as director of the new Office of War Information will make a favorable impression on those who have believed that most of the difficulties incidental to the dissemination of war news could be cleared up by the application of common-sense reme-

Mr. Davis begins with the assertion that his office "will do its best to tell the truth and nothing but the truth, both at home and abroad. Military information that would aid the enemy must be withheld," he added, "but within that limitation we shall try to give the people a clear, complete and accurate picture." That is a statement which clearly implies that the Office of War Information will not develop into an agency for the spreading of somebody's propaganda ideas; that bad news will not be soft-pedaled just because it is bad, and that good news will not be inflated out of proportion to its real significance. If these objectives are realized, much of the legitimate basis for the criticism of the Government's earlier public relations effort will have been eliminated.

It also is gratifying to note the emphasis which Mr. Davis places on the desirability of co-ordinating the release of information with a view to forestalling the needless conflict and consequent confusion which have been so prevalent up to now. The public reaction to these conflicts has been a more serious matter than appears on the surface. It is not just a question of irritation and annoyance. Rather, this mass of contradictory statements, notably in the case of the rubber conservation campaign, has tended to impair public confidence in the Government, and could easily have a most serious adverse effect on the war program by increasing the difficulty of securing that full co-operation which is so essential to the domestic phases of the Nation's military effort. Anything that Mr. Davis and his organization can do to correct this condition should be and will be welcomed. Assuming that the service officials will co-operate in the implementation of this policy, and there is no reason to suppose otherwise, it is to be expected that some sort of harmonious working agreement will be reached. Presumably this means that the fight between Mr. Davis and the armed services, which some onlookers apparently have been trying to promote, will not materialize-to the benefit of all concerned.

Rift in Canada

The unpleasantly expected has happened in Canada. On the second reading of the bill on "total" conscription before the House of Commons, the French-speaking members from Quebec bolted their party almost unanimously and voted against the measure in defiant isolation from the rest of the House, which supported the bill regardless of party lines. In parliamentary procedure, the second reading of a bill is normally its decisive stage. The third reading is usually a mere formality before the bill is passed and becomes law. Thus, in this crucial test, the Province of Quebec stood solidly against the rest of Canada. This persistent rift in the political life of our northern neighbor is the more noteworthy because of the solicitude shown by the government toward Quebec and its overwhelmingly French-speaking population. In the last war, when Quebec flamed into virtual rebellion on the same issue, conscription was tactlessly imposed upon the province by a Conservative government representing English-speaking Canadians. This time, the Liberal party is in power, and the French element has traditionally been among its stanchest supporters. Prime Minister Mackenzie King has consistently tried to harmonize the two elements. His policy in the present issue is, as he himself puts it, "not necessarily conscription, but conscription if necessary." Before even introducing the measure in Parliament, the government held a nation-wide plebiscite toward the end of April to find out how voters felt on giving the government power to draft men for overseas duty by executive order if, in its judgment, the necessity should arise. The Canadian electorate as a whole voted "yes" by nearly 64 per cent, whereas Quebec voted "no" by 72 per cent. That meant an enormous "yes" majority in the English speaking provinces.

The extent of anti-conscription feeling in Quebec disclosed by the plebiscite apparently took the government by surprise. During the preliminary campaign, several prominent French-speaking leaders had supported the proposal and urged its acceptance by Quebec voters. Most of those leaders, however, considered themselves bound by the verdict of their constituents and thenceforth opposed it. On the other hand, the English-speaking element of all parties tended to demand that the government confirm the national will, regardless of the Quebec minority. Strong feeling on both sides has been aroused during the past two months, and delicate handling is needed to prevent the recurrence of a situation like that in the last war. Premier King continues to do everything possible to avoid so unhappy a contingency. He emphasizes the fact that conscription for overseas duty will probably not be necessary so long as enough recruits are obtained by voluntary enlistment. It should be understood that Canada already has conscription for home service, so there are plenty of trained men. Fortunately, Quebec does not object to home-service conscription, and thus far it has furnished its proportional quota of recruits for overseas duty.

But the exigencies of war are making ever sterner demands upon Canada's manpower. The Dominion has a total population of less than 12.000,000, and already a larger proportion of its males are under arms than in the United States. Indeed, the government is considering a law similar to that in Britain, whereby men and women can alike be mobilized for whatever form of national service the government deems them best fitted. This larger issue of total conscription underlies the present controversy, coupled with a correlative "conscription of wealth" equally drastic in character. All this reveals Canada's hardening resolve to let nothing stand in the way of its war effort. Against that stern national will, no sectional opposition can long

Another Spy Plot

The unusual delay that accompanied the debarkation of passengers from the exchange ship Drottningholm in New York a week ago is cleared up spectacularly by the announcement that the FBI which combed the ship with Army and Navy intelligence officers has arrested Karl Friedrich Bahr, an American citizen returning from Europe, on a charge of violating the Espionage Act. The 29-year-old Bahr, German-born, allegedly was coming back as an agent of the Gestapo, equipped with a fund of $7,000

Arming Auxiliary Police

The question of whether auxiliary policemen should carry arms is not an casy one for the Commissioners to decide. The issue came to the fore with the recent disclosure that at least some of the emergency officers have armed themselves on their own initiative. Many of these auxiliaries are engaged in patrol work involving hazards of the type faced by regular policemen. They feel, therefore, that they are entitled to the same means of self-defense as members of Major Kelly's command.

But Major Kelly's men have been thoroughly schooled in the use of firearms. Until they have qualified in such an instruction course, Metropolitan Police Department recruits are not permitted to carry sidearms. Special agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation must undergo an intensive course of firearms training on their rifle range at Quantico before they are granted the right to carry loaded weapons. This instruction is as much for the protection of the officers as for the protection of the public, as a man not carefully trained in the proper handling of guns can be a menace to himself and to the community.

Since Washington's auxiliary police force as a group has not had the benefit of firearms training, it would be highly dangerous to distribute arms among the officers indiscriminately, even if means were found to purchase the necessary weapons. Some of these men undoubtedly are well versed in the use of firearms and could qualify to carry guns without additional training. Many, howeyer, are in need of instruction. They should be given this instruction before they are trusted with pistols or revolvers. And, aside from the matter of basic technical training, no law enforcement officer should be supplied with guns unless he has demonstrated beyond all doubt that he fully appreciates the responsibilities that go with the carrying of

It has been said that District offiwhole matter should be reached quickly. The problem is such a serious one and concerns the public safety to such an extent that it would be wise to reach a decision only after most careful consideration of all the factors involved.

Art in War

A soldier from Massachusetts, training at Camp Blanding, Florida, achieves himself an undesired but not undeserved celebrity by writing home: "Please send me a well-bound, one-volume Shakespeare." Surprise over such a request may seem natural, but there is nothing either novel or new about it. The plays and poems of the greatest of all masters of human utterance have been faring to battle with the troops of many different nations during more than three hundred years. In time of war especially the minds of thousands of persons turn to him as steel responds to the magnet.

One explanation of the relation between people and creative expression of any noble sort may be discovered in an address delivered before a recent meeting of the American Association of Museums by Duncan Phillips, director of the Phillips Memorial Gallery and a trustee of the National Gallery of Art. The speaker declared: "I believe that art * * * is an essential during the time when our struggle for survival hangs in the balance. Wherever possible and for as long as possible, art must go on. To keep it active and ardent, ministering to our morale, and reminding us of enduring values, while all it signifies seems threatened with extinction, is to keep the flag flying at the fort, and the sacred flame glowing deep within us. To have faith in art while the whole world rocks to its foundations in the shocks of war and while treacherous savage tribes converge in hordes upon our civilization, is to hold to our faith in men. Art is a beacon light which has never yet gone out, in any of the storms of battle. Since it is the essence of what we fight to preserve, it must not be considered irrelevant during a crusade for liberation; and for the building of a better world, wherein nations will sacrifice their mettlesome, self-centered sovereignties, but, in the words of Vice President Wallace, individuals will keep sovereignty over their own souls." It is a religious ideal that inspires Mr. Phillips. The more carefully his testimony is examined, the more it will be seen that he is making a spiritual affirmation. Shakespeare and Michelangelo and Beethoven were similarly motivated. So, too, are the heirs of their genius, the beneficiaries of their labors. The civilization which the United Nations are fighting to save is the civilization in which the Massachusetts soldier who desired "a well-bound, one-volume" feels at home. Nothing less is tolerable to those who love truth and beauty and freedom.

Politics Interferes With War Effort

By Owen L. Scott.

An amazing attitude toward the war is becoming apparent here. This attitude is that the war, rather than being a struggle of vital importance to the Nation, is a giant grab-bag or get-richquick project.

The farm group, through its representatives in Congress, is trying to squeeze the last penny out of its suddenly favored position. The labor group, through its union leaders and its representatives in Congress, is demanding a bigger and bigger slice of the national income. Politicians, instead of using their influence to show the Nation the need for mobilizing to fight a war, are trying to please everybody by promising them riches rather than sacrifice.

This situation is apparent from the bottom to the top in Government. President Roosevelt has encouraged the public to go on burning up a precious stock of rubber by inferring that some way would be found to give everybody tires. There is fear that Nationwide restriction on driving might have a bad effect on the November elections. It is the same with taxes. There is a dangerous financial situation in this country, with Government income equal to barely one-fourth of outgo in the fiscal year now starting. Yet Congress balks, and so does the Treasury, at doing the sort of taxing that would ease the danger. Eyes are on the election, not on the war finance problem. Income of American farmers is near the highest of all history. It will approach $14,000,000,000 this year. In terms of purchasing power that income is higher than ever before. Yet, to judge by the attitude of the farm bloc in Congress, it appears that American farmers are being robbed. That bloc demands higher prices, new guarantees, bigger subsidies. It is without concern over the question whether rising food prices will add to pressures for inflation.

American workers never in history have earned as much as they now are earning. They are to have more than $60,000,000,000 in their pay envelopes during 1942. They are earning nearly 50 per cent more than they earned in 1939. Yet their leaders keep on insisting that they should get more, regardless of the economic effect of these demands. Labor leaders refuse to accept any ceiling on wages or any real stabilization of wages. They see in the war a chance to intrench their organizations.

Taxpayers in middle and higher income brackets are being hard hit by war taxes and will be harder hit. Yet the proportion of national income in their hands is not large compared with that in the lower income fields. The administration and Congress, for political reasons, are refusing to dip down into the great mass of income for tax cials feel that a decision on this purposes. The result is that in the fiscal year starting July 1 about $20 .-000,000,000 in taxes will be collected to pay a $77,000,000,000 bill for operating the Government in a war year. No other major nation on earth permits its finances to become so dangerously out of balance. It is the same story up and down the when business as usual was being upset. Even so, they continue to enjoy the biggest salaries they ever enjoyed and to have the largest profits, before taxes, that they ever had. In 1942 taxes will dig rather deeply into those profits.

Only the men who are drafted are showing any inclination to make a sacrifice in order to try to win the war. They are taken from jobs and homes to enter a life of danger and sacrifice at $50 a month, while the big pressure groups threaten to cut down on the amount of food they produce or the amount of work they do if they are not given the last penny of riches.

This is not an edifying spectacle. Officials admit that it grows less edifying with each defeat for our side and with each new casualty list. Yet these same officials doubt that anything can be done about it—at least until after the November elections. They reason that the American people will not stand for any tampering with their living standards, war or no war, and that the people cannot be asked to make real sacrifices until they have done their voting.

After that, with a two-year period to ntervene before they can vote again, the squeeze can be applied. Such is the reasoning that guides actions in Washington. It is reasoning based altogether apon selfishness, with each individual and each group thinking first of all about private interests. If a majority of the voting public is not moved by the selfish considerations that politicians consider that majority to be moved by, some of he present members of Congress will be looking for other employment next No-

The troubles that confront Leon Henderson, as price control and rationing administrator, trace to the attitude of the Nation, as that attitude is interpreted

Mr. Henderson must do for the masses of the people what William Knudsen and Donald Nelson have done for industry during the past two years. He must convert individuals in the retail trade and individual consumers to war. That conversion or mobilization requires that people give up some of their luxuries and some of their independence of decision so that the greatest possible national effort may be made. Unless such an effort is made the present war may drag on

It is Mr. Henderson's task to prepare the people for some downward adjustment in their living standards. His is not an enviable job. He is going about it with what every unbiased observer here regards as courage and fairness. Yet he is having far from what could be called wholehearted co-operation either in Congress or in the executive branch of the Government. The trouble is that he is trying to do what needs to be done before election and the politicians want him to forget any real pressure on the public until after election.

However, there is very grave doubt whether either Germany or Japan will against what otherwise can be quite a oblige the politicians by postponing their major war efforts until the American people have had their November | think that they have discovered in war voting. In case the war should become more serious, with heavy new casualties and new defeats for American forces, Congressmen may wake up with a revolt on their hands. They may discover that | it might be.

A SUMMER MEDITATION

By the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., LL. D., D. C. L., Bishop of Washington.

"All things bright and beautiful, All creatures great and small, All things wise and wonderful,

The Lord God made them all." Thus begins a beautiful hymn that expresses in glowing verse the indescribable beauties of nature. The hymn itself is in consonance with the word of Scripture where it is written, "He hath made everything beautiful in His time."

The glories of nature present a striking contrast to the destructive agencies of war. Happily, we here in America have not as yet felt the scourge of war and once again we are privileged to live undisturbed in a land where the glories of nature remain unimpaired. In this we are signally blessed, and for it we render grateful praise. The fact that we are thus privileged must deepen in us our reverence for the things that are beautiful and our gratitude to the giver of every good and perfect gift.

Possibly no season throughout the year brings God closer to our lives than summer. Where man's reason fails to understand the high purposes of God, nature with eloquent voice speaks of His majesty and the indescribable splendor of His creativeness. Here is an open book so varied, so rich that the simplest or the most learned can garner from it lessons of eternal value. What a rebuke it furnishes to man's follies in destroying with ruthless hands that which is designed to enrich and ennoble his life. Even when he desecrates with the effacing blasts of war the fair form of nature, once his wrath is past God reclothes the scars with a new mantle of

There are "tongues in trees, books in the running brooks, sermons in stones and good in everything."

City life is unsatisfying, man demands something other than the "daily round, the common task"; his nature craves the fuller, larger freedom of the open spaces. Color and form, the silent woods, the relaxed mind, freedom to think deeply of life and its meaning, these man needs if he would know the real joy of living. Christ recognized this, and in His ministry to the needs of men He constantly turned to nature to illustrate the Father's love for His children. ## Capital Sidelights

By Will P. Kennedy.

Congress has just published a new congressional election handbook, assembling regulations of the legislatures of the States prescribing congressional districts in accordance with the apportionment act of Congress based upon he census of 1940. This pamphlet of timely value was compiled by H. Newling Megill, one of the career men of congressional service, under the direction of the veteran clerk of the House. South Trimble. One third of all the States in he Union were affected under the census. Arizona gains one Representative; California, 3; Florida, 1; Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas Massachusetts and Nebraska lose one each: New Mexico and North Carolina, each gain one; Ohio and Oklahoma, each lose one; Oregon gains one; Pennsylvania loses one, and Tennessee gains one. The new members from Arizona, Florida and New Mexico are to be elected from the State "at large," the same way as

An interesting history of the Ways and Means Committee, whose chairman, Representative Robert L. Doughton of North Carolina, has promised to bring the new most-drastic-ever tax bill before the House on Wednesday, has been written by Representative Frank H. Buck of California. The Constitution provides that legislation with respect to revenues and taxes must originate in the House, whose members are closer to the people, coming up for election every two years. The House first set up a select Committee on Ways and Means July 24, 1789, which became a standing committee on January 7, 1802. Originally both revenue and appropriation bills where handled by this committee as also banking and currency legislation; but in 1865 it was realized that the work was too stupendous for one committee, and the work was divided by setting up the Appropriations and Banking and Currency Com-

Strange Pacific Peoples

By Frederic J. Haskin.

When American soldiers return from New Caledonia, a recently occupied French possession in the Pacific, they will have some strange tales to tell about the natives, their habits and complexities of life. At least that is the opinion of experts of the Smithsonian Institution, which has possibly the largest collection of information on the peoples of the world of any agency of its kind. Its work in the field of pioneering in the history of the human race is outstanding.

For more than 50 years ethnologists of the Smithsonian have been collecting data on peoples everywhere. They have made a specialty of delving into the past and present of the least known races, and have come to the conclusion that the inhabitants of New Caledonia could well be classed as the enigma of mankind. These experts do not confess that they have learned all about this curious mixture of character and color but their findings are not without in-

Capt. James Cook discovered the island of New Caledonia in 1774, and it lies well within the area which includes so many dark people, short and stocky, and among the least advanced of the human race. Living there for unknown centuries they have mixed with other races and today the blood strain is a conglomeration too difficult to classify. The natives are of the black, smallstatured, primitive Melanesian and the brown, robust, relatively advanced Polynesian of the Maori type.

As an evidence of this complicated mixture of races from which the present New Caledonians came, there are more than 20 separate and distinct languages spoken on the island. How much of these languages, if any, American soldiers will learn is only a conjecture, but it seems sure that they will more fully appreciate the simplicity of their own language, for it is conceded the world over that the Roman alphabet is the simplest of all.

New Caledonia is a jumble of high mountains, deep valleys and vast stretches of coastal lands. Swift rivers make their way to the sea, and these, together with other natural barriers, evidently have kept the various tribes separated to such extent that in time many tribes have developed an entirely new language. In addition to these natural barriers of separation, great hostility exists between the tribes and this has been a further means of preventing a unified people and the development of a unified language. France has done a good job in its colonial efforts, but it has never been thought wise to consolidate or change the language of the natives. The ways of the white man have not been forced on the natives and apparently the program is to go along so as to avoid resistance. However, while these barriers remain and no changes are introduced, the general observation is that many of the languages are disappearing and in their stead there is appearing a type of extremely degener-

Not only strange languages are heard in New Caledonia, but life itself is extremely primitive. Families live in grasscovered huts coming to a conical point, scores of these huts making up a single village. Each village usually has a large hut or group of huts, somewhat removed, which serves the community as a sort of social center. An interesting provision of each community is a retreat in some nearby mountain where villagers may find shelter in time of danger or attack. They seemed to have provided air shelters while modern man felt himself well protected by the advance of civilization. The gold standard, silver coinage and other forms of money value and money content play no part in the life of the natives. Instead of using metal coins for money curious styles of shells are used for that purpose. The shells are ground with great care, always laboriously, and the work required to make piece of money of this type often determines its value. The highest in value is the so-called black pearl, so fine and delicate that it can be moved by blowing the breath against it. Up to the outbreak of the war French merchants would accept these pearls at a standard rate of exchange. The religious life of these people is omplex and somewhat secretive. A basic feature consists of great ceremonies of propitiation in which all members of a tribe take part and which continue for days. There are a great number of native gods and they differ from tribe to tribe. Each village has its own protecting divinity whose dwelling is well known, a fantastically shaped stone or some other prominent natural object.

Like many other primitives, the New Caledonian believes in a personal spirit which dwells in his body but which can act independently, sometimes to the great peril or embarrassment of the physical partner. When a native is accused of a crime he never can plead innocent with an entirely clear conscience, for he never knows what his spirit has been doing while he was un-

One of the most rigid taboos is against waking a sleeper, for the spirit may not he able to find its way back if the persen moves, and this might well be fatal. One interpretation of serious illness is that the spirit has wandered away toward the tomb, and the job of the medicine man is to lure it back.

Notable curiosities of the island are the stone works, found especially on the east coast. There are stone walls which may have been intended as fortifications. There are also grotesque carvings of animals, trees and gigantic human forms which recall the statues of Easter Island.

All kinds of things, even good things. spring from the terrors of war. ## British Stand Eases Threat to Egypt, but Russian Position Grows Steadily Worse

America's Thirty-First Week of War (!49th Week of World War II)

By Blair Bolles.

The German hopes of victory in their world-wide war are staked now on the success of two drives through narrow passageways against stubborn foes. one in Russia, one in Egypt. In Egypt the Axis forces must make their way across the slight strip of hot sand that runs from the Mediterranean to the Qattara Depression, a distance of less than 50 miles. In Russia the Axis has 1,000,000 men pressing on an active front but 110 miles long in a great, bloody effort to establish the Germans east of the River Don.

Should the powers which hold in thrall much of the earth fail to take these bits of our globe, their prospects of triumph will wither. And even if they are successful in the two drives-and last week they seemed to be making headway in Russia-they have no promise that they will win. For all the battles the Axis has won, they have not disheartened their opponents. Come what will in Egypt and Russia, the Axis can fight a long war, but the United Nations ranged against the Axis countries can fight longer.

African Front

The headquarters for the battle of Egypt last week were over the Mediterranean Sea. For the Axis forces under Gen. Field Marshal Erwin Rommel to advance, they need new supplies and reinforcements from Europe. British submarines waited beneath the sea to torpedo the transports carrying men and goods to Rommel, and American planes patroled over the sea to bomb them. A British broadcast quoted reports from Ankara that the Axis was moving reinforcements to North Africa from Crete and Yugoslavia in an effort to restore Gen. Rommel's striking power.

While Rommel waited for this help, the British forces of the 8th Army in Egypt under Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck pushed Rommel the Axis line back a bit on Stalled the right flank. The week ended with the German-Italian Afrika Korps on an L-shaped front reaching west from El Alamein, which is 65 miles west of Alexandria, to a point about 30 miles below El Daba. The whole action is over a north and south line only about 30 miles long. The Axis east-west line is 35 miles long. Rommel apparently still maintains the superior position.

Auchinleck has been able to harass Rommel's men, tired after their quick advance over Libya into Egypt, but not to organize for a real offensive against them. On the other hand, the constant vent Rommel from organizing for a continuation of his offensive for a sweep at the naval base of Alexandria. Rommel cannot choose his path for his forward march now. He must go forward across the narrow strip between the sea and the depression. He has lost, then, some of his opportunity for surprise.

The region of El Alamein was the central point of Egyptian battle last week. Rommel had his main strength about 12 miles behind El Alamein, and to the east of that point Auchinleck's forces were being strengthened by a steady flow of reinforcements. Relentless ground attacks with artillery and daily poundings from the air have been the British media for harassing Rommel.

On Monday the Axis was forced to draw back westward on the southern flank in the El Alamein region. The British bombed the Axis air base at El Daba, attacked the base of Bengasi from the air and strafed areas between Matruh and Tobruk. Bengasi is the principal Axis supply port, far inside Libya. German reports about Africa began to show a note of reserve after almost six weeks of merited enthusiasm for the rapid forward march of Rommel.

On Tuesday the British forced a slight Axis retreat in the El Alamein region for the second successive day. The British wheeled up artillery to blast away over open sights at Rommel's tanks. Under the desert night

The RAF pounded at Tobruk. Behind the lines, the Egyptian government put its military and civil defenses in readiness for any emergency. Anti-air raid precautions were strengthened. Physicians, nurses, pharmacists and public utilities workers were ordered to stand by their jobs in any eventuality.

By the week's end, it was obvious that Rommel was trying to dig in so that when he had the requisite new strength, he might spring toward the Nile, which waters the green ribbon that runs up and down drab, sandy Egypt. Auchinleck was seeking to keep the Afrika Korps too tired for any offensives. RAF planes destroyed trucks carrying supplies toward the El Alamein sector from Tobruk. In the night, El Daba was raided again. The RAF disclosed that in the first 42 days of the current African campaign, 134 Axis planes were shot down in air combat, 100 were destroyed on the ground and 50 were destroyed by anti-aircraft.

Russian Front

When Peter the Great wanted to conquer Azov in what is now Southern Russia, he built a flotilla of ships at Voronezh, in the middle of the blackearth country, and sent them down the Don. Around that same Voronezh the Germans worked last week to conquer Russia. The forests that covered the land in Peter's time are gone. To fight in the region of Voronezh is to fight in a plain. Advancing from the main German line that runs from Orel on the north to the region of Kharkov on the south, fierce fighting Nazis in the second tank group under Gen. Heinz Guderian made a bridgehead crossing of the Don 10 miles west of Voronezh. Through the week the Germans tried to put all their troops over the river and move into Voronezh, on the Voronezh River. Here is the narrow passage on which the Germans stake much in Russia. From chalky cliffs the Russians throughout the week thwarted the German ambition.

The fierceness of the fight in Russia transcends anything in this war. There was fighting, too, near Kalinin, in the north, around Bielgorod and Volchansk near Kharkov. At Rossosh German soldiers in the Ukrainian armies, whose commander in chief is Marshal Feodor von Bock, aimed toward the bulge of the Don, with perhaps Stalingrad on the Volga beyond the Don as their objective.

The Germans are said to have 1.000.000 men participating in the fight for Voronezh, 200,000 of them on the Don banks. Supporting Guderian is the 4th Tank Army of Marshal Ewald von Kleist, which waits on the Don's west side to cross when the bridgeheads shall have been widened. That may take time. The Germans on the Don's west bank are 50 miles beyond the farthest Axis advance of 1941. Russian planes have kept up steady attacks on the Don-crossing attempts. On Monday they destroyed two crossings Battle Of the Don and damaged two others. Forty tanks, which were put across the river were destroyed on the eastern shore. The 88th German Infantry was hurried to the Don as reinforcement. The report of the Soviet Information Bureau Wednesday said:

"Fierce battles continue to the west of force tried to capture a height defended by Soviet tank detachments. Our tanks met the enemy steadfastly.'

A German claim was made of Voronezh's capture, but it was untrue. On Wednesday, however, the Soviets withdrew from Staryi Oskol, 65 miles west of Voronezh, and widened the German salient toward Voronezh. Staryi Oskol lies on the important Oskol River and on a rail line from Moscow to Rostov. Some of the Don bridgeheads of the Axis were destroyed, but on Thursday the Germans were sending Rumanians and Hungarians across the river in small detachments in order to re-establish the bridgeheads and prepare the way for a major crossing by the Guderian and Von Kleist forces.

The Reds vigilantly guarded the river. The Germans tried tricks that failed. Under night's cover they put over a tank detachment, which hung out Soviet red banners and fired toward the Germans on the west. The Soviets were not hoaxed. They destroyed the tanks. the German salient on the west bank. where roads and ravines were jammed with hundreds of vehicles. They were stalled by the failure of the forces to get over the river.

To relieve pressure on Voronesh, the Reds tried a counteroffensive in the Orel region, where is anchored part of the German line from which the assault toward Voronezh is being made. By the week's end the Germans had two main Don bridgeheads. One column of 100 tanks was across the river.

Far north of the Don the Axis waged its war with Russia by attacking convoys of Russia-bound war goods on the Arctic Ocean. Hitler's headquarters in Berlin Tuesday claimed the sinking of an American heavy cruiser and 23 merchantmen between Spitsbergen and North Cape, 300 to 400 miles Voronezh. In one sector a large German | offshore. In the last previous big Arctic | of China.

The Germans on Wednesday added four more to the ships claimed in the Arctic, raising the total to 32. The next day Soviet dispatches published in Moscow newspapers said all the ships in the convoy got safely to Russia after an Arctic battle in which a Russian submarine commanded by Capt. N. Lunin, a Soviet hero, put two torpodoes into the Nazi warship Tirpitz and crippled her. The dispatches said the Tirpitz had headed a German naval squadron which included three heavy cruisers and eight destroyers. The German high command in Berlin denied the Tirpitz had been attacked.

Western Front

On the only active European second front, the wild Yugoslav raiders of Gen. Draja Mikhailovitch have made a hitand-run assault on Italy that carried them as far as the Adriatic port of Trieste, the Office of War Information reported last week on the basis of foreign broadcasts.

Across the English Channel German and British guns exchanged bombardments on Wednesday. The democratic world hopes that the time is not far off when United Nations soldiers will follow after the British shells, invade the European continent and open a larger second front than Mikhailovitch can maintain. Pointing toward the day when this glorious invasion will take place, the American Government last week designated a commander in chief of United States Army Air Forces in the European theater. He is Maj. Gen. Carl Spaatz, famous because in 1929 he made aviation history as commander of the Army endurance plane Question Mark. The plane set a new record for continuous flight, 150 hours 40 minutes and 15 seconds.

Two days before Japan's war with China was five years old, American submarines sank three Japanese destroyers in the Aleutian Islands. Part of the advantage Japan has gained from the expansion is the fact that her forces are in the Aleu-The submarine raid was made July 4.

On July 7, when the Sino-Japanese War entered its sixth year, a Chinese military spokesman in Chungking estimated the Japanese have suffered casualties of 1,-000,000 dead and 1,500,000 wounded during the first five years. The Chinese took 29,924 prisoners. They have fought 14 major engagements and 10,375 minor engagements. It was estimated that on July 7, the Japanese had 900,000 troops on duty in China and could put 1,000 planes in the air. In Tokio, the imperial headquarters said Japan's dead in China totaled 111,111. It was said also in China that the ever-present prospect of war with the United States and Russia had kept Japan from pitting its full strength against China.

Last week had no good news for Japan. According to the Chinese Central News Agency in Chunking, the Chinese opposing the Japanese push from the seacoast area in Kiangsi Province have trapped 30,000 of the enemy and reoccupied the lost cities of Nancheng and Ihwang. ## MATERIALS ALONE LIMIT OUR WAR OUTPUT

Steel Plants Now Have Capacity of 100 Million Tons a Year

By Clarke Beach,

The war leaders have learned for the first time the limits of America's productive capacity, and they know that it is materials and not manpower nor other factors which will set bounds to the growth of our war machine.

The sinews of that machine will be produced from steel plants with a capacity of around 100,000,000 tons a year. We'll have to fight the war with that, for better or worse, for there are now no plans to produce any greater supply.

It is no small amount. It will provide a mountain of war gear dwarfing the output of any other nation in history. Japan, for instance, can hardly produce as much as 10,000,000 tons of steel an-

Now that we have made up our minds how much steel we shall use, the chief problem confronting us is how to provide the alloys and other metals and materials which must fill out the body of the war machine, for which steel is the basic material.

Shortages Grow Worse

Some of them are perilously short, and the shortages are expected to become even worse next year, as the wheels of the war industries grind faster and faster, chewing up materials at an everincreasing rate. Already the production volume of this country is at a record high, and the proportion of heavy goods being turned out is incomparably greater than ever before. Heavy goods require metal and more metal.

with which to build the motors, tanks and weapons which led the War Production Board to cancel plans for expanding steel capacity beyond the amount now agreed on. The very materials required the leaders learned, the factories already

WPB chiefs decided that weapons produced this year and next would be more valuable than steel plants which would not be ready until 1944 and 1945.

They are continually learning new ways of substituting one alloy for another that is scarce, of fashioning some weapon in a new way so as to save mate-division of WPB is seeing to it that producers make the best possible use of the materials available. American industry has always been quantity of some material like copper, the supply of which WPB has little hope of boosting beyond the amount provided in the projected expansion program, it would be manna for the The salvage of an important quantity of steel scrap would be particularly helpful, for in some steel plants at present there is a large capacity for smelting scrap which is at present unused. The steel industry under its normal setup smelts 50 per cent pig iron and 50 per cent scrap. Normally, the steel mills run at 70 per cent of their rated capacity. but for the past two years they have been running over 90 per cent. The smelting furnaces for pig iron have been going full blast all the time, since the supply of iron ore is unlimited. The smelters for scrap, however, have run only as long as scrap was available and the supply has not been nearly enough to keep them working at their peak.

Sinkings a Problem.

Another good break would be the easing of the shipping situation. If the submarine depredations were eliminated and if ample bottoms became available many shiploads of materials now stored away and ready for shipment from South America could be brought in.

As for the progress already made in the expansion of the supply of metals. here are some examples:

Steel production in 1939 amounted to 52,799,000 tons, is expected to reach 86,000,000 tons this year and will attain its ultimate 100,000,000 tons more or less toward the end of 1943; copper consumption was 175,000 tons in 1939 and this year the country will have 2,100,000 tons: magnesium consumption amounted to only 6,450,000 pounds in 1939 and this year 70,000,000 pounds will be produced. while an ultimate capacity of 600,000,000 pounds now is under construction.

Manganese, of which 30,000 tons was produced in 1939, will be turned out at the rate of 600,000 tons annually under notoriously wasteful of materials, since a program now being carried out; the before the war materials were plentiful, rate of domestic tungsten production, for building the plants are needed now | and often it was not profitable to pre- | which was 4,000 tons in 1939, has been to feed the plants which are now ready serve or salvage them. After some hesitation about supporting the U.S.S.R. with war materials-due to the belief among most the nations which are now under the observers that Russian armed resistance would collapse after a few weeks-we began rushing war materials to the Soviet armed might remains unshaken. Some

Most of the production of our slowmoving industry was already earmarked for Britain. The demand on the United States was enormous; the available supclouds of American planes to sweep to plies negligible. At one time, in April, 1941, we were not able to deliver even the 10 bombers the Yugoslavs were begging for, bombers which President Roosevelt had solemnly promised them.

Even after Pearl Harbor the increase in our production was slow. There were bottlenecks everywhere. The men at the head of our production were still thinking in peacetime terms. An army was being created with draftees. The demands from abroad on our production facilities became even greater after December 7, and they had to be satisfied, for Russia particularly because of the danger of losing that important asso-

Supply Gobbled Up.

Planes were being delivered in larger numbers from factories, but not enough to supply our allies and the growing United States Army. Tanks were rolling from new factories which used to make pleasure cars. But that production, too, had to be divided between the United States, Russia and Britain in Libya and the Far East, with little available for our own needs.

The Navy and private shipyards did miracles in hastening construction of warships, but there were not enough ships to supply both the Pacific and Atlantic Fleets in such numbers as to give either of them the initiative to strike hard at the enemy. We created a large Army almost overnight, but could equip only a small fraction for actual fighting. Draftees, who chafed before Pearl Harbor, became enthusiastic soldiers on December 7. But they still chafed because they did not have sufficient ammunition to learn their jobs on the rifle and machine gun range.

Under these circumstances the high command had to decide whether to cut off all supplies from our associates and concentrate exclusively on the United States forces in order to form and equip a powerful force in a very short time, or to divide our production with the other nations fighting the Axis, keeping the smaller percentage for our own use, and to train that force progressively.

Russia Had to Be Supplied. It was obvious that we could not cease providing the hard-pressed fighting British and Russians with their share of supplies. To do so would have meant losing at least one of Hitler's opponents. These facts translated into strategy meant that we could do nothing but make feints here and there. We saved Australia by the brilliant action of the

of the Coral Sea. We removed an immediate threat to Hawaii and the West Coast by similar action at Midway. We tested Japanese morale by a daring discovered that such raids could produce panic which in due time might be exploited. But outside these relatively minor operations we could do little but follow a hit and miss strategy, hoping

One ray of hope shines in a world another few months, neglected to I ahead of us would end without disaster to our associates. We have now entered the seventh month of our war against the Axis. In March this year one of our foremost naval officers predicted in private conversation that defensive-offensive operations by United States forces would start sometime during the summer. Despite the totally unexpected reverses suffered by the British in Africa and their inevitable consequences on the whole theater in the Near East; despite the terrific drive of the Axis in Russia, which may result in the loss of some very important regions in the U.S.S.R., the time for an aggressive American action is drawing near.

We Must Travel Road to Berlin.

President Roosevelt's strategy advisers agree with him and with their British colleagues that this war can be ended only by physical invasion of the Reich. This is axiomatic and must occur, regardless of what the fate of our other associates may be. But the question of how to get into the Reich is debatable. There are two gateways into Germany: One from Western Europe, the shortest route: the other, much longer, through Asia, the Near East and Eastern Europe.

The shortest route is not always the easiest. Lack of shipping facilities, lack of an overwhelming air force and the time element seem to make this gateway to the Reich much more difficult to open than the longer route.

There has been considerable talk about a second front, which by implication meant that we would attempt to land somewhere in Western Europe. An attempt may be made, but there are such great obstacles in our path that it is doubtful whether we will seriously attempt to break through the formidable Nazi defensive lines.

It is not the fear of losing a battle which makes an operation questionable. It is the moral effect a setback would have on the peoples of Europe, on whom we count for assistance. A major defeat in Western Europe might have a discouraging effect, even on the Russians, who are the most vociferous advocates of a second front in Europe. Much as we would like to choose the short road for invasion of the Reich, such an operation offers us little prospect of success at this

Russia Will Hang On. The road to Germany by way of the Netherlands Indies, India, the Near East and Russia seems fantastic on the surface, but is considered by the most competent military minds in the United States as the best under the circum-

The resistance of the Russians to the Nazi onslaught is little short of miraculous. But we must face the fact that their armies may have to yield much ground this summer. The possibility that the Soviet forces will have to withdraw to a line between the Volga River and the Ural Mountains is not excluded. There they have sufficient resources to maintain their armies against an enemy who has tremendously extended lines of communication. The Russians could hold on indefinitely in that region and meanwhile important offensive operations could be started by the United States in the Pacific.

The lines of communication between Japan and the conquered territories in the South Pacific could be raided and seriously hampered by the Navy, supported by aviation. The occupation of our aviation-is regarded as an operaout this year.

in less than two years.

The proportion of vehicles and other heavy equipment which we are building for our Army exceeds that of any other nation. Ours is to be far more of a mechanized army than that of Germany, which, despite its boasted mechanization, still moves the bulk of its infantry on foot and still makes an extensive use of draft horses.

It was the immediate need for metals to turn out actual weapons. If steel capacity expansion went on indefinitely, built would have to stand idle for want of many materials. A law of diminishing returns had begun to operate. The perts. But if it should produce a large pounds.

By John Clagett Proctor. At last, we understand the famous old National Hotel building which has stood at the northeast corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Sixth street for upward of 116 years, is about to be removed, and that soon nothing will be left of this old hostelry but the memory of the many celebrated men who have been guests here in bygone days, as well as the recollections and reminiscences of interesting events handed down to us principally by men who have long since passed into the great beyond.

Sometimes it is difficult to get at the age of a building and the tendency is to each, and circular door-heads, 6 feet make it somewhat older than what it wide, $18 each. really is. But with this hotel, its age can be pinned down with almost a degree of certainty.

John Sessford, the author of Sessland County, England, though of Scotch parentage, came to this city about 1802, when a young man. Being a printer by trade, he soon secured employment on the National Intelligencer, where he later served as foreman of the composing room. In 1808, he was appointed to a position in the Treasury Department, and remained there to the time of his death, February 23, 1862.

Bessford began keeping a record of the events transpiring in Washington, together with information bearing on the progress of the city. This practice he kept up until 1859, missing but two years during the period of thirty-seven years. This record was published annually in the National Intelligencer, and no chronicles are regarded as more authentic. And so, in referring to his record for 1826, regarding the National Hotel, we find him saying:

Beginning of Hotel's Career.

"Great improvements have been made to Brown's Tavern (site of the Metropolitan) and a new and extensive one, to be kept by Mr. Gadsby, is now ready for occupation."

His report for the following year (1827) carries this reference: "* * * the extensive additions to the National Hotel carried up to the square, and will be finished early in the coming season, which will make it one of the most extensive and commodious taverns in the Union." The following year, Mr. Sessford says: " * * the National nearly completed and in Pennsylvania avenue, front of it, is accommodation for the Bank of Washington."

The first proprietor of the National was John Gadsby, who formerly ran the Indian Queen Hotel in Baltimore. He had come here in 1819, to conduct the O'Neale hostelry, known as the Franklin Hotel, but about 1825 he decided upon a change of location and the National was erected especially for him. He took a long lease of the property, and it was during his proprietorship that the National was known as Gadsby's Hotel.

There is little doubt that the present structure has been added to and modifled since the hotel was first erected, a First Gas Steve. 1400 and 2 and 2 and 2 but in the main it is the original building. It was while Guy & Briggs were running the hotel that guests here were made sick by poisonous sewer gases, resulting in the closing of the place for several months, people even being afraid to enter the building. It was during this scare that President-elect Buchanan and his party including his nephew, Col. E. E. Lane, stopped at the hotel just prior to the inauguration and Col. Lane proved a victim to the "poison epidemic."

The result of the death of Col. Lane was that the hotel was closed, when Col. Franklin Tenney, together with Dr. S. W. Jones, hearing of the hotel and the fatality which hung about it, asked to be shown through the place An item printed years ago says of this visit:

James Croggon, who reported for The Star before the writer was born, and whose information of the site was largely personal, says the Weightman buildings 'were a block of five or six three-story bricks, arranged for dwellings, with store rooms in one or two. Gen. Weightman lived in the corner house and conducted a book and stationery store, which was the center of the literary circle of that day. There was one on the night of February 4, 1862, attended by 500 persons, Congress being largely represented.

Henry Clay, Guest.

Perhaps the most noted of the many prominent people who have made the National their home was the celebrated Kentuckian, Henry Clay. Elected to the United States Senate at the age of 29, he soon became one of America's most noted men. He later became a member of the House of Representatives, where he was made Speaker. He set an example in running for the presidency in 1824, 1832 and 1844 which was later followed by William Jennings Bryan. He was against European influences in America and, in connection with "the Missouri Compromise of 1820," restricting slavery to the States south of latitude 36° 30° N, gained considerable renown, as he also did in the somewhat similar "Compromise" of 1850'. He had a host of followers, who idolized him to the last. His remarks to Louis Kossuth, the Hungarian patriot, made on his death bed, are well worth reading.

By Fannie Hurst.

Apparently all the world loves a modest man, particularly when the quality resides, as it so frequently does, within the spirit of one who has the grace to grow big simply, instead of simply big. Benjamin Nathan Cardozo had that grace.

His death in 1938 scarcely allows time to enroll him properly in his inevitable place in the hierarchy of noble and ennobling Americans.

Already, however, this quiet gentleman of Sephardic Jewish ancestry which dates tutor to a lad whose exploits were to back to our Colonial times of 1684 has be confined to the scholarly adventures taken his place in the not overcrowded corridor of America's Pantheon as exponent of those qualities of prudence, pacity for work. jurisprudence, mercy and humanity to mankind which his fellow-Americans

This scholar of no flamboyance, no Iliadic exploits, and who never did a pretentious thing in his important life, has not only liberalized American judiciary by way of his reverent yet progressive interpretation of the Constitution, he has added immeasureably to its stature.

It should interest millions of young boys to whom the life of such a man is a guarantee of the potential grandeur in all of us, to visualize the normaley of this American fellow as he lived his boyhood between his home, private schools and Columbia University in New York City. They have reason to feel a sense of national pride in the fact that Benjamin Cardozo grew naturally out of their own soil, as germane to it as those giant redwood trees which rear themselves in our California forest.

Came of Gentle Stock

Born into a well-bred home in New York City on May 24, 1870, he was not, at his store many members of Congress however, exactly of that tradition so dear to the American heart. This gentle child came of the gentle stock of a long and honorable family. American Cardozos, to say nothing of antecedent Cardozos of Spain, Portugal, Holland and England, one of the houses as a dwelling and wine include bankers, writers, rabbis, patriots and painters.

> The verses of Benjamin Cardozo's cousin, Emma Lazarus, "Send these, the homeless, tempest-tossed to me, I'll lift my lamp beside the golden door," are written in bronze across the base of the Statue of Liberty.

> So too, in turn, is written across the sacrosanct scroll of those Americans who have walked in beauty of mind, spirit or valor, the name of Emma Lazarus' boy-cousin, Benjamin Cardozo. It is simultaneously mystifying and in-

> Not even a lifetime of study, philosophical contemplation and profound authorship and high honors succeeded in transforming the young student into a worldly sophisticate. He remains (Benjamin Cardozo never married) one whose life must have been brilliantly lighted from within by a mind tirelessly dedicated to liberating itself and the mankind it served.

The story of the processes by which the young Cardozo moved from law practice to chief justice of the highest court in the State of New York, and on to the Supreme Court of the United States, is an adventure story chiefly in its intellectual feats. It is amusing and ironic that Horatio Alger should at one time have been of an inquiring and brilliant brain and whose brawn resided in a gigantic ca-

An Intellectual Archeologist.

Nor was it a mind fed entirely from the channels of his own learned profession. He was an intellectual archeologist, reading Greek and Latin for pleasure and storing his rich findings into a memory that seldom failed him. This grace of intellect combined with a grace of pen, formed an arch of lucky stars for American judiciary and liberalized thinking.

This portrait of the man whose written opinions, drafted in quality of mercy, high judgment, and the austere perfection of the use of the English language, is the formal one.

Not so formal, is the picture of the man at home in the quiet environment presided over by his doting sister. Not so formal, is the Benjamin Cardozo who, not athletic-minded, nevertheless took part in his class rush. Not so formal, yet once more smacking of inevitable high courage, is the picture of that Benjamin Cardozo who, wounded in the secret places of his heart when his father dropped a blot upon the escutcheon of his fine house by committing certain irregularities, made deathless resolve to erase this blot.

That he succeeded is in the high tradition of Chief Justice Cardozo.

clear the family name is practically the sole heroic gesture on his record. That he never thought of it in that way, or perhaps never thought of it at all, except as his debt to a humanity he loved and to a family he loved, is again in the tradition of Benjamin Cardozo. Retreating from the rewards of his virtues, he seems destined to become a classic example of the world finding its way to the door of the maker of that first-rate mousetrap. It is fair to assume, however, even at this present, that less than a majority of American men and women in the American streets, are sufficiently aware of his imprint upon their time, their circumstances and their country.

Ethical Signposts.

Inevitably though, in spite of himself, the brightly burning flame of his spirit is becoming more and more apparent to our hurly-burly generation.

It is heartening to think of this lad, whose opinions were to become ethical signposts in our national life, springing so naturally out of that strange hard soil, the asphalt of an American metropolis.

If Benjamin Cardoso had been confronted with the choice of the color of ink with which he would prefer to leave his profound signature upon his day and age, it is fairly safe to assume that he would have selected invisible ink.

Call Cardozo's, if you will, an undramatic life. As such precepts go, it was. There is no doubt that he walked closely in the shadow of the walls that contained his privacy. To be sure, recognition did beat its path to his door, high destiny showed early in the tea leaves of his cup, but the impact of Cardoso against the society he was to enrich, was

"The important thing," he said, with some of this gentleness "is to rid our presuppositions so far as may be, of what is merely individual or personal, to detach them in a measure from ourselves. to build them not upon instinct, or intuitive likes or dislikes, but upon an informed and liberal culture."

Dared to Evaluate Precedent.

"Precedent" is either the dead hand, the atrophied hand, the wise or the compassionate hand of yesterday, reaching from the past. Judge Cardozo dared to evaluate precedent for precisely what it was worth, respecting it when it had life and validity, not hesitating to push it aside when it became a dead hand from the grave of outgrown circum-

The Eastern Shore Is on the Alert

By Mary-Carter Roberts.

the Eastern Shore peninsula, hithe so known to Washingtonians chiefly as a summer vacation spot. The Sho' has always been a picturesque country. Its flowering farms, interspersed with woodlands and dotted with lakes, have a faraway-from-the-modern-world look about them and its people, who are of Colonial American stock, have preserved unchanged many old customs which elsewhere have been laid aside. Oxen for example, are frequently seen drawing Robert E. Phillips who, from 1937 to ploughs in fields, and recently a woman 1939, was executive officer of the harbor from the village of Midway, Del., gave an exhibition of her skill in spinning, using a wheel which had been in her family for many generations. Capital visitors for years now have found this quaint and peaceful country ideal for relaxation. But today its peace stands side by side with many manifestations of the current termingled. Flanking the road to the young men, the dimout is apt to be the

For the idyllic-looking peninsula is an important military area and Uncle Sam, piling up his defenses, has not overlooked that fact. Even before the United States was attacked, he had begun strengthening his ramparts along the critical stretch of coast and today the work goes on at an accelerated pace. A huge new coast artillery fort, a harbor-entrance control post operated jointly by the Army and Navy, a substantial body of mobile troops and augmented Coast Guard personnel are some evidences of his activtiy which civilian eyes can witness for themselves. Military secrecy, however, veils the great part of the new defense system from casual view. But even without going beyond the bounds of ordinary vacationing, a visitor will be vividly aware that the once sleepy peninsula is fully wakened to the war.

Men in Uniform Throng Towns.

Sturdy, sun-browned young men in uniform-Army, Navy, Coast Guard and Civilian Air Patrol—throng the streets of the resort towns. Military vehiclesjeeps, motorcycles, insigne-bearing station wagons and armored trucks trundling anti-tank guns-hurry along the roads. Army, Navy and C. A. P. planes hum through the skies; an occasional blimp will strut by overhead, making a majestic uproar. Fire-control towers, oddly medieval-looking in contrast to their modern purpose, have risen at various points along the highway and fox holes and corduroy roads have mysteriously appeared in once desolate stretches of dune. Almost daily the sound of practice firing booms along the shore and local residents vie with one another now in identifying the type of gun being used. Dimout areas have been laid down around every coastal town and signs warn the approaching motorists of the line where he must cut down his lights and reduce his speed. There is hardly an aspect of life, indeed, superimposition of military forces on a civilian community.

But the unfamiliarity nothwithstanding, there has been no disharmony. The Sho,' true to its long tradition of Americanism, has taken its defenders enthusiastically to its heart and the defenders, by their excellent conduct and friendly co-operation, have established a standard which cannot but make Americans proud of their men-at-arms.

The towns most aware of this are Lewes and Rehoboth Beach—the former because it impinges on the reservation of Fort Miles, the great new coast artillery post erected during the past year on Cape Henlopen, and the latter because its resort facilities attract many soldiers and sailors in their hours off duty. Both villages have found the military visitors a welcome addition.

Fortress in the Dunes.

Lewes, indeed, regards the fort with something like proprietary pride. For one thing, the 1,010 acres of the reservation were mostly taken from the village "common lands," originally laid out in grants to William Penn and held in trust for the benefit of the town and county ever since. These lands were never used; actually, they were not considered usable. They were lonely dunes. beautiful to the eye but untraversed by any foad fit for motor traffic and dangerous to foot travelers on account of uncharted quicksands. Lewestowners, nonetheless, have always regarded "the Cape" as their particular property. And now that the Federal Government has made it the site of a great fortress, they have assumed all responsibility for that fortress, not as a mere duty but as an unquestionable right.

One hears them in the town speaking of "our fort" and "our boys" with a decided air of superior satisfaction. Recently, when the guns at Fort Saulsbury, farther up the shore, were booming in target practice, a Lewes woman remarked critically that she did not think the Saulsbury artillery sounded as well as that at Miles. "Our boys are smarter," she said positively. "You can tell it by the way our guns go off." Any one hearing her tone would have no doubt that she was satisfied with her interpretation. As far as Lewes is concerned, the fort has become a hometown institution.

Speed and Secrecy.

And it is a sight to stir any American with pride, although the part which visitors may see it, of course, not the stinging end. Solid roads, fit to bear the heaviest vehicles, have been put down on the one-time drifting sands and all the structures needed to care for a substantial number of "single men in barracks" have been set up, the last word in equipment and design. Along the main "street" one sees the post exchange, the library, the dance hall (which can also be used as a theater), the hospital and a fine athletic field (this was made possible by a private donation). As to what more serious matters lie beyond the range of vision, the frequent bellowing of the big guns, the trembling of the earth and the polite silence of the personnel, when questioned, are the best testimony of its power and importance. For the speed and secrecy with which It has been built, no less than for its strength, Fort Miles is remarkable. It

Some one has compared the present conditions with the prohibition era, when many places were full of gayety behind dark doors. It gives one a somewhat odd sensation to stand outside a building from which no ray of light escapes and hear within the sound of a dance orchestra going full tilt.

Otherwise life for the vacationer on the Sho' goes on about as in years past. Bathers bask on the sand and splash in the waves and promenaders stroll along the boardwalks. Such signs of the war as meet the eye are those to encourage, not to scare. They are signs, in fact, which point entirely to the fact that, on the Eastern Shore, as elsewhere, Uncle Sam is alertly on the job.

John Doe, American youth, and his buddies, have fulfilled the expectations and desires of their teachers. They have completely mastered the intracacies of the world's most ingenious machine. ## Scientific 'Miracles' Reported in Russia

By Howard W. Blakeslee, Wide World.

Reports on Russian science miracles reaching here from England indicate that the Soviets are going to be even tougher military opponents than any one has yet supposed.

Such men are the basis of all war equipment, and even of some military organization.

First miracle is the number of trained physicists. Twenty-two years ago Soviet Russia had 40. Now Prof. J. D. Bernal, English authority in physics, says the Russians have tens of thousands of these key science men.

What this means is shown by the fact that the entire United States today has only about 7,500. Already in our country more than half these physicists are in war science work, and most of the other half are doing part-time work on war.

In Russia, Bernal says, all the tens of thousands of physicists are co-ordinated in the military machine. While it is not directly mentioned, another miracle, due to physicists and chemists, indicates the Soviet capacity.

This is the almost unbelievable pre-

Three physics and chemistry discoveries are the reason:

1. Gasification of coal, by which the heat elements of coal are piped out of the mine and to industries in the form 2. Steel blast furnace improvements which Mr. Rose says probably will do away with the necessity of mining coal even to make metallurgical coke.

3. A new process to make cheap liquid oxygen, for power, which enables oneman to do the work of 10 miners.

In synthetic rubber, Mr. Rose says Russia probably is the world's largest producer. She furnishes 80 per cent of her own rubber needs with Russian synthetic. In addition two types of dandelion are solving Russia's need for natural rubber.

Russian geology science figures, unmatched anywhere else in the world, are reported by Dr. N. F. Henry. He says

In chemistry Dr. M. Ruhemann credits Russia with being ahead of the rest of the world in new methods of separating gases. This prosaic work is of great importance for the heavy chemical industry, which in turn is one of the foundations of successful war.

This Russian chemistry may be significant in poison war gases. The Soviets have succeeded, where other nations failed, in completely hiding whatever gas preparations they might be making. Dr. Ruhemann's description of their chemical science makes it certain that the Russians do not lack for technologists to make war gases, and what is more vital, to make them in huge quantity.

By use of such processes, Filatov and his assistants have probably restored the sight of more people than all other surgeons in the world put together.

Nature comments: "The present lack of contact between Soviet men of science and those of other countries is very much to be deplored, and knowledge of what they are doing would help us to realize in a rational way the possibilities of Russia's central institute for geology science for a new civilization."

Scientist Finds Rare Fossils

Grace Ernestine Ray, who tells about these scientific findings in Oklahoma, is an associate professor of journalism at the University of Oklahoma and author of articles in a wide variety of publications.

By Grace Ernestine Ray,

NORMAN, Okla.—Before he eventually succeeded in educating himself as a scientist, J. Willis Stovall filled many unique jobs, much as selling in Arkansas, bossing sidewalk construction gangs on the Texas University campus, and collecting bug specimens in Tennessee.

But if Stovall's methods of working his way through college seem extraordinary, his chosen life career may be described as almost weird: His work is that of a bonedigging detective.

As a trained vertebrate paleontologist, he has set himself the task of digging up and classifying bones that will aid science in solving the mystery of the origin and evolution of animal and man, by tracing the life and death, appearance and disappearance of prehistoric animals on earth.

He has recently found some important missing links. His latest discovery was made near Aztec, N. Mex.—a new species of herb-eating dinosaur, a three-horned fellow about 30 feet long whose skull had a backward extension of bone that reminds one of the neck-frills worn by the ladies of Queen Elizabeth's time. Nine new species have been unearthed

Stovall joined the University of Oklahoma faculty in 1930, when the Southwest was a new frontier in paleontology. It became a happy hunting ground for him. He assembled at the University of Oklahoma at Norman a vertebrate paleontology museum valued at a quarter of a million dollars.

Civic Problems, Civic Bodies

District Judicial History Made; American Home Rule for District

By JESSE C. SUTER.

Thursday, July 9, 1942, deserves to go down as a historic occasion in the judicial system of the District of Columbia, as the time of effective creation of the Municipal Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia and the new Municipal Court of broadened jurisdiction. In the forenoon, the three judges constituting the appellate court were sworn in by Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The ceremony took place in the courtroom of that United States tribunal.

Later in the day four of the five appointees of the reconstituted Municipal Court were sworn in by Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner. One of the appointees, absent through illness, is scheduled

The day was also a notable occasion for natives of the District of Columbia, as four of the seven judges inducted into office were born in the District of Columbia. The one absentee judge is also a

The taxicab problem continues as the present chief "headache" of the Public Utilities Commission. It now appears that another strike may be averted and that the commission may be able to work out a satisfying rate through some definite suggestions submitted on Thursday by the taxicab men.

There can be seen no practical reason for adopting one suggestion of some of the taxicab operators for the omission from the forthcoming zone map of all streets and avenues except those which are boundaries of the respective zones. Many riders in the cabs believe the appearance of some of the principal streets, traversing the zones, to be very helpful.

The Senate on Tuesday passed a bill to license undertakers and embalmers in the District. Under this bill a committee of seven appointed by the D. C. Commissioners would examine applicants for license. There has been a substantial demand for legislation along this line for some time to correct serious abuses. A bill was passed by the House in the Seventy-sixth Congress, but failed to receive approval of the Senate District Committee because it would have created another licensure board. Passage of the bill is urged by the District Commissioners and is indorsed by all reputable undertakers and many private citizens.

Americanization of District People Again to the Fore

The recent suggestion at a White House conference that Puerto Rico be permitted to elect its own Governor has brought to attention once more the voteless and unrepresented plight of the people of the District of Columbia. This incident and the recent introduction by Representative George A. Paddock, Republican, of Illinois of a bill for a voteless delegate in the House for the District, have reawakened interest in the District of Columbia's problem No. 1.

United States Senator Dennis Chavez, Democrat, of New Mexico has announced in this connection that he is ready to give home rule to Puerto Rico, the District of Columbia, Hawaii and Alaska when the opportunity presents itself. The Senator has no patience with "carpet bagger" rule.

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes sponsors the proposal concerning Puerto Rico and on Thursday, when asked by a representative of the press if he is willing to enter a plea for the District of Columbia as spokesman in the meetings of the President's cabinet, he half jokingly "volunteered" to undertake this task. District people can see no reason why the Secretary of the Interior should not, in all seriousness, carry at the White House end of Pennsylvania avenue the standard of an Americanized District of Columbia.

Of course, the discussion regarding Puerto Rico is one of home rule. Home rule for the District of Columbia, as very clearly presented in The Star's editorial of last Thursday, has an entirely different significance. The District, being completely under the control of the Congress and the President of the United States. can have true home rule only through the possession of voting representation in the two Houses of Congress and among the electors of President and Vice President.

In the Poland report from the Committee on submitted to the House in June, 1874 (Report No. 627), on the legal relations of the District of Columbia and the United States, among other things, it was stated: "In a strict legal sense, there can be said to be no such thing as a local government of the District of Columbia, for there can be no government, within the District independent of that of the Federal Government; and whatever local authority there may be now existing, or which may hereafter be set up within the District it can only be regarded legally as an agency of the Federal Government; and whatever authority this local government may exercise, it must be regarded as the act of the United States through their delegated representative."

From this authoritative statement it can be seen readily that home rule for the District of Columbia is a meaningless term unless built on a foundation of voting participation in the councils of

The District of Columbia Legislative Council has announced that at its luncheon meeting on July 21, the subject for discussion will be "A Voteless Delegate in Congress for D. C.," and it is understood that both sides of the argument will be presented by

The idea of representation for the District by a voteless delegate in the House of Representatives offers no solution of the District of Columbia problem No. 1. It was ineffective as a remedy when tried out during the Territorial regime, and no tears were shed upon the retirement of the eminent gentleman who was the District's voteless delegate in the House of that period. His earnest and conscientious efforts in behalf of the District failed to register achievements before Congress equivalent to those of the District Commissioners, even though they lacked the privilege of appearing on the floor of the House and addressing that body.

Know Your D. C .- No. 19 U. S. Recognized Obligation for D. C. Debt

In his argument before the "Joint Select Committee of the Congress" in 1916, Mr. Theodore W. Noyes, for the citizens, summarized a most important benefit accruing to the District through the Organic Act of 1878. It will be recalled that this act created the permanent commission form of government and established the 50-50 plan for sharing the costs between the Federal Government and the District taxpayers.

Mr. Noves then said: "In 1878, the Nation confessed its violation or gross neglect of its Capital obligation. It gave practical expression to its revived sense of this obligation in its undertaking to pay one-half of the accumulated funded indebtedness of the District and one-half of future expenses. It took from the District the power of self-taxation and assumed completely exercise of the right to fix the local contribution as well as its own. In thus exercising taxation without representation over the District the Nation safeguarded the local community by the pledge that to every dollar collected in taxes from the local taxpayers should be added a dollar from the National Treasury, and that the aggregate revenue should be expended for Capital upbuilding. This provision protected the District from excessive taxation by causing a tax-gatherer, alien to the unrepresented District, to appropriate from his own treasury for the District's benefit every time he appropriated from the District's tax revenue. Every dollar he took under the tax power from the local community increased correspondingly his own Capital contribu-

Under the Organic Act of 1874, substituting the temporary commission for the, so-called, Territorial government, there was a recognition by Congress of a distinct obligation of the Federal Government for, a part at least, of the accumulated debts of the District which had come from an attempt by a small community to build a Nation's Capital on a grand scale without the aid of the Federal Government. The extensive work by the Board of Public Works portrayed dramatically the Nation's neglect and the inability of the local community to handle the problem unaided. The Act of 1874 provided for the funding of these debts through the issue of bonds payable in 50 years and bearing interest at the rate of 3.65 per cent annually. The striking provision in section 7 of this act, referring to this bond issue, was expressed as follows: "And the faith of the United States is hereby pledged that the United States will, by proper proportional appropriations as contemplated in this act, and by causing to be levied upon the property within said District such taxes as will provide the revenues necessary to pay the interest on said bonds as the same may become due and payable, and create a sinking-fund for the payment of the principal

While the Organic Act of 1878 was under consideration by Congress, attempts were made to repudiate this provision, and in fact, the impression prevailed that the Federal Government would share only on a 50-50 basis in the payment of the interest on the debt. However, the appropriation practice of payment from the Nation's Treasury of one-half of both principal and interest was established and regularly followed until the extinction of the indebtedness. Nothing illustrates more forcefully the complete control exereised by Congress over the District than is to be found in a study of the statement by Mr. Noyes quoted above. The recognition of the Federal obligation for at least one-half of the District's heavy debt was accompanied, as he states, by the loss of the District of its power of self-taxation. This gave the Nation the power to fix both the local and the national share of the cost of operating and developing the National Capital.

Adequate Defense System Goal of Citizens' Groups

Review of Civic Section Finds Activity Centered on Wartime Protection Work

By BAINBRIDGE CRIST.

The various citizens' associations of the District have entered the first wartime summer recess since 1917 after a busy season, which saw many of their members taking an active part in the work or organizing and manning the civilian defense program of the National Capital.

The civic year can be summed up in a few words—it was a year which saw a shift of emphasis from routine municipal and "backyard" problems to the important task of building up an adequate protective system. It was a year in which community leaders in every part of Washington gave unselfishly of their time in evenings and on holidays to the task of preparing the city for the day which all hoped would not comethe day of an actual air raid.

Early in October of last year more than 100 presidents and leaders of civic groups answered the call of the Federation of Citizens' Associations and the Federation of Civic Associations to a meeting to lay the groundwork for selecting the war-

"If we have that element of leadership which we claim," Harry N. Stull, president of the Citizens' Federation, told the group, "now is the time to show it.

Flareup Over Housing. Later that month a series of simultaneous mass meetings were held by the associations for nomination of deputy and assistant deputy air-raid wardens and permanent executive committees on civilian defense. Despite hard work by a number of civic leaders, Col. Lemuel Bolles, District defense director, told the Citizens' Federation were lagging.

Perhaps the principal flareup on the civic front came over housing and zoning. The Michigan Park Citizens' Association, backed by several other Northeast groups, fought an Alley Dwelling Authority project designed for its area. In the Northwest, the Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park, Forest Hills and Wesley Heights associations opposed a Government housing project on the

in January that the defense efforts

McLean estate. The Southwest Citizens' Association, on the other hand, backed the Goodwillie plan for its area. In the Southeast, too, civic groups favored housing projects, but expressed fear over downward trends in zoning regulations

Climaxing a long campaign for a cross-town bus route, the Public Utilities Commission ordered a route over Klingle road. During the long controversy over providing the service, the associations split over whether the cross-town route should be over Military or Klingle roads. Although the Federation favored a cross-town service, it did not recommend a specific route.

Fare Petition Dismissed. Chairman Gregory Hankin of the commission originally held out hope streets N.W.; Calvary Baptist, of a route over Military road at Eighth and H streets N.W.; First a latter date. However, the recent Baptist, Sixteenth and O streets order of the War Production Board, N.W.; Petworth Baptist, 557 Ran- restricting the manufacture of street dolph street N.W.; Church of the cars and buses during an appraisal on 212 East Capitol street; of inventories, threatened delay of Hamline Methodist. Sixteenth and delivery of 475 cars and buses on Allison streets N.W., and Union order for the local transit company Methodist, 814 Twentieth street N.W. and lacked hope for the time being

Another long-standing issue was removed—for the present—at least when the PUC in February denied without prejudice the petitions of the transit company for a straight 10-cent cash fare on the Takoma-Petworth and Chillum express buses in return for extensions and improvements on various bus routes affecting the areas. Because of wartime demands and possible shortage of tires, equipment and labor, the company suggested that the issue be deferred. Citizens had prepared for a hard battle on the ssues, particularly since the express buses now are under the regular token fare, with universal transfer, and weekly pass. A survey of the associations made lowship of the Calvary Methodist in March by The Star revealed that civilian defense work had affected attendance at meetings in various ways. It was found that approxitist Church, Eighth and H streets mately 40 pe rcent of the organizations reported an increase in attendance, 33 per cent a decrease, and the remaining 27 per cent either noted no particular change or were uncertain because of other factors in the area.

Whirly Versus the Biscuit at Suffolk Downs

Not long ago there came in the mail a short note from a probably young modern suggesting that Plain Ben Jones, the trainer of Whirlaway, take the little hoss to a barber shop. "As I am always in favor of new champions to replace the old ones," went the message, "I am very anxious to see Whirlaway win the $50,000 Massachusetts Handicap, which I think he will do if Mrs. Jones will cut off that long tail, which I am sure must hold him back."

The letter never was forwarded to Mr. Jones, who, we were certain would prefer that his steed's load be lightened in more solid form by the Suffolk Downs handicapper. Another thing, Whirly is not so majestic a hunk of horseflesh that he isn't bothered by flies, but it is a fact that a lot of people would like to see the son of Blenheim II-Dustwhirl win the Massachusetts by the length of his tail on Wednesday.

This is the race which may send Whirlaway ahead of the all-time in the $35,000 Arlington Lassie Stakes money-winning champion, Seabiscuit, one of the "old ones" mentioned by today and paid off at the longest the note-writer, although it wasn't until the Santa Anita Handicap of odds in the 14-year history of the 1940 that the Biscuit won that tidy $86,650 to send him ahead of Sun Beau race. with total winnings of $437,710. Whirlaway has won upward of $400,000 and the net to the winner Wednesday probably will be about $47,000.

Seabiscuit Only Favorite Ever to Win

Since Whirlaway is a young horse, only four years old, he is almost certain to eventually catch and probably far surpass the record of Seabiscuit, a doddering, patched-up middle-aged gentleman at the time of Louis B. Mayer, motion picture prohis supreme triumph. This, regardless of the long tail and top imposts.

But the business at hand is the Massachusetts Handicap, a mile and a furlong event for three-year-olds and upward. It's not an old race, field of 13. like the Preakness or the Derby, but it's already a classic and with Attention, Valdina Orphan, Omission and most of the other good ones in there it's likely to be the best of the big races of the year.

It is a coincidence that Seabiscuit, the horse that Whirlaway is trying to beat, is the only favorite ever to win the Massachusetts. Whirly, of course, will be favored this week, despite carrying 130 pounds to only upset. The spectators were con-116 for a formidable challenger like Valdina Orphan.

The forthcoming Handicap, first run in 1935, has been a Waterloo for some fine horses. Discovery was 7-10 in 1935 and the best he got was third place behind Top Row and Whopper. The next year Discovery tried again, carrying top weight of 136 pounds and most of the crowd's money. This time he finished eighth.

Challedon, Like Discovery, Tried and Failed Twice

Seabiscuit was even money and the only favorite to win in 1937, which happened to be the year when the winner's purse was highest— $51,780. In 1938 War Admiral was 2-5 and weighted with 130 pounds but the finish was Menow, Busy K, War Minstrel—and War Admiral. So it has gone over the years. Challedon was 9-10 going to the post and fourth behind Fighting Fox, Pompoon and Burning Star when he sprinted to the front, with stablepassed it again. Challedon tried again in 1940 and, like Discovery, he failed for the second time when Eight Thirty and Hash settled his. Last year the race lacked a solid, glamour horse. The choice was the far turn and Askmenow took the Belair Stud's entry, Fenelon and Foxbrough, but the winner was War over Relic, packing only 102 pounds and paying his backers, obviously not very many, $23.60 for $2.

Thus Whirlaway, to beat Seabiscuit next week, must duplicate the Howard hoss' record of winning the Massachusetts despite being the favorite. We don't suppose it will change the course of the world if Seabiscuit remains the biggest money-winner for another few weeks or months but there is some interest in it, as evidenced by the young party who the balance of the field strung out visitors exploded their game-winthinks Ben Jones could streamline Whirly with a tail-cut, or at least in this order: Parachutist, sixth;

Chicago Piles Up Lead Off Wynn With Few Hits

Score Is Held Down As Dietrich Fails To Touch Second

By BURTON HAWKINS.

Consecutive defeat number three came to the Nats last night at Griffith Stadium, to the great amazement of nobody, as the Chicago White Sox won, 5-3, despite that Pitcher Bill Dietrich neglected the formality of touching second base in the midst of a Chicago scoring spree.

Dietrich's failure to touch second merely made the score more respectable from the Nats' viewpoint, though, for while the Chicago hurler's oversight cost the White Sox a run in the ninth inning, it developed the White Sox didn't need that additional tally.

Dietrich squeezed Bob Kennedy home after Bob had singled and moved to third on Mike Tresh's single with one out. After Moses flied out Myril Hoag singled sharply to left, apparently scoring Tresh

He Didn't Touch Second. Second baseman Ellis Clary of the Nats, however, called for the ball from Outfielder Roy Cullenbine and stepped on second and Umpire Bill McGowan upheld the contention that Dietrich had failed to tag second en route to third. Hoag thus was deprived of a hit and Tresh's run didn't count, since Dietrich was ruled forced at second.

The Nats entered their portion of the ninth with a 5-3 deficit and Dietrich personally attended to keeping the figures at that ceiling. He whipped a third strike past Pinch-hitter Al Evans and tossed out George Case before Stan Spence and Mickey Vernon singled sucessively. But Cullenbine grounded out to First Baseman Joe Kuhel for the game-ending tap.

Early Wynn, who was charged with the defeat, and Bill Zuber restricted the White Sox to eight hits vnue the Nats were collecting dozen off Dietrich. Dietrich was spacing those hits judiciously, however, to leave 10 Nats on base.

Chisox Make Hits Tell. Wynn economized on his distribution of hits in the first five innings, but the White Sox were inserting their blows at damaging intervals to construct a 4-1 lead with their ration of four safeties. Chicago took a 2-0 lead in the second inning. Wynn walked Taft Wright and Luke Appling punched a double past Third Baseman Bobby Estallela, with Wright halting at third. Wynn tossed out Bob Kennedy as the runners held their bases and Don Kolloway was purposely passed to set the stage for a possible double-play. Tresh upset that strategy with a single to left that scored Wright and Appling. Kolloway and Tresh negotiated a double steal, but were stranded as Dietrich fanned and Wally Moses grounded out.

The Nats picked up a run in the third inning as Estallela's fly scored Stan Spence from third. Spence had doubled to open proceedings and he took third on Cullenbine's single to right after Mickey Vernon flied out.

Nats Waste Opportunities. The White Sox matched that run in the fourth, however, as Appling walked, stole second after Kennedy and Kolloway flied out and scored on Tresh's single to center. In the fifth, Kuhel hiked the score to 4-1 through the simple procedure of socking one out of the park. With two out and none on he lifted a home run over the right field fence. Meanwhile the Nats had been booting inviting opportunities. In walk to Cullenbine. Estalella tapped lished the high-quartered colt as play stymied that threat. Dietrich was in trouble in the second inning, too, as Johnny Sullivan and Wynn singled, but with two out Case took a third strike. Again in the sixth the Nats threatened but with two on and two out Bruce Campbell batted for Wynn and was tossed out by Kolloway. Washington got back in the game though with a two-run outburst in the seventh inning as Case, Spence and Vernon singled and Cullenbine Spence from third.

Lorraine Gulli Second, Lucile Young Third In Official List

Lucy Rose of Rosslyn last night was named the No. 1 woman bowler of the Capital for the 1941-42 season by the Ranking Committee of the Washington Women's Duckpin Association, which was headed by Doris Goodall, president, and Esther Burton, secretary.

In gaining the title for the third consecutive year, the comely Mrs. Rose with league averages of 116-217 and 122-55 for special events again got the call over Lorraine Hi-Skor team captain and former No. 1 national titleholder for six successive years. Miss Gulli's marks were 115-183 for league games and 118-48 for tournaments.

Lucile Young Third. Lucile Young, Chevy Chase Ice Palace, gained the third spot in the selections by virtue of her 113-28 in leagues and 116-65 in special competition. Caroline Hiser of Hyattsville, chosen fourth, had averages of 111-11 in leagues and 120-66 in

Hubbell, Giants Snap From Slumps, End Cards' Streak

Hurler Scores His First Victory Since May 17 In 8-to-3 Contest

ST. LOUIS, July 11.-Carl Hubbell, who hadn't won a game since May 17, and the New York Giants, who hadn't won since the Fourth of July, got together today and stopped the Louis Cardinals, 8-3, snapping a five-game winning streak for the Red Birds.

Hubbell, who has started only against the Cards and the Brooklyn Dodgers and has six defeats on his record, kept nine hits fairly well scattered, while the Giants pounded three Cardinal hurlers for a dozen

Johnny Mize and Babe Barna led the Giant attack, which routed Howie Pollet in the first inning and tagged him with his fourth defeat against as many wins. The Giants turned four hits into three runs in the first frame.

Barna batted in four runs, three of them with his sixth homer in the eighth inning and another with a single. Mize drove in three tallies with a pair of singles and his 15th home run. His four-bagger would have been only a single had it not taken a queer bounce past Terry Moore and rolled to the center field fence, 425 feet away.

Murry Dickson and Max Lanier followed Pollet to the mound for the Cardinals. Enos Slaughter and Coaker Triplett wrapped a pair of singles around a wild pitch for the Hering of Anacostia Spillway, who had 111-9 in leagues and 113-59 in season today, but he did remain The Cards scored twice in the sixth long enough to present the Braves on singles by Triplett, Walker Cooper and Johnny Hopp, with the help of voted ninth place with averages of The Braves pummeled Lee for another wild pitch and an infield

By MALCOLM LAMBORNE, Jr., Star Staff Correspondent.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., July 11.-The seventh annual regatta of Annapolis Yacht Club opened here this afternoon amid colorful pageantry typical of Chesapeake Bay's largest boating organization. Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor of Maryland, Rear Admiral John R. Beardall, superintendent of the Naval Academy and former aide to President Roosevelt, and Glenn Martin, head of the Baltimore plane factory, were among spectators at the close of the day's two events-a 13mile cruising class race from Gibson Island and a 11-mile race for 20-footers from West River.

Major portion of the regatta was to be held tomorrow, two races through the day for small classes and a single event for the larger yachts. Comdr. C. C. Champion Makes Short Shrift of Threadgill; Thaler Steps Out

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

The latest drive to separate Barney Welsh from his Middle Atlantic tennis championship, in the family long enough now to acquire the dull glow of an heirloom, got off to a disheartening start yesterday at Columbia Country Club.

Half the field of the original 71 starters fell by the wayside in the opening burst of fire but the thin He got in one of the first shots, pinked Bob Threadgill a lesser known member of the pursuing posse, 6-2, 6-1, and made a safe getaway to Rockville. Moreover, his attitude indicated that anybody wanting the silver would have to come and get it the hard way-he's not handing it over without a fight. No, it wasn't an auspicious start for the "Down With Welsh Club," but with the seven other seeded players still in the running hope was not entirely extinguished. All seven, scored impressively and, as if emphasizing their determination to 'get" Barney, Tom Thaler of Balti-

Duck hunters aren't giving their favorite fall pastime much thought right now, nor do more than a few know that propitious summer conditions in the Northland may bring down over our four major flyways next fall the greatest flights of waterfowl present-day hunters ever have known. Yes, sir, the 100,000,000 ducks and geese—the figures are from the January census of the

July Brings Uncertainty.

July always is a period of uncertainty in the North because a stretch of dry weather dries up the potholes and small lakes and without water the broods face starvation. This year heavy June rains over the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba guarantee in many areas water until the broods fly.

Over one quarter of the nesting grounds there still is the threat of evaporation, and for the next 30 days the outcome there will be in doubt. In many sections crows and magpies have increased in nearly the same proportion as the waterfowl, but, regardless of these natural hazards, the crop will be larger than those of the last three years combined. Should this section get rains now there is no possible way to compute the number of birds that will fly south next fall.

The possibility there might be no open season next fall has not occurred to many sportsmen, but it is to be considered, for during times of national stress there always are some who believe hunting has no place in a nation at war. Others, and their numbers are surprising, have the idea shooting never should be allowed. Such factions often are able to get silly laws passed while eyes are focused on more important legislation. ## $300,000 Fight 'Busts' Town, But Oil Brings It Out of Red

Pilot Kearns' Dash to Depot With Dough Was Fastest Footwork of 1923 Scrap

By SIGRID ARNE,

SHELBY, Mont., July 11.—The little town of Shelby, Mont., is enjoying a "last laugh" of notable proportions.

It took a tremendous ribbing back in 1923 when its 500 citizens blandly announced they'd put up $300,000 to bring in Jack Dempsey for a championship fight.

Startled sports fans tapped their foreheads, "Shelby?" and dusted off the family atlas. And the men of Shelby discovered it takes longer to collect $300,000 than The event probably was the maddest circus in prize-fight history. Right up to the last gong no one quite knew who was carrying the ball.

For months before the fight Tom, Dick and Harry of Shelby-and finally in towns hundreds of miles away-were digging into their pockets for $500 contributions, just for dear old Montana. They'd cough up, and before they had time to bite off a new chew that suy would be around again, this time for $1,000.

Kearns Cut Ticket Prices. A few patriotic gents got perilously close to the pocket reserved for old rainchecks. Notable among them was Mayor J. A. Johnson, a jolly blond giant who did most of the dickering with Jack Kearns, ported to have dished out $100,000 of his own money. But Shelby had its heavyweight championship fight. Jack Dempsey fought Tommy Gibbons at 3:30 p.m. on July 4,

Mr. Reilly said yesterday that the Insurance Committee will study and make an early report on coverage of all assets, both in the banking departments and trust departments, in connection with insurance offered by the War Damage Corp. Pepce Sales in Sharp Rise. Kilowatt hour sales of the Potomac Electric Power Co. in the District of Columbia in June revealed another substantial rise, company officials reported yesterday.

Bales totaled 96,210,551 kilowatt hours, against 83,717,395 a year ago, s jump of 12,493,156 hours, or 14.92 sugar refiners in the Northeast were per cent. Railroads and railways used 22.76 per cent more electricity than in June of last year. Highway lighting showed only a small in-crease but other sales were up 14.36

any month this year, far exceeding | 21,418 in the preceding week. the previous peak in January, the report disclosed.

Decline in Home Mortgages. Home mortgages of $20,000 and less recorded in the District of Columbia during May totaled 982 and amounted to $4,561,000, the Federal Home Loan Bank Administration reported yesterday.

The May figures reflected the sharp curtailment in new construction because of wartime material shortages. District mortgage recordings totaled $5,159,000 in April of this year and $7,871,000 in May, 1941. Building and loan associations made 394 loans for $2,232,000; insurance companies, 83 for $465,000; banks and trust companies, 62 for $391,000; individuals, 343 for $1,-039,000; others, 100 for $434,000.

Far-Reaching System For Co-operation With U. S. Is Proposed

By FRANK MacMILLEN, Wide World Business Writer. NEW YORK, July 11.-British industrialists, in a document which has gone almost unnoticed here, have laid far-reaching plans for the post-war period and called on their Government to work out a system of consultations among the United States, the United Kingdom and the British Dominions to this end. The Federation of British Industries, top trade association of the United Kingdom, with a semiofficial status, has made a preliminary report to the Board of Trade (roughly equivalent to our Department of Commerce), which sketches the industrialists' idea of what the postwar economic picture will look like and suggests some tentative solutions of inevitable problems.

The report frankly foresees difficulties in working out these solutions in a way which will be acceptable to both the British and American peoples, but believes mutual understanding can bring about agreement.

Joint Action Favored.

The report suggests "that a system of co-operation with the United States should be created with a view of joint discussions of the means whereby it will be possible to restore prosperity to ourselves and the rest of the world.' It adds:

"Practical co-operation between British and American industry is possible even today and should be considered by the Government and by industry. In spite of war conditions such discussions hold out great hopes for fruitful co-operation which, if realized, will be of inestimable benefit in the post-war period.'

This "report on reconstruction' was issued in mid-April but apparently has received its first detailed notice here in an abbreviated version made public by our own National Foreign Trade Council.

The summary shows that the British manufacturers have concluded

1. "Policing the world against aggression" is basic to post-war economic organization and prosperity. 2. Some larger grouping of nations economically, regardless of political aspects, appears inevitable, and that this, and collective defense against tion of our past conception of national sovereignty."

NEW YORK, July 11.-The stock market today ended its second best week of the year with leaders generally maintaining a fairly steady The list exhibited some hesitancy at the start of the short proceedings but closed with fair equilibrium. There were scattered gains of a point or so and fractional variations either way were pretty well divided. Activity was light. Fears that the war news from Russia might worsen over the week end and the desire to await outcome of the new battle sweep in Egypt restricted buying commitments, brokers said. Bullish sentiment persisted to a certain extent, however and lack of any real selling pressur was a bolstering influence.

Average Is Unchanged. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 37.2, but on the week showed a net advance of 1.4 points, widest upturn since early January. At today's finish the composite was up 5.2 points from the year's bottom and only 1.5 under the 1942 peak established in the first month.

The day's turnover totaled 153,650 shares, compared with 113,290 two weeks ago. The market recessed last Saturday for Independence Day. In the brief session modest improvement was retained by Great Northern, Consolidated Edison, Dow Chemical, Allied Chemical, Standard Oil (N. J.), Johns-Manville and Cerro de Pasco.

Minor losses were suffered by U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Santa Fe, American Telephone, Texas Co., Anaconda, Sears Roebuck, U. S. Rubber and Union Carbide.

SEC Approves Dissolution Of North American Light

PHILADELPHIA, July 11.-The North American Light and Power Co.'s proposal to dissolve, in accordance with an order by the Securities and Exchange Commission, has been approved yesterday by the SEC. The holding company also proposes to liquidate a subsidiary, Power and Light Securities Co., which has as assets 12,478 shares of common and a like number of 5 per cent cumulative preferred of Illinois Iowa

The assets transferred to Light and Power, would abolish "an unnecessary corporate entity" the commission declared. The liquidation of the Securities Co. is necessary to bring about a simplification of the entire structure, the SEC asserted. North American also plans to pay off at par with interest $3,376,000 principal amount of its outstanding debentures held by the public.

United Light Hearing Scheduled August 4

PHILADELPHIA, July 11.-The Securities and Exchange Commission has fixed August 4 for a hearing on the plan submitted by the United Light & Power Co., a holding company, to dissolve as ordered by the SEC March 20.

The holding company and its subsidiary, United Light & Railways, proposes to increase the latter's common stock from 1,000,000 shares of $35 par value to 4,000,000 shares of $6 par value.

The outstanding 708,520 of railways stock now owned by the power company would be exchanged for 3,947,667 shares of the new common stock for distribution among power company stockholders to complete the liquidation.

Besides the crop forecast, depressing factors in the wheat pit included profit taking, which shaved the week's net gains from Monday's lows to about 5 cents, and hedging sales in connection with the new crop May movement. Anticipation that larger receipts in the Southwest next week

Grain men awaited word from Kansas City that shipments to that market would be stopped temporarily before deciding what, if any, additional action would be taken here to prevent congestion because of scarcity of storage space. A permit system to regulate flow of wheat to this terminal for storage already is in effect and when Kansas City elevators become full, grain members plan to extend this to wheat for immediate sale if it comes from territory outside the Chicago area

Advices from the leading winter wheat terminal indicated loaded cars now on track may fill elevators to capacity, with the harvest not yet completed, and experts predicted many subterminals in the harvest area may be filled by next week.

New Curb to Speed Up Production of Tools

The War Production Board has moved to eliminate another bottleneck in the manufacture of machine tools by prohibiting production of tools calling for special electrical specifications after July 15.

The special specifications include non-standard types of electric controls and motors not ordinarily used by machine tool makers. The order is expected to speed production by simplifying manufacturing process In the past, WPB said, machine tool buyers have made it a practice to develop their own specifications with the result that toolmakers were forced to spend much time and effort in readapting production methods for each new order. Purchases by the Army, Navy or Maritime Commission and orders authorized by WPB are exempted from the order.

WPB Prepares For Still Larger Production

Battle News Declared Proof That Output Is Inadequate

NEW YORK, July 11.-Reorganzation of the War Production Board this week marks another milestone in the Nation's war effort, says Business Week in its analysis of the outlook today.

"Achievements in the battle of roduction have already been remarkable. But, as Robert Nathan, WPB's Planning Committee chief. put it this week: 'The big job is shead of us and not behind us.

"In the last analysis," the magazine states, "production can only be evaluated against the course of the war. And the German push this week in the Kursk-Kharkov sector, the Japanese capture of another link on the all-rail route to Southeastern Asia, and the continuing threat to Alexandria and Suez, are proof that we have far from enough material yet to take the offensive to victory.

"Keynoting the new drive, Nathan says, 'Our resources must be used to the limit.' To attain the goals set, we must more than double our output of planes, ships, tanks and trained troops. From here on in, that means WPB has to squeeze the last ounce of raw material out of our capacity, cut military specifications for supplies to minimums and synchronize the flow of raw and semi-finished products so that final arms assembly moves at top speed

OPA Has Big Job. "Here the Office of Price Administration has a part to play. OPA is working out pricing formulas for armament products. Ceilings have been set on industrial machinery, and an aircraft price regulation is 'in the works.' "The WPB, the Government buying agencies, and now OPA are continually pressing for lower production prices. What's involved is more than the danger of inflated war costs. Price control is one way to stimulate efficiency, to achieve the necessary maximum of arms output. "That's one reason why administrative economists get so upset by the kind of pressure politics now hampering the inflation fight-the job is tough enough as it is. The leaders to take up some of the slack in the inflation tight rope. But more permanent damage will have been done. "Business was reconciled to subsidies in the first place only because Henderson had said again and again that no relief from the squeeze get subsidy funds soon, its job in getting business to accept them in lieu of further punctures will be ten times harder. Confidence at Stake.

"And what if prices were raised slowly but surely? The price level might go up only 5 or 10 per cent in the next few months. But public confidence in price control—perhaps the chief factor in its success might collapse. In any case, political bargaining for economic advantage would be harder to stop, consumer and retailer evasions of ceiling and rationing regulations would mount, and new buying waves might be touched off. "Right now, OPA has more problems with farm prices. Vegetable canners want the higher pricess fruit canners got last week. And packers are being caught in a squeeze. Pork products are limited by ceilings, but live hog quotations, spur-red by Army and lend-lease buying, continue rising. OPA alternatives. lacking subsidies, are to freeze hog prices or puncture another of its cherished ceilings. "Cattlemen have a different complaint—that beef ceilings are too low for profitable finishing of animals in the feed lots, and the Nation's meat production will suffer. Meanwhile, Congress continues to battle over 100 per cent of parity loans and Commodity Credit Corp. power to sell feed wheat below parity. All of which implies that the farmer is far from being the economic problem he was in the "thirties." Indeed, income from marketings and Government payments in the first five months of this year ran $1,500,000,000 ahead of the total for the same period in 1942, and farm income totaled $11,800,000,-000 last year. This points to a new record in 1942, higher even than the $14,600,000,000 peak of 1919. Huge Production Seen. "But these gains are not founded on higher prices alone. Production also will outstrip past highs. The Food for Freedom program calls for sharpest boosts in oil crops, canned vegetables and mest and dairy products. The 1942 hog crop is now estimated at 105,500,000 head 21 per cent more than in record 1939; egg and poultry production has been running 16 per cent above last year, and beef and veal slaughter has been ahead of scheduled boosts "Fortunately, the weather thus far has been remarkably favorable to pastures, and wheat, hay, oats and other crops. And, so far, the Nation's farms are employing more workers than last year. But agriculture in the San Francisco Federal Reserve district already is being pinched by lack of farm hands. "Estimates of corporate profits for the first quarter of 1942 have been compiled by the Department of Commerce, showing a slight gain over the first quarter of last year, but a more than seasonal decline from the last. Railroad and retail trade groups fared best, and manufacturing, power and gas and wholepared with 98.37 the week before and 89.16 per cent a year ago.

Wheat, rising sharply in both spot and futures markets, was the major gainer. Flour, corn. oats and rye prices followed suit, while eggs, butter, cattle and wool quotations also were higher.

Lamb prices lost ground and hogs brought less at the end of the week, compared with July 3. Cotton and turpentine were cheaper at the end of the week.

WASHINGTON, D. C., JULY 12, 1942.

Official Entertaining Here Due for Indefinite Slump

Visits of Noted Personages Are Ended; Wilhelmina Will Be Hyde Park Guest

By Margaret Hart,

Official Washington for the remainder of the month is promised a rather quiet time in comparison to the galaxy of festivities here recently. State Department spokesmen declare that there is nothing on their books in the nature of a social intinerary of a distinguished personage for sometime:

The time of the arrival in the capital of her Royal Highness, Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, has been rumored for this month. It has been stated, both at the State Department and at the Netherlands Embassy that no official word has been received of this. It is understood, however, that the program of the popular ruler of the Land of Windmills and Tulips when she does make her appearance here is quite complete.

Queen Wilhelmina, who with her daughter Princess Juliana and the latter's children are spending the summer in Massachusetts, will be at Hyde Park, the New York estate of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, for a short stay during the coming week. The Queen and her party will arrive at the estate Tuesday and will remain with Mrs. Roosevelt over night. She is expected to then return to Massachusetts. Her Royal Highness has expressed a desire to visit some of the Army Camps in this country and it is quite probable that this has been

When Queen Wilhelmina does come to this city she will be accompanied by two of her subjects who not long ago escaped from occupied Holland. They are Lt. Christian Krediet and Pilot Officer Dirk J. Ter Beek of the RAF Voluntary Reserve. The young Dutchmen are now serving as aides de camp for Her Highness.

A high light of the calendar this week will be a reception at the Belgian Embassy. The Ambassador of and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz will be host Tuesday in honor of the Prime Minister of this country, Mr. Hubert Pierlot. A notable company has been invited to meet the Belgian official. Tomorrow evening the Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz will give a dinner for their country-

This afternoon the Minister of Economy of Bolivia, Senor Alberto Crespo and Senor Joaquin Espada, Minister of Finance of the South American Republic will be hosts at a reception when their guests will be the staff of the Bolivian Embassy. The function will be given in the Pan-American room of the Mayflower.

M. Folke Wennerberg, popular counselor of the Swedish Legation here, who has been named Minister of his country to Chile was given a farewell luncheon yesterday by the Charge d'Affaires of Chile, Senor Mme. Wennerberg shared honors with her husband at the fete and other guests were members of the Chilean Embassy staff. The new Minister and his wife will leave for Chile next week.

Outstanding Engagements; Betty Wickard to Be Bride

Announce the Betrothal of Daughter

A number of engagements that will center the interest of official circles, as well as the social circles of the armed services, are topped today by the announcement of the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude R. Wickard of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Betty Wickard, to Ensign H. R. Bryant of Dallas, Tex.

No date has as yet been selected, but the wedding likely will be

Since her graduation from Purdue University two years ago, Miss Wickard, whose ambition was to become a newspaper writer, has been engaged in advertising work in Indianapolis.

Ensign Bryant also was graduated from Purdue University and received his commission from the Northwestern Naval Officers' Training School.

Another engagement that is of wide interest here is that of Miss Christine May Asserson, whose engagement to Mr. Earl M. Knibiehly is announced today by her parents, Lt. Raymond Asserson, U. S. N., retired, and Mrs. Asserson.

Miss Asserson is the granddaughter of the late Col. and Mrs. Henry R. Asserson of Mountain Lakes, N. J., and a great-granddaughter of Rear Admiral Peter Christian Asserson. On her maternal side she is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Volger.

Mr. Knibiehly is the son of Capt. Allen F. Knibiehly, U. S. A., retired, and Mrs. Knibiehly, of Coral Gables, Fla., and Washington, and is a graduate of the University of Florida and of George Washington University, where he specialized as a cartographic engineer.

Mr. and Mrs. James Walter Cloud of Leesburg announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Iola Louise Cloud, to Lt. Frank Herbert Richardson, U. S. A., son of Mrs. N. F. Ingraham of Lakeport, Calif., and the late Mr. Archie H. Richardson. Miss Cloud was graduated from Madison College in Harrisonburg and for the last several years has been teaching in the public schools of Princess Anne County in Virginia. Lt. Richardson was graduated from John Brown University in Arkansas. No date has been set for the wedding.

Col. S. Jay Turnbull, Medical Corps, U. S. A., and Mrs. Turnbull have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Anne Turnbull, to Midshipman D. Y. Munnikhuysen, son of Mrs. H. F. Pullen of San Francisco and Brig. Gen. H. D. Munnikhuysen, U. S. A.

Miss Turnbull was graduated from Gunston Hall here and Midshipman Munnikhuysen will be graduated from the Naval Academy

Still another service engagement is that of Miss Mary Elizabeth Hynes, whose marriage to Lt. James W. Hurley, jr., of Buffalo will take place July 19. Announcement of the engagement is made by

The former Miss Sally Frances Pope is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. M. N. Pope of Beltsville, Md. Mr. and Mrs. Overman are now at home in Princeton, N. J., where the former is on the faculty of Princeton University.

Miss Ann Buchanan Weds Lt. Regan In Impressive Military Atmosphere

By Margaret Germond

Glistening sabers held by a group of young officers of the U. S. Marine Corps and the U. S. Army formed the traditional recessional arch under which Lt. Donald Thomas Regan, U. S. M. C., and his lovely bride walked from St. Matthew's Cathedral after their marriage in that stately and impressive edifice yesterday afternoon.

The bride was Miss Ann Gordon Buchanan, daughter of Mrs. Richard Bell Buchanan and the late Capt. Buchanan, U. S. M. C. Lt. Regan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Regan of Cambridge, Mass.

Masses of ferns and palms combined to make a soft green background for the all-white flowers and lighted cathedral tapers which decorated the altar. enhancing the imposing Old World atmosphere of the church and making a beautiful setting for the ceremony. The gleaming gold braid, polished buttons of the service uniforms and shining sabers gave additional color to

Msgr. Edward L. Buckey officiated at the 4:30 o'clock ceremony and Mr. Malton Boyce played the nuptial music as the bride, preceded by her maid of honor, was escorted to the altar by her uncle, Mr. Wager Swayne

White mousseline de soie was worn by the bride, with a veil of very fine Belgian lace. The dress was fashioned with a full skirt and long train, the bodice having a built-up neckline with a deep yoke effect designed by tiny ruffles of the material and forming a point both back and front. A small coronet of the Belgian lace trimmed with clusters of orange blossoms at each side formed the headniece of the veil. The bride wore white net mitts and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and gypsophila. Miss Betty Ray was her sister's only attendant, and she also was costumed in white, the basque bodice of her gown being of lace and the bouffant skirt of net. She wore a headdress of pink velvet bows and pink tulle and her flowers were of pink roses

Out-of-town guests attending the wedding were the mother of the bridegroom and Miss Isabel Grace of Cambridge and Mrs. Vivian Gordon Linke, Miss Rachael Marshall Buchanan and Miss Marjorie Lee Buchanan of New

Members of Former Hawaii Navy Set To Be Guests of Mrs. Grant Heston

By Lillian Arthur.

Mrs. Grant Heston, wife of Lt. Heston, now on sea duty, has planned a series of parties that she will give during the next few days in honor of Mrs. Heydon Wells, who will be her house guest for the week. .

Mrs. Heston, who is the former Miss Jean Dulin, has been at the home of her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. James C. Dulin, jr., in Friendship Heights since her return from Honolulu two months ago. She and Mrs. Wells lived together in Honolulu when their husbands, who were classmates at the Naval Academy, were on sea duty.

Mrs. Wells' visit to Friendship Heights is the first reunion the two young Navy wives have had since they left Hawaii after the Pearl Harbor affair, and since a number of the young women they knew in Honolulu are now living in Washington or nearby, Mrs. Heston will have at her parties this week some of the friends with whom she and Mrs. Wells were closely associated in Hawaii.

At a dinner party which Mrs. Heston gave last evening in honor of Mrs. Wells was Mrs. Gideon Boyd, a member of a bridge club in Honolulu in which both Mrs. Wells and Mrs. Heston played each week. Mrs. Boyd is now in Washington and has been with her father and mother. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hawks, since she returned from Honolulu. Among Mrs. Heston's other guests was Mrs. John Haines, another Navy wife whom Mrs. Heston and Mrs. Wells knew in Honolulu. Mrs. Haines is now living in Baltimore.

This evening Mr. and Mrs. Hawks will give a supper party in honor of Mrs. Wells.

Tomorrow Mrs. Heston will take her guest to the Columbia Country Club for luncheon and a bridge party. Tuesday Mrs. Leon Roger and Miss Shirley Blair will give a dinner party for Mrs. Wells and Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Dulin will entertain at a luncheon and bridge party for Mrs. Wells, and among her guests will be Mrs. MacQueen Bledsoe. wife of the captain of the ship on which Lt. Heston at one time served. Mrs. Dulin will have seven other guests at the party. Mrs. George Muse, another of the Navy set whom Mrs. Heston and Mrs. Wells knew in Honolulu,

Marie A. Bassett Wed in New York To Mr. Swenson

Well-Known Couple United in Marriage Rites Yesterday

The marriage of Miss Marie Antoinette Bassett, daughter of Mrs. Edward Francis Swenson of Palm Beach, Fla., and Hampshire House, New York, and the late Mr. Harry H. Bassett of Flint, Mich., to Mr. Edward Francis Swenson, jr., took place yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the chantry of St. Thomas' Protestant Episcopal Church in New York. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Walden Pell II, headmaster of St. Andrew's School, Middletown. Ded., and a reception followed at Hampshire House.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her stepfather, wore a gown of ivory Duchesse satin, made on princess lines with long tight sleeves, square neckline and long train. It was trimmed with rose point lace that matched her long lace veil, and which was held by a coronet of the same lace. Her bouquet was of white orchids, Amazon lilies and stephanotis.

Miss Annette Hood Reynolds of Palm Beach, a cousin of the bride, was the maid of honor and the other bridal attendants were Mrs. Benson Ford of Grosse Pointe, Mich.; Mrs. Donald Bangert of this city and Miss Louise Waterman Swenson, a sister, of this city and Palm Beach; Miss Harriet B. Wells of this city and Miss Irene Clare O'Brien of Miss Parreco Davenport, Iowa.

hortensia. The other bridal attendants wore similar frocks but with blue and white bodices and white marquisette skirts. Their Dutch caps matched their bodices and their flowers were similar to those carried by the maid of honor, with the blue hortensia predominating.

The bride's mother wore a costume of French blue marquisette with a small matching hat. Mr. Harry Hood Bassett of Palm Beach served as best man and the ushers were Mr. Wiley R. Reynolds, jr., and Ensign Winthrop de V. Schwab and Ensign Harold Howe II of this city, Ensign William McD. Stuckey of Washington, Pvt. McGeorge Bundy of Fort Mon-mouth, N. J., and Mr. Charles C. Glover of Cambridge, Mass.

Upon their return from their honeymoon, the couple plan to make their home in Washington, where the bridegroom is associated with the War Production Board.

Miss Bassett was graduated from Miss Madeira's School in 1938 and from Finch Junior College in 1940. Mr. Swenson prepared at St. Anwhere he was graduated in 1940 from the Jonathan Edwards College. His clubs included the Skull and Starting tomorrow—an important event—our annual sale of furs. This year we feel that our collection is more beautiful, more varied than ever—and all coats specially priced.

Each ticket clearly indicates the price of the coat now and at the sale's end, so you may see the great savings that await your pleasure during this event.

True to our tradition, the Garfinckel label in your fur coat assures you of high quality, enduring beauty, authentic fashion. And this year, when everyone's buying habits are more practical, our designers have stressed the versatility of fur fashions. There's a new, moderate flare in both swagger and fitted silhouettes, deeper armholes . . introduced so that the same fur coat may appear over tailored suits, and "super" at night as an evening wrap. Full-length coats, and the 34 and 36 inch lengths are most important. Black and all the brown tones lead the color field.

We have made a careful study of sizes for the short, small woman as well as larger sizes and all the range between—there are fur coats for everyone in our annual sale event.

Try Growing Gardenias

Can Be Done With Understanding Of Cultivation Requirements

By Agnes Trimble

The gardenia, better known, however, in the South as cape-jasmine, is one of the most popular cut flowers today, and is being grown more in this section since its cultivation requirements are better understood.

The growers here have had difficulty with this plant, while in Virginia, the neighbor State, it has been grown easily and plentifully. With patience and a little extra attention given this gorgeous flower, there is no reason why more people should not enjoy growing it. It has so much to give in return—lovely blossoms with crisp white petals surrounded by pleasing green foliage, and a delicious fragrance. The plant itself is a handsome decoration in any home.

Right now strong and healthy field-grown plants can be had at a very reasonable price. So, if you want to try your luck with this exquisite beauty, here are a few suggestions in caring for it.

When the gardenia is grown indoors it must have good air circulation and plenty of light. During the cold winter months it needs a temperature of about 70 degrees. The soil must be moist at all times, but never too moist. Plants should never be allowed to become pale green, then yellow and usually fall be used in handling so as not to In fact the entire plant takes on a when repotting special care should disturb the roots—in fact, they should be balled.

As a preventative of the stem canker disease, spray the plant with Bordeaux mixture, or scatter around sand to insure good drainage. The three fundamentals of lily growing for this area are good subsurface drainage, disease-free bulbs and good culture—keeping the bed free from weeds, the soil mulched during the summer, and adequate feeding. Unless disease-free bulbs can be obtained gardeners will find that starting from seed is the safest way to begin. Flowering size bulbs of several kinds may be grown in two to three years' time. The lily shown above is auratum, not mentioned in Dr. Emsweller's list, but always lovely.

Trees for the Back Yard

Number and Location Important Problems to Be Decided Upon

By W. H. Youngman.

One of the first decisions to be made in planning the back yard plantings should be the number and location of the trees. Most back yards need at least one tree for shade, although they are equally useful as tall backgrounds. Small trees are often very effective in the border plantings to give height and variation. In many city back yards trees are needed to reduce the glare of reflected light from painted surfaces. A cool green tree is much more restful to eyes and nerves than brightly-painted walls which reflect light and heat.

The placing of trees should take precedence over the location of flower beds and shrubbery plantings, since most trees will have a bearing upon their sites. Trees need large holes and it is desirable to plant them first even though shrubs may be planted under or at least close to them. If trees are to be used for shade—a recreational spot—the whole pattern of the yard may be definitely influenced by their location.

The use of trees as a background for the house has much to commend it since they provide a setting for the house. However, the choice of Some of our finest and most detrees to be used for this purpose will sirable trees are exceedingly slow depend largely upon the size and height of the house. Trees that are growing—the white oak, beech, too tall tend to push the house into the ground, although low, squatty this group. Fast-growing trees are, as a general rule, short-lived-wiltrees planted behind a low, spreading type of dwelling also tend to low, Chinese elm, cottonwood and may sprout again in the fall. A flatten it. A narrow, tall house is soft maple, although there are made to appear even taller when plenty of examples to the contrary. The snowstorm last March riddled surrounded by low, spreading trees. scores of Chinese elms in this area. Thus, if trees are to be used for a That is considered one of the fastbackground for the house some needed to best serve this purpose. The use of trees as a tall background at the far end of the lot presents a somewhat different problem than those used as a background for the house. Here we may need trees that have a columnar-fastigate—type of growth. For years the Lombardy poplar has been widely used for this purpose. However, it is seriously affected by a disease which either kills it at transplanting or as it reaches maturity. Its habit of sending its roots into tile drains is another fault that is more or less serious. The Japanese beetles as well as several leaf-eaters seem to prefer the Lombardy.

cation and the habit of growth

Recently nurserymen have been giving study to suitable substitutes for the Lombardy, and now there are fastigate forms of several of our common shade trees available. However, it is not always desirable to use tall, columnar trees at the rear of the lot. A shaded spot may be just as useful there for recreational purposes as one closer to the house and for this use a more spreading type of tree would be desirable.

In general the width of the lot will have much to do with the choice of trees for shade and other purposes. The average tree commonly used for shade, such as the pin oak, tulip poplar, sycamore, hard maple and the ash, is entirely too large for lots under 75 feet in width. These trees often reach a height in excess of a hundred feet and have a spread of 50 feet or more. The ash is especially wide-spreading. Trees of more moderate size, such as the sweet gum, flowering crabs, flowering cherries, tupelo, etc., as well as apple and cherry trees, are worthy of more general use in the smaller

Perhaps a list of a few trees that are best avoided for one reason or another may be helpful. The American elm, long an outstanding tree for this area, is subject to a destructive disease that it reported to be approaching this section. In view of this warning it would seem unwise to plant it. The tulip poplar, a well-known, rapid-growing shade tree is subject to a scale (the tu'in scale) and while the scale may easily be controlled by spraying, it may not always be desirable for the home owner to add spraying to his chores. The mulberry and persimmon trees, natives to this area, produce fruit that may not always be welcome. Sometimes the falling fruit is more than a nuis-The ginkgo tree (female) produces a fruit that is very unpleasant to smell, although the male tree is free from this fault. The sycamore during recent years is attacked by a defoliating blight.

One Ornamental Shrub Is Very Undesirable

Weed-Killer Spray If Used Now Will Kill Poison Ivy

While poison ivy is an ornamental plant it is one of the least desirable ones because so many persons get "poison" or obtain a rash from the toxin it contains. It is one of the most aggressive native shrubs in this area. It is especially a menace on uncultivated lots and adjacent woodlands, particularly in the suburban and rural sections.

There are a great many persons who want to know how to get rid of poison ivy. Mid-summer, when the plant is in full foliage, is one of the hickory and hard maple fall into easiest times to kill the pest by spraying with a weed-killer. If the job is not well done now the plants second application made at that time will, as a rule, permanently rid you of this pest. Remember, in spraying, only to touch the poison ivy leaves for most sprays will kill any plant with which down holly trees, which are listed it comes into contact. Hoeing and digging out is almost an endless job where this plant has become lodged, a justifiable reason for omitting for it belongs to the sumac family either of these from consideration, and is propagated not only from seed but also from underground roots.

The fact that the Japanese beetle The two sprays that seem to be prefers a tree should also be taken most effective for the control of poison ivy are sodium chlorate or selection. In placing beetle traps in the yard it is best to put them at some little distance from favorite food plants. Otherwise the beetles may come only as far as the plant and stop to eat there instead of

Oriental poppies may be dug and moved with ease in late July and August. While dormant they are handled as easily as any other perennial, but most of us neglect to handle them while they are dormant. If you have one that you wish to propagate try digging a root, cutting it into pieces 2 or 3 inches long and planting the pieces in a propagating bed. If planted right side up they will make small plants within a year and large blooming-size plants in two

Now is the season to dig, divide and reset the Oriental iris (I. kaempferi). Given them a well-enriched soil, preferably on the moist side. By adding quantities of compost and rotted manure they will do very well in the average perennial border. They will tolerate much more shade than will the tall-bearded irises.

Home gardeners might well make extra plantings of beets for canning. The small tender beets are easily canned and they are easily grown. Space the seed 4 to 6 inches apart and cover with a layer of compost so that the soil will not crust. Beets like a sweeter soil than most garden vegetables and a light application of fertilizer will produce rapid tender growth.

It is not too late to plant a few gladioluses for fall bloom, and we can still buy plants of annuals for late summer and fall flowers. Some gardeners do not start pansy seed until August; however, the secret of success with biennials, and perennials too, is to have strong husky plants to set out early in the fall. Otherwise they will suffer more or less winter injury and give only mediocre results the next spring. Use seed of the finer strains of pansies, plant them early and transplant early in well-prepared beds for real show

July, August and early September is a critical period for the growth and development of chrysanthemums and dahlias. Keep them cultivated, watered and fertilized so that growth is continuous if you would have top size flowers of the finest quality. Dahlias should be staked and the taller varieties of chrysanthemums unless in a protected situation will need some support. It is risky to pinch chrysanthemums after the 1st of July-it might delay flowering until after frost.

Honey may be substituted for brown sugar in preparing sprays for control of thrips-in either the Paris green or tartar emetic mixtures. Gladiolus culture is a failure unless thrips are controlled since the flower buds will not open. The only alternative to summer spray is the use of some form of winter control-naphthalene flakes or bichloride of mercury.

A simple rule for calculating the amount of honey to use in place of brown sugar—use the same weight of honey as of tartar emetic or of Paris green.

Wet Root Systems With Soft Spray Once a Week

To have our plants attain proper size and maturity we must understand the importance of keeping the garden properly watered. The vegetables take in from 50 to 100 times their own green weight of water and dissolve plant food through their roots and then discharge the moisture into the air by evaporation land transpiration. If you live where the rainfall is abundant the plants are kept well supplied by nature. In many sections, however, it becomes necessary to give the vegetable garden supplementary waterings to make good the loss of moisture through the air. In very dry sections of the country the garden crops are irrigated by a system of open ditches, or they are subirrigated by tiles laid under the ground. For a large planting, pipes may be laid either above or below the ground.

For the home garden the hose is generally used rather than the more expensive and complicated watering systems. There are a few simple rules to follow in watering the vegetables during dry spells, however. Have sufficient volume of water to reach the entire root system, but apply it with a gentle spray rather than a heavy stream. One good watering a week is sufficient, but make sure that the ground is completely soaked all the way down. A light daily watering water. A Bordeaux mixture spray should be avoided, as it only refreshes the upper roots and makes them grow toward the surface is very destructive, being able to rather than downward, where the strip all the leaves from the plant plant food is more abundant and in two or three nights. ## Proper Watering Care of Tomato Plants

Are Subject to Attack by Disease And a Number of Insect Pests

By Laurence and Edna Blair.

A number of diseases may attack the tomato plant, either destroying them entirely or else greatly reducing the volume and quality of the yield. Remember that wet weather helps to spread fungus troubles, so avoid cultivation until the plants have become thoroughly dry. Fusarium wilt is caused by a fungus which enters the roots from the soil, causing the plants to turn valley and die. For prevention was relative and sail plants to turn yellow and die. For prevention use wilt free seed and soil. If necessary, disinfect the soil by using 1-to-1,000 solution of mercuric chloride. A number of strains have been developed to resist this disease, such as Rutgers and Maraglob. Ask your dealer for some of these plants if the disease is prevalent in your vicinity.

Leaf spot and early blight are both fungus diseases which attack the leaves and stems causing reduced yields and poor fruit. Spray with Bordeaux mixture when the plants are first set out, and repeat at 10-day intervals if these diseases are suspected.

Blossom-end rot is a disease that causes the decay of the blossom end of both green and ripe tomatoes.

It is most prevalent during long can be prevented by keeping the crop well supplied with moisture; the black excrement which it leaves first, by growing it in soil that has a very high humus content; second, on the ground under the branch by cultivating thoroughly and often; and third, by watering the plants just as often and as much as is

AAUW Laboratory Studies Source of War Rumors

Wave of Anti-British Stories Called Serious Propaganda

> By Frances Lide, . Women's Club Editor.

Anti-British rumors are probably the "most serious" being dissem insted in this country at the present moment. The use of jokes is a "startlingly effective" method of enemy propaganda. And especially in times of tension-perfectly loyal citizens are frequently unconscious "carriers" of such enemy-planted rumors as the information-seeking type. These are some of the findings of "Rumor Laboratories" being set up in many sections of the country at the suggestion of a national officer of the American Association of University Women.

Mrs. Malbone Graham of Los Angeles, AAUW vice president of the South Pacific region, originated the plan which has been adopted not only by AAUW groups in her region, but by other organizations and libraries as far east as Chicago.

Here for a brief visit at AAUW headquarters last week, she described the plan as an attempt to promote straight thinking in wartime and to extinguish "incendiary" rumors.

The "Rumor Laboratory Record Sheet" offers a simple method of recording unsubstantiated reports or stories and following through with an analysis of their type and validity.

Also, the immediate source, the type of rumor, the source of authentic information in the field of rumor content, whether or not the rumor is validated or disproved, with the date of such information, and, finally, a section for remarks.

Laboratory tests show that all too often rumors follow the short-wave radio, Mrs. Graham declared.

WOEFUL FUNNYMEN—Are these topnotch comics of Hollywood. Among the champion worriers of the film colony, for no apparent reason, they are Bob Hope, Red Skelton, Jack Benny and Abbott and Costello, the latter due being vice versa here.

Perpetually Tortured by Their Troubles

Screen's Comedians Are the Champion Worriers, Though Most of Their Woes Are Imaginary

By Harold Heffernan.

HOLLYWOOD. Do you worry?

If so, don't worry too much about it. You're worrying along in pretty expensive company. Eighty per cent of the screen's must successful actors (women on the sound stage. should be excepted in this ratio) are very expert worriers. They are perpetually tortured by troublesreal or imaginary. Mostly the latter, it should be added.

The Hollywood merry-go-round is the bumpiest apparatus of its kind in the universe and those who ride it to stardom pay an enormous him; the cameras, the microphones, toll in torn nervous systems.

the balmy nights there is probably more insomnia per square block in Hollywood than anywhere else in the world. They don't exactly wake up screaming out here, but plenty Ann Sheridan. Miss Sheridan is of topnotchers toss and brood fitfully far into the early hours.

But Comies Don't Relax. As a group the comedians do far and away the best job of worrying in Hollywood. Fellows like Jack Benny, Bob Hope, Abbott and Costello and Red Skelton find little rest from a never-ending task of scraping up enough funny material to fit into both their picture and radio shows. The average actor is handed a script, which he sets to memory and recites before the camera and mike. After that he can relax. But not the picture-radio comic. All day long everything he sees or hears must be considered a possible source of gag material.

Hope seldom calms down. He is a dynamo on the movie set, in the commissary and in the radio station. In addition to his screen and radio work he makes more Army camp shows than any actor in town. Doctors have warned him repeatedly to take it easier. Skelton, a comparative newcomer to the comic field, but one of its most successful, is also a bundle of nervous energy. He eats, sleeps and dreams gags. It is apparent from the way he tries out new gags on his friends that he loves his

After this was done, there came the terrifying moment when Jack would have to decide which of the two (or maybe three or four) ways was best. Often he would pick a certain one, with Keighley agreeing, only to change his mind completely a sittle later. Keighley would agree to this, too, but what Jack didn't know was that the director had made the switch on his own, sensing that his troubled star would sooner or later change his mind. When the fateful decision was finally made, the next scene would he readied giving Jack a few moments in which to do some real Watching Abbott and Costello on worrying. While Miss Sheridan and the screen or listening to their radio the rest of the cast killed time in

The Guinea Pig Revolts Old Docile Sneak Previewers

Suddenly Turn Mutinous

By Jay Carmody. Any feeling you may have had about the quality of recent movies may find its explanation in what might be called the revolt of the guinea pige The thing that might be called the revolt of the guinea pigs is the apparently sudden and sweeping decision of California movie preview audiences to double-cross producers by falsifying their real reaction to photoplays. That is to say, if the picture happens to be unendurable, the preview audience not only will endure it but applaud its hands off to create the ing to an audience, or several audiences in the mind of the producer that he has an Academy Award winner. It's mutiny, of course, but it also is fun. No one knows how far t will be carried, what its effect on pictures will be, or what the producers will do to quell anything so outrageously whimsical on the part of a once docile and reliably naive group of neighbors.

The sneak preview has been one of the cinema's most abiding faiths. It was developed as the perfect bal-ance for the formal $5.50-wear-yoursables-darling preview, or premiere, at which the applause and other chases of audience reaction were deemed inevitable courtesies, like not socking your host when he praised his own juleps. Applause Self-Deceptive. Even the dullest producer had negligible faith in the formal preview. He knew always in his heart that any one who paid $5.50 to attend a premiere would applaud lustily at its conclusion if only to deceive himself that it had been worth it. The sneak preview was the perfect offset. It involved sneaking up behind an innocent unsuspecting audience which had paid its way into an Abbott and Costello film and showing it, instead, one starring maybe Herbert Marshall and Norma Shearer. The surprise was supposed to reduce any Southern California audience to a condition of simple-hearted purity in which it would react to the picture with the uncomplicated innocence and hon-

its 2 o'clock bottle When it wrote on its preview view cards "I just love Mr. Marshall's classy voice" or that it found Miss Shearer adorable, its stark candor convinced the producer that here was the perfect intimation of huge boxoffice and artistic success. Or, if not artistic success then the heck with that so long as the boxoffice outlook was promising. It was the old story of believing that the peo-The Terrifying Moment.

This Is the Army: A Million-Dollar Hit

New Khaki-Clad Revue Turns Out to Be the Best Thing That's Happened on B'way Since the War

By Ira Wolfert.

It has a lot on its mind right now, but baseball and so forth hasn't been too successful about raising money for emergency relief so the fellows took a moment or two off to do it themselves, and the result is a million-dollar musical, the best thing that has happened on Broadway since the war.

"This Is the Army" is the title. Non-commissioned personnel run it Non-commissioned personnel rull leads the way through, from box office to backdrop. A World War sergeant, Irving Berlin, wrote the scheme of the show and the lyrics and music. If the show were merely a talent-ed and amusing sequence of routines, then the poor man could save his money, as he does on all the other musical revues produced. But this show is the Army of the United States telling you in its own way what kind of guy it is and making you come out thinking it's just plain one hell of a real great guy.

"Done With Mirrors."

The odd part of this is that it's all done by mirrors or something. The flag is never waved. The tongue is never taken out of the cheek.
The soldier boys kid their noncommissioned officers and kid themselves and their loneliness and their hunger for the time when they were fellows instead of soldiers. It's American - style propaganda, the oblique kind, and, for Americans, the best kind there is. I think everybody can be glad the movies have bought it, not only because of the $250,000 that means for Army relief, but because of the infinitely larger audiences the movies reach. Nobody can see this show without learning what this war is about, that it is about boys like these and the chances of future generations to turn out the way they

One day in 1919, on a hillside in Forest Perk, a group of civic leaders, who without other capital than their pledged faith and under a charter which foreswore profit to themselves, decided to create a theater for all.

Some Seats Are Free. No guarantor ever has lost a nickel. To serve on the Board of Directors is one of the most coveted honors in the city. In 1919, 60 persons pledged $27,-750; this year 900 guarantors pledged more than $100,000. The river Des Peres runs squarely under the stage of the theater, nourishing two giant two-century-old oak trees which flank the stage. They are called the most valuable trees in the whole Mississippi Valey—each day they receive a special light treatment 15 feet under the stage floor.

Ten thousand seats are available at prices ranging from nothing at all up to $2. In the rear 1,700 seats are free-first come, first served. No questions asked. Several thousand and more seats are priced at 25 customers have to pass through the gates to make expenses, estimated at $35,000 a week.

The stage, 90 by 115 feet, contains the only outdoor revolving stage in the world. There is no sign of a curtain—the audience sees sets changed speedily behind a dim blanket of light that silhouettes every figure on the platform. If it rains, there are shelters at the rear and both sides capable of protecting 15,000 persons. Value of the entire plant is more than $500,000, but officials proudly boast it could be twice that and still not succeed without this one studios suddenly attributed the decline in picture popularity to the fact that photoplays were being reviewed by critics and Hollywood columnists on the basis of preview showings. Months ahead of the actual release of the picture in some cases, these adverse comments were regarded as a kiss of death. The first form of escape from it was to triple the secrecy surrounding the sneak showing of the picture. Newspapermen who used to be invited not only were not told but severe penalties were threatened for those who dared tip them off.

Carmody

Dispute Quickly Settled. It worked out as quite a controversy for a while, but eventually the issue was settled and the preview seemed set for a long, calm life. Producers were happy in the conviction that they could get honest, meaningful audience reaction without further interruption.

It was sort of like being in Paradise until people living in it began to be made fools of by preview audiences who think it is funny to applaud the wrong pictures and the wrong players and to write unfavorable remarks on the ones that really are good.

It migh be a sign that movie audiences have grown up, at least to a kind of malicious adolescence—a very funny age when viewing its antics from a distance, this distance

Another Headache for Radio Seeks

A. F. of M. Ruling to End Recording Services Provides Latest Dilemma

By C. E. Butterfield.

NEW YORK, July 11 (Wide World).—Broadcasting never seems to get away from puzzling problems involving music, or the devices from which it can be reproduced. It wasn't so long ago that the question of the use of copyright music was settled after a year of wrangling. Likewise, differences of one sort or another that have sprung up between stations and those who play the instruments which turn out the tunes have passed into history.

But the latest developing situation may be a tough one. It centers in the announcement of James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, that the 140,000 members of his union would discontinue making records or other recorded devices for use by radio stations, juke boxes or other public reproducing equipment after July 31. Records for home use would not be affected.

But funny cracks crept in during the conversation. Hope couldn't keep What the individual broadcast stations, many of which are heavy users of recordings and transcrip-But this day he was talking about his recent swing through the tions, intend to do has not been disclosed. transcriptions. On the whole, the networks would be affected very little, inasmuch as the programs they relay use recordings only in particularly rare instances, except for certain sound effects.

The union ruling has for its objective the hiring of more musicians to alleviate an unemployment situation which Petrillo described as 'bad."

Exhibition by Men Of Armed Services At National

By Leila Mechlin.

The exhibition of paintings and drawings by men of the armed forces entered in the competition set up by the magazine Life, which may be seen during all this month in the National Gallery of Art, is interesting from several angles. The 117 works listed in the catalogue are by soldiers, sailors and marines, as well as aviators, who have laid aside their regular occupations for the defense of their country and the cause of liberty, but comparatively few of whom had as yet experienced active warfare. Some have had professional training and were normally engaged in various sections of the field of creative art; others have merely turned to art as an avocation.

According to the terms of the tompetition, only pictures of scenes and events connected with the artist's experience while on active duty were eligible. Fifteen hundred works were sent in. These came Squadron, which depicts two men from all parts of the country, Trini- and an anti-aircraft gun spotting dad, Puerto Rico, Greenland and planes which dot the sky. Hawaii. The first prize, $300, went to Pvt. Robert Burns for a painting entitled "Troop Movement," which pictures men in khaki traveling in a convoy truck with great and evi-dent discomfort. The artist had exceptional art training, having been five years a student in the Tale Art School and at the time of his induction into the Army was, himself, an instructor at Rollins College. For Jade Collectors.

Much interest was shown last season in a collection of jade exhibited in the National Museum as a loan from Georges Estopey of New York. To those who saw this exhibition, as well as all interested in carvings in this beautiful material, a sumptuous volume on Chinese jade, just published by the Norton Gallery and School of Art, at Palm Beach, Fla., cannot fail to further instruct and increase enthusiasm. It is by Stanley Charles Nott, who has lately been appointed honorary curator of the department of oriental art of the Norton Gallery, and t has to do with examples of carved ade in his own quite extensive collection.

The foreword is by a distinguished Chinese scholar and expert. The illustrations, of which 118 are full page, are half tones and line engravings, and so excellent that they truly interpret the translucent quality of the jade, as well as evidence the amazing craft of the carvers. The Norton Gallery at Palm Beach is one of the youngest of our art museums. The fact that it has sponsored the publication of this volume goes to show the breadth of field it proposes to cover.

From Durer to Rembrandt.

The Whyte Gallery, 1707 H street N.W., is holding this month an exhibition entitled "From Durer to Rembrandt," which consists of original etchings and engravings by these early masters such as are rarely seen outside of museums and auction rooms. That any considerable number of these are still available through purchase seems almost miraculous when it is remembered that the blocks and plates from which the prints were made were engraved or etched from 400 to 500 years ago. That these impressions have survived goes to show how much they have been appreciated

New Fortune Gallo Outdoor Opera Series Announced

On Friday night, August 7, Fortune Gallo will again present grand opera in America's picturesquely situated outdoor theater - with a change of opera each night for one change of opera each night for one week. Following the grand opera series, he will turn the theater on the Potomac into a light opera stage. Operettas chosen from the most popular of light operas will each have a run of one week. The San Carlo Opera Company will, as last season be heard in a series of last season, be heard in a series of seven different operas, while singers well known through the Shubert productions will have leading roles in a month's engagement at Washington's Water Gate.

Outlining plans for the season, Mr. Gallo called attention to the statement of Charles A. Thompson chief of the division of cultural relations, United States Department of State, that "music is one of the great satisfactions of life that cannot be touched by rations or priorities, cannot be sunk at sea, nor seized by conquering armies for their own

The local management will be under the direction of C. C. Cappell, who states that the very reasonable admission prices have been scaled to appeal to a very large public.

Mr. Gallo also says that it is a happy occasion to apply his experience of 30 years of selling opera and operetta to the public at ticket prices which they can afford. Simultaneously with the Washington outdoor series, Mr. Gallo is presenting a monster concert at Soldiers' Field, Chicago, with Lily Pons and with Andre Kostelanetz conducting his orchestra.

Concerts Here Group Is Feature Of Starlight Chamber Series

Quartet in Two

The Belgian Piano-String Quartet will provide chamber music in all its intimacy, beauty and perfection of detail, in a series of two concerts on the Starlight Chamber Music series at Meridian Hill Park this week. The first concert will be given tomorrow night at 8:30, and the second concert at the same time on Thursday evening.

The Belgian Piano-String Quartet is widely recognized as one of the most accomplished chamber music units to be found anywhere. Its fame dates from its first concert in 1927. At that time Charles Houdret, the young Belgian composer, had just finished a quartet for piano and strings and sought vainly for an organization to play it. It was then that Joseph Wetzels and his former student, C. Foidart, collaborating with G. Mombaerts and an unnamed violinist, came to his rescue and organized themselves into a quartet for the specific purpose of performing the Houdret Quartet. This was done shortly afterward to the enthusiastic ac-

that initial success there was born

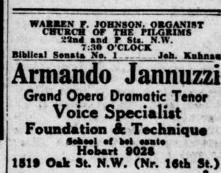

Since its formation the quartet has made highly successful tours can be found in the large number of works by eminent composers that have been dedicated to them. A composition in this category is included in the program for tomorrow night's concert. That number is Marcel Poot's Quartet, completed in 1932 and dedicated to the Belclude their Washington engagement gian Piano-String Quartet. The two other works on tomorrow's concert will be the "Quartet in E Flat Major," by Beethoven, and Brahms' Quartet in C Minor, Op. 60."

Popular Music By J. W. Stepp.

Victor puts one of its most inspired ideas in patriotic expression to work in its new album, "Mine Eyes Have Seen the Glory." The records (two 12-inch ones) are dramatizations of the timeless words of three of America's most stirring national songs, its Pledge to the Flag and a profound declamation of Walt Whitman. Projected against a musical background arranged by Kurt Weill, they are recited by Helen Hayes. Roy Shield and the Victor Concert Orchestra provide the accompaniment. Sung as a matter of habit, perhaps more so than as conscious utterances of Americans' belief in America, the words to our National Anthem, "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "America" have a dramatic significance that needs a heavy underscoring in these times. They are superbly underscored in the form presented in "Mine Eyes Have Seen the Glory." But while none can quibble with Mr. Weill's musical settings-especially for Whitman's "Beat, Beat Drums"-nor with Miss Haves' talent for emotional dramatizing, one gets the impression that the production would have fared considerably better with a male narrator, a Richard Hale or a Basil Rathbone, and an orchestra of more sonority than Mr. Shield has at his disposal.

For those who gripe-and with more than a whit of justification against Tin Pan Alley's inability to cope satisfactorily with World War II, Victor issues a choice collection of George M. Cohan's World War I ditties, which probably never will lose their vigor anyway. "Yankee Doodle Dandy" is the title of this set, and is performed by Leonard Joy's Orchestra in the time-honored pit orchestra fashion, with the help of Brad Reynolds, Ann Warren and chorus. Specimens: "Over There," "Give My Regards to Broadway," "You're a Grand Old Flag," "Yankee Doodle Boy," "So Long, Mary"eight tunes on three records.

On the frothy side, there is Decca's new Hoagy Carmichael album (three discs), in which Hoagy sings, whistles and accompanies (on piano) himself in six of his best and most whimsical compositions. To most of us Carmichael, the entertainer, will come a complete and altogether toothsome surprise. He performs "Stardust" and "Judy"his sweetest tunes— and those priceless tidbits, "Hong Kong Blues," "Mr. Music Master" and "Old Man Harlem." To date, this is lbum No. 1 of the year. Another fancy-free lad is Danny Kaye, delight of the stage, and he is awarded a set (four discs) by Columbia

The Belgian Piano-String Quartet, appearing on the Starlight series at Meridian Hill Park

An Early American Genius

Almost Forgotten Now, Samuel Bard Was Famous Physician of His Day

By Mary-Carter Roberts.

Dr. Bard of Hyde Park

By J. Brett Langstaff. (Dutton.)

This book brings to modern attention a commonly neglected member of that flock of geniuses who flourished in our country in the days of its Revolution, Dr. Samuel Bard of New York City, whom Sir William Osler eulogized a century and more later as one of the men who "have raised our profession above the dead level of a business." Dr. Bard, a physician surgeon, botanist, man of culture, keen student of the developing sciences, musician and gentleman, had a career which, in his day, kept him much in the public eye. He did not, however, take any part in the politics of his turbulent era, and history of that time is written largely in political terms. Consequently, Dr. Bard's memory has not been generally preserved outside the annals of his own profession.

Yet his achievements were more than remarkable. . He founded New York's first hospital and medical school; he revolutionized medical education in his day, establishing high professional standards and fighting superstition; he was responsible for the city's first botanical garden; he helped found the first library; he pioneered in social medicine (as it would be called today) and worked for improvement in the care of the insane; he brought forward advanced ideas in the treatment of epidemic diseases—his list of undertakings is astonishing. A friend of Benjamin Franklin, he inevitably reminds one of Franklin in his insatiable interest

In addition to these contributions to science, he also carried on a busy professional practice, including among his patients George Washington, during his presidency, and Alexander Hamilton. Probably Dr. Bard's best-remembered act was his performance of an operation on Washington's thigh, the removal of a tumor which was causing the President great

This extraordinary man was the son of mingled French Huguenot and English ancestry. Though of the landed gentry class, his family consistently practiced the professions. His great-grandfather, who received the original Hyde Park grant on the Hudson, was secretary to the Governor of New York under Queen Anne. His father, like himself, was a physician, and, in his advancement of medical practice in America, was a worthy forerunner of his famous son. Dr. Bard was educated in Edinburg University School of Medicine. Dr. Langstaff's book is solid biography, and evidently drawn from intensive research. He is admirably fitted, as far as background goes, for the composition, for members of his own family were Dr. Bard's professional colleagues. But he is not an entertaining writer; he inclines to the pedestrian. The brilliance of his subject's career, however, overrides his limitations.

Arise to Conquer

By Ian Gleed. (Random House.)

Ian Gleed is a wing commander in the Royal Air Force with a Distinguished Flying Cross to his honor. He has flown since the beginning of the war and has brought down some dozens of German planes—one loses count. His book is an effort to put the activities of a combat pilot before his readers—the activities, not the emotions or sensations. It is an action narrative exclusively, told in the first person and, for the most part, in the present tense, with much flyers' slang. Here is a fair sample of the style, a passage describing the sighting of a flight of more than

"A horde of dots are filling the sky; below us bombers flying in close formation—JU-88s and 87s. Above them, towering tier above tier, are fighters—110s and 109s. The mass comes closer. 'Now steady; don't go in too soon-work 'round into the sun.' The bombers pass about 10,000 feet below us. I start a dive, craning my neck to see behind. A circle of 110s are just in front of us—they turn in a big circle. Suddenly, the white of the crosses on their wings jumps into shape. I kick on the rudder; my sights are just in front of one. 'Get the right deflection.' Now I press the firing button—a terrific burst of orange flame; it seems to light the whole sky. Everything goes gray as I bank into a turn. 'Ease off a bit, you fool, or you'll spin.' I push the stick forward-white puffs flash past my cockpit. 'Blast you, rear-gunners!' I climp steeply, turning hard. Just above me there is another circle of 110s; their bellies are a pale blue, looking very clean."

long in this manner, recounting the adventures of dozens of flights, some over France in the last days of French resistance many over England and some raiding expeditions over enemy territory. Briefly, and in precisely the same style, it relates what the pilots of the author's group did in their time off, the baths they took, the shopping they got through, the letters they wrote, the jokes they played. A crash which Wing Comdr. Gleed suffered in the early days of the war, and his decoration by his King are reported in the same abrupt, impersonal fashion. If one could say that a book which deals incessantly with death, heroism and mortal combat was colorless, one would say it of this one. But, as one goes on through the monotonously similar pages, one has always the thought in one's mind, "This happened—this is happening right

There is enough drama in that consideration to compensate any literary shortcoming which a critic might think up.

Bookman's Holiday

By Vincent Starrett. (Random House.)

What happened to Sherlock Holmes' housekeeper? Was Oliver Goldsmith "Mother Goose"? How did the young man whom Blondin, the ropewalker, carried on his back across Niagara Falls feel during that uncertain journey? What became of the Nun of Aberhuern? Where was the original Dead Man's Chest? These are some of the questions which Vincent Starrett solves, or, with great grace, pronounces insoluble, in his present volume. The reviewer's word is-by all means get the volume.

Mr. Starrett is a collector and bibliophile who has reached that blessed state in his collecting and book loving where he can, as it were, sit sunnily upon a high hill of erudition and amuse himself playing with pebbles-odd fragments chipped off the great boulders of literature over which he has already made his ascent. Such diversion has been the occasion of the making of this book. A half-dozen or so literary oddities have moved him to write as many essays. Because he has mastered a style perfectly suited to his material, his essays become important. They are, in fact, gems of humorous tolerance.

The reviewer does not know what more need be said than that. She repeats her admonition-by all means get the book.

Cornish Tales

By Charles Lee. (Dutton.)

The stories which go to make up this collection were written some decades ago. They were published in England and received favorable criticism—which they unquestionably deserve. That they should be collected and republished at just this time is somewhat surprising, but an excellent idea. The volume will bring to the attention of American readers a gifted writer who is little known in our country.

The collection contains two novelettes and 10 short pieces. Seven of these last are those which originally came out under the title, "Our Little in an adjacent woodland with Rector Town." The novelettes are "The Widow Woman" and "Dorinda's Birthday." All deal with life in the county of Cornwall, as it was in the last years of the 19th century, the life of isolated, unmechanized communities of poor but independent villagers who lived as their fathers had lived before them for many generations.

Sentimentality or humor were the accepted modes for treating of humble people in Mr. Lee's day—the Freudian school not having then arrived—and he chose the latter. His tales show the Cornishmen as conservative, hard-headed folk whose devotion to precedent and mistrust of "foreigners" are fair objects for an author's drollery. His talent for comic portrayal is high and puts his work on a plane with Frank O'Connor's stories of the Irish, or even with certain of Mark Twain's sketches of American frontier types. Only one of the collection goes outside the folk formula and attempts to present a character who, while having all the folk characteristics, is an individual. That is one of the novelettes, "Dorinda's Birthday." It is the story of the adventures and emotions of a girl on her 17th birthday anniversary, when, according to custom, she is entitled to put aside childish things and consider herself a woman. The conflict between the new dignity and the not entirely vanished girlishness provides the theme of the story, while the background, a rustic fair, offers the author opportunity to paint a rich background of picturesque custom.

It would be useless to say that Mr. Lee's work is not dated, admirable as it is. It has the neatness of the plotted short story of his time; it uses the conventions of his period. But, in balance and in mastery of style, it shows great durability. It is to be hoped that his volume brings him the public in this country which he deserves.

Japan Rides the Tiger

By Willard Price. (John Day.)

Writing with almost primer-like simplicity, Willard Price, who has lived many years in Japan, restates the now familiar case in explanation of the Japanese grab for world power. As many writers before him have noted, he says that Japan has a medieval soul and a modern body. She has assimilated western science without changing her eastern outlook. And she is using science to help her to accomplish the identical end which, centuries ago, inflamed the barbarian Genghis Khan.

After presenting an effective picture of the economy, the thrift, the physical hardinood and the psychological backwardness of the Japanese citizen, Mr. Price looks at some of the territories which have already fallen under Nippon's rules-Manchukuo, Korea and certain of the islands of Micronesia. He reports economic exploitation and brutal repression of the rights of natives in these places. From these findings he takes his key to our best strategy against Japan's attack on us.

She has earned hatred aplenty in Asia already, he says, and the native peoples whom she has enslaved will willingly rise against her, once E. Fiddle Longspay

By Warren Bledsoe. (Little, Brown:)

There may or may not be such a spot in Maryland as St. Swithins Valley. Readers of Warren Bledsoe's first novel, "Fiddle Longspay," will not be concerned greatly on this point, however, because they will find that the characters who people this little world have been drawn with such fine realism that the mere matter of geographical authenticity is of no moment.

St. Swithins Valley is dominated by the aristocratic and powerful Longspay family. On land granted them by Lord Baltimore, so the story relates, they built the great ancestral home, Swithinsgift, an architectural gem rising proudly from colorful gardens, sweeping lawns and tree-lined avenues designed by L'Enfant. Here, on Swithinsgift's broad but socially exclusive acres, the story of Fiddle Longspay is unfolded. Beauchamps Longspay, nicknamed "Fiddle" because he plays the instrument by that name rather well, is the bad boy of the family. But his shortcomings are not of serious importance, his all-time low in moral turpitude being the day he was seen the guests at a fashionable Swithinsgift garden party clad in shorts and conversing surreptitiously it later developed, Fiddle was greatly enamored. Fiddle's Aunt Adelaide, a Longspay only by grace of having married into the family, was profoundly shocked at the incident, and a feud sprang up. But Fiddle was too clever, witty, stubborn and loveable not to meet the situation. Aunt good sport by giving Fiddle and Isabelle a gorgeous betrothal party. It is upon this slender thread that the plot is developed. But Mr. Bledsoe tells a fascinating story, nevertheless, of the folk who move in and out of the ancient portals of Swithinsgift. There are so many of them that the reader becomes a bit confused at times, regardless of which fact "Fiddle Longspay" presents a worthy picture of a charming, timehonored phase of life which slowly but definitely is disappearing from

Victory in the Pacific

By Alexander Kiralfy. (John Day.) A scholarly but fascinating analysis of the problems that must be solved in order to defeat Japan, this book is a "must" for those who would follow closely the progress of the war in the Pacific. It furnishes an excellent reference against which to check developments, such as the battles of Midway and the Coral Sea, as they occur. The author, an American who has spent many years in studying naval tactics, regards the Pacific theater of the war as a second primary front in the global struggle. To defeat Japan requires strong offensive action, he believes, and scrapping of old theories of naval warfare which were shattered at Pearl Harbor.

The key to victory lies in the northern approach to Japan, Mr. Kiralfy asserts. He advocates seizure of bases to the north of Japan, in Sakhalin and Hokkaido, in concert with the use of Russian bases.

Further understanding is given the Japanese naval defeat in the Midway battle by the chapter describing Japan's Navy, which, Mr. Kiralfy says, was not intended for use in an all-out battle against America's full naval strength. The Japanese prefer to fight only when the odds are heavily in their favor. They had superiority in numbers of ships at Midway, but they ran into a devastating surprise in the form of the amazingly accurate American air bombing. G. D. HORNER.

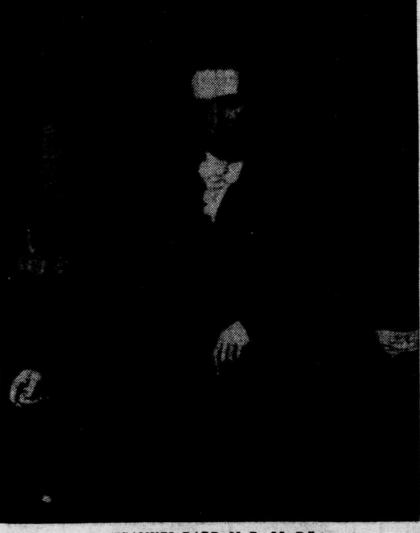

King News

By M. Koenigsberg. (Stokes.)

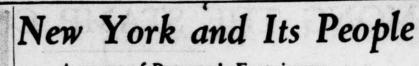

Mr. Koenigsberg has had a long and successful career in journalismas reporter and editor, and also as president and general manager of news and feature services owned by William Randolph Hearst. The son of a San Antonio tailor, he became a reporter for that city's Times at the age of 13 and editor of the Texas World a short time later. Since then, he has, like most other newspapermen, met nearly all kinds of people under nearly all kinds of circumstances. And in this interesting volume he tells about both the people and the circumstances.

A great deal of printers' ink has been poured into journalists' autobiographies in recent years, but this one is different from most of the others. It is not concerned with war correspondence or the perils thereof, nor with any of the other topics on which other newspapermen are grinding out words by the hundreds of thousands. It is a book of memoirs of the old-fashioned kind-simple, straightforward, anecdotal. Newspapermen may disagree with some of Mr. Koenigsberg's views on journalistic history and practice, but most of them will enjoy reading of his Adelaide at last proved herself a adventures just the same. By Meyer Berger. (Simon & Schuster.)

The number of Marhattan's millions has grown since O. Henry wrote his book of immortal short stories, but the nature of their fascination for authors has not changed. It remains the fascination of violent contrast. O. Henry saw it as the contrast between the comic and the pathetic, the pure and the foul, the noble and the grotesque arbitrarily set side by side in the city's confusion. Meyer Berger, coming three decades and more later, sees it as the contrast between what might be expected of the human kind and what exists. The reviewer weighs the enconium carefully, aware of his worth, and offers it as the truth as near as she can see it-Mr. Berger, in his vein, is no wise inferior to O. Henry in his,

Mr. Berger, to be sure, does not present his sketches as fiction. He writes them as records of his experiences as a New York reporter. He was 11 when he went to work on the old Morning World, of blessed memory, and he has been on newspapers ever since, always in New York City. Apparently, he has frequently seen, in his assignments, much stuff that would hardly come under a daily paper's definition of news. He has saved that stuff up, and now he puts it into words, in a series of short papers, almost any one of which is a gem of its kind.

He went to interview a man who made a pastime of raising eagles in a tenement. He was sent to the water front to investigate a rumor that fishing in the East River had revived (this sketch is a beauty). He was covering Al Capone's trial when he saw the gang leader deliver a snub to "de Lawd" (Richard Berry Harrison, who was playing the role in "The Green Pastures"). Years of familiarity led him to study the history of the gloomy Tombs Prison. He found out the secret relation of dominoes to the Lincoln Tunnel. He had a social acquaintance with Annie Lonergan, who had married a brace of murderers and loved to talk about it And so on and so on

It is not with obvious humor, or in any obvious mood that Mr. Berger writes of these chimerical matters, but with a constant undertone of wonder. These things are, he says, in what deceptively seem to be quite ordinary words. And the words echo back to the mind—that it should be so! One suspects that Mr. Berger is a poet. Or, at any rate, one is certain that he knows poetry.

The Background of Our War

From Lectures Prepared by the Orientation Course, War Department, Bureau of Public Relations.

This is a book for the library of the armchair military strategist. It is compiled from lectures prepared for delivery before men inducted into the armed forces and brought up to date through March 15, 1942.

In unspectacular style and devoid of military terminology that might be confusing, it traces, blow by blow, the political, economic and military eampaigns in Europe. Asia and the Western Hemisphere through the contemporary war period. Without unnecessary detail, it describes the military movements of Hitler's legions through their European conquests and assesses merit and fault with unstinting recognition of the thoroughness and brilliance of German planning and frank admissions of failure on the part of the Allies. It cautiously sidesteps points of political controversy in the United States prior to the war while asserting that wise leadership in the Government over the last 10 years enabled this country to enter the war more thoroughly prepared than at the beginning of any other conflict in its history. Actually, there is not much more in the book than the careful and enthusiastic reader of war dispatches would glean from the newspapers. But as a summary of what has gone on, it is well worth reading.

Here is an example of the summing up: The German successes in the pattle of France were due to four major factors: The power and sustaining ability of the German armies, the disadvantages of the Allies arising from that fact, the inferior equipment and training of the Allied forces and the disadvantage of coalition warfare-lack of a unified command for Britain, France, Belgium and Holland
Major fault in Allied defense plans was the apparent failure to provide for a central body of reserves. The lectures forecast Rommel's Libyan desert offensive and predict possible German drives against Gibraltar and Turkey. They give unbridled praise to Russia's fighting men and generalship, but discount

Russian claims of high Nazi casualties. After tracing Japan's aggressions, the book concludes that for the Nipponese "a long war, a slow war, is swift suicide. She hopes to avert it by even swifter seizure of every United Nations stronghold within reach of her armed forces, then to effect a juncture with her European allies Men of the RAF, by Sir William for a final decision." Norbert Guterman. (Dutton.) If the courage and invincibility of Alexander Poliakov's unit of the Red Army is typical of the Russian military machine as a whole, the title he has given his diary of a month's fighting against the Nazis is understatement. For not only do Mr. Poliakov and his comrades in arms stubbornly refuse to surrender, though surrounded by the Fascists; they fight their way, outnumbered, unknowing of their exact location, back to the main forces of their army, showing unexampled heroism. Mr. Poliakov, a correspondent of Red Star, organ of the Red Army, gives the first eye-witness account of the tactics used by the Russians in their battle against the Nazi invaders. His story is limited in time to the first month of the war, in place to a small segment of the Southwestern Russian front, in forces to one unit.

The simple, straightforward story of heroism begins when Poliakov's nmanding officer, Galitsky, tells his men, "Our position is now behind

By opening fire on one Nazi division, from the unit's stance in the woods, the Russians lead the Nazis to believe they such horrid transformations have are being attacked from the parallel highway. News of the Philatelic World, Its Interests and People—Review of Notes on a Variety of Subjects of Interest in the Stamp Press-List of Local Meetings.

By James Waldo Fawcett. No formal announcement has been made, but there is reason to believe that the next war propaganda stamp will be issued on August 14 and will be intended to mark the first anniversary of the Atlantic Charter.

The 3-cent "Win the War" propaganda issue is being referred to as "the Wrong Way Corrigan stamp" -because the arrows are aimed one way and the eagle faces another.

Official propaganda bureaus look with disfavor upon "gags" about postage stamps.

First-day figures for the 3-cent "Win the War" stamp, July 4, have been announced as follows: 191,168 covers canceled, 576,456 copies sold, $17,293.68.

Protests from philatelic writers finally have brought from the Treasury Department the withdrawal of its ruling that War savings stamps should not be catalogued as collectable material. No concession as yet has been announced with regard to the use of War savings stamps for postage, but as long as there is life there is hope.

The Office of Facts and Figures has commissioned Paul F. Berdanier of New York and his co-operating artists to design a war propaganda stamp. It is stipulated that the composition must represent the vil-lage of Lidice, the Czechoslovakian community allegedly destroyed by the Germans early last month. The drawing is to include the slogan "We Won't Forget" and the phrase "United States Postage 3 Cents"

A special memorandum issued by Mr. Berdanier under date of July says: "I have already asked T. M. Cleland, W. A. Dwiggins, Rockwell Kent, Hugo Steiner-Prag, Rudolph Ruzicka and Edward A. Wilson to make up the basic working committee, and I am also trying to get Paul Manship to agree to be a member of this group.

One of the difficulties of the assignment is that of obtaining photographs of Lidice from which to work. Assessor Edward A. Dent is responsible for the decision to inter-pret the existing tax law to include stamps and coins as taxable property. The statute never has exempted philatelic and numismatic material, and it therefore is entirely legal to demand tax payments from the owners of such collections. It is understood that the death of a wealthy philatelist brought to the attention of the District government the fact that some rare stamps and coins are notably valuable. Logically it follows that all or nearly all similar items may be judged capable of producing reve-

But the problem of how to appraise philatelic and numismatic property remains as yet unsolved. Mr. Dent wishes it be known that he does not expect collectors to report total "catalogue values," which in truth are only "asking prices." Neither does he want estimates based on theories of "forced sales." Instead he prefers to leave it to the conscience of the owners to decide the amounts to be reported. He believes collectors will be fair to the District government as well as to themselves.

What stocks of stamps have been destroyed in the war is, of course, a matter of speculation. There can be no question, however, that the wholesale devastation of such cities as Rotterdam, Belgrade, Cologne, Sevastopol, Exeter, Bath, Canterbury and Essen must have resulted in the elimination of large quantities of philatelic material. And that is why the American Kennel Club rule barring vicious dogs from the show should be strictly enforced. A vicious dog should have no place in any breed's program, regardless of how fine a physical specimen he may be. Mental and temperamental traits are just as hereditory as physical ones. Probably one splendid physical example of doghood with a mean streak has has done more damage to the splendid breed known as German shepherds in this country than any other factor. When the shepherd was at the height of his popularity here, after World War I, such a dog was imported, widely shown and used at stud. His bet, scattered from one end of the country to the other, succeeded in putting that breed on the toboggan from which it has taken them all these years to get off. The Foley dog show organization has barred a number of well-known champion dogs from shows superintended by that organization. The American Kennel Club should put teeth into its own ruling on the subject and refuse to register litters sired by a dog known to be of temperament. Any dog known to have bitten more than once, any dog which will attack unprovoked, any dog which cannot be controlled by reasonable means, is dog that is not fit for show or breeding. Moreover, it is a dog that sohuld be humanely destroyed for the sake of community safety.

Plane Model Makers Have Opportunity For Good Jobs

By I. R. HEGEL.

In the early spring of this year, the Civil Service Commission announced an open competitive examination for aircraft modelmakers ranging in age from 16 to 28.

These modelmakers were needed to work in the NACA Cleveland Engine Laboratories, and the applicants had to show they had constructed one successful flying model that had been entered in a sanctioned competition. Applicants also had to prove they were familiar with them in two and dig out the soft, woodworking tools. The position pithy pulp they are filled with. carried a salary of $1,440 a year, less Fill the hollow with several kinds a deduction for a retirement annuity. ## Log of Activities Will Add to Pleasure of Vacation Outings

Many of you will be going on hikes or other vacation outings during the next few weeks. You will have a great time, but before you know it you will be back home with a pack of exciting memories. Your outing will mean more to you and will live longer in your memory if you keep a "log" of your activities. A log is actually a daily record of a ship's speed, but you can make yours more on the order of a diary. Scribble down notes on what you see and do, and the people you meet during the day, and write them up before you go to bed at night. When you return home, collect all your notes and copy them into a some of the things you saw. A group photo of those who went on the outing will make an elegant frontispiece for your book. Figure out a good title, print it on the cover, and you'll have a complete and picturesque account to help you remember the fun you had.

Elias Howe Made Fortune After Early Hardships

If you had been alive 200 years ago, you would have found that' women were spending a great deal of time sewing. Some women of today do sewing, but the custom is not nearly so common as in past times.

Women who sew today usually have sewing machines, but that wasn't tomers" to play. Other things you have seen at real carnivals can be added.

If you want to carry the carnival idea a little further, why not have a circus? You can be the barker.

Women who sew today usually have sewing machines, but that wasn't the case 200 years ago. If a dress had to be made in those days, all the stitching was done by hand. No one had a machine with which to sew who made suits for men had to perform hand labor, the same as of a needle next to the point was the seamstresses who worked on trouble about sewing, but the inventors who wanted to make sewing machines were men. Perhaps the women were too busy washing, ironing and so on to turn to the question of how a machine could help them sew.

As long ago as 1790, an Englishman took out a patent on a sewing machine. His name was Thomas Saint, and he built and sold a few of his machines. Forty years later, a Frenchman invented a machine which came into use for sewing uniforms. An American. Walter Hunt, made a model of a machine with the eye near the

Just Between Ourselves

A new kind of "jeep" is going into action this summer Every one is, of course, familiar with the Army's jeeps—those tough little automobiles that seem to be capable of going anywhere and doing anything. This kind of jeep is used to carry soldiers, pull guns or haul supplies. It gets its name from the letters with which it is marked—"GP," meaning "general purpose." It is, in short, a task force

And it is revealing no military secret to say that the new jeep also is a task force, though not necessarily on wheels.

A task force, as every one knows is a small, tightly organized unit of highly trained men assigned to do an extremely dangerous and difficult job-as often as not, a seemingly impossible job. The various units of Great Britain's famous Commandos, for instance, are task forces. And it was American task forces which attacked the Japanese in the Gilbert and Marshall Islands, and bombed Tokio and other Nip-

But the new jeep is a task force of a different type. It is to be made up of members of the American National Junior Red Cross-boys and girls whose patriotism makes them want to continue through the summer all the worthwhile war work they carried on during school months. As the JRC explains in the first of a series of special bulletins to be issued during the summer:

Central Student Finds Camera Is Profitable

By NANCY-KAY LONG, 15,

One of Central's busiest boys, during those days just before school closed, was Joe Tenschert, jr., photographer and aircraftsman. Now he has more time to devote to his hobbies, but then his time was divided among his three main interests, photography, the building of model airplanes for the Navy and his school work. Joe was a pupil in Central's wood shop when his interest in model planes was aroused by the Navy's recruiting of boys to build models to be used for training men in certain lines of debeen commended for his work and, after completing a certain number of different types of model planes, he leaps and bounds, and he now uses a 4x5 speed camera. Movie stars and other celebrities have been snapped unaware by this camera enthusiast. He has taken pictures of Glenn Miller, Woody Herman, Benny Goodman, Johnny Long and scores of other famous orchestra leaders. Numerous celebrities, among them Mickey Rooney, Sonja Henie and Al Jolson, have been caught by Joe's camera at the Redskins' football games. After developing his pictures, Joe sends the good one to the stars to be autographed.

In addition to being an interesting hobby, photography can be a profitable business, Joe has found. He often makes a tidy sum selling his pictures. Samples of Joe's photographic work, in his pictures of school activities, have appeared in almost every issue of Central's studen publications during the year.

Joe has not yet decided whether to enter aeronautics or photogra-

Cash Prizes Are Offered for Best

Contributions

Five prizes of $1 each are awarded in every issue of The Junior Star for the best original stories, articles, poems and car-toons by boys and girls of high school age or under.

All contributions must bear the name, age, address, telephone number and school of the author. Written contributions must be on one side of paper, and, if typewritten, double - spaced. Drawings must be in black-andwhite and must be mailed flat.

The editor's choice of winners will be final, and he reserves the right to use any contribution in whatever form he may deem advisable, regardless of whether it is awarded a prize. Checks will be mailed to winners during the week following publication of their contributions. No contribution will be returned.

Writers of stories and articles which, in the opinion of the editor, are of sufficient merit will be given cards identifying them as reporters for The Junior Star. The editor reserves the right, however, to decline to issue reporters' cards or to revoke those already issued whenever such action appears advisable.

Address contributions to The Junior Star, 727 Star Building, Washington, D. C.

'Victory Garden' Solves Family's Food Problem

Question of What to Have for Dinner Is Answered Quickly

By ROSE MARIE WINSLOW. St. Michael's School. Silver Spring. Md. About three months ago, everybody and his neighbor were talking about putting in "victory gardens." Well, those who really meant it can sit back now and enjoy — and I mean that literally - the fruits of their labors. This is, of course, if they attended to their gardens as faithfully as hey should have. I know -- because Dad and I put in our victory garden the 1st of April, and to date, we have enjoyed two crops of lettuce and Ross Marie Winslow radishes, and a plentiful supply of other vegetables besides.

It is amazing how a garden can help out when you are undecided what kind of vegetables to have with a meal. For instance, the other night Mom did not know what vegetables she wanted to have for dinner. I took the situation in hand, going out into the garden and gathering some stringbeans and beets. Thus, we had all the vegetables we needed-all the vitamins and minerals, too-right out of our own yard. "Victory garden" was a phrase on everybody's lips just a few short months ago, and now the words have become vegetables-fresh, flavorful, nourishing vegetables to feed the gardeners and their families. Those who have worked hard in putting in their gardens and taking care of them must be glad now that they

If you and your family were among that foresighted and industrious group, you can get a whole dinner out of your garden-with the exception of the meat, of course. And if your garden contains as many different kinds of vegetables as ours, you can enjoy a variety of salads as well as plenty of regular dishes. Our garden represents a real victory for us in many ways.

Successful Outing Depends on Choice Of Good Location

By D. H. ELSOM. When you set forth into the woods on your long-anticipated camping trip, you must realize that the selection of a proper location for your camp is a very important thing, in-deed. If you know how to pick out a good camp site, you will greatly increase your chances for a successful vacation. If you don't choose a good location, you may get yourself into

The best place to locate a camp depends, of course, on local condi-tions, and the nature of the woods in which you are. However, there are five principles of finding a good camp location which every camper must obey if he wishes his camping days to be happy ones. They are:

1. The camp must be located near a supply of pure water. Spring water or well water is best, but they are not always to be had. If you are forced to use water from a lake or river, it is always wise to boil it. 2. Never locate your camp near a on the sheet of paper and use the buttons for players. If you teresting by selecting your favorite neglect this precaution, a hard rain may make a lake out of your camp site. Never pitch camp in an old reach them, will mildew, and your equipment will get damp and moldy.

List of Needs Will Help Make Success Of Camping Trip By KATHERINE HOUISON.

Next time you plan a camping trip, make a written list of the things you'll need. It's easy to eliminate the non-essentials when you're packing, if the load's too heavy. But forgetting some small but important .tem can spoil all your fun. Put down clothing, bedding and cooking equipment you'd like to take, then decide what you can best do without if there's too much. Make a list of food supplies and ask mother to help you eliminate the unnecessary things.

Be sure you have a small frying pan, a coffee pot, a water pail and a can opener. A corn popper for cooking "wienies," hamburgers and steaks over an open fire is grand, if you have space for it.

Don't forget a flashlight; you never know when it may prove a life-saver at camp. And the same applies to a good first-aid kit. It's well to have a small sewing out-

Pack your matches in a tin can to protect them from moisture and rats. And put in a mirror! It's fun to be a hobo in the woods, but coming back to civilization looking like a tramp is sometimes embarrassing. Above all, remember the risk of fire in any woods, anywhere. Build even a very small fire on bare ground, well away from dried greas or undergrowth, and be sure to smother it carefully with earth or water before you leave it, even for a short time.

Frank Webb will be glad to criticize your drawing if you will write to him in care of The Junior Star, inclosing a selfaddressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope.

Naval Reservists Now Instructing New Officers

Lt. C. A. Appleby, Jr., Temporarily in Command of School

Many members of the officers' semblies that they have been given opportunities to not only drill their fellow officer students but to conduct some of the classes. This has helped to relieve what appeared, early in the program, as a difficult situation because of the lack of sufficient commissioned personnel for detail to the training work.

Lt. C. A. Appleby, jr., commander of the seaman guard at the Washington Navy Yard, with the additional duty of executive officer of the training divisions, has had the command temporarily thrust on him because of the temporary absence of the commanding officer, Lt. H. Arthur Lamar. It is indicated there will be a change in the command of the instruction group within a short time, and that it undoubtedly will fall to Lt. Appleby. Lt. Lamar has had charge of the special instruction work for a number of years, having started in the former naval battalion as instructor.

With the possibility that some of these officers might be transferred from their shore billets to stations at sea or at the training stations, some attention is being given by the old-time instructors to showing them how to conduct the routine of enlisted men's divisions both at the training stations and while aboard the department convention: Deleand aiding in abandoning ship.

THEY are playing a modest off-stage role in this global fight, but pilots of the Army Air Forces Ferrying Command are really delivering the American wallop at this stage. They are delivering the big bombers, and many fighter planes, too, that are now hitting the Axis on many fronts. They wouldn't be there to hit without the skillful and courageous service of the Ferry Command in flying them there. Made at the command's Baltimore base, these pictures show the type of men and some of the training they get for this vital service. To qualify for the service pilots must be between 21 and 45 years of age, possess 300 certified flying hours and a current CAA commercial license, be an American citizen and pass a satisfactory flight test. Training includes courses in weather, navigation, ordnance and other military subjects. Reserve commissions may be granted after an initial service of 90 days, with rank depending on age and experience.

Lt. O. P. Matz of the Ferrying Command waves the all-set signal as he prepares to take off on a delivery flight. Delivery routes of the command now just about girdle the globe.

They are full-fledged delivery pilots now, awaiting orders for a flight. Planes must go out as

Now it's a lesson in weather observation, and the pilots go atop the airfield weather lookout station to check the anemometer and wind directors.

SUPPERTIME SUNDAY, the wife's out ... I have to fend for myself. Which is O.K. For I've never been able to convince my wife that a guy has a right to get hungry three times a day on a Sunday.

So I go into a huddle with the icebox, come out with a salad. Salad? It's a supper! Tasty? And how!

I'm munching the last leaf when in strolls the wife. Is she floored!

"You made a salad and it tasted good!"

"Pooh, nothing to it," say I with a bow. "Sit down. I'll make you one." I get out the lettuce . . . the salad dressing . . .

"Oh, no wonder your salad tasted good," says she grabbing the jar. "You used my Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise."

"Just like a woman," say I. "Giving the credit for my salad to your salad dressing!"

"It isn't salad dressing! Read the label, Maestro! No starchy filler in this—that's why this Hellmann's jar can be labeled Real Mayonnaise."

AND FAR INTO THE NIGHT, my wife talks Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise:

Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise is the home kind made with only eggs, added egg yolks, salad oil, vinegar and seasonings-no starchy filler!

And it's really fresh - made with "FRESH-PRESS" Salad Oil, prepared each day as it's needed. That's why this Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise tastes fresher even than that made at home.

"Sounds a little expensive," I mutter, practically in my sleep.

Which hands her the last word! "For variety and economy, my dear husband, you can street-c-h Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise with milk or fruit juice. Contains no starchy filler-stays smooth and creamy-textured. Always tastes delicious!"

Now I'm interested. Stretching Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise sounds smart. So the next time I made my salad, I let the wife "thrifty" up the mayonnaise. Try it-makes a nice change!

HIS SUNDAY NIGHT SUPPER SALAD:

Cut cooked ham (or other cooked meat), tomatoes, hard-cooked eggs, and lettuce in sections as in illustration. Arrange in individual salad bowls. Garnish liberally with cooked peas.

HER "THRIFT" MAYONNAISE: To 1 cup Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise, gradually add ¼ cup milk. Serves 6.

MEET THE REAL ENGLISHMAN

Americans should know him better, for we're partners in a mighty job

by James Hilton

Since coming to America seven years ago I have never felt that it was my particular job to be "pro-British," because I have usually found Americans pro-British enough without any urging. Indeed, they have sometimes gone so far in this direction that I have felt like saying, "Hey, wait a minute—your own country isn't so bad, either."

But today — and let's be frank about it — the British aren't at the zenith of their popularity. There are reasons for this. Making mistakes, even honest ones, never made anyone popular. And the British Empire has proved (only too tragically) that it was never constructed for the purposes of war. But let the historians deal with all that; if the verdict is severe, believe me, London can not only take it, but London will probably make it. For if there is one point in which the British and Americans are absolutely alike, it is in being their own hardest critics.

In the meantime what should an English writer say to Americans about England in the summer of 1942? Not much, I assure you. This is no time for eloquence, or for sentiment, either. Our two countries are in this mess together and we shall clear it up together, whether we get on each other's nerves or not. But we might as well not get on each other's nerves. And it would be easier to avoid this if we both realized a few simple things.

To begin with, we don't often meet each other. This may seem at first thought astonishing, but it is really a mathematical fact. The boatloads of Americans who used to visit England before the war generally confined themselves to London and a few tourist spots. They went to Stratford-on-Avon and Stoke Poges and Windsor Castle and saw the Trooping of the Colors. They had a wonderful time and brought back to America an idealized picture of ancient towns, historic cathedrals, aristocratic pomp.

On the other hand, the very much smaller number of English who ever visited America usually stopped at New York, or (greatly daring) went on to Hollywood. They too had a wonderful time and brought back to England thrilling memories of the Empire State Building, Radio City, the best drinks in the best hotels in the world, and the Hollywood studios.

THE plain truth, I am afraid, is less sensational about both countries; which is why I ask you to let me be unsensational and even unromantic about England for a moment. . .

The United Kingdom contains some forty millions of people, ninety-nine per cent of whom work for a living and always have. The majority of the English live in quite unhistoric places that the majority of English and Americans alike have never heard of. The average Englishman has only his two-weeks annual holiday for visiting cathedrals, and the chances are he prefers the seaside, where few cathedrals happen to be. The average Englishman, incidentally, earns (in purchasing power) about the same as the average American, or a little less.

The average Englishman has a home that he is very fond of

for reasons that have nothing to do with picturesqueness. It may possibly have a bathroom, but it almost certainly hasn't got a refrigerator. His wife does the housework, doesn't even hope to have servants.

The average Englishman doesn't know and has never met a lord, and thinks the whole title business rather snobbish; but he has a loyal affection for the royal family as a symbol of something or other he wouldn't be able to explain. For a somewhat similar reason he rather likes cricket, though he thinks it's an awfully slow game.

THE average Englishman wouldn't call himself religious, and doesn't attend church very regularly, but he's against anybody who's against religion; and he has a very odd way of looking at life which, if you told him it was a spiritual attitude, would make him exceedingly embarrassed.

The average Englishman sends his children to a government elementary school because he can't afford anything else, but he'd like to see the "Mr. Chips" kind of school democratized; and, what's more, he's going to watch that these schools are democratized when the war's over.

The average Englishman doesn't speak like Herbert Marshall. Perhaps he wishes he did, but he also laughs at what he calls the Oxford accent, which seems stranger to him (by now) than the standard American he hears from most of his film heroes.

The average Englishman puts his cross on a voting paper if you can drag him to the polls, but he's pretty cynical about politics and has more faith in a good man than in a good politician; and if democracy were just electioneering he wouldn't put up much of a fight for it. But he knows by now (though he was slow to guess it) that democracy's more than electioneering, and more than politics, and more even than empires. In fact, he's beginning to feel in his bones that whether this or that place on the map "belongs" to England isn't so important as whether his sort of freedom is going to belong to his sort of world in the years to come.

The average Englishman loathes war and didn't dislike the Germans ten years ago. Till the very last moment he refused to believe that war was coming — partly from wishful thinking, but chiefly because he didn't have any conception of the sort of world-domination the totalitarian countries were aiming at. And the average Englishman, today, wants nothing more than to finish the whole war business in a way that won't lay another curse on the world's children.

Of course you can't go to England now to discover this kind of fellow, but then you needn't go as far as England anyway. You'll find a good many millions between the Atlantic and the Pacific that are ninety per cent like him.

And the other ten per cent?

Forget it. In a world like this, you've got to forget it, anyway. And so has he.

SIDELINES

HERO. Twenty-five years ago, a young Tennesseean was collecting $1.65 a day for swinging a pick on a new highway in his state. Then the road worker was drafted by the Army of '17.

The road is finished now — and it is named after the $1.65-a-day pick-swinger: the Alvin C. York Highway. But the man whom Pershing called "the greatest individual hero of the World War" has other monuments of which he's much prouder. One is the Agricultural Institute named after him. Troubled by his own lack of education, he went to the Tennessee legislature. He was listened to and, in 1928, the Institute — built on the York Highway — opened its doors. Then came the realization of York's greatest ambition: his Bible school.

For years he had turned down offers to capitalize on his fame. He always had one answer: "Uncle Sam's uniform — it's not for sale." But, two years ago, Warner Bros.

finally persuaded him to let them film "Sergeant York." He struck a hard bargain, signed an unusually lucrative contract. It wasn't for himself, though. "Sergeant York" is building a big, modern Bible school on the top of a Tennessee hill. Whatever else is left over from his share in the movie is going into War Bonds.

SLACK-HAPPY. Here's a wartime fashion note from Contributor Francis Hatch: Up on the hill and down by the tracks. Ladies from breakfast to bedtime wear slacks.

Lack-a-day, slack-a-day, skirts are set back a day,

Fashion gives women the right to relax!

NAVY MAIL. If you've been wondering whether that sailor you know has been getting his mail while on active duty, you can stop worrying:

Your sailor can't tell you where he's going but he can tell you to address him to his ship, care of the Postmaster at either New York or San Francisco. They know where every Navy ship is going and at what port mail will reach it. So they segregate the mail, ship it out on merchant vessels (sometimes Navy boats carry mail) to various ports. Your sailor's ship, arriving at its destination, will have its mail delivered in sacks.

Mail from home reaches U.S. sailors in every part of the world. It may take time — but it gets there. M.

T WAS the day Nick brought them home from the hospital that this happened. After a touch-and-go time of it they'd saved both his wife and the kid, and Nick was feeling good about that.

"Hullo, Nick," said the boss. "Glad to see you again."

Nick punched the clock. It felt good punching the clock again. "Thanks for sending the flowers, boss," he said. "They were swell all right."

"That's nothing, Nick."

It warmed Nick to think of his wife and kid. He was glad he'd given them everything. The best doctors. A private room. All that. And they'd pulled it off. It was going to set him back a lot of money, but what is money when your wife's life is at stake - and the first kid? He'd work and slave to catch up, to pay it all.

It was good to get back to the warehouse, too. He was still dazed a bit with his two weeks in the city, the loneliness of lodgings, the long waits at the hospital. Queer way to take your two weeks holiday, but he couldn't ask off any other way. And he had to be near his wife.

Small-town life had looked pretty good to him again: the sun shining on his own small house on Maple Street, the busy traffic on Main, with people stopping him to say, "Glad to hear things went all right, Nick. Congratulations." And, three blocks along and two down, the warehouse where he had a pretty responsible job. One of those jobs a man works into; finds his niche, begins to be appreciated. Joe, of course, had carried on in his absence. Nick wasn't keen on Joe's type, but the boss got on with him all right.

"Your newspaper came, Nick," said the mail clerk. "Why don't you read plain English?"

NICK grinned. They liked to kid him about his Greek-language newspaper. He had been naturalized a long time now. He was part of the pattern of the sprawling New World. He was proud of his citizenship. But once he had been a boy on an olive-clad hillside above blue waters, his home one of a straggle of white cottages. You can't quite forget. . .

He took the paper with him to his own little office, one floor up. The place was shut and plenty hot, but it felt good to get back. Two bluebottles buzzed in the windows, avoiding spider webs that had formed since Nick was away.

First he thought he'd keep the paper to read later; then he decided to take a quick glance at it now. Right away he was thousands of miles from this office. He was seeing olive trees on a mountain slope above the blue of the Aegean. The village of his boyhood was in the news. So brief a mention, but it was there. He knew what was happening, there as elsewhere. He was proud, with an aching, terrible pride.

Nick put down the paper. He must make his rounds; see that everything was all right since he left. He didn't trust Joe over-

"Hi, Nick!" everybody said. "Congratulations.'

Up in the dead storage on the fourth floor - a tomblike place where nobody went much — he suddenly wondered: "What's different here? What's Joe been up to?" Not thinking then of the boss.

The boss was in Nick's office waiting for him when he came down. Somebody must have tipped him off that Nick had been up on the fourth.

Nick looked at the boss and the boss looked at Nick. They both knew.

"You're too damned thorough, Nick," the boss said. "So you saw the stuff up there?" "Sure, I saw."

There Is Also Honor-

A "little man" makes a big decision

by Leslie Gordon Barnard

"Listen, Nick, I'm just obliging a few friends, that's all."

Nick nodded. He felt sick.

"What's a few tires, Nick? Or a few hundredweight of sugar?"

Nick said nothing.

The boss shifted his feet. It was hot in here, but Nick felt a coldness inside him. The pit of his stomach seemed to have caved in. The two bluebottles droned in the sunny windows.

The boss said, "The guys I'm doing this for are big guys, Nick. They're good friends to have in a pinch. Got influence, see? They've done me favors. I can't afford not to do it, Nick. After all, a fellow has to eat, Nick. Has to know what side his bread's buttered on." In the silence, the boss looked up. His voice had a rasp to it. "Well, he has, hasn't he?"

Nick had nothing to say. His mouth and his tongue felt thick.

"I suppose," the boss said, "you're figuring to tip the authorities off."

Nick shook his head. He didn't say that he wasn't a one-man Gestapo. He didn't say he owed the boss too much. This job - so much better paid than any he could get elsewhere in town. And those flowers for the wife. You can't forget.

They both waited. After a time Nick looked at the clock above his desk, but only a minute had passed. The boss sat on a corner of the desk and smoked, which was against the insurance rules posted up on the wall, and you could hear the two flies buzzing round.

Nobody came in. It was just the two of them. The boss and Nick. Joe wasn't in yet. Nick figured Joe must have been working a bit nights helping the boss get the stuff in while it was dark. Joe didn't matter. But the boss did.

"Listen, Nick, I can make things easy for you. I guess you're pretty much in a jam, eh? Sickness costs money. Bread'll have to be buttered pretty thin for a while. I can help out there. Be glad to."

Nick wished he could say something, but nothing came. He thought of all the people he knew here in town - who respected him, whom he respected in turn. The women working at the Red Cross place he passed every day at the corner of Main and Maple. The people training in spare time for civil defense. Kids out with their little carts on salvage rounds. Homes from which so many boys had already gone to fight.

THIS was his country. It was at war. It was going to help mightily to win the war. To help free the oppressed peoples of the earth. People who now were dying - like flies execution, starvation. Beaten down, but not subdued. His people . . . back on hillsides he knew above the Aegean.

Now it was the boss who looked up at the clock, and then at Nick. In the silence the two bluebottles zoomed like planes angry

Nick went into the little washroom, ran the basin full of hot water, and washed the warehouse grime off his hands and face. He filled it again with cold, and plunged his face and hands into it, sharply remembering how as a boy he had plunged into those far blue waters where cottages were white on the hillside. He dried himself on the paper towels, then came out and slowly took off his overalls and drew on his street jacket.

"I'm sorry, boss," he said.

"You're a damn fool, Nick," said the boss.

NICK picked up the Greek-language newspaper, his hands tightening on it until the knuckles showed white. He walked to the door of the little office, for the last time. He had been very happy here. There'd never be another job where he'd be as happy as this.

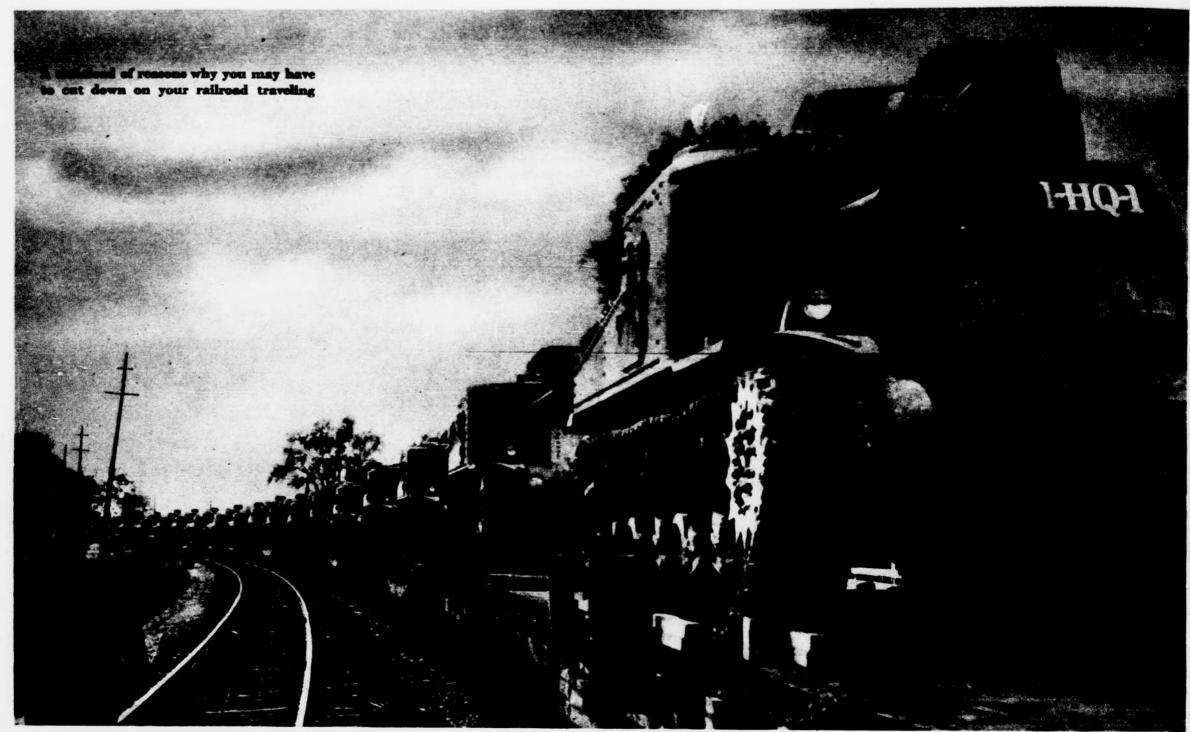

At the door he turned. It seemed to him there was something still to be said, something he wanted very badly to say. He felt the newspaper in his fingers, and the words came to him.

"Answering a question you asked, boss," he said. "No, you don't have to eat."

He went down the stairs, punched the clock for the last time, and went into the

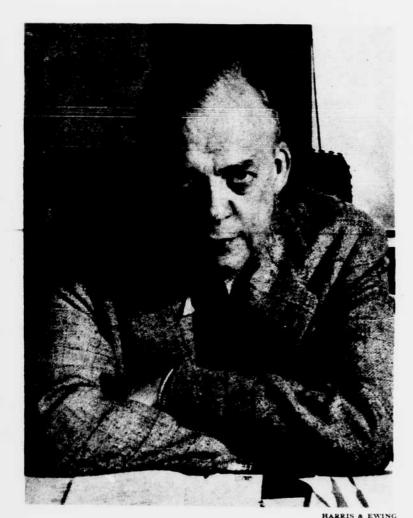

It was hot outside, but there was a breeze on Nick's cheeks - a breeze blowing fresh through olive trees above the blue Aegean; whispering through remembered branches to sing a requiem above white houses in which women and children had died rather than betray a trust; and above roads on which fullrationed service with Nazi overlords was offered in vain to gaunt skeletons of men who knew that bread is not everything; that there is also honor — even unto death.

HE'LL TELL YOU WHEN TO RIDE!

Joe Eastman: The man with 29,000,000 headaches

Your family car has its part in America's vast wartime transportation set-up. That's why Joseph B. Eastman, boss of everything on wheels, is your back-seat driver

by J. P. McEvoy

ROM now on you will hear a lot about the man who is going to do all your back-seat driving for the duration: Joseph Bartlett Eastman, Director of the Office of Defense Transportation. Good Old Joe. How you are going to love him!

But you really would like him if you met him. He is quiet, self-effacing, with gray hair and a humorous twinkle in his eye. He has just been put in charge of all the rubber-borne transportation in America which means all of those 90,000 school busses, 40,000 city and suburban busses, 20,000 interurban busses, countless taxicabs — and your jaloppy, of which there are some 29,000,000.

Before this little chore was handed him he had been given complete control over all the railroads and coastwise steamers and pipe lines and air lines. But the President didn't think that was enough. On May 2 he gave Eastman a supplemental Executive Order which not only gave him authority over all passenger cars, busses, taxicabs and trucks, but directed him to manage all transportation facilities with a very special eye to saving rubber.

There are no loopholes: your auto has been enlisted for the duration. For a while you are going to be cajoled into conserving those precious tires. You'll be gas-rationed not so much to save gas as to save rubber. You'll be told of the "Michigan Plan" and begged to "stagger" and "swap-ride." You'll be warned. And if you continue on your happy-jaloppy way you will awaken one day to a most unpleasant surprise.

I asked Eastman what was going to happen to the Little Fellow. "He won't like it," says Eastman, "but he'll still be able to get around if he co-operates. Let me give you an example of what I mean: Here is a report from the West Coast. A survey of 147,000 airplane factory workers. Some 83 per cent of these workers go to work in their own cars — and the average car has only ten months left in its tires. If the workers in this one locality alone co-operated in taking each other to work in the morning and home at night, their cars would last five times as long."

This is the "Michigan Plan" — a kind of Good Neighbor Policy worked out in successful detail in Pontiac, Michigan. All the car riders in a neighborhood pool their resources. Each car takes five men — instead of one — to work in the morning, and each week the owners alternate so there is only one car on the road and four tires being used instead of five cars and 20 tires. The same goes for the marketing housewives. The Michigan Plan also includes an elaborate system of staggering hours. Work hours, shopping hours, theater hours, school hours are staggered. Some idea of what can be done by changing the school hours alone: 80 school busses were released in Washington for taking government employees to work. And, remember, there are 90,000 school busses.

You will hear a lot of conflicting stories about the rubber situation. But there is no disagreement about the most disagreeable phases of it: our supply of natural rubber has been cut off at the source, there will be none for civilian tires for the duration, there will be no synthetic rubber for civilian tires for a long time and most of the civilian tires will be worn out in a year unless something drastic is done about it. Joe Eastman has been appointed to do that something drastic.

The first point on his program is the re-education of the American public. Most of us believe that all we have to do is put up our cars and take a bus or a train. This is a fallacy. Five times as many passengers were hauled in private cars last year as by all the trains and busses. If the car-riding public suddenly descended on the trains and busses they would be swamped. In a typical Midwest city, 26,000 are employed in war industries. Only 4,000 use some 30 busses. The remaining 22,000 ride back and forth in their 15,000 private automobiles. If all these workers were thrown on the bus system it would take 10 times as many busses, because of the widespread territory in which they would have to operate. Imagine this same thing happening on a national scale — we track.

Transportation is absolutely vital to the war effort. Not only the transportation of war materials but transportation of war workers, of whom three out of every four depend on their own automobiles. Transportation is just as vital to the necessary civilian supplies and activities — and the greatest pool of transportation facilities is represented by the 29,- should have to stop making tanks and planes

000,000 private cars. These are absolutely essential, but they must be used in a co-ordinated way. As Eastman puts it, "A creeping paralysis has already attacked our rubber-borne transportation." His job is to prevent this from developing into fatal paralysis.

Eastman himself in all of his 60 years has never owned a car. And, although he's the outstanding world authority on railroads, he always rides in planes. The man who will work gigantic changes in American family life for the duration of the war has no family. He is a bachelor and lives with his sister in a semi-detached house in Arlington a few miles from his office. Eastman walks to work every morning, but taxis home at night. Every evening at five he shuts off the phone, locks the door and takes a 30-minute nap. Then he goes to a gym, plays some handball, has a shower and a rub-down, goes to dinner, and returns to work. For diversion he reads himself to sleep with short "whodunits." As you can see, the man who will most profoundly affect the social life of America has no social life.

"Affect" is putting it mildly. When the family car goes out of circulation sociologists predict we shall have a major social revolution that will make the effects of the depression "seem trivial in comparison." They point out that the automobile means more to many Americans than clothes, food and shelter.

"Many families will become more closely welded together," says Dr. Ivan E. McDougle, Goucher College sociology professor. "Many parents will get to know their children for the first time. Many husbands and wives will find a new meaning and beauty in their joint lives, but hundreds of other marriages will go on the rocks."

Romance Affected, Too

D<sub>R.</sub> McDougle foresees profound changes in courtship. The ride to the movies and the petting cruise will be out for the duration, and the new lovers' lane will be the old front parlor.

Of course the horse and buggy may save the situation. It was good enough for Dad and Dad was good enough for Mother — and who are we to complain? You will hear no complaints from Joe Eastman, who once edited his school paper and traded advertising in it with the local livery stable for rides. That was back in Pottsville, Pa., where his family moved shortly after he was born in 1882. His father, Reverend John Huse Eastman, a Presbyterian minister, sent him to Amherst College, where he played good tennis and took a B.A. degree in 1904.

He started to study for a law degree. But, about this time the late Louis Brandeis was hammering the public utilities; he happened to know of the bright young Pottsville lad and invited him to leave law school and help him. So Eastman, after only one year of law, became secretary of the Public Franchise League in Boston in 1906 and held the job until 1913. Then he was asked to represent the Car Men's Union in a wage controversy. After that job he went on to earn a state-wide reputation, representing various employees' organizations in arbitrational battles, until he was appointed to the Massachusetts Public Service Commission, reappointed again two years later. Then in December, 1918, President Wilson appointed him to the Interstate Commerce Commission, where he remained through the administrations of Wilson, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, to be reappointed once more by Roosevelt in 1936.

His Biggest Job

"OLD FIGURITIS" they called him on Capitol Hill in those days, a wryly affectionate tribute to his genius for marshaling statistics. President Roosevelt recognized that superlative skill when he appointed Eastman to the Office of Federal Co-ordinator of Transportation in 1933.

That job lasted for three years. He drew up an ambitious program for reforming railroad transportation, but both labor and management ganged up to scuttle it. Roosevelt rewarded Eastman's efforts with the Chairmanship of the Interstate Commerce Commission for a three-year term. On January 2, 1942, Eastman hit the top when Roosevelt appointed him to the biggest job of his career and the biggest of its kind in history — Director of the Office of Defense Transportation.

Up to now transportation was something this country had nothing else but. The mightiest railroad system, the greatest network of bus lines, more private cars than all the rest of the world combined — it was a question of wasteful competition and bargains for everyone at attractive rates. Huge box cars were hauled at express speeds across the country to deliver a few tons of household goods. If Aunt Nellie arrived suddenly with the children, a high-powered motor truck would dash 15 miles to deliver a bottle of cream.

BUY COAL NOW!

The railroads had done and were doing a grand job, but a master co-ordinator was needed to handle a grim situation that was rapidly getting out of control. Only Eastman had the experience — 24 years in Washington and a lifetime in transportation study — to co-ordinate a far-flung personnel trained for generations in the bitterest competition.

Cross-Country Strap-Hanging

■T's going to take a lot of promotion, encouragement, and stimulation to get Joe Doakes and his wife used to the new order of swap-riding, bus-stalking and aisle-standing. De luxe train rides are on their way out. Any kind of trains will be scarce. Transportation will be limited. It hasn't been decided yet whether they'll use a priority system or a method of rationing to determine if your travel is essential or not. "Maybe," says Eastman, "it will work out as it does in England, where travel is so uncomfortable people will undertake it only if forced by necessity. In other words, we shall have to take the pleasure out of pleasure travel."

The situation is critical but Yankee ingenuity is waking up. Those car-haul trailers that used to carry shiny new autos on their backs like possums carry their young are being converted into passenger-carrying trucks for mass transportation. A South Bend company built a  $1\frac{1}{2}$ -ton chassis which an Elkhart company fitted with a body in one week. It cost less than \$4,000 and they carted 125 people in it to Washington. The Office's Local Transportation Director Guy Richardson 'let the idea cook," with the result that dozens of companies have come to bat with designs for economical passenger-trailer coaches, requiring no critical materials.

"So I'm in the trailer business, too," sighed Joe Eastman, the man with 29,000,000 headaches. "And the scooter business," added Richardson. "We just sent 200 scooters out to the Lockheed plane factory on the Coast so the boys can scoot to work and back, and keep 'em flying."

Maybe Joe Eastman is secretly planning a new slogan for all of us on the home front: "Keep 'Em Scooting."

Painting The Sea War

As the official Navy artist, G. B. Coale has met adventure

BATTLESHIP tips to a 30-degree angle in the storm-beaten ocean. On deck, one man braces himself against the wailing wind and sketches something in a notebook. From time to time, he cocks his head in appraisal as he looks ahead at the destroyers and merchant ships in the convoy.

That man is Lieutenant Commander Griffith Baily Coale, one of America's best-known muralists, and he paints the historic naval events of World War II. His pictures will show Americans how our 1942 battle fleet looks in the gaunt dawn of a gale-slashed Atlantic. His portraits will capture the weary but defiant looks of seamen whose boats have been torpedoed.

In the 12 months that he has been assigned to his post in the Navy, Commander Coale has already witnessed the ordinary man's share of historic events. Late last fall, he painted the U.S.S. Reuben James as it sank in flames. He painted the first scenes of the Navy in Iceland. He put on canvas the meeting of President Roosevelt and Winston Churchill in mid-ocean. And this is just a sampling.

Never Misses

THE 50-year-old muralist can capture many scenes photographers would miss. Distances often are too great for an object to show up in a photograph. Or light may be inadequate.

Energetic and tough-minded, Commander Coale is no stranger to the sea. He has been a yachtsman and a student of naval matters all his adult life. "I was brought up in Chesapeake Bay," he says, "and the first picture I ever painted was a water color of a sailboat, done at the age of six."

Commander Coale finds his job as Navy painter far from easy. He works on assignments which may take him anywhere from Iceland to Australia or Pearl Harbor. And when it's blowing hard and the battleship rolls, Commander Coale must exercise extraordinary ingenuity to fight with the elements and keep right on working with paint brush and palette at the same time.

"Our destroyer was in a turmoil the night the Reuben James sank," he said. "And I was terribly busy trying to help with survivors. But I managed to do some sketches from the destroyer's deck."

Not an ideal moment for art, certainly. However, Commander Coale didn't mind it so much. He says he's the sort that "actually enjoys working under pressure."

Well, Commander, that's the sort the Navy needs - especially in your job.

LICK JAPAN? WE DID!

That was in 1863: A stab-in-the-back war lasting 70 minutes

have never lost a war. This false claim is upholding millions of superstitious Nips in a blind faith that they are invincible. The truth of it is that the first time Japan started a war with America, we trounced her in one hour and 10 minutes!

That first "war," too, began with a treacherous attack by the Japanese on our sailors. A decade earlier, Commodore Perry had commenced negotiations resulting in a friendly open-door treaty with Tokyo. Now suddenly the Emperor issued a decree that foreigners should be expelled, and in the straits of Shimonoseki the hot-headed Choshu clansmen turned blazing guns upon the peaceful steamship Pembroke, of the U.S. merchant marine.

Nimble seamanship saved her, but Jap boasts that she had been sunk reached the ears of young David McDougal, commanding the U.S.S. Wyoming, searching Orient waters for the Confederate raider Alabama.

No radio or cable, on that July 17th in 1863, offered the Wyoming's commander orders. It was a moment for American initiative. McDougal gave a confident signal from the bridge: "Full steam ahead!"

A Well-Armed Foe

Funnels pouring smoke, pivot guns swinging into action, Old Glory streaming from the mast, the Wyoming went streaking into the Straits of Shimonoseki. Those waters giving on Japan's inland sea were bristling with mines, guarded by warships, covered by concealed shore batteries. For Nippon's medieval knights, having seized control of their Mikado, had secretly been arming - with western weapons, got chiefly from an easy-going America. We had even sold Japan the three warships McDougal faced; racing toward them, he could read the incongruous names they still bore - the Daniel Webster, the Lancefield, the Lanrick.

His eight guns talking Yankee sass against four times as many, McDougal ran into the straits without even a chart of the channel. Dashing between the Daniel Webster and the Lanrick, he raked them both with broadsides. The men of Nippon fought efficiently—they had learned our western warfare secretly, swiftly, and well. The little brown gunners on the Lanrick served so fast they gave the Wyoming three broadsides as she passed. Shell-torn and battered, McDougal's ship emerged from the gantlet still afloat and roaring mad. Two of the enemy vessels lay crippled, flaming, gunners dead at their stations, decks in blood.

Near Disaster

But suddenly an invisible hand seemed to reach from the sea to catch the Wyoming. She had run on a mud bar! McDougal, rather than let his men fall prisoner to an enemy who was expert in torture, swore to blow up his ship with every man jack aboard. Now the match threatened the magazine, for the formidable Daniel Webster was bearing straight down to ram her one-time sister ship. But the loyal engines of the Wyoming, straining and churning, hove her off the bar, and two of her shots tore barn-door holes in the Daniel Webster at waterline, exploded boilers and powder, and passed clean out the other side. That poor old turncoat ship shot into the air with a roar of flame and a crash of bursting boiler plate.

So much for the enemy's fleet; McDougal faced the land batteries. American marksmen picked off the crew of each gun as soon as its position was revealed. Gun after gun was blown up, as our shells came in as regularly as the strokes of a blacksmith. In 70 minutes, at a loss of five killed and seven wounded, America had humbled the aggressors.

When Washington heard of it, Secretary Welles of the Navy and Seward of the State Department nodded grimly, and said the Wyoming had done us proud. Old Abe chuckled, and said so too. It took the Japanese almost eight years to forget McDougal's lesson. Their boast today is hollow — and we'd like to remind them, too, that the U.S.A., which has fought in more wars than Nippon, has in real truth never lost a war. And that's a record we intend to keep standing!

Where's the best place to live to get Metropolitan service?

You might think that to be ideally located from the standpoint of receiving service on your life insurance, you should live in the shadow of one of Metropolitan's principal offices. These are ... the Home Office in New York City, the Pacific Coast Head Office in San Francisco, and the Canadian Head Office in Ottawa.

But Metropolitan has about 29,400,-000 policyholders, and it is obviously impossible for all of them to live within sight of one of these three offices. So we plan to carry service to Metropolitan policyholders where they do live.

This is done through the life insurance agent, a man who is acquainted with you, understands your problems, knows your circumstances, and is therefore able to help render you the kind of service you should have.

Metropolitan agents receive continuous training in how to help you select the kind of life insurance that best fits your needs. Moreover, through the agent you have access to the counsel and advice of Home Office experts. In fact, Metropolitan maintains, at the Home Office, a number of departments especially equipped to assist the agent in keeping your life insurance program fitted to your needs.

Your Metropolitan agent is always ready to help you solve your life insurance problems, and to give you the benefit of his training and experience.

He is a career man whose calling is highly specialized. He works constantly to increase his knowledge and thus improve his ability to provide you with the kind and amount of life insurance you should have, at the lowest cost consistent with the benefits granted. His help and advice are available at all times, without obligation.

P.S. You can buy War Savings Stamps from him too, or from any Metropolitan office.

This is Number 50 in a series of advertisements designed to give the public a clearer understanding of how a life insurance company operates. Copies of preceding advertisements in this series will be mailed upon request.

1 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK, N. Y.

UE always said she knew human nature. She had said it frequently to her father these last few weeks, putting all the oomph in it she knew how.

She wished to implant in him a great confidence in her grandmotherly power to see through people, so that he would believe her when she pointed out precisely why the terrible Mrs. Tressel shouldn't be her stepmother. She couldn't figure out how her father felt about it, but Mrs. Tressel's designs were all too clear to the whole town. People stopped Sue on the street to commiserate. Sue felt her father would be putty in the grasping woman's bony hands.

When Sue referred to her "insight into character, especially women's," Mr. Summers had no notion what she was talking about.

"You're too young to know anything," he told her happily. "How's about some new clips or some such for that new dress?" he added, to take her mind off whatever it was on.

Sue thought, "Eighteen's not too young to protect you, you'll see." She was beginning to feel quite old and careworn.

It was the very next morning that she ran into the terrible Mrs. Tressel at Max's Market.

"Your dear father looked so weary when I saw him Tuesday night," Mrs. Tressel told Sue sweetly, keeping, nevertheless, a sharp eye on Max as he cut up her broiler.

Sue's father hadn't even intimated to her that he'd seen Mrs. Tressel Tuesday. What a bad sign that was!

"I'm going to bring him over one of my coconut cakes this evening," the horrible woman went on. "Good, home-made cake might tempt him."

Tempt him indeed! "We have home-made cakes," Sue offered weakly. She knew that, though Black Princess' intentions were better than her performance, she too would resent this implied criticism of her culinary powers. Sue swallowed. "Daddy says I keep house for him very well," she reported.

MRS. TRESSEL smiled pityingly. The pity was obviously for Mr. Summers. She turned from Sue practically to bite Max. "And be sure to send the scraps for my cat," she commanded and sailed out.

"That one!" Max glowered. "Eats the cat meat herself, I bet. Listen," he added, "she's going to get your dad if you don't watch out."

"I'm tellin' you. When one like her don't think of expense and's willin' to stir up a cake, he's good as gone."

"Daddy wouldn't-he simply couldn't-" Max picked up his cleaver. "What chance has a man got against a willin' widow woman?"

Max knew human nature too, Sue thought as she left. All the way to the Red Cross Workshop she kept remembering how pleasant she had made things for her father all her life; and he was getting ready to put a stepmother over her. If only he would speak of Mrs. Tressel, it would give her a chance to come out and put things plainly.

She took her place at the Red Cross table, heaped with unfinished garments, and in a world so sorrowing as to need these things, fright and loneliness swept over her. She wanted to put her silken head down on a pneumonia jacket and howl. Nothing anywhere was safe and secure. Though she did not know it, she touched, in that moment, her first adult emotion; she experienced the fear of onrushing change which held every woman working at the table with her. It was only because she was young that she believed she could stem the tide that threatened her own little personal world.

The scrambled words lay like dynamite in Sue's hand. "I could bring you more notes," she said

"I'll have to figure something," she told herself fiercely. "Something to protect poor Father, because he's so naive. He just doesn't understand a human nature as low as Mrs. Tressel's like I do."

She was still so unhappy when her stint was done that she went to Elaine's Beauty Spot for comfort and a shampoo. Dad had suggested that a few less hair-dos these days might be as well, and as she went into the shop it came over her that the terrible Mrs. Tressel was already influencing her impressionable father to her thrifty ways. This was the most depressing thought to date.

"BE RIGHT with you," Elaine sang out. Presently, in the close, white booth smelling of soap and lotion, Sue sat before the mirror while Elaine's fingers flew about her soft hair.

It was funny, but Sue never felt so confidential with anyone as she did tucked away in this little booth with Elaine, who was filled with interested "You-don't-says" and "Mymys."

Elaine was intimately revealing too. "Don't let on this come from me but - " And she'd told Sue all about wanting to get out of this dump and into a swell New York shop, where her genius would be appreciated.

Sue was sure Elaine didn't talk to anyone

So before the second curl was pinned, she had told Elaine all about Mrs. Tressel and her plot against poor, innocent Dad.

Elaine was beautifully indignant. Her round blue eyes opened wide under her crown of untidy golden hair, gold as the brass rings on her curtains except at the part because, as Elaine grumbled, she hadn't time in this dump to give herself a rinse.

"It isn't as if it could be real love." Sue mourned, "because of course they're both in their forties."

Elaine cast a hasty look at her neck in the mirror over Sue's impudently young head. She raised her chin, "Sure, a dame like her, what she's after is only a fellow well heeled. Shame, dearie. But that Tressel man-eater'll get your father, on account he hasn't a wife to snatch her baldheaded."

"He's got me to," Sue said sturdily.

"Tisn't the same, dearie. Any man without a legitimate wife is meat for a dame like that. A fellow who's not tied" - Elaine slid in a hairpin with a fine sense of epigram -"can be undone."

Elation struck Sue like a rocket. Ideas always affected her that way. "Elaine, I know what to do!"

"Turn your head, dearie. Yeah? What?" "Elaine, would you do something for me?"

"Why sure."

Words tumbled from Sue:

"If that terrible woman thought my father was tied, don't you see? Elaine, will you?" "Will I what, dearie?"

"Make believe you're engaged to my father! You could, next time she comes in here!" "Oh, say now, look - "

"It'd be easy. You could say it was a secret, but you wanted her to be the first to know. And if she thought he had a fiancée. she'd have to stop bringing around cakes to get at him through his stomach."

Elaine laughed. She had quite a laugh.

"It isn't," Sue pointed out with what seemed to her devastating logic, "as if you were young enough to be in love with anyone else."

Mr. Summers' daughter had never come so near to being smacked in her life. She didn't notice, because she had another inspiration that sent her diving into her purse and from it she brought up the note her father had left her that morning. He was always doing that, not being a man to interfere with his child's beauty sleep and also liking as much syrup on his waffles as he - but not Sue - considered fit.

"Phone me at the office," Sue read the little note aloud, "if you've decided on gold or silver clips. Want to get them today." The scrawled words lay like dynamite in Sue's hand. "I could bring you more notes," she explained. "You could sort of leave them carelessly on the shelf here, and when she comes in for waves, she's so nosy she'd read them sure. She knows Daddy's writing, because they did those road reports together. Elaine, oh Elaine, please, you will? Won't you? Won't

"Well," Elaine said slowly, "well, maybe. Yeah."

ALL through dinner that night Sue kept one anxious eye on her father and the other on her wrist watch. Her ambition was to get him out of the house before the coconut cake, escorted by its creator, came in. Finally he noticed her jitters. "What young whippersnapper is coming tonight?" he inquired plaintively. "And do I have to appear and be pleasant, or can I stay in my den and be entirely unpaternal?"

"Take me to the movies, Dad? And aren't you ready for your dessert?" Sue rang for Princess forthwith. How could she bring up Mrs. Tressel's name? She touched the new clips which, in spite of everything, she had remembered to phone about, and asked herself if they had been a sort of bribe. "The world's just full of self-seeking women!" she burst out.

Mr. Summers put down his spoon. "What brought that on?'

"Well, it is. Oh, everything's such a hessof-a-mess! You just haven't any notion what some women will do to get a man."

"That's no way for a little girl to talk."

TW-7-12-42

"I'm not a little girl! And I learn stuff. Even if no one tells me." She got up. "You live and learn and make the best of what you find out. Let's go. We can make the early show."

Mr. Summers followed her out to the car, disturbed and wondering. What unholy truth had she stumbled on? All he wanted was to keep this girl-child of his away from the seamy side of things. In the darkness of the theater he asked himself if fathers were enough for growing girls, and whether Mrs. Tressel had been right about their needing an older woman, a mother, to help them through things. He shuddered away from the idea; surely he could keep Sue safely fenced away from the bad realities for a few years yet. He didn't know what to do exactly, aside from leaving another little cheery note for her in the morning.

BUT in the following days Sue went on being hard and withdrawn, and throwing out dark hints as to her findings in the realm of human nature. "No one can fool me ever again," she announced to the troubled Mr. Summers out of what seemed nothing. They looked at each other unhappily. Each waited for the other to tell the secret that made this bar between them. Then Mr. Summers put out an uncertain hand. "Look, baby, you don't have to stew about anything for years and years. That's what your old dad's around for."

In a moment she would have told him why she stewed, but he stopped her. "I don't know. Mrs. Tressel said I probably didn't understand little girls."

Sue went cold. This was the first time he had ever brought up the terrible woman's name, and he not only brought it up but quoted her! Everything she had feared now seemed certain. A sob struggled in her throat as she turned away. Oh, if her plan with Elaine didn't work, what should she do?

Mr. Summers was mildly surprised next morning when Mrs. Tressel cut him dead at the station. But an hour after he reached his office, he had a greater surprise. The brass-haired lady called Elaine arrived to give him news of his engagement, substantiating his shock with his own scrawled notes. Elaine left with a check. He was so mad he was boiling, actually boiling. It had been Sue's carelessness that had made this possible.

He tried to steady himself.

She was waiting for him in the hall when he got home that night. She flung herself at him before he was out of his topcoat, as she had not done for weeks. "Dad, what do you think? Mrs. Tressel's going to live in Florida! She says because there is a low income tax." She clung to him, indignation sweeping over her at Mrs. Tressel, who would give dad up to save money. It went to show how right she'd been to protect her father.

Mr. Summers finally got off his topcoat. "Sue," he began heavily, "you've been seeing the wrong people lately."

"Why, what do you mean?"

"That — that Elaine." He did not know how to go on. The low word for what Elaine had done was not one he could speak to his daughter. He felt dimly he must be somehow to blame. After all, she was just a kid. She shouldn't be blamed for carelessness.

Sue was thankful the hall was dark enough, so that he couldn't see she was getting red. "Why, Elaine's lovely," she said clearly. She said it from a grateful heart. Never would she forget what Elaine had done for her.

"Lovely," Mr. Summers repeated dully.

"She's leaving town too," Sue bubbled. "She told me this afternoon she'd come into some money. Isn't that grand? She's going to buy into a New York shop."

Mr. Summers went slowly upstairs. He told himself that he couldn't have done such a bad job being a father, because he had kept even the perception of ugliness from Sue, kept her so that the ugliness of the Elaines passed her by. She thought Elaine was "lovely," and it seemed to him no price was too big to pay to keep her thinking like that.

"Dad!" she called.

"Yes, dear?"

"I baked a coconut cake for you today!"

He wanted to match the lightheartedness that in some mysterious way had come back. "Did it fall, dear?"

"Yes, dear," Sue acknowledged.

MR. SUMMERS laughed, and then a fist seemed to crash between his eyes. It wasn't being a good father to keep her from growing up! He had made her incapable of judging a wrong 'un like Elaine, and how were the young to face the things that were on the way if they weren't taught how to recognize the bad from the good? And when they had to take things, how were they to be prepared?

After a while he went back downstairs. Elaine would be a pretty tough lesson to begin on. He listened to his girl's gay chatter through dinner, and when an apologetic Princess brought on the fallen cake, he made a great resolution. He pushed away his plate. "This isn't fit to eat, dear," he said, and held his breath.

Sue stared at him incredulously. It was the first time since he had pretended to consume her mud pies that he had balked at any of her messes. "If you want to bake," he made himself go on, "have Princess show you how."

Sue looked at the frosted fiasco on the silver plate. "I guess you're right," she said slowly. "I guess I'd better learn."

A burden slipped from Mr. Summers' shoulders. Both of them somehow felt they'd eaten their cake and had it too.

Stan mixed caution with his chivalry

OME degree of shock follows most injuries," chanted Nancy to herself as Stan's car jogged along. " 'Treatment - first heat, second position, third stimulant.'

It had been sweet of Stan to wait for her tonight. The First Aid class had met at West High, and it was something of a climb back to her home on the bluff overlooking town. Also, it had begun to rain.

Stanley's ancient coupe was affectionately known to all as

"Posy" - short for "composite," because it had parts from so many makes. It somehow reminded one of a stray pup retreating before a hail of stones. It was faithful, though. Tonight it was slugging along sturdily in what had by now become a downpour. The earth was a saturated sponge.

"I love it," Nancy sighed, sniffing the fresh-

"Yoù should." Stan risked a brief glance away from the slickly corrugated road to grin at her. "It turns up every little red curl on your head to match that saucy nose you wear."

Nancy made an impudent face at him. Since he had first come to Randall in September, she had been his girl.

The car was beginning to climb now. Some good-sized rocks, loosened by the rain, had rolled down onto the road. Like a veteran, Posy felt her way around one obstacle after another and chugged stubbornly on and up.

Then it happened. So slowly and quietly that Nancy didn't feel the slightest inclination to cry out; only an interested excitement as a shoulder of the narrow road gave away and, with a crunch of glass, Posy rolled gently over on her side - as if very old and tired — and settled comfortably against a convenient pine.

Nancy's first impulse was to laugh; then she turned and saw Stan. Mud plastered his dark hair down the side of his face, making his amiable features comically fierce. He was gingerly collecting

"Stan," cried Nancy, "are you hurt?"

The smile he tossed her was forced and pale.

"Don't move, Stan. You are hurt!" Gently she pushed him back onto the soggy earth.

"What in - ?" he began. "Do you think I'm going to settle down in this mud and spend the night?"

Nancy didn't answer. She was too busy reciting to herself, "Look for hemorrhage, stoppage of breath, poisoning, fracture - " Quickly she crossed off the first three. "It must be fracture," she mumbled, and to Stan: "It's positively murderous, you know, to move a victim with possible fracture. Now lie still, like an angel, and we'll check up." As she searched for his pulse she asked, "Are you conscious?"

"Not very" - with hopeless resignation.

"Aha! No stimulant for you, m'love. If you come to, after a bit, you might have a sip of coffee or a dish of tea."

"Or some nice warm gruel?" Brown eyes began to snap. "Now look here, Nancy - "

"Sh — h. I'll just slip this robe under you -- so.

And over you there." On her knees in the mud she worked fast. "Tucking mein for the night?

What in blazes?" Nancy settled back on her heels. "Now tell me where you hurt."

"I don't hurt." He tossed off the cover. "And if you will kindly call off the First Aid practice for this time and give me a hand, we'll put Posy back on her feet." He started to get up, but with a sharp intake of breath eased himself down again.

"See! I knew you were hurt," Nancy cried. "Will you lie still?"

She chatted as she bound it

"No, I won't. Sprained my wrist, that's all." And up he sat. "When in doubt, treat as for fracture," chortled Nancy. "If this isn't luck! Right down my alley, in fact. We learned to apply newspaper splints this very evening." And she unearthed an old newspaper from the back seat.

"Cheer up, Stan. It's a lucky break for you that you haven't sunstroke. We haven't studied that chapter yet, and I wouldn't have the slightest idea what to do."

"Good fortune? Huh! It's my tough luck that I haven't. In this ooze the cure would be instant."

A shade hurt, Nancy bravely ignored the unappreciative attitude of her patient. Slipping slim fingers into his hip pocket, she produced a clean handkerchief to be used as a bandage. Carefully placing the folded paper under the arm that Stan held out, she chatted on as she bound it: "We'll have you done up quickly and it's only a short walk back to Dr. Blake's."

THEY were soon making a precarious way toward the town.

The doctor was in, and with great relief Nancy placed the victim in his hands. "Mm-m-" said he, as he unwound the bandage. "Nice work."

"Doctor - " Stan glanced sheepishly toward the closed door behind which Nancy waited. "Doc, it's the other arm. I think it's broken. Nancy's a good little First Aider. But I figured it might be safer, just this first time, to let her practice on my good arm."

HOLLYWOOD USES ITS HEAD

BOY MEETS GIRL on process stage. In the flash of a camera they're transported to a drive-in stand

MANHATTAN penthouse scenes are easy to "fake." They've saved hundreds of trips across America

War scarcities have hit the movies—but there's an answer!

THEN Uncle Sam recently placed 7,600 items used in making motion pictures on the priority list, he gave Hollywood a mass headache.

All the town's biggest producers, who normally scream murder unless their sets resemble the Parthenon, ordered carpenters to straighten used nails and paint sets with one coat only.

But such makeshift economy could not beat priorities involving 20,860,000 feet of lumber and panels; 35,693 pounds of aluminum, brass and copper; 2,022,500 feet of electric wire, and 12,462 kegs of nails — all needed within the next year to make sets and keep studios running.

A process stage enables producers to take a photograph of a house, a seashore or a crowd at the Yankee Stadium and project this picture upon a semi-transparent screen to create a background for actors. They can even photograph a picture of something and use that.

Formerly, producers shied away from this hocus-pocus. They felt that if the public knew a scene showed merely a picture of a building as background, their prestige would be lowered. But today is no time to be fussy, so they're all dusting off their process-stage equipment.

Suppose a set calls for harem members to lounge in a vast hall with numerous arches and pillars. When the process stage is used, a small painting serves for the actual hall. The painting is photographed, made into a slide, projected in any size desired and the director is ready to pose his beauties.

And the saving is not only in materials

— the studio gains precious time because there is nothing to tear down afterward.

Another factor that is giving the process stage a terrific boost is the Army's restrictions on location trips. Now, if the script calls for a desert scene, a picture of a desert can be made into a slide and presto, the cameras are ready to roll.

FIGHTING OFF FATIGUE

An expert tells how war girls can keep fit and on the job

by Sylvia Blythe

a private war to fight with fatigue, the saboteur which slows down production, puts your nerves on edge and a strain on your good looks, and leaves you with too little energy for your own woman's work.

For the best strategy, follow the plan for war-work mapped out by the USO Division of the Y.W.C.A. Tactical expert is advisory-board chairman, Dr. Josephine Rathbone of Columbia University, who conducts the famous Relaxing Clinic of that school.

Best way to cope with fatigue, she says, is to become an efficiency expert on your own and help yourself to working conditions that will save your muscles and nerves from needless strains and pressures.

POOT-NOTES: If your feet support you on a job, put them in roomy flats, and follow these foot-notes. Stand and walk with an upright carriage—that gives free and easy balance. A lopsided or droopy stance means an unequal weight distribution; taxes one group of nerves and muscles; lets another group go scot-free. Results: bedeviling fatigue.

But even a well-balanced body needs an occasional change. So shift your positions. Swinging a leg is a dependable trick for shaking off tensions.

Do you sit at your work? Sit firmly astern and with a straight lower back. If you don't have a posture chair to help you keep the starch in your spine, tap the home resources and use a pillow or a roll of material to fill in the gap between your back and your chair. Adjust your chair seat so that you'll have firm-footing; or if you can't do that, bring the floor up to your feet with a box.

whether it means hoisting yourself on a cushion, or lowering the castors on your chair to lop off some elevation, should be sufficient to give you free and easy elbow movements. Keep supplies within easy armreach and you'll have more energy left for your woman's work that begins at the end of the day.

Time sensibly used for periodic rest pauses is time well spent for both your employer and yourself. The upright little plodder should sit when she pauses for a rest and, forgetting that she's a lady, should hoist her feet. The sitting patriot should shake a leg in the direction of the water-cooler or the ladies' room. Time-out from work and complete change in muscular positions help to make a new woman out of you, both mentally and physically.

AL FRESCO LUNCHEON. During the noon hour, try to escape from four walls. If possible, have an al fresco lunch, even if it's a picnic lunch in a paper bag. But serve yourself the essential foods. Your job demands them. For the blessed surcease that comes only from stretching yourself out after a meal, lie down on a grassy couch, if you can.

Home work? The quickest way to deal with fatigue aches is a good soaking in a tub. If feet try to roll over three times and play dead, you can restore liveliness by treating them to some brisk hand manipulations.

Balance your work with some form of recreation from which you can get relaxation. A sports' hobby fitted into your daily scheme will not only rout tensions, but is valuable as a builder of strength and endurance for the long-pull.

Diversion? Best way to blackout the jitters is to help yourself to some fun. As an example of what a belly laugh can do to provide psychological release, Dr. Rathbone reminds you of the dramatic squads maintained by the Chinese military on the battleline — put there to amuse the soldiers when they emerge from combat.

Do you know how to use his title - and when not to . . .

by Emily Post

MIGHT be expected, very many of the letters sent me these days ask questions such as these: "When is a junior officer called Ensign or Lieutenant, and when is he called mister?" Or, "When is a Lieutenant Colonel or a Lieutenant Commander called by this double title and when is he called Colonel or Commander?"

Answering the last first: The complete title of Lieutenant Colonel, also Lieutenant Commander, is put on all envelopes addressed to him, and in all letters of the type that include his name and address.

On formal occasions, he is introduced - to an audience, for example - as Lieutenant Colonel Strong. Otherwise, he is Colonel Strong to everyone speaking to or of him. The same applies to others of high rank.

At the lower end of the scale Junior Officers in the Navy are customarily called "mister" by civilians. But all Army Officers are addressed by their titles. (At present this is not unknown in the Navy.)

The prefix 2nd before Lieutenant in the Army, and the suffix Jr. Grade in the Navy, are never used in introductions. They are included on envelopes addressed to them, on wedding invitations and announcements, and on their own visiting cards - but in different ways.

Envelopes are addressed: 2nd Lieut. John Strong U. S. Army Lieut. (jg) David Deepsea United States Navy

John Strong 2nd Lieut., United States Army David Deepsea

Ensign, United States Naval Reserve

On his visiting card, his rank may be placed beneath his name as above. or in the lower right-hand corner.

If a bridegroom does not hold a commission, "United States Army Air Corps" or "United States Naval Reserve" is usually all that is given on the wedding invitations. But if the bride chooses to include "Pvt., 1st Class" or "Staff Sergeant," social usage is now permitting this.

Wife's Dilemma

ALTHOUGH upholders of etiquette as applied to conventional forms do not take kindly to double visiting cards reading 2nd Lieut. and Mrs. -, still less Ensign and Mrs. , and very certainly not Apprentice Seaman and Mrs. -

these tabus are a very real handicap in the following situation about which a young wife writes me:

"Since a double card for 'Ensign and Mrs. --' is incorrect, how can I send out announcements of the birth of our baby and let our friends know about my husband's promotion? The stationer suggests I tie his card and the baby's card both to my card! Such a collection of cards, it seems to me, will surely cause criticism, but how else can I give the double information?"

My first impulse was to suggest this form sent me not long ago:

Henry Martin Highwaves Ensign, United States Naval Reserve > and Mrs. Highwaves announce the birth of their son, Henry, Jr. June 25, 1942

Before mailing this, however, I sent an SOS to the wife of an Admiral who is noted for her social skill.

She answers that "Ensign and Mrs. George Green" and the little card of baby George tied to it, has her husband's as well as her own approval.

She also adds that under the special circumstances of the stork's visit, she would equally approve of "Apprentice Seaman and Mrs. Elmer Brown," since, as she says, the annoucement is an intimately personal one, made to none but really interested relatives and friends. This qualifying clause suggests to me that to a general list, particularly to those whose point of view may be conservative, the announcement sent by Mrs. Highwaves would be the one to choose.

"I'm Ashamed"

I found out somethin' that ought to make everybody outside of a uniform hang his head. Jake Bullis, over at Wally's Wagon No. 2, told me about it.

It seems that most of the soldiers an' sailors an' marines an' such are buyin' War Bonds on the installment plan out of their pay.

Now, there's somethin' about that that I find pretty hard to take. We ask a boy just comin' into the prime of life to give up his job, leave his friends an' his family an' his sweetheart or maybe his wife, take a rate of pay that is hardly more than cigarette money, agree to give up his life if he's called on to do it for his country. An' then he goes out an' helps pay for the war!

Now, don't get mad at the government, because this buyin' of bonds by the boys in uniform is all on their own an' they're not made to do it. If you've got to get mad at somebody, I want to tell you you can start with me an' most of my neighbors — an' I wouldn't be surprised but what you can save a little of your wrath to let go the next time you look in the

I talked to Jake about this. "Jake," I says, "have you been urgin' the customers to take their change in War Savings Stamps?"

"Sure," says Jake. "Ain't we supposed to?"

"Yeah," I answers him. "But you get mostly soldiers comin' in over there at No. 2, don't you?"

"Sure," he says.
"Do they take their change in stamps?" I want to know.

"Sure," says Jake. "As often as the civilians do."

"How much are we clearin' net on Wagon No. 2?"

"Oh, about twenty to twentyfive bucks a week after all expenses," Jake says.

"What do you say we start buyin' a War Stamp out of the cash register for ourselves every time we sell one to a soldier. Could we stand it?"

"Well," says Jake. "Just about. I been sellin' around twenty-five bucks' worth of stamps every week — a good part of that amount to the soldiers."

An' so we agreed we'd do it this way.

But I'm still ashamed of myself. Just givin' up your profits don't quite get you even with a bunch of soldiers who have given up so much more. Don't ever let anybody tell you patriotism is dead in this country. Just keep in your mind the picture of an army willing to buy its own ammunition.

FOOD QUIZ FOR AMERICA

"Do you know what to eat?" Here's the score for 3,000 housewives

by Grace Turner

THEY ASKED 3,000 WOMEN. What they asked these women was how they feed their families. The reason for asking was that United States citizens seemed to be starving in the midst of plenty and that is lunacy. The way this was discovered was through the physical examinations of the men called for the draft. Too many men were suffering from nutrition-deficiency diseases. And it was not a question of poverty; boys from Park Avenue were often as badly off as those from the wrong side of the tracks.

Of course, this is starvation in a special sense, not having to do with how much food a man eats - but what kind. Nutritionists call it "hidden hunger."

The remedy depends on spreading knowledge of nutrition high, wide and fancy among the mothers and wives who plan meals and do the cooking for U.S. families. So the Government and the food industries combined forces to put over the biggest nutrition program in our history. That is how it happened that the 3,000 women we are talking about were asked to answer a questionnaire prepared by General Foods Corporation, with advice of the Government's M. L. Wilson, Helen S. Mitchell and Margery Vaughan, leaders at Washington in the National Nutrition Program.

Perhaps you who are reading this article opened the door one day to an interviewer, arriving with courtesy and the questionnaire, and asking you to co-operate in finding out how much American women know about feeding their families and what they need to know. For the survey was conducted wholly by personal interview; and the women interviewed lived in big cities, little cities, country towns and farms. Some were rich, some in moderate circumstances, and some definitely poor. They represented a cross section of the United States; and their answers concern not merely themselves and the 11,035 members of their families, but the whole 130,000,000 of us exclusive of the men in the armed forces.

WE SHOULD EAT BET. TER. Now that the answers are all in and have been tabulated and studied, what is the dope about us? First off, then, it is clear that women are interested in information about nutrition. In fact, they are eager for it. Most of them like to cook, and want to cook the right way. And most of them get their nutrition and cooking information from magazines and radio, so the efforts of editors, these many years, have not been wholly in vain.

Nevertheless, no civilian class, as a whole, is eating as wisely as it should or as nutritionally as it can. There are exceptions to this, of course, - many thousands of individual families - wealthy, moderately well off, and poor - are getting well-balanced meals. So are the men in the armed services.

The main cause for our poor eating habits seems, in spite of newsWHAT'S YOUR ANSWER?

- Here are some questions put to 3,000 U.S. women. 1. What vegetable colors indicate Vitamin A?
- What foods are best sources of Vitamin B1?
- What does Vitamin C do?
- Which vitamins are easily lost in cooking?
- How to retain vitamins in cooking vegetables?
- Should you add soda in cooking vegetables?
- Which of these contain most vitamins: Regular white flour? Enriched white flour? Whole wheat flour?
- What is enriched white flour?
- What vitamin do aviators and air raid wardens especially need? Why?
- 10. What is niacin which used to be called nicotinic acid? Is it harmful or helpful?

papers, magazines and radio, due to the fact that many women just have not learned the most rudimentary points about right diets. Equally important is the lack in this our world of non-technical information about foods. There has been too much talk about too many vitamins and subdivisions of vitamins, too much use of terms like "9,000 units" - which mean exactly nothing to even very intelligent non-professionals. What women at home need is simple material that can be easily understood and easily put into practice.

SOME INTERESTING DETAILS: Only 18 per cent of American women plan the family meals even one day in advance. That is a poor showing, for planning in advance should help women to reduce food costs and to work out better balanced meals.

We do not, as a whole, think of variety in food as important. Only 28 per cent of the women interviewed give it any real thought. Yet it is important, if we are to change the family's eating habits.

As for vitamins, our understanding of these is largely misunderstanding. True, 93 out of 100 have heard of Vitamin A and the same number of Vitamin B1; 87 out of 100 know there's a Vitamin C; 64 out of 100 are vaguely aware that Vitamin G exists and some know that it is also called Vitamin B2 or riboflavin.

But what is the use of knowing the names of important food elements unless we also know what they will do for us and in what foods to find them? Most of us do not know this. Not

families have the remotest idea that Vitamin A prevents night blindness, and that it is present in deep yellow and deep green vegetables. Even Vitamin D, so important to babies, the Vitamin found in sunshine and fish-liver oils is a mystery to most. Seventy-five out of 100 women say they know nothing about it and, in many cases, have not even heard of it.

Strange, however, - and yet understandable: Women, who do not know anything about vitamins, do know how to cook vegetables so as not to destroy their vitamin content. "Use the smallest amount of water possible or a pressure cooker," the majority answer with all correctness. The reason? This is a practical thing that has been explained in a practical way.

Enriched bread is another thing

most housewives know about. The baking industry and the Government did a good educational job a year or more ago when bakers began to use fortified white flour. Seventysix per cent of the families interviewed know that this is a good source of Vitamins, and also that whole wheat bread is a good source.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH MILE? Americans simply do not drink the amount of milk they should. Yet not one person in a hundred dislikes it. Farm people are much better about it than city people, as is to be expected. In no section of the country, however, are American families meeting the optimum milk requirements of a quart of milk a day for each child and a pint for each adult, even though these amounts include milk in any form that is used in cooking. If we were using this amount of milk, the dairy industry would be able to supply just half the demand. That should give anyone who reads the daily papers a good idea of how far below standard we are falling.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT U.S. FOOD: The General Foods' survey shows that the biggest need is to make more practical information more widely available. Here the Government's 1942 Nutrition Program. with its presentation of eight basic food groups from which to draw every day, will help. In distributing this information, almost every food industry in the U.S. is helping through advertisements, posters, food displays in markets and groceries of every kind. Government agencies are also helping, as are state, city and local organizations, both private and public.

In the next issue, THIS WEEK Magazine will present an article by Paul V. McNutt, discussing the Government's nutrition program. There will also be an article, on the food page, with photographs of the eight basic food groups, and with menus and recipes translating the Government's nutrition message into "three square meals a day."

ANSWERS: 1. Deep yellow; deep green. 2. Whole grains; dried beans, peas, nuts, egg yolks; pork, other meats. 3. Tooth health; scurvy-prevention. 4. B1 (Thiamin); C. 5. Little water or pressure cooker. 6. Never - destroys vitamins. 7. Whole wheat, then enriched. 8. Bcomplex and iron added. 9. A - Prevents night blindness. 10. Part of Bcomplex - prevents pellagra.
