Japs Sink Fourth U. S. Carrier; Identity Not Revealed by Navy; M'Arthur Flyers Destroy Cruiser

Attack Oct. 26 Reported

Sinking of another United States aircraft carrier - the fourth - in the furious air and sea battle for control of the South Pacific, was announced by the Navy last night, leaving only three American carriers known to be still in action. The latest victim of two Japanese aerial attacks was not identified by the Navy. She went down near the Santa Cruz Islands, a tiny spot in the shopping street. Pacific about 250 miles northeast of Guadalcanal, in the same battle which cost the United States fleet the destroyer Porter last Sunday

Shortly after the sinking of the carrier was announced, a dispatch from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Australian headquarters told of the sinking early today (Australian time) of a Japanese heavy cruiser and the three merchant vessels by Allied scored in the harbor at Buin in the attackers with a loss of two of their Solomons 300 miles north of Guadal-

Japs Returned to Attack. The first assault on the American carrier, which came before noon, caused heavy damage, the Navy reported. She was put in tow in an effort to salvage the big vessel, but the Japanese returned in the afternoon. Bombing and torpedo planes roared in to attack. This time the attackers inflicted damage below the water line of the helpless

She began to list. Orders were given for removal of the personnel and most of the men were saved. Then came the final orders-indestruction of the crippled ship.

The Navy said the name of the ship would not be disclosed until Gen. Marshall said the Army's men after next of kin of all injured or missing had been notified.

The vessel presumably came from among the vessels listed in Janes Registry of Fighting Ships - the Saratoga, a converted carrier, commissioned in 1925, with a tonnage of 33,000; the Hornet, commissioned in 1940, tonnage 19,900; the Ranger, commissioned in 1933, tonnage 14. 500, and the Enterprise, commissioned in 1936, tonnage 19,900.

Labor Draft Delayed Each of these carriers has a normal complement of between 1,800 In France as Women and 2,100 officers and men. Each carried a striking force of about 85 airplanes—bombers, torpedo planes Barricade Halls and fighters.

Three Lost Previously.

Previously the Navy had announced the loss of three of the seven carriers which the United States had at the start of the war. Among them was the Wasp, newest of the carriers, which went down September 15. The Lexington was lost in the Coral Sea battle May 8 and the Yorktown in the battle of Midway June 7 Loss of the Porter brought to 21 the number of destroyers lost so far in the Pacific. Other American vessels suffered lesser damage.

Aside from the blows dealt to the Japanese fleet at Buin, Gen. Mac-Arthur's headquarters also reported (See SOLOMONS, Page A-6.)

By the Associated Press. CAIRO, Oct. 31.-The British 8th Army methodically whittled down German strength today in the western Egyptian desert consolidated its newly won positions and repulsed counterattacks while maintaining air supremacy with the help of American planes. (The German radio said the British resumed the attack early Saturday, wheeling up reinforcements especially of artillery and tanks. The assertion by DNB came only 12 hours after the Nazis had claimed the offensive had collapsed.)

The progress through Marshal Edwin Rommel's defense in depth necessarily was measured in yards. The British were using artillery on a scale unprecedented in the desert to inflict maximum damage at minimum casualties.

The Germans and Italians were fighting desperately to hold their positions some 80 miles west of Alexandria because for hundreds of miles behind them there was no place to establish another front so narrow and thus so suitable for compact defense.

29 to 35 in House, 5 to 8 in Senate Expected Tuesday

By GOULD LINCOLN. America's first wartime elecion since 1918—on Tuesday—is ikely to result in congressional and gubernatorial defeats for the party in control of the National Administration. The probabilities are, however, that the extent of these defeats will not be as sweeping as those suffered by the Democratic party when it lost in 1918 its majorities in both House and Senate, presaging the Harding Republican landslide of 1920. The prospects are for a net gain of 29 to 35 for the Republicans in the House and a net gain of 5 to 8 in the Senate. Should a real Republican sweep materialize, the GOP might pick up the necessary 53. additional seats to give it a bare majority of one in the House. Thiswould mean giving the Republicans all the "breaks."

So far as the Senate is concerned, there seems no possibility whatever that the Republicans could win a majority in that body. If they won every senatorial contest, they would have a total of 53 Senate seats-a. majority is 49. Eleven of these Senate races, however, take place in States of the Democratic Solid-None of these will elect Republican Senators.

Give-a-Gun Week Scrap Drive Opens In Howard Park Area

Each Resident Asked To Supply Metal for One Machine Gun

As the District's "heavy" scrap metal drive accumulated approximately 641,600 pounds with indications that the figure will continue to climb, one of the city's defense areas announced a salvage plan to "give the Axis both barrels.

The Howard Park Defense Area has designated the period between today and November 11 as "Give-a-Gun Week," during which residents are asked to produce at least 121/2 pounds of scrap metal. This amount of scrap, when processed, will make one .30-caliber machine gun.

Collection Service Planned. In an announcement circulated throughout the area Mrs. Dorothy P. Beckley, 527 U street N.W., salvage chairman, exhorted her fellow residents to "scrape up that scrap now!" She is requesting residents to carry at least 121/2 pounds of scrap metal to their nearest salvage depot between today and Armistice Day.

If the scrap is too heavy to carry -there's no limit on the amount which will be accepted-donors are asked to telephone North 3705. Howard Park salvage headquarters, to Get In the Scrap! arrange for collection

May Top New Goal. With more than 42,000,000 pounds of metal to the District's credit in the first four months of the sixmonth campaign, ending January 1 indications are that the city's selfimposed quota of 50,000,000 pounds will be smashed, as was the 34, 000,000-pound goal set by the War Production Board.

According to an unofficial tabulation by The Star, the District total already stands at approximately 45,000,000, exclusive of the major portion of Government contributions during October.

The Salvage Committee reported yesterday that a late contribution to the "heavy" drive was a 64,545pound accumulation from Standard Brands, Inc., 60,670 pounds of which was iron and the remainder copper and brass.

Buyers Fill Liquor Stores To Beat Tax Deadline

Washingtonians crowded downtown liquor stores yesterday to "beat" the new Federal tax which becomes effective today and which will add 50 cents per quart to the cost of 100 proof whisky when stores open for business tomorrow. While no figures could be obtained as to the increase in sales yesterday over the ordinary Saturday business, all liquor stores along Pennsylvania avenue in the downtown area were crowded, and by late afternoon lines had formed outside several cut-rate shops.

One store manager said he was doing approximately 50 per cent more business than was customary for Saturday.

In the case of cigarettes, which will carry an excise tax of one-half daylight toll taken of the enemy tinued, are in line with the observacent a package, effective today, several tobacco stores downtown reported that yesterday's sales were approximately 30 per cent better than is usual for Saturday. Tobaccoists also reported that cigar sales were more brisk yesterday, as compared to sales for the past several Saturdays,

Washington camera dealers also reported a small increase in the sale of photographic films, which will be subject to the Federal excise tax effective today.

Mrs. Roosevelt Tours London Incognito; Ignores Raid Alarm

Creates Sensation When She Is Recognized at Dance for Servicemen

By the Associated Press. LONDON, Oct. 31.—Calmly ignoring an air-raid alarm, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt made an unannunced incognito tour through blacked-out London tonight without her official retinue to see for herself how the armed forces enjoy themselves in London on Saturday night. She was chatting with soldiers and their girl friends at a leave and transit hostel operated by the YWCA when the alarm sounded. She paid no attention to it and made a trip to the next spot while the brief alert was still on.

Mrs. Roosevelt created a sensation at a dance at the Red Cross Servicemen's Club when she was recognized early in her tour. An elderly doorman at the club did not recognize her and asked for her card of admittance. While she fumbled in her purse a nearby soldier

"My gosh! It's Mrs. Rosevelt." Spotted by Club Director. Theodore Buttel of Detroit, club director, spotted her and invited her to watch the Halloween dance then in progress.

For Halloween stunt the dance floor was blacked-out and a whiteclad "ghost" made of a pillowslip and false face fluttered overhead election day. Their suspicion is however, that many of the voters will signify discontent with the conditions growing out of the war and with the administration's handling of the many problems involved. Not the least of their complaints is that they have not been given a clear picture, because of the many conflicting statements that have come out of Washington. They have been disatisfied because of the bungling of the rubber, oil and gasoline problems, and with various methods of rationing these and certain foods

The light vote will be due, also, in part to the fact that thousands of young men have left their voting 81-year-old veteran Independent, is places to enter the armed services. Many other thousands of men and women have changed their places of residence to take work in war May. President Roosevelt has made production plants, and many of the Norris candidacy an exception, them have not become registered voters in their new locations.

Women's Vote Important. With so many of the men away, the vote of the women has become more important than ever. Both Democrats and Republicans have striven to arouse their interest in the elections and to organize them for political work as well as for voting.

The election comes when this which aids the "outs," not the "ins."

States have sought to make a prime cratic Congress to uphold the hands of President Roosevelt, both for a successful conduct of the war and for a more lasting peace after it shall have been won. In some places they have sought to make the past record of Republican members of Congress on foreign policy and national defense measures a yard stick, pointing out that the Republicans in great numbers voted against such measures as the lease-lend bill, the military draft bill and the extension of the period of military service under the draft.

The "isolationism" issue, however, failed notably to defeat many of the principle isolationists in both political parties for renomination in the primary elections. As an issue it has proved a two-edged weapon, cutting both ways. And since Pearl Harbor, many of the people have given that issue little attention, believing that with a war on, it is now non-existent.

He was defeated in this effort when Democratic State Chairman James A. Republican, of Massachusetts is ex-Farley's candidate, Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., was nominated to run against Mr. Dewey, the Republican choice. Despite the fact that the President belatedly has come out strongly for Mr. Bennett, Mr. Dewey's election is confidently expected.

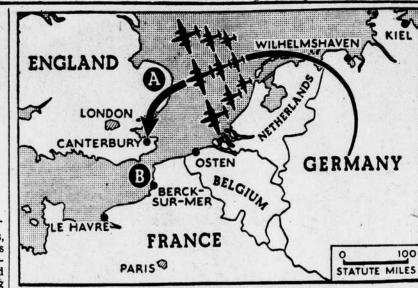

Not only are the future of Democratic politics involved in this New York gubernatorial race, but also Republican politics for the next two years may be greatly influenced. If Mr. Dewey wins, the belief prevails that he will be the party's choice for the presidential nomination in 1944. This is true in the West as well as in the East, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Dewey has said that, if elected, he expects to serve out his four-year term as Governor.

Mr. Dewey was one of the leading candidates for the GOP Presidential nomination in 1940. He was defeated by Wendell L. Willkie, and in the final hour of the convention, Senator Taft of Ohio was the runner-up. At that time it was urged against Mr. Dewey that he was too young. He was 38 years old, only three years beyond the minimum age for Presidents specified in the Constitution. Two years hence, he will be 44 years of age.

Bricker, who stood aside in 1940 for Senator Taft, is rated a probable contender for the Presidential nomination two years hence, particularly should Mr. Dewey be defeated. Gov. Stassen, Republican of Minnesota, like Gov. Bricker, is running for a third term. He has announced he will leave office next April, if he is re-elected, to enter the Navy. Gov. Stassen is one of the youngest of the Governors. He was a strong supporter of Mr. Willkie for the Presidential nomination in 1940. In Connecticut, former Gov. Raymond E. Townsend Predicts Republican Gain of Seven Senate Seats

Democratic Majority Will Not Be Lessened, Guffey Asserts

By J. A. O'LEARY. A gain of seven Senate seats by the Republicans in Tuesday's elections was predicted last night by former Senator Townsend of Delaware, chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee. Senator Guffey of Pennsylvania chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, countered with the assertion, "The Democratic majority will not be lessened by the result of the election." The prediction of Mr. Townsend was contained in this brief com-

"From a national survey, I am advised there is a strong Republican trend. It is my opinion that the Republican membership of the Senate will be increased by seven." The Senate now is composed of 65 Democrats, 29 Republicans, 1

This year's list of senatorial contests, however, includes the spirited, three-cornered race in Nebraska, in which the veteran Independent, Senator Norris, is battling for reelection against a Republican and a Democrat. While the outcome of the Nebraska election might affect slightly the exact ratio between the two major parties in the Senate, the re-election of Senator Norris would be tantamount to an administration victory.

In the Roosevelt sweep of that year the ratio changed to 60 Democrats and 35 Republicans. The New Deal swing continued over a six-year period, until in the spring of 1938, the Democrats held 77 Senate seats to 15 Republicans and 4 others. The pendulum began to swing the other way in 1940, when the ratio went back to 69 Democrats and 23 Republicans. Japanese Government Is Streamlined to Strengthen Power

Even Greater Domination Of Nation by Military Clique Is Seen

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.-A drastic streamlining of the Japanese government to "strengthen Japan's fighting power" and probably forehadowing an even greater dominaion of the nation by the military clique headed by Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo was announced by the Tokio radio today.

More than ever, Premier Tojo appeared to be emerging as a Twenieth Century recreation of the shogunate which ruled Japan for 100 years.

The creation of a new super-minstry of Greater East Asiatic affairs, inification of administration in such verseas territories as Formosa Korea and Sakhalin with that of apan proper, and a sweeping rerganization of government bureaus ind departments was announced in eneral terms by Premier Tojo, who eclared the present conflict would ettle the the destiny of East Asia for 1000 years to come.

Bureaus Abolished.

Calling the measures "epoch making," Domei News Agency said the consolidation involved the abolition of 31 bureaus and 12 departments of Government besides the overseas ministry, the powerful Manchurian Affairs Board and China Affairs Board and the East Asiatic and South Seas Affairs Bureaus of the Foreign Ministry. The official gazette will publish

The Home Ministry will take over centralized direction of civil administration in Formosa, Korea and Sakhalin as well as Japan proper, it was said.

Political Organization. Premier Tojo permitted almost

W. CLINTON McSHERRY Candidate for Chief Judge of the Sixth Judicial Circuit

Attorneys at Law Robert R. Carmen

John T. Tucker G. C. A. Anderson Harold J. Wolfinger

Dear Mr. Shipley:

Maryland Trust Building Baltimore October 9th, 1942 G. Raymond Shipley, Frederick, Maryland

I trust that you will not regard this letter as any at-tempt on my part to inject myself into the business of the Sixth Judicial Circuit. However, the Court of Appeals belongs to all of us, and I therefore take this opportunity to endorse my good friend W. Clinton McSherry, who is a candidate for the Chief Judge of your Circuit. I am very happy to do this. I have known Mr. McSherry for a number of years and have had considerable business with him. Based upon my experience with him, I know that he is an able and very competent lawyer. He understands his subject; he is a man of splendid judgment, and possesses a world of good, sound, common sense. In addition to these virtues, I have found that he is extremely fair and at all times has his mind set on doing the right thing, both legally and morally. As a member of the Bar, I would indeed be very happy to see a man of such splendid attainments elevated to the Bench of the Sixth Judicial Circuit as Chief Judge.

> Sincerely yours, ROBERT R. CARMAN.

By the Associated Press. MELBOURNE, Australia, Oct. 31. -The crucial phase when the Japanese made their most formidable effort to regain Guadalcanal in the Solomons and then withdrew was one of the greatest activity on the part of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's small but hard-hitting air force of Americans and Australians.

Playing a strong supporting, longrange role to the Marines and troops in the Solomons, the MacArthur air arm carried the war to the enemy's ships and bases no fewer than 23 of the 31 days or nights of the period ended October 30 and an analysis of the communiques showed they had accomplished the following results:

Negroes Are Urged To Make Full Use Of Citizenship

Ballot Must Be Utilized To Improve Status, Dr. Jackson Says

Appealing to Negroes to pay the poll tax where required and to make full use of privileges of citizenship, Dr. Luther Porter Jackson, history professor at Virginia State College, yesterday urged all members of the race to go to the polls during Tuesday's elections.

The head of the Negro Voters League of Virginia spoke at the second day session of the annual meeting of the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History at the Phyllis Wheatley YWCA.

Negroes must make full use of the ballot and other citizenship privileges in order to improve the status of their race, Dr. Jackson told the delegates. He then listed three things the Negro should do "to become fullfledged citizens." They are: Appeal to the courts for the en-

Dr. Brown Speaks. Dr. Thomas I. Brown, head of the social science division of Miner Teachers College, opened the discussion by reviewing the question of whether the Negro is "a citizen or subject of the United States.' He concluded that there are some serious qualifications to his status as a citizen

Mrs. Lucy Harth Smith of the Booker T. Washington School, Lexington, Ky., declared that history shows the Negro has demonstrated he is qualified to perform the duties of citizenship, citing the record of Negro interest in health, education, religion and community affairs. A report on Baltimore's shelter system, however, came to Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive director of District civilian defense, in May and was turned over at that time to Defense Co-ordinator John Russell Young. With no precedent to guide him, it was learned yesterday in Baltimore, Mr. Clarke started out to find the safest buildings but decided before long to make a survey of the congested areas. Where buildings failed to come up to his standard, ers who were at first fearful but he decided to try to make them safe. but a few items in favor of a more expected to decline from now on, direct form of allocations in which materials will be doled out on an end-product basis. For example, instead of issuing a large number of priorities ratings for production of airplanes and allowing firms to grab for supplies, materials for producing specific numbers of planes will be allotted manufacturers.

Covers All Vital Programs. The plan, it was said, places all materials, for civilian as well as military production, into one large "pie," and provides for careful cutting so that no vital individual program, whether it involves making planes for the Army or clothes for civilians, will be neglected.

In his production report, Mr. Nelson said acceptances in September of all heavy tactical planes increased substantially. Four-engined bombers rolled off assembly lines very nearly on schedule. The numerical increase in plane output was small, Mr. Nelson said, because the increase in large combat craft was accompanied by a decrease of light planes, especially trainers. "Propeller production continues to present a serious problem," Mr. Nelson added. "Plane construction may increase in the months ahead more rapidly than propeller production, unless propeller output can be greatly increased. Thus far, however, enough propellers have been made to fly all planes.' Mr. Nelson added that methods of producing aircraft in mass have been greatly improved. Many engineering difficulties have been over-Skills of new workers are being improved and the training program is proceeding well.

Produce More Quickly. Some aircraft plants which have come into production recently are making unusually good showings-"much better than early experience led us to believe," Mr. Nelson said. The time required to bring new plants into production from the date factory construction starts has been cut down greatly since the beginning of the war effort, he continued. Mr. Nelson described ordnance production as continuing to move 'slowly" and "unevenly." Tank production was up 3 per cent while tank guns were being made ahead of schedule. He added that "September was a good month for anti-air-Manufacture of ammunition for with the September output reached a valuation of $120,000,000, a gain of 2.4 per cent over August. Mr. Nelson said that for the first time the production of machine tools was higher than new orders, and est number of munitions may be worked off." He added that this produced which the armed services' trend was likely to continue in high command believes will deliver sharp contrast to early war program bottleneck.

Mr. Nelson said Governmentfinanced construction for war pur-words, except for the constant search for additional shelters, Baltimore considers its job of providing safe shelter from everything but home—an oddity with a subbasement and four stories—is being used as a shelter. Here, more use will be made of private homes. Wardens have been told to suggest basements, garages or recreation rooms for the strangers, but some home owners have said they would be glad to entertain the refugees in their parlor. At all shelter areas, aration, District wardens are going ahead with the task of finding freeing materials and manpower for direct munitions production. War construction for the year, including military building, munitions plants and the machinery to equip them, will total about $14,400,000, or one-fourth of all war expenditures. In September, the Treasury and Government corporations paid out $5.500,000,000 for war purposes, an increase from August of $300,000,000. By the end of that month all was expenditures since July, 1940, had reached 50 billions, and the total program, including commitments of Government corporations, called for disbursement of $224,000,000,000.

This was increased in October to $240,000,000,000. Pointing out that expenditures of such magnitude take up an increasing proportion of total payments for goods and services within the United States, Mr. Nelson said that in September about two-fifths of all such payments consisted of war disbursements by the Government.

Planes Held Prime Arm. The new materials allocations plan will not be reflected, it was said, in improved production figures for nearly a year. It will not be placed into effect to a large extent until the second quarter of 1943. It was understood that plans called for increased emphasis during the next few months on aircraft production. Airplanes are regarded now as the primary armament, and the program will be pushed hard under the general direction of Charles E. Wilson, WPB vice chairman in charge of all production.

The new allocations plan was described as chiefly the work of Mr. Eberstadt, though Mr. Nelson long has seen the need for maintaining more rigid control over materials than was secured under either the priorities system or the production requirement plan. By the new arrangement it is hoped that all parts for an airplane, for example made by numerous contractors and sub-contractors can be fitted in the assembly plant into a final product. Under the system now in force, production of many plane parts might proceed on schedule, while others would lag, throwing the program out of balance. The plan, it was said, will embody the following points: 1. Provision for quota allocation of materials supply between the various claimants for materials, such as Army, Navy, Air Forces, Maritime Commission, lend-lease and civilian supply.

2. Establishment of a system of production schedules, projected well terials will be closely geared to the various stages of end-product pro-

3. Placing in the industry branches curement of specific quantities of materials cut precisely to the scheduled volume of end products. 4. Placing in the hands of prime contractors the power to extend their materials procurement authorizations to parts suppliers, subcontractors through a system of warrants or certificates.

"In the interest of efficiency, uniformity of operations, discipline and the avoidance of duplication of effort, it is not advisable to have two uniformed services. Accordingly, the Army Specialist Corps will cease to function as a separate organization, and the procurement of specially qualified persons required by the Army for service with other than civilian positions will be accomplished by specialist commissions in the Army of the United States." The Specialist Corps, in months past, could furnish the Army with men only when requisitioned by the adjutant general, based on the requests of the various branches. There was and still is an urgent need for trained technicians of many kinds. Some of these the corps was able to furnish. On the other hand, the Army has little need for salesmen and many other professional groups represented by those registered with the corps.

In the case of engineers, it was pointed out, certain kinds are needed, but there is no call for others whose training would not adapt them to military requirements.

HIS IS WORTH FIGHTI

The right to govern ourselves

TRAVE AND DETERMINED Americans D left bloody footprints in the snow at Valley Forge, to give us the priceless right to run our country as the majority of us think it should be

Today, equally resolute and courageous Americans are fighting to preserve that hard-won heritage— for themselves and for their children. They know that in the Axis nations people are mere puppets bowing to the brutal whims of fanatical dictators.

That's why Americans are fighting. And, as they fight on to certain Victory, they are inspired by an unshakable determination that this government shall continue to be "of the people, by the people, and for the people."

The Southern Railway System, because of its strategic location, is playing a tremendously vital role in the transportation of war materials and fighting men. But it is doing more than that. It is also helping to keep the wheels of our national life rolling in defense of the home front. It is grimly but willingly taking on burden after burden-because it's a rich privilege to serve the nation in times like these.

When private automobile travel began to be curtailed by tire and gasoline rationing—the kind of travel that normally accounts for more than four-fifths of all inter-city travel—the railroads took on the thankless job of providing substitute transportation. That meant more trains, more cars per train, more locomotives, crowded stations, and a thousand headaches! But the job is being done—on top of the major task of handling hundreds of thousands of Uncle Sam's soldiers, sailors and marines.

When the oil shortage developed in the eastern states, the railroads said that they could move 200,000 barrels a day to meet the emergency. They are now moving more than 800,000 barrels a day. In the first eight months of this year, the Southern Railway System alone handled more than 19,000,000 barrels of oil to the North and East.

These are simply examples of how one railroad is doing its bit to protect our way of life; our heritage of freedom; our right to govern ourselves.

From this experience, a better Southern Railway System will emerge-more efficient and more useful to the people it serves than ever beforebecause, even during these trying times, we are taking advantage of every opportunity to improve our services, facilities and methods; every opportunity to plan for a better tomorrow when Americans will continue to hold their heads high as free men, proud in the knowledge that their children, too, will enjoy the blessings inherent in a nation of self-governing people.

That is worth fighting for!

Must a boy with a war to fight eat his heart out with worry about the mother, wife or children he left behind?

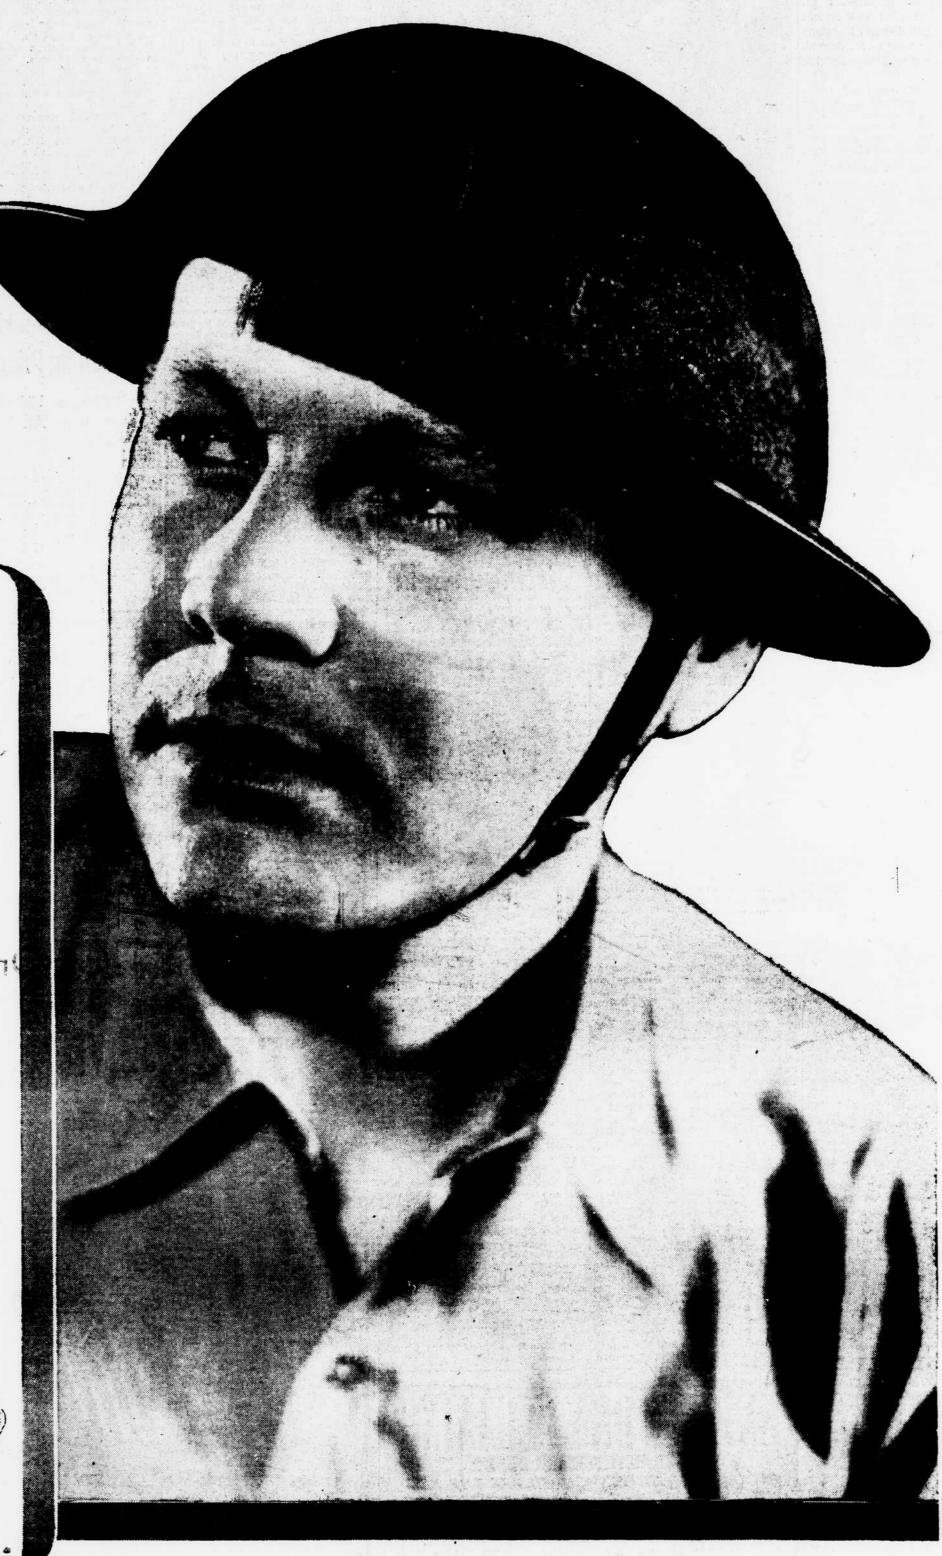

You can reassure him—by one generous gift to the Community War Fund.

That gift will help to guarantee the longtime services of Community Chest agencies in Washington and in adjoining counties of Maryland and Virginia—home-front services vital to the health and safety of those he left behind him.

That gift will reach him, too—add to his comfort in camp, en route, on the battle front—through the world-wide services of the U.S.O.

It will reach others also in the fight—it will send food and medicines to the war-torn citizens of the United Nations.

Franciscan Monks To Resume Studies In Schwab Mansion

Group Made Homeless By St. Francis College Fire Given Fine Estate

By the Associated Press.

LORETTO, Pa., Oct. 31.-Franciscan monks made homeless by a $200,000 fire at century-old St. Francis College soon will resume their studies in a 40-room limestone mansion where Charles M. Schwab once entertained millionaires of the business world.

College officials remarked today that Providence played a part in providing for the monks. Just four weeks ago today a committee of friends of the college purchased the residence to give it to the college.

Principal Building Destroyed.

When fire yesterday destroyed the college's principal building, housing the dormitory, chapel, administration offices and library, the college was able to continue without immediate rebuilding. A community of priests and brothers, the seminarians and novitiate 50 in all, will merely have to move across to the once-grandiose mansion at "Immergrun," the Schwab property adjoining St. Francis campus in the Allegheny Mountains. This, to be done in two weeks, will leave room in other college buildings for the 200 secular students, who were sent home for the Brocade on Walls.

While the mansion has been tenantless since the death of Mr. Schwab, chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Co. and St. Francis alumnus and his wife in 1939, vestiges remain of its splendor, such as heavy German silver chandeliers in the dining room and hall, beautiful side lamps in those rooms and the library, and heavy brocade on the walls.

The estate also comprises a 26room guest house, seven cottages, dairy barns, vegetable and flower greenhouses, a $50,000 garage and a year to maintain.

John M. Gregory, public relations director of the college, valued the estate at $2,000,000 to $3,000,000. The mansion, other buildings and about 200 acres bought by the friends of the college cost them $32,500.

DO HALF OF YOUR HOLIDAY SHOPPING IN MOVEMBER

HELP YOURSELF:

- -By saving money in our November Special Events
- -By choosing from Complete Merchandise Assort-
- -By shopping in comfort with full service
- -By avoiding disappointments due to possible merchandise shortages

HELP YOUR COUNTRY:

- -By reducing congestion of Christmas traffic on buses, street cars and in the stores
- -By finishing up your gift-list and devoting your extra time to essential war work
- -By saving extra deliveries, which means SAVING gasoline, rubber and oil
- -By helping the Post Office throughout America to spread the delivery of gifts you mail

- -By anticipating our customers' needs early enough to fill them
- -By eliminating the mistakes and errors that result from last-minute shopping throngs
- -By helping the railroads to avoid bottlenecks in shipping

Remember, Uncle Sam Says Buy Now for Christmas, Mail Before Dec. 1.

In co-operation with the Government's program to level off the Christmas rush, and spread the Holiday shopping between two months, we urge you to make plans now . . . and DO HALF YOUR HOLIDAY SHOPPING IN NOVEMBER. There are many reasons for this ... some of them listed on this page ... reasons brought about by war conditions, the urgency of manpower, and the necessity to maintain as far as possible normal service in the channels of distribution. Uncle Sam has said: "Buy now for Christmas . . . and mail your gifts before December 1st". That means, in plain words: DO AS MUCH OF YOUR HOLIDAY SHOPPING IN NOVEMBER as you possibly can. We feel that if the Holiday shopping can be leveled off and spread between the two months, many dislocations in civilian life can be avoided . . . and we will be able to render a more complete and more normal service to the people of Washington. We urge your co-operation in the interest of the war-effort and the maintenance of healthy civilian morale.

$67,200 Salary Ceiling Estimate Explained By Treasury Experts

Exemptions, Deductions, State Taxes Computed To Reach $25,000 Base

How did the Treasury arrive at its figure of $67,200 as the top permissible salary that can be paid in 1943? And how will the rule apply to Mr. X. a corporation executive drawing such a salary?

Assuming that he has no exemptions or other allowable deductions, a person with a salary of $67,200 under the rates in the 1942 revenue bill would have to pay approximately $42,200 in Federal income and Victory taxes. This would leave his $25,000—the maximum allowable salary under the new ceiling after payment of Federal taxes.

Exemptions, Deductions. Mr. X will, however, find that he

After deducting from his gross income the allowable items, Mr. X will probably discover that his tax liability is less than $42,200. This will mean that he will have remaining more than the $25,000 allowable under the regulations recently issued by James F. Byrnes. economic stabilization director.

If he lives in a State that has an income tax, he will thus have something left over to pay part of his State income tax bill, Treasury experts explain.

Thirty-five States now have income taxes. The rates vary widely. If a resident of New York, for example, Mr. X, assuming he has no income beyond his $67,200 salary, and assuming that he is married without dependent children, would be required to pay about $3,500. In some States his payments would be a good deal less. More than a dozen States have no income taxes. The $25,000 salary limitation obviously gives an advantage to persons with large salaries living in those States.

Since Mr. X, in computing his Federal tax liability, is permitted to deduct State and local tax payments, Treasury experts point out, deductions reduce correspondingly allow any payments made in ex-

Is a Second Front Practical At This Time?

As Debated by-

JOHANNES STEEL, Mr. Steel opens: The war cannot be won on one front alone. A second continental land front must be es-A united strategy must be worked all of us put together.

The war cannot be won in the air land alone. The war can only be not for the Russians, and particuall three branches.

Just as the three major Allied powers should co-ordinate their strategy, the three branches of the armed services must be integrated substitute for a second land front.

I am arguing for the establishing of a second land front after thorough preparation, this land front to be established before Russia's offensive capacity has been destroyed so that the offensive in the west can be coordinated with the Red army offensive designed to recapture the Northern Caucasus and the Ukraine, Russia's breadbasket.

Mr. Raymond challenges: Mr. Steel says a united strategy must be worked out, implying that a decision must be made somewhere. Experience shows that only a united command can make united strategy Who is to command, the United States, Britain, China or Russia? The majority vote of a committee?

Grant that the divisions of our temporary coalition are advantageous to Hitler. Do you really believe the democracies and Stalin can ever trust each other enough to work by united strategy? I don't. Why do you? I have great sympathy and admiration for Russians defending their country, but I distrust totalitarian government. Don't you?

Mr. Steel replies: I suggest a war council composed of one American, one British, one Russian and one Chinese representative; this council to agree on a "united strategy" and then to vote by majority vote as to who is to be entrusted with the execution of the plans formulated. As to mistrusting Russia . . . that is, of course, what Hitler wants us to do. It is therefore necessary for us to realize that . . . to use the words of the great American revolutionary Benjamin Franklin, "we must indeed all hang together or most assuredly we shall all hang separately." This is certainly true today of the United Nations.

While some reputable Americans are crusading for a second front now, I believe the bulk of the agitation is due to an understandable propaganda from Moscow. Personally I would beware of it and put my trust and all possible aid at the service of our own leaders.

Mr. Steel Challenges: Mr. Rav mond's suggestion that we are fighting for ourselves alone is a hangover from the pre-war isolationist philosophy which set the stage for and resulted in Pearl Harbor. Fighting for ourselves alone would mean that we would fight a limited war. It would mean that we should pursue the same policy that brought disaster to Belgium, Holland, Norway and all the other nations that believed that they were fighting for themselves alone. No doubt, Dr. Goebbels would agree with the statement that the crusade for a 600 cool. second front now is due to propaganda from Moscow.

invaded. I have long hoped that the United States, fully armed, and always ready, would join with countries of similar ideals to work for peace and international justice.
Some day, I hope and believe, the gallant Russian people will cast off their ruthless despotism and be qualified to join a society of free peoples. Meanwhile, we will fight as best we can, giving Britain, China and Russia what help we can. We will win the long, hard, bloody way. Thereafter, I hope, we will keep the peace, either with the aid of others or by our own might.

Civil Mobilization Chief Says Organization Will Follow Warden System

Important Federal war programs hinge on completion of the organization of the Victory Volunteer Corps, the block workers who will make house-to-house canvasses to ask voluntary civilian participation in war activities, civilian mobilization officials said yesterday.

An intensive campaign to complete the organization by November 15 has been mapped out, it was announced yesterday by Conrad Van Hyning, chief of civilian mobilization here. Area chairmen have been instructed to build their groups on the same geographical divisions as the air raid warden service's zones, sectors and blocks. Zone leaders are being selected. They in turnwill select block leaders or "captains" for each block, with one worker to each 20 families.

The Civilian Defense Volunteer Office is recruiting Victory Volunteers from their files of persons already registered with them for war work. In addition it will conduct a one-day registration in the 66 areas to fill in the ranks of those corps not completed by November 15.

A Federal program on war food information will be conveyed to each household by corps members, informing housewives of the limitations on vital foods which must be shared with the armed forces. The District of Columbia Nutrition Committee will follow up with an educational campaign on substitute foods to make up for these restrictions and "still maintain fighting stamina in the civilian population through proper nutrition.

A war savings campaign to be carried direct to every home is being organized. The Office of Defense Transportation contemplates a plan to renew the share-your-car campaign not only to save gas and tires as was formerly stressed but acute shortage in public transportation facilities.

is placed on the importance of having all households effectively informed as to the particular program and their responsibility in connection with it."

New decrees which became effective yesterday make the government of Norway comparable to a state of siege. Even trivial acts, such as failing to surrender propaganda material to authorities, may under some circumstances be punthed by death.

Offenses Are Listed.

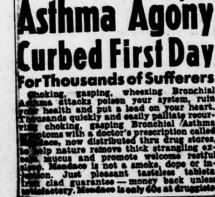

Offenses for which Norwegians may be put to death or placed in solitary confinement include entering or leaving the country without special permission, working for the enemy, giving information harmful to German interests, giving accommodation to enemy agents, listening to foreign radio broadcasts, communicating with war prisoners, ridiculing or criticizing the government of Vidkun Quisling, failing to surrender hostile propaganda material which may fall into their hands, hiding war materials or possessing explosives.

The prchibition against leaving or entering the country obviously was designed to discourage the flight of Norwegians to England or Sweden and to exclude hostile agents.

A dispatch from Stockholm to the National Zeitung of Basel said the Germans are becoming increasingly impatient with Quisling's inability to win whole-hearted co-operation of Norwegians. It was stated he has been commanded to suppress ridicale of his Nazi Samling Party and to double party membership. Quisling consequently ordered each member to recruit another by the end of the year. His commissioner of public enlightenment and public culture, Gudbrand Lunde, was on a membership drive when he was killed in an automobile accident on October 26.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—The Government today began its attempt to link the activities of Herbert Hans Haupt, one of the six Nazi Previous testimony was that money of this denomination was carried by the saboteurs to aid their plans of destruction in the United States.

Eggert, who said he was born in Germany, testified the elder Haupt handed him the $900 in the back room of a tavern. He quoted Haupt

Allied Officers' Club To Open Next Sunday In Burlington Hotel

Space Donated Through Akers Group's Efforts; Many Services Planned

Establishment of the officers' club for the United Nations at the Burlngton Hotel, to be opened next Sunday, was announced yesterday by Floyd D. Akers, chairman of the War Hospitality Committee, Civilian Mobilization Committee of the District of Columbia.

"Up to the present time," Mr directed to establishing social and Sigma Xi Club to Meet recreational services for the noncommissioned men. We are now supplying a badly needed service by ogy and psychiatry at Catholic Uniestablishing the Officers' Service Club versity, will speak on "The Modfor the United Nations. This club ern Theory of Emotions" at a meetis being made possible by the most ing of the Sigma Xi Club of the generous assistance and co-operation university Wednesday evening in of the management of the Burling- the chemistry laboratory.

Mr. Akers, in announcing appointment of Mrs. Robert Low Bacon as chairman of the Club Committee, said this group has selected "one of Washington's most capable and energetic organizers." Recreation Services, Inc., the operating agency for the War Hospitality Committee, will conduct the club; A. C. Moses, owner of the Burlington Hotel, will donate the space, and Community War Fund will supply the money. There is no membership charge. All officers of the United Nations are eligible to enjoy the facilities of the club without cost. Many Services Planned.

Mrs. Bacon, who was present with Chairman Akers at a press conference, said the club will furnish "advisory services to officers on housing, theater tickets, sightseeing, travel, stationery, secretarial service, dances, home hospitality and any other officers' needs brought to the attention of the committee.' It was explained that the services rendered at the club will not duplicate the work being done by other agencies in Washington; however, the committee is co-operating and will continue to co-operate with all agencies aiding commissioned officers here. The staff will be selected carefully and only trained volunteers approved by the Civilian Defense Volunteer Bureau will be accepted by the committee, it was said. Mrs. Bacon expects to have at least five volunteers on duty from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Army Censorship School To Be Opened Tomorrow

Newest of the Army administration schools, a school for military censorship, will open officially tomorrow at Fort Washington, Md., when the first group of students re-ports to Col. Herbert C. Holdridge, director of training, Army Administration Schools. The students will receive an intensive course in the methods of military censorship and will be ordered to duty with the censorship branch of military intelligence on graduation.

Under present plans of the War Department, the entire student body of the new school will be recruited from the Army Specialist Corps.

Heavy Call for Women In Production Skills Fills Up Classes

Form 80 to 90 Per Cent In Defense Training Program in District

Only seven weeks ago the District schools admitted women for the first ime to their national defense training classes at the Old Harbor garage. Now 80 and 90 per cent of all six types of training classes are women and the percentage is creeping up all the time.

"But even with the number of trained women we are turning out, the industrial demand for them is so great I wonder if we can fill it all," said William D. Wallace, superintendent of the national defense training program for the District. The same number of men still report for the classes in machine shop, radio maintenance, mechanical topographical and statistical drafting, and aircraft and arc welding. But the demand Mr. Wallace is getting from the Navy Yard and private industrial plants is for women.

Want Draft Insurance. "They want workers who won't be drafted," he explained. The garage, located at Ninth and H streets S.W., takes about 600 students a day in three shifts, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., 4 p.m. to midnight, and a special short shift from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. for students employed full time during the day. Starting tomorrow, 250 automobile mechanics will be added to this daily total as they study sheet metal, welding and radio to turn themselves into aircraft mechanics.

"There are no women in the first group," said Mr. Wallace, "but women are being recruited for the to relax its rigid ban against mar- papers are severely graded. next class." He expects classes of riage to men in the armed services. 600 automobile mechanics to be training as aircraft mechanics by January 1. The mechanics will guardsmen or marines, but they work three days a week and then cannot accompany a Navy man to study three days a week, paid dur-ing the entire period by aircraft building concerns. The course has marry while awaiting training or been set up at the request of the Air Service Command.

About 35 women are starting to study machine shop tomorrow, to centers for 2,800 students by Noreplace 35 who finished their training in the garage last week and date for the Mount Holyoke Colare now employed. As each student leaves the 200-hour course for a job, a new one is called from the waiting list of 1,200 applicants. Eighteen enlisted WAVES in courses for yeomap workers were dispatched to the map service of the Army last week and 18 more will take their places later this week from lists compiled by the Civil Service Commission. About 180 map workers were trained during the summer months.

Women Found Accurate. Ray, superintendent of the welding shop at the garage, is that "women are faster and more accurate work-and they take a real interest in what you teach them.' Men students, on the other hand, said Mr. Ray, are apt to go at the whole proposition in an "experimental" way. They don't believe much of what they are told about welding until they "see for themselves" and this slows up the learn-

About 35 per cent of the welders are women, a lower figure than in other shops because the heavier arc welding is limited to men. The number of women learing aircraft welding, however, is expected to jump to 50 per cent in the next few now, according to Lawson J. Cantrell, assistant superintendent in charge of vocational schools, under whom the national defense training program is placed. More courses may be added in the near future, he said, raising the total of $319,000 already being spent to train workers there. Last year only $159,000 was required to fulfill the demands of Government and industry, but this year they are requesting establishment of additional classes and hours. "There's a war to win," explained Miss Emma Griebel of 27 Wyoming avenue, as she took off her the heavy welding headgear to explain why she is studying the trade.

Mrs. Mary Bissonnette of 1400 Twentylfifth street S.E. is training to be a machinist at the Navy Yard because her husband is doing his bit in the Army Air Forces. Mrs. Mildred Bozzi of 215 First street N.E. is learning to run a lathe because her husband is contributing as a United States marine. Pretty Betty Lee, 18, of Camp

Borings, Md., is working in the machine shop because she thought school books too "indirect" a method of war work. Mrs. Esther Perry. 4427 Potomac avenue N.W., is proud of the fact that Albert Schmidt, director of the machine shop, gave her the hardest job he had around last

"You're the only one who can handle this," he said, and Mrs. Perry rolled up her sleeves and went to work with pride. Much of the work done by the trainees goes directly into an airplane or machine manufactured by private industry. Some of the bearings made at the garage go direct to the Navy Yard.

RESIDENTS OF INDIAN SPRING ESTATES PREFER THE STAR

*WHEREVER YOU find home owners in the Capital area, there you'll find a preference for The Star. And the residents of Indian Spring Estates, in Maryland, are no exception.

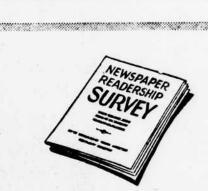

For a recent survey, covering every home in this attractive community, dis-closes that more than seven out of ten homes take both The Evening Star and The Sunday Star. Where only one daily newspaper is read regularly, five times as many read The Star as any other newspaper. And the preference for Thè Sunday Star, as the only Sunday paper, is nearly three times that of any other.

Accurate Reflection

These findings are significant because they are typical. Although Indian Spring Estates is not a large community, its residents are largely the same type of people who make up the great body of home owners throughout the Capital area—and their preferences are an accurate reflection of the preferences of the others.

To them, as to thousands of other discriminating people, The Star has become a daily part of their home life ... and thus affords reputable merchants and business houses the most direct and acceptable means of reaching ... with honest advertising ... this great metropolitan market.

A Recent Survey Shows Readers Prefer The Star Nearly Two to One

The following facts are taken from a recent survey to determine reader preference of Washington newspapers. In Indian Spring Estates, Maryland, all of the 210 homes were canvassed. Of them 12 were vacant or refused, but 198 reported. Of that number the following take

District OCD Receives Annual Reports From Eight More Areas

Eight Other Committees Still Fail to File Activity Stories

Civilian defense committees which failed to make the annual report requested by the local Office of Civilian Defense had narrowed down to eight last night.

Publication of the official report prepared by OCD last week with 16 gaps in the area organization chart brought immediate protests from a few of the committees which had failed to report and resulted in seven full stories of committee activities during the past year, and one incomplete report.

Two of the eight areas making no report, OCD said, have no chairmen. They are North Cleveland Park and North Randall. The remaining areas which failed to respond to repeated requests from OCD or to the unexplained gap in the chart beside the name of their area are Benning, Brentwood, Congress Heights, Ivy City, Kingman Park, Lincoln Park, Mid-City and North Cleveland Park. Kenilworth turned in an incomplete

In a more complete report than was called for on the questionnaire, John S. Farquhar, West End chairman, pointed out that his committee, organized October 25, 1941, determined the boundary lines of the area and made a census of the area as a basis for outlining zone and sector boundaries and determining in which apartment houses warden services should be established. It also recruited a protective force that now numbers 1,700 men and women wardens, established housing and feeding units, demolition crews and litter squads. It started soliciting funds in September and had raised $3,100 of its $10,000 budget by the time the report was made. Incidentally, from the date of organization to April when a motion picture exhibition brought some funds into the area treasury, expenses were being met by wardens and committee members themselves.

West End called particular attention to its warden force which served during the Statler Hotel fire, at the Water Gate concerts and on 24-hour duty during the recent flood. Warden services, in addition to their regular duties, have included rescuing a man from drowing, administering first aid and providing emergency feeding and housing. Nurse Training to Be Speeded To Meet Needs of Wartime

Most Drastic Changes in Curriculum Since World War Expected This Week

(No. 8 of a Series.) By PAT JONES.

Agitation for nurses' training schools to fit their curricula better to wartime conditions as a relief to the nursing service shortage may culminate this week in the most drastic program of action along this line since the emergency of the first World War.

No matter how much the nursing course is shortened, medical interests realize no immediate benefit can of tablecloth and the candlepower crushed beneath the wheel of a result. It is anticipated that among of lamps supplied in nurses' quartruck yesterday afternoon opposite the changes will be a reduction of ters. the period of training from 36 to 30 months and a relaxation of rules to give students with college background credit for the preparation they already have received. The earliest, however, that recruits brought in by these measures can complete their training and be released for service will be from 24 to 28 months. But the program looks to the future as well as to the immediate emergency. The Veterans' Administration soon will need double its staff of nurses to take care of wounded sent back from the war. And as another need in a post-war world, public health nurses must be increased to meet the demands of a changing population and of rehabilitated families of returning sol-

1. Scarcity of students.

2. Scarcity of instructive person-3. Scarcity of housing facilities These three scarcities have combined to make an expanded training program difficult, no matter how much the study course is shortened and rules are relaxed. Last fall the Medical Society urged study of a proposal for reopening discontinued nursing schools and expansion of hose already in existence. An Office of Civilian Defense committee, considering a plan to reopen the nurses' schools of five hospitals as training centers for practical nurses," abandoned the dea as impractical in view of the shortage of help in all fields and the wage differential between private duty and Government nursing help. All to Increase Enrollment.

The committee appointed by Commissioner Guy Mason to study the nospital situation reported that all of the present schools could and would materially increase their encollment of student nurses provided scholarship funds, adequate housing facilities and adequate transportation facilities were made avail-As late as September 23 Surgeon

General Thomas Parron, speaking over the National Radio Forum sponsored by The Star, warned that only by the intensive training of thousands of young women every year will we be able to carry out the long-range nursing program which the country needs." He added that Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt in June had recommended to Congress that nursing schools be given financial help and Four colored men, armed with that Congress, in return, had approknives, late last night scooped $30 priated $1,250,000 to train nurses for national defense.

But there the matter hangs. Hospital superintendents invited to take gram last week explained that they were unable to get students. One of them reported that his hospital had opened a new class the week before-with only 37 students, instead of the 50 to 60 desired. Classroom Delay Assailed.

From the floor of the meeting came an exchange of opinion and criticism. Dr. Thomas E. PUC Asked to Rule On Petition to Reopen Entire Gas Rate Case

Henderson Also Urges Delay in Putting Sept. 1 Increase Into Effect

The Public Utilities Commission will be asked tomorrow to rule immediately on a petition filed yesterday by Price Administrator Leon Henderson requesting that the entire case involving a recent rate increase for the Washington Gas Light Co. be thrown open again during the re-hearing which is to begin at 10 a.m. tomorrow.

Mr. Henderson's petition also asked the PUC delay its order putting the rate increases into effect as of September 1 until after the commissioners have reconsidered their decision in the light of new testimony to be presented.

Filed in Byrnes' Behalf.

The petition was filed by the price administrator in behalf of James F. Byrnes, director of economic stabilization. During earlier hearings, Harry Booth, utilities counsel for the Office of Price Administration, contended that the rate increase, under the "sliding scale" formula, would be

The OPA chief's petition charged that the PUC's order of October 23, re-opening the case, "illegally restricts the right of intervention by the director of economic stabilization, and that it unnecessarily restricts the type of evidence which may be received at the further hearings to be held in this matter."

The commission's order re-opened the hearings to permit the submission of evidence "relating to the inflationary effect, if any, of the increase in (gas) rates." An increase in gas rates amounting to about $200,00 a year or an average of 3 cents a month for each consumer was approved by the PUC on October 13 after lengthy hearings. The gas company had asked that increases of about $400,000 be placed in effect under the operation Trainmen Speed Work

Decision on Charter Holds Chief Interest In Tuesday Voting

Montgomery County Issue Also Watched In Other Areas

By ALEXANDER PRESTON.

Overshadowing all other issues in Montgomery County, the long-debated charter question will be decided-at least temporarily-by outright rejection or tentative acceptance of a home rule plan at Tuesday's election.

Acting under a constitutional provision adopted in 1915, the referendum has aroused State-wide interest because Montgomery is the first county in Maryland to avail itself of the authority since Baltimore County defeated a charter plan shortly after the World War.

If a majority of the qualified voters oppose the plan for a study of a proposed home rule government, the issue will be killed-unless residents decide to revive a similar question at some future time.

No Certainty in Favorable Vote. On the other hand, a majority vote in favor of a charter board would not make changes in county government a certainty. The board would complete its new proposal within six months after the election. For the next 18 months residents could debate the plan and in November, 1944, they would decide whether to retain the present county commissioner system or switch to the new proposal.

In a radio address last night, J. Bond Smith, general counsel to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, revealed that Alfred Bettman of Cincinnati, nationally known zoning authority, who recetly recommended postponement of action on the charter issue, will be paid by the com-mission for rendering his opinion.

Nurse Training to Be Speeded To Meet Needs of Wartime

ters.

By PAT JONES.

Agitation for nurses' training schools to fit their curricula better to wartime conditions as a relief to the nursing service shortage may culminate this week in the most drastic program of action along this line since the emergency of the first World War.

No matter how much the nursing course is shortened, medical interresult. The earliest, however, that recruits brought in by these measures can complete their training and be released for service will be from 24 to

> But the program looks to the future as well as to the immediate emergency. The Veterans' Administration soon will need double its staff of nurses to take care of wounded sent back from the war. And as another need in a post-war world, public health nurses must be increased to meet the demands of a changing population and of rehabilitated families of returning sol-

Schools Face Three Problems. As they prepare to co-operate in a tepped-up program, the nursing chools are faced with three prob-

1. Scarcity of students. 2. Scarcity of instructive person-

Scarcity of housing facilities. These three scarcities have comined to make an expanded trainng program difficult, no matter how much the study course is shortened and rules are relaxed. Last fall the Medical Society urged study of a proposal for reopening discontinued nursing schools and expansion of hose already in existence.

An Office of Civilian Defense committee, considering a plan to reopen the nurses' schools of five nospitals as training centers for 'practical nurses," abandoned the dea as impractical in view of the shortage of help in all fields and the wage differential between private duty and Government nursing help.

All to Increase Enrollment. The committee appointed by Commissioner Guy Mason to study the hospital situation reported that all of the present schools could and would materially increase their enrollment of student nurses provided scholarship funds, adequate housing facilities and adequate transportation facilities were made avail-

As late as September 23 Surgeon General Thomas Parron, speaking over the National Radio Forum sponsored by The Star, warned that only by the intensive training of Silver Spring Theater thousands of young women every year will we be able to carry out To Hold Scrap Rally the long-range nursing program which the country needs." He added that Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt in June had recommended to Congress that nursing schools be given financial help and that Congress, in return, had appropriated $1,250,000 to train nurses for national defense.

But there the matter hangs. Hosgram last week explained that they were unable to get students. One of them reported that his hospital had opened a new class the week before-with only 37 students, instead of the 50 to 60 desired.

Classroom Delay Assailed. From the floor of the meeting came an exchange of opinion and criticism. Dr. Thomas E. Neal attacked the practice of devoting the first six months of nursing training to classroom work. Citing the present emergency, he termed such practice a "crime" and followed this up with a charge that such training "isn't worth a nickel," that is occupied by a tenant.

Maryland Contests Hold Chief Interest In Nearby Elections

O'Conor-McKeldin and Lee-Beall Races Watched; Virginia Voters Listless

By J. B. ZATMAN. Maryland contests, including races for the governorship and congressional and local offices held the as voters on both sides of the Potomac prepared to go to the pools

In Virginia there was apparent a continued lack of interest in the balloting. Few real contests have marked the campaign.

Chief attention in those sections of Maryland near the District is centered in the rivalry of Col. E. Brooke Lee, Democrat, of Silver Spring, and J. Glenn Beall, Republican, of Frostburg, for the 6th District House seat.

And in nearby sections of the Free State, as throughout its extent, the contest between Gov. O'Conor and his Republican opponent, Theodore R. McKeldin, Republican, is being closely watched. The Governor fired one of the final broadsides of his campaign last night in a speech at a Democratic rally in Hyattsville. Mr. McKeldin is concluding his campaign in Baltimore.

Green Indorses Sasscer. In the 5th Maryland district, resentative Sasscer, Democratic incumbent, received added support or re-election by William Green, against John N. Torvestad, Republican Mayor of Colmar Manor, whom he defeated two years ago. Both Mr. Sasscer and Represent ative Smith, Democrat, of the 8th Virginia district, are expected to be re-elected. Mr. Smith is running against Harrie Byrd Conlin, Arlington certified public accountant, the Republican nominee, who last night issued a statement saying he was "very optimistic as to the outcome in the 8th district."

Maryland polls will be open from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. while those in Virginia will observe the "sunrise to sunset" law with 7:36 a.m. and 6:06 p.m. as the hours.

The only danger of Mr. Smith's defeat lies in such over-confidence by Democrats that they would fail to turn out at the polls while Republicans mustered every bit of strength within the GOP and among the so-called anti-Smith Mr. Conlin's nomination at the Republican convention in Culpeper came as a surprise to many. Party leaders in scattered sections of the district, opposed the nomination of a Republican candidate against Mr. Smith before the convention, and at Culpeper Mr. Conlin's indorsement was made "unanimous" only after the convention's Nominating Committee was overridden in a report which recommended against naming an opponent for Mr. Smith. No Local Elections.

There are no local elections slated for nearby Virginia communities. A highlight of the nearby Mary land races is that Walter P. Johnbaseball's "Big Train," is the only Republican seeking election to the Board of Montgomery County Commissioners. He now holds that office and the Democrats have entered W. Lawson King against him in the 2nd district.

In a joint press conference with FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover after the exercises, Gen. Benitez said that he was impressed by the way in which the United States had mobilized for war since his visit to this country about a year ago.

He declared he had been greatly impressed by the FBI organization. "The FBI gives a great demonstration of discipline, which gives me great satisfaction as a soldier" he

Decision on Charter Holds Chief Interest In Tuesday Voting

Montgomery County Issue Also Watched In Other Areas

By ALEXANDER PRESTON. Overshadowing all other issues in Montgomery County, the long-debated charter question will be decided-at least temporarily-by outright rejection or tentative acceptance of a home rule plan at Tuesday's election.

Acting under a constitutional provision adopted in 1915, the referendum has aroused State-wide interest because Montgomery is the first county in Maryland to avail itself of board or adoption of a charter form the authority since Baltimore County defeated a charter plan shortly after the World War.

If a majority of the qualified These five candidates are O. W. Anvoters oppose the plan for a study of derson, Mr. Brault, Mr. Cantrel, Mr. a proposed home rule government, Smith and Mr. Whiteford. the issue will be killed-unless residents decide to revive a similar question at some future time.

No Certainty in Favorable Vote. On the other hand, a majority vote in favor of a charter board would not make changes in county government a certainty. The board would complete its new proposal within six months after the election. For the next 18 months residents could debate the plan and in November, 1944, they would decide whether to retain the present county commissioner system or switch to the new proposal.

Col. Lee, commanding officer of battalion of the Maryland State Guard largely resident in his district, will meet a test against a lively campaigner. Mr. Beall has been active and his supporters reportedly are counting on some Democratic strength from friends of Representative Byron, the incumbent, who was eased into the position of not seeking re-election by

Col. Lee's organization. Ever since Mr. Smith's unexpected landslide victory in the Democratic primary over Emmett C. Davison, who marshalled considerable labor support, the Smith forces have paid little serious attention to the coming election. The only danger of Mr. Smith's defeat lies in such over-confidence by Democrats that they would fail to turn out at the polls while Republicans mustered every bit of strength within the GOP and among the so-called anti-Smith Democrats.

Mr. Conlin's nomination at the Republican convention in Culpeper came as a surprise to many. Party leaders in scattered sections of the district, opposed the nomination of a Republican candidate against Mr. Smith before the convention, and at Culpeper Mr. Conlin's indorsement was made "unanimous" only after the convention's Nominating Committee was overridden in a report which recommended against naming an opponent for Mr. Smith.

Secretary Reported As Feeling WPB Has Delayed Program

The controversy over administration of the Nation's war-time food program was in the hands of President Roosevelt and Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes for settlement last night, while Secretary of Agriculture Wickard reportedly was seeking control over the whole food program, including rationing.

Mr. Wickard was reported in sharp disagreement with War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson over establishment of an administrative office for foods. Mr. Nelson has recommended to the Presiunder WPB headed by an administrator with broad powers along lines of those given Rubber Director Dr. Kramer Named Fellow ines of those given Rubber Director William M. Jeffers. Only production of food would remain with the Of Library of Congress Agriculture Department.

Mr. Wickard, represented as highly critical of the way WPB has so far handled its part of the food program, was said to believe that creation of a new office to handle food would only cause delay. He con-tends, it was understood, that his department has the experience and machinery to best handle the situation if given the power to do so.

Agree on Centralization. It was clear that the Secretary and Mr. Nelson were in agreement tinue for the usual term of one on one point, that present division of authority over food problems was of American libraries in general interfering seriously with production, processing and distribution of ticular in the field of materials imfood. Agriculture officials charge that WPB delay in acting on recom-mendations of the Requirements Committee for food distribution plans and for allocation of materials to produce and process foods has adversely affected the entire food program. WPB has taken from 15 to 98 days to act on the various committee proposals, some of which have been of vital concern to the war food program, it was said.

Stephen T. Early, White House secretary, said yesterday that President Roosevelt has under consideration proposals for handling the food problem. He said the President will seek the advice of Mr. Byrnes before a decision is made.

Informed quarters expressed the belief that Mr. Byrnes, with Presidential approval, probably would have the job of resolving the differences between Secretary Wickard and Mr. Nelson. One source said the plan finally adopted would not be that advocated by either official, though it would provide for centralized food control.

Dr. Sidney Kramer has been appointed Resident Fellow of the Library of Congress in War Bibliography, Librarian Archibald Mac-Leish announced last night.

An authority on the subject, Dr. Kramer came to Washington from the University of Illinois. Previously he had been librarian of the Aircraft War Production Council in Los Angeles. Voters Attention!

Lead Editorial reprinted from the Baltimore Sun of Saturday, October 31, 1942.

Re-elect Judge Delaplaine

In only one of the judicial circuits of Maryland is there a contest for the office of chief judge. In the Sixth circuit which includes Frederick and Montgomery counties, the sitting judge, Edward S. Delaplaine, is challenged by Mr. W. Clinton McSherry. The people of that circuit will do their full duty to the State and to themselves if they see to it that Judge Delaplaine is re-elected.

Judge Delaplaine is nominally a Republican, whereas his opponent, Mr. McSherry, is a registered Democrat. This naturally gives Mr. McSherry a political advantage. Only if the voters stop and think can this advantage be overcome. If they do stop and think here are some aspects of the situation which they might consider.

But that is not all that has happened. His abilities, somewhat undisclosed when he took the post, have gradually been uncovered. He turns out to be fine judicial material. Not only is he industrious; he is also wise. He has the capacity to think through the knotty questions which are laid before the court. Still aloof and shy, he is recognized, by his colleagues and by the lawyers practicing before the court, as a dignified and conscientious judge.

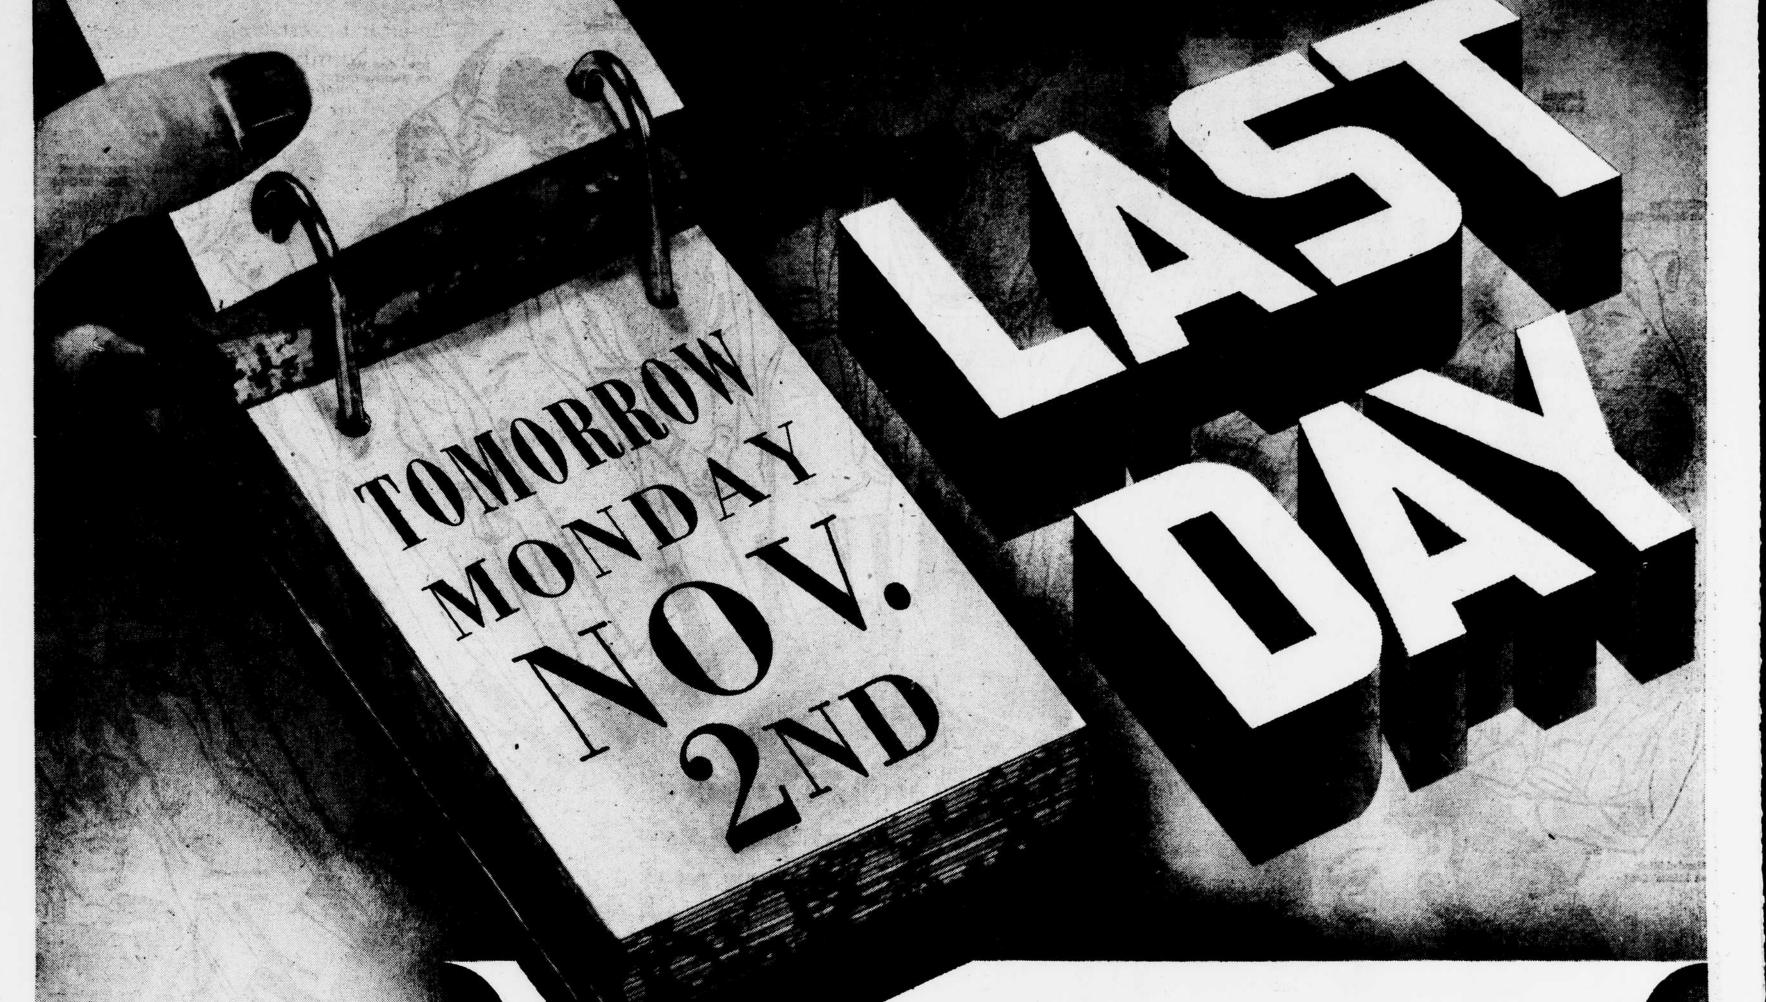

It may be too late to save Judge Delaplaine for the State. But we hope that in the next two days the people of the circuit will think the matter through carefully and conclude, as we have concluded, that Judge Delaplaine must be kept in

Montgomery County

In the Sixth Judicial Circuit

Judge Delaplaine is one of the relatively young men on the Court of Appeals. Retiring and somewhat bookish by temperament, he found it somewhat difficult at first to adjust himslf to the tempo of the court's work. However, in a surprisingly short time he made the adjustment. Today he is carrying at least his full share of the burden.

His sense of the dignity of his office has made it impossible for him to campaign for re-election. Unfortunately, his opponent has not exercised such restraint. Thus there is a grave danger that Maryland will lose an excellent public servant.

American Problem in Solomons Traced Back to Global Strategy

Japanese Triumph in Pacific Area Would Overshadow Gains Made by Allies in North Africa And Block Opening of a Real Second Front

By Constantine Brown.

American aviation and tanks, has opened an offensive in North Africa against the forces of German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, and every one here hopes that it will be more than a local offensive and that the long months of preparation will yield the desired success.

Simultaneous with agreeable news from this front comes other news from the South Pacific, where the American defenders at the moment are struggling successfully against an enemy force which is determined to establish its hold in that area and thus wage a war of attrition against Australia and New Zealand.

If the question of personal heroism, skill and efficient command alone were involved we might look with confidence to the outcome of the Solomons battle. But besides these needed qualifications, in which the Japanese themselves are not deficient, there is the problem of enough surface ships, planes, manpower and particularly gasoline and oil supplies to enable us to run the machines which have so largely replaced the fighting ability of the individual soldier.

Rommel Army Mobile.

Egypt may be important; Africa itself eventually may become the area from which a second front against Hitler is started. But, unfortunately, it will require not weeks and months, but years before we can settle ourselves for such an operation in that area.

Hundreds of miles of desert land lie between the present front in Egypt and the principal Nazi bases at Tobruk and Bengasi. Marshal Rommel, who now is commanding the entire Axis force in the Mediterranean theater, can, with light sacrifice of war materiel and men, put a great distance between himself and the Allied forces should he find the impetus of attack too great. He has an extremely mobile army which can move back and forth with ease and rapidity as he has demonstrated in the past. Should his opponents progress too rapidly he could withdraw to his old bases and compel the Allies to extend their lines of communication as he did last year when he was hard pressed by the British under command of Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck.

To make Gen. Harold Alexander's present offensive really successful it appears necessary that an Allied force must land in West Africa somewhere between Casanecessary that the Allies gain complete mastery of the air in the Mediterranean area to check the flow of supplies to Marshal Rommel. All of which means an amphibious operation in West Africa and intense Mediterranean submarine and Both types of warfare require a strong force and the near future should disclose whether we have at our command a force sufficient in size for just such operations. The African front is full of possibilities, but it also is full of dangers.

Pacific Area Perilous. But while we are looking with a certain degree of optimism to Africa, the situation in the Pacific remains very dangerous. It is perilous for the United States and equally perilous for our Allies. Should the Japanese succeed in dislodging us from the islands which lie between the Solomons and New Zealand, and establish themselves with power there, the position of Australia and New Zealand would become at once in greater peril because our lines

China's position would be more grave since all hope of opening up adequate communications with the war materialproducing Western world would be sur-

Even the Russians would feel the consequences of such a United States defeat. The decision to attempt to recapture the Solomons and possibly add the New Hebridies and New Zealand has caused the Japanese to postpone all thoughts of an immediate attack on Siberia.

So it is that most qualified observers in Washington regard the Solomons battle as being of the utmost importance and they would compare the loss of islands in the Southwest Pacific with the tragic loss of Singapore and the Netherlands Indies. The Southwest Pacific would, of course, be closed to us and the last key which still is in our pocket might be in the pocket of the Japanese.

Atmosphere of Uncertainty.

While it is too early to say that we have won or lost that key no one knows yet what mistakes the enemy might make and what our actual strength is in the area-there is an atmosphere of uncertainty in responsible Washington quarters. No major operational blunders have yet been committed in the Solomons fighting. Even the tragic loss of the three cruisers—the Quincy, the Vincennes and the Astoria, the aircraft carrier Wasp and loss or damage to other units-is not the chief factor contributing to the gloom. The reason we are in such a precarious position in the South Pacific today must be traced back to our global strategy. We have dispersed our forces over the Seven Seas in much the same manner that rice is strewn over newlywedded couples

The commitments of a political-military nature which had been undertaken so light-heartedly earlier in the war are still hanging around our necks and make our movements difficult and clumsy. Although the military chieftains in Washington have much more freedom of action than a few months ago, this freedom still is restricted by commitments. The military can move within the framework of those commitments. That is to say, the general idea is defense in the Pacific and offense in the Atlantic. This strategy is predicated, of course, on the theory that Germans are our No. 1 enemies while the Japanese rank No. 2.

But even this theory of placing the Germans at the top of our list of enemies could be acceptable if we had the means of remaining on a solid defensive line in the Pacific. Also, it would have been acceptable had the Japanese confined their operations to the Far East. but, unfortunately, the Japs are not allowing us to remain on the defensive They are pushing their lines dangerously close to our home waters; strategically if not geographically. They plan to settle astride our lines of communication with Australia and New Zealand. To comply with the strategy of throwing the bulk of our war effort against the Nazis it would have been necessary for us first to assume the offensive in the Pacific. It would have been neces-

Gen. Henry Turns Out Army's Technicians

FORT KNOX, Ky.-In a little more than two years, an area on this post, the home of the Army's Armored Force, which was just a vast stretch of clay overgrown with blackberry bushes and weeds has become one of the world's greatest technical schools.

The school is housed in 500 buildings. It has a staff of more than 2,000 instructors. Each week it graduates more stu-

Gen. Henry arrived here July 25, 1940, to be commandant of the school. He had no officers, no staff, no buildings. Three months later he was assigned 5 officers and a enlisted men from Fort Benning. Under this plan a department of the school can start a group of students every six days, taking a new group into the first phase as the old group advances to the second phase, and can handle eight times as many students as under the old system.

Phase System Used.

A second advantage is that a man forced to be absent from classes for several days by illness or a call home can pick up his work where he left off by joining the new group in his phase.

A psychological advantage of the phase system is that the student is advanced from mastery of one simple thing to study of another simple aspect of ing thousands of tons of Allied shipping his work. He learns quickly and easily on a raiding cruise. The British an-

Lewis Seeks to Recapture Political Power Lost in 1940

CIO and AFL Leaders Fear Mine Worker Chief's Skill in Grasping at Opportunity for Aggrandizement

By Charles G. Ross.

L. Lewis has received from his United Mine Workers of America again poses the question: What is Mr. Lewis up to? The answer is still in the realm of speculation, but there can hardly be any doubt that Mr. Lewis is continuing his play for political power.

Mr. Lewis, who created the CIO, sees himself eclipsed today both by the AFL's "foolish" William Green, as he calls him, and by Philip Murray, whom he expected to be his yes-man in running the CIO after Mr. Lewis' retirement as president. Though he tossed $500,000 from the Mine Workers' treasury into the Democratic campaign fund in 1936, he is excluded from national political councils. With respect both to the high command of the labor movement and to national politics, Mr. Lewis is on the outside looking in, and he finds the position galling.

It is in terms of Mr. Lewis' burning ambition to come back that the proceedings of the recent biennial convention of the UMW at Oincinnati must

There were 2.800 delegates and only a handful voted at any point against the Lewis program. His domination was as complete and as easy as that of a national political administration over a convention packed with Federal officeholders. The parallel is close-corresponding to the politicians with a breadand-butter interest in retaining a given administration in power were the paid henchmen of Mr. Lewis, organizers named by him and holding their jobs at his sufferance.

Insured Against Slipup.

This is not to say that Mr. Lewis, with his great personal magnetism and his record of getting tangible benefits for the miners, would not have controlled the convention in any case. But the presence of his paid workers insured against any slipup. The Lewis machine was on the job to see that obeisance was done the boss without any embarrassing incidents and the machine did its job to perfection. There was never a chance for any of the dissident elements in the rank and file of the Mine Workers to register an effective protest. Mr. Lewis emerged with the new buildup he had sought.

As expected, the convention voted overwhelmingly to take the miners' unn out of the CIO. This action against what Mr. Lewis called the "miserable mediocrites of the CIO" made official a separation which occurred in fact last June, when the Executive Committee of the CIO declared the miners in arrears of their per capita dues to the CIO, and the Executive Committee of the miners blasted the CIO for non-payment of $1,-665,000 which the miners said was a debt to them and the CIO said was a gift.

The separation had been in the making, indeed, ever since Mr. Lewis and Mr. Murray, before Pearl Harbor, clashed over the foreign policies of the President. Browing bitterness, accentuated by Mr. Lewis' organizing drives through his catch-all district 50, marked the relations of the two leaders and the two organizations from that time. It is one of the milder characterizations of Mr. Lewis by CIO officers today that he is "a worse dictator than Tom Girdler ever was."

The miners' convention again gave Mr. Lewis what he wanted when it voted to extend the jurisdiction of the union to all groups of unorganized workers.

The new grant of power which John | This action was important to Mr. Lewis, but it was not so revolutionary as it sounds. Actually, Mr. Lewis for a long time has been using district 50, the secretary-treasurer of which is his daughter Kathryn, as he pleased. Formed originally to take in the workers in chemicals and coal by-products, district 50 already had gone into other fields, notably that of dairy farming on the ingenious theory that milk and coal byproducts are often competitive and hence form an economic link between the two industries. The convention simply validated all that Mr. Lewis had done and gave him the constitutional authority to go as far as he likes in "organizing the unorganized."

Intensified Efforts Indicated.

Mr. Lewis did not elaborate his statement at Cincinnati that "great segments of agricultural workers are knocking at the door of the UMW for assistance in becoming free and independent citizens," but he indicated to associates that he would intensify his efforts among the 3.000,000 dairy farmers and go after farmers in other lines. The convenient district 50 will continue to be the organizing agency.

Along with the formal OK on Mr. Lewis' past and prospective use of district 50 went a substantial increase in the funds at his disposal. The montly membership dues were raised from $1 to $1.50. Forty cents of the increase goes to the international office, which will thus receive for its "war chest" an addition of about $2,400,000 a year. The office now has a reported balance of $6,346,000.

Another resolution adopted by the convention gives Mr. Lewis and his executive board the authority to advance, postpone or change the date of future conventions, which the constitution had required should be held every two years. Under the amendment, Mr. Lewis may defer the holding of another convention as long as he likes. He indicated at the opening of the Cincinnati session that the miners might not meet again till after the war.

The question recurs: What is Mr. Lewis up to? He said at Cincinnati that he was not going out for workers in established unions, but the officers of the CIO, at least, take that statement with a large grain of salt. They are quite evidently afraid of Mr. Lewis as a possible raider, and apart from that they fear him vaguely as the potential organizer of social forces for his own aggrandizement. They know his personal charm, his skill in manipulation, the power of the argument used by his henchmen—that John L. may be wrong on this or that political issue, but, by heaven, he has got the workers more money and better conditions!

Fear Shared by AFL.

The fear of Mr. Lewis is shared by the general run of AFL leaders, though in their case it is perhaps less tinged with personal bitterness. It is the AFL on which Mr. Lewis impinges through the organizing activities of his brother Denny's United Construction Workers. The fact that Mr. Lewis is a friend of the conservative "Big Bill' Hutcheson, perennial head of the AFL Carpenters' Union, is often cited as a straw pointing to a reunion between Mr. Lewis and the AFL. There is no dependable sign, though, that any such reunion is in prospect. Mr.

NAZIS SWITCH FROM BIG TO LITTLE LIES

British Believe Honesty in News Is Best Counterpropaganda

By Paul K. Lee, Associated Press Staff Writer.

I ONDON.—The Nazis aren't telling | man report that regular reconnaissance one better, and fall into comic or easily such big lies as they used to, and in that curious fact British sources see proof that British counterpropaganda is effective.

In the unending battle of propaganda and news, the British have adopted the motto "Honesty is the best policy."

The Germans, they say, went on Hitler's "Mein Kampf" injunction that the bigger the lie the more readily it would

It was a long, hard pull for the British, nailing each lie, deflating each rumor, adhering to the often unsensational truth, but now, say quarters in a position to know, the work is bearing fruit.

Not that the Germans have given up lving altogether, but now the Axis propagandists who have had their ears batted down so often are resorting more and more to half truths, telling parts of the real story while still glossing over or skipping parts too unfavorable to the

"Tallest" Axis Stories.

At present the tallest Axis stories are directed at the Arab world and South Africa, but this gives even greater weight to the regular British policy of telling the truth in a dignified manner.

Rarely do the British resort to outright denials. Indirect treatment is considered far better, with facts treated positively rather than negatively. Here's how it works:

When the Germans said the King and Queen had fled to Canada to escape bombings, the British did not mention the subject; they merely broadcast what the King and Queen had done that day, which happened to have been receiving the United States Ambassador. Sufficient detail was supplied to make the story stand up beyond challenge. Somewhat nearer to denial, but still on the positive factual basis, was the case of the pocket battleship Admiral Scheer. The Germans announced the Scheer had returned to port after sink-disclosed the Scheer had been in a German port for more than two months past and was still there.

Quotation Technique. The technique of merely quoting the Axis' own declarations is deemed highly effective by the British, and was used in connection with the Dieppe raid. Lord Haw Haw said the British forces were such a tiny handful that they were hardly noticed; Goebbels and others called the attack a full-scale invasion that failed. The British carried both

German versions with dry comment to the general effect: "You boys ought to get together." Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels has proved highly quotable on other occasions-such as the time when he said many Germans were asking why, after all the victories in Russia, there were so many Russians left to fight. Goebbels went on to an involved explanation, calling the Russians fanatics and at the same time saying they fought on because they were hopeless and had only Bolshevism to face at home. The British had only to quote him with the proper inflection, and it wasn't a German propaganda broadcast any longer. Quite the contrary.

Exaggerate Own Losses. Of late the Germans are known to have exaggerated deliberately their own plane losses in raids on Britain, to try to convince the folks at home, under British bombs, that the British also were taking a big-scale battering.

Another German stunt is to reverse the figures of plane losses. If they lost 19 and the British lost 9, they make it 9 and 19, apparently hoping that surreptitious listeners in the occupied countries and in Germany - with their ears sammed to a whispering radio set, would think the British and German broadcasts were identical.

These tactics are met by keeping the British announcements as clear and unambiguous as is possible.

As for the Italians, they usually make disproved misstatements.

For example, when the Italians announced that the cruiser Phoebe had been sunk in Alexandria Harbor, the British gravely reported that the Italian high command had credited the Royal Navy with possessing the world's fastest cruiser, the Phoebe, which had arrived in New York the day before she was supposed to have been sunk in the Eastern Mediterranean.

"The Italians are an absolute gift," said one Briton who ought to know. "Sometimes it seems almost a shame to take advantage of them.

Britain's Own Efforts.

As for Britain's own efforts not of a strictly counterpropaganda nature, they too are based on factual presentation. As a matter of fact, the British do not like that word "propaganda." Almost every responsible source connected with the work is inclined to raise an eyebrow and remark. "Well, it isn't really propaganda in the accepted sense; it's news that we're interested in."

To Americans, the British method would seem dull as dishwater, but British sources who handle the programs declare positively it gets results in the long run where sensational treatment would fail or boomerang

"If we could win the war by stirring up France and others for three weeks, we'd do it," said one reliable sourse, "but it's not that kind of war, and having shot our bolt, then where would we be?" "It's our national character to tell the truth," said one high broadcasting official; "we make a conscientious effort to discard anything we consider might be untruthful."

The news goes out in 24 different languages and on a bewildering number of wavelengths. Seventy-six per cent of the whole British radio effort is listed as straightaway news.

The head of every language section is a news man, most of them newspaper veterans. Their work includes the chora of making sure that each news item is ocratic, than ever before.

The policy of safeguarding institutions of higher learning is even more pronounced in Great Britain during the present war. Although that country is now entering its fourth successive winter of hostilities, university enrollment is only about 25 per cent less than was the case in 1938-39. In many of our universities and colleges enrollment is down that much already, even before the draft has begun to operate on those

"Canada," says Dr. Charles Dollard, in a recent study of the war and the Canadian universities, "is still operating on the assumption that trained minds are a national resource and is still conscious of the fact that war presents problems which cannot be served with a slide rule."

With few, if any, exceptions the universities and colleges of the United States are making valiant effort to be of the greatest possible service during the national emergency.

In order to cut the undergraduate course from four years to three most of the colleges have gone on a basis of practically continuous operation. Teachers have not merely sacrificed their summer vacations but have assumed many extra duties, including much night work, with little or no additional compensation. The teaching profession, with an average remuneration slightly higher than that of domestic servants in Washington, is hit by inflation but is certainly not contributing to it. The faculties have also responded promptly to the Government's call for specialized personnel, not to mention the enlistments of younger professors. It is difficult to name a college in which less than 10 per cent of the faculty has not already been skimmed off for Govenment service. That resulting improvisations and adjustments have been made without lowering of standards is a tribute to an administration efficiency indicating that all the executive skill in the country is not concentrated in business-or in Government.

Will Continue to Function. The colleges have done so much, with so little fanfare, that some public recognition of their accomplishment would seem in order. Far from receiving compliments, however, the general impression seems to be that higher education will continue to function in the face of dwindling enrollment, disintegrating faculties, diminishing revenues and mounting costs. 'First Round'

Secretary of the Navy Knox has painted a brighter picture of the situation in and about the Solomon Islands than the combat reports of recent days had led the public to expect. Stating that there was "practically a lull" in the Solomons fighting, the Secretary continued: "I have no idea what the next move will be. Our air force and the Army Air Forces have been very active. There has been some good stiff land fighting. As a figure of speech, I would say that the first round is over and they are waiting for the second round to start."

While cautioning against unwarranted optimism, Secretary Knox made it clear that our heroic garrison on Guadalcanal had beaten back all Japanese assaults and still occupied "every inch of ground" they ever controlled. Furthermore, the waters about Guadalcanal were no longer dominated by the Japanese Navy, since most of their warships had retired to the northward. Lastly, supplies and reinforcements are reaching our garrison. That is especially encouraging, because it removes, or at least postpones, the danger that our defense might be overcome for lack of ammunition and aviation gasoline.

The larger aspects of the far-flung battle in the South Pacific, whereof Guadalcanal is only one sector, likewise appear favorable, though somewhat obscure. General MacArthur's headquarters in Australia reports a damaging raid on Japanese heavy naval units concentrated at their base of Buin in the Central Solomons, 360 miles north of Guadalcanal. This is merely the latest of a series of air attacks delivered by American and Australian flyers on the Japaneseheld island chain running clear back through the Solomons and New Britain to the main Japanese strongholds in the mandated islands. This continual hammering at the enemy's long line of communications undoubtedly handicaps his efforts to concentrate for a decisive blow at our footholds in the Southern Solomons. It emphasizes the basic fact that the Solomons and New Guinea theaters, though geographically far apart, are strategically integrated as organic parts of one battle front.

The most obscure phase of the fighting in the South Pacific is that in the stretch of open ocean which lies east of the Solomons and north of our bases in the New Hebrides. Last week heavy naval actions were fought in this area, and reports from Hawaii indicate that a big Japanese fleet, accompanied by troop ships, was moving southward through those waters, potentially threatening not only the New Hebrides, but other links in our line of communications across the Pacific from Hawaii to Australia. When asked about this situation, Secretary Knox said he knew of nothing which would confirm such reports, which were speculative in character. At any rate, the rival task forces which clashed last week off the Santa Cruz Islands, midway between the Solomons and the New Hebrides, are no longer in contact, the inference being that both have retired to their respective

Such is the over-all picture that can be gleaned from the official statements and communiques. It represents a temporary lull in an extremely complicated war of maneuver over a wide area. But the Japanese have clearly failed in their first major attempt to break down our defenses. Though they doubtless are regrouping their forces and repairing heavy losses, so is our side. Time is probably working more for us than for our opponents. Severe and prolonged fighting lies ahead. But we seem to have outpointed the enemy in the first round, and the omens are favorable.

Training Program Aided

The occupational training program which District school authorities have fostered for more than two years to fit men and women for war work will be greatly facilitated, with corresponding benefit to the Government, as a result of the ruling by Controller General Lindsay C. Warren making possible the employment of Federal workers as part-time instructors. The dual compensation law which, under certain conditions, prohibits payment of two Government salaries to an individual, heretofore has been | the last four hours compensable at | it shows that many Americans are regarded as a barrier to the use of dustry. That source of supply is partments, are on a forty-eight-hour after the war.

running low, however, and the future of the work was threatened until Mr. Warren ruled that the payment of teaching fees would not contravene the law. Skilled workmen from the Navy Yard and other establishments now will be available for this service. The local training program is part of a Nation-wide plan financed by Federal grants and administered by the War Manpower Commission. It was devised to meet the shortage of manpower in many fields of war activity, including the mechanical trades, radio and stenography, to cite some outstanding examples. With both day and night classes operating, approximately 8,500 trainees have completed courses here and current enrollment is heavy. It would have been most unfortunate had this undertaking suffered serious interference.

Marking Time

It has been ten days since Paul V. McNutt told the Senate Military Affairs Committee that public opinion and sound public policy "both dictate that we must not stop short of compulsion of labor and management when those who will not co-operate are blocking war production." At this stage, however, there is little reason to believe that we have made appreciable progress toward working out a formula for applying this compulsion. On the contrary, the outlook seems more confused than ever. After a conference with the President on Thursday, William Green, president of the AFL, and Philip Murray, president of the CIO, reiterated their opposition to "compulsory action and regimentation"at this time at least. Mr. Green said that "we left the meeting (with the President) with the understanding we would explore the situation more fully and completely to ascertain the facts." He also indicated that the President would not go forward with a compulsory manpower program until the labor group had studied it further, and Mr. Murray said that he was in accord with Mr. Green's views. At his press conference yesterday, however, Mr. Roosevelt seemed to place a somewhat different interpretation on his discussion with the labor leaders. The whole problem, he said, is in the study stage, and reports that he had decided that a national service act was unnecessary at present were untrue. The country, he said, is all right at this time so far as manpower is concerned, but this does not necessarily mean that the situation will be all right a few months from now if nothing is done about it. No one should imply, he added, that national service legislation necessarily would be delayed until the end of the year.

What all of this means is any man's guess, and it is doubtful whether any clear pattern of procedure will emerge in the near future. But there are two points which ought to be kept in mind.

One concerns the opposition, understood to have come from management groups as well as labor spokesmen to any form of regimentation or freezing of labor. Some of the specific objections which labor leaders have advanced to immediate compulsory action, such as the obvious lack of comprehensive planning by the Government to handle the manpower problem, are well founded. But at a time when all other elements of the national economy are being regimented and frozen, it is going to be difficult to sustain a valid reason for exception of any special group. And this is especially true while we continue to work an average less than fortythree hours a week and insist upon the maintenance of practices designed to spread work and "make"

work in times of unemployment. The other point has to do with the warning implicit in an address Thursday night by Grenville Clark, chief author of the first Selective

Mr. Clark expressed the conviction that we must have national service legislation to win the war. and that "we need it now, not at some later time after experimenting with half measures." It is pertinent to recall that the same arguments now being raised against compulsory labor legislation were raised against legislation for compulsory military service. Time has shown that these arguments, as applied to the need for compulsion in organizing an Army, were entirely specious. Time also will demonstrate the same thing with respect to the arguments now being made against compulsory service for production. The only real question is how many weeks and months will slip away before we realize that this is true.

Overtime Pay Bill

After hanging fire for months, the overtime bill for Federal employes has passed from the talking to the action stage, with approval by the Senate Civil Service Committee affording opportunity for a Senate vote on the legislation.

Providing time-and-one-half pay for hours in excess of forty in the classified service, the measure is designed primarily to benefit thousands of "white collar" employes who traditionally have gone uncompensated for extra work, and even now are on a schedule requiring from five to nine hours of overtime weekly. Under the Senate bill, the statutory work week of thirty-nine hours actually will become forty-four, with basis, so enactment would amount to a general pay raise.

The new measure is a compromise version of that originally introduced in the House with administration backing, granting a 10 per cent raise to certain postal employes for whom overtime payment is not practicable. The original bill was stymied by the demands for a straight pay increase for unions which did not stand to benefit by the overtime proposal, and while the later bill does not satisfy all objections, it offers such obvious benefits that its failure to meet the desires of everybody is not likely further to delay its passage.

In its present form, the legislation has been approved by administration spokesmen, and it is to be taken for granted, therefore, that the President is convinced that it does not run counter to the wage-stabilization program. In fact, representatives of Budget Bureau and Civil Service Commission contended at hearings that the bill would do much to check the high rate of personnel turnover, with consequent saving in recruiting costs.

The Story

Everybody has heard the story. It has become one of the immortal incidents of the Second World War. The date was September 29. A Nazi plane flew over a village in Southeast England and dropped a bomb on a council school. Three adults-the headmaster and his assistants-and 29 boys under 12 years of age were killed. One single trench was dug in the churchyard for the reception of the bodies. The Bishop of Chichester preached from the text: "Jesus called a little child unto Him and said: 'Whosoever shall offend one of these little ones, it were better for him that a millstone were hung about his neck and he were drowned in the depths of the

Everybody knows so much of the story. But there is a detail which has not been mentioned with sufficient emphasis. Searchers of the ruins of the school found among the rubble a book bearing the title: "The Deeds of Heroes." It was a volume unfamiliar to American readers, such a work as Henry Newbolt or John Buchan might have penned for the inspiration of young Britons of a time which strangely should be worse than their own. Turning its pages, a lad might find the continuity to which all English lads-and all their Yankee cousins—belong. Between its covers he reasonably might expect to meet St. Alban, the earliest martyr; King Arthur and the Knights of the Merry Men, Alfred the Great, the and rising. Black Prince and Richard the Lion-Hearted, Raleigh and Drake, Cromwell, Nelson and Wellington; Captain Cook in the Pacific and Clive and Havelock in India, Scott and Evans and Oates at the South Pole, Lawrence in Arabia and many, many other valorous souls. There should be girls and women there, also-Grace Darling and Florence Nightingale and Edith Cavell. Some of the heroes and heroines might be "just imaginary"—Robinson Crusoe, for example, and Sidney Carton, who went to do a "better thing" than he had done. . . . Everybody is familiar with the story in which all these noble and well-beloved characters take part. It is the chronicle of a race, and the timately related to it, grew out of it, still remain attached to it. Nor is there any doubt about the chapters which now are being written. One page for the council school in Southeast England, one for Egypt, one for the Solomons. Bind them together and the result is victory and survival and a cleaner world.

Everybody shares in that immortal story. It is the people-all of them, all the people of the civilized countries, all the people who toil and fight and suffer not for themselves but for their brothers—it is the heroes of that devoted sort that are destined to prevail. God is not mocked. The heavens declare not merely His glory. Each star-each risen spirit-testifies to His justice and His righteousness.

Debt Reduction

Department of Commerce figures, which reveal a marked decline in the volume of outstanding consumer debt, provide gratifying evidence that the American people are devoting part of their increased income to the liquidation of indebtedness. As one of the seven points in his campaign against inflation, the President last April called for greater individual savings and the repayment of Consumer short term debt, which reached a peak of $9,720,000,000 at the end of September, 1941, had declined to $7.102.000,000 by the end of July—a reduction of $2,618,000,000 during a period of ten months. In July, the volume of consumer debt dropped $450,000,000, or 6 per cent. This reduction included a drop of $225,000,000 in installment debt againt durable goods sales, and a decline of $140,000,000 in the volume of charge accounts. For the ten month period as a whole, installment sales debt showed the largest shrinkagefrom about $4,000,000,000 in September, 1941, to $2,256,000,000 in July.

This downward trend in consumer debt is a development of great importance. For it shows that much of the increased purchasing power created by war expenditures has been diverted into debt repayment, instead of being used as a lever to raise the level of prices, and by the same token the increased rate. Production Forges Ahead of Use

By Owen L. Scott.

The production of weapons produced by American industry is immense. That volume is greater today, by far, than the volume of arms production of any other nation at war.

As yet, however, this American war production is not having an effect at all comparable with its size. A trickle of American arms is reaching Russia, but this trickle is far from important. A slightly larger flow is going out to the Southwest Pacific. China is getting next to nothing. The British complain that the materials reaching England are not impressive in amount. There is a somewhat greater evidence of American equipment in Africa.

In that situation is one of the great mysteries of the war. The mystery concerns the disappearance of tanks, airplanes, guns, ammunition, ships and other war materials. Everybody knows that they are produced. Yet British, Russian, Chinese and even American officials complain that they are not showing up in quantity where the battles are being fought.

In the past, top-ranking Army and Navy officials have blamed the American people in explaining why American equipment was not playing a bigger role in the war. They insisted that industry and workers in industry were not doing the job that needed to be done. Official figures no longer bear out that contention. They disclose, instead, that any failure to bring to bear the weight of an immense quantity of war weapons must rest with the admirals and generals themselves, and with the policies that they formulate.

In 10 months of war this country's effort is measured in terms of $40,000,000,-000 of expenditures. Those expenditures today are running at the rate of $6,000,-000.000 a month or $72,000,000,000 a year. German Europe and Japan combined are setting no such record. Great Britain in three years of war has been able to make an effort measured in terms of less than $50,000,000,000.

Translated into actual weapons, the ecord is equally impressive. The official index of war weapon production shows that finished tanks, aircraft, ships and other materials are flowing out of factories at a rate four times as fast as in December of last year.

This country is producing nearly 5,000 airplanes each month, 60 per cent of them combat types. Germany produces less than 2,500 a month and Japan around 350. The British turn out about 2.000 planes each month. American tank production leads the world. The output of most types of guns is very large. In vehicles of military character no Nation even approaches the American production rate. We are turning out two or three merchant ships each day. The Table Round, Robin Hood and his rate of production of warships is large

In addition, the United States now possess the third largest Army in the world. Its Navy at above 1,000,000 men is the world's largest both in personnel and equipment. Everything about the American Army and Navy is de luxe. It equipment is new, its weapons of proved superiority, its men certainly the equal in ability and skill to any other.

Yet the weight of American warpower is not being brought to bear in any decisive manner. This leads to the question of why the immense American effort is not showing greater results on the actual battle fronts. Three answers are found.

The first answer appears to be that vast amounts of American equipment are being held inside the United States to equip American forces. Instead of sending great quantities of war mate rials to Russia, England, China or Africa to be used by the soldiers of this Nation's Allies, that equipment is kept at home against the time when American troops can be moved to the scene of action. The Russians, in particular, complain about this situation. The British and Chinese also complain, and there are important military officials inside this country who

The second answer appears to be that shipping still is a problem of much importance. Informed officials contend, even so, that if this country and Britain really utilized their shipping in the most effective manner, the problem of transport would not be the bottleneck that it is pictured. Production of cargo ships today is well ahead of sinkings so that this factor will be of diminishing importance. In fact, it takes five times as much ship space to transport American troops with equipment to battle fronts as it does to transport equipment alone for the use of troops of the nations already fighting.

Then the third answer to the question of what becomes of American equipment is found in its dispersion. American weapons are being spread all over the world, mostly in driblets. This is made necessary by a defensive strategy. Defense requires that equipment be piled up at all of the points at which an enemy might strike. It prevents equipment from being piled up at the one point from which an enemy can be struck.

It is important to know these things because the war is in a period of transition so far as the United States is con-

In the past, the generals and admirals conveniently could blame the 'American people for their defeats. They could argue that American industry and American workers failed to provide them with the quantity of arms that they require. In the future, the generals and admirals themselves will be held accountable for results. They have been provided with great · quantities of new equipment, greater quantities than are being provided for the generals and admirals of any other nation on earth.

Military decisions account for the way this material is being divided. Those decisions determine the proportion of new equipment that is retained inside the United States, the proportion that goes to American bases scattered at points all around the world and the proportion that goes to Russia and to other areas

If war output is broken up into enough segments, and then scattered around enough places, even a colossal total production will appear small in relation to the job to be done. That fact needs to be understood in appraising the results that are obtained from the immense q program. The staff, consequently, has been recruited from private inthat source of supply is

THE ENCOMPASSING WITNESSES

By the Right Rev. JAMES E. FREEMAN, D. D., LL. D., S. T. D., Bishop of Washington.

In the calendar of the Christian year | be that personalities of the past exercise no day has a deeper or more precious significance than All Saints Day, which falls on November 1. It was of this holy day that James Russell Lowell wrote: "One feast above all others

I, though no churchman, love to keep." Through the long centuries this day has been set apart to commemorate those "whom we have loved and lost awhile"; lost, not in the sense that they have ceased to be, but lost in that we no longer share their fellowship on

There is a passage in the Epistle to the Hebrews that suggests the prevailing influence and inspiration of those whose earthly pilgrimage is ended. In the 11th chapter of this remarkable Epistle, the writer speaks of those who have attained the rewards of service faithfully and heroically accomplished. After a graphic recital of their selfsacrificing lives, he sums up the record with these words: "Wherefore, seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us." In this eloquent passage he contends that living men are given freshened impulse to pursue with fidelity their course, confident of ultimate attainment, because of the prevailing presence of those who have gone before. It is a lofty conception and a true one. The strong influences that sustain us. the inspiration to a life of self-sacrifice and service is imparted to us by the cloud of witnesses who have earned the reward of service well done. As we contemplate the persuasive influences that shape and determine our course, we are compelled to reckon with personalities, past and present. It may a more dominant influence upon our thought and action than those who in the present closely touch our lives. Striking illustrations of this are disclosed in the lives of the good and the great, Lincoln's frequent references to the influence of his "angel mother" and President Wilson's turning ever to the spirit of his Scotch-Irish father, are notable instances. There are few men and women but hold in the treasury of memory certain strong and vibrant personalities who, long absent, still exercise their controlling influence over thought and action. While we yield to the strong and persuasive personalities that still companion with us, we are, nevertheless, subject to the "cloud of witnesses" that continue with us on our pilgrimage. There is deep truth in the lines of the poet:

"And ever near us, though unseen, The dear, immortal spirits tread; For all the boundless universe

Is life-there are no dead."

Tennyson ever felt the presence of Arthur Hallam and he expresses this in the stately verse of "In Memoriam." Sir Oliver Lodge, the great physicist, was confirmed in his belief that the spirit of his son Raymond, killed in battle, was with him throughout the latter years of his life.

Expressed in one form or another down through the long ages, men have cherished the comforting belief that they were "compassed about with a great cloud of witnesses."

And when the strife is fierce, the warfare long, Steals on the ear the distant triumph

And hearts are brave again and arms are strong. Alleluia.

Capital Sidelights

By Will P. Kennedy.

There is a band of loyal workers under the Capitol Dome-veterans in specialized service, a fraternity bound together during long years of giving their best efforts to their jobs and warmest friendship to their fellow workers. There is no group who will miss more the inspiration to right living engendered by the example of the late William Tyler Page, author of the American Creed and former clerk of the House, and his always friendly and cheering association. Some of these served as pallbearers at Mr. Page's funeral and signed an expression of their sentiments drafted by Mr. and Mrs. George H. Jones of Rockville, Md.:

"It is with deep sorrow I pen these my own kin, the Honorable William Tyler Page. I traveled the pathway of life with him in sickness and in health for more than 20 years. His very presence was an inspiration to lofty ideals for which he always stood. He spent many days at our home and we always looked with pleasure to his coming. He was a Christian in every respect, never retiring without reading the Holy Bible from which he gained his strength. He fought a good flight and on that memorable morning of October 20, he returned his sword to the scabbard and his spirit returned to the God who gave it, and with tender hands those of us who were selected as pallbearers laid him to rest in mother earth. We have the assurance that if we follow in his footsteps we will join him in the celestial city where the Supreme Architect of the universe presides. The following pallbearers join me in this." It was signed by Mr. and Mrs. Jones, John Andrews, H. Newlin Megill, William R. Spahr, James S. Gibson, Kenneth Jones, Kenneth Romney, sergeant at arms and Harry Pillen, cashier of the House.

Albert W. Woods, clerk to the House Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, calls attention to a historical error in the Biographical Directory of the American Congress—which is in a way a Bible for Congressional research. This directory states that Samuel Houston was a Representative from Tennessee, Senator from Texas, Governor of Tennessee, "first President of the Republic of Texas," and later Governor of the State of Texas. The historical fact is that not "Sam" Houston but David G. Burnet was elected first President when Texas became a republic on March 2, 1836. In September a general election was held and Sam Houston was made President. The people of Texas were in favor of annexation to the United States, but were refused admittance into the Union. The republic in 1844, for the second time asked for admittance to the Union and again was refused. In 1845 France and England offered to compel Mexico to acknowledge the independence of Texas. This caused a change of feeling in the United States and Congress passed a resolution admitting Texas into the Union. James Pinckney Henderson, who was appointed by Houston as attorney general of the Republic of Texas in 1836, and a year later Secretary of State, and who in 1838 visited Europe as a diplomatic representative of the republic, and in 1844 visited the United States as a special minister to negotiate annexation, was elected first Governor of the State of Texas in 1846. Congress presented him a vote of thanks and a sword for his bravery in action in the Mexican War. Upon the admission of Texas into the Union as a State, Houston was elected as a Democrat to the United States Senate. Henderson was appointed to the Senate, as Houston's colleague in 1857, as a States' Rights Democrat.

world, there never will be enough of them.

It is only when this immense American production is moved directly to battle fronts and put into action that its decisive effect can be felt.

The American people who now are producing war weapons at a rate such as no people ever before produced them can know that their part of the war job is being fulfilled. They have done in a few years to do. From this ti

Fifty Years Ago in The Star

Fifty years ago Washington, and the entire country, was thinking of little else but the national election a week dis-Election tant. Would Presi-Speculations dent Harrison be reelected or would Grover Cleveland win?

A peculiarity of this election was that no matter what the result, the next Chief Executive would know his way around the White House by virtue of having lived there for four years. The columns of The Star were jammed with 'quotes" from politicians all over the country, many confidently predicting the victory of one party or the other, but obviously whistling in the dark. Others, more frank, said the result was doubtful. The Star of November 1, 1892, in a dispatch from New York, reported: "Mr. Croker of Tammany Hall . . says the vote in New York may fall off as much as 7 per cent below registration (which would give the Republicans an edge). * * * Congressman O'Neill of Pennsylvania * * expresses confidence in Harrison's election, but says he is puzzled about New York. * * * Frank Richardson of the Baltimore Sun is here * * * and he says frankly he is unable to make up his mind what is going to be the result." And so on. yet the Democrats won easily enough at the showdown a week later.

New York was in a fog not only politically but physically, as is evidenced from an account in The New York Star of November 3, 1892: "When the fog which set-

Already the news of one collision in which a tugboat and a scow were both sunk and several boatmen narrowly escaped with their lives has been reported."

Quaint reading today is a paragraph published in The Star of November 2. 1892, in a report from Albu-

The disaster of the week was a huge fire in Milwaukee. Explanation of a Union Label Grave

By Frederic J. Haskin.

In the town of Bruceville, Tex., is cemetery which contains what is believed to be the only grave-marker in the United States that bears a union label. Certainly the monument, carved from Vermont marble, came from the only union quarry in this country. .

Back of these two things lies the story of perhaps hundreds of pioneers of the great Southwest who were making history unconsciously, but who were not recognized until years after their passing. The name of Martin Irons is typical, and the monument on which is chiseled the union label is a fitting tribute to his conception of the workingman's position. Furthermore, it gives evidence that a proper estimate cannot be placed on a man's work while he is in the midst of it.

To the University of Texas goes the credit for gathering material from sundry sources and recently publishing the history of the life and activities of Irons. His was one of the most dominant personalities to participate in a movement to improve the conditions of tens of thousands who often were denied the possibility of land ownership, and whose services frequently were exploited by individuals and corporations in the money-making days of the West and Southwest. The publication is an unbiased appraisal of possibly the most tragic figure in the annals of organized labor.

Martin Irons was born in Dundee.

Scotland, March 1, 1833. He came to the United States at the age of 14, landing in New York City, and became a machinist's apprentice. His sympathy for the lowest paid workers was deepened by experiences in his new surroundings. In his brief yet graphic autobiography written for Lippincott's Magazine, he recorded some of these experiences. Among other things, Irons saw and noted how needlewomen of New York begged from store to store for the privilege of making shirts at 5 cents each. He learned that after plying their needles all day the employer often would find fault with a few stitches and discount the pay. Seeing this and other instances of unfairness to the working classes, Irons set out to help improve their working conditions. Irons did not delay in carrying out his determination. Still an apprentice, he went among workers of all classes and learned of their difficulties by listening to their stories and personally investigating complaints. Upon obtaining proof that an injustice had been done a worker, Irons would employ an attorney and enter suit in behalf of the employe. This had widespread effects and resulted in one of the first steps not only in New York City, but in the entire Empire State, to give the working classes an adequate compensation for their services. The rights of workers in New York State are closely guarded by numerous State statutes, but few persons, if any, realize that the foundation for this was laid by a Scotch lad.

After Irons served his apprenticeship he migrated South, arriving first in New Orleans, to begin his career as a fullfledged machinist. After working a few years there he moved to Lexington, Ky., and married a native of his own land. Meantime, Irons had become a naturalized citizen and was gaining recognition as one of the best machinists of his time. Railroads were being built across the trackless plains of Missouri and Kansas, and his trade soon carried him to Sedalia, Mo., as a needed worker in the railroad shops. While there the strike of 1885 against pay cuts on the Gould lines was called and Irons rocketed to a career as a national figure, becoming the greatest leader among railroad workers of the Southwest. Although untried at first, he proved his ability in organization effort, demonstrated his knowledge of the social order that was in the making, and applied methods of procedure which startled his followers and dumbfounded his enemies.

A strike against general working conditions on the Gould railroad system, principally on the Missouri Pacific and Texas Pacific, had also long been threatening, and this finally resulted in a Congressional investigation in 1886. In this dispute Martin Irons was made chairman of the powerful Executive Committee of the Knights of Labor, the organization which brought about one of the greatest railroad strikes of the country. The order no longer exists, but its history is an inseparable part of the life of Irons, whose gravestone is as unique as his career.

Martin Irons was not a demagogue, He believed in the right of investor and management, but held unequivocally to the doctrine that in the final analysis labor produces all values, and that labor should be so regarded and treated. Yet with this clearcut philosophy, a philosophy which is now a part of the social. order which Irons endeavored to make, the great railroad strikes in which he played such a prominent part were lost, but not before there was an estimated loss of $900,000 to local business, & loss of $500,000 in wages to employes and an estimated property damage of $2,800,000. Meantime Harper's Weekly made the incidents a national affair by supporting the strikers, and Thomas Nast, the great American caricaturist, then employed by Harper's, and whose drawings of the money-bag head of Tweed and the Tammany tiger made him famous, profusely cartooned various phases of the controversies.

But despite all that Irons had done for labor, he was made an outcast by those for whom he labored. He was accused of being responsible for losingthe strikes. He not only had to leavethe community where he had worked inbehalf of labor, but in order to obtain employment elsewhere, had to change his name. Misfortunes fell upon himthick and fast, including the death of his wife.

America's Forty-Sixth Week of War (164th Week of World War II)

By Thomas R. Henry.

A week of lull in the storm leaves the world with rumbling threats of things to come.

On all the major fronts, possibly with the exception of Egypt, action of which reports could be obtained was indecisive and both sides seemed to be recuperating briefly and gathering strength for renewed fighting.

America's Navy Day observance stressed everywhere that this country has hardly started to fight, that bad news of the moment is certain to be followed with good tidings, but that the people must be prepared for a long, hard, terribly costly struggle. Rapidly disappearing is the blatant overconfidence of many Americans before Pearl Harbor and the equally unjustifled pessimism which came after what, in the long sweep of history, must seem rather minor set-backs.

Uncertainty still clouds the situation .. in the Solomons where American marines and soldiers have kept their tenuous hold on the Guadalcanal airfield in the face of repeated Japanese thrusts-perhaps from several directions.

News from the South Pacific is, at the best, days late. On Friday Secretary Knox announced that units of the Japanese fleet in the Solomons, supposedly in connection with landing operations, had been withdrawn and that Americans had not lost any of the ground originally held. Troops and supplies still are being landed on Guadalcanal.

Still he warned against undue optimism. Only the first phase of the battle is over, he said, and Warns Against nobody can guess what moves the enemy con-Optimism templates.

The latest news before Secretary Knox's statement was last Monday to the effect that the defenders of the airfield had thrown back three recent Japanese attacks, but in one of these the enemy had pierced their lines. The lost ground was regained, according to the communique, but the news was depressing in that it indicated the foe has remained on the offensive despite whatever American reinforcements it may have been possible to land on Guadal-

Officials here in closest connection with the fighting agree in describing it as quite serious. But Guadalcanal, they stress, is only the focal point of a far more extended action in which planes and ships over thousands of square miles are playing a major role. During the week, it was reported, Navy planes attacked Japanese warships 400 miles northeast of the disputed island-almost within reach of enemy air forces based on mandated islands. The final victory will depend on air and sea triumphs to an even greater extent than on the land

The Army contributed to this when bombers from New Guinea blasted the Japanese naval base of Bruin, on the southern tip of Bougainville, largest of the Solomons, which is entirely in the hands of the enemy. At least four ships 17 enemy craft were sunk or damaged in bomber attacks on the Japanese feeder base at Rabaul on New Britain Island. Most depressing American loss reported this week was that of the aircraft carrier Wasp, sunk on September 15 in the South Pacific Loss of Wosp by a Japanese subma-Depressing rine attack. It had been operating with a task force covering the movement of reenforcements and supplies to Guadalcanal, where a Japanese offensive already was creeping down from the north.

The last that had been heard of the Wasp was last winter when it was operating in the Mediterranean and played a conspicuous part in the defense of hard-pressed Malta. The full force of the Luftwaffe from nearby Sicily was concentrated on the little British island which at that time was the key to Egypt. Planes flown from the American carrier's deck enabled the Malta garrison to hold the position and did much to make possible the present Allied offensive in

At least once during the Mediterranean operations the ship was reported lost. When she finally went down the greater part of the crew were saved.

The Russian winter is at hand.

Blizzards sweep the Western Caucasus. Already, it is reported, hundreds of German soldiers have been frozen to death.

The snow and bitter cold came earlier than expected this year. The Axis finds itself not only condemned to the horrors of another winter in a bleak, scorched land, but with even its minimum objectives of the summer unrealized. Progress in the Caucasus above the Black Sea has been slowed down. When the major emphasis was shifted from the capture of Stalingrad a few weeks ago supposedly it was in order to concentrate on this southern campaign and finish it before the mountain roads be-

Stalingrad still holds out. The fighting is block by block, alley by alley. Every step the German positions advance is at almost unbelievable cost. On Thursday, for example, they pushed forward between 50 and 100 yards in North Stalingrad. The gain cost them 1,500 men and 11 tanks. Even at that, the force of the attack seemed diminishing. The last previous advance reported had been about 200 yards. And there is almost certainly a relief army advancing slowly from the northwest. Its progress is laborious, but it already has defeated one Rumanian army which tried to block

It will be grim for the Germans if winter catches them still not in possession of the ruined city. Germans Fear They know that the Red Attack Russians intend to take full advantage of the cold and storms. It is reported in Berlin that the unbeaten foe is massing "powerful shock armies" to break through the German line about 275 miles west of Moscow. These troops will have full air and tank support. Germans are trying to forestall the offensive by heavy bombardment of troop concentration centers and of the railroads leading out

Egyptian Front

After a summer of relative quiet, furious action was resumed on the vital Egyptian front where, it is quite possible, the next few days may see one of the

ons. But both have realized that sooner or later one of the crucial battles of the war must be fought in Egypt. The British have been reinforced with American supplies, planes and tanks. American observers have been impressed with the dour, puritanical Scotch commanding general, Gen. Mont-

There has been little information on the preparations of the fox of the desert, Marshal Irwin Rommel. Certainly he has been conserving his forces as far as possible. German divisions have been withdrawn from the lines and held in reserve while their places were taken by Italians. There has been a very considerable flow of men and supplies across the Mediterranean.

The enormous advantage of having taken the offensive in the new phase of the Egyptian campaign rests with the British. It was launched by the 8th Army, including some of the most famous of British regiments and forces of Australians, Free French, Greeks and Poles, with a full October moon making the desolate wastes around El Alamein bright

The Germans recoiled, as was to be expected, under the impact of this attack. But it was one of the most difficult and costly of all military operations, a direct frontal attack. Rommel is safe on either flank and has prepared a defense position which should be proof against any swift break through, and which can be forced only by slow and expensive siege methods. The Germans made one counterattack which got no-

Thus far the news has been good. But military men warn against too much optimism until the course of the fighting becomes clearer. Hitherto the war in North Africa has been a see-saw affair, with spectacular advances by one side or the other almost a matter of course. But now the conditions are far different than during the earlier campaigns. Then the southern flank of each army was bound only by the limitless expanse of desert and it always was possible to turn this flank or break through at some weak point in the extended line. Now it must be a head-on crash.

In Africa the Allies appear to have gained the all-important control of

It is still too early, experts claim, properly to evaluate this development. The Many "Reasons" Germans, it is Advanced known, have a considerable air force in Egypt, but here, as elsewhere, they have been carefully conserving it. Probably there have been no reinforcements. It may be that the Axis aircraft industry has been seriously crippled by the British attrition raids over Europe. It may be that production has been cut down temporarily for retooling.

Another possibility in the African situation is that Rommel's flyers are seriously short of gasoline, due to the constant air and submarine attacks on his lines of communication across the Mediterranean. The rate of sinking of supply ships has increased sharply during

A part of the same pattern of impending major developments in North Africa have been the heavy Axis attacks on Malta and the Allied bombardments of the Italian industrial centers, closest supply sources for the Germans.

Indian Front

India became the scene of the renewed American air activity as the season of heavy rains and storms, which have made arial operations extremely difficult, came

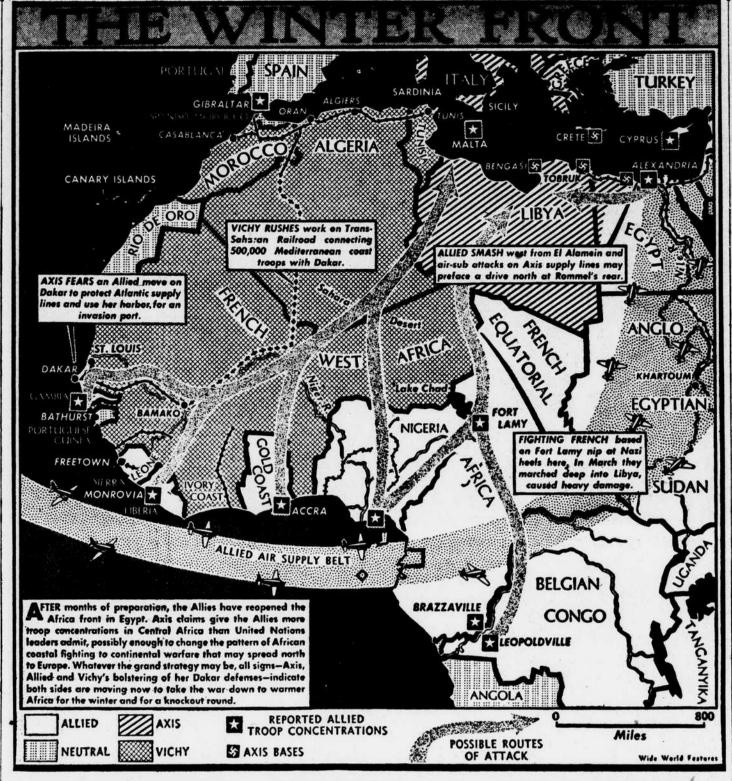

This activity, it is suspected, may be preliminary to an effort to recapture Burma, taken by the Japanese late last winter. It promises to be a difficult and costly job. The only good avenue of approach, according to informed British sources, would be across an essentially roadless, high mountain range from Assam. It is probable, however, that new means of communication have been

Gen. Eisenhower reported, however, Called to Parley that Lt. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander of United States forces in Great Britain, had been called back to Washington for important con-

AN ENVOY BECOMES AN EVANGEL

Joseph C. Grew Strives to Arouse America to Tokio's Menace

By Marquis W. Childs.

in the land these days. It is that of Joseph C. Grew, who until Pearl Haroor was our Ambassador in Tokio. Up almost until the attack Ambassador Grew believed it would be possible to come to terms with a moderate government in Japan. He was ending a long and distinguished career in the diplomatic service in a post of first impor-

In Tokio he had probably more Japanese friends than any other foreign envov has ever had. These were among the moderates and the anti-military group. He regarded them as real friends and he believed their influence would restrain the ferocious war lords who wanted to conquer all of Asia and banish the white man.

The voice of an evangel can be heard

Then the blow fell. Mr. Grew has said that when the first bulletin came telling of Pearl Harbor he refused to believe it. But soon there was official confirmation. His world was shattered, the hopes he had cherished for nearly 10 years ended once and for all.

Held Prisoner Six Months. For nearly six months Mr. Grew was held prisoner in the Embassy in Tokio. He returned on the Gripsholm and ever since he first set foot on American soil again he has taken it as his mission to tell the American people that they face a formidable military machine and a fanatic people, willing to make any sac-

Over the radio, to industrial workers, to bankers, he has carried his message. With speeches scheduled far in advance he expects for at least another six months to be barnstorming from one side of the country to the other. And, after that, is a book and possibly publication of his confidential diary.

If any one had told this impeccably correct career diplomat a year ago that he would turn evangel, the answer would undoubtedly have been the polite skeptical smile which the Ambassador reserves for eccentrics and intruders. Knowing the strength of the Jap war machine and realizing the fanatic lengths to which the Japanese people will go under authoritarian government, Mr. Grew has taken it on himself to stir the American people to an awareness of what they face. He is a kind of Paul Revere riding back and forth across the country.

The Ambassador believes that many Americans are too indifferent to the war. Others, he said not long ago, "are quite simply still asleep." Too many Americans, in his view, are still thinking of their conveniences.

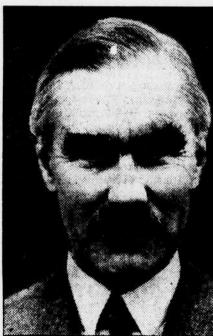

"If only our people, our people as whole, will realize the dangers which we are up against, what we stand to lose by failure, what we must and will gain by victory," he told a rally of war workers at Bridgeport, Conn., shortly after his return, "if only our people as a whole will get in and push to the maximum of their several capacities!

"Do you know what use the foreign propaganda radio stations are making of ticing. One hardly can assume offhand. however, that the enemy air force is substantially weakened. British morale was lifted by essentially unopposed air attacks over Italy late last week. These showed, declared Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, that the RAF now has control of the air over the northern coast of France, and is definitely on the offensive

It was apparently an uneventful week in the hard-fought battle of the Atlantic, although the German high command claimed in a special communique issued late Friday that nine ships, totaling 68,500 tons, in a British convoy had been sent to the bottom in a submarine attack. They also claimed six other been sent down earlier in the week at this groping of the American people? They constantly broadcast our disunity. our domestic bickerings, our strikes and political schisms. Every instance of such disunity that appears in our press is avidly seized upon and amplified and flaunted throughout the enemy countries. They believe or pretend to believe-those enemies of ours-that we are an effete Nation, reared in the lap of personal comfort, vitiated by luxury, unable to meet the supreme test of war."

Appointed by "T. R." Not a little of his life Mr. Grew has spent in proving that Americans, even American diplomats, are not effete. As a young man out of Groton and Harvard. son of a rich, secure Back Bay Boston family, he won his first consular post when Theodore Roosevelt heard about one of his big-game hunting exploits. Near Amoy, China, young Grew pursued a 10-foot tiger into a cave, lay confronting the beast for several minutes and finally shot it from a distance of six feet. Roosevelt the First, apostle of the strenuous life, felt we needed diplomats with that kind of audacity. He has always been a good swimmer but a poor to middling golfer. While he was in Turkey as Ambassador, before his Japanese assignment in 1932, he swam the Bosphorous to the astonishment of the Turks who were unaccustomed to such athletic envoys. But the feat appealed to the late Mustapha Kemal, who, like Roosevelt I, believed in bigger and better exploits.

In the State Department, Mr. Grew became with the years a tradition, a legend. In 1924 Calvin Coolidge made him Undersecretary of State, which was the highest post that had ever been given a career man. He was known as the father-in-law of the career service and career diplomats. Lilla is the wife of J. Pierpoint Moffatt, our present Minister to Canada. Anite is married to Robert English, first secretary of our Legation in New Zealand, and Elizabeth's husband is Cecil Burton Lyon, second secretary at our Embassy in Chile.

When Mr. Grew obtained his appointment the consular and diplomatic service was entirely political. He has seen the career service develop, until today virtually all posts are awarded, theoretically at least, on a merit basis. In fact, he has had a great deal to do with bringing men of good family and correct education into the American foreign

It is the type career diplomat fostered by Mr. Grew who is now under attack from such leftist critics as Robert Bendiner, whose book, "The Riddle of the ships, totaling about 32,000 tons, had State Department," has stirred the cent greater than the 1937-1939 average, guardians of our foreign policy as noth- and in fact will be exactly double that ward and visible calm is his hallmark. The story is told that while he was dining informally with the Japanese Premier three years ago the assassin alarm went off. Sirens shrieked. Guards with drawn revolvers rushed into the room. High officials disappeared through secret panels and there were one or two, instances of hari kari. Through all of this Mr. Grew and the Premier sat calmly eating and talking.

In February of 1936 came another test of his imperturbability. The government, in suppressing an abortive military rebellion found it necessary to fire on the Premier's official residence where the rebels had barricaded themselves. A stray shot would have landed in the front door of the American Embassy. Before the guns were fired it was suggested to Mr. Grew that he leave. The Ambassador's reply was that to do so might in some way weaken the position of the Government before the world and that, therefore, he would remain. The rebels capitulated before the attack.

Mrs. Grew, the former Alice de Vermandois Perry, has set up housekeeping for her diplomatic husband in 20 different cities, including Bern, Paris, Washington, Peking, Ottawa, London and Istanbul. A great-grandniece of the Commodore Perry who opened Japan to the western world, Mrs. Grew made far more personal friends in Japan than do most westerners. So did the Ambassador who, stalking through the streets of Tokio with a quick athletic stride, towering over the little Nipponese, was recognized on every hand. Mr. Grew insists now that America was not misinformed about Japanese strength nor about Japanese intentions. Naturally it is a sensitive point with him. He believes that when the entire record can be made public, American diplomacy will be shown to have justified itself.

Cherishes Jap Friends. "I have had many friends in Japan, some of whom I admired, respected and loved," Mr. Grew says. "Even during our imprisonment in Tokio, many of those friends used to contrive to send us gifts in spite of the usual obstruction of the police who wished to cut us off completely from the outside world. For 10 years we have broken bread in their houses and they in mine. They were personally loyal to me to the end.

"But there is the other side to the picture, the ugly side of cruelty, brutality and utter bestiality, the ruthlessness and rapaciousness of the Japanese military machine which brought on this war. That Japanese military machine and military caste and military system must be utterly broken, for the future safety and welfare of the United States and of the United Nations, and for the future safety and welfare of civilization and humanity. There is not sufficient room in the area of the Pacific Ocean for a peaceful America and a swashbuckling Japan."

Mr. Grew, named special adviser to the Secretary of State on Far Eastern affairs. has a small office on the third floor of the State Department Building. But he is seldom there. These days he is ranging over America speaking with zeal and earnestness about the tremendous task ahead of us.

Mexico Speeds War Preparations

Army to Be Recruited in January

By John Lloyd,

that Mexico is taking the war seriously should stroll along Mexico City streets on Sunday. He would have difficulty getting from one part of the city to another, because of marching men. In every neighborhood Mexicans spend the morning hours of the Sabbath in military drills.

They are civilians, not soldiers every male civilian between 15 and 45 who wishes to keep his civil rights. Those who fail to drill are men without a country. They won't be allowed entrance to the movies, they won't be able to send telegrams, they won't be allowed to do business in government offices—they may even be barred from streetcars and buses.

That is the way President Manuel Avila Camacho decided to make Mexicans prepare for their part in the war. Hundreds of thousands report for drill in Mexico City and the same thing on a smaller scale is going on in other cities

Women to Have Role in War.

Once all male civilians are able to march they will be taught to use firearms. The President intends to weld the entire male populace into a kind of reserve militia or home guard. Women are to be taught passive defense duties on a scale almost as ambitious.

The weekly drill period for males is two hours every Sunday morning. Those who drill get cards showing they are complying with their duties. Those who have no cards are to be outcasts.

From this vast reservoir of manpower the government intends to select its army recruits. The President has just announced that recruiting will begin in January. By that time the candidates will have already received, in the Sunday drill school, a good rudimentary

The President said the number to be taken into active service would be not more than 10 per cent of those now engaged in practice.

First Call for Youths, 18. In the first calling only 18-year-olds will be accepted. Physical examinations will be severe. No married men are to be enrolled hereafter. And barracks are to be rid once and for all of the socalled "soldaderas" or women who traditionally attached themselves to the Mexican Army and even accompanied the troops into battle.

President Avila Camacho is a professional soldier himself-a general. Regarding recruits for the army, he said: "Military service must be voluntary. When patriotism exists—and we can feel proud of the very evident Mexican patriotism-obligatory service is absurd." Latin America are attacked and need attack as a feudal stronghold be dihelp, Mexico, the President said, is in I vided among the peasants.

A military, naval and air treaty has just been signed with Cuba. Each country agrees to give full port, supply and repair facilities to the other's naval vessels and corresponding privileges to each other's aircraft. Joint naval and air patrol of adjacent waters, including a Yucatan channel, is provided.

Highway Work Pushed.

Work is being pressed on vital railroad and highway routes through Southern Mexico to Guatemala and the rest of Central America, so that war and other supplies can be shipped regularly overland. All Central American countries, as well as Mexico, are working industriously on the pan-American highway. It is hoped this will be through to Panama late next year or early in 1944. President Avila Camacho has taken two predecessors into his inner councils to cement internal unity! Gen. Lazaro Cardenas, leftist President just before the present administration, and Gen. Abelardo Rodriguez, big businessman and President before Gen. Cardenas.

Gen. Cardenas has been made Minister of National Defense and Gen. Rodriguez wartime economic co-ordi-

Mexico has not waited for Uncle Sam to furnish all her needed war equipment. She makes a large part of her own munitions and rifles and is now turning out training airplanes in a respectable number. For heavier equipment she does rely on the United States, and President Avila Camacho said recently that his equipment was coming through in very good quantity and quality.

Clergyman Helps Unity.

Of particular importance to Mexican unity was a statement by Msgr. Luis Martinez, Archbishop of Mexico, that Catholics are giving their full support to the government. For many years there was trouble between the church and the state in Mexico, and bloody guerrilla warfare grew out of the religious issue.

President Avila Camacho is determined to have internal peace as a foundation for the war effort. He has repeatedly stated he will brook no friction serious enough to upset the political or economic situation at a time when the people should be pulling together for must come, and come quickly. In the first place there must be a definition of policy in Washington which will envisage the importance and needs of higher education, certainly to the extent already accomplished by Great Britain and Canada. Very helpful would be a degree of decentralized responsibility whereby, under adequate safeguards, reputable educational institutions could themselves have some say as to who is and is not essential from the viewpoint of training for civil as well as military service.

The second necessary development is clearer public visualization of the intimate connection of higher education with the preservation of those values which the Nation is fighting to save.

Hence the pervailing belief in labor circles that Lewis organizers are ready and waiting for favorable chances to exploit dissatisfaction in labor-union ranks to his ad-

Ideal Defensive Position.

Borneo, rich in oil and rubber and large enough to mother a huge air and submarine force, had to be our main outpost in the Pacific before any talk of a defense in the Pacific. A strategic line from Borneo to Midway and Alaska was the only ideal defensive position. We could have been assured that our large 1943 forces would not be hampered by fears of attack on the West Coast, fears of a Japanese assault on Siberia or India or fears that our ally China would be

But no competent military man can see how we can send our strongest power against the Nazis while the Pacific-or rather the South Pacific-is controlled by the Japanese. Egypt might well yield a spectacular success and we all hope it will. We may accomplish other goals in Africa and, here again, we hope for the best. But a triumph for the Japs would overshadow these Allied victories.

We have paid a heavy price in men and materiel for our gains in the Solomons and this price should be well remembered. Great is the cost of dislodging the Japanese from any given area. From past lessons we know what it would cost us to win back the Solomons

Retracing Lost Footsteps at Fourteenth and F Streets

By John Clagett Proctor. Within the last half century Washington could always boast of a number of busy corners, but since the population of the District of Columbia, in the last year or two, has jumped to more than 862,000, with an added metropolitan population—just over its borders, in Maryland and Virginia—enough at least to increase the total population to about 1,242,000, some of the city's intersections are not only busy ones, but at times are congested with throngs and masses of

Just which one of the Capital's intersections is the busiest one, it is hard to say, though it is safe to assume that the traffic at F and Fourteenth streets is at least equal to that at any other point, for here, especially during the working hours, this intersection is not only crowded, but at times assumes almost the proportions of a traffic jam.

Naturally, however, this has not always been the case, for within the memory of many this neighborhood was once a peaceful, residential section, where some of Washington's first families lived in handsome homes. However, after 1864, when the Metropolitan Railroad was chartered, and the one-horse cars from the first began to serve the public, the street soon began to turn into a business thoroughfare-very gradually at first, but more decidedly as the years went by, until the 80s, when the dwelling houses began to be more rapidly turned into stores and business houses.

Though the neighborhood of Fourteenth and F streets was not the first section to be settled by merchants yet it was one of the earliest parts of the city in which hotels and taverns were conducted, and it was only as recently as January, 1926, that the old Ebbitt House, one of the early and most popular of Washington's public houses, was removed to make way for the National Press Building.

David Burnes' Farm.

The history of the Ebbitt House and its site is interesting and runs back to the days when it was a part of David Burnes' farm. This Scotch proprietor of Washington had died intestate and his daughter, Marcia Burnes, later Mrs. John P. Van Ness, being his only heir, the property was inherited by her. In 1802, the same year Marcia married Mr. Van Ness, she transferred lot 13 to David Dorsey, who on August 2, 1807, deeded the north 25 feet to Richard Forrest, and September 29, 1807, the south 24 feet and 6 inches to John Murdock. In 1824 Richard Forrest deeded his 25 feet of lot 13 to Julius Forrest and in 1857, through the heirs of Julius Forrest and by default under a trust by one of the grantees, lots 13 and 14 were transferred to William Ebbitt.

Lot 12 went from Marcia Burnes to

David Dorsey, then to John Murdock, who transferred title to William Blanchard, whose daughter, Jane Farnham, inherited it in 1850, and who sold her The beaux of the ball wore blue coats and H. J. Ramsdell and Mrs. Lippincott; American Press Associated, W. H. Clarke cated at the southwest corner of Penn-Title to lot 15, which adjoins the corner lot on the F street side, was transferred by the Commissioners in 1802 to the heirs of Walter Stewart. In 1817 John Hoge transferred this lot for the heirs to Thomas T. Stephenson. The latter held it two years and deeded it to Thomas Triplet, who in turn sold the lot on April 19, 1826, to Gideon Beall, who on the same date deeded it to Richard Wallach, Mayor of Washington from 1861 to 1867. Wallach sold to Johnson Hellen, and Caleb Willard was vested with title through various deeds dated March 30,

These four lots, 12, 13, 14 and 15, comprise the ground upon which the Ebbitt House stood The Press Club Building includes other lots or parts of lots in addition to these. In describing an old photograph before the Columbia Historical Society some 25 years ago, John B. Larner told his audience that the Ebbitt was composed of four dwellings and that prior to 1856 here was conducted what was known as the Frenchman's Hotel, which was quite likely kept by a Frenchman as the name would imply. After this date, William E. Ebbitt kept a boarding house here and in this way it came to be known as the Ebbitt House. Mr. Larner also adds history to its title by telling us that, in 1863, Mr. Ebbitt transferred his ownership to hisson-in-law, Albert H. Craney, who, the following year, conveyed the property to Historic Homes.

The early residents of this corner had as neighbors some very distinguished persons. At the east end of the F street side of the Press Club, it is said, once stood the home of Aaron Burr, surrounded by a paling fence, and in his garden was a fine well of water, which was sufficiently copious to supply several of his neighbors besides himself with aqua pura.

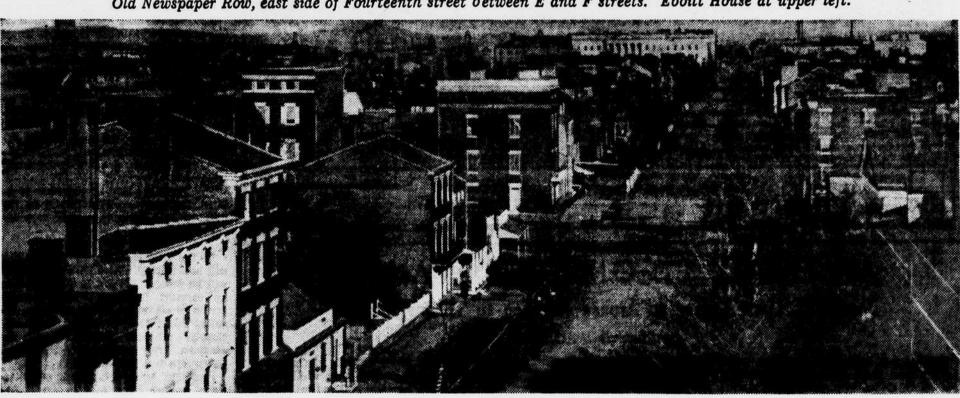

Across the street, at 1333-1335 F street, stood for many years the historic Adams' house, where John Quincy Adams lived when he was Secretary of State in the cabinet of President James Monroe, and it was at this residence where Mrs. Adams gave a ball which was not surpassed in grandeur for many years. It took place January 7, 1824, on the eve of the anniversary of the battle of New Orleans, which occurred January 8, 1815, and was in honor of Gen. Jackson, who attended together with a company of

Of this ball an early account says: "It was in commemoration of the victory of Gen. Jackson at New Orleans, and I doubt if there ever was a social function in this city, indeed, this country, which created more of a social and political sensation. It was the talk of the entire country, and it was thought that it paved the way to the nomination of Mr. Adams to the presidency.

"There was no illumination possible in that day, except for the whale-oil lamp and tallow, wax or sperm candle, but what was lacking inside was made up by a series of bonfires outside, which extended all the way from Thirteenth to Fifteenth streets. . . From descriptions of the toilettes worn by the ladies at Mrs. Adams' ball, it appears that in the full dress of the ladies of that period the dress waists ended just under the arms, and its depth, front and back was not over three or four inches: The skirts were narrow and plain and terminated by a flounce just resting on the floor. Slippers and silk stockings of the color of the dress were worn and tied hair was combed high and fastened with had offices in Newspaper Row. These the whereabouts of their relations, but

Nearly all the great men in Washington at that time attended this notable ball and a certain Mr. Agge, whose poetic mind was thrilled by the pomp and splendor of the occasion, wrote at the time the following lines which are well

"Wend you with the world tonight? Brown and fair, and wise and witty, Eyes that float in seas of light, Laughing mouths and dimples pretty, Belles and matrons, maids and madames, All are going to Mrs. Adams'.

madames, Al are gone to Mrs. Adams'." Just below the Ebbitt, on Fourteenth street, resided B. W. Reed, whose grocery store was around the corner on F street. Next to the Reed residence were two 1-story houses belonging to that grocer, and next came the Farnham House, and farther down the street was the Occidental, which is likely the site of the Willard Building, now occupied by the Public Roads Administration.

The Ebbitt House.

But it is likely that many Washington residents will remember the Ebbitt House, as it was called for so many years, or until it became the style to add the word "new" to every hotel that made the slightest improvement to its building. For years it was known as the Army and Navy headquarters, and here stopped such men as Rogers, Farragut, Worden, Canby, Thomas, Porter, Winslow, Boggs, Cass and Drayton. President McKinley stopped here during his entire service in Congress, and Speaker Keifer and J. Proctor Knott kept him company. Mark Twain, Bill Nye and James Whitcomb Riley were other guests who made it their stopping place when they came to

To the writer, the most interesting place along the row is the site of the telegraph office which for many years occupied the northeast corner of Fourteenth and E streets, for from this office the boys carried the telegraph messages at least as early as 1878, when the bicycle had not come into general use and the automobile had not come into existence, and as one might imagine, it was a real man's job, that a boy was expected to fill since it was not an uncommon occurrence to be awakened at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, if you happened to be on that night, and to receive a message to be carried to Soldiers' Home, or perhaps Anacostia, or some other outof-the-way place, and one can imagine it took a very nervy chap to do it.

Many of our messenger boys of today if there are still any left, would quit cold if asked to walk to Anacostia to deliver a message at about 1 or 2 o'clock in the morning and we could hardly blame a boy if he objected to do it, for it would be asking a whole lot of him, especially if he were in any way timid. Red Cross Letters Tell Real Story of War Tragedies

By Kathleen Scoffeld

The Red Cross Inquriy Service is today the only contact thousands of persons have with one another. Families in occupied countries, seamen, members of the armed forces, refugees, missionaries, prisoners of war, deported civilians, internees, all are wanted and waited for by some one.

During a recent month this service handled 100,000 pieces of paper. Sixtyfive thousand were inquiries from abroad, 22,000 originated in this country, some 5,000 concerned the addresses and welfare of the armed forces and the remainder were urgent messages sent by

The bulk of the messages concerned civilians; 25 words of strictly personal character, containing no information of military value, are allowed the sender. On the reverse of this message form, the recipient may make his reply, which is also subjected to the same restrictions. These forms are often written and answered in the native language of the sender, at present the Red Cross is translating and censoring messages in 21 different languages. The messages go by boat and are forwarded to their various destinations abroad by the International Red Cross at Geneva. Sometimes they take from three to five months to complete their journey. The "civilian message form" was first devised by the Red Cross during the Spanish Civil War, and represents today the only authorized means civilians in enemy or enemy occupied countries have of keeping in touch with their relatives and friends.

What kind of story do these short, simple sentences, so eagerly awaited and dispatched, tell? They describe concern and anxiety, patience and forbearance, humor and tragedy, they are like puzzles into which we must fit the missing pieces. What kind of person is this man or woman, sometimes without a home, often without food? In each answer there is courage, bitter silent courage to wait for the freedom, that we, the United Nations have promised to return to the conquered peoples.

Slavery is a temporary state, in every heart there exists the hope that some day there will again be a place to live, a field to plow, a family to embrace, and a respite from cruelty, hunger and fear. In every conquered village, in every occupied city, there live many who wait quietly for the time of revenge and liberation. Some of the messages are eloquent in what they leave unsaidthey come out of concentration camps!

In recent months, the majority of messages have been exchanged with Italy, Greece and Germany. Word from Greece is always sad, frantic appeals for money and food appear in every mes-"Try to send us help through ning to reach them. The many German refugees in the United States attempt to communicate with their families; too often the report returns, "Addresse has left for unknown destination." Sometimes pitiful pleas originate from Germany proper, a message from Berlin reads: "Anna in desperate plight, hungry, freezing, has no shoes. Please heed our cries, hurry money by telegraph, fear the worst."

The German authorities punctiliously and deliberately cross out the names of the countries as we know them, as if they had thereby erased them from the map. Messages marked for Poland are changed to read German-Poland, or Galizien; in place of Yugoslavia they put Serbia, Bohemia is substituted for Czechoslovakia. Sometimes the answers indicate how thoroughly the Germans are pursuing their theory of migration and deportation. Families are separated and know nothing of each other's whereabouts; an inquiry to Hungary brings the following reply: "Heard indirectly that brother was requested to leave town, no word since then. For four months no news of father and mother, we children need money."

Speaking of Courage.

The place of birth, always indicated on the form, may read Liepzig, or Vienna, or Prague; the answers, when they come, are often marked Poland. "I am well, my wife has fled, we are left here poor. Sarah asks for help, but I have nothing to give her." Sometimes the expatriate seems to maintain hope of returning to his homeland. "Father and Fred are now in (province of). All interventions in regard to returning home have been unsuccessful up to the pres-

Cross." One member of a family has been overlooked, perhaps deliberately: "My parents were taken to Poland in the month of April. Know nothing at all about them. Hans is interned. I am here for the present, do not know how long."

In every message there is evidence of the hardships the Nazis are meeting out: "It is hard to be without money in old age, I have nothing to wear, children please assist your father." Sometimes the messages dare to speak explicitly of courage: "Stop worrying, that which cannot be altered must be borne. Keep well and hope as we do that we shall see each other again. Affectionate greetings, mother."

Each nation has its particular quality, differences in style and method of expression are marked. Italian aliens interned in the United States write to reassure their kinfolk, the old country answers, and the warmth of greeting is totally different from the austerity of the northerners. "Dear ones," writes a nun to her family here, "I hope to correspond with you monthly through the Red Cross. This may take a long time to reach you, but a loving greeting has no date." "Roberta and Annunziata are studying well and remember you, greetings from all, we embrace you affectionately," writes Guiseppe and the newcomer to our shores answers. "Every one happy and satisfied, please don't worry, be calm and patient about news, I kiss you longingly." Sometimes an inquiry addressed to Germany will be answered from a concentration camp in Italy, there conditions would seem to be less severe and the treatment more humane than that accorded refugees interned in enemy occupied countries. When the French write, it is to speak of essential documents or prisoners of war still held by the Germans. "Let us have courage, better days must come. Would like prisoners' addresses, may God soon permit me to see my family, my country." To this Frenchman, Occupied France is no longer "my country." The army of occupation is everywhere, there seem to be innumerable formalities connected with the simple essentials of living. To the French people who love their freedom, this system of regimentation and oppression must be terrible, there can be little left to tell the world outside.

Messages from Denmark and Norway are often cheerful. In answer to an inquiry this man writes to this friend in America: "Dear old soul, never knew 25 words could send one to Heaven. Everything the same old circus with me. Think of you always." A Norwegian refugee writes home happily: "My darling daddy, received both messages with joy. Sister expecting baby, soon you will be grandfather, everything fine, love."

Quite often the forms initiated overseas arrive here addressed, "Somewhere in the United States," or "Somewhere in Texas." Sometimes they are more explicit and say, "Somewhere in Chicago," or "Somewhere in New York City."

Missing Persons Squad.

In most of the 3,700 local chapters of the Red Cross a volunteer "missing persons" squad has been organized to deal with these problems. Foreign newspapers of the nationals are advised, and they carry free of charge lists of names of the individuals sought. The shipping companies, the consulates and the local charities all keep minute records of any foreign born or naturalized citizens and gladly co-operate in the search. . The percentages of these messages that remain undelivered is relatively small.

Seamen, as soon as they reach a port, file into the office of the Red Cross and send messages home. At the end of their next journey they may find an answer. It is the only way in which they can keep in touch with their families.

Sometimes there is an exchange of messages which tell a story. Marie writes to Olaf, Marie is in Brittany, Olaf is children. What a load has been lifted somewheres on the high seas. "I am very unhappy without news from you. I hope you are well, and that you are not great work and maintain you in good traveling any more. I think of you often. Please answer." "I was very happy to your job in these turbulent times." receive your news. I continue to have very good work. I am still waiting for you, I love you minutely," replies Olaf in what seems to be an attempt to bridge the distance between them. "My dear, happy today to have news of you. I think of you a great deal. What a happy spondence between the lovers.

pied France, the volume of messages ex- news, but they cannot help her. "Unchanged is far less than that with other fortunately, we have had no news of Olaf for several months, hope it will be possible for you to come here." they reply. Marie's messages become desperate, "My dearest, the days pass, then the months and still I have no news from you, write me, your little financee." Finally the correspondence ceases, the S. S. ____, of which Olaf was the captain, has been announced "sunk by enemy action," there is no news of any of the survivors. The file is closed.

At the end of four months the Inquiry Service located a Scotch boy in a German prison camp. The worker in the local office where the frantic parents lived, recognized his handwriting on the formal receipt which all prisoners of war must sign for packages received. Once a prisoner is located, the family may no longer write to him shrough the Red Cross, but must communicate with him

Philippine Inquiries.

Red Cross workers will tell you that they are accepting inquiries concerning the Philippines, but that so far only cable communications are open. Mail for Palestine, India, East Africa and Siberia is not accepted, these countries are not officially at war, theoretically the mail channels are still open.

A missionary in China writes home: "I send to you love and to the family. Don't worry about me, I am in good health." An engineer detailed in the Canal Zone upon receiving a long expected answer to his inquiry, writes to the volunteer at the Red Croos, "to the gentle mademoiselle, volunteer of the Red Cross, who assisted me; allow me to express my full gratitude for the very noble help, as volunteer of the Red Cross, you bestowed upon me. For the sacred opportunity to correspond with my daughter, may God bless you."

A man in a small town in our Middle West had attempted to get some news of his daughter, married long since to a German; after eight months word came. The grateful father writes the Red Cross: "Have been thinking of you since last week as a veritable angel of light; until receiving Anna's response we had reason for foreboding of bad news. but low and behold, over her own signature, she says 'all well' with her and from the hearts of her parents and friends. May God bless you in your health during the stress and strain of

There are today millions of families that are separated, whole villages have been deported; we know now what Hitler means by slavery. Office of Naval Operations Lt. (j. g.) Henry Mustin explains that his "reporter-to-naval officer metamorphosis has not been too remarkable." He is attached to the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations here and helps prepare a digest of world affairs which is distributed to the Navy overseas. "We publish a booklet, in some ways not unlike a weekly newspaper, reviewing the progress of the war all over the world. Each week the booklet goes out to the fleet as quickly as it is possible to get it to any given point."

Adolph A. Hoehling was crazy about flying. When he went into the Navy he was assigned to the Office of Public Relations here and the flying he did was on his own time. And so, when Lt. (j. g.) Hoehling was transferred to the Naval Air Station at Corpus Christi,

Tex., it was all right with him. This former Star reporter did more reporting at Corpus Christi than he did flying. He was assigned as public relations officer there, but he was at least near a flying field. He developed an interest in blimps and when last heard from was heading for a course at the Navy school at Northwestern University, preparatory to going to seawhich he hopes will be preparatory to some flying.

Associated Press Staff Writer. ARLINGTON, Vt.-Dorothy Canfield Fisher, novelist, literary critic and humanitarian, is figuratively brandishing the handkerchief of her great-greatgreat-great grandmother before the women of the world-to urge them to show the way to lasting peace. She says that the handkerchief of a Colonial Canfield symbolizes the selfassertion of womanhood that is needed today—"the coming out of our shells to apply women's experience in child and adult psychology to the task of eliminating the social injustice leading to wars."

The story of the handkerchief has been handed down from 1764 when the Canfields, seeking to fiee the puritanical rigors of Connecticut, pioneered northward on horseback.

"The mother Canfield of that time," smiles the tiny, gray-haired woman, "told the men folks when they started out that they wouldn't settle any place until she found brook water soft enough to do her laundering. Stopped at Every Brook

"So, after they rode into Vermontwhere most water is hard-she'd have the party stop at every brook they came to and she'd take a piece of soap and a handkerchief from her riding skirt and see if she could work up a nice, rich lather. She didn't find what she wanted until they reached this land in Arlington-and here they stayed, because the water of our brook was just right for mother Canfield's handker-

Herself the mother of two children, and also a grandmother, the 62-year-old writer of many distinguished American novels and children's stories says mothers can show the way to peace by passing on to the world at large the lessons learned in the family circle.

"Every mother has seen instances of the beginning of frustration and unrest in a child—the kind of frustration that can lead to the making of a monster, or a Hitler.

"A child goes into a blind rage and seizes a carving knife. Of course, the first thing to do is wrest the carving knife away, but the wise mother knows there is more to it than that. She knows that beating the child is not enough. She knows that she has to get to the root of the trouble and, through understanding and care, correct the thing that led the child to grasp the knife—so it won't happen again.

"And so it is with international affairs. The first thing, of course, we must win this war. But after the war, there must be a reorganization of international relations so that frustrated, ill-satisfied ing, and their tension relieved before where she learned fencing under the then Lt. John J. Pershing.

She was wearing a two-piece blue wool suit, with a blue and white striped shirtwaist, opened at the neck. Her stockings were of heavy wool, and she wore brown moccasins. Her gray hair, caught up at the neck and tumbling in little ringlets over her fine forehead, was bared to the mountain sun. In the heart of the forest, she stopped before a huge stone on which plaque bore the likeness of a man's head,

"These pines were planted as a memorial for James Hulme Canfield (1847-1909), and as a symbol of his strong, useful, generous life." She made a wide sweep with her arm toward the trees as she said: "These are in memory of my father. We thought it was more fitting than a dead piece of granite in a cemetery. My mother, who was an artist and sculptress, made the plaque." James Hulme Canfield, a distinguished American educator, was a professor of sociology at the University of Kansas when Dorothy was born in Lawrence,

First Literary Position

Dr. Canfield spent the later years of his life as librarian of Columbia University. It was there that Dorothy received her Ph. D., and while she was studying for it she was secretary of the Horace Mann School, and also held her first literary position as a critic on the American Magazine. She published her first successful novel, The Squirrel Cage," in 1912. Since then, there have been such notable works as "The Bent Twig," "The Brimming Cup," "Rough Hewn" and "Seasoned Timber," and many of her books have had her beloved Vermont as a locale. She also has done many translations, including Papini's "Life of Christ" from the Italian. Mrs. Fisher's views on war are something more than academic. Early in the First World War she supervised the production of books in Braille for French soldiers blinded in battle.

Ambulance Training School

Later, she joined her husband who was in charge of an ambulance training school near the front lines, and she became head of the commissary department of the school, working within sound of the guns. Still later, she established and managed a home for French war orphans on the Bay of Biscay. The Fishers live in a 117-year-old house which once was used by a hired man of earlier Canfields.

"We wanted to live simply and unpretentiously," she said. "If you have an elaborate home, there's a temptation to make a career out of caring for it-and if you do that, you get nothing else done." Although the house has been remodeled to some extent and is tastefully furnished, the living room floor has a wicked pitch to it, and the dining room still retains wooden pegs once used to hold

Writing for War Effort

Mrs. Fisher has offered her talented pen to the war effort. She's already written articles for the Treasury Department in aid of War bond sales, and she is currently preparing a series for the Office of War Information on matters regarding many of the occupied countries of Europe. She is an eloquent pleader for the cause of the people of Occupied France.

Fellow Vermonters are proud of Mrs. Fisher's record as a novelist, and almost any one around town can list her accomplishments.

But they admire her as well for her neighborliness, her Vermontish sense of humor and her interest in the downto-earth affairs of the town where Ethan Allen once lived and where his children are buried.

When she spoke recently at the dedication of a new town school, a Vermont paper described her as "Arlington's most Although little more than 5 feet in popular citizen," and the reporter wrote height-"I'm just as big as nothing"- blandly: "There wasn't any doubt about she has a lithe swiftness of motion which it. 33 Are Nominated for 15 Federation Posts

Officers and Executive Committee Will Be Elected Next Saturday

By BAINBRIDGE CRIST.

Nominees for four out of five of the top offices of the Federation of Citizens' Associations will be unopposed in the elections to be held next Saturday night in the board room of the District Building unless new nominations are made from the floor at that time. A four-way race is scheduled for the fifth post.

Harry S. Wender, president; Walter F. Wasson, first vice president; David Babp, secretary, and Kenneth P. Armstrong, treasurer, are the only candidates for their respective offices at present. Both Mr. Babp and Mr. Armstrong were renominated. There are four candidates for the office of second vice president.

Mr. Wender, now first vice president, was handed the executive duties—except that of presiding at meetings—by the retiring president, Harry N. Stull, when the latter became assistant chief air-raid warden membership of 15, five of whom are of the District last March. Although only 34, Mr. Wender has candidates for the 10 remaining been active in civic work some years posts: and is chairman of the District Recreation Board.

Civic Problems, Civic Bodies

For Home Front and War Front; Women Finish School Survey

By JESSE C. SUTER.

To a large degree civic activities of the regular variety are submerged into the War Fund Campaign which opened on Tuesday, October 22, and will continue until November 12 and until the entire fund of $4,141,000 is raised. The man and woman power which usually keeps the civic work going and others, enlisted for this campaign, are compelled to lay aside for awhile their other public spirited work.

The Public Utilities Commission, at the request of the Office of Price Administration, has reopened the record in the case of the Washington Gaslight Co. for rate adjustment under the sliding scale agreement. OPA challenges the right of the PUC to permit an increase of the gas rate to consumers. The situation is a perplexing one not only in this case, but of other rates and requirements of public utilities. A new problem thus confronts the citizen—to discover who is really the controlling authority.

Civic interest during the week just closed was centered largely in the hearing held yesterday by the Board of Education special committee on the senior high school course on the effects of alcoholic drinks and narcotics on the human system. The hearing was first set for the hearing room in the Franklin Administration Building. The interest in the subject made it necessary to change to the larger assembly hall of the Thomson Building.

The Federation of Citizens' Associations will hold its annual election at its meeting on Saturday night next, November 7. Nominations of officers and members of the Executive Board were made at the October meeting, but additional nominations may be made prior to the balloting for each officer and board members. A ballot will also be taken for the annual award of The Evening Star

United Campaign for Home Front and War Front

Fifteen thousand unpaid volunteer workers, nearly the equivalent of a military division, on Tuesday began a two-week campaign for the Community War Fund of the District of Columbia and nearby Maryland and Virginia. The goal for 1943 is $4,141,000 which is about double the Community Chest fund for the current year. Similar campaigns are on in every community in the country.

President Roosevelt has described the local Community War Fund as follows: "The Community War Fund of Washington is a unified effort to meet present and extraordinary needs in our city and our Nation, in our world. It calls for our ungrudging gifts to supplement the investments, with return to ourselves, that we are making in the future of our country."

The idea of combining 120 fund raising campaigns into a single unified effort is based on that well known science called "horse sense." If individual campaigns were run, to a large extent the same people would have to do the job in each instance. . he same people would be solicited and the cost would be far greater both for the effort of getting subscriptions as well as ce ecting and accounting for the Many important District civic activities are at a standstill until this Community War Fund is out of the way. It is scheduled to end on November 12, if the full amount is raised. But if the goal of $4,141,000 is not reached by that time the campaign will keep right on until the amount is subscribed. With the services of every one so in demand for other urgent work it is important to both solicitor and solicited that the givers be prompt and liberal.

As in the annual Community Chest campaigns there are some people who, to cover up their meanness, raise all kinds of technical objections. For instance, one Federal employe, who has always opposed the Community Chest, was heard the other day to say, "Well, they have camouflaged the Community Chest this year by calling it the Community War Fund."

An important part of the problem faced by the Community War Fund Committee is getting the people to see that this money is needed for work throughout 1943 and that just a few dollars will be mighty thin support when divided among 120 agencies.

While cash gifts to the fund are always welcomed, many are unable to give in a single payment as generous a share as they can through subscription and payments in convenient installments. Time payments may be arranged to suit every pocketbook. Convenient places and manner of payments make it easy for every one to bear their fair and personal share in this important community

Fiscal Equity More Important Than Tax Exemption

Close study of the tax-free real property in the District and the municipal finance problem indicate that the settlement of the fiscal relations between the United States and the District of Columbia are of far greater importance than mere tax-exemption legislation. While the latter is important and as a matter of principle should be placed upon a reasonable and equitable basis, the amount involved is so far below that of the plain obligation of the Federal Government to its capital as to dwarf it into insignificance.

Though tax exemption is closely related to the problem of fiscal equity for the District of Columbia, it is only one of a number of factors which have to be taken into consideration in determining what will be the fair and equitable share of the cost of the District to be borne by the Federal Government. When these factors are taken into account a definite fixed ratio plan could be enacted into law and the principal uncertainty of District municipal finance

Women Study the Schools and Propose Reorganization The Department of Government and Education in the Voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters has completed a two-year study of the District of Columbia school system. The immediate result is a 30-page booklet entitled "Look at Our Schools," which they describe as "a handbook of information about the District of Columbia public schools." It is a brief and methodical outline analysis of the existing school system, presented in a manner which is sure to appeal to any who are interested in our scholos. Besides pointing out its defects and weaknesses, it concludes with definite recommendations for providing the District with "a modern system of public education."

A discussion of educational matters, with particular reference to that contained in the booklet, is planned for a luncheon meeting of the Department of Government and Education at the YWCA on Tuesday, November 10. The meeting is open to the general membership of the league. A panel of those well known in educational circles will lead in the discussion. At the conclusion of its survey the league names as the fundamental weaknesses in our present educational system the peculiar relationships existing between the Board of Education on the one hand, and Congress and the District Commissioners on the other hand. These defects they believe cannot be corrected by piecemeal, but require a complete overhauling of the legislation for public education in the District. They hold that there can be no real progress in improvement of the system as long as these conflicting relationships continue. This conclusion is based upon the findings of the Blauch-Powers report, which the league indorses, and which states that "Congress should enact a comprehensive code for the public school system, delegating to school officials broad powers and ample authority to maintain and develop a system of public education that is adequate to the needs of the Capital City. Under a revised school code school officials should be permitted to exercise their authority unhampered by specific restrictions and subject only to proper checks and reviews by Congress." (Blauch and Powers, pages 29-30.)

Under the plan for this legislative reform it would be necessary to repeal all previous school legislation-organic, amendatory and "rider" and pass a new basic code or organic law for the operation and maintenance of the system.

Under the league plan the new code would be based on three general principles: 1. Limitation of the District Commissioners' control over the school system. 2. Limitation of congressional control over the school system. 3. Creation of an autonomous Board of Education.

Under the first principle the District Commissioners would be stripped of the following powers: to review the school budget; to select school sites; to plan, build, repair and control school buildings; control over school equipment and control over school em-

The second principle "Limitation of congressional control over the school system" is best told by direct quotation from the booklet "Look at Our Schools." which is as follows: "The annual appropriation by Congress for the District schools should be either in a lump sum or divided into only a few principal categories. Detailed allocation of funds should be the sole privilege of the Board of Education. Riders to the appropriation bills should be prohibited, and 'it should be the policy of Congress to keep hands off the school system except insofar as broad policies are involved.' (Blauch and Powers, p. 89).

The third principle-creation of an autonomous Board of Education would give the board these powers: 1. To maintain and operate the school system without interference, 2. Complete control of appointment and dismissal of all school employes; and complete control of allocation of all funds. In conclusion the League states: "This grant of full authority would place responsibility for the school system squarely upon the Board of Education. It would make it possible for the board to adopt and carry out consistent policies that would give the District of Columbia a unified, modern system of public education."

Australia Papers Hail MacArthur's Defense Of Pacific War Effort

General's Statement Viewed as Balancing Recent Criticism

By the Associated Press.

MELBOURNE, Oct. 31.-Australian discussion of the Pacific war was high-lighted today by a declaration of the Sydney Morning Herald that the conflict could be lost only by a rift among the Allies and could be won only by long and hard fighting.

The press described statements Thursday by Gen. Douglas Mac- of South America from Peru to the Arthur and Prime Minister John Curtin as helpful in clearing the air on such questions as grand strategy, politics and the scope of the Australian war effort.

Criticisms drew this comment from the Melbourne Age: "Any attempt, whether well in-tentioned or launched with ulterior motives, to create friction between political groups or schools of thought in service high command circles, could be damaging and mischievous. • • In this country, it will be ef- the country. The general's statement "will increase the respect Australians feel for him and the debt of gratitude we owe him," the Herald said.

Gen. MacArthur, in addition to praising Australians for their work and co-operation, disavowed politi-cal ambitions, saying "I started as a soldier and I shall finish as one."

New York Stores Plan to Speed Up Yule Shopping

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.-Those cartoons showing Christmas shoppers tottering home under a pile of bundles are going to become a reality this year, long before Christmas eve, if a group of New York merchants has its way.

The mercantile group announced yesterday that leading New York stores will put up their decorations three weeks early, and that the stout gentleman from the North who talks over the gift problem with the younger generation will be on hand earlier than usual.

Delos Walker, vice president and secretary of R. H. Macy & Co., said that the moving up of the season shopping period was prompted by the need of co-operating with the war effort.

"This year's appeal is based on the customer's wartime duty to cooperate in relieving the overtaxed postal service and manpower shortege, and the vital need for conserving rubber, gasoline and other delivery equipment," he explained.

Mr. Walker stressed the importance of "carrying your own" packages, saying that "wasteful demands gered into our line and knew I was for delivery may force the stores to deny almost all deliveries by the end of the month."

Chile is one of the most curiouslyshaped countries in the world. A ribbon of land edging the west coast tip of the continent, it is about 24 times as long as it is wide. 13-to-0 Margin In Last Half

Passes Bring Scores In Hectic Struggle; Mont, Wright Star

By BURTON HAWKINS. For a frantic 25 minutes Florida threatened to push Maryland's football team into the laps of the stands yesterday at Griffith Stadium but the Old Liners then took command of the contest and soared to an upset 13-0 victory on two crisp touchdown tosses by their terrific Tommy Mont. On the strength of its stirring triumph over a Florida team that had beaten the Auburn outfit held to a tie by Georgetown, the Old Liners hoisted themselves to the top of the local collegiate grid heap. They did it by frustrating Florida on the Maryland 2 early in the first period, twice more repulsing the Gators inside the 20, then accelerating their own attack in a gallant second half comeback.

It was Jack Mier, 167-pound back, who sprinted into the flat for a Mont pass early in the third period, then outhoofed the Florida secondary in scooting 24 yards to a touchdown. Mont presented Maryland a 7-0 lead by splitting the bars with

Florida took the opening kickoff and marched 78 yards to Maryland's 2, but at that juncture Jack Jones on Georgetown's 12, however, and fumbled Bill Latsko's lateral and Rigby recovered for the Old Liners

Mont punted out of immediate danger, but back roared the Gators to the 20. Jones' pass then bounced out of Mitchell's slippery hands into the eager paws of George Jarmoska, Maryland guard, to stymie that threat. Interrupted by Clock.

In the second period, before Maryland made its initial extensive advance, Nardo speared a fumble by Bill Corry of Florida to halt another drive on the Old Liners' 19 and later in the period Hubie Werner came out of nowhere to intercept a Jim Horsey pass on Maryland's 18. Some 10,000 fans still were marveling at Florida's spiffy running attouchdown in that scoreless first game half but with Bill Helbock, Wright and Werner alternating it moved 56 yards to Florida's 13 shortly before the half ended.

Wright and Werner consistently James in that drive. The Old Liners were hurt by a penalty after reaching the Florida 14, though, and a Mont to Rigby pass got them back only to the 13, where the Gators took over on downs.

Near Second Period Score. The clock interrupted Maryland's scoring ambitions in the first half, who flopped on the ball on Florida's fumble. Maryland failed to gain. but Florida was in a hole when Mont neatly placed a punt out of bounds

Two stabs at Florida's line netted a loss of 2 yards, but Mont then passed the scoring ammunition to Mier in the flat and he simply was too speedy for the Gator's embarrassed backs. Maryland was in the shadow of Mont snatched a Jones pass and then pegged a long pass to Lou Chacos that was ruled complete on Florida's 15 when Back George Sutherland pushed the receiver.

Old Liners Gain Eagles Slash Swiftly, Fiercely To Mangle Hoyas by 47-0

G. U. Team Never in Running From Start In Taking Worst Beating Since 1932

BOSTON, Oct. 31.—The mighty Boston College Eagles moved to the head of the class in the East on this Halloween afternoon by slaughtering a gallant, but outmanned Georgetown team by the almost unbelievable score of 47 to 0.

A Boston College victory was expected, but not by the margin that represented the Hoya's worst lacing, yet everything the Eagles did in a rough, poorly officiated drawn-out game before 30,000 spectators was right and everything. Georgetown did was wrong.

So swiftly did the Eagles strike goal was the tipoff that Boston held that Georgetown never got a chance to play its game. Long before the first period was over the score was 17 to 0, as a result of a field goal and two touchdowns, and the Hoyas. primarily a ground gaining team, had no choice but to pass the ball in an attempt to get back into the battle. Then, as if the absence of Johnny Barrett and Charley Miller was not bad enough, Georgetown lost the services of triple-threater Frank Don Currivan recovered for a dis-Dornfeld on the first play of the second quarter.

Dornfeld was painfully gashed on the right thigh by cleats, a wound requiring nine stitches to close, and when he was carried from the field Georgetown's hopes of even making the game close also were carried out. The Hovas never guit, however, and at the end they still were in there fighting, but literally. So loosely officiated was the struggle that it got out of hand and four playerstwo from each side-were banished.

After the Brawl Was Over

BOSTON, Oct. 31.—If the people who still find time to pick thical national championship football teams overlook Boston lege they well might be making a tarrible might be migh mythical national championship football teams overlook Boston College they well might be making a terrible mistake. The Eagles who are coached by feuding coaches-Head Guy Denny Myers and T Formation Specialist Boyd Brumbaugh-didn't lick a great Georgetown team when they won a 47-to-0 victory here today. But they did rout a team which had beaten Mississippi, Temple and tack when the Old Liners took over. Manhattan and which had tied Auburn. They slaughtered a Maryland couldn't punch over a team that had been hard to score on, an eleven that is big and warded in the final minute of to-

After the game Ray Hanken, the George Washington end coach and scout, dropped into the "Fifth Down Club" at Fenway Park, a special room featuring a free bar for newspapermen, coaches, scouts and professional hangers-on. "I came up here to scout Georgetown for the G. W. tore off chunks of 8 and 10 yards game," sighed Hanken, "and so help me I haven't got a note to take back and Mont inserted a 7-yard toss to Johnny Baker. Why, this Boston College team was so terrific that Georgetown never had a chance to play its game.

"Boston played five and six man lines. Both stopped the Georgetown attack. But the reason was sheer ability. The way Boston College looked today it could have played a three-man line and won."

The B. C. Squad Really Is Loaded

Boston College is loaded but good. The Eagles, under the able tutoring of Backfield Coach Brumbaugh, are almost carbon copies of the Old Liners moved to Florida's 33 be- Chicago Bears, with whom Brumbaugh played for some years. Too literally, perhaps, do the Eagles ape the Bears. "They aren't dirty players." Hanken was saying, "but they're rough. 'I could have cepted a Mont pass on Florida's 14 tackled him with my arms, said this Bear, but I thought a fist tackle would be more effective.'

It was entirely legitimate. By 'fist tackle' the fellow was putting action, with Rigby setting the stage it on a little strong. But he used his hands as far as the rule book allows for a score when he sprinted 36 and he stopped Farkas. That's the way these Boston college boys play-

Hanken Calls Eagles the College Cream

Hanken knows whereof he speaks. He was a great end at George Washington and he more than held his own while with the New York Giants. He's gone overboard on the Eagles and you can't blame him. "I think the best football game I ever saw," he said, "was that 19-18 game which Boston won from Georgetown two years ago. But, shucks, this B. C. club is better than that 1940 team. They're terrific." Results of Football Games Yesterday It's hard to compare Denny Myers' Boston College team with any Florida's goal again late in the other eleven. It seems to come closer to resembling the Bears. Denikos Flashy As Pacesetter For Vikings

Demoralizes Maroon Early; Blocked Kick Gains Big Marker

By GEORGE HUBER. Mike Denikos, Central's barrelchested little Greek fullback, proved 140-pound package of dynamic football talent yesterday as he led a high-geared Viking eleven to a 12-7 victory over its arch rival, Tech, in the 40th renewal of Washington's high school gridiron classic. Denikos scored neither of Central's ouchdowns, but his passing, kicking, runback of punts and his spirited leadership gave the Vikings much of their edge.

Close to 5,000 spectators at Central stadium were treated to one of the best games in the long series, featured as it was by Central's good passing, Tech's outstanding line play, several long runs and thrilling goal-line stands by both teams. Denikos quickly demoralized Tech with quick thrusts through the air Triumph, Knock and his kicking early in the game, and before the Maroons could reorganize and get its good running and his kicking early in the game, attack started the Vikings had an edge they were able to protect. Right at the start Denikos disrupted Tech's defenses with two long passes to Johnny Ward and

Bobby Mess that carried from Central's 35 to Tech's 35. He then kicked out inside Tech's 5.

Score on Blocked Kick. Tech almost got out of this hole dog Wisconsin, arising to gridiron when Jim Gilmore passed to Ernie heights, blasted Ohio State's Buck-Morrisette up to the 30, but a penalty called the Maroons back and they were forced to kick. Joe Tucker, The Badgers amazed most of the Central left guard, poured through 45,000 bulging-eyed spectators with to block the boot and End Bob Hill a 17 to 7 triumph. And the score pounced on the ball in Tech's end fust about tells the story. Wisconsin threatened three times and gan's placement was blocked.

The Vikings came back again in had one good scoring chance and the first period to pound at the goal, with Denikos' passes to Ward and Bob Troll and Gene Dunn's rush-Marlin (Pat) Harder, fleet Elroy ing carrying 50 yards to Tech's 5.

Ohio State's vaunted running attack, when he ran back 15 yards with Morrisette's punt to Tech's 35. On the next play Quarterback Mess passed to his brother Jim, Central's right end, for a touchdown. Dick Mould's dropkick was wide.

After that Tech took over and Central made only one more first down the rest of the game as the Maroon line began its work of tearing and pushing. It gave Tech all the edge, but only one of several scoring threats materialized.

Tech Makes Big Effort.

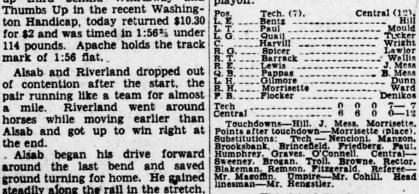

Still in the second period, Tech marched from its own 20 to Central's 35 on power plays by Morrisette and Gilmore, with a penalty finally aiding in stopping it. Tech just before the half made another Great Lakes and Purdue to come to drive from its 45 to Central's 10, today's all-important test undethis one going through the air with Dan O'Connell passing to Morrisette and Gilmore. The halftime march in the second period with a whistle halted this scoring bid.

In the third period the Maroons again threatened to no avail, reaching deep into Central territory when middle of the Buckeye wall for the George Paul and Miles Quail blocked Troll's punt and Warren Bentz recovered on the 10. Morrisette, Gilmore and Joe Flocker powered to within six inches of a score before Central took over at the start of the final quarter.

> With five minutes to go, Tech finally made one of its drives carry all the way. Starting from midfield pushed down, with Morrisette carrying over from only six inches out. His placement was good.

> With time almost run out Tech again drove deep into Viking territory, this time with Flocker and O'Connell passing, one of O'Connell's heaves to Al Nencioni reaching the 10. Bobby Mess ended this by intercepting O'Connell's next pass as the game ended. Tech outdid Central in first downs,

Tribe Much Improved Since Tough Battle With Philly Club

By LEWIS ATCHISON.

The lads from down under, down under the other four clubs in the National Football League's Eastern Division, will be with us this afternoon when Philadelphia's nonflying Eagles invade Griffith Stadium for a tussle with the Redskins. The kick-off is scheduled for 2:30.

Running roughshod over all com-petitors for the eastern crown, the Redskins are expected to make short shrift of Greasy Neale's gang. The Tribe is close to home in its pennant drive and the Phils are out of it merely playing out their schedule because the rules demand it. On form Washington should win by couple of touchdowns.

The Redskins en masse and personally think today's fracas will be a mild workout and nothing more. Dartmouth resembled Dartmouth on very few occasions, but one of these was at the start of the second period, when two passes ate up 80 yards and clicked for a score, Johnny Monahan, juggling the ball for a few seconds on the play, but finally

The irrepressible Longacre popped out for a 35-yard stroll midway in the third quarter, paving the way for John Korczowski to score a moment later from the 4, and chalked up another a few minutes later from the 6 after Ramsey recovered a Dart-mouth fumble on the first play following the kick-off.

With the score 28-7 at that point, Dartmouth's subs, played most of the remaining time and effected the last score at the start of the final period. Bertelli 'Sneaks' Yard Old Liners Thrill To End Irish Charge From Midfield

Creevey Gets 3-Pointer; Middies Once Reach 5, Muff Three Chances

CLEVELAND, Oct. 31. - Notre Dame's fighting Irish, beaten and tied in early season contests, continued on the come back trail to the football heights today by defeating a stubborn Navy eleven, 9 to 0, for their fourth straight conquest.

Notre Dame struck for a touchdown in the first two minutes of the second period, sending their "pitching" quarterback, Angelo Bertelli, Nips Cornell, 14-13, over from the 1-yard point on a sneak play, after a 50-yard march. They clinched it with a 17-yard field goal from placement in the fourth session by Quarterback Tom Creevey

Although a few more than 72,000 tickets had been sold for the classic, the actual crowd did not reach that figure. The best guess was that about 65,000 fans were in the huge

On Notre Dame's second play of the game, the center's pass eluded the entire T-formation backfield and Tackle Fred Schnurr of Navy recovered on the Irish 20. Bertelli halted the threat, however, by intercepting a pass in the end zone.

In the second period, after Notre Dame had gone out front, the Middies launched a 35-yard march which finally stalled on the Irish 5, Notre Dame taking the ball.

Sub halfback Harold Hamberg took Bertelli's return punt after the goal line stand, and raced 32 yards to the Irish 24, whence he passed to substitute end Roe Johnston on the goal line-but the wingman chance was gone.

However, the Navy yardage through the air lanes failed to help, all of it coming late in the game on desperation heaves when the Midshipmen were far behind.

The Navy line showed strength in stopping the Irish three times within the 3-yard line in the first session, while Hillis Hume, the Alliance, Ohio, flash, and his substitute, Bill Crawley, bore the brunt of the Navy attack. Quakers Strike Hard As Last-Half Cadet Passes Backfire

Weary West Point Team, Stalled by Rugged Foe, Never Threatens

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 31.—Penn's power-packed football forces bided their time for two periods today and then struck swiftly and surely three times in the second half to dump Army from the list of the Nation's unbeaten teams, 19-0, before an estimated throng of 68,000 in Franklin Field.

The Quakers' victory was clean cut and decisive, even though two of their three touchdowns resulted from pass interceptions deep in Army territory. Army's vaunted offense, which had clicked so effectively in four previous games this season, was stalled at every important stage by Penn's rugged for-

Penn struck first early in the third quarter, when Halfback John Welsh intercepted an ill-advised pass by Army's captain, Hank Mazur, and ran it back 29 yards to the Cadets' before being hauled down. Bert Stiff, the Quaker's abrasive fullback, cracked it on across the line on his third attempt.

Army Wearies Near Finish.

Again in the final period the Cadets, weary of buffeting themselves against the Penn line, tried another aerial from deep in their own back yard, and this time Donald Bitler, Quaker center, snared it and went all the way-32 yardsfor the score that buried Army's last

It was a tired, dispirited and disappointed Army team that a few moments later permitted Paxson Gifford, an unsung Penn reserve, to break loose on a 52-yard jaunt that carried him within 3 yards of its goal line. There was little resistance left as Bob Brundage, substitute fullback, dived over from 6 inches out for the third touchdown. Penn's wealth of reserve strength finally had worn the Cadets down Dick Martin place-kicked the ex-

"We have a big one at Phoenix, Ariz., and one or two more in Texas, which we haven't dated yet, but we'll have 'em," said Corcoran. "Unless there's a big change in the setup. we expect to have a fairly good schedule during the coming winter."

Wisconsin a 10 to 0 margin by booting a field goal.

The Buckeyes kept ramming away, losing the ball on fumbles or being stopped by the savage Wisconsin defense, un'il early in the last period. Relying on the running of Fekcte and Horvath, Ohio moved to its 32 in the last minutes of the third period and kept right on going in the fourth. A couple of passes, George Slusser to Horvath and Horvath to Bob Shaw, gave the Bucks a first down on the 11 and from there Sarringhaus went over on fourth down and Fekete kicked the point. The Buckeye score aroused the Badgers to new fury and they marched the length of the field to score once more. Hirsch raced the kickoff from back of his goal line to the Wisconsin 34. Then the Harder-and-Hirsch one-two punch, with help from Mark Hoskins and passes from Hoskins to Hirsch and Hirsch to Schreiner, moved the ball to the Ohio 15. The Buckeyes stopped Harder dead once, but the Badgers unfolded the most spectacular play of the game for their final score.

Hirsch started to his right, apparently headed on another end run, but stopped suddenly and fired a pass diagonally to Schreiner. The big Badger end was all alone as he caught the fall and took one step over the goal line.

The Badgers trailed in first downs, *2 to 15, but outrushed the famous Buckeye ground forces, 242 yards to Ohio State completed seven of 15 passes for 66 yards, but Wisconsin came up with a sharp-shooting demonstration that completed five of seven.

Game at Indianapolis Tonight Will Finish Three-Tilt Jaunt

The Washington Lions, local en-try in the American Hockey League will end a three-game road trip at Indianapolis tonight when they face the Capitals, then head for their adopted home, where they'll meet the Providence Reds at Uline Arena on Wednesday night.

The Lions, who have the local ce hockey field to themselves following the withdrawal of the Washington Eagles from the Eastern League, will tackle Indianapolis here Saturday night in their second home

Sees Capacity Crowd. Benny Robinson, Uline Arena box office manager, yesterday predicted a possible capacity crowd for the Lions' opener. He reports a fine advance sale despite the fact the Lions have been struggling along with a skeleton squad bolstered by players borrowed from other American League teams.

Wingman Paul Courteau, the flery little French-Canadian who per formed three seasons with Eagles; Rod Lorrain, Walter Zuke and Charlie Phillips are expected to join the Lions here tomorrow, while Gaston Gauthier, Paul LeClere and Roger Leger hope to put in an appearance sometime this week—possibly in time for Wednesday's game.

The Lions will return with several veterans of last season's club in Coach George Mantha, Goalie Paul Gauthier, Lou Trudel, Alex Singbush, Peggy O'Neil, Frank Mailley and Zuke, but expected to provide the Lions' color is the hot-headed Courteau to Lure Fans. A favorite with Riverside Stadium fans for three seasons, the chunky Courteau alone may lure most of the crowd that regularly attended Eagles' games. He should be a shot in the arm for a team that displayed little color last season.

Providence stars who will square off with the Lions include Goalie Mike Karakas, formerly of the Chicago Blackhawks; Norm Calladine and Whizzer Aubuchon. The Reds, with three borrowed players, registered an upset in their opener, when they walloped the powerful Buffalo

Game's Officials Were No Bargains

We wouldn't profess to know the reason, but today's struggle was about as warlike as any you are likely to see for a long time. Not only Harrier Meet Record were the players swinging fists, but in the stands at least a half a dozen fights broke out and not even mounted police at the finish could prevent the absolute destructoin of the goal posts.

Offhandedly, we'd guess that the war has something to do with this militaristic attitude. Less offhandedly we'd say that one reason why the game, itself, was so rough was because of poor officiating. Old Liners, Generals Navy Pre-Flight Heads To Speak at Hoyas' Grid Luncheon

Hamilton, Crowley Among Former Football Stars Scheduled to Talk

Lt. Comdr. Tom Hamilton, head Maryland will play its homeof the Navy's pre-flight physical program, and Lt. Comdr. Jimmy Crowley, former Fordham coach and now mentor of the North Carolina Cloudbusters, will be among the speakers tomorrow at a luncheon at the Touchdown Club given by Georgetown University in honor of the Navy officials. The program, which will include some high light's on the Navy's toughening-up course, considered the most rigorous extant, will be aired by the National Broadcasting Co. between 1:15 and 1:45, with

Steve Douglas in the role of master of ceremonies. Crowley's eleven, 9-0 victor over previously unbeaten Syracuse yes-If the Maryland-Washington and Saturday night at Griffith Stadium forced to use freshmen and sopho-Lee clash measures up to the last in a game that will feature an ex- mores untested under fire. For Comdr. Hank Wickhorst. Hamilton's teammate on one of the Naval lege Park and had to battle hard to Academy's greatest teams, and Lt. Comdr. Harvey Harmon, director of athletics at the North Carolina school, also will speak.

Furman's Squad of 19 Crushed by Miami

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 31.—Miami had too much power for Furman's small football squad today and punched out a 32-13 decision before 7,421 spectators. Miami's winning edge was put together in the first half and Furman's squad, only 19 men in all,

Mustangs Are Overcome After Matching Early Longhorn Touchdown

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 31.-Roy Dale McKay and Jackie Field today dealt the death blow—for this year at least—to the Mustang jinx, leading Texas to a conclusive 21-to-7 football victory our Southern Methodist. It was the second consecutive year for Texas to trim the team it always has found hardest to beat. Texas scored early in the first period, mixing passes and cuts through tackle for a 50-yard drive. McKay drove to the 8, passed to Wally Scott for a first down and then plunged to the Mustang 6-inch line.

On the next play, he pushed it cross and then converted. In a matter of minutes Southern Methodists' well-known aerial game tied the score. Two long passes over the Texas goal were broken up, with Wayne Shaw doing the chucking. The second was ruled interference and Shaw rammed across the line in two tries, with Ed Green's placement bringing the extra point. Texas made it 14-7 in the second, with Field's speed and passing bringing the score. He passed to Jack West on the 13, made another first down, and in three plays scored.

McKay kicked the extra point. Texas scored its last touchdown in the final period, hacking away at the stubborn Methodist tackles. Mc-Kay sparked the drive, but it was Field who went wide around end for the score. Again McKay's kick was

Georgetown

(Continued From Page C-1.) Georgetown half back, paved the way for the third scoring play of the initial period. Co-capt. Fred Naumetz, later banished for fighting with Tackle George Perpich of the Hoyas, recovered the ball on the Hovas' 25 and in two plays Boston was across the goal. Holovak ran 16 yards and then Sophomore Bob Mangene skirted end for the touchdown. Connolly's kick made

Despite a scoreless second period, what followed was a nightmare for the Hoyas. Dornfeld was carried off the field and Coach Jack Hagterday, will meet Georgetown next erty, hard pressed for backs, was awhile they did all right. Georgetown got down to B. C. 's 31 in the second period, playing against the Eagles' No. 2 team, and on another drive they reached the enemy 40. But the second team, working as a unit in a game for the first time, was too much for the Hoyas. It was down on G. U.s-2 just before the half ended and only Center Ed Derring's interception of a pass behind his goal prevented another ouchdown. With the resumption of play, the first Boston team was back in the game. Mangene took the Georgetown kickoff and ran from his 15 to the Hoya 24. Two plays later Holovak broke through the center of the line for another touchdown.

making it 23-0. Thereafter it was a rout. Georgetown fought grimly and gamely, but the Hoyas plainly were outclassed. Connolly also scored in the third period, making it 29-0, and in the final quarter with the Boston second and third teams in the game. three more touchdowns were added. Bill Commane went across to culminate a sustained drive. Substitute Center Manny Zissis intercepted a pass from Gyorgydeak and ran 55 yards for another touchdown and the final touchdown was added by Freshman Dick Doherty, who caught a pass thrown by Carl Lucas, another sub.

The failure of Georgetown's line to stop the Boston running attack —the Eagles gained 384 yards on the ground-came as a surprise, but not all of the stars were on the winning side. For the Hoyas' end Bob Duffey and Quarterback Eddie Agnew were notably impressive and as long as Dornfeld was in the battle he was a major figure.

Count Fleet Runs Away From Favored Occupation to Take Pimlico Futurity

Hertz Colt Smashes Stake Mark, Ties Track Record

Wins 11-16-Mile Event In 1:43 3-5; Finishes Six Lengths Ahead

By DONALD SANDERS,

Associated Press Sports Writer. BALTIMORE, Oct. 31.—The speedy Count Fleet today stamped himself the probable winter book favorite for next season's 3-year-old racing classics when he carried the yellow and black silks of Mrs. John D. Hertz of Chicago to an easy victory in the Pimlico Futurity.

In a three-colt race in which only two ever were contenders, the big son of Reigh Count-Quickly romped to a six-length victory over the oddson favorite, John Marsch's Occupation. W. L. Brann's Vincentive was third.

In winning the 20th running of the juvenile classic before an estimated Army emergency relief day crowd of more than 15,000. Count Fleet lowered by a second and onefifth the stake record set in 1931 by the filly Top Flight. His time of 1:43% for the 11-16 miles also equaled the track record.

Keeps Mark From Occupation. Count Fleet shattered one Top Flight mark, but he saved another. In scoring his ninth victory in 14 starts, he kept Occupation from bettering Top Flight's all-time earnings record for a 2-year-old.

The purse of $30,820 ran Count Fleet's winnings for the season to $66,545. Had Occupation won, he would have passed Top Flight's earning record of $219,000, but he had to be content with the $2,500 place purse, which ran his season's total to $192,355.50, a record for a 2-year-old colt.

Once Count Fleet put on the pressure on the stretch turn there never was any doubt about the outcome, and Jockey Johnny Longden said after it was all over the Count would have broken the track record if he had resorted to the whip. There was win pool wagering only and Count Fleet returned $4.50 for $2. Occupation was the favorite at Wins by Six Lengths.

The three got away to a good the Count's initial advantage as they raced down past the stands. Cox in co-features. Count Fleet broke from the third post position and was forced to the outside around the clubhouse turn. He held on even terms with Oc-ever, and the two raced nose and nose up the stretch and into the far turn. Midway around, Longden called on the Count for more speed and he gradually pulled away. By the time they entered the stretch the Count held a margin of three lengths, and all of Georgie Woolf's efforts with the Bulldog colt were unavailing. Longden did not touch his bat, but Count Fleet pulled away easily to win by six lengths. Occupation held a margin of four lengths over Vincentive. ridden by Paul Keiper, at the finish. Although Occupation had beaten him twice at distances shorter than a mile, the Count, holder of a world record for the mile as run by a 2-year-old, thus proved his ability to cover a distance in better time. Occupation never had raced at more than 61/2 furlongs before today.

Long and Shapiro Matched For Wrestling Headliner

Feature honors on next Wednesday night's wrestling show at 6-Cousin Nan, Taunt, Marion Col-Turner's Arena will be turned over to Johnny Long, the Baltimore shipyard worker, and Benny Shapiro of Canada.

Long and Shapiro are down for s one-hour time limit match. A two-man bout has been added to the card. In one corner will be Maurice La Chappelle and Ace Freeman, while in the other will be Jim Austeri and John Vanski.

Long, with a record of 15 out of 16 local victories, scored over John Melas last week.

Knox, a corporal in the Army, stationed at Bolling Field, was a topflighter a few years ago and still should be smart enough to outfox Parks. The colored boy is a terrific right-hand puncher, though, and if he belts Buddy on the whiskers he'll win by a knockout.

Colan is a rough and ready fighter who kayoed Steve Mamakos last year held near Herndon, Va. in climaxing a string of notable victories. His opponent is from Washington, but has been making New York his headquarters.

Blake is well known in town since his upset victory over Lou Brooks a couple of weeks ago. Before that he stopped Jabbo Kenner, but his win over Brooks was his most notable achievement. It was a bloody brawl and if Wint can't take some punishment he has no business in there with the Baltimorean.

Wint, a former amateur, claims victories over Joe Baksi, the fellow who outpointed Jimmy De Chard and then kayoed Parker.

> national Affairs. Ona K. D. Ringwood and H. P. Whidden, jr., summarize this report for the Foreign Policy Association: "There is a growing consensus in Britain that post-war Europe will present a grim picture of malnutrition, disease and starvation.

> "The task (of solving these problems) will have to be a co-operative effort (with the United States) with available supplies and services pooled and allotted according to The report of the institute sug> gests six major steps by Great Britain to get ready for post-war 1. Establishment of a department of economic welfare in Britain and a reconstruction and supply authority for all the United Nations to supply the machinery for planning and execution of post-war rehabilitation. 2. Formation of a corporation by British, American and other Allied capital to own all bulk commodities. such as wheat, fodder and coal. Such a centralized control, the institue says, will be dictated by the necessity for assigning supplies and shipping. 3. Creation of a medical relief organization for the whole world. Transport Czar Favored. 4. Creation of a director-general of transport, to control both shipping and inland transportation, to act in concert with the overall reconstruction and supply authority. 5. Collection of information as soon as possible and arrangement for transport of foreign labor and prisoners 6. Continuance of the lend-lease principle after the war, because there can be no immediate prospect Dividends Announced of a return to a free economy in European countries. The success of such a move, the report concludes, will depend ultimately on the post financial arrangements made between the United States and Great Britain. In addition to the Ringwood-Whidden report, Whidden alone, working under a grant from the Carnegie Corp. to the Foreign Policy Association, has made one of the most comprehensive studies published in this country on British ideas of the post-conflict world. His compilation shows the widest divergence of views on what our new world should be like. Attitudes Differ. These three, chosen from many, give his conclusion as to the attitude of important groups: The British government-"Members of the government have * * * indicated the general principles on which they expect to proceed. Oliver Lyttleton, minister of production, declared * * * 'the essence of democracy should be a balance between the organizing power of the state and the driving power of the individual.' "British industrialists and businessmen were told by Mr. Bevin (Ernest Bevin, minister of labor) that the extent of state control after the war would depend in large measure on whether moral force proved strong enough to bring about the high standards of life and freedom required by common opinion.

"These government opinions were followed by Sir William Beveridge's blunt warning (Beveridge is not a member of the government) that private control of the means of production * * * whatever might be said for or against it on other grounds, could not be described as an essential liberty of the British people,' and that the state must be prepared to use its powers to whatever extent proves necessary in maintaining full employment after the war."

Churches Offer Program. The churches-"The Commission of the Churches for International Friendship and Social Responsibility has proposed the following charter for a world economy: Every nation and community

Another Embassy Will Be Added To List Here as Iran Appoints Mohamed Ali Foroughi Envoy

Former Prime Minister of Country Will Bring Family to Washington When Transportation Will Permit

By Katharine Brooks.

Another embassy will be added to the diplomatic corps in this Capital-how soon will depend on the transportation from Tehran, capital of ancient Iran. The Shah, Riza Kahn Pahlevi, has appointed Mr. Mohamed Ali Foroughi as his Ambassador and he will leave Tehran as soon as transportation is available. Mr. Foroughi was Prime Minister of his country until March of this year and in the past has held other important posts. The newly appointed Ambassador was born in 1870 and has had a varied and interesting career, serving for some time as President of the Assembly of the League of Na-

Mr. Foroughi will be accompanied to Washington by his daughter, Miss Hamideh Foroughi, and his two sons and daughters-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Massoud Foroughi and their yearold child, Iraj, and Mr. and Mrs. Mahmoud Foroughi and their small youngster, Nasrim. They will be lively and very welcome additions to the corps and no doubt there will be considerable entertaining of an informal nature at the new embassy after the arrival of the newly appoint-ed Ambassador and his interesting family.

The present Minister, Mr. Mohammed Schayesteh, was the first envoy from Iran after the two governments resumed diplomatic relations. He came in the very early days of last year, presenting his credentials February 13, 1940. Mrs. Schayesteh came to this country at that time but spent some months in the South before coming to Washington. The diplomatic relations were severed in January, 1936, when the then Minister, Mr. Ghaffer Djalal, was recalled following an unpleasant incident of his speeding automobile through Elkton, Md. Mrs. Djalal, a native of England, and her Minister-husband made themselves rather poplar during the two and a half years of life in Washington, with scores of small, gay and very informal parties which they gave several times a week.

The Legation, which the Iran government purchased from the estate of the late Mrs. Francois Berger Moran, was reopened by (See BROOKS, Page D-7.)

CHAIRMAN AND AIDE HAVE

Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, who is general chairman for the concert, and Mrs. Bernard M. Baruch, jr., map future work for the concert which the National Symphony Orchestra will give for the Fund, while they have tea. Col. and Mrs. Guggenheim will be hosts at supper after the program.

Ruth Lonergan Bride Last Night Of Lt. Lockhart

Former Senator's Daughter Married In Rectory Here

Simplicity marked the wedding yesterday of Miss Ruth Ellen Longergan, daughter of the former Senator and Mrs. Lonergan of Washington and Connecticut, to Lt. Charles M. Lockhart, jr., of Alibene, Tex., now serving with the Engineering Corps at Fort Belvoir.

The rectory of St. Thomas the Apostle Church was the scene of the 4 o'clock ceremony, which was followed by a small and informal reception at the Cordova, where the former Senator and his family reside. There was an effective display of fall foliage and flowers in the rectory and similar decorations were used at the reception. The Rev. Joseph M. Moran officiated.

The bride was escorted by her father. She wore a becoming gown of powder blue wool cut (See WEDDING, Page D-5.)

JUNIOR COMMITTEE MEMBERS HOLD CONSULTATIONS ON THEIR DUTIES. At left-Miss Betty Frost and Miss Barbara Vickery look over the uses to which the Community War Fund will be put so they can explain its value when they interest music lovers in the program which Dr. Hans Kindler has arranged for Wednesday evening. He has donated his time and talent as conductor of the Orchestra as a part of his contribution to the Fund.

At right-Miss Jane Wyatt, Miss Marjorie Souby and Miss Suzanne Kappler look over the plan of Constitution Hall, which the DAR has donated so that all proceeds from the event may reach the Fund. Members of the Junior Committee will distribute the programs that evening, and since the group was formed each member has done her share in increasing the number of patrons.

Diplomats Giving Full Support To Community Fund Concert

Success Is Assured for Symphony

Orchestra Program This Wednesday Diplomats representing United Nations are giving their support and aid to the Community War Fund, from which numbers of the foreign relief groups will benefit. The concert Wednesday evening of the National Symphony Orchestra, which will add to this fund, will be well attended by members of the diplomatic corps. This concert, which precedes the opening of the orchestra's regular series of winter concerts, has been donated to the War Fund. Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor, and Miss Gladys Swarthout, the soloist, have given their services, and the latter will make the trip from New York for the occasion. The National Symphony Orchestra Association has donated the orchestra for this program and the Daughters of the American Revolution has given the use of Constitution Hall as a contribution to the War Fund. Other expenses incident to the concert

Oregonian Visits Family in and Near Capital

The Commandant of Bolling Field and Mrs. Lewis R. Parker have had as their guest in their quarters at the field the latter's father, former State Senator Samuel M. Garland of Lebanon,

Mr. Garland, who has been in the East a month or more, joined his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Powell Garland, Thursday in their Alexandria home. He will be with them several weeks before starting back to his Western home, and en route he will visit his daughter, Mrs. Lamport, wife of Maj. Warren Lamport of Fort Mason, in her home in Eugene, Oreg.

Mrs. Crowell, wife of Dr. Dean R. Crowell of North Bend, Oreg., spent a week with Col. and Mrs. Parker while her father, Mr. Garland, was with them.

will be cared for in such a way as to assure the entire proceeds for the Fund. Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, the latter general chairman for the benefit, will entertain at a buffet supper at Fierenze, their home on Albemarle street, in honor of Miss Swarthout after the program Wednesday evening.

The regular season of concerts by the orchestra will open Sunday afternoon, November 8, and the first of the Wednesday evening subscription concerts will be given November 11, all, of course, in Constitution Hall.

The Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz are among the boxholders for the concert Wednesday although the Countess is in South America, where she went to attend the wedding of her son, Lt. Charles van der Straten-Ponthoz. and Miss Olivia Duggan November 17 in Buenos Aires. Others from the diplomatic corps who have taken boxes are the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera, his Britannic Majesty's Ambassador and Lady Halifax, the Polish Ambassador and Mme. Ciechanowska, the Soviet Ambassador and Mrs. Litvinov, the Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. Loudon, the Norwegian Ambassador and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, the Yugoslav Ambassador and Mme. Fotitch, the Greek Ambassador and Mme. Diamantopoulos, the Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Wei, the Czechoslovakian Minister and Mme. Hurban, the Luxembourg Minister and Mme. First Meet of the Fairfax Hunt Enjoyed by Many of Social Set

Mr. and Mrs. Lisle A. Smith Hosts; Breakfast at Estate of Col. Eglin

Hunters' horns resounded yesterday in the Fairfax vicinity. for this was the day of the first meet of the Fairfax Hunt. Always a popular event on the calendar each year, there was no exception to the rule yesterday and the festivities marking the meet were as delightful as in the past. Some 100 horse lovers in nearby Virginia enjoyed true Southern hospitality both before the hunt and later.

Assembling at Silver Glade, the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Lisle A. Smith, the hunters got off to a merry start. Here, at a very early hours, they partook of stirrup cups, delicious hot beaten biscuits and coffee. Mrs. Smith, the former Mrs. Neitah King, seemed to be everywhere seeing that her guests were cared for and the ladies who did not follow the hounds remained with her until the hunt was over.

In keeping with the hunting theme, Mrs. Smith had her table covered with a cloth embroidered with colorful figures of hunters, horses and hounds, and as a centerpiece there was a cunning stuffed fox. Cheering fires were burning in the fireplace in the attractive old house. It was a colorful and exciting scene when the hunt got under way with the riders in their pinks following the many spirited and beautiful dogs down the main field of the Smith estate. Several hours later the hunt was over and those participating joined with the spectators at the estate of Col. H. W. T. Eglin, vice president of the Fairfax Hunt, where a typical hunt breakfast was served Autumn leaves and chrysanthemums in bright hues from the gardens of the Eglins' place, which is located in Lewinsville, Va., were used about the spacious rooms of the house. Fires burned inside and guests lingered long to enjoy the delicious refreshments and the lively conversation which is always heard when this group gets together.

The long table was laid in the dining room and guests were served buffet fashion. There was turkey, Virginia ham, beaten biscuits, several types of salads and the delicacies which make up a true Southern meal. Mrs. Elgin had assisting her Mrs. Frederick Dawson Richardson, Mrs. Ralph Tallant and Mrs. Robert Graham, whose husband is secretary-treasurer of the organization. Mr. Stewart Preece, M. F. H., and Mrs. Preece, both having enjoyed the brisk hunt, were constantly the center of an animated group as were Mr. A. Smith Bowman, president of the hunt, and Mrs. Bowman.

Two important events planned for members of the hunt will be the breakfast given by Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Mackall, jr., and Mr. Charles Pickett at Langley, following the hunt November 14, and the breakfast at which Dr. and Mrs. George Bolling Lee will be hosts following the hunt November 26.

Col. and Mrs. Kates Hosts at Party In Arlington

Lt. Col. and Mrs. Don B. Kates gave a late afternoon fete yesterday in their Arlington home, when the decorations were in keeping with the day of Halloween. The guests were members of Col. Kates' staff in the headquarters of the Services of Supply of the War Department.

Capt. Henry M. Hayungs, a student at the Fort Belvoir School, who recently came from Fort McPherson, Ga., is the guest over Sunday of Col. and Mrs. Kates and was among those at the party. Others included Col. Norman A. Donges, Lt. Col. and Mrs. John Smuck, Maj. and Mrs. Edmund Jones, Capt. and Mrs. Elliott Badanes, Capt. and Mrs. Earl Savitt, Capt. Erwin Ezzes, Capt, and Mrs. Charles E. Miller. Capt. A. O'Donoghue and Lt. and Mrs. Maynard Hann.

By the Way—

Of all the volunteer workers at National Red Cross Headquarters there probably is none more sincerely loved than young Adelaide Whitehouse, assistant director for Volunteer Special Services and secretary to the national director, Mrs. Dwight Davis. From her capable boss, Mrs. Davis, right on down to the most menial employe at headquarters, every one adores Miss Whitehouse.

Hers is a fulltime job. She reports for work every morning promptly at 9. and she stays until her work is finished. She isn't, say all her co-workers. a clock watcher. She doesn't count the time that it takes to finish a job. She sees that it's finished and ADELAIDE WHITEHOUSE. finished well. Before she volunteered her services to the Red Cross, she completed a secretarial course. She is not only a topnotch secretary in point of training and study, but she has, Mrs. Davis says, all the other attributes of a good secretary. She is tactful and soft-spoken and, for one so young, almost unbelievably wise. (She is still in her early 20s.) She is a perfect counterbalance for Mrs. Davis . . . for the Red Cross dynamic director is imbulsive, impatient to get things tione, sometimes (she says herself) a little intolerant of delay. To the quiet, clear - thinking ment and Mrs. Davis' enthusiasm and vitality and quick thinking form a team that is just about unbeatable. A daughter of the William Whitehouses of Newport, Miss Whitehouse comes of a distinguished and cultured background and, like most really well-bred people, she is totally "unclass conscious." She is that all - too - rare combination ... a beauty with a brain. Mrs. Davis says that Adelaide never forgets anything (and she doesn't have to write it down, either). If she weren't doing volunteer war work, she'd make a wonderful secretary for a business executive. And don't think she hasn't been offered big salaries to do just that.

It was in 1939 that Miss Whitehouse first came to the Red Cross. She had taken her secretarial course in New York after graduating from Foxcroft School and right away she came to Washington. At that time Mrs. Davis was in charge of production for the District of Columbia Chapter of the Red Cross and in 1940 she came to national headquarters as assistant to Miss Mabel Boardman. An informal wedding of yesterday which is of interest here took place in Warrenton when Miss Isabella Fitzhugh Hart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Miles Taylor Hart of Warrenton, and Mr. William Keith-Falconer Grant of Alexandria were married in St. James Episcopal

White chrysanthemums and asparagus fern decorated the altar for the afternoon ceremony and Miss Ann Bartenstein, a cousin of the bride, played the same program of wedding music that her mother, Mrs. I. E. Bartenstein, played at the wedding of the bride's mother. The Rev. Samuel B. Chilton of Ashland, Va., officiated at 3:30 o'clock, assisted by the Rev. Paul D. Bowden, rector of St. James.

Escorted by her father and given by him in marriage, the bride wore a street length dress of sapphire blue velvet with a dubonnet hat and shoes and a corsage of white orchids. A diamond brooch, the gift of an aunt, was worn at the surplice neckline of her dress.

Miss Agnes Conway Childs of Casanova, Va., was the maid of honor and was dressed in gold velveteen with brown accessories and wore a corsage of talisman roses.

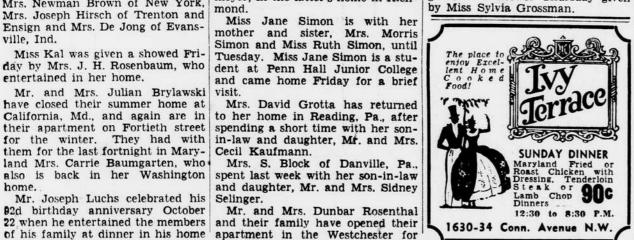

The bridegroom, who is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Henry Colles Grant of Remington, had for his best man his brother-in-law, Mr. George H. Chilton of Dakota, Va. A reception after the ceremony was held at the home of the bride's parents, after which Mr. and Mrs. Grant left for a wedding trip. They will make their home in Warrenton with Mr. and Mrs. Hart.

Announcement is made of the marriage Monday of Miss Mildred Kraus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Kraus of Boston, to Mr. Euguests of their daughter, Mrs. Hil- gene L. McCubbins, jr., son of Mr. yer Gearing. Mrs. Gearing has and Mrs. McCubbins of Spartan-

The ceremony took place in Trinity Methodist Church, which was decorated with palms and tall standards of white chrysanthemums. Mrs. Blanche Hutchinson played the wedding marches. The Rev. Daniel Justice officiated at 7:30 o'clock in the evening.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and was gowned in ivory satin made on princess lines and trimmed with seed pearls. Her illusion veil was caught to a coronet of rose point lace and seed pearls, and her necklace of pearls was the gift of the bridegroom. Bride's roses showered with liles of the valley formed her bouquet.

Miss Emma Louise McQuinn was the maid of honor and only attendant. Her gown of ice green satin and faille was made like the bride's, and she wore a headdress of ice green net and forget-me-nots and carried a bouquet of yellow roses. Mr. Oscar Lewis Reamy served as best man, and Mr. Robert Crouch and Mr. Melvin Lawson were the ushers.

A reception after the ceremony was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. McCubbins leaving later for a trip through the South. They will make their home in Washington.

Miss Graves Wed To W. H. Pryor In Kensington

Reception Held After Ceremony In Warner Church

The marriage of Miss Margaret Elizabeth Graves, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ralph Graves of Germantown, Md., to Mr. William Harmon Pryor of Spokane, Wash., son of Mrs. Louisa Hamilton Pryor of this city, took place yesterday afternoon in Warner Memorial Presbyerian Church in Kensington.

Fall flowers with palms and lighted candles decorated the church for he ceremony, at which the Rev. Wendell S. Tredick officiated at 4 clock, and Mrs. John W. Trader played the wedding music.

The bride is a graduate of George Washington University, where she was a member of Sigma Kappa and Mortar Board, and Mr. Pryor was graduated from Southeastern University school of law. He is now in the employ of the Department of Justice and stationed with the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Ivory faille taffeta was worn by the bride, who was given in marriage by her father. The bodice of her gown was fitted, and the skirt was full and made with a long train. A tiara of pearls held her veil of Illusion, and she also wore a strand of pearls, which was the gift of the bridegroom. Her bouquet was a shower of white gladioluses centered with an orchid.

Mrs. John W. Kitterman, sister of the bride, was the matron of honor and was dressed in orchid taffeta made like the dress of the bride. She wore a coronet of yellow daisies and carried a bouquet of the Wearing a long dress of yellow taffeta, little Sally Graves, niece of the bride, served as flower girl. Her headdress was formed by bows of yellow ribbons, and she carried a nosegay of lavender sweet peas.

Mr. John H. Pryor was best man for his brother, and Mr. Warren E. Lawson, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Ensign John W. Kitterman served as ushers.

A reception after the ceremony was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Graves, brother and sister-in-law of the bride, in Bethesda. The hostess was assisted by the mother of the bride and the mother of the bridegroom, the latter wearing green crepe with gold trim, of Takoma Park were hosts at a younger set, and last night Mrs.

along afternoon lines. Her hat was a black felt model with a veil and she wore a corsage of white baby camellias.

Miss Lucy Waters Lonergan, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor and Lt. David Gerry Connally, jr., of Tyler, Tex., was the best man for Lt. Lockhart. The maid of honor wore an afternoon gown of wine velvet with black accessories and her mother likewise chose wine velvet for the wedding. Both wore corsages of orchids.

The bride is a graduate of Georgetown Visitation Convent and also attended Gunston Hall. She is a member of the Senate Daughters and of the Society of University, where Lt. McMullen was Sponsors of the United States Navy, graduated in June. Among the having christened the U.S.S. Stark. Lt. Lockhart is a graduate of the University of Texas. He is the son Clements, Miss Betty Cissel, Miss of Mr. Charles M. Lockhart of Austin and the late Mrs. Lockhart. At the conclusion of a wedding trip to New York the young couple will make their home in Alexandria. The wedding of the former Miss Lonergan is of particular interest in Maryland, where her mother's family long has been prominently identified. Her grandfather was the late Dr. Charles H. Waters, wellknown physician in nearby Maryland for many years.

Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding was Mrs. Joseph A. Higgins, niece of the former Senator.

Wedding Held In Nashville of Interest Here

A wedding of much interest in Washington took place in Nash-ville, Tenn., October 24, when Miss Audrey Marie Kemp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Kemp, became the bride of Lt. James Ed-came the bride of Lt. James Edmond Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson of Frankfort, Ky.

The ceremony was performed in Christ Church Chapel, with the Rev. Thomas Wynne Scott Thompson officiating. The arrangements for the wedding were marked with simplicity. There were palms and ferns on the altar and the ceremony was performed in candlelight. As the guests entered the edifice an organ recital was given.

The bride was escorted and given in marriage by her father. Her wedding gown was unusually lovely. It was made of blush satin with an empire neckline, a yoke of net and long sleeves which extended, into points over the hands. The full skirt fell in a graceful circular train and her tulle veil was held in place by a coronet of gardenias and stephanotis, which corresponded with the flowers in her bouquet. Mr. Thompson was best man for his son.

A reception for the family and a few close friends followed in the Hotel Hermitage.

The bride is a graduate of the College of William and Mary and is a member of the Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority. Lt. Thompson is a graduate of the University of Kentucky and a member of the Phi Delta Theta Fraternity. He also is a graduate from the Harvard officers' candidate school in air administrations. Both the bride and the bridegroom took graduate work at George Washington University. In addition to the bride and bridegroom's parents, others at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Van Houten of Cincinnati, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Huff, Mr. and Mrs. S. Cecil Ewing of Nashville and Lt. Joseph N. Box of Grapevine, Tex.

Lt. Thompson and his bride left

The marriage of Miss Barbara Baen Patterson and Ensign Frank Lincoln Moon took place October 24 in St. Alban's Church where the Rev. Dr. Charles T. Warner offi-

Lighted candles were on the altar and the bride, who is the daughter Are Entertaining of Mrs. Edgar S. Patterson of Syracuse, N. Y., and Saskatchewan, Canada, and the late Mr. Patterson, Monday afternoon at a dessert was escorted and given in marriage bridge party by her uncle, Dr. Daniel Baen Street. Her gown of deep cream satin was made with a long basque and a full skirt ending in a circular train and the cap which held her full length veil was made of old rose point and Duchesse lace. The white prayer book with which she carried white orchid was the gift of the bridegroom and was used by Dr. Warner for the ceremony. The bride attended the National Cathedral School for Girls and Ogontz Junior College and was graduated from Wellesley College.

Mrs. Benjamin McElhinney, jr., was the matron of honor and was dressed in blue satin with a headdress of blue ostrich tips. Her flow-

BUY-LINES · by Nancy Sasser A Weekly Sponsored Column of Things Advertised and Interestin

New York, Oct. 31st. Tonight's the eve of witchery . . . Hallowe'en with its fun and frolic for the young in heart. And it's a turning point to all of us, too . . . change from balmy days of Fall into November and the series of winter activities that crowd the calendar from now on through Thanksgiving and Christmas. Most important bit of wisdom for these coming days is "SHOP EARLY." Remember that wartime makes this imperative,-packages must be mailed early, rush must be avoided. So why not begin your Christmas shopping NOW?you'll help the store give you better service, help the Postman with his Christmas deliveries! And here is news of BUY-LINES recommended for immediate purchase-

Boom . . . boom . . . boom! Birth rate booms to highest in 20 years! So I decided to see how newborns are cared for these days. I discovered there's been wonderful prog-ress in keeping babies safer. This year, in the U.S. alone, more than 100,000 babies will live who would have died at less than one year of age if born 20 years ago! That's chiefly because Medical Science is keeping babies safer from harmful germs. I learned that, as one highly important step, most hospital nurseries now oil baby's entire body daily with MENNEN Antiseptic Oil. This keeps delicate skin safer from germs . . . helps prevent impetigo, diaper rash, etc. What's more, there are anodyne ingredilieve itching skin, help prevent six vitamins necessary to health scratching. Doctors and hospitals plus the calcium, phosphorus and say, "continue this antiseptic, anodyne protection at home!" Use MENNEN Antiseptic Oil on baby's body daily thru the first year, oil buttocks at every diaper change. But just any baby oil isn't good enough! There's no substitute for MENNEN Antiseptic Oil . . . look for that word "Antiseptic"

Steering American women to helpful shopping "finds" is service
—that's why writing BUY-LINES is such fun! For instance-a housewife from Los Angeles writes, 'The VIMMS you recommend is MORE than you say! All our family now get our vitamins and like 'em the VIMMS-tablet way!" A busy executive from Boston says, "VIMMS has made a whole woman of me!" . . . Get VIMMS yourself. Don't let vitamin starvation leave you a "half-alive", pepless, nervous tired victim. So join the vitamin-wise—get that VIMMS feeling by getting ALL plus the calcium, phosphorus and iron combined in VIMMS! Ask your Druggist!

Miss Gresham, Corpl. Petersen Are Married

Couple to Reside In Alexandria After Honeymoon

Small white pompon chrysanthe-mums and ferns with lighted candles on the altar of the chapel of the Intercession in Episcopal Hospital made a lovely setting for the wedding last evening of Miss Charlotte Gwendolyn Gresham and Corpl. Thomas Francis Petersen which took place at 8 o'clock.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Virgil D. Gilman of this city, and Mr. W. F. Gresham, jr., of Lynchburg. Corpl. Petersen is the son of Mrs. Francis Petersen of New York. He entered the Army a year ago and is now stationed at Fort Belvoir Ve Belvoir, Va.

Miss Janet Stevens played a program of appropriate music as the guests assembled and also the wedding marches. The Rev. D. Wade Safford, rector of Christ Church in Kensington, officiated.

Wearing a gown of white satin and a full veil of finger-tip length, the bride was escorted to the altar by her mother and given by her in marriage. Long sleeves finished with eyelet embroidery featured the bodice of the bride's gown, which was made with a fitted basque having a heart-shaped neckline, and a full skirt with no train. A cap of rose point lace held her veil and she carried a white satin covered prayer book that belonged to her greatgrandmother and was overlaid with a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Gilman was becomingly gowned in gray silk jersey with a small flower hat trimmed with a gray veil.

Miss Gerry Betz was the bride's maid of honor and only attendant, and she was costumed in pale pink, the bodice of the dress being of chiffon velvet and the skirt of net. Her hat was of pink flowers and trimmed with a veil and she carried a bouquet of deep pink roses. Corpl. John Srafin of Pittsburgh served as

More to Hands Than Just Beauty These Days

Manual Dexterity Essential to the Many Women Taking Over Precision Jobs

If the family comes home some evening and finds you busily playing jacks on the floor, don't let them send for the man in the white coat. Restrain them the next day, too, when you are discovered crumpling a newspaper in your hot little fists, and the day after that when you are found tugging furiously at your fingers as though you're determined to pull them off. Just explain to them that you're getting ready to do precision work in a war factory, and that these strange contortions are finger exercises recommended by experts.

According to a recent estimate, before another year is out, 50 per cent of the employes in munitions and other war plants will be of the female sex. These jobs require nimble fingers with dexterity and muscular agility. It may be that you were lucky enough to be born with beautiful and supple hands, but if you were not, there is much that can be done to achieve both qualities. Even if you're not planning to work in a factory right away, it will be well worth your while to get those hands of yours in condition. With the proper exercise routine, they will look lovelier and work better for you, whether you're building bombers or knitting sweaters. As a matter of fact, women who have mastered such arts as typing, knitting, piano playing or hairdressing have been discovered to have the most nimble hands, and they are, consequently, frequently given preference in the employment offices of large factories and plants.

In these days, you'll be using your hands more than ever, so it might be a good idea to think seriously about the exercises suggested by Wally Westmore, director of make-up at Paramount studios. Says Mr. Westmore: "First, for fun as well as for beneficial exercises and a lesson in co-ordination, is the childhood game of jacks. This game brings into play the entire arm and the wrist. Every day for a few spare moments, relax and play jacksand you'll soon notice how much more free the movements of your hand and wrist become."

Another recommended routine is to put a medium-sized rubber ball between the palms, with the fingers interlaced over, and then to push in on the ball with the palms of the hands. This one is to develop supple wrists, palms and fingers. Experience has perts declare that each exercise is based on experimentation and cold, hard logic. In these times it's important to stay feeling your best so that you can do the finest job possible. And it's nice to know, too, that while you're improving your health and efficiency you're also building up your charm and loveliness.

The phrase "your hands reveal your character" is important. Hands are noticed immediately by people, so it's a smart idea to keep them always looking their best in order that the first impression may be a good one. Have nails well groomed, with polish intact. Wear becoming rings and bracelets, carefully chosen as to size and type, to emphasize the slim length of your fingers and make your hands appear graceful.

Keep Your Femininity!

Mistake to Let Charm Disappear

We are at war. An all-out war which women are helping to fight because they believe in democracy and liberty. Not only knitting and bandage making, but man-sized jobs are women's lotrunning farm machinery-replacing men in factories, lifting and hauling and pushing. Womare are meeting the challenge willingly and capably-but at what price?

There is the little matter of remaining a woman about which I want to write—a pretty woman. It is an undisputable fact that men like us feminine, dainty, a bit helpless, pretty as a picture, sympathetic. How can we be these and still do the jobs that are expected of us?

It is done with mirrors and a little acting. We have dual roles to play and we will play them to gain two ends-to win the war, to hold the love of our men. It will be difficult. In fact, many women are already finding it difficult, but it is worth the effort in the long run. For the war will end, our men will return, and they will want us soft and feminine and dependent to inspire them to make the tremendous adjustment from service life to civilian life. Our job is a big one, but we will not fail.

The clever woman always keeps fit and lovely. She is not an ailing, impracticable, morose, incapable or unattractive creature. She is capable, strong practical, good-looking, gay, independent. But when her man is around she acts: she is what he wants her to

We all must be clever. Our jobs demand that we be competent, strong, independent. Our men and home life demand that we be charming, loving, slightly dependent upon those dear to us, and pretty in what we do, wear, and say. We shall all be actresses. We shall be the happier for it.

Any woman can play both parts with ease-providing she plans her life well, keeps fit, has a sound perspective and holds onto it. It is rather refreshing to throw off the uniform of service or labor and slip into a gay negligee, spend a few moments on grooming, and then turn one's thoughts to the problem of home. For it is the preservation of that home for which we are struggling. What a shame if we rob it of its homey glory by becoming too competent and too masculinegiving little thought to our beauty!

will not be rationed. Brains, lightly cooked will be just as good for him as the muscle meat, and he should have no trouble in learning to like all or any of them. The gold-spoon Fifi can also eat chicken or turkey-sans bones, please—and a bit of fish will substitute for meat also. (Again no bones.)

Also, some stores are carrying frozen horse meat which can be fed to dogs, and is not too expensive. So far there are no restrictions on the horse meat, although some may be placed on its sale in the future.

Dr. Earle says eggs and milk are good for dogs, too, despite many professional opinions to the contrary. This, she says, applies to grown dogs as well as puppies. A snobbish Fido would probably have fresh milk and eggs-but little Poorhouse Poochie would be content with dried skim milk and possibly powdered eggs.

Twenty to twenty-two per cent of every dog's diet should be protein, Dr. Earle points out. The glandular meats, milk and eggs are the best way to provide itbut are definitely "out" for Poorhouse Poochie who must watch his budget. For him Dr. Earle suggests vegetables and soups, such as pea soup made with protein high dried peas and milk. Peanut meal or soybean meal mixed with milk is good for him, too, especially when combined with cereals or bread and fed as

Washington Wears— Visitors Also Smartly Dressed

A tribute to the American designer, as well as the good taste of the Washington women, are those fashions currently being glimpsed around town. Since the fall and winter modes are the first actual styles made under wartime regulations, fashion experts have watched with interest to see just how restrictions would affect the style picture.

Apparently the swing to simplified, slimmer clothes, gayer and giddier accessories and lots of color has worked no hardship either on designer or wearer. Washington women never have looked smarter than they do these days, nor have they ever been more appropriately dressed for all occasions

At a party in her honor, charming and petite Veronica Lake chose a simple black crepe suit with an egg-shell satin vestee to offset her long and justly famous blond hair. Simple straight lines in the suit gave the tiny star added height and she literally "added inches" with black suede d'orsay pumps cut very low, but with extremely high heels.

Mrs. David Sarnoff, the former Esme O'Brien, was glimpsed with her husband at the cocktail hour the other afternoon. Her ensemble was in bright red, the suit accented with simple black accessories. Also choosing black and red for its effectiveness is pretty Bettyjane Greer, who wore a smartly draped red dinner gown the other evening. The sleeves of the dress were elbow length and Bettyjane added long black evening gloves to complete that "covered-up" look.

At Hotel 2400, Mrs. Gerald R. Trimble greeted tea - dancing print frocks of the season. Repeating one of the tones of the print was the magnificent orchid of the smartest and shortest coiffures of the season, a hint for other women lucky enough to have snow-white hair... At the preview of "Random Harvest" the other evening, Genevieve Tobin looked particularly chic as she chatted with Director Mervyn Le Roy. Her outfit was black with an unusually welltailored topcoat.

Mrs. John Cerra wore a really good looking costume when she celebrated her birthday in one of the "after-dark" spots. Esther's black frock had two tiers of fringe and her fireman's red hat boasted a matching black fringed snood.

Sentiment, emotion, recklessness at any moment may wipe out the inhibitions so carefully set by teachers and parents. Safeguards must be thrown about these young people, boys as well as girls, but especially the girls. All hostesses are duty bound to be watchful about the behavior of their young guests. Chaperones must be provided and the rules of social behavior strictly enforced at all parties.

Social conventions change, but human nature does not keep time with those changes and is likely to disregard them to the great discomfiture of all concerned.

To the girls who attend parties where they meet uniformed men in the service, I would like to say something like this: Keep your head. Don't let emotion sweep you off your feet. Treat this young man you are giving a pleasant evening as you would treat any other you had met for the first time. Don't gush over him. Don't idealize him. He is just another young man who happens to be wearing the uniform of his country's service and he has all the characteristic faults and virtues of his class.

Don't imagine that he has lived for 20 years or more without knowing a girl and liking her a lot. He has not been waiting for you all these years and the girl he left behind deserves your consideration. Be pleasant, casual, impersonal, and let him go his way footloose and free as when he first saw you.

Listen to what he says and ask no questions. Forget all he told you the moment he leaves you. Don't give him your picture. You don't want it pinned above the wash basin with a lot of other pictures of girls, horses, prize fighters, and whatnots. Save it.

There will be a more fitting time. men who are strangers to you and don't write letters to them. If you belong to a group who writes

Winter Programs Will Begin With Meeting Tuesday

The war has given added impetus to the activities of the Washington Club which will start its 52d year of winter programs this week. In addition to Red Cross work and the sale of Defense bonds, a series of lectures by Mrs. Lydia Van Zandt will be sponsored to raise money for local war relief.

Mrs. Van Zandt, who recently returned from South America where she and her husband, Col. J. Parker Van Zandt, studied conditions in the southern republics will speak before the membership on "South America and the War" at a meeting of the club at 11 a.m. Tuesday. Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin is chairman of the Program Committee.

Talks by Mrs. Van Zandt for the benefit of the war fund will be held at 2:30 p.m. November 16, November 23 and November 30. All will be illustrated by motion pictures. Subjects of the series include "Indian Republics of South America," "Our Ally, Brazil," and "Our Ally, Mexico." Tickets may be purchased at the club house or from the chairman, Mrs. James Shera Montgomery.

Wed Last Night Colorful Ceremony Held in Home of

And Ensign Leva

The home of Mr. and Mrs. G. David Pearlman at 3700 Livingston street was decorated with white chrysanthemums and palms for the wedding early last evening of their daughter, Dr. Shirley Felice Pearlman, and Ensign Marx Leva, U. S. N. R., son of Mrs. Leo Leva of Selma, Ala., and Washington and the late Mr. Leva.

Miss Estelle Gillchrest, pianist, played appropriate selections as the guests assembled, as well as the wedding marches. The Rev. Norman Gerstenfeld of the Washington Hebrew Congregation officiated at 6:30 o'clock.

Mr. Pearlman gave his daughter in marriage, and she wore a dress of beige satin with a shoulderlength veil of hyacinth blue and carried a bouquet of orchids and Joanna Hill roses.

Miss Isabelle Leva, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Jean Pelzman, a cousin of the bride, were the two attendants. Miss Leva was dressed in hyacinth blue crepe with a shoulder-length veil of scarlet, and Miss Pelzman wore a dress of purple crepe with a purple veil. They carried large bouquets of scarlet roses. Mr. Bernard Feld of Alabama and New York served as best man.

A buffet supper was served after the ceremony, and later Ensign and Mrs. Leva left for a wedding trip. with the bride wearing a purple dress with a sable jacket and fuchsia hat and accessories. The bride is a graduate of George Washington University Medical School, and Ensign Leva is a grad-

For you will find yourself in poised and very agreeable company.

The authors, John Van Druten and Lloyd Morris, introduce us to gentlefolk who know how to enter a drawing room with grace and impressement; who negotiate teacups and glassware with careless aplomb; whose suavity is enlivened by piquancy; their savoir faire pointed by occastional lapses with polite recklessness. Where, among them, wit does not prevail, you are regaled always with dry humor and not infrequent turning of epigrams.

Deft Comedy Touches.

Perhaps, at this point, I ought to warn you that in certain degree these polite people, politely environed, will have to atone for such shortcomings in dramatic consistency and continuity as are likely to be found when plays are set in drawing rooms. After all, one can not have everything and, to be perfectly just, these defects which relate to plotting and not at all to the writing of the piece, are of minor consideration. They were at least, to me.

John Van Druten, as you know has the deftest of touches in comedy and with the assistance of that learned scholar, critic and historian Lloyd Morris, we have an authentic picture of an older metropolitan day, 1909 Circa, when that daring play, "The Easiest Way," was not freely discussed in mixed company by nice people and when H. G Wells' new novel, "Ann Veronica," was-for reason not at all clear now-kept on high shelves out of reach of the young. Hollywood's Quiz Kids Live in Studio Research

All Kinds of Questions Must Be Solved Correctly Before the Cameras Roll

> By Harold Heffernan, North American Newspaper Alliance.

There's a select group of scholarly gentlemen in Hollywood who can well afford to chuckle sardonically every time they hear those Quiz Kids on the radio. These men head major studio research departments, without whose almost instantaneous answers to countless baffling questions no film company could hope to operate.

They're the original quiz kids. They must know all the answers, or, at least, where to dig them up inthe shortest possible time. Or else! in the office of Dr. Herman Lissauer, head quiz kid at the Warner Bros. studio. Into his receiver comes a frantic cry from one of the sound

All day long, the questions roll in to similar departments on every lot in the movie-making town. In the course of a day's toil, the quiz kids of Hollywood will search out the kissing customs of a certain tribe of Polynesians and determine what the inside of a distillery in Scotland looks like. Nothing stumps them. They are trained to ferret out the information needed to make a movie sequence authentic. And they mustn't be too long about it, either. Production costs mount quickly, you know.
Samples of the puzzlers that make scenarists and directors gray before their time and which the various research wizards have been called on to answer in recent months follow: "Which way did Napoleon shave, up or down?"

Pictures of Napoleon shaving show him using the downward stroke.

HOPE, THE PERFECT LADY—Bob Hope, who is willing to try anything, does his first turn at female impersonation in "Road to Morocco," latest, wildest and wooliest of the famous Paramount "Road" series. He plays the ghost of his own aunt, a lady known as Lucy, come back from heaven to haunt Bing Crosby after that one pulls a dirty double cross on her nephew, also played by Bob. Jack Benny came to the set to see the fun the day "Aunt Lucy's" visitation was filmed. Considering himself an expert on these matters since "Charlie's Aunt," Jack insisted upon adjusting Bob's curls.

Deanna Durbin Reveals Changes Six Years Bring

Star Says She's Lucky But Success Has Meant Constant Hard Work

By Deanna Durbin.

HOLLYWOOD. Talk about "lucky stars"—every star is lucky, I think. Lucky to be in pictures and lucky to be a star. I know that I've been a lucky girl for the last six years (although any one who says I haven't worked hard, too, is in for a fight). I think I've been especially lucky to see and experience the changes that have taken place in motion pictures.

I thought about all this recently while going through some old scrapbooks kept by my mother after I got into the movies. Now, what has happened to one person who has only been in pictures six years is not important. But I found evidence of many changes in motion pictures just reading copies—questions and answers-of interviews I had when I was a 14-year-old girl just starting. If you will excuse the personal nature of such a thing, I'd like to pick just a few questions at random. I'll give the question and my answer to it back in 1936. Then I'll tell how I would answer the same question today. I think it will show a little bit about how the movies have changed, both in natural development and in the effects of the war. For instance:

Questions and Answers.

Q. "Briefly, what is you picture about?" A. (1936). "'Three smart Girls' is the story of a New York family. The father and mother are having trouble and the story is about the three kids' efforts to keep them from

The point is, that the "Three Smart Girls" story would not have enough "importance" to day, without at least a background of war and the realistic problems people face in wartime. Q. "What time do you report for work in the morning?" A. (1936). "I come in for hairdress and make-up at seven o'clock, and report on the set at nine.'

Tale of Two Starlets—Talented, Lovely, Ambitious

Dorothy Morris and Frances Rafferty, 'Bit' Players, Like Their Fun but Aim to Keep Eyes on Future Stardom

By Robert Myers.

HOLLYWOOD. It is easy and a lot of fun to write about some of the older and established movie people Either they are good or they think they are better than they are. Either they are interesting in a natural, honest way, or they are terrific liars and you know it.

One will tell you, for instance, with a straight face, that she is so happy with her husband, who is No. 4. and you know perfectly well she and No. 4 hate the sight of each other, and he's a dog, anyhow. It was refreshing then, and a little difficult, to say the least, to carry out this particular assignment: Chronicling the lives and careers and dreams of a couple of cute starlets-to-be.

At this stage of their lives (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer style) they are unspoiled, natural, deadly serious and tremendously inexperienced. Young ladies of 20, so I've been told, are very often like that

The girls are Dorothy Morris and Frances Rafferty.

Both have brownish hair, hazel eves and are welcome additions at all servicemen's fiestas. Frances would look very much like Judy Garland if July were prettier, and Dorothy is a 5-foot-3 picture type. She hopes to look more mature, possibly even dramatic, a few years from now, and the sooner the better. The statistics are given because, while they have done roles in numerous pictures in the past year and a half, the parts were just

MGM School Days.

Both are members of the MGM stock group, or Louis B. Mayer's finishing school for ambitious young actresses. Mr. Mayer's project isn't exactly a school, but these youngsters are guided, coached and spotted in good pictures.

Neither Dorothy or Frances came from theatrical families. Neither family, in fact, particularly encouraged movie careers for the kids. Frances was 12 when she came here from Sioux City, Iowa and Dorothy was born in Hollywood. They finished high school and Frances became a ballet dancer and understudy for Zorina at one time.

"Ever since I was ten I dreamed of a stage career. Not a movie career. The stage." This from very intent Dorothy.

Ballet Programs A New Work By Massine

'Aleko,' All-Russian In Source, Has Gypsy Setting

"Aleko," one of the novelties which the Ballet Theater will present here in conjunction with the National Symphony Orchestra when it comes to Constitution Hall for two evenings, November 18 and 19, is one of the few truly Russian ballets devised in recent years now being shown in this country. Al-though it was created in Mexico during last summer's engagement of the Ballet Theater in Mexico City, its music, story, settings, costumes and choreography are the work of Russians.

The idea for "Aleko" originated with Leonide Massine, who is responsible for its choreography. The story is taken from an opera by Rachmaninoff, which in turn was inspired by a poem of Pushkin called "The Gypsies." The musical back-ground is the "Trio in A Minor," by Ischaikowsky, orchestrated by Fred-

Massine's ballet version of the old Russian folk tale relates how a bored city youth (Aleko) joins a band of gypsies and falls in love with the leader's lovely daughter, Zemphira. At first she responds to his advances, but soon tires of him and allows herself to be overwhelmed by a youthful gypsy's love for her. Aleko discovers them together and, torn by jealousy, loses

He is obsessed by a nightmare filled with fantastic personages among them a poet who is killed in a duel because of his intrigues. In his delirium Aleko kills Zemphira and her gypsy lover. Her father, though heartbroken, then imposes a errible punishment—complete banshment from gypsy life.
Costumes and settings are by the

Wilder Play To Feature Bankhead

'Skin of Our Teeth' Will Arrive Here Week From Tomorrow

Michael Myerberg will present Tallulah Bankhead, Fredric March, Florence Eldridge and Florence Reed in "The Skin of Our Teeth," a new comedy by Thornton Wilder, for one sail them in their struggle for surweek, opening Monday, November 9, vival. at the National Theater. Immediately following, it moves into the Montgomery Clift, Frances Hefiin Plymouth Theater for its New York opening, November 18.

"The Skin of Our Teeth" is Mr. Wilder's first produced play since Herman Shumlin presented his "Merchant of Yonkers" in New York in 1938. His "Our Town," presented by Jed Harris that same year, was voted the Pulitzer Prize award of the season. Mr. Wilder is currently serving as captain in the United States Air Corps Intelligence.
Mr. Myerberg, long a manager for

Leopold Stokowski, in entering the legitimate producing field has as-sembled a notable and numerous cast for his first effort. Miss Bankhead, last season seen in Clifford Odets' "Clash by Night," starred for three years in "The Little Foxes." is a star of international repute. Mr. March, familiar to both stage and screen enthusiasts, was last seen in "Hope for a Harvest," along with Miss Eldridge. Most notable of Miss Reed's recent successes was the revival of "Outward Bound."

"The Skin of Our Teeth" is the story of George Antrobus, his wife and two children, and their gen-eral utility maid, Lily Sabina, and the endless vicissitudes which as-the girl from England, acts with artistry so superb that through most of the evening you forget she is not quite typed for the role. Margaret Douglass, as the family matriarch, never for an instant loses the touch of high comedy. Myron McCormick, as the dry-humored, sophisticated son who knows his way about does a splendid piece of characterization and Celeste Holm, as the actress, is precisely the sort of person that Jimmy's mother holds all actresses to be. It is as literate and Broadway has seen in a long time.

About "Little Darling." middle-aged author has a daughter of 19 who thinks he is an old poke and so detests his pokish ways, his limited viewpoints concerning youth and, for that matter, concerning himself. He writes romances he does not live and the girl, just out of finishing school, is bored to death with him. His secretary, in the flush of full maturity, loves him secretely and yet, truth to tell, she, too, thinks he is more than a bit stuffy

With the situation thus set, into the home comes the daughter's roommate at school, a poised and completely reckless member of Milwaukee's younger set. She vamps the author, the author vamps herthey collaborate in vamping and, thus enthralled, they fly off to New York on an adventure among night clubs and theaters and where not the innocence of which is more real than apparent.

Various complications ensue inluding the appearance of the Milwaukee flapper's boy friend, who raises hell all through the third act. Eventually the boy gets his Now, to the genteel horror of the girl-wholly unspoiled and unsophisticated blade of a son, Jimmy author, also unspoiled and un-

'Childhood in Early America' Is Theme Of DAR Exhibition

By Florence Berryman.

"Childhood in Early America," an exhibition at the D. A. R. Museum, the opening of which was mentioned here on October 4, is a most engaging exhibition. As is the case with all exhibitions at this museum, the emphasis is historic; but this does not overshadow the artistic aspects of the show, to be found in craftsmanship, needlework and decoration.

The keynote of the exhibition is the portrait of Mary Lightfoot with her doll, painted in 1760 by John Wollaston and presented recently to the Daughters of the American Revolution by Herbert L. Pratt of New York. It is a small painting, approximately 3 by 21/2 feet, in remarkably good condition. Nearly two centuries have given it a golden glow although a faint rose in the child's gown is still discernible. Her eyes have the inward slant characteristic of all Wollaston's eyes, which led people in his day to call him the "almond-eyed artist," a very accurate description. This curious mannerism makes it easy to identify his paintings, despite the fact that he seldom signed them.

Mary was the daughter of William Lightfoot, a king's councillor, and lived at Sandy Point until she married (at 15) William Allen of Cleremont. She was only 10 years of age when Wollaston painted her, but appears older because of her mature dress. Children's attire was identical in style and material with that of adults, until after the Revolution. Small girls were encased in pack thread stays and wooden busk boards to encourage an erect posture, as may be seen in Mary's portrait. Her doll is dressed in a miniature edition of her own gown.

Wollaston is important in the history of early American painting, because he was the sole recorder of which is opened at the story of many prominent Virginia and William Quayle, a lad who "seemed Maryland people just before the Revolution. Early American childhood is reflected in the contents of three rows of glass cases extending the length the south gallery in Memorial Continental Hall. The doll collection is outstanding, beginning with Indian dolls of clay and leather A Queen Anne wooded doll with long, narrow glass eyes; dolls a few inches in height whittled by early American fathers: a corn cob doll, a series of papier mache dolls, first made in Germany in 1810, and perfected and fashionable from 1830 to designed and executed by artists glazed heads (1820 to 1840), shuteye dolls, made as early as 1327, all had plenty of toys to "mother" Spain and other continental counmelting in heat. There are many examples of exquisite needlework in children's clothing, beginning with the fine linen shirts worn by American bables from the time of James I to the Civil War period. Beautifully embroidered infants' robes, bonnets, pinafores and dresses conjure up visions of little folk of a century ago and earlier. Samples of the Revolutionary period demonstrate the painstaking work of little girls. One 3-year-old must have been impressed after cross-stitching the following:

Oh, how dreadful 'tis to die!"

Tea sets and mugs decorated with names and proverbs, mechanical banks to encourage childish thrift (for these banks have animals and other figures which move when a coin is inserted), pewter porringers, large silk-covered balls on which the map of the world is printed, and collection of old school books, horn books, fiction and other titles, some dating from Colonial times, illustrated with old wood cuts, enlarge the picture. National Symphony Presents Victory Program Wednesday

On Wednesday the National Symphony will give a special pre-season victory program with entire pro-ceeds to the Washington Community War Fund. Gladys Swarthout will be the soloist for this occasion, and Dr. Hans Kindler will conduct. The orchestra is also giving its second concert in four months at Fort George G. Meade, Md., on Friday.

Miss Swarthout, who is donating her services at the victory program, is the only woman to have sung for the entire assembled Congress of the United States, the diplomatic corps, Supreme Court and the President. This occurred in the Senate at the 150th anniversary exercises celebrating the founding of Congress. Miss Swarthout's appearance with the orchestra Wednesday should not be confused with her subsequent appearance in recital under Mrs. Dorsey's management at Constitution Hall on Sunday, February 21, at 4 o'clock.

Announcement that the first rehearsal of the National Symphony's 12th season was called by Conductor Dr. Hans Kindler for last Thursday morning at Constitution Hall does not reveal the dramatic story involved.

For years right here in Wash-ington young graduates from American conservatories of music were accepted in the National Symphony Orchestra by Dr. Kindler until the Nation's Capital could boast of a nearly all-youth orchestra long before those much-vaunted organizations officially sprang into being On tour, the National Symphony became famous for its youthful vitality and its exuberant freshness.

Quite recently, however, came the acid test. Due to his youthful personnel, Dr. Kindler lost over 50 of his youngest and best men to the armed forces within a year. Disaster seemed to face the orchestra. The efforts of 12 years seemed doomed.

Without hesitation, Dr. Kindler made up his mind to scour the country. He went to Philadelphia, New York, Toronto, Chicago, St Louis and as far West as Los Angeles, returning by San Francisco to Chicago. Just over a week ago he arrived back in Washington from this month's trip. He came back to announce that he had found every necessary man for the missing players, only to be told that during his absence four more players had gone to the wars. So he started out

Once we decide Prints, drawings, small oils and upon a particular selection each of us makes a four-piano arrangement. Don Cossacks Give Concert This Afternoon

Famous Russian Male Chorus On Annual Visit

The Don Cossack Russian Male Chorus-"the singing horsemen of the steppes"-who made their first concert appearance in Washington in 1930, the year Constitution Hall opened its doors, and who have appeared here each year since then under the leadership of Serge Jaroff, comes to Constitution Hall this afternoon at 4 o'clock under the management of Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey, who has sponsored every appearance of the Cossacks in Washington since Consisting of some three dozen former Cossack officers of the Russian Imperial Army, the Don Cossack Chorus was organized by its leader, Jaroff, in a Turkish prison camp in 1920, following the defeat of Gen. Wrangel's White Russian Army, of which the original Cossacks were a part. Since then they have made more than a dozen tours of the United States alone and have sung nearly 5,000 concerts in various parts of the world.

This year's program, though containing a number of compositions new to the Cossack repertoire, will follow the traditional Cossack pattern of devoting the first part to Russian church liturgies, the second part to Russian folk tunes and the third and final portion to Cossack their soldier songs that the Cossacks

Trail-Blazer in Newsdom

James Gordon Bennett Is Seen as Father of Modern Journalism

By Mary-Carter Roberts. The Man Who Made News

By Oliver Carlson. (Duell, Sloan & Pearce.)

It was James Gordon Bennett, says Oliver Carlson, who invented the concept of news as we know news today. Here are some of the modern standbys of the press which Mr. Carlson attributes to the genius of the "tall, gaunt, cross-eyed Scotsman" whose New York Herald, in his lifetime, was "generally read" but also "universally denounced"-the interview, the crime story, financial news, market reports, foreign correspondence, the feature story, the sex angle, fashion notes, society reporting, church news, and the use of pictures. Straight news writing, which is the highest achievement of the press to date, also derived from Bennett, says Mr. Carlson, as did its opposite, yellow journalism. Bennett was the forerunner, in Mr Carlson's view, of all that is connoted by the term "hearstian," and likewise of the best current traditions of the newspaper world, a one-man dynamo who gave forth a torrent of ideas which are still being used and developed. It is a fascinating picture which this book presents of a single-minded genius, thwarted in his efforts to establish normal human connections with his fellowman, and turning his inexhaustible energy into the building of a newspaper. Little is in the work that has not been covered before, but the subject is a sufficiently absorbing one to stamp any number of portraits with his force.

Bennett's history, as a force in journalism, is, of course, the history of the New York Herald, a paper which he founded single-handedly in the literal sense of the word, for he wrote the whole sheet himself, in the beginning, working on a plank resting on two barrels in a basement office, with $500 capital to go on. That was in 1835, when he was 40 years old and, in spite of his ability as a writer, had a consistent record of failure behind him. During the next six years the Herald was, as Mr. Carlson puts it, 'without a doubt the most sensational, salacious, and sardonic newspaper in the whole world. It pried into private lives. It held up to ridicule and scorn, not only its political and editorial adversaries, but everyone, regardless of place or position, whose name was well known. * * No person, no sentiment, no subject was too sacred to be spared. Bennett, having discovered that people were willing to buy his paper for its sensationalism, determined to give the public full measure of what it craved." At the end of the six-year period, the Herald was faced by serious suits, and its editor had been publicly thrashed more than once—but the paper was a success. Forty years of failure in legitimate journalism, as it was understood at the time, had been wiped out by sensationalism in so short

Bennett then went ahead to organize the substantial frame of a news-gathering machine. He trained his reporters, he stationed men in Washington and all the important cities, he used carrier pigeons and kept a fast boat that met incoming ships as far as 100 miles out at sea. While his editorial policy continued to be based on sensationalism and scurrility, he insisted on objective writing by his staff.

"Money was no object," says Mr. Carlson, of Bennett's typical frenzy to cover the military front during the Civil War, "expense meant nothing-all that counted was to get the news and get it first. He once refused to pay the cost of a horse, killed in battle, because his correspondent was a day later than the World's man in reporting the fight. 'A horse which couldn't beat the World isn't worth paying for,' remarked the old man sarcastically. But to men who showed ability, speed, verve, and imagination, Bennett was ever ready to pay more than they asked for." His news machine came to be recognized as the best in existence.

The significance of his career, as this book shows it, is the paradox between his ideal and his method. "My ambition," he said, as he was launching the Herald, "is to make the newspaper Press the great organ and pivot of government, society, commerce, finance, religion, and all human civilization." And, as Mr. Carlson says, "the power of the Press, as we know it today, is in large measure the product of his genius." Seemingly, however, that power could not be generated by any but crude and sensational means. It is the old contradiction inherent in the very idea of publicity—no matter what you have to offer to the crowd, whether it be blessings or evils, you must first stir up curiosity. Putting it in a nutshell, we can say that a great newspaper—a national institution for a time -got its start because its editor saw the sensationalism latent in a sordid crime. For Mr. Carlson dates the rise of the Herald from Bennett's flamboyant coverage of the famous Ellen Jewett murder.

The book, to the reviewer's mind, would be better if it had dealt a little more with some of Bennett's contemporaries. After all, his period was the age of journalistic giants, and he was by no means the only creative force then working in the newspaper world. Mr. Carlson keeps the roster of the Herald's competitors clear and, in the case of Horace Greeley in the Civil War crisis, compares editorial policy in some detail. But if he had indicated the extent to which other editors contributed to and showing it-"You Could Look journalistic progress, it would have made a more comprehensive picture of James Gordon Bennett's time.

The last paper is the introduction which Dr. Mann wrote for the published sermons of Pastor Niemoller, when the minister was a prisoner in a Nazi concentration camp and Dr. Mann himself an exile. The sequence should be reasonably clear. Without, therefore, going into detail as to the whole 16 essays, the reviewer shall try to point out the continuity which runs through them, which is to her mind. Dr. Mann's great consciousness of the continuity of culture as the necessary condition to civilized progress and his magnificiently eloquent plea that the German people should not break with their cultural tradition, but should strive to build on their heritage from the past a state which would be adequate to the present. The denial, made by the Nazi party, of that heritage, the scorn and hatred heaped on it by Hitler and his associates, the plunge into the future with no support other than a trumped up mythology and a false doctrine of racethese tendencies have filled Dr. Mann with horror, and he has brought all the power of his great influence to work against them. But the stages of his battle, as this collection shows, have been a constant retreat.

His first paper, an address made on the occasion of Gerhart Haupt- held his father as a hostage. He mann's 60th birthday, was heard, as he remarks, by an audience which, at times, was "prone to shuffle their feet." The second speech, made in 1930 and, in substance, an appeal for an alliance between German socialism and German democracy, was greeted by "noisy opposition." The third piece, dated five years later, was written in Switzerland, whither Dr. Mann had gone to live because, as he observes, if he had remained in Germany, he would not then have been alive. This piece, called "Europe, Beware," is one of the most eloquent of the group and is a plain warning four years in advance of the event that Germany's intention was to immerse the continent and perhaps the whole world in war.

To a man who felt himself above all things a German and identified in his life's work with a German heritage, and this man a man of goodwill, the conduct of the German people in following Hitler into what they must have recognized as pure evil, presents a question of anguished importance. In a great paper, "This War," written seven months after the outbreak of hostilities, Dr. Mann strives to analyze the contradiction. What happened to the honest and straightforward German nation, he asks, to make it accept so dishonest and devious a leadership?

The wrong, he says, lay in the persuasion of the Nazis that they had given "Germany back her soul" by making her once more a powerful differently. Preissinger, the somemilitary machine. But Germany had not lost her soul, Dr. Mann exclaims. | what Quislinglike industrialist, is The defeat of her armies was no defeat of the spirit; it was, instead, a confident until the end that his needed chastening, for Germany had won her place as an empire by wealth and position will enable him inflicting defeats, and she should have been great enough to accept her to escape the firing squad. She has forfeited her rights to membership in the family of nations by her denial of the fundamental moralities.

Dr. Mann is today a man without a country. But he has lost less than his country did when it parted company with the justice, the moral power and the world-wide influence of his spirit.

Grand Canyon

By V. Sackville-West. (Doubleday, Doran.)

This very fragile fictional structure seems to be its author's attempt to set down her reflections on the peculiarly senseless kind of war from which the world is suffering today. It shows a picture of our own country overwhelmed by air-borne legions of Germans and Japanese, as seen through the eyes of two rarely enlightened individuals who are killed in the first stage of the attack. These are two English visitors, Mr. Dale and Mrs. Temple, who have been stopping at a hotel on the rim of the Grand Canyon. The hotel is bombed through the connivance of its manager, a German agent. All the residents are killed, but the good among the dead do not realize that they are dead. Led by Mr. Dale and Mrs. Temple, they go down to the depths of the Canyon, and there, living, as they suppose, in hiding, they come to understand the answers to their personal problems and, finally, their own

The book is a worthy effort, but Miss Sackville-West is not a sufficiently profound thinker to carry out her concept.

My World and Welcome to It

By James Thurber. (Harcourt, Brace.)

"What do you mean it was brillig?" inquires Mr. Thurber in lacklustre tones in his opening essay of the present collection. The maid told him that they had come with the reeves, the whip-poor-will cried deafeningly and no one but himself could hear it, the ghost of Aaron Burr came to taunt him in his dreams, the timekeeper hid nastily under the sofa, pins dropped on the carpet gave forth resounding crashes, he tried to follow bulging forehead, mashed-in face. 10 helpful hints to relaxation and drove himself almost crazy. What do you mean it was brillig? What, indeed.

committed suicide. In the place of Tobacco Tycoon: The Story of James Buchanan Duke

By John K. Winkler. (Random House.) The traits which were to enable James Buchanan Duke to build a tobacco empire and a power kingdom, and to wrest from the aluminum czar a slice of that all-important monopoly, were visible when, at the close of the Civil War, this awkward, red-headed lad traveled the roads of North Carolina with his father, selling the home-made twists of bright yellow tobacco which only recently had caught the fancy of "chewers" in the Carolinas. On these "forays" into the back country of North Carolina Buck Duke observed one thing which was to remain with him the rest of his life and which he played upon in varying degrees in all his business ventures the importance of the consumer. And a few years later in the small tobacco factory at Durham. N. C., which his father, George Washington Duke, had founded in order to supply the increasing demands for his vellow twists. Buck's singleness of purpose and driving energy were to develop to the point that caused the old gentleman to comment one day that there were two things he could never comprehend, the Holy Ghost and his son Buck.

Young Duke was not to remain long in the Carolinas. His genius had forced the Duke products into wider markets, and soon this boy, who already was dreaming of control of the entire tobacco industry, was to try his hand at breaking the New York market and there laying the cornerstone for one of the most gigantic trusts in the history of American

Slowly, Buck Duke began forging his tobacco empire, swallowing his competitors, large and small, as he went along, until his American Tobacco Co. and the British American Tobacco Co., which he forced into being, controlled the tobacco markets of the entire world. And so securely did he build this empire that when it finally was ordered dissolved by the Supreme Court, Duke himself was the only man who could unscramble it. Soon after his tobacco trust was dissolved, Duke gave up active

A physician one day, while treating Duke for an infected foot, mentioned the possibilities of hydro-electric power in the Carolinas, and from this remark was to come the Duke Power Co. of North Carolina. His interest in power, moreover, was to lead to his wrenching from the Mellons an appreciable interest in their tremendous aluminum monopoly. The Nazis Can Be Beaten

And the A. P.'s Berlin Correspondent Offers 10 Suggestions for Doing It

What About Germany?

By Louis P. Lochner. (Dodd, Mead.)

When the exchange ship Drottingholm steamed into New York last June, carrying its cargo of correspondents returning from Nazi Germany, the American war effort came into possession of one of its most formidable weapons—accurate knowledge of the enemy. Diplomats and military attaches have their value in garnering information, but the inescapable fact is that such men are compelled by the very nature of their assignments to move about in prescribed circles. A foreign correspondent, whatever limitations may be imposed on him by the country in which he is stationed, is trained in observing objectively all phases of the events going on around him. This new book by Mr. Lochner, whose Associated Press dispatches from Germany have been read by millions of Americans during the past 20 years, will probably come to be recognized as one of the really important literary contributions to eventual Allied victory. "What About Germany?" is not a disjointed, passionate account of Hitlerism. It is, rather, a cold and factual analysis of Nazi methtods and the German mind, compiled by a man who remained at his post to the bitter end, and who, for two decades, had an opportunity to study and report on Germany for a press association with a high reputation for strict

Mr. Lochner's work is important not only because it is a scholarly confirmation of a picture that has already been presented to the American people, but because the pattern of Nazi conquest and world domination has never before been so clearly interpreted by any one who can speak with so much authority. Under the circumstances, it becomes distinctly worthwhile to consider carefully Mr. Lochner's 10-point program for beating Hitler:

1. Americans must get used to the idea of "total war" as Hitler has forced Germans to get used to it. Complaining about gasoline rationing and minor hardships, Mr. Lochner says, does not represent an all-out 2. A unified command in any given theater of war is of paramount mportance. This has played no small part in all the German victories, sasmuch as it becomes possible to mobolize sea, air and land power in the most effective strategic manner. 3. The "nuisance front" must be maintained. This means the air raids on German cities, Commando assaults along the coast. Mr. Lochner hopes this country will understand that a front no longer implies merely a line drawn between two points, but may be almost anywhere, thanks to air power. 4. Overwhelming Allied air supremacy must be achieved.

5. The aggressive spirit must be instilled in every soldier, every military commander, and in the people on the home front. 6. Painstaking preparation for every maneuver must be considered prerequisite to every offensive.

7. Flexibility of thought must extend not only to the militarists, but to those charged with production. The war effort must not become bound with obsolete traditions. 8. The system of priorities in dealing with critical materials must be replaced by an allocation system. Under the latter method every industry knows precisely what to expect in the way of raw materials, and allotments can be made in the order of their importance. 9. Propaganda must be more closely linked with military operations.

Mr. Lochner suggests specifically that Elmer Davis, American information chief, be given constant access to military information. 10. Our post-war planning should become more precise-should offer something definite in the way of hope for the millions of decent Germans whom, Mr. Lochner insists, are caged in the Third Reich. None of these points is novel. Every one of them has been vociferously debated in this country in the press, over the radio, from the lecture Nazi Guide to Naziism, edited by platform. But never before have they been welded together into a con-Rolf Tell (American Council on Pub- crete program for victory by a man whose knowledge of the enemy and lic Affairs)—A collection of brief whose reputation as a reporter give his conclusions additional weight.

The life of an American reporter in Germany was anything but easy after Hitler came into power, the author relates; but it was impressed on him by his superiors that it was essential that he remain.

This little book is important because it expresses the attitude of one of America's foremost Catholics toward the war. In his practical way, Dr. Spellman reminds his readers of some hard truths, among them that "victory will not come because the people of America wish it," but "only if we, the people of America, win it." He poses this necessary consideration:

secure radio parts, but the source of electric power for operation was even more of a problem. Mr. Shultz sometimes made long trips over the practically trackless interior of China, usually by horse or mule, and he liked to take along a portable transmitter. On one such trip he used Edison cells as his power source. The cells were strapped across the back of a mule where they were a constant source of worry for fear the mule might take a sudden notion to lie down and roll, or decide fense. to cross a river unexpectedly in quest of a friend on the other side. Mr. Shultz had planned the generator to supply power not only for his own needs but also for the use of a native prince within whose domain he was working. Although the generator supplied plenty of headaches it also furnished a fairly dependable source of power, and Mr. Shultz was able to run his radio, a quite complete woodworking shop, an electric washing machine for his wife and a radio station for the native prince.

Mr. Schultz set up and operated the Prince's radio station, thereby gaining his goodwill and many concessions which would not otheroperator in the Orient. Mr. Shultz wise have been obtainable. All maxims in bridge may be broken should the occasion arise even that alleged justifiable excuse for homicide—the trumping of your partner's ace. In the following hand, R. R. Richards defeated the final contract of four spades by just such an expedient.

West opened the king of hearts and when he held the trick, led the ace. East could see that the club suit was solid, even if West held the had expected to find his partner king. His trumps were worthless except to ruff his partner's ace and make the lead that might set the contract. He, therefore, ruffed the ace of hearts and led the queen of diamonds, which defeated the contract. Needless to say that it was South, not West, who had murder in his heart when he put a minus 100 instead of a plus 620 on the traveling score!

Apparently the woods are full of 13-year-old girls who want jobs in kennels. It just took one item about one of them to stir them up. One young miss asks specifically where and how to apply for the job. Nobody knows what the new year is going to bring, and no business is more precarious than that of raising dogs in war time. But when summer time comes again, and if these 12year-olds still feel they would like kennel work, the place to apply is directly to the kennel owners.

Most kennels are located in the country. Working in a kennel might well mean boarding there. But no place could be more healthful, more interesting or safer than most kennel locations. While in the past very few serious kennel owners would hire such youngsters, it might well by that in the future breeders will be delighted to get help of any kind. Nor is the work too difficult for most children of that age. This sort of work would be in line with the recent trend to employ high school youngsters on farms. Some sections of the country are planning on rescheduling the school year to conform with farm needs. Apparently the day of real usefulness for children, of chores and jobs, is rolling around again.

Cut a square piece of board 4 by inches and 4-inch thick. A piece taken from the side of an apple box is about right. Or you can use plywood or any other similar wood. Sand the wood as smoothly as possible, rubbing the sandpaper always with the grain, never across. You can do the job most quickly by first using No. 1/2 sandpaper, then finishing off with 2/0 or a finer with a 14-inch bit. Instead of regulation round checkers cut sections of 4-inch dowel, each 1/2 inch long. These are the "men" with which the game is played. Paint the tops of one set red, the other black. The "men" fit into the holes for playing. They should fit into the holes quite loosely. If they seem to be too tight for easy handling sand them a little, until they slip in and out of the holes easily. Find a cardboard box that is the same size as the board and about 1/2-inch deep, to keep the game in. If you cannot find a box that is the right size you can easily make one out of a suit box or cardboard of similar weight. This game can be used in a moving vehicle without any danger of the "men" sliding off the board.

First Winter. De Soto and his men spent the northward, still looking for gold but and his men reached the Alabama River they went through one of the worst conflicts of the entire journey. On the side of the river and guarded by walls was an Indian town called Mobila, the home of Tuscaloosa, the "Black Warrior," a famed leader of the Mobile Indians. He heard of the coming of the white men and went to meet them. De Soto at first was careful to treat the chief politely and, with his soldiers.

rode with him into the walled town. But the Black Warrior began to feel that the Spaniards looked upon him as a prisoner. He went into one of the huts and refused to come out. Another chief came out of the hut and was struck down by one of the Spaniards. This led to a battle, in which the warriors fought bravely, even though they had to face men who seemed to have the power of demons. The Spaniards won, how-

Why Mistletoe Clings To the Oak Tree By ANNE M. VALENTINE,

Once, long, long ago, Jupiter loved beautiful earthly maiden named Mistle. Because Jupiter was a god he could not marry her. Mistle, however, did not pine away because of this, but married a courageous youth. At the wedding feast she carried a lovely bouquet of flowers which she laid down as she was Mistle grew pale when Juniter attending the feast unseen by any of the guests, stole the bouquet and glided back to his home in the sky. He intended to keep the flowers as a memento of their love. Jove knew of this love, and seeing the flowers, snatched them from his hands and angrily flung them down to the The poor little bouquet hurtled through the air and would have been dashed to pieces had not the great oak, in sympathy, reached out its branches and caught the trembling flowers.

And ever since that time the mistletoe has clung to the oak tree and forever bears its small, graygreen leaves and pale, waxy berries in memory of the lovely maiden whom Jupiter once loved.

Blair Girls Are Enjoying Work As Welders

Students Realize New Course Is Valuable Training for War

Prize Contribution By RACHEL McREYNOLDS, 16,

The girl welders of Montgomery Blair High School, Silver Spring, Md., are happy in their new work. In the opinion of Ellen Rae Matthews, for business course in the hope of becoming a secretary on graduation. And her training as a welder is giving her knowledge and experience that should make her a valuable addition to an industrial plant. She will know the language of the trade and that should be a definite advantage.

Betty Kemp is another welding student who realizes the value of the training she is getting. For one thing, welders are paid good wages. And, for another, a girl with knowledge of a trade so important to the war effort can enter one of the women's services-the WAACS, for instance—as a specialist.

Another girl who likes her work is Shirley Noonan. Garbed in slacks, she attends the welding class twice a day. And what she is learning is very interesting, she says. The welding trade is one that can profit from the deft fingers of trained women and girls. It is work that requires great endurance, however. More and more skilled workers are required every day to keep the wheels of our factories turning. These, in turn, keep the airplanes and tanks rolling out for our armed forces. The knowledge of tools and machinery and the correct ways of using them, being acquired by the girls, makes the welding course a valuable addition to our country's war effort.

Ouiz on Football Will Provide Fun At Autumn Party

Football is in the air these days and every one's talking about it. Did you know our game of football was brought from Canada by Harvard in 1830? By 1844 a number of American colleges were playing it, though it wasn't much like today's game. It has continued to grow in popularity until today practically all schools have their football teams. Every one understands something of the game because so many are broadcast over the radio, so a football quiz will be a lot of fun whenever the crowd gets together. Try it the next time they are at your house, or play it with the family.

For a large crowd you could pass around cards and pencils and have some one read the questions aloud, each one writing his or her answer on the card. For the family you could type the questions and pass the lists around. Set a time limit and give a prize for the most cor-

Mexico Visitors Find

Carved and Ornamented Beaters for Drink Serve as Souvenirs

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 31.-The rhythm of the hot chocolate maker skillfully whirring her carved wooden rod in a bowl of the steaming, aromatic beverage is one of the many fascinating aspects of the Mexican culinary art to American visitors to Mexico. Rich, frothy and fragrant, hot chocolate is generally served with sweet rolls for breakfast and supper, and constitutes a meal in itself.

Americans who have traveled in Mexico say that there is something in the way Mexicans mix hot chocolate which can't be duplicated. Of course, they've been doing it for a long time. Mexico gave the Western World the cacao bean and a method for beating up a cup of frothy hot chocolate that isn't equalled anywhere.

Centuries ago Indian princes cultivated the cacao bean, and developed the fine art of preparing it in beverage form. The conqueror Cortez had his first cup of chocolate at the court of Moctezuma, the last of the Aztec rulers. He was so impressed by this marvelous new drink that he wrote about it to Charles V explaining how cacao increased re rare taste and fragrance, and enclosing a sample of the product

Long Cultivated.

Long before the discovery of America, cacao was cultivated in Mexico, and it is one of the many products which the Indians of this continent have contributed to the world's food supply. In the time of the Aztecs it was prepared with herbs, spices, chiles, honey and grains of corn. Many rites and legends were connected with its cultivation.

According to Aztec legend, the great god, Quetzalcoatl, brought the seeds of the cacahuaquahuitl (Aztec for cacao) to earth so that mortal men might taste a god-like food. Among the Mayans, during Muan, the fifteenth month of their year, those who were about to plant the sacred cacao held a great celebration in honor of their patron gods, Chac, the god of agriculture, Hobnil, the god of food, and Ekchuah, the protector of the cacao trade. During the ceremonial rites a dog having cacao-colored spots was sacri-

In early times there existed in Mexico a complete monetary system based on cacao, which was accepted as common currency in business and commercial transactions. According to the early historian, Peter Martyr, Cortez paid his soldiers with cacao beans. In the Cathedral of Mexico City there once stood a statue of Our Lady of the Cacao, and in a basket placed at her feet, the pious deposited their cacao beans.

All-Time Record Crop In Britain Hailed as Major War Factor

Huge Harvest Releases Cargo Ships to Haul Troops and Supplies

By BRENDA BENDIXSEN, Foreign Correspondent of The Star and North American Newspaper Alliance.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Britain has won one of the greatest production victories of the war in the all-time record harvest gathered this year. One old midlands farmer called it. a harvest which "people will talk about for years to come." Minister of Agriculture R. S. Hudson called it something more than that. He stated that it "might well be a critical factor not only in the history of this country, but in the history of the world." It is a critical factor in terms of shipping space freed for carrying more tanks to Russia by Arctic convoys, for battling more planes through to Malta, for transporting men and material to the hot African desert, for striking at the Axis in all theaters of the war.

To accomplish this, miracles of planning, organization and science have been necessary; that, and plain hard work have transformed Britain into a mighty farming land. Before the war she raised less than 40 per cent of her foodstuffs and even then had to import 8,000,000 tons of animal feeds to produce meat, milk and eggs. Of her 55,000,-000 acres, only 12,000,000 were under the plow. Arable Acreage Increased.

Today the arable acreage has increased to 18,000,000 acres, or 33 per cent of the total area of the country. Today Britain is raising about 70 per cent of her food requirements.

Her wheat acreage is up one-third and is expected to be up by 80 per cent by 1943. The ordinary good British farmer now gets 40 bushels of wheat an acre, many of them By all means take the dude wran- get more than 50 and some chamgler's advice on distances. Tractors in Use Doubled. When the war began she had only about 50,000 tractors. She now has 111,000, or one tractor for every four-fifths of a square mile. Before the war there were fewer than 100 combines in England, now there are It is interesting to note that while mechanization in Australia, the Argentine and the United States has gone with a comparatively low yield per acre, in Britain mechanization has been achieved while keeping the yield per acre easily the highest in the world. This is a tribute to the scientific approach of British farmers to the use of organic and inorganic fertilizers.

At the same time fertilizers previously imported are now being produced in Britain. For example, 20 new plants were producing lime by the end of 1941. There was also an immense expansion of home nitrate production. Practically the only imported fertilizer now used in the new areas under wheat is potash.

ENLEN KELLER - A BROWER BY JO DAVIDSON

THE TIME IS ... NOW!

A message from a great and gifted American to all who want a better world

by Helen Keller

less all mankind is free. Victory is to give, not to receive. Steadfast giving in us is as essential as the strategy of the soldiers who so confidently trust us to be a rampart behind them on the home front. We must not be defeated by selfishness. We must match with brave giving the heroism of the unnumbered plain folk who are baring their bodies to bomb and flame so that the monstrous wrong to humanity may be redressed.

We have not believed enough in ourselves. We have been slow to learn what we have been taught about our powers of self-rule and our responsibility to develop them. We have not believed enough in democracy. We have looked upon it as a political creed instead of a way of living. We have had to abandon the claims we made for a civilization we took on trust, since we have seen it collapse. Now we are confused because what we believed has turned out differently from what we imagined. Democracy is still with us, but its great resources for good remain unused. Only by giving all we are in service, intelligence and courage can we rise to the true spirit which shall be our pilot light unto victory both in the war and in the peace after it. Not until we refuse to take without giving can we create a society where the chief activity of man shall be the common good, where no race or class shall be outcast, nor any child perverted from his happy growth into a tool of tyranny.

A DECENT society is the sum of the contributions of heart and mind by decent individuals. Never before has it been so vital for everyone who thinks and feels rightly to offer himself as a gift toward a humane, free world in which self-interest and others' rights will be integrated for ever-widening social betterment.

We, not institutions, are the Brother-hood that must crush oppression and in-humanity. We, not governments, are the Democracy which must safeguard to all peoples reasoned understanding and education for the protection of every human right. Unselfish living, not war, is Total. By its might alone can we win the lasting recompense of the saving peace that is victory's soul.

Away with ignorance that blinds to mortal danger, and with pessimism that truckles to the enemy's murderous intent! Away with beggarly murmuring over shortages while famine is turning continents into tombs for children living and for babes unborn! The engulfing need of mankind, profaned, bleeding from wounds foully dealt, cries for the utmost of life and law and light that can be saved. It is better that war should leave a mere handful than that many live to sink into degradation. Conçord and Lexington call to us to end this fatal plague of dictatorship.

We must not falter when the presence of martyred countries is broadcasted into our midst — Russia whose rivers are blood instead of living waters — the unbroken honor of China and Poland — Norway's childhood held as in irons — Czechoslovakia, one vast Lidice before the firing squad. God, man and our own history plead with us in the name of all we cherish to keep alive the dreams of achievement of our forefathers.

The weapons we bring must be in our free spirit no less than in our armed might. By many ways of guile and fear the peoples have fallen into servitude. But if gangsters unite in a powerful, effective organization, it is a challenge to free men everywhere to do that also. The gangsters' one purpose is to knead the lands and oceans as material for dominion. Let our one end be a Brotherhood of Good Will shaping the earth into a hearth for mankind with equal rights and opportunities for everyone.

Every line of prophecy God has thundered against oppressors is this day fulfilled. The siege and straitness of the war have put the very existence of many nations into the hands of those who are willing to give all for freedom. Only as life-givers can we rescue our own homes from the spoiler and our faith as a brand plucked out of the burning from destruction. There is no more sea between us and the slayer. Nor can we truly say there are "nations" and "peoples" left; for there are no boundaries unviolated by the powers of darkness. There is just one vast humanity that is being poured out in blood and anguish, and habitations of cruelty are multiplying.

THE time for us to act is NOW, and the way to do it is through solidarity in giving to build up a covenant with God in every country, city and village against the most dread foe yet recorded. Because of love's invincible force despotism has never completely won, and it must not win while there is an altar to the Lord in us who are responsible for other lives, for gentleness, for culture and progress.

example. Thinking how great is the need for courage in these desperate days, our mind recently turned to the bravest soul we know — Helen Keller. Blind and deaf practically all her life, she has nevertheless had the courage to accept pain and loss and terrible handicaps, and to put them in their lesser places. Not one hour of her life has been wasted. She has devoted her life to developing the great power of understanding that is in her, and that she believes is within each of us if we will but use it.

Hers is a wonderful example for a people facing the most crucial hours in its history — hours in which the two great things which count most will be courage and work. We therefore wrote to Helen Keller and asked her to share with the readers of This Week some of her strength and faith. Her answer was the editorial which appears on this page.

She was inspired to write it, she told us, by reading a recently-published letter written by a Dutch boy who had been sentenced to die at dawn. This letter lifted her, she says, "to a point-of-the-bayonet defiance... The spirit-born courage with which Kees X. carried Freedom's banner from this world into the next squared my shoulders to the responsibility, since 'where the Lord is, there is Liberty.'"

Instantly Pat was on his feet and seized the man

R. RUMPLEMEYER, long head of personnel at Spratt's, the large New York department store, looked distressedly around the magnificent private office of the store's president, and then down at his game leg.

"It's a miracle," he said aloud, addressing the leg, since he had no other audience, "but I hate to tell her just the same!"

This quiet corner of the great store gave no hint of the warinduced difficulties the organization was experiencing. The armed forces had taken many trained salesmen, and business was meager except when a priority warning sent the crowds clamoring for some particular article. Mr. Rumplemeyer shuddered as he recalled the Battle of the Silk Stocking Department, for example!

And now many of the executives were leaving, intolerably burned, as he himself was, by the holding down of a deak job while the world was on fire. Yet the store must go on serving the public, and seeing that it did so was the owner's duty. Yet how could she manage without the dependable assistants she had counted on ever since she took the store over after her husband's death?

"It's going to be too much for one young woman," he added, "with only a lot of know-nothings left to help her!"

"Out where I come from," said a voice behind him, "when the hands quit you, you just realize you've got two hands of your own."

Mr. Rumplemeyer turned to face Arizona-Spratt, the unfailing thrill which the sudden sight of her glorious golden beauty inspired possessing him once more. Tall and slender as a sapling, the young widow who was the store's owner regarded him with affection in her great gray eyes: a far too impersonal affection. Mr. Rumplemeyer swallowed hard.

"I — I just got back from Washington," he said significantly.

"You roped and tied your old commission?"

"I did, Arizona. They've taken me back into aviation. Rank of major, same as last war. Said the game leg wouldn't stop me from ferrying bombers."

Arizona's face shone with grave enthusiasm.

"Be careful how you ride those bucking sky broncos, Rumpy," she said. "Your place in this outfit is going to be hard to fill, and I want you back in one piece when the big rodeo is over!" Then she smiled her brilliant smile and held out her hand. "You old hoss thief," she added huskily, "I'm proud of you!"

But when she was alone, the golden head bowed for a moment. Arizona felt that her brain was like a tumbleweed, full of nothing and rolling in all directions at once. This was the second resignation in one morning.

Miss Demster, high authority on food demonstration in the grocery department, was leaving to do war work right when they had to push a lot of unpopular foodstuffs. Who in this cross-eyed, sore-toothed, kangaroo rat of a world could be found to take her place? Who could ever take the place of Rumplemeyer and his experienced way with the vast herd of her six thousand employees?

Nobody, unless it was Pat Ryan, the fiery young Personal Relationship Manager, and Pat would be in uniform any day, for surely he must be intending to go. All Arizona's menfolks had been fighters, and Pat was her man now — or nearly so. Arizona deliberately crushed the growing doubt in her heart about Pat, and as though in answer to her thoughts the door opened and Pat himself appeared.

"Hello, Toots, I've got big news." He grinned.

A load seemed to fall from Arizona's heart.

"You've enlisted! Oh, Pat!"

Young Ryan's Irish-blue eyes went cold. "No, you fire-eater, I haven't."

"What's the matter? Entries for the big bull-doggin' contest all full?" she countered indifferently.

"You forget," he said easily, "that I have my mother to support, and I'm not fighting today. Especially not with you. Can we attend to the business of this store for a few minutes?"

She nodded, but something deep inside her hurt. Like a sarmint had me by the innards, she thought miserably. Of course Pat had his mother. It was a valid excuse. Yet there was a definitely strained feeling between the two as Pat explained the news he had brought. The plans for holding a Good Neighbor Fiesta at the store were complete, and the last contributors were signed up. Spratt's could now go ahead and prepare for the monster exhibition and sale which would transform the whole tenth floor into a South America in miniature.

The original suggestion had been Pat's, cooked up with an eye to getting crowds into the store again. But Arizona had seen it not only as a real howdy to a lot of neighbors we ought to know better, but, since the show was to include a lot of old paintings, as a likely chance to get back the patronage of Mr. Mark Selborne, the fabulously wealthy art collector.

"He hasn't bought anything from our art trading post lately," she had declared with enthusiasm, "and he thinks nothing of paying a hundred thousand dollars a head for his stock, providing the head was painted by some prominent dead foreigner."

That had been months ago. Now the preliminaries were over, and this strange new Pat was standing before her absorbed only in getting the show started. Across the stony though invisible barrier between them Arizona reached out for the papers he offered.

"Okay these, Toots, please," he said, "so I can get the carpenters to work immediately."

In the weeks which followed, the tenth floor of Spratt's blossomed steadily into tropical splendor. Palm trees sprouted on that unfertile soil, and quaint streets straggled over areas where only a short while before utilitarian household objects had stood. There were beguiling gardens of lush and brilliant flowers, while the erstwhile grim white walls were pushed out indefinitely by murals of sea and mountain.

Through the maze of this swiftly unfolding pattern Pat Ryan moved ceaselessly, conferring with the representatives of the various Republics and hounding workmen. The woman in Arizona admitted that he was riding herd high, wide 'n' handsome, and the executive in her acknowledged anew that Pat was invaluable to the store. Besides, after all, that sweet, old homey mother of his did have a claim on him. Arizona even went so far in her secret heart as to be glad Ma Ryan was such a good cook — Pat needed the right sort of nourishment these hard-working days.

So when, about a week before the Fiesta opened, Arizona, coming to work earlier than usual, found Pat at the curb outside the employees' entrance feeding sugar to the mounted policeman's horse, she stopped with a tentative smile.

"Howdy, stranger," she said, guiltily displaying several lumps of sugar in her own palm.

At sight of her smile the strained look left Pat's strong face. "Nice horse!" he commented. "Only thing wrong with him is he's not a dappled gray."

"Well, I'll be hornswoggled! Are you set on flecked gray hosses too?"

"Should be," said Pat. "When I was a kid my father was a mounted cop, and he had a dappled called O'Keefe. I was nuts over that horse. Maybe if Dad hadn't been transferred to the Detective Bureau, he'd be alive and riding today!"

There was a moment of sympathetic silence.

"My first hoss back in Yuma was flecked gray. Name of Kickapoo. Sweetest gaited hoss I ever rode." Arizona's great eyes were moist as they met Pat's understanding ones. For the first time in weeks something of their old unspoken intimacy was restored.

Pat broke the silence, "How's about lunch this noon?"
"Okay," Arizona agreed meekly...

TW-11-1-42

She had scarcely reached her office when Mr. Rumplemeyer was on the phone, asking her to lunch.

"Sorry you're busy," he said when she refused. "I wanted to discuss the subject of my successor. I've no one really satisfactory, and my time is getting short. Besides," he added naively, "I'm in uniform for the first time today, remember?"

Arizona had not remembered. She made sincere apologies, but promptly forgot Mr. Rumplemeyer again when Pat ushered in a man whom he introduced as Mr. Larry Sullivan.

The first thing the gray-haired Mr. Sullivan did was request to be left alone with Arizona, and as soon as the door closed behind Pat, Mr. Sullivan produced credentials from the U.S. Customs.

"There's nothing to be alarmed at, Mrs. Spratt," he assured her. "I just wanted to have a look at the paintings which are being unpacked for your South American sale, and as I'm an old friend of Pat's family, I asked to be introduced to you personally; the errand I'm on is a confidential one."

"Okay, Sheriff!" said Arizona. "Shoot!"

"As you maybe know, for years most objects over a hundred years old have come in duty free," he said. "But we are up against a new situation. When the Germans took Paris, they stripped the art galleries. A lot of these world-famous paintings have been turning up in South America, and we have an idea that from there they're being shipped to New York."

"And you think maybe we got some critters with brands that don't belong up in our corral?"

The inspector smiled. "Might be. At any rate, I want to have a look before the show opens and anything slips away. These paintings would bring huge prices even in wartime, and there are plenty of private collectors who don't scruple about how they get a picture they want. We know of certain very rich parties who have recently transferred big sums to South America; we have a pretty good idea that this money is connected with picture sales, and that it's being spent for Axis propaganda."

Arizona's mouth puckered into an unladylike whistle. "The dirty hoss thieves!" she said. "How do you figure they get the pictures into this country?"

"If you could show me the answer to that," said Sullivan, "you'd sure be helping to win the war, Mrs. Spratt!" . . .

Up on the tenth floor numerous paintings were being hung. There were two collections, one of gay, bright things by contemporary South American artists, and another of classic antiques.

Arizona followed Larry Sullivan around patiently as he made his quick, keen inspection. Pictures were not much in Arizona's line, and she wondered what anyone could see worth cheating for in these dingy, depressing old canvases. So, apparently, did Mr. Larry Sullivan, for he soon declared he could find nothing suspicious.

But he was full of compliments on the nearly-assembled Fiesta. With warming heart Arizona told him it had been Pat's idea.

"He's all right, Pat is!" Sullivan said heartily. "I worked with his dad, and I've known Pat since he was a kid. Yes, they're fine people. It's nice, too, that the old lady gets such a good pension from the police department. She deserves it!"

ARIZONA experienced the same sort of sickening shock she had once felt back home when she had all but stepped on a rattlesnake. Pat had lied about having to support his mother; given a cheap alibi for not being in the Army! She hardly knew when Mr. Sullivan left or how she found her way back to her office. But once there she seized the telephone and in a rather shaky voice announced to the delighted Mr. Rumplemeyer that she would lunch with him after all. Scarcely had she hung up when Pat appeared.

"Ready to go?" he asked cheerfully. Arizona's face was a thundercloud.

"You'll have to excuse me," she said coldly. "I'm lunching out with a uniform!"

During that noon hour Arizona proved an inattentive guest, and when it was over, she headed for the modest old-fashioned East Side apartment where Mrs. Ryan kept house for Pat. She was going to fix Pat, once and for all, for his own good!

The motherly old lady, who with her white apron and plainly parted gray hair looked as if she had stepped out of a picture book, greeted her warmly and listened while Arizona explained her plan.

"Me take over the food demonstrations at Spratt's?" Mrs. Ryan was obviously flattered. "But I only know the plain, cheap foods and I cook on an old coal stove!"

"Don't let that hinder you, Ma!" Arizona was urgent. "It's your chance to help and do your bit by freeing Miss Demster for war work."

"But I might hurt business, doin' things my way." "The chuck-wagon department has been all shot for weeks," Arizona declared. "You can't make things worse. Set up a coal stove at Spratt's, or anything else you want — only come to work, and don't tell Pat until it's too late for him to stop you. Please be sure of that!"

It was nearly a week before Pat discovered what his mother, who left the flat later than he did, was up to. Quite by accident he wandered into the erstwhile deserted grocery department and found himself part of a crowd which was eagerly sniffing the odor of freshly cooked ham hocks and kraut. People were struggling with each other to buy the pickled cabbage from great vats, while a mellow Irish voice talked

"Now boiled lentils are cheap and good too," it was saying. "Me own mother back in Ireland did them up with beef chip and tansy. Right here in this other pot I have some - Come on up, me dear, and try a sip. Don't be skeered — it'll never hurt you."

It was his mother! Standing on a raised platform beside an immense coal range, her homey smile flashing at the crowd, her spectacles askew on her damp forehead, her big white apron rumpled, but plainly winning the hearts of her audi-

Pat stamped away in a blind turmoil, and presently flung open the door of Arizona's office.

"How dare you do this to me?" he shouted. "My mother doesn't have to work."

Arizona's eyes met his steadily, scornfully.

"I know that. But she's doing her bit by releasing Miss Demster for war work."

"My gosh, Arizona! Ma can't do this kind of thing!"

"She is doing it, far as I can notice. She's moving all the stickers in her department, and putting on the first real foods demonstration we've ever had. All Demster ever did was crown fruit jelly with whipped cream. Ma's got that beat a mile, and she's going to stay.'

They exchanged glares then, each knowing that the other was thinking of Pat's alibi. Finally, Pat turned on his heel and left, slamming the door behind him. Arizona burst into tears with Pat as her official escort; but now he glowered at her from the outskirts of the crowd. They hadn't spoken since yesterday, and Pat had not even bothered, Arizona noted bitterly, to put on his town-headin' clothes, but wore his ordinary business suit. Besides which, Mark Selborne was being unusually difficult, passing up all the antique paintings with complete scorn. However, he did show a faint interest in three inexpensive but colorful paintings by Blasco di Chico, a young modern of the Argentine. Not for nothing had Arizona once spent so much time at Bill Williams' trading post on the Hopi Reservation, watching the Indians' sly methods of trading. As soon as Mark Selborne had taken his departure, she looked around for a salesman. Unfortunatelo there was none in sight and she was forced to speak to Pat.

Fiesta. Through the blazing success of it, Arizona, looking

"Have those three Di Chicos set aside for Selborne," she said. "I bet he'll be back for them."

Then she turned away quickly.

ARIZONA'S trading instinct was right. Early next day, when the public had scarcely begun pouring in to view the Fiesta, Mr. Selborne returned and presently Arizona was summoned to his irate presence.

"I wanted all three Di Chicos!" He spoke with the arrogant petulance of his kind. "And now it seems that one is missing. Unless I can get it, I will never buy another thing in this place."

Arizona smiled and placated, while inwardly she burned at Pat's neglect, which was threatening the loss of this valuable client. Mr. Selborne, she assured him, should have the third picture no matter who had bought it. Slightly mollified, he purchased the two available paintings and carried them off with him,

When Pat was summoned, Arizona flew at him immediately. "What happened to that third picture? I told you to —"

"I've got it. I've decided to buy it!"
"But Selborne's been in, and he wants all three! He was poisonous as a tarantula when he found one was gone. I told him I'd get it back and I mean to."

Pat's face was inscrutable, his eyes like steel. "Okay, I'll give it up, but on one condition. I'll deliver it in person right now, and you'll come along with me."

"Fine! I'll have my chaps made out of Mexican hairless-doghide if I don't do just that!" she declared angrily. "And you can darn well apologize to Mark Selborne at the same time!"

When they got out of their taxi at the Selborne mansion, Arizona noticed another cab parking close behind, but the occupant did not get out. She thought this odd, but forgot the incident as she and Pat were ushered into the great library. For as soon as the servant had gone in search of Mr. Selborne, Pat did an extraordinary thing.

CARRYING the Di Chico to a window, he held it at a carefully adjusted angle and asked Arizona to look at it closely. It was a sunlit street scene done in broad surfaces, with the white wall of a house in the foreground. Arizona saw nothing else for a moment; then she thrust closer. "Well, I'm a lop-eared jackrabbit if there isn't a dappled gray hoss inside that wall!" she exclaimed.

"That's why I kept it," Pat said coolly. "You like the creatures, so I thought you might like a painting of one. And while I didn't intend to exactly give you this, it's going to be a sort of present just the same. Watch me!"

Kneeling in front of the painting,

Pat produced a small bottle of liquid and, moistening his handkerchief, began rubbing gently at the white surface. Rapidly the horse became clearer — a beautifully painted animal done in time-mellowed colors.

"Under this modern atrocity," said Pat, "is a famous Rosa Bon-

"Rosa Ben Hur?" said Arizona.
"I thought that was a book!"

"A famous woman painter," corrected Pat. "Her stuff is worth plenty and then some."

While he was speaking, Mark Selborne had entered quietly. Seeing what Pat was about, he tried to make a quick exit. But instantly Pat was on his feet, springing toward the great collector and seizing him. Selborne tried desperately to break loose, his face white with panic as Pat put a whistle to his lips and blew a shrill blast. Then from the other side of the door Larry Sullivan appeared with a police officer.

"Take him over, Larry!" Pat said. "Did you get something under the other two pictures?"

"A Watteau and a Greuze. Checks with South American reports exactly. This man has been buying German-looted paintings the same way, whenever he's been notified where to look for them, and then forwarding a prearranged price to Axis agents. Come along, Selborne."

Pat turned to Arizona with a grin. "I told you this was a kind of present I was giving you, Toots," he said, showing her his FBI badge, "for I hope I'm giving you back your faith in me, dear. I'm not in the Army because the government happens to think I've inherited enough of my father's talents to make me more useful here — and my job is a perfect front. As for Ma, well, I've always taken care of her — she contributed her pension to the police orphanage years ago!"

"I might have known, pardner. Will you shake and forgive?"

"Sure will, Toots."

She slipped her hand through his arm. "How about picking up Ma and some stuff from the grocery department and going to your place for supper?" she suggested. "I want to talk to you about taking over Mr. Rumplemeyer's job."

This bulletin board packs a big punch for U.S. radiomen

FROM THE FRONT ...

"Alumni" under fire send back flashes that keep this Army radio school on its toes

OMEWHERE in Australia an American bomber settles down on its landing field. The crew reports, then goes off duty. But the radio operator detaches himself from the group for a moment. He whips out some paper and writes a quick note to his former instructor in the States.

Later, thousands of miles away at Scott Field, Illinois, the instructor reads the letter to his current crop of student operators: "Everything is fine... Be sure to tell the new fellows to master 'Operation C.' They're going to need it."

This is the voice of raw experience, and the men hang on every word. The instructor turns to the day's lesson. The class buckles down with redoubled eagerness

Authorities at this Midwestern field claim that these messages, hot from the firing fronts, have done more to "keep 'em plugging" than any other morale builder yet devised. When a student knows that the man who sat in his chair three months ago has just saved the lives of his entire crew by applying "Principle A," that student's going to get "Principle A" through his skull or else.

THE bulletin board is covered with letters from former students now with the American Air Forces all over the world. Although quite unplanned, every message hammers the same theme to the men who will soon be joining the fight: "Don't waste a minute. You can't learn enough."

The policy of letters from the front was started quite by accident by a brilliant 21-year-old radio instructor, Stanley Levinson. Always anxious to improve his teaching methods, the young instructor was in the habit of finishing up his courses by passing out "Gripe Sheets." The men were asked to use the sheets for candid and anonymous opinions and suggestions for bettering the course.

ONE class, however, never seemed to find time to write up "Gripe Sheets." So at graduation, Levinson asked them to mail their comments in whenever they could.

He expected one or two letters at most, but a veritable avalanche began to descend on him a few weeks later. Almost as if prearranged, each letter urged the men in training to keep at it and mentioned bits of classroom study being put into actual practice.

The next class to graduate was so impressed with this mail that it decided on its own to continue the new policy of writing back.

The first letters to be received were a revelation to many. For some it meant the first real understanding of how their study fitted into the war effort.

Now, during recesses, there is little joshing and leaning out the windows. Invariably the class gathers silently around the bulletin board. When the break is over, the instructor no longer has to call the class to order. The letters pack a punch that sends them back to their desks, alert, grim, determined. - NAOMI JOLLES

Is JEAN ARTHUR HIGH-HAT?

HE two sailors were walking in Central Park. They were enjoying themselves. They needed one touch,

h. It came: The tall one turned: get a load of that gal over

The other one looked, whistled. se was sitting on a rock, reading. a looked like a magazine cover. She was slight and sunburned and had a tilted nose and blond hair. She was terrific.

The boys ambled over, sat down at the bottom of the rock. The girl put down her book, smiled, and they started to talk. One of the boys arked, "Gee, you look just like Jean Arthur." and she laughed, and then the tall sailor asked her to go dancing with them that night. She said she was sorry but she had a date. Then all three walked over and bought some peanuts and looked at the animals in the soo. When the sun was almost down, she looked at her watch and said she had to run. She thanked them for a lovely afternoon and walked away.

And, naturally, the girl was Jean Arthur.

You won't believe it if you've heard the familiar Hollywood stories about her. Out there they say if there is anyone harder to talk to than Garbo, it is Jean Arthur.

But I happen to know it's a true story. She told it to me. And she went walking in Central Park with me, too. Funny thing about Jean. She's Hollywood's least-known star - yet she has more smash successes to her credit than any other movie person you can think of. She has set the style for the whole movie school of sweet sophistication - yet the movie colony doesn't know her well enough to tell whether she's playing herself or not. She's been in Hollywood since 1924 - yet no gossip writer has ever discovered whether she prefers to sleep in pajamas or nightgowns.

Surprise!

TEAN is a rare member of the select circle of Hollywood's great: she is a completely normal woman. She likes her home better than a night club. She thinks it's fun to figure out the right kind of drapes for the living room. And she doesn't have a nervous breakdown at the thought of the "servant problem." She has an odd idea: she thinks it possible for an average woman to live an average life and still be a movie star.

e is hanny, successful, has n trouble making friends. She spent most of the time on the train coming East talking, drinking beer and eating peanuts with the soldiers in the lounge car. Salesgirls and fitters in department stores are her friends. They call her when they find a bargain they think she'll like. She enjoys wearing slacks — and she has a slacks-and-sweater personality.

Among other things, she's a sincerely modest person. There's a know her. This is the low-down on the modest woman who is the movies' least-known star story, for example, she likes to tell on herself:

When "Arizona" was premiered in a city of that state, the mayor held an elaborate dinner in her honor. The pièce de résistance was to be the presentation to Jean of a beautiful hand-hammered copper plate. Dinner over, the mayor rose, began his speech:

'It is indeed a great privilege and pleasure to have here tonight the Sweetheart of Arizona... We who had the honor to know her so very well came to love her. . . So, on behalf of all her most intimate friends in Arizona, I'd like to present this plate to Miss - Gene Autry!"

Jean has survived every movie epoch — she was a hit in silent slapstick, a success in the squawky-talky days, a smash in today's sophisticated products. She started in 1924 with an interminable series of bad roles, gave up in disgust in '32 and high-kited it to New York and the stage. That set off the familiar Hollywood routine: somebody else had her now - so Hollywood wanted her. Columbia Pictures popped up with a star's contract in 1934 and Jean headed back for the Coast.

She's been having things her own way ever since. She has seen bad pictures kill too many good actors and actresses. She won't let that happen to her. She steadily refuses to play a part she doesn't like. That's had two results: 1) She's one of the top box-office names. 2) She's been suspended three times. One of those suspension periods lasted two years. Finally, Frank Capra demanded her for "You Can't Take It With You" and she went back to work.

Jingle-Jangle

Her second suspension ended when Director George Stevens called her back for "Talk of the Town." That's the picture which has Jean starring with Cary Grant and Ronald Colman and which is now producing a merry jingle-jangle of coins at the nation's ticket windows. Events went along their normal course after that - Jean was suspended again. She waited this one out in New York. Then her husband - Frank Ross, an independent producer - ran across a young soldier in the Army Signal Corps - Bob Russell. Private Russell had a scenario idea. Frank went to work on it with him and they ended up with "Merry-Go-Round" - a story of wartime Washington.

Columbia read the script, bought it, asked Jean if she'd like to come back home and begin shooting on it. So that's what she's doing now.

She spent about three weeks of her latest "vacation" touring Army camps. The boys loved her. One reason was a song she sang. She called it "If I Were Your Company Commander," and it begins like

"If I were your company commander -

Second lieutenants would keep quarters swept

And polish all shoes while enlisted men slept."

So far, G.H.Q. hasn't made her a company commander. But out in California she's a volunteer ambulance driver. As a matter of fact, practice air-raid alarms provide most of the excitement in the Rosses' home life. They live in a nice Colonial-style house, notable principally for its good taste and the number of dogs wandering around it.

She's a good hostess, too, in a quiet sort of way. People like to visit. She's a good talker, a better listener. And when she curls up in a chair, she looks exactly the way the camera makes her look. Altogether, she is the kind of a girl Cary Grant should make movie proposals to.

Jimmie Doolittle says this glider pilot and his pals "will be the spearhead of air-borne attacks"

COMMANDOS ON WINGS

They are Uncle Sam's glider troops, who drop silently out of the sky, seize airfields, blow up bridges and ammunition dumps. Here's how they train for the job

by Donald E. Keyhoe

loaded troop glider descends behind enemy lines. The pilot keeps to bare flying speed—sentries below must hear no moaning of wings. As he spirals down he sees his goal, the gray blur of an open field not far from a highway bridge. He lands and brakes to a quick stop. Sky commandos climb out with machine guns and demolition kits.

Two more troop gliders, released from the same tow-plane, land alongside the first.

Antitank guns and light mechanized equipment are swiftly unloaded. The assault squads reach the road in silence a minute before the scheduled attack. By plan, still more troop and cargo gliders are landing assault units at other key points.

Striking simultaneously, the air-borne troops destroy the bridge, cut communications, blast railroad tracks. In less than a minute, enemy reinforcements are cut off from the front lines. With aid blocked, the defenders fall victim to the main frontal attack which follows.

This preview of America's glider-borne army in action is based on intensive practice operations at training centers. Day and night, realistic "attacks" are carried out, preparing both pilots and flying soldiers for the big job ahead.

The importance of that job was recently emphasized by General Jimmie Doolittle. "Don't forget the boys without motors," he said. "They will be the spearhead of future air-borne attacks."

The number of gliders America has on order is secret. According to an Army spokesman, Germany has tens of thousands of gliders. Significantly, Lt. Gen. H. H. Arnold, Chief of the Army Air Forces, has stated that our Army's glider force will be the largest in the world. Similarly, the size of the Marine glider force is confidential, but there are hints that it will be tremendous. The Marines' "sea glider," to be used in establishing beachheads, is a giant weighing 12,000 pounds. Built with a hull for taking off from water, it has a wingspread of 110 feet, carries 24 fully-armed Marines. Like the Army's 15place troop-glider, it is already in mass production.

These new large-type gliders will not only carry troops. They will also play a vital part in supplying war fronts. Plans for using trains of cargo gliders are already under way. Their value as supply-carriers has been pointed up by Colonel David M. Schlatter, Director of Ground Air Support, who said that a single DC-3 flying the route of the Burma Road and towing a glider can carry in a month the same equipment handled by 112 trucks. And the Nazis have sent tons of supplies to Marshal Rommel by glider trains across the Mediterranean.

To speed America's glider program, most of the civilian experts have been called into service. Among them are Lewin W. Barringer, now a major and chief of the Army glider unit, and John Robinson, chief instructor at an Army glider school. Both of them hold the golden "C," highest international soaring award.

Flying Girls

Women, too, are serving as instructors. Mrs. Helen Montgomery, one of the most famous women glider pilots, was called from her war work as a nurse at a bomber plant. Dozens of her former students, like those of Robinson and other experts, are now helping to teach the thousands required for our motorless sky fleet.

Some of these trainees have had previous flight experience in Army, Navy, Marine Corps or civil aviation. With a top age limit of 36 (the minimum is 18) many former pilots beyond combat-plane age are signing up. Some of the student glider pilots have never flown before, but these are in the minority.

Tom Barnes might be called an average student glider pilot. Barnes is 29, two years over age for an Air Corps Cadet. Down at Miami, he had owned a light plane and had flown it 130 solo hours. After signing up for the glider course, he has been sent to a Midwest pre-glider school.

Barnes finds that it is no pretentious Army base. A large farmhouse has been leased as headquarters and barracks. For an operations field, the farmer's meadow also has been leased, as well as six "satellite" fields within a radius of 10 miles.

To Barnes's surprise, there are no gliders at this base. Instead, he finds a row of light planes identical with the ship he owned in Florida. An instructor climbs in with him, watches his take-off, air work, landing. Then he tells Barnes to climb up to 3,000 feet.

"Dead-stick landing. Make it Field Three."

Barnes nervously begins his approach. It is his first "forced landing" — bugaboo of the average pilot. He comes in too fast, but manages to land after the third bounce. For the rest of his four weeks, he practices such landings, 20 or 30 a day.

In Barnes's class are a few men who have never flown before. After two packed weeks of training they must solo and begin dead-stick landings — or be disqualified.

Four weeks, and Barnes's fear of forced landings is a thing of the past. In the final week he must make precision landings within a marked area, at night as well as in daylight. The tests passed, he waits impatiently to learn what glider school he'll be sent to.

Barnes's orders come through, and he finds himself headed for the "hot spot" at Wickenburg, Ariz., where at noon it's 115 degrees in the shade.

"Always look in the cockpit first," he tells Barnes. "One pilot found a rattler in his seat last week."

First Plight

A row line is already secured from the glider to the towing-plane. Once off, plane and glider climb up to 3,000 feet or higher. Then Barnes's instructor pulls a release knob, and the tow line falls away. Barnes gets his first true sensation of gliding. There is only a bare whispering of wings. The ship seems to float without effort, nosed down slightly to keep flying speed. After Barnes solos—usually within a few days—he begins hours of practice in landing to a mark.

Observing a night landing, Barnes checks it with a stop watch. In the dark, the gliders come down in eerie silence, invisible. Suddenly one appears from the gloom, just as it levels off. Less than two seconds clapse from the moment when he first sees it until it stops. If it had been an enemy troop glider, the whole base would have been caught flat-footed.

For fine co-ordination of controls, and to help judgment of weather and clouds, all glider pilots are given a short period in "riding thermals" — rising air currents. Barnes soon learns that the ship will rise under clouds just forming or over bare areas of ground, and that it will sink over dark spots such as stretches of brush.

Modern gliders are equipped with blind-flying instruments, and Barnes has to learn this technique. But he is warned not to fly into clouds indiscriminately, because violent air currents within the cloud have been known to tear gliders apart.

Near the end of his course, Barnes learns to fly "formation" with one or two other gliders towed by the same plane. He also practices the new glider pick-up system by which a moving plane dangles a hook, catches up the glider's tow line and hauls the craft into the air.

Preparation

Some details of Barnes's training are confidential, but it's known that at least some glider troops have the same basic training as parachutists. This includes wrecking of communications and transport, seizing such key points as air fields, radio stations, posts of command and other vital spots. Other troops are being trained to act as shock forces, to strike from behind enemy lines in force, helping frontal units create a pincers. In most of these actions, glider attack has the advantage over paratroopers. They land without sound, where the drone of parachutists' planes cannot be completely muffled, even by glides from high altitude. Glider squads land in units, at selected points; paratroopers are scattered, sometimes a mile or two from their target.

From what we know about Barnes's training, it is possible to give the general picture of glider attacks of the near future:

Imagine a combined operation. Marine Corps gliders, launched at sea and towed by Navy flying boats, are to land close to a beach and make a surprise frontal attack. Army gliders, launched from land bases, are to land behind the enemy lines.

More than 200 miles at sea, the big flying boats roar off before dawn, each towing three gliders with a total of 72 Marine "raiders." They climb to high altitude, and the gliders cut loose 60 miles from the enemy shore. Silently, they glide in, now and then flying blind through clouds or mist.

From the Army base, another fleet of troop gliders has by now cut loose from bombers or cargo-type tow planes. In one of the leading gliders Sergeant Tom Barnes watches his wingmen as they circle down 20 miles behind the lines. They are down to 500 feet before he can make out his destination — the enemy fighter field. He is leveling off at the edge when a sentry gives a shout of alarm. Barnes brakes to a hasty stop, and his squad leaps out.

The sentry's rifle blazes, but too late. A dozen gliders are on the ground, and trained sky-troopers mow down the enemy gunners as they run from their huts. A squad seizes the radio shack, cuts off the operator's frantic message for help. In 10 minutes, the field is in American hands. A searchlight flickers up, four miles away, and is promptly blotted out. Another glider unit has landed there, on schedule.

Action!

From the direction of the beach, a star shell flares. The Marines have landed and gone into action. In seconds, machine guns are rattling. Not far from where Barnes landed, an ammunition dump goes up with a roar and a blast of flame. The action is on!

Surprised and attacked from two directions, the enemy is trapped, his reinforcements blocked. More gliders land, and more shock troops pour into the rear-line battle. From another enemy field, a few fighter planes get into the air. Three or four gliders are shot down before they can dive to landings. But the Marine fighter planes, launched from carriers farther out, speed in and swiftly take care of the enemy planes. Army bombers, waiting until the first surprise is effected, thunder in and bomb the remaining enemy strongholds.

By noon, most of the resistance has been ended. Big cargo gliders are towed in, landing supplies, food, ammunition. Their main work done, the motorless ships are towed away, made ready for their next job.

Not long ago this picture would have been sheer fantasy. Today it is only a step from reality, with thousands of pilots preparing for the mass attack that will come silently out of the night.

MECHANICS WITH POMPADOURS

They're the girls who do a man-sized job at a West Coast air base

THE girls standing at the busstops each morning in Riverside, California, always get an extra turn of the head from the men walking by. They deserve it — they look like a bunch of college co-eds on their way to Malibu Beach. Actually, they're women of war, waiting for special personnel busses to take them to the Army air base at March Field where they work at welding machines and tool tables.

As a matter of fact, many of them were co-eds a few months ago. Now the lady soldiers are working side by side with March Field's male khakiwearers. They're employed as instrument repairers, truck drivers, parachute riggers, stock chasers, riveters, in many other jobs-and every one of them releases another soldier for combat duty.

Average age of the girls is 20. Most of them are city ladies — from Los Angeles and San Francisco. They wear either slacks or skirts and work quietly, efficiently. They bring their own lunches so they won't hold up hungry soldiers at the Post Exchange during the rush noon hour. They earn good salaries, but they're more concerned about machinery than money. A high percentage of their wages goes for War Bonds and Stamps.

Typical examples of the girls at March Field are Beverly Derry, 19, and Vivian Harmon, 20. Both parachute riggers, they share an apartment in Riverside with another girl who works on plane instruments. They cook and clean and do their own laundry. Once a week they all go to Los Angeles to see their families.

Other members of the machineshop brigade are assigned to the motor-scooter corps. Zooming up and down the hangar lines, they trace stock and deliver parts and tools.

The feminine contingent took over last April when Major Paul

Blair was assigned to March Field. He had seen girls in action at airplane factories. Impressed by the way feminine abilities fit into the war machine, he hired his own corps of female warriors. So far he hasn't been disappointed.

"Give these girls a chance to show what they can do," says the Major, "and they proceed to show you they can do twice as much!"

Major Blair also has a schoolhouse, off to one side of the hangars, for his workers. All day long, the girls attend classes in riveting, welding and tool-making. It doesn't take them long to become proficient.

They're seldom delayed by priority orders at March Field. If a piece of equipment is needed, it's made on the premises, on the premises, doing away with yards of red

One hot morning, the Major decided the shops could use an airconditioning machine. He called on the welding department. Sure, said-the welders, and went to work. By mid-afternoon, the equipment was ready and working — and efficiency, despite the 106-degree weather, was back at top-speed.

And ask the soldiers what they think: "Women? That's what the Army needed all the time."

WALLY'S WAGON

I'M THINKIN' ABOUT TUESDAY

GUESS nearly everybody has seen the phone-company ads beggin' us not to go makin' unnecessary calls to Washington an' other war centers.

Now, if I was runnin' the communication lines between here an' heaven I would be kind of tempted to ask folks not to clutter up that switchboard. A good many of us is tryin' to get a message through to the good Lord for the first time in years.

I'm in favor of prayin' all right. But I suspect a whole lot of us has to spell out our names slow an' careful an' then wait awhile till the Lord can remember just who we are an' where He met us.

I'm right awkward at prayin', but I'm goin' to get down on my knees tonight an' send up a sort of petition to the Almighty.

What I'm goin' to pray about is the Election. It's next Tuesday an', brother, we need just about all the divine guidance we can get. Here is what I'm goin' to pray:

Oh, Lord, for once give me a little common sense an' judgment. Help me an' the rest of the voters all over this troubled U.S. to do what we ought to do at the polls. Help us pick out a Congress with some guts. Help us to get men into office that has got some vision an' courage an' is able an' willin' to lead the country down the right road instead of compromisin' an' caterin' to selfishness, includin' my selfishness.

Help me pick out those which will give the government strength, not be a drag on the machinery. An' while you're steerin', Lord, help the President, an' Donald Nelson an' Leon Henderson an' the others that is in there pitchin'. An' just fix this election so that good men gets in; an' if any stuffed shirts should slip by, please make them repent an' do better. An' while You're fixin', Lord, take a look at the war an' let's see if we can't get it over quick an' definite.

An' maybe You think this ain't a powerful lesson to us, Lord, findin' out nearly too late what a blessin' we had when we had peace an' democracy an' freedom an' all the gifts You helped Washington an' Lincoln an' the rest hand down to us.

Respectfully yours,

WALLY BORES

Looks like kid stuff - but these "toys" solve major tank problems

Learning from a real "baby" blimp

Models make for better battleships

With tiny but exact models, our fighters learn battle tactics

sedate naval officers squatting on the floor and moving squadrons of tiny boats into position behind a screen, don't jump to the conclusion that they're frittering away their time. They are deep in an involved problem of naval tactics which can be worked with scale models far more cheaply than on the broad expanse of the ocean.

In countless other ways the toylike miniature model is playing its part in the instruction of fighting men. Miniature planes and naval vessels, built scrupulously to scale, are tested for long periods in wind tunnels or tanks before construction on the full-sized article begins.

CAMOUFLAGE is taught with model cities. The Quartermaster Corps practices loading trucks with toy automobiles and blocks. Antitank and antiaircraft marksmanship is developed with toy tanks or planes towed across an indoor target area. MP's study the movement of traffic and convoys with miniature models. Army cooks, in the same fashion, practice layout of kitchens, the storage of meats, etc. For the latter they even use tiny pigs and sides of beef cut to scale with a jigsaw!

In Europe, every Commando raid begins with a plaster model of the objective, complete with toy buildings, railroads, docks and everything else.

"It is good to be ready for whatever comes": That was the old woman's advice - and it bore fruit

by Hugh MacNair Kahler

Illustrated by Lawrence Braymer

HE soldier kicked the door open and stood on the threshold, his rifle at the ready, long enough to make sure that the man he hunted was not in the hut. But he faced only two women, a very old one on a makeshift bed in a corner, and a younger one, hardly more than a girl, standing by the stove.

The soldier came in, heeling the door shut behind him with a slam. The old woman did not seem to hear the noise. She lay still, eyes shut, shrunken hands crossed on her breast. But the girl was frightened, so frightened that she showed it. That told the soldier what he needed to know. These people had grown used to fear. They did not show it any more unless there was some special reason. The girl knew something about the prisoner who had escaped last night.

The soldier hooked a stool under him with a heel and held out his hands to the warm stove. There was a stew of some kind bubbling in a pot - more of it than two women would be cooking for themselves in these hungry times. The soldier sniffed approvingly.

tongue easily. He had learned it well during those four summers when the unsuspecting simpletons had made welcome guests of the underfed alien boys who were getting ready to take their fat, smiling country away from them. "And it seems that you have plenty. You could spare a little, perhaps, for a hungry man?"

"It will not be ready for some time," the girl said. "It has just begun to cook."

"It is no matter," the soldier said. "I will wait." Her glance went past him to the door. Again she did not quite succeed in keeping the fear out of her

The soldier bent his head to hide his grin. "Unless, of course, I inconvenience you, Froeken," he said. "Unless, for instance, it is for some other guest that you prepare this good stew."

"No," she said quickly. "There is nobody."

He hitched the stool nearer to the stove. He had no intention of staying. He knew there would surely be some signal by which the fugitive could be warned not to approach the hut. But it would be good sport to let her think he meant to stay. He pretended not to watch her, but every time her eyes glanced at the door, he knew it.

THERE was a long silence, except for the chuckle of the fire and the bubble of the stew. The silence lasted so long that even the soldier was a little startled when it was broken by a thin voice from the bed.

He turned quickly toward the sound. The old litted nersell on an elbow. Her eyes were wide, like a child's eyes. One of the shrunken hands pointed unsteadily at the rifle between his knees. "A gun! You are not afraid of it?"

He laughed. "It is for others to be afraid."

"That is what Thorkild Arnessen said." She shook her head slowly. "He was not afraid of his gun. And because he was not afraid, it almost killed him. Your gun is like Thorkild's gun. You should be afraid of it. It will go off and hurt you, as Thorkild's gun hurt him. It might even kill you."

"Thorkild Arnessen laughed, too," the old woman said. "But his gun — "

"Hush, Bestemor." The girl pushed her gently down. "There has been enough talk of Thorkild. Lie still and try to sleep."

The old woman subsided, mumbling. The girl came back to the stove. The soldier tapped his forehead, and she nodded. "It was a man who was almost killed accidentally by his own gun. She saw it happen. Your gun reminds her."

The soldier nodded. The old woman muttered drowsily behind him. Something about candles. It made no sense to the soldier's ear, and for a minute the girl, too, seemed puzzled.

Then her face cleared. "Ja, Bestemor."

SHE took a candlestick from the shelf. The candle was almost gone, but a good deal of the wax had run down and hardened on the stick. She scraped it off into a saucepan, and dropped the candle end in with it.

The soldier was curious. "You make soup of candles, Froeken?"

"No." She gave him a queer, grave look. "We are not hungry enough, yet, to eat paraffin. But we do not waste it. I melt down what is left of the old candle and the paraffin that has dripped into the stick, and mold a new one, that is all."

'Good, Hanne." The old woman's voice was sleepy. "If there is need of a light, now, it will be ready. It is good to be ready for whatever comes. To be - "

"Do not talk any more, Bestemor." The girl spoke soothingly. "Try to sleep."

"How can I sleep" — through its drowsiness the old voice was fretful — "with the moneybag sticking into my back?"

"Moneybag!" The soldier was on his feet.

The girl shook her head. "She is dreaming. There

He pushed her out of the way. The old woman rolled to the floor as he jerked the mattress out from under her. He ripped the ticking, clawed out the straw. There was nothing else.

"I told you," the girl said.

Her voice was quiet, but his ear caught a queer, tight breathlessness in it. He looked up. For a moment there was a coldness between his shoulderblades. He had turned his back on her, with his rifle leaning against the wall, in easy reach of her hands. It would have been simple for her to - he laughed. He hadn't been in any danger. These cattle couldn't think quickly enough to be dangerous — except to themselves.

He picked up the gun. Even the good feel of it in his hands didn't quite reassure him. There was a strange look in the girl's eyes. If he had not known that she and her kind hated and envied him and his kind for being clever and safe and strong, he could almost have imagined that she was despising him, even pitying him a little.

"You think it was foolish of me to give you a chance to shoot me with my own gun. It was not foolish, Froeken. I knew there was no danger. We have taught you to know well what it costs to kill one of us."

"Yes. You have taught us. They would have found you. Then they would have killed me and the grandmother. Perhaps everybody in the village, as they did in Bohemia."

He nodded, grinning. But he was still uneasy under her gaze. He wanted, suddenly, to get away from her eyes. He glanced at his wristwatch. "It is later than I thought, Froeken. I cannot give myself the pleasure, after all, of waiting to taste your stew."

HE GAVE her a mocking parody of a bow and left. The girl stood at the tiny window, watching till he had turned the angle in the path. The old woman stuffed straw back into the ticking. She did not look so frail now.

"He knew the food was for Soren," the girl said. "He will hide in the bushes, and when Soren comes-"

"He will shoot," the old woman said. "It is safe to count on that. He is the one who shot Olaf and Peder. It does not amuse him to take prisoners alive. He will shoot at Soren. And when they find him, his gun will show them that it was an accident. Even he — if he is alive — will think it was an accident. There'll be no blame laid on us."

"I hope there'll be no slip - that the gun will behave as we expect it to - " said the girl anxiously.

"Of course it will!" The old woman's voice was sharp. "You saw with your own eyes what happened to poor Thorkild Arnessen when, in weather not even so cold as this, he left a little grease in his gun. And you poured enough paraffin into this man's rifle to block the barrel of it for a finger's length, solidly as so much iron! When he pulls the trigger - "

The girl shivered a little. "One - one could be almost sorry for him," she said.

MARINES GO EVERYWHERE

And here are some dishes that their Commandant enjoyed while in China

by Grace Turner

FOOD FOR BIG BOSS of all the fighting Marines of the United States. Commandant Thomas Holcomb, and his wife live in one of Washington's oldest houses - with a Marine Corps in their back yard and a dress parade every day. Literally! The house begun in 1800 and finished in 1803 was built by the U.S. Marine Corps for their commandants. With grounds on either side, it covers a city block. Behind is the Commandant's private garden; and behind that, separated by an iron fence, the parade grounds, with the barracks closing them in on the other three

"It's on the wrong side of the tracks today," Mrs. Holcomb says. Nevertheless it is one of the finest houses in the capital; and a succession of Commandants and their wives have lived proudly in the enormous Colonial cream-painted-brick house. with its massive rooms inside and walls a foot thick. Each commandant must leave his portrait behind him, to hang in one of the first-floor rooms of state.

"My husband's is ready, but it's still upstairs," Mrs. Holcomb explains laughingly. "It doesn't come down until he leaves here; meanwhile I have it in my room." Commandant Holcomb will be eligible for retirement, and should be bringing down his portrait and leaving, next June. His wife hopes it will work out that way, and that they can root themselves on their farm.

"We have a very old place of 128 acres on the Southern end of the Potomac River in Maryland." Mrs. Holcomb says. "The boxwood is about 14 feet tall and was originally cut into a star formation to enclose a rose garden. The rose bushes are not good any longer, but they are still there, and one of them that is 150 years old bears tiny little wax roses.

"We have a farmer on the place now; grow crops, especially tobacco: raise cows, pigs, sheep and chickens.

So some day we will go there to stay and become farmers."

The Holcombs have been on many posts - in all parts of the United States, in the Philippines and in China.

"I enjoyed China most." Mrs. Holcomb is emphatic about it. "Last time we were there we were in Peiping. Something special about it made the life very lovely. The climate in winter, for instance - heavenly!

Commandant Holcomb

"The Chinese themselves are a quiet, home-loving, agricultural people - gentle, peaceable, and delightful. Their food - the real Chinese food - is delicious. I used to serve it here often, when we entertained. Of course, now there is not much entertaining. But I still miss the Peiping cook who used to bring a Chinese meal to the house and serve it here."

TRAVELING LIGHT?

An airline hostess gives timely hints for wartime jaunts

by Sylvia Blythe

IVING IN A SUIT-CASE and looking as though you had stepped from a bandbox is a new technique you'll need to master, if you expect to join wartime multitudes on wheels.

So, if you are a college girl who shuttles home, a Service wife who does the visiting, or a career woman whose job makes a gypsy out of you, take notes from Kathryn Freidrich. She is one of the seven stewardesses who take off with the "Flying Aces," famous airliners which ply the Atlantic.

These girls, who hobnob with important travelers, such as ministers, diplomats and other priority passengers, are obliged to look like a million, with next-to-nothing in the way of luggage to help them turn the trick. Here's how.

Says Kathryn: "Take only the grooming aids that you are going to need and only clothes that are good travelers. Put these in bags one big, one little - that add practically nothing to their weight."

LUGGAGE: Best type for that purpose, she says, is made of airlight fabric.

If you check your luggage through, as airlines make you do, and as railroad companies would like you to do, put your essential grooming aids into a hand-swung reticule.

But herd into this portable kit only what you're going to need to see you through your travels. From your bulkily-packaged jars and bottles transfer into small plastic containers measured allowances of cleansing cream, emollient, freshener, deodorant, bath powder, make-up aids, and whatever else it takes to keep you looking as fresh as the risen-from-thefoam Aphrodite. To keep these traveler's aids in good shape, pack face tissues, powder puffs, wash rags and what-nots into nooks and crannies. Include among the whatnots a pair of stockings.

Helping you to organize the contents of your big bag is where our globe-trotting stewardess shines best. Remember, she says, that shoes, hats and pocketbooks are aggressive space-takers. So, if you can make those that you wear serve the clothes that you carry, you can conserve space.

PACKING TISSUES: Skip these. They are pre-war luxuries that can be dispensed with, if you'll substitute knitwear and tweeds for crushable clothing. Kathryn's standbys for her out-of-uniform excursions in Ireland, where the Flying Aces land, are a sweater and a knit skirt for casual dress, the same knit skirt and a bejeweled sweater for fancier needs.

Undies? Where you can make one piece do for two - a combination slip and bra take the place of a slip and a bandeau, for example — you can save valuable space. A blouse which boasts a petticoat as a shirt-tail is a designing space-saving trick.

Where you have a laundry-fresh blouse or some other starchedunder-the-chin piece that you want to keep safe in a bulging bag, pack it last.

coms and Ends: Don't use the pockets of your bag as a dumping ground for these. Lumpy pockets. only make it tougher for you to close your bag, even when there is an accommodating friend to sit upon the bouncy lid. Best place to stow your oddments is in the corners and crannies of your bag.

KEYNOTING its 12th season with a "Victory Program" next Wednesday night. November 4. at Constitution Hall, all proceeds to go to the Community War Fund, the National Symphony Orchestra offers the Nation's Capital a series of 20 other concerts of great and inspiring music for these days of carrying on to the inevitable victory. Beethoven's great "Victory Symphony"—his Fifth Symphony in C Minor—has appropriately been chosen as the central composition for the Victory Program.

Before opening its formal season with its first Sunday afternoon concert at Constitution Hall next Sunday, the National Symphony also will salute the fighting men of the Nation with a concert Friday, November 6, at Camp Meade, Md. Concerts at other military centers are planned as opportunity may present during tours.

"Music from the Russian front" will be heard at next Sunday's concert when the orchestra, under the baton of its founder, Hans Kindler, will play the already famous Seventh Symphony by the young Russian composer, Dimitri Shostakovich. It was this symphony he composed during the early and threatening Nazi seige of Leningrad.

In addition to the 10 Sunday afternoon concerts, the National Symphony is for the second season offering a Wednesday evening subscription series of eight concerts, the first to be held at Constitution Hall November 11, with Jascha Heifetz, famed Currently in progress for this Wednesday night series is the subscription campaign launched by the Women's Committee of the orchestra at a luncheon last Wednesday under the chairmanship of Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe. Nearly a thousand members of the committee are working to repeat last year's success in the sale of tickets on a subscription basis only for the series of eight concerts.

campaign of last spring, the National Symphony Orchestra, eminent among the great musical organizations of the country, is ready to serve the cultural and spiritual needs of the hour on a gratifyingly firm foundation. In the campaign of last spring the Nation's Capital responded that it should be maintained on that foundation, now more than ever! Subscription committee workers are confident of the same response in their campaign, which continues to November 11.

In addition to the 18 concerts comprised in the Sunday afternoon and Wednesday night series, highlighted by leading instrumental and vocal artists as soloists, there will be the Beethoven Festival of two concerts, January 18 and 21, and two performances of the Ballet Theater, November 18 and 19. The ballet, with such eminent choreographers and dancers as Fokine, Mordkin, Baronova and Markova, to name a few, is offered as "the greatest collaboration in ballet history."

While to the adult community, in its burden and stress of war days, the National Symphony will bring all this feast and refreshment of music, it will not be forgetting the younger generation. There will be more of the concerts for school youngsters, to maintain the bond it has established with them, to nourish in them, too, the "things that mean the doom of tyrants!"

In the words of the Shostakovich whose Seventh Symphony, echoing the Russian stand at Leningrad, you may hear next Sunday:

"In these strenuous days our cultural life must not be suspended, but on the contrary must flourish, constituting for our enemies a redoubtable symbol of our might and our grandeur."

An important addition to the National Symphony's high artistry this season is its new concert mistress, Marguerite Kuehne. A Philadelphia artist, she assists Concert Master Millard Taylor.

Carroll Glenn, brilliant young American violinist, who will be heard in the "D Major Concerto" in the Beethoven festival concert of January 18.

Raya Garbousova, famed Russian cellist, appears as soloist in the Sunday afternoon concert of March 14. Many regard her as the equal of the great Pablo Casals, under whom she studied.

Jascha Heifetz, ranking among the great violinists of all time, makes the November 11 concert a rare musical event as its soloist.

James Melton, American tenor who brings a background of wide radio popularity to his success in opera and concert, appears as soloist in the Sunday afternoon concert of January 31.

"There is unutterable poetry in us all, and in music we hear it speak—different for each of us, true for all of us." Novelist Paul Horgan's tribute to music seems true for these youngsters, "lost" in one of the National Symphony's school concerts.

THE WALL OF SHEET AND THE STATE OF

National Snapshot Contest Winners

This waterfront study won the $100 prize in the class for scenes and still life for Forrest R. Brauer of Richmond, Va. It was entered through the Richmond News-Leader.

In the opinion of the judges there was $250 worth of juvenile appeal in this picture. That was the prize it won for Corp. Donald M. Laskey of Grand Rapids, Mich., entrant from the Pittsburgh Press.

PICTURES skimmed from the top amateur camera talent of the country competed in the Eighth Annual Newspaper National Snapshot Awards made at the exhibit of nearly 350 pictures here at the National Geographic Society. These are some of the most interesting pictures among the money winners, including the $1,500 grand-prize-winning picture made by an Army corporal and two of the four snapshots made by camera fans of this area and entered from the all-summer contest conducted by The Star. All four of the local pictures took some of the $12,500 award money distributed among the entrants from 69 newspapers throughout the United States and Canada.

For a Yank in uniform, Corp. Kenneth C. Pratt of Northvale, N. J., this picture of two soldiers silhouetted against a northern sky atop icy boulders won top money of $1,500. After taking the $500 first prize in the special class for men in the armed forces, it went on to win the $1,000 grand prize.

Winner of a $50 special merit award for another entrant from The Star, Harvey Colpe, 402 E. Custis avenue, Alexandria, Va., this picture of a personable cat, "Whiskers" missed by just about a whisker cutting in on bigger prize money. "Whiskers" went far in his class elimination race.

The "Spirit of '76 in '42" is a timely bit of juvenile exuberance that won a $100 prize for Minturn R. Allen of Hartford, Conn., who entered the picture through the Hartford Times.

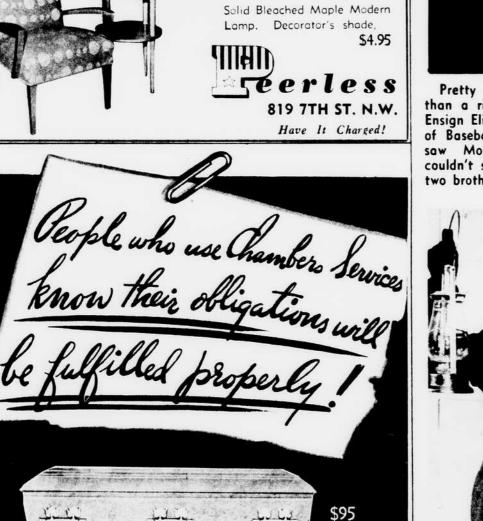

Jap loot in New Guinea. A little bit of everything a Jap soldier carries to war with him is represented in this pile of "souvenirs" captured by the Yanks. Associated Press Photographer Edward C. Widdis looks over the assortment, which includes Jap money and a flag.

Your Capital in Peacetime-

FACADES OF FEDERAL TRIANGLE

An impressive view of some of the monumental structures in the heart of the "new Federal Washington" is this picture looking west on Constitution avenue. In the foreground is the Archives Building, in statuary and relief carving perhaps the most ornate of all the great Federal Triangle group which rose in the peaceful interlude between Warld War I and the greater struggle of today. Just beyond is the Department of Justice. Other pictures of your Capital in peacetime will appear from time to time in this rotogravure series.

Looking Back On the Big Flood From the Air

The only air pictures permitted of the record-breaking flood along the Washington waterfront were taken from an Army plane and released after the menace of the record high-water had passed. Of these the view above shows the complete inundation of the Georgetown waterfront up to a level of several feet on K street. Water reaches the second-floor level of buildings and is deep around the towering sand and gravel plant at right.

The oft-flooded Peace Cross area at Bladensburg, Md., reached a new saturation level. Wide and deep is the flood lake as viewed from the Army plane. Under water in the fore ground, the Baltimore boulevard stretches north beyond.

She's ENGAGED! She's Lovely! She uses Ponds!

MARTHA AND FIANCE on campus of Clemson College, S. C., last spring. She's just as sweet and feminine looking now in her crisp lab uniform, so flattering to her soft-smooth Pond's complexion.

FOR ENGAGED HANDS—lovely new Pond's Lotion
(Danya)

New pearl-glowing creaminess blended to:

• soften hands in one application give busy hands a whiter, sweeter look relieve irritated chapping quickly MARTHA GAFFNEY'S engagement to Henry Niles Nelson, Jr., unites two fine Southern families. She is the great, great grand-daughter of the eminent statesman, John C. Calhoun Martha's heart is with her aviator fiancé—but her skilled hands and highly trained mind are given to her important war job with the Fourth Service Command's mobile laboratory.

"We work like mad," she told us.
"We do blood and disease tests regularly, of course—and test just about everything in sight as well—water, milk, ice cream, anything that might contain harmful bacteria and cause illness among the boys at the camps."

Like so many darling Southern girls, Martha has a particularly lovely complexion—creamy smooth and white. She says: "My lab work makes me an absolute stickler for cleanliness. That's why I'm so fond of Pond's Cold Cream.

Martha's heart is with her aviator It cleanses so thoroughly—and leaves my skin feeling soft and dewy."

Pat Pond's Cold Cream on your face and throat—gently, quickly. Tissue it off well. See how it softens and releases dirt and old make-up.

"Rinse" now with a second lovely Pond's creaming—to clean off every little speck of soil and leave your skin silky-soft. Tissue off. Your face will feel fresh as a flower!

Every night give your face this soft-smooth Pond's beauty care—for daytime clean-ups, too. You'll see why war-busy society women like Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan and Mrs. Ernest du Pont, Jr., use Pond's—why more women and girls use it than any other face cream.

GUARDING HEALTH OF BOYS AT ARMY CAMPS while her fiance flies for Uncle Sam. Martha is now at Fort McPherson—bacteriologist in the Field Laboratory of the Fourth Service Command.

MARTHA'S ENGAGEMENT RING is unusually beautiful—a 2-carat diamond in an exquisitely simple platinum band.
