23 Enemy Ships Lost; *U. S. Toll 2 Cruisers * And Six Destroyers 7 (Earlier Story on Page A-1.)

A smashing victory over the Japanese in the Solomon Islands, with 23 enemy ships destroyed and seven others damaged in the greatest naval battle of the war, was announced today by the Navy. The United States Navy lost two light cruisers and six destroyers in the action that has been going on for several days. Jap losses were described as follows: One battleship sunk, three heavy cruiser sunk, two light cruisers sunk, five destroyers sunk and eight transports sunk.

One battleship damaged, six destroyers damaged and four cargo transports destroyed. After terrific attacks by our patrol aircraft, the remaining Jap forces were reported to be withdrawing to the northward on November 15, and no reports of any further action has been 🚜 At one time during the engagement, shortly after midnight on the morning of November 13, the Japs became confused, and during the latter part of the battle were firing at each other, the Navy said. This battle against the Japanese invasion force was fought at close range, and it was during this engagement that Rear 🛶 Admiral Daniel J. Callaghan, former White House naval aide, was killed in action. Shortly after this close-in engagement, the Japs 🗻 withdrew from the battle and retired to the northward. The Navy made it plain that Gen. Douglas MacArthur's aircraft were of great assistance and that they made repeated successful attacks on the Jap invasion fleet at Rabaul and Buin.

During the daylight hours of November 13 United States aircraft made continuous attacks on damaged Jap ships which remained in the area following the night battle. During the late fternoon a large formation of at least 12 enemy transports, under heavy navy escort, headed toward Guadalcanal from the Bougain-

An enemy surface force bombarded our positions on Guadalcanal, and as the transports drew near at least eight were sunk by our Air Forces. The remaining ships continued toward Guad-

Another engagement between surface vessels occurred the night of November 14, and the Navy said details of this meeting of battle forces have not yet been received. However, on the morning of November 15 four enemy cargo transports were found beached at Tassafaronga, about 71/2 miles west of our positions on Guadalcanal. These transports were destroyed by combined air, artillery and naval gunfire.

It was on the morning of November 15, shortly after the transports had been destroyed, that United States patrol craft reported the Japanese forces retreating to the northward.

The Navy's communique, subject of discussion throughout the day as rumors came in, apparently refutes the wild Japanese claims 🐳 of a tremendous victory in the Solomons.

THREE CENTS. FIVE CENTS

Southerners Turn Parliamentary Move Against Barkley

The filibuster by Southern Democrats against the bill to abolish poll taxes went on unabated in the Senate today, with five quorum calls in the first hour of the session. The parliamentary move by Majority Leader Barkley in obtaining adjournment instead of a recess Saturday night made the unanimous consent calendar of routine bills in order today, and opponents of the anti-poll tax measure refused to waive the calling of this calendar. In fact, they used the calendar as a means of temporarily blocking renewal of the poll tax debate. The first two bills on the calendar were objected to, and after each objection Senator Russell, Democrat, of Georgia, demanded another quorum call. Under Senate rules, a new quorum call may be made as often as the Senate transacts business of any kind. Therefore, the bill's opponents may keep the quorum bells ringing constantly, at least until 2 o'clock.

Sheppard Bill Pending. At that hour the Senate, under normal procedure, turns from the routine calendar to whatever major issue is left unfinished from the previous session. The opposition, however, has given no indication it will let up then. During the call of the routine calendar, the Senate reached the Sheppard bill, sponsored originally by the late Senator Sheppard, Democrat of Texas, to establish dry zones around military camps, and Senator O'Danied, Democrat of Texas, promptly moved to take that bill for extended debate. This required another roll call, but his motion to proceed with the bill failed, 43 to 19. This was not, however, a straight-out test on the strength of the dry zone measure, since the vote involved the question of blocking the poll tax bill. With this move defeated, the ing that the $200,000 increase in nous calling of other and a quorum roll call on each one continued.

"Get Tough," Norris Urges. Three Attaches Await Darlan Action on Plea To Avert Internment

Military, Naval and Air Aides Pledge Allegiance To Admiral, Ask Help

Orders from Admiral Jean Darlan were awaited here today by the military, naval and air attaches of the French Embassy. The attaches, who face internment tomorrow, have proclaimed their allegiance to the admiral since he became the principal French official in North Africa, and asked his intercession.

However, the State Department reported it had nothing to say at the moment about the status of the attaches and their three assistants, who joined them in the declaration of allegiance to the pro-Allied Admiral Darlan. The attaches are marking time at their homes here.

Some Ordered Transferred. While the fate of these six was not clear, the State Department said French Ambassador Gaston Henry-Haye and certain members of his staff would be transferred tomorrow to Hershey, Pa., there to await exchange for American diplomats in France. The men who have elected to follow Admiral Darlan are Maj. Gen. Auguste Bonavita, military attache; Capt. Denis de Bourgoing, naval attache; Col. Paul Jacquin, air attache; Maj. Bruno Daru, assistant military attache; Comdr. Abel Abeck, assistant naval attache, and selor Guillaume George-Picot with a request that it be transmitted to North Africa.

State Department Silent. The State Department refused this morning to announce whether or not it was sending the message. It is understood that delicate problems of policy are involved and that they bear on decisions yet to be made concerning our relations with

To Fuel Oil Users

Service records show definitely that many homes are not saving fuel oil as they must. Fuel oil rationing started October 1st and unless lower day and night temperatures are being maintained, and other conservation measures taken, you can be almost certain you will run out of fuel oil later on. Until you know the exact amount of your ration you should assume that you will get about 25% less fuel oil than last year. The Government puts it squarely up to you to make your reduced supply last.

The flight was carried out for reconnaissance and for a visit to American headquarters at Casablanca, Morocco, where the forces of Maj. Gen. George S. Patton, com-mander of the African west coast

We found the whole area quiescent after fighting that was particularly heavy in Fedala, Casablance and Safi on the Moroccan coast. The fighting is over, except for some skirminshing between some Arab tribes and French Foreign Legion elements which Gen. Patton is trying to clean up far to the south of the Casablanca area.

Gen. Gruenther was accompanied on his mission by Maj. Ernest T. Lee of San Antonio, Tex., aide to Gen. Eisenhower, the supreme Allied commander for this theater.

Gen. Doolittle flew our plane. Gen. Gruenther took up a position at a .50-caliber mashine gun to watch out for Nazi planes. I handled the second .50-caliber "waist gun" position, beside Gen. Gruenther. As we flew down the coast of Mo-

Although there was little left of the ship, the men managed to get up steam, but then found they were unable to start the engines. The bulkheads were leaking so the men feared that the wreck soon would sink, and they decided on their farewell party.

"We roasted chicken, cooked vegetables and potatoes and had plenty to drink," Mullins said. But the wreck held together, and the men passed two more days whiling away time with the phonograph and playing whist.

Then they sighted lights signaled for help. "The ship must have thought we were a U-boat playing tricks. She circled out of range all night," Mullins recalled. "In the morning she

Three Aussie Soldiers Safe SAS RATIONING COUPON BOOK 7.45-675-A. Issued to John R. Wood, 4209 18th After 267-Day Trek

SYDNEY, Nov. 18.—Three Australian soldiers have arrived at an Allied base in New Guinea after a an oath of allegiance in blood, that 2,800-mile, 267-day jungle and sailboat journey that began when the Japanese captured Rabaul, New Britain, last January, the Sydney Morning Herald reported today. The three were "perfectly fit," the dispatch said. A companion died of fever on the journey.

The long trek started at Rabaul when they escaped from Japanese, who subsequently massacred other Australians. Their first break was to reach a rich plantation where they found abundant food and a 15-foot boat. Though inexperienced in navigation they set out for Australia, but were driven back by storms. Durng the next effort their companion died of fever and they put back again to New Britain to bury him. Natives told them United Nations soldiers were still being evacuated on the north side of the island. They crossed the island and arrived five days after the last evacuation ship had departed. Later a small naval pinnace arrived, so the party voyaged along the coast, escaping a Japanese naval patrol in a rain squall. For two months they took refuge on an island hoping to pick up a passing transport. Then they decided to try for New Guinea, patched up the damaged pinnace and started to slip from island to island, living for many weeks on turtles, pigeons and bush-fowl eggs. Eventually they reached New Guinea on its north coast. From there they crossed toward Papua, dodging a Jap force at Wau and coming on strange tribes in the

British Church Bells Peal in Celebration Of African Victory

Had Been Silent Since War Began, Reserved As Invasion Warning

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Church bells of England, which rang in 1558 at the accession of Queen Elizabeth, at the defeat of the Spanish armada, and at the death of Nelson at Trafalgar, pealed out again yesterday to celebrate the victory of British arms in Egypt. sh arms in Egypt.

For the first time since the war isles, land famed through centuries for the sober Sabbath music of bells and chimes, broke the crisp morn-

British youngsters who have never heard the sound of church bells—for their ringing has been reserved during this war as the signal for invasion, heard the chimes of Westminster Abbey, the measured tones of St. Paul's bell and the voice of St. Martin's-in-the-Field, and in Scotland the notes of old St. Cuthbert's, in the shadow of the great rock of Edinburgh Castle Sabbath of Rejoicing.

It was a sedate Sabbath of rejoicing and thanksgiving during which people crowded into the smallest village parish churches and into the great cathedrals.

No sound came from the firereddened remnants of St. Clements in the Strand, nor from the slender tapered spires of St. Bride's in Fleet street, or from Sir Christopher Wren's masterpiece, the now shattered wreck that was St. Jame's, in London's Piccadilly. Bow bells, in sound of which any Londoner must be born to be considered a true cockney, crashed to earth in the fire blitz of 1941. St. Paul's bells were heard despite difficulties. The full peal could not

Admiral King Denies Lack of Unity in Pacific Command

Area Actually Has Five Theaters, Not Two, Naval Chief Declares

By the Associated Press. ST. LOUIS, Nov. 16 .- Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the fleet, was quoted as saying there was complete unity of com-mand at the top in the several theaters in which American forces are operating, in a copyrighted story appearing in yesterday's St. Louis Post-Dispatch. A series of written questions was submitted to Admiral King by Raymond P. Brandt, the paper's chief Washington correspondent, and the answers were given in a half-hour session with the Navy chief. Admiral King replied with a simple "Yes" to the first question regarding unity of command. Another question was: "Why was the Pacific area divided into two theaters and who divided it?"

Five Areas in Pacific. After asserting that the word "theater" was improperly used and that in naval terms the world was divided into three theaters of which the Pacific is one, Admiral King was quoted as saying that the Pacific actually was divided into five areas, not two. As for the Southwest Pacific, he said he and Gen. Marshall, Army chief of staff, drew the first line, roughly the 165th longitude, to separate Army and Navy commands and later the line was moved westward a few degrees when initial strategy was carried out success

"The offensive in the Solomons was an amphibious operation, sea. air and land, and therefore naval, but decisions on the time and other plans were made by the joint chiefs of staff," he said. "Purely as a matter of convenience, Gen. Marshall issued the directives to Gen. MacArthur and I the directives to Admiral Nimitz."

Explains Ghormley Shift. The replacement of Vice Admiral Ghormley by Vice Admiral Halsey in direct command of the Solomons operation and the loss of four Allied cruisers off Savo Island in August were "merely coincidents," Admiral King said, adding that Admiral Ghormely was exhausted from overwork and in ill health.

To the question, "how are de cisions reached by the joint chiefs of staff?" Admiral King replied: "There is always a complete exchange of views of the four members Admiral Leahy, as the personal representative of the President, presides. When a decision is reached. it is a decision of the group, and there has never been a show of there has never been a show of hands or the semblance of voting. Crowley Says Churches Might as Well Close If It Is Heeded

The conscience of American Christians was "shocked at the Armistice Day utterances of one of our highest ranking Army men who declared that we must learn to hate if we are to win the war," Evangelist Dale Crowley charged yesterday in an address from WWDC Capital

Mr. Crowley evidently was referring to a speech on the National Radio Forum last Wednesday by Lt. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, commanding general of the ground forces. Gen. McNair declared that "our soldiers must have the fighting spirit," and remarked: If you call that hating our enemies then we must hate them with every fiber of our being." He expressed the opinion that "those of you who do not hate now are going to do so later." "If the counsel of our esteemed Army general is to be followed, said the evangelist, "then we might as well lock up our churches and discontinue all Army chaplaincies. "Why should we encourage our beys in the service to develop a murderous hatred and thus invoke the curse of Almighty God on our Evangelist Crowley contended there is "such a thing as righteous indignation without hate."

As other stimuli which have proved to be more, powerful than hate as incentives in warfare," he listed devotion to the cause of free-stimulus than hate," he declared.

In an address in the New York Herald-Tribune forum on current problems, Gen. Gullion said: "At the moment we are beginning an occupation of a substantial area, and the time is almost here when our armed forces will occupy im-

In addition, he said, two other schools will be opened next month at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., for the training of junior commissioned officers and occupational police.

"At the same time, we are creating a large reservoir of expert technical and professional personnel to supplement the efforts of these other groups," he said. "In this manner the Army hopes not only to be fully prepared for military government in any occupied region, but to have facilitated greatly the transition from military to civilian control."

ROOSEVELT. (Written for the Women's Section of the War Savings Staff of the Treasury Department in connection with Women at War Week, November 22 to 28.)

This week is one in which women can take a full part, for it is well known that in our country our women have a goodly share in the spending of the family income, and it is in the little things that probably the greatest saving for many people can be made-the bar of candy which a child may give up, the ice cream soda, the cigarettes or the little luxuries we have grown to use.

We know quite well the necessary things must be done, and no one would want to urge on any of our women an unwise economy which would mean a less healthy family or a less attractive home. We know that recreation and relaxation are still necessary for young and old alike, but just as through ingenuity and care, we can somesomething we would ordinarily throw away, or by finding new uses for be able to give up spending so much money on it and discover new things to do which take more time and thought perhaps, but which for that very reason are more fun and re-

Allied Thrust at Africa Made on Time Despite Sub and Plane Attacks

Heavy Losses Inflicted On Axis Efforts to Disrupt Invasion

By the Associated Press. ALLIED FORCE HEADQUAR-TERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Nov 16.—The large naval force, ranging from trawlers to liners, which carried the Allied Expeditionary Force to North Africa through thousands of miles of submarine-infested waters, arrived on time in spite of heavy U-boat and plane attacks, the Allied force headquarters anneunced last night.

A special communique giving full details of the operations reported that the Axis had suffered heavy losses in planes and submarines in attempts to disrupt the convoy movements and, later, to hinder the To Stress Battle to progress of the operations after the troops landed.

The communique specifically men-tioned five United States naval officers who played leading roles in the operations, four of them named for the first time. They were: Rear Admiral H. K. Hewitt, commanding the force directed against Casablanca, which was prepared in and sailed from the United States; Rear Admiral Robert C. Giffen, commanding United States capital ships which acted as covering force for the Casablanca operations; Rear Admiral E. D. McWhorter, commanding naval air force which supported operations, and Rear Admiral B. H. Biori, liaison officer, and Capt. The communique follows: "Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham had charge of naval operations. Preliminary planning for the expedition was carried out in Great Britain by Admiral Sir Bertram H. Ramsay pending the arrival of Admiral Cunningham from his assignment in the United States.

"The basic work contributed by Admiral Ramsay contributed in a great measure to the excellent timing and the smooth running of the convoy movements which were unprecedented in complexity.

"The senior naval officers on the staff, aside from Admiral Cunningham, include Rear Admiral B. H. Biori, liaison officer of the United States Navy, and Capt. Jerauld Wright, United States Navy.

"The Navy's responsibility consisted of insuring the safe and timely arrival of the large expeditionary force comprising many ships of varying tonnage and speeds ranging from liners to trawlers which had to be moved across more than 3,000 gates of the National Medical Assomiles of submarine infested waters.

U. S. Officer Happiest When Heading Into Casablanca Battle

By JOHN A. MOROSO, 3d, WITH UNITED STATES TASK FORCES EN ROUTE TO FRENCH MOROCCO (Delayed).-The captain of this cruiser has just sent his men to battle with a simple victory formula: "Shoot first—hit first—kill first." Treason Trial Verdict Seen as Warning to Subversive Groups

Three Couples in Jail; Judge Expected to Pass Sentence Friday

By the Associated Press. CHICAGO, Nov. 16.-Three middle-aged Chicago couples, convicted of treason against the United States, awaited sentence in their jail cells today under heavy guard. Federal Judge William J. Camp-cell indicated he would fix next Friday their punishment, which ranges from five years in prison and $10,000 fines to death.

Their conviction in Federal Court Saturday night-only the second such verdict in 148 years of American history—was brought in after less than three hours' deliberation by a mixed jury. The verdict was described by United States Attorney J. Albert Woll, who directed the prosecution, as "the handwriting on the wall for all those who would attempt to be disloyal or have subversive designs.' The convicted relatives and friends of the executed Nazi saboteur, Herbert Haupt, were all German-born naturalized citizens in modest circumstances and without previous criminal records. They were Mr. and Mrs. Hans Haupt parents of the saboteur; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Froehling, uncle and aunt of young Haupt, and Mr. and Mrs. Otto Wergin, friends of the Haupt family.

Defense attorneys have given no indication whether they will appeal.

Congress and the War

The fact that the chairmen of five special Senate and House committees which have been investigating various phases of the conduct of the war have come to an agreement on the need for better direction of our domestic military program is sufficiently impressive in its own right to command respect. And when to this rather striking unanimity of opinion there are added the obvious shortcomings of the existing setup, the arguments for some form of reorganization become highly persuasive.

It does not necessarily follow that the approach which these congressional leaders have in mind is the best one. Their purpose is to seek legislation setting up a single production director, responsible to the President and to Congress, who would have full authority over the "nonmilitary parts of this war." The War Production Board and the Army, Navy, Maritime and Lend-Lease procurement staffs would be brought together under this director in a single production and procurement office. Under him also would come a single manpower office merging the Selective Service and the War Manpower Commission, a single agency merging the technical and scientific resources of the country, and the Office of Economic Stabilization, now headed by James F. Byrnes.

The wisdom of any such drastic shake-up is open to question, to say the least, and it may be wondered whether some of the sponsors of the plan are not unduly influenced by old prejudices. One of the objectives. for example, seems to be to eliminate all dollar-a-year men from the war picture, without regard to whether they have been doing a good job or not. A few members of Congress, including some of the committee chairmen sponsoring this proposal, have been shooting at the dollar-ayear men indiscriminately for a long time, but they have not yet made out a case for their position. On the contrary, Donald Nelson, WPB director, has said on several occasions that these men are essential to the war program, and has urged Congress to refrain from unwarranted criticism positions in the Government. Despite objections such as these, however, it is encouraging to see the development in Congress of a more effective demand for better prosecution of the war. It is a healthy manifestation, and if it does nothing more than to revitalize Congress as a factor in the war program and spur the administration to greater reorganization efforts, it will have been very much worth while.

which discourages them from taking

New Oil Restrictions

The pinch of petroleum rationing which has been felt with increasing severity on the eastern seaboard for the past six months is due to become more pronounced as the result of Petroleum Co-ordinator Ickes' recommendation for a 12 per cent cut in consumption, which is expected to be followed this week | not worry; those pins will all be set by the imposition of new restrictions | up again. by the War Production Board.

The Office of Price Administration estimates that rationing already has reduced gasoline consumption by 60 per cent, and the new proposal looks to an additional cut of 20 to 25 per cent. Fuel oil rationing was inaugurated on the basis of a 25 per cent reduction, and the prospective scaling down will leave the supply at about two-thirds of the normal

Two factors are mainly responsible for this situation. The opening of the new front in Africa has made it necessary to rush large quantities of gasoline and oil to that area, and this can be moved across from the eastern seaboard in a little less than half the time required for shipment from Gulf ports. Consequently, tank cars that normally would be used for domestic delivery in the East now will be diverted to the overseas trade. Equipment trouble is the second reason for the impending shortage. The tank cars employed in the haul from the West have been subjected to unusual strain by continuous service at high speed, necessitating constant repairs for a large percentage. and there is little new construction for replacements. Rail and oil officials were hopeful of maintaining an average daily shipment of 800,000 barrels, but this has fallen to approximately 750,000, with no improveother saving measures also are in prospect. No efforts should be spared, however, to see that essential requirements are met, and it is particularly important that extreme care be used in the distribution of fuel oil. Mr. Ickes' prediction that it will be necessary to "crack down" on those who have not converted heating plants from oil to coal indicates that officials are not satisfied with the progress that has been made in this direction. Before a general "crack down" is inaugurated, however, it would be well for the authorities to determine whether the lag is due to willful disregard of the conversion program, or to some other Schools and the War The eighteen - nineteen - year - old draft has posed a question as to the future of our colleges which has received little clarification, and certainly no answer, either from the colleges or the Government. As many as fifty of the smaller colleges already have been closed by the war. Speaking before a conference at Columbia University last week, called to discuss the participation of secondary schools in the war program, Dean Herbert E. Hawkes of Columbia College predicted that by next spring the Army and Navy would induct the entire college male population into service, with only those who can benefit by advanced technical training permitted to remain in the classroom.

But whatever happens to the colleges and the college population, there is no doubt about the specific task presented for the secondary schools. These must emphasize now, as they never have done before, the training of their students for a known and immediate future. The boys now in high school will be entering the armed services within a year after graduation. They can no longer look forward to four years in college or an indefinite time in odd jobs after leaving high school to decide what they are "going to do." What they are going to do is fixed and certain.

The military authorities and the United States Office of Education are stressing two desirable points for emphasis, as far as the boys in secondary schools are concerned. Normally, only sixty-five per cent of them will be found physically fit to serve. But by prompt physical examination and the immediate correction of remediable defects the health authorities believe this percentage can be raised to eighty. Physical fitness programs, therefore, which emphasize periodic physical examinations and close liaison between the family physician and the schools, are more desirable than ever. At the same time, more stress than has been given in the past should be placed on mathematics, physics, manual training and other technical subjects so important in modern, mechanized warfare. It is estimated that about 40 per cent of the boys who enter the Army will go into the Air Corps, where technical training is of extraordinary importance.

Here in Washington we are fortunate in having made a good start this year on a real physical fitness program as a result of wise foresight by the congressional appropriations committees in making necessary funds available. At the same time, we are fortunate in having a fine Cadet Corps, able to give boys valuable training in the rudiments of military drill. The physical fitness program must be supported and enlarged and more effort should be made to increase enrollment in the cadets. It is more difficult quickly to change long-established academic curricula. But the secondary schools which turn their efforts now to preparing the boys and girls for a known and immediate future, and which realistically face the facts of a changed order, will do most for their students.

Bells of Britain

The silent church bells of Britain, hushed since the beginning of the war so that they might be used to warn of invasion, rang out yesterday in celebration of the victory which the British 8th Army has won in Egypt. But for the British people. remembering the high hopes that have been dashed in the past and noting the absence from the chorus of the famous bells in the bombed areas, the occasion was one which called more for restraint than jubila-

It must have been heartening to the number of painful days it takes the people of England to hear those great bells again, and to look back along the hard road that they have traveled since the summer of 1940 when France was knocked out of the war and the prospect of an invasion from across the Channel was an and also less than V, the number of ever-present menace. Summons to Prayer

President Roosevelt was well-advised to quote "the reverent words" of George Washington in his proclamation of the celebration of Thanksgiving and New Year as days of prayer for the American people. The first Chief Magistrate did not invent specific public acknowledgment of dependence upon the Creator. He merely adapted a custom instituted by the Pilgrim colonists of Massachusetts and preserved in practice by the Continental Congress during the Revolutionary War. But his own particular religious instinct was demonstrated in his choice of the 23d Psalm to be borne in mind by every citizen. Perhaps there is no grander, no more impressive conception in the whole of the Bible than that expressed in the terms: 'Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death. I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me: Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort

Certainly, there is reassurance in such a noble thought at such a time as this. The prevailing crisis is one which involves the fate of civilization at large. Unless every man, woman and child in the United States, barring none, be enlisted for "the work that confronts us . . in the armed services and the merchant marine, in factories and offices, on farms and in the mines, on highways, railways and airways, in other places of public interest to the Nation and in our homes," no victory can be won. The inspiration for dedication to endeavor so all-inclusive, so compelling and, eventually, so decisive must come from the spiritual character of the people. Washington understood the principle involved; Abraham Lincoln on four different occasions in the midst of a great internecine struggle called for general expression of gratitude to Our Heavenly Father for His "singular deliverances and blessings": every President in the past threequarters of a century has been prompted by a similar motive to a similar reverent pronouncement.

The "national emergency" to which Mr. Roosevelt refers already has wrought many constructive changes in American ways and means of living. Never again, it may be assumed, will the people of the United States be content to petition merely for prosperity and peace. They realize now that there are more precious values than material wealth and exemption from conflict. A few days ago his countrymen were permitted to read the first letter that Commander John Joseph Shea of the Naval Air Force ever wrote to his little son. It brought tears to eyes unused to weep, but it also stirred a vast pride, a mighty resolution, in each responsive heart. The incident which brought the communication into existence and gave it universal circulation is an ordeal which still continues, a trial that may not be terminated for years. But the torch which the lost fighter in the South Pacific has handed to his boy burns the brighter on that account. The President comprehends these facts. Hence, in the sacred tradition of his predecessors, he urges the renewal of the Nation's faith and courage in the temple of the Living God.

Carrot Calculation

A young man in Colorado, rejected by the Marine Corps on account of color blindness, argued in vain that he could recognize a Jap by his shape alone. Bue, possibly because sometime he might have to obey an order not to shoot until he could see the whites of their eyes, the recruiting sergeant was firm, though kind. 'Eat carrots, and try again," he suggested. "They have a vitamin that cures color blindness." The young man complied, to the extent of a whole bushel; distinct improvement was shown, but not enough. By now he had acquired a hatred for carrots second only to his hatred of the enemy-but it was second. He is well along on his next bushel, though the uncertainty of how long he must wait bothers him. As a simple courtesy, the answer is herewith worked out for him by algebra. Let X equal the number of color vision units he is deficient, and let Y equal the number of color vision units in a bushel of carrots. Then X divided by Y equals the number of bushels required. Let Z equal to eat a bushel of carrots; multiplying, we get X times Z divided by Y as the number of days to enlistment. For the young man to help, this number must be less than W. the number of days the war will last, days that he can last without turning into a rabbit.

Sees Three Choices Open to Hitler

Military Writer Thinks Nazis May Sit Tight or Strike Through Spain or Turkey

By Maj. George Fielding Eliot. The military position in the Central Mediterranean looks less and less promising for the Axis as it develops. Air attacks, plus local French resistance, plus the swift advance of Anglo-American forces from Algeria, seem likely to wipe out the tenuous German foothold in Tunisia very quickly. With Tunisia gone and Cyrenaica going, Tripolitania can never be held. That means the end of the Axis in Africa; it means the reopening of the Mediterranean; it means the smashing of Italian industry from the air; it means a whole new front for Hitler to defend.

His first reaction to this sudden threat -which seems to have taken him by surprise—was the air-borne invasion of Tunisia. This, as already remarked, he can hardly hope to make good. What then? Unless Germany is far weaker than she appears to be, Hitler may try to counter the new Mediterranean campaign in some other way.

It will do him very little good just to sit tight in Italy, Sicily, Sardinia and Crete and snipe away at our convoys with dive bombers. Not only could we give adequate fighter cover to all convoys, but as soon as our system of air bases in Africa was fully organized we would be able to concentrate overwhelming air strength against the islands (Sicily, Sardinia, Crete) in succession, The invasion and reduction of these islands, one by one, would inevitably follow, whereafter Italy's position would be hopeless, the Germans might have to retire behind the Alps and the whole Axis position in the Balkans would be

Possibly Hitler may now consider that in view of the Russian war this is the best he can do in the Mediterranean. If, however, he elects a more active counterpolicy he has two choices: East and west. He can attack Turkey or he can try to move south through Spain. Turkey seems the less attractive choice. It is not too much to say that the Russian resistance at Stalingrad and in the North Caucasian area, plus the destruction of Rommel's army in Egypt, have cemented Turkey's adherence to the Allied cause to such an extent that there can no longer be the slightest doubt that Turkey would fight, and fight hard, against Axis attack. That means that a German army invading Turkey would have to deal not only with a tough and determined Turkish army, but before very long would also be faced by Montgomery's battle-hardened 8th Army from Africa. The Turks alone could certainly delay the Germans long enough for Montgomery to finish mopping up Rommel and begin moving by sea and rail around into Anatolia. Moreover, the German communications would be long and difficult, and would be seriously threatened by the Yugoslavs, and the opening of the Turkish ports to the Russian Black Sea fleet would add to the German difficulties

The one great point to be made for a German winter campaign in Turkey is that it offers an approach by the most direct route to the oil fields of Transcaucasia, Iraq and Iran, and Germany is desperately in need of oil.

Furthermore, an advance to the Persian Gulf would cut Russia's principal winter supply route. The advantages of success would therefore be very great, but the risks are appalling. Nothing less than Germany's whole remaining reserve of fighting power would be needed, leaving Hitler without reserves to meet either Russian counterattacks or an invasion of Western Europe

A move into Spain offers far less in the way of advantages, but also far less risk. Spain and Portugal could probably both be overrun by German troops already available in Western Europe without calling on the central reserves. Gibraltar could be invested and German planes could operate with great effect against Allied convoys pasing through the narrow strait. Moreover, the Uboats would have not only some excellent new bases on the Atlantic, but also would, by German control of the whole coast line of Spain, be able to operate much more effectively in the Mediterranean itself. We would still be able to use the Mediterranean, but its use would be made much more difficult and costly to us.

About the only disadvantages to Hitler of the Spanish move are the strain of a possible guerrilla war in Spain itself, and the fact that an invasion of the Iberian Peninsula would automatically make us a present of the Spanish and Portugese islands in the Atlantic Ocean, which would be of great value in our antisubmarine operations.

Finally, an Axis occupation of Spain would eliminate that country as a possible route for Allied invasion of Europe. Thus, assuming for the purposes of this discussion that the thrust at the center (Tunisia) is a failure, Hitler has three remaining choices on his southern front: (1) Sit tight on the defensive and adandon the initiative to us; (2) take the big gamble to win or lose all and attack Turkey; (3) try the policy of the limited offensive in the Iberian Peninsula, in the hope of depriving us of some, at least, of the logistical advantages of our African successes.

Our correspondent's bird is likely to be one of the fancy breeds of pigeons. Perhaps the satinette, a small one.

Pigeons and doves belong to the same family. Their very names are interchangeable. In ordinary use the name "dove" is used for the smaller species, whereas the word "pigeon" is mostly confined to the larger ones.

The larger common pigeon, which is also an importation, is not a desirable guest. A few of them would not be so bad, but where two or three come, 20 or more are sure to follow.

This means that agriculture will continue to have its most ancient allies.

It is always a good plan-provided one can keep pigeons away—to put a feeding station close to a window.

This insures the seeing of any specimens as soon as they arrive. It is best to arrange the curtains so that the birds cannot see in. Often one may remain out of sight by approaching the window carefully, and standing far enough back so that only the head appears.

It must be kept in mind that the window glass and the room behind it form a sort of mirror, in which are reflected the trees, grass and general outside world with which the birds are fa-

Time to Give Commanders Confidence

Eisenhower, Halsey Faced With Changing, Delicate Situations

By DAVID LAWRENCE.

If ever there was a time for confidence in the man on the scenethe general in command of our forces in North Africa or the admiral in charge of our South Pacific operationsit is now.

Delicate situations are arising constantly which require the judgment of the moment based on the facts and circumstances as they arise at the center of action and it is a matter of satisfac- David Lawrence. tion that Gen. Marshall and Admiral King, as well as President Roosevelt, are not attempting to supervise the operations of our farflung forces in the day-by-day decisions that have to be made.

Gen. Eisenhower, for example, is dealing with the most delicate kind of questions affecting our relations with native populations in North Africa and with the civil and military personnel of the French colonial empire, who until 10 days ago have been directly under the Vichy government. In London and perhaps in America are elements of the "Free French" movement who may not understand the niceties of adjustment that have to be made and yet it is important that they do not, fly off the handle, so to speak, but wait patiently for the ultimate emergence of our whole plan

Restraint Is Necessary. For many months it has been difficult for observers on the Free French side to understand our Department of State's relations with the Vichy government and especially Secretary Hull's reluctance to recognize any French group in exile as the government with which we would deal exclusively. That policy of restraint on our part was necessary then and it is even more necessary now as our military representatives abroad seek to consolidate all French elements that are really at heart in sympathy with our cause.

It may turn out when the inside story of the last two years is revealed that Marshal Petain and Admiral Darlan played their cards exceedingly well in keeping the French fleet immobilized so long in the Mediterranean. It may turn out that many of the communiques and statements issued from Vichy in the name of high officers there were really dictated by German officials as a means of distributing propaganda that keep the French colonial administrations overseas hostile to or neutral toward the British and American side. It may turn out that the Vichy officials have not been ready heretofore to make an issue of this German influence.

But the turning point has come and the struggle between the Axis government and the United Nations for possession of the remainder of the French fleet and the French colonial territory is now on with the chances that if America plays her cards carefully the whole Mediterranean, including Italy, will swing to our side. It does not, therefore, behoove any element, left wing or right wing, in French quarters here or in Britain or elsewhere to assume that the United States Government has run out on the Free French or embraced the Vichy French group or taken any step that is anything but a mili- Kalamazoo-Battle Creek in Michitary move in the evolution of a tangled problem.

When Gen. Eisenhower makes who are many thousands of miles away must assume that he knows Giraud accepts the Darlan leadership, it must be assumed that he, too, knows what he is doing.

On one thing the public can be assured. The tide is running in our direction and acquirement of the actual aid and friendship of the people in the empire controlled heretofore by Vichy is the real goal being sought. Jockeying by Frenchmen for after-the-war positions of power should be put aside in the common interest of eventual victory.

No Time for Post-Mortems.

What goes for North Africa, goes in a measure also for the South Pacific. Admiral Halsey is in the fighting zone in full command of all our operations in and around the Solomons. He is working in close co-operation with Gen. MacArthur. This is no time for post-mortems or laments on breaks that have gone against us in the past. Our Navy is putting up a magnificent offensive in wearing down Japanese naval strength and keeping the Japanese Navy from our Hawaii-to-Australia supply lines while holding to the bases we already have established in the Solomons. Gen. MacArthur is doing a splendid cleanup job in New Guinea from whose coastal bases more and more of our Flying Fortresses are operating.

The war in the Southwest Pacific proceeds slowly, but it moves on inexorably toward the goals of ultimate victory, because the men on the ground are good tacticians and courageous exponents of American initiative. While the high command in Washington outlines the broad principles of our offensives, the commanders actually in the fighting zones have full authority to carry them out in the manner that seems best at the moment. They have the full confidence of the high command back home and deserve the confidence of the pe

Recognition of Darlan as Civil Authority In French Africa Appears Out of the Question

By DOROTHY THOMPSON.

The military situation is not yet clarified in North Africa and until it is the political situation will also, probably, remain ob-

That the United States will contribute to setting up a New Vichy in Africa is quite out of the question, whatever indications may be in broadcasts emanating from Admiral Darlan.

Dorothy Thompson. The situation, indeed, has its comic elements. Darlan as Machiavelli seems to have become entangled in his own Machiavellianism. And, speaking of Machiavelli, the thought of Mr. Hull in this role brings a broad smile to one's face.

The policy of the United States is not clarified in all details, but it is certainly clarified in essentials. We are, for instance, committed to the Four Freedoms. That must mean that we can never put our military might behind a para-Fascist government.

A Look at the Record.

So, when Admiral Darlan tries to set himself up as the civil authority in North and West Africa, one only has to look at his record and ask oneself whether this is the kind of France that America intends to liberate and support. There can only be one answer to that: I don't believe it. There is nothing in the mentality of Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Churchill or Mr. Hull that would welcome that kind of regime; the American people would not stand for it: and, even more importantly, neither would the French.

Now, the only reason the question arises is that, on the Algiers radio, now in control of the American forces, Admiral Darlan and Gen. Auguste Nogues have announced that the former "assumes full responsibility for French interests in Africa" with "the approval of the American authorities with whom I intend to guarantee the defense of North Africa." He ended this statement with "Long live the marshal!"-after which, if reports are accurate, it was repudiated by the marshal. In this, Darlan is acting toward us as Petain acted toward Germany. The base of whatever power he may have at the moment is an armistice. Whether he has any real power at all is doubtful. He cannot, apparently, command the French fleet.

No Logic in Recognition.

It was logical that when, in 1940, France capitulated to a Fascist power, Fascist-minded men like Petain and Darlan should be recognized as a French collaborationist government, obviously with the function to keep down the French people. But there is no logic in our celebrating a victory by recognizing the same government. Things don't turn out that way. Vichy France, under the prominent leadership of Admiral Darlan was a pallid beige Naziism. It abolished the motto of "liberty, equality, and fraternity;" it destroyed every vestige of popular government; it staged the Riom trials: it turned over to Hitler. Mussolini and Franco anti-Fascist refugees; it instituted copies of the Nuremberg laws; it participated in the deportation of Jews to Poland; it dissolved the trade unions and suppressed the free press; it created a French Legion as a kind of S. A.; it turned over Indo-China to the Japanese and thus enabled the Japs to attack us; it ordered the French fleet to shoot at the British in Mers-El-Kebir and Dakar; it ordered resistance in Syria and Madasgascar; it produced armaments for the German war effort and recruited French volunteers for the Nazi war against Russia: it never even requested the French fleet to join us until it was too late; on the contrary, it ordered resistance to us in Morocco and Algiers and caused the deaths of an unknown number of Frenchmen and Amer-

Unconsolidated Situation. Neither freedom of speech, nor freedom from fear is possible under any Vichy leaders. Therefore one must regard the present political moment as an interval in an unconsolidated military situation.

Throughout these days Gen. de Gaulle has behaved calmly and impeccably. I am no fanatical De Gaullist, but the Fighting French are our allies and have been since the beginning. Gen. de Gaulle always has insisted that the future political leadership of France could come out of the underground forces of resistance now there. Obviously we cannot assume that any leadership of such underground resistance can come from former Vichyites who have spent their lives suppressing and persecuting Issues Are Fundamental.

In this war the issues at stake are so fundamental that it is absolutely out of the question that our State Department and the President will play with the forces of reaction in Europe, spilling democratic blood in order to set up anachronistic or parafascist regimes. Nor is there enough Toryism in the whole of Britain to make that possible before British public opinion. It is as impossible as it would be to set up and make acceptable a Papen-Goering government in Germany, which would be an analogy to a Darlan-Nogues government in France. To attempt to do so would be to incite the most radical revolts in the whole of Europe.

Our government knows these things. We have very distinguished political leadership. (Released by the Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

Perhaps the central authority in Washington is working better than it was. With the best intentions in the world, the rivalry between the two service publicity machines does not make for that unselfish concentration upon the common goal so plainly desirable.

This Changing World Question of Nazis' Plans to Invade Spain Remain Big Hurdle in African Campaign

By CONSTANTINE BROWN. There remains only one more North Africa.

hurdle in the North African campaign which is still worrying the Allied high command. The question of whether the Nazis will follow their usual tactics of surprise invasion of neutral countries and will invade Spain within a week is discussed at length in competent quarters here. For the time being it is difficult to determine the numbers of troops the Nazis have stationed on the French-Spanish border. That troops have been moved in that direction is certain. But the number and type of forces has not yet been identified.

The Spanish government is anxious to remain outside the present conflict. Whatever may be Generalissimo Francisco Franco's feelings toward the Nazis and the Fascists who helped him defeat the Spanish republicans, it appears that he does not want to see his country in either belligerent camp. Spain is worn out. Franco knows that if the Germans were to enter his country it would not be long before Spain became a battleground for the Allies and the Axis. Neither the Spanish government nor the Spanish people want to fight any more. They have had enough of it; their civil war set back the country for many years.

Supplies Would Stop.

In spite of the few shipments of food and other raw materials from the United States and Argentina, starvation still stalks the country. Franco knows that the day the Germans enter Spanish territory the situation will become unbearable for his people. The supplies he received from across the Atlantic will stop and the Nazis will take whatever supplies remain in the country.

But at the same time Franco's armies are not sufficiently equipped to put up even a token resistance to Hitler's legions. Moreover, there are a number of shady politicians who would like to play a role similar to those played in France by Pierre Laval and Fernand de Brinon.

In some well-informed Washington quarters a German invasion of Spain has been expected since it was officially known that the French forces in North Africa would not resist the American invasion. A blitz through Spain with an adequate force might jeopardize our position in the Mediterranean. Even without attempting to reduce the Gibraltar fortress the Germans could by taking the port of Algeciras dominate the Gibraltar military port and compel the warships and merchantmen to leave that harbor. The only supply line for our North African forces in that event would be through Morocco. Such an action would seriously hamper our effort in Nazis Were Not Surprised. The planes of Hitler and his general staff are naturally unknown to us. It would be foolish to think that the Nazis were taken completely by surprise when we went into French Africa. For at least three weeks before our forces began to land, the Nazi radios broadcast the news that the Allies were preparing such a move.

Axis submarines had been reporting to Berlin important transport movements from the United States toward the African bulge. Hence, while the secret was well kept in this country and in Great Britain, it was impossible to prepare such a huge operation without keeping the news from the watchful enemy.

The Nazis evidently miscalculated the resistance of the French Army in Africa. The reports of their intelligence officers -there were several thousand of them in Algeria and Moroccosaid the French land, sea and air forces would fight any invasion attempt. They estimated that with reduced supplies the French could hold back the American-British forces for at least 10 days, giving the Nazi submarine and air force sufficient time to concentrate on the Allied transports.

Nazi Schedule Disrupted. This was evidently true. Had the French offered more than a pre-arranged token resistance it is doubtful whether we would have progressed as rapidly as we did—and without any losses worth mentioning. The resistance of the French fleet at Gasablanca is a perfect example what we would have encountered had the rest of the French forces resisted with the same "suicidal determination." The attitude of the French in Morocco, including that of two men the Germans considered "safe"—Admiral Jean Darlan and Gen. Auguste Nogues-was the only surprise Hitler received in the North African campaign.

American military observers believe the Nazi invasion of Spain was scheduled for about 10 days after a German victory in French Africa. The fact that the French came to our side must have thrown the Nazi schedule out of

If, by the end of this week, the Nazi legions have not appeared in Spain, the situation will be easier for us. It also may indicate the German high command has plans directed toward the Balkans and Turkey rather than Western Europe.

I'd like to go on record and say that soldiers shouldn't have grievances. Certainly they shouldn't have grievances caused by civilians. That there ever was a time when the fighting man, the man in the khaki of Uncle Sam, should be looked up to, given the very best, and generally handled with loving care by the civilian, it is right now.

But there still are some people, and some organizations, who shove that uniform around just a bit. That is, if the boys are telling me the truth in their letters, and you can bet they are.

A recent letter from a sailor asked me what sort of people were handling the priority cards on the air lines. He went on to explain what had happened to him when he tried to fly from the East to the West Coast to see his family.

He had a four-day furlough. Not only were days precious to him, but hours and minutes, so what happened? Nothing, except that he was obliged to yield his seat, halfway on his journey, to a man with a priority card.

"I didn't mind doing that," the sailor said, "but what burned me up was that I was grounded, the plane went on with 13 assorted men and women who had no priority rights at all. I know because I checked up on the matter. "It seems to me that a man in the service, with only four days of leave, should have as much right to a seat as the average citizen. But off I went, and lost a full day of my leave.'

The sailor has a point. A good

So has the soldier who thinks that some one in Washington should put a ceiling on the prices of merchandise sold by train butchers, He told of a train trip with hundreds of other soldiers, and the unmitigated profiteering of the fellow in charge of peddling the candy bars, the apples, and the soft drinks.

"We were charged 25 cents for a ham sandwich that you could read a magazine through," the soldier wrote. "One bite and it was gone. There was just an inkling of butter on the bread, which was sliced so thin it could barely support the ham, which couldn't possibly have weighed one one-thousandth of an ounce. And the soft drinks were 15 cents. There was plenty of griping by the soldiers on this trip, and why not?"

I know just the sort of ham sandwich the soldier described. They are so minute, the slices of ham, that one could cut 50 of them off a live pig before he would start bleeding. And the bread is always of a texture and age that a man would be safe in making a bet that it was present when Casey Jones made his celebrated run.

For 25 cents a man should get a dozen of the sandwiches and riparian rights on the butcher's basket if he wanted it. As for charging a soldier 15 cents for a few draughts of sarsaparilla and other assorted roots dissolved in water-well, that is highway robbery with all the trimmings.

Right here, for no particular reason at all, I want to tell you of Sailor Bill, and a remark he made to me in the men's powder room of a train plying between New Orleans and Shreveport. Bill, on a 30-day leave, looked as if he had been doing a little fighting. His hands had that unmistakable

Washington telephone users ask "What time is it?" more than 20,000 times a day. By doing without the convenience of "time service" during the emergency, our patrons can make a substantial contribution to clearing the lines for war calls, and conserving critical material.

During peace times we are glad to furnish "time-of-day" service to our patrons. But the war is now on the wires. Telephone lines and switchboards are loaded with the heaviest volumes of calls in history. The service of every operator and all equipment is now needed for the single all-important job of furnishing telephone service to help win the war.

BUY WAR BONDS

Syerybody TOP THAT 10% BY NEW YEAR'S

WE HAVE A VICTORY QUOTA* TOO

A BILLION DOLLARS OF PRODUCTION THIS YEAR

THE decisions a man makes at the point of a bayonet are pretty serious. He doesn't have time to ask for advice, or search for precedents, or reflect: "How will this affect my future?"

Companies are a lot like people.... because they are people. And today many companies, which in their long lives have tried to be good, thoughtful citizens while advancing the world's work, like other good citizens are finding themselves at bayonet-point, with time not for debate or reflection—but only for action.

And so, although we at General Electric like to think that we set ourselves a 1942 production quota of a billion dollars in shipments, actually that quota was set for us—set by the guy with the bayonet.

A billion in shipments!* That is three times the normal pre-war G-E volume. And it is made up of more kinds of war products, we have been told, than any other American company is making. Some of them are old and familiar things, for which we have a special knack, such as turbines, generators, motors, ship-propulsion gears, radio equipment, searchlights, aircraft instruments, incandescent and fluorescent lamps, superchargers, and plastics.

Then there are others, military secrets without even a name. Once this year we took an eightfigure order for something that hadn't even been invented.

It took a lot of experienced scientists and engineers, new plants, and machinery to get our sights on that billion-dollar quota. It took a lot of production workers, too—there are now more than 165,500 in the G-E family, and more than a fourth of them are women.

More than courage and long hours of work have gone into this thing. When you're on the spot, you not only have to think fast, but you also have to give a little extra something to insure survival. For decades General Electric employees have been making valuable suggestions, drawing on their experience and knowledge to improve the job in hand. In 23 years, 132,665 such ideas have been used, and have brought $1,297,340 in awards to the men and women who made the suggestions. And in a year like 1942, with critical materials short and new production ideas worth their weight in human lives, the suggestion system has proved its worth anew. Already this year G-E employees have made 12,250 useful suggestions, which have brought them $115,000. What they will bring ultimately to the men who are fighting the long fight at the earth's far corners is much more important.

When black smoke hung tragically in the sky over Pearl Harbor and Cavite, in the disastrous December of 1941, more than 90 per cent of all General Electric's men and women had subscribed for War Bonds having a maturity value of $21,385,375. Six months later, 96.4 per cent of a much larger number of employees had pledged an average of 10.3 per cent of their earnings for buying Bonds. And now members of the General Electric family are buying War Bonds, by payroll subscription, at a rate of more than $58,000,000 a year.

These things we have done. These things any American would have done. These things we will continue to do—deliberately, determinedly, and relentlessly, until the last shot is fired and the last communique is issued.

If more men are needed, we will march. Over fourteen thousand men from the G-E family are already in the armed services.

If more production is needed, we will produce.

We will continue to buy War Bonds, and so will you. This is no time to argue with the business end of a bayonet. This is the time to fight.

WITH UNITED STATES TASK FORCES AT CASABLANCA Nov. 8 (Delayed).—The audacious and well-trained Vichy French naval force today staged a furious, reckless and soul-searing battle against American ships attempting to land troops at Fedhala, French Morocco

When this hellish nightmare of smoke and flame, of plane and bomb and submarine, drew to close, Old Glory was waving proudly over the town of Fedhala.

We heard the welcome news at 2:26 p.m., when our radio blared: 'Fedhala has been taken; locate and dispose of the mine field."

It was a battle conducted at full speed under a kind North African sun and on a calm sea dappled with gentle whitecaps.

Our job was to knock the French out as quickly as possible, and they responded with a ferocity tempered with all the cunning of naval warfare. The manner in which they fought indicated clearly that they

Axis Offensive Is Halted as United Nations Gain Strength to Turn Tide

This is the second in a series of three articles reviewing the course of the global war, prepared by the Washington Bureau of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

By RICHARD L. STOKES. What of the military situation?

Accumulation of strength in rough balance with that of the Axis and seizure of the initiative are paramount accomplishments of the United Nations during 1942. Hitler as yet is master neither of the Volga nor the Baku oil fields. He has failed to cut Russia in two. Rommel was not only halted at El Alamein, 65 miles from Alexandria, but was put to flight by a massive British counter-offensive, with his road of retreat blocked by the American occupation of Algiers.

Outnumbered American forces reon Guadalcanal. (Early this week, however, Gen. Holcomb of the Marines, returning from the islands, said the Americans were no longer outnumbered.) Important successes have been achieved in New Guinea. Mammoth air squadrons have visited galling punishment on occupied France, Italy and Germany itself. The campaign in North Africa gives promise that in the near future somewhere on the continent of Europe, the Allies will be able to convert their long and costly defense into large-scale offense This situation is a far cry from Axis plans of last June. A doublepronged drive, through Southern to hurl the Allies from the Mediterranean and Near East. Japan was to invade India, perhaps Siberia also, and the conquerors of Orient and Occident were to join hands in Middle Asia. To all appearance that grandiose scheme now lies in ruins. It was wrecked by mounting armed and industrial power in the Anglo-Saxon countries and by the heroism of the Russian common soldier, who learned the ultimate answer to German ferocity. It was, quite simply, never to surrender.

Offensive Is Halted. Hitler's recent speeches and Japan's failure to attack either India or Siberia are interpreted in certain high official quarters as indicating that the offensive impetus of the Axis has spent itself, and that in 1943 the new orders in Europe and Asia will turn to integrating and fortifying their conquests, leaving to the Allies the formidable task of dislodging them. The other side of the world picture is so tragic that even now its significance has scarcely come home to many. From a "have-not" country, Japan has become master of one of the world's greatest and wealthiest empires, including the Philippines, the Netherlands East Indies, Burma and Indo-China, in addition to vast areas in China. These regions are opulent in natural resources, including most of the rubber and tin in existence. After centuries of overlordship, the white man has vanished from the Far East Stalingrad's resistance to 82 days of murderous siege has tended to obscure Russia's loss of scores of millions of population in dead, wounded and captives; of one-fifth of her territory, two-fifths of her industrial plant, half her most productive sources of metals and coal and the entire national granary of the Ukraine, the Don Valley and the fields of the Northern Caucasus. During this period the United States suffered the most ignoble humiliations in national memory. For the second successive year, Hitler turned his back with disdain on the American war effort, and committed the bulk of his power, with virtual immunity, to the destruction of Russia. Enemy submarines slaughtered crews and ships within sight of the Atlantic shore. Pearl Harbor was followed by Bataan and Corregidor, the agonies of which the country was compelled to watch without lifting a finger to aid its dying sons.

Allies Are Stronger. On the strength of the best information available there is offered the following summary of the global situation, with both its favorable and unfavorable aspects: Germany has only one first-rate ally, Japan. The United States has two, the British Commonwealth and the Soviet Union. We have suffered as yet no wounds that vitally hurt. On the contrary, national sea, air, military and industrial force is climbing. There has been steadily an undoubted abatement of enemy power. At the hands of Russia the Germans have suffered fearfully in lives and equipment. Japan has taken large losses of merchant shipping, and this may prove the factor through which she eventually will be defeated.

The capacity of Japan's ship-yards was "saturated" long before Pearl Harbor. At the outset of the war all foreign vessels within reach were confiscated. The biggest grab was of French ships in Indo-China. In other words, on December 7 Japan was at its maximum in respect to merchant boats, while output in the United States continues to rise. Japan hasn't the plants and machine tools for large-scale expansion; we have. American submarines are sinking Japanese cargo and transport vessels faster than they can be re-placed. If the present rate of at-trition persists, a point may finally be reached at which Tokio can no longer support its far-flung outposts and will have to draw them back. Japan's losses in warships and planes have been larger than ours. Its occupation of outposts in the Aleutians has cost more Japanese than American vessels. There is a marked disparity between the sinkings of enemy and American submarines. We have lost only a few but have destroyed many German and Japanese underseas boats. Jap Course Explained.

The apparent hesitation of Tokio to launch a new front either in Siberia or India may be due to rec-ognition that Japan lacks the resources to venture upon an added large-scale campaign. "Perhaps they are no longer in the mood, as they were on December 7, to take on the whole world," said one high naval officer, who added that this change of mood, if it exists, may be due to

Big Ten, With Classic Every Week, Leaves Scramble for Bowl Games to Others

Leemans' Gridiron Star Still Shines Brightly

Tuffy Leemans probably will give "Ole Man Ribber" a good run for the endurance record if his performance against the Redskins yesterday is a criterion, for Tuffy entered the game in the fourth period to successfully rally the flagging Giants even though he still feels the effects of his recent head injury.

Before the game Tuffy told friends he's still deaf in one ear and frequently feels off balance, possibly because of the injured ear, but if the luster of this gridiron star has been dimmed by the accident it wasn't noticeable yesterday. He ran and threw the pigskin with all the poise, abandon and skill of the Leemans of old and in the end saved his mates from being skunked.

Possibly the Redskins, knowing of the seriousness of his injury, eased up a bit on him and had restrained themselves, we thought. The question was put to Sammy Baugh, who speaks freely, if infrequently.

"Naw sir," quoth Samuel. "You can't ease up on a football player to bowls and bowl opponents, again like him or he'll take your shirt, pants and shoes. They only put him is here, but it's just so much chatter in the game for one reason, to move the ball, and when we saw him to the folk around the Big Ten comin' we were ready. The boys hit him as hard as they hit the rest of 'em, and I'll tell you, he was hittin' kind of hard himself."

Needed Test to Regain Former Confidence

Tuffy's first play was a smart one although Baugh vows he saw it coming. He put Ward Cuff in the tailback position as though he would play at least one game each week run the ball, then took it himself from the No. 3 spot on a line buck, which would fill any bowl in the The play netted exactly 11/2 yards but was sufficient to prove to the land any day in the year. 30,000 fans and Redskins that Leemans is back to stay.

Tuffy wanted Dame, 32-20, last week, takes on to get in and at the time Owen thought the Giants still had a chance Ohio State, a team that humbled to rake their chestnuts out of the fire, so let him go.

He's a hard boy to lick."

From now on Willie Wilkin's front handle will be Swami-Swami Wilkin, and in his first crystal-gazing role the Swami batted .500. It was in the dressing room before game and the boys were taking the last tack in their harness before going out on the field when Wilkin turned to Baugh.

"Hey, Sam," he cried. "Throw me a couple of passes. I've got a hunch I'm gonna intercept a pass today and I want to get the feel of the ball so I won't fumble."

'Swami's' Second Prediction Rings Bell

The Swami failed to make good on that one. At the start of the second half, after Farkas had returned Cuff's to find out just how good Boston first kickoff to the 25 only to have the play recalled and the Giants College really is, Ivy League and College really is a college and College really is penalized, Wilkin walked back to Andy. "Were you running hard that time?" he queried. "Hard as I could," Farkas nodded.

"Well, run a little harder this time," said the Swami, "because we're in its next-to-last game of what appears like a perfect season.

The Giants' strategy in playing deep to guard against long touchdown passes was partly responsible for Baugh's record of 19 completions in 26 over Brown, has its annual ivy-clad attempts, but some of the credit must go to the receivers. When the 'Skins saw the Giant secondary laying far back they, rather Sammy, started throwing short pegs over the line or into the flat and had little trouble making connections.

Ed Cifers, whose brother, Bobby, is bidding for all-America honors in Tennessee's backfield this autumn, captured eight of the nine flung at ham and Temple entertain interhim. He missed a perfect score on the last one. Sammy completed 11 sectional foes who played a 6-6 tie straight before Ed Justice snapped the string.

Justice's Block Gets Farkas Away

Justice atoned for his muff of a touchdown pass in the second period by a shoulder block he threw on Ward Cuff on Farkas' touchdown run. It was perfectly timed and executed. Apparently just a slight brush-off, it was enough to give Farkas the split-second he needed to break into the open through the funnel of the wedge and he was away.

The Redskins noticed a frail, enthusiastic young man in civilian clothes on their bench during the game but paid little attention to him, not knowing their guest was a budding Broadway celebrity. The chap was Frank Amy, jr., juvenile star of a show in which he plays the role of Scooper Nolan, who has been a Redskin fan since he saw Battles run wild against the Giants and sitting on the same bench with the players was the realization of an ambition he nourished all those years.

The best G. W. can show for its 12 meetings with the Hoyas since 1903 is a scoreless tie in 1907. Georgetown has rubbed it in on the downtown school, scoring 284 points to G. W.'s 19 over that span.

Georgia Is Reported Pledged to Coast; Travel a Jonah

By JUDSON O'QUINN, NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 16 .- Tulsa stepped up today to challenge Boston College for a New Year Day berth in the Sugar Bowl here with the Southeastern Conference champion, while most observers agreed the two teams might bang away at each other if the West Coast should grab off Georgia.

Tulsa and Boston College answered their critics who charged "bowl schedules" Saturday in their easy victories over Baylor and Fordham, respectively. And Michigan put an end to hopes that Frank Leahy would coax Notre Dame down this way.

That was the talk, at least, while Sugar Bowl sponsors worked silently on an official announcement expected in two weeks—just after Georgia plays Georgia Tech for the South-eastern title.

Georgia Pledged to Coast.

Most people were taking it as almost a sure thing that the Georgia-Tech winner would come here, but unofficial word trickled in from Athens, Ga., yesterday that Georgia already had promised the Rose Bowl, which might seem a little presumptious to the Atlanta Engi-

Experts here who like to dabble in team speculation insist the Dixie bowls have a big selection edge this season with so many good teams nearby. Eligible schools might not want to go West, they say, for several reasons. The day-coach trip would be long and hard, and with college courses speeded up, players rather might be away from home for the shortest time.

Accident Made Bill Hollenbach All-America Gridder No Chibear Allowed to Scout Ex-Mates' Teams; Bomb Craters Help Troon Links

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.,

Associated Free Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Ever hear the one about how "Germany" Schulz, Michigan's great center of 1904-08, made an All-America player out of hill Hollenbach? This is the way Harvard's Dick Harlow tells it: When Penn played Michigan in 1808. Schulz knocked out both Penn centers in the first half. A sublineman was hurriedly instructed how to pass the ball on five plays, and to make sure the quarterback wouldn't try any others, the coach chalked the numbers of those five on the seat of the new center's pants. On the first scrimmage, Schulz made the cen-ter sit down hard, and when he eame up, only one number was legible. The quarterback had to keep calling that one—an end run by Hollenbach—and Bill looked so good that he won All-America fame.

Redskins, Looking Bad Despite Victory, Raise Doubt They Could Handle Bears

Mark for Tribe Seen In Winning Games With Poor Play

Muff Six Opportunities In First Half Against Giants, Then Step

By LEWIS ATCHISON. Almost home but not quite solidly established as Eastern champions and next on the list of challengers for the Chicago Bears' pro football crown, the Redskins in the season drawing to a close probably have set a new high for winning games and looking bad. Take yesterday's 14-7 victory over the New York Jinx for example.

It was the Tribe's first win at the Polo Grounds since 1937 when Cliff Battles ran wild against Steve Owen's outfit. It was its first decision over the Jinx since their first game in 1940 and only the second victory in the last 10 games. The Giants were supposed to be crippled by injuries and the Skins needed to win to be assured of at least a tie for Eastern honors. They had plenty of reasons for wanting to win and they should have murdered the Maramen.

Ray Flaherty's warriors began as if they intended to do just that, but they bumped into the old trouble and for a while it seemed the Jinx still was working against them, and at union wages Six times in the first half Washington knocked on the door of a touchdown and six times it fumbled or tossed away the opportunity. Three fumbles, one pass interception and two stout stands by the Giants staved 'em off.

Leave Critic Skeptical. on the scarred, brown turf you In IC-4A 'Chase found yourself asking if this was the team that was supposed to whip the Bears in the playoff next month. Could it be possible that any team that muffed six potential scores could play that kind of football against the Bears, against that give - us - a- yard-and-we'll-take-100 crew from old Chi and still hope to come out on top?

The law of averages got busy and hustled to the Ckins' rescue at the start of the second period, for it was a good break that enabled Andy Farkas to get away for his 94-yard touchdown trek with the initial kickoff. Actually, it was the second kickoff, which is where the break comes in, as Ward Cuff had to boot the ball again after the Jinx was that first kick, too, and merely send their harriers to the marks, place deadlock as the Blackhawks less Than Two Dozen reached his own 25-vard line, but however, with the Michigan State you'd find in an 1890 family wash ping the New Englanders. and he went to town.

Redskins Settle Down. After that the Tribe played smart, steady football with Sammy Baugh pitching 'em downfield to their second score, also registered by Farkas on a buck from the 1-inch line to clinch matters. Messrs Cifers, who played probably his best game of the season, Masterson, Mc-Chesney and Justice aided the cause, playing target for most of Baugh's bullets, but when they arrived on the 1-vard line the Braves had a little trouble and Farkas just did after hitting hard enough to stove in a brick wall.

But, getting back to the original theme, after looking at the Skins week in and week out, watching them stagger across the finish line a scant head in front of their socalled weaker sisters, and comparing their scores with the Bear landslides, you catch yourself wondering all over again how in heaven's name they possibly can win the championship.

The cause and remedy seem obvious enough. Not since the exhibition game against Green Bay at Baltimore last September have the Redskins played like real title con-

Alternate in Mediocrity. One week the line has been good and the backs off their feed and the next week vice versa. Few of them have been good consistently The one shining example is Baugh, who looks good without even completing a pass. Farkas has been up to scratch as have Ki Aldrich at center, Bob Seymour and a few others. But as a whole they've been on and off as much as the celebrated

Give us another game like the one they played against the Packers and we'll concede the Bears nothing but their reputation. Possibly the Tribe has saved something for the playoff. Maybe all the ammunition is going into one annihiliating blast reserved for the champs. It is possible the boys have skinned by these other games without working up a lot of enthusiasm because the playoff bulked so large in their minds. But they seem to be courting disaster in being satisfied with close scores. They've got to show the old blood and thunder, eat-'em-alive spirit if they're going to be a match lanta, Ga.; Fielding Wallace, Aufor the Bears and right now they don't seem to have it.

Tuffy Leemans, reverting to yesterday's game, was responsible for the Giants' touchdown, passing to O'Neale Adams in the end zone for the marker. A penalty against Washington for shoving a potential pass receiver helped keep the drive going, and after Cuff converted Leemans left the game.

"Even while we meet here, the exigencies of war have driven our armed forces into unexpected areas of conflict in Africa. Our President, in letters addressed to the rulers of all the friendly nations concerned, has given solemn assurance that the United States has no designs of permanent conquest or sordid interest. Our aim, he pledged, is to guarantee to countries under temporary occupation as well as to our own the right to live in security and peace. We bishops are confident that the pledge of our Chief Executive, not lightly made, faithfully mirrors the mind and conscience of the American people.

"That pledge is in full harmony with the expression of high purpose which the President made to the Catholic bishops of the United States when our own country was plunged into war: We shall win this war and in victory we shall seek not vengeance, but the establishment of an international order in which the spirit of Christ shall rule the hearts of men and of na-

Since the murderous assault on Poland, utterly devoid of every semblance of humanity, there has been a premeditated and systematic extermination of the people of this nation. The same satanic technique is being applied to many other peoples. We feel a deep sense of revulsion against the cruel indignities heaped upon the Jews in conquered countries and upon defenseless peoples not of our faith. We join with our brother bishops in subjugated France in a statement attributed to

"Deeply moved by the mass arrests and maltreatment of Jews, we cannot stifle the cry of our conscience. Rights Urged for Negro. "The war has brought to the fore conditions that have long been with us. The full benefits of our free institutions and the rights of our minorities must be openly acknowledged and honestly respected. We ask this acknowledgment and respect particularly for our colored fellow citizens. They should enjoy the full measure of economic opportunities and advantages which will enable them to realize their hope and ambition to join with us in preserving and expanding in changed and changing social conditions our national heritage. We fully appreciate their many native gifts and aptitudes which, ennobled and enriched by a true Christian life, will make them a powerful influence in the establishment of a Christian social order.

"We recall the words of Pope Pius XII expressing his paternal solicitude for the colored people of our country. In a letter addressed to the American bishops on the occasion of the 150th anniversary of the establishment of the American hierachy, his holiness said: 'We confess that we feel a special paternal affection which is certainly inspired of heaven for the Negro people dwelling among you; for in the field of religion and education we know that they need special care and comfort and are very deserving of it. Tax Selling Increases, Traders Await New War Developments By VICTOR EUBANK,

Associated Press Financial Writer NEW YORK, Nov. 16 .- The bull side of the stock market today lost many adherents, for no outstanding reason, and fractions to a point or so were subtracted from leaders. In addition to a little more selling for income tax purposes, the standaside disposition of most customers was attributed partly to the lack of clear information regarding battles in North Africa and the Solomons. The most encouraging feature of the proceedings was that real liquidating presure never was in evidence. The ticker tape loafed from the start and minor recessions predominated at the close. Transfers were around 500,000 shares, one of the smallest for a five-hour session this month.

There was a lightening of accounts the recently bounding peace stocks, but the majority of the war infants failed to sit up and take nourishment. Brokers spoke of the general dip as a possible additional correction of the lengthy upward swing and it also was recalled that the market ordinarily is moderately reactionary during most of November and December.

Low-priced shares turned over in sizable deals. Packard Motors came out in one block of 10,700 at 2% and there was a 9,000-share trade in Curtis Publishing at 134, both un-

Repairs to Reduce Steel Output to 1,688,400 Tons

Estimate for Current Week Based on Rate Of 98.7 Per Cent

NEW YORK, Nov. 16 .- The American Iron and Steel Institute reported today the Nation's steel mills would operate this week at 98.7 per cent of capacity and turn out an estimated 1,688,400 net tons of ingots. The decline of .9 of a point from ast week's 99.6 per cent and 1,703,800 tons output was attributed to shutlowns for necessary repairs. A month ago steel operations were at 101 per cent of theoretical capacity for an output of 1.727.800 tons and a year ago at 97 per cent for ,602,600 tons.

WE "SCRAPPED" WITH OUR NEIGHBORS

...and, ever since, they've been our closest friends!

"WE hardly knew the folks who live next door until the day our community started that 'scrap drive'—and they began piling up a lot of old household junk in their backyard.

"As I watched them over the fence, they grinned and called out: 'Salvage for Uncle Sam!'

"Well, that started us off. We had lots of old 'scrap', too, in our attic and basement—and pretty soon we were lugging it out into a pile of our own.

"When we'd finished, I said to my wife: 'Whew! I'm thirsty.'

"There's some Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer in the ice box,' she said. 'Maybe the neighbors would like some, too. I'll ask them!'

"Soon we were all sitting on the back steps together, tired but relaxed—enjoying our Blue Ribbon, swapping experiences and getting acquainted.

"Maybe that good mellow Pabst had something to do with it—anyhow, ever since we 'scrapped' with our neighbors—they've been our closest friends."

As people adjust themselves to the new wartime routine, little things—everyday pleasures, take on new importance. Now more than ever, Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer has become a symbol of friendly companionship.

That softer, kindlier taste of Pabst Blue Ribbon is achieved by full-flavor blending—a Pabst process that gives you all the taste tones of a well-rounded beer. Not just 3, nor 5, nor 7 or 8 brews—but no less than 33 master brews are skillfully "woven" into one great beer. There is no finer beer in all the world than Pabst Blue Ribbon.

200 Patrons Quizzed At Places Catering To Entertainers

Twenty persons, including 11 women, were to be arraigned at 2 p.m. today before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage following police raids on two "after-hours" Spotlight Guild clubs early

Eight other men were being held for investigation—two for having marijuana cigarettes in their possession and six for failure to produce draft registration cards, po-

About 200 patrons at both places were released after questioning.

The raids were conducted simultaneously at Fifth and K streets N.W. and the 1100 block of Seventeenth street N.W. Police said both clubs long have been a meeting place for professional entertainers after night clubs and theaters close. Maj. Edward J. Grillo was arrested at the Seventeenth street place and Albaugh at Fifth and K streets.

According to Maj. Kelly, membership restrictions of the two clubs were vague. Organized for musicians and entertainers, the clubs permitted entry to persons in many other walks of life. Among those found in the establishments last night, police said, were a number of Army and Navy officers.

Membership fees, Maj. Kelly said, ranged from 50 cents to $24. Guest privileges, he reported, could be obtained for $1 a night.

More Applications Expected. The number of applications that have already poured into the local OPA office is far in excess of the estimates made earlier this season. Householders with oil heating plants have another week-until next Monday-to get their applications to area boards, and several thousands additional requests for allotments are expected before the deadline.

After next Monday distributors will not be permitted to deliver oil to any one unless rationing coupons are given in return. Right now Mrs. Hershey is working hard as chairman of the Columbia Theater War Stamps and Bonds Committee. Before that she sold stamps and bonds at the Washington Gas Light Co. and also at RKO Keith's Theater. She is thrilled over the success of the sales. Since May 30 Washington theaters have sold three-quarters of a million dollars worth of stamps and bonds. Most of the theaters give immediate delivery of the bondseven the big ones.

Most exciting sale she ever made, Mrs. Hershey says, was the $750 bond she sold to a sailor who paid for it in cash. Most appealing was the small boy who arrived at the movies with 5 cents change after he had purchased his ticket. He walked toward the candy slots, then turned toward the War stamp booth. For a good 10 minutes he wavered between the tempting assortment of candy that his nickel would purchase and the stamps. Then with a determined went to the stamp both

Volunteers Run Alexandria's Day Care Center

Credit for Organizing Group Is Given to Mrs. R. P. Davidson

By Helen Rau.

The 34 women who have pledged themselves to staff Alexandria's day care centers are an outstanding group of volunteers, and credit for their organization goes to Mrs. Richard Porter Davidson, a veteran in placing and directing volunteers. Mrs. Davidson, who has directed all her energies to a program which she considers of the utmost importance, declares:

"The proper psychology in han-dling these children can better the setup of the American home. We are not trying to get the children away from their homes but we will send them back rested and happy at the end of each day so that their parents can get real pleasure out

The centers planned to care for the children of working mothers in Alexandria will be under the supervision of a professional director and a paid teacher for each center but only with the help of volunteers can they hope to exist.

Mrs. Davidson has been associated with the project since its inception and has taken complete charge of interviewing and placing volunteers. A comprehensive questionnaire, personal interviews and orientation lectures have resulted in the organization of an unusual group of women who have already done preparatory work in planning the program and gathering equipment and will work regular hours in the centers when they open in the very near future. Mrs. Davidson was enthusiastic in telling about the group of volun-teers who will probably number 50 before the centers open.

Young Mrs. Ogden Ludlow, the bride of a Navy Department official, is Mrs. Davidson's assistant and works full time interviewing and classifying workers.

Mrs. Hugo Black, wife of the lington. Mrs. Gerhard van Arkel, wife of a Intelligence Division of the War Government attorney, are on the Department in Washington. Sergt.

Natives of Alexandria are also on the list and are represented by Mrs. Albert Smoot, whose husband is chairman of the Day Care Committee: Mrs. Ernest A. de Bordenave. wife of the rector of St. Paul's Skidmore Alumnae to be located; Mrs. Milton Carr Ferguson and Mrs. J. D. Matthew.

British Social Services To Be Reorganized To 'Abolish Poverty'

War Fails to Deter Improvement in Jobless And Old-Age Assistance

By H. J. J. SARGINT.

Foreign Correspondent of The Star and North American Newspaper Alliance. LONDON, Nov. 16.-The British national plan to abolish poverty, drafted by Sir William Beveridge, chairman of the Government Committee on Social Insurance, is in the hands of the cabinet. The result of 17 months' work, the report runs to some 80,000 words—the length of a novel. It will be on sale to the public by about Christmas and those who have seen early copies say it should be a best seller. Indeed it affects the life and welfare of every man and woman in the country.

Here is a brief review of the services which already exist and which, although they are in many respects the most elaborate in the world, may be carried considerably further by the Beveridge report.

The unemployed are protected in several ways: By the unemployment insurance scheme, by the assistance board which looks after those who have exhausted their rights under the first scheme, and by public assistance which acts as a kind of net to receive all those who are not eligible for other forms of social assistance. Those who are out of work through illness are cared for by the national health insurance scheme, and those unemployed through old age, by the contributory and noncontributory pensions scheme.

Forms Being Improved.

These forms of insurance and assistance are constantly being improved, and war has been no deterrent to this progress. Two months ago, for instance, the assistance board raised the pension allowances for more than a million old people, bringing the total cost of all old-age pensions to £135,000,000 a year. That was not an emergency measure dependent on war conditions but a permanent reform.

A human aspect of the new regulations is that, while in the past many hundreds of thousands of old-age pensioners were too proud to apply to the public assistance authorities for extra help, their pensions now are taken to them by officers of the assistance board who visit the old people in their homes. Again, under the national health insurance scheme an additional three shillings a week has been allotted to the benefits and the scope of these extended to another half million people. This, too, will be a permanent measure.

Include Proper Medicines.

Under the same scheme are the medical benefits, which provide free medical attendance and treatment and include the provision of proper medicines and of the prescribed surgical appliances. The doctors who undertake this work are known familiarly in England as "panel doctors." People in the area where they work are free to choose from the local list whatever "panel doctor" they prefer and to get the medicine he prescribes from any authorized chemist, free.

All this is financed on a contributory basis, the contributions being shared equally between workers and their employers, with a subsidy from the state. The unemployment insurance works on the same principle and covers all men between the ages of 16 and 65 and women between 16 and 60 who are employed in Great Britain at salaries under £420 a year. This means that almost 90 per cent of the working population is now covered. In this scheme, too, benefits have been raised by three shillings during the last year.

Many of the social services have been adapted to wartime exigencies but this could never have been done so successfully if the authorities had not been able to build on a good existing framework. Another factor that has been of great positive advantage in planning for war conditions is the reserve of good health built up indirectly through the 4,000,000 new houses constructed between 1918 and 1939.

51,000 Beds Added.

Although the civilian building program has now virtually come to a standstill, in the last three years accommodation for 51,000 beds has been added to the hospitals of England and Wales alone, and building on the same scale has provided Scotland with 75 government-owned hospitals, with a total of 11,800 beds. There are, in addition, 109 emergency maternity homes.

For the purposes of war, 80 per cent of the hospitals have been welded together in the emergency hospital service. This is the first time that the state has stepped into the hospital system, which it now controls and finances, though on the casualty side only, which includes injuries to civilians due to Function in Groups. Hospitals are now organized to function in groups; those in congested areas are planned as casualty receiving and clearing stations, those in rural districts as first-class surgical hospitals. The old, allpurpose conception of a "general" hospital has given way to a pattern of hospitals in which some specialize in one subject, some in another, so that the patient goes to the one most suited to his needs and not, as used to happen, to the first avail-

Six Firemen Killed, 40 Injured in Boston Building Collapse

Rescuers Dig Out Victims Trapped in Fire Debris; Ladder Truck Crushed

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Nov. 16.—Six firemen are dead and two-score others are under hospital care after being pulled from the debris of old Armory Hall in Maverick Square, East Bos-

Fire Chief Samuel J. Pope said the fire started in grease on the kitchen stove of a restaurant. He estimated damage to the four-story structure at $45,000. In addition, a $20,000 aerial ladder truck was crushed when a wall of the building collapsed.

Fund Raised for Families. Hardly had the smoke cleared from the collapsed structure than money was being raised for families of the victims. Firemen in Lynn, Mass., started the fund off with a $200 contribution. Firemen said that not since the so-called Merrimac street fire of 1898, when six lives were lost, had so many persons perished in a fire in this city. The collapse of the Pickwick Club on July 4, 1925, took 44 lives, but fire wasn't a factor.

The fire in Armory Hall, once a scene of political rallies and more recently housing a taproom and a dine and dance place, appeared to be a routine two-alarm blaze when it was discovered at about 2:30 a.m. yesterday.

Firemen apparently had it under control and a number of them had entered the building when a wall on the street side collapsed.

Wall Falls Both Ways. Part of the wall fell inward, causing the death of the six firemen and temporarily trapping others, while the other part of the wall tumbled outward, showering debris on firemen on the sidewalk and crushing ward F. Macomber, 47, South Bosthe ladder truck.

20th Century-Fox And Selznick Join In Big Movie Deal*

Noted Producer Plans New Type of Films Dealing With War Effort

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 16.-In one of the biggest movie deals in years, David O. Selznick, independent film producer who has won numerous awards for high-quality productions. and Twentieth Century-Fox Studio have joined hands—at least for the Completion of negotiations was announced yesterday, whereby Fox takes over a group of stories and plays owned by Selznick, as well as the services of several of his con-tract players. The contracts will be retained by Selznick, in the event he resumes as an independent producer after the war.

Plans New Type of Film.

Future Selznick plans call for creation of a new type of film dealing with the war effort. The preliminary announcement did not describe them further.

Selznick won the Academy Award for best production in 1939 with "Gone With the Wind" and again in 1940 with "Rebecca." He also received the Irving Thalberg Me-morial Award for most consistent high-quality production in 1939. Selznick players, whose services will be taken over by Fox, include Joan Fontaine and Ingrid Bergman, while among Selznick directors in-volved in the deal are Alfred Hitchcock and Robert Stevenson. Changing Conditions.

Some film observers regarded the new agreement as perhaps indicative of changing conditions in the film industry brought about the war and economic conditions associated

They reason that the restriction of earning capacity, owing to the ceiling on incomes, might seriously affect independent producers be-cause of difficulty in borrowing big-name players. It is recalled that Selznick was all but ready to start the film "Jane Eyre," one of the stories involved in the deal, but encountered perplexi-ties in obtaining a prominent lead-ing man. The picture will be one of the first produced at Fox under

Catholic Leader Opposes 300 Million School Bill

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Passage by Congress of a bill to appro-priate $300,000,000 for tax-supported schools "will be disastrous to private education in this country," Arch-bishop Francis J. of our hiding place. We weighed anchor again that night and churned southward, putting as many miles between us and the archipelago as possible. We were more careful of our islands after that and we sailed the Japanese flag most of the time instead of the American bunting. When we made sorties ashore one of us would always remain with the boat, covering the other while he palavered with natives or searched for water.

To many of the natives we met in the lonely, isolated groups of islands, we were the same as Japs. They had seen the American and Jap flags but they had never seen people of either race. In those waters it was a definite asset to leave the impression that we were Nipponese. Once, under cover of dusk, we sailed a dash for the Ruth Lee's small within 200 yards of a northbound cabin and grabbed our Japanese Jap convoy of two heavy cruisers flag. > Last Jap Threat. On the afternoon of October 3, after being at sea nearly two months, we had our last near calamity at the hands of the Japs. It was a bright, sunshiny afternoon. Lloyd was sitting forward half dozing, and I was at the tiller. Suddenly, on both sides of us the water was spouting in sheets and we heard a sound like that of exploding firecrackers. Then there was roar over the boat. We looked up in anticipation of the worstand found it!

We were both awarded Distinguished Service Crosses; we have had good solid meals and we have slept in beds with clean sheets—an experience we hadn't had since the day we began the battle for Bataan. We've had an opportunity to cable our families and we've had a chance to learn the momentous news which has taken place in the world since the last days of Bataan and Cor-

We both are just as anxious as we were the day the war began to get our crack at the Japs. We have had it once their way. Now we would like to try it the American way. Bataan and Corregidor are just as important to us now as they were seven or eight months ago. Most of our close Army friends are still there and some day soon we hope to go back to the Philippines to get them.

The stories they will tell will probably be even more harrowing and more exciting than ours. We were just two officers who wanted freedom again-and had enough physical strength left in us to do it.

We hope the men left behind on Bataan and Corregidor will experience the same feeling we did when we saw friendly land for the first time in seven months, when we knew that our days as hunted animals were over, and when we knew there would be square meals and free air and people we knew to greet us It was an experience no one can appreciate when two weary Americans finally comprehend they have successfully escaped from a country living under the hellish rule of the Japs. Many people have since asked us how we felt when we first saw, Australia. We felt like two kids on Christmas

Army Has Lost 32,429 And Navy 16,527, OWI Reports

Casualties of the United States armed forces since the outbreak of war, excluding the African campaign, total 48,956, the Office of War Information reported today. The total includes killed, wounded, missing and prisoners lost by the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard and Philippine Scouts.

The report placed the Army's casualties as of Thursday at 32,429, of whom 1,069 were killed, 1,531 wounded, 161 prisoners and 29,668 missing. The Navy's casualties as of October 31 and including the Marine Corps and Coast Guard were 16,527, of whom 4,625 were killed, 1,904 wounded and 9,998 missing.

Japs Hold Prisoner Lists. Pointing out that most of the Army's casualties are classified as missing, OWI stated that since a majority of these were in the Philippines and Java they are presumed to be prisoners of war. Informa tion, it was said, is lacking due to absence of prisoner lists from Japan. Similarly, a portion of the Navy's missing were presumed to be pris-

Of the Army's long list of missing 17,000 were American troops in the Philippines and 11,000 others were Philippine Scouts. An additional 500 troops were reported missing in Java. Of the 1,531 wounded, 552 had returned to duty.

3,854 Navy Men Dead. The casualty list for the Navy proper showed 3,854 dead, a large number of whom were killed at Pearl Harbor; wounded, 1,190, and missing, 7,972. Casualties of the Marine Corps, which has borne the brunt of fighting on Guadalcanal Island, were reported as 734 killed, 103 wounded and 1,900 missing. Coast Guard casualties were classified as 37 dead, 11 wounded and 126 missing.

Army prisoners totaled 161, the Navy 460 and Marine Corps 728. The figures reflect the lack of information from the Japanese.

Peggy and Leonard Give Members A Treat at Jeudi Club Dinner

As Reported by Arthur H. Deute

The Club de Jeudi—the Thursday Night Club—the Cook's Night Out Club—all mean the same thing. These are the Thursday gatherings of four charming couples, when the men folks do the cooking and the everloving wives clean up the mess. And sad but only too true, the male chef, no matter how proficient he may be before the dinner and in its preparation, is not so very good when it comes to removing the debris. However, that is another story.

Here we report the culinary effort of Peggy and Leonard last Thursday night—and it sent the guests home most contented and happy. To offset the recent corned beef and cabbage escapade and the touch of old Ireland, Leonard turned 100 per cent Italian, what with the new era of the Italian in these United States. And, anyhow, spaghetti is today as much American as anything else. And so here was the menu which

At present no question is more often asked than that of whether a wife may include the name of her husband who is away with the armed forces on Christmas greetings to their relatives and friends. A letter today reminded me of an answer I gave the other day, in which I suggested the wife could say: "John would send greetings were he here.' People, I am told, ask for what they want, and take what they can get-but they aren't restricting themselves when they do find what they want. If the butcher has a roast—okay—send it along! And send some lamb chops and a veal cutlet, too, if they're around. Hang the 21/2 pounds per person per week! That's the general attitude.

Anyhow, OW1 prefers to see the rosy side. And they go on to exult that in spite of this voluntary rationing that every one is observing so faithfully (?), we can have a real old-fashioned Thanksgiving just as usual because turkey isn't rationed at all. They do admit, on a soberer note, however, that turkey is mighty expensive, and that lots of families won't have as many people gathered around the festive board to eat it this year. Gift aprons gladden the heart of any homemaker. She especially wants a pretty apron for entertaining, one that can be worn before guests without that "kitchen" look. Our fan-shaped apron is graceful and style-new and is made additionally attractive by decorative embroidery at the waist.

RESIDENTS OF ARLINGTON FOREST PREFER THE STAR

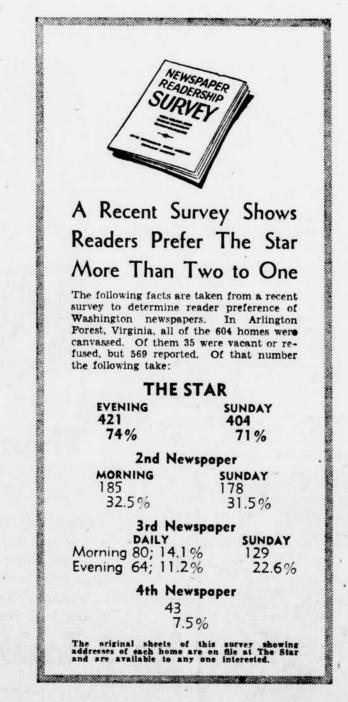

THE RESIDENTS of Arlington Forest, Virginia, one of the many atttractive residential developments of the Capital area, prefer The Star overwhelmingly to any other newspaper. This fact was made clear by the findings of a recent survey covering every home in this subdivision.

According to the survey, more than seven out of ten homes take The Star, both evening and Sunday, while only three out of ten take the next most popular paper. Incidentally, more than two-thirds of The Sunday Star readers take no other Sunday paper. And 59 per cent of The Evening Star readers take no other daily paper.

Part of Home Life

These findings are important because they are typical. The residents of Arlington Forest are largely the same type of people who make up the great body of home owners throughout the Capital area—and their preferences are an accurate reflection of the preferences of the others.

To them, as to thousands of other discriminating people, The Star has become a daily part of their home life . . . and thus affords reputable merchants and business houses the most direct and acceptable means of reaching . . . with honest advertising . . . this great metropolitan market.

India now has a diplomatic agent Sir Girja Bajpai, who is nominally under the ever-spreading wing of the British Embassy. The Indian agency functions, however, as a separate unit and the agent general has a large staff which is responsible to him. Sir Bajpai sees any official to whom he wishes to talk about Indian affairs and certainly enjoys a larger share of independence than did the Italian diplomats for instance, when their Nazi colleagues were expurgating their guest lists and supervising their social and diplomatic activities.

First Arab Minister.

The government of Iraq, some time ago, sent the first Arab Minister to the United States. Ali Jawdat, like some of the Washington agencies, has his eye primarily on the post-war period-with his interest focused on the Middle East. The ultimate fate of the land which contains the Garden of Eden, now ruled by a 4-year-old King, and the ultimate ownership of the oil fields of Mosul are of vital interest to the Iraquian representative. It is rumored that the almost legendary Ibn-ben Saud, King of Hedjaz and Saudia Arabia, is now contemplating the dispatch of a diplomatic representative to the United States. Often described as the most romantic figure in the Arab world, Ibn Saud is rated the most redoubtable enemy or the most valuable ally for any power which has interests in the region between the Tigris and the Red Sea. American agents recently have contacted the powerful Arab chief and have been cordially received. The warrior King has, among other claims to glory, the reputation of living peacefully in the company of four legal wives and several hundred Syria Receives Representative.

The new republic of Syria, which was wrested from Vichy control by British and Fighting French forces, has now received an American diplomatic representative in the person of George Wadsworth, former Charge d'Affaires in Rome. A Syrian representative is expected to arrive in Washington in spite of the opposition of certain French groups who are loathe to see a premature change in the status of mandated Syria.

The Emperor of Morocco, Sidi Mohammed, has been represented heretofore by French diplomatic and Consular agents. The arrival of American forces in North Africa and the disappearance of the Vichy government has opened up the possibility of a direct exchange between the Emperor of Morocco and the United States, Robert Murphy, credited with having done much of the political preparation for the American penetration of North ing the small-slam bid, even though the North-South cards normally should not produce 12 tricks. If North had happened to hold four CROSS-WORD PUZZLE to the queen in either red suit, there would be a play for 12 tricks even if the dummy were otherwise completely worthless.

West led the queen of clubs and South looked disappointedly at the dummy. Apparently he was going to lose a trick in each red suit. His disappointment changed to something resembling despair when East ruffed!

South had played low from the dummy and had the presence of mind to drop the ace of clubs on East's trump! This gave him an entry to dummy if he should happen to need it after he had drawn trumps.

East returned the deuce of diamonds and South resisted the temptation to finesse the ten. East would have returned a trump, South reflected, if there had been any doubt about the safety of his re-

Then South ran his five trumps, saving all of dummy's clubs. West discarded two clubs on the third and fourth trumps, but the last trump squeezed him. A club discard obviously would establish dummy's entire suit; so West discarded the jack of diamonds. South then dropped the queen of diamonds by playing his king and cashed the ten of diamonds to squeeze West once more. If West discarded a club, dummy would win an extra club trick; if West discarded a heart, South would win a trick with the ten of hearts.

In economic importance, the pecan ranks first among our native nut trees because of the quantity and value of the wild crop as well as its cultural promise. Ninety-five per cent of the pecan crop is harvested from wild trees.

The species is native to river bottoms and lowlands of the Mississippi River and its tributaries as far north as Davenport, Iowa, Covington, Ky., Terre Haute, Ind., and the vicinity of Kansas City, Mo. It is also found throughout most of the river valleys of Texas and the adjacent parts of Mexico. In the regions of Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Missouri Kansas, Tennessee, Kentucky, In-diana and Illinois and a limited area in Southeastern Nebraska and Southeastern Iowa, it has occurred wild in large areas. Earliest efforts at commercial planting were made in Louisiana. Mississippi and Texas. Greatest activity that has been made recently to establish the pecan outside of its natural habitat, is in Georgia, Florida, North and South Carolina. Virginia, Maryland, California and

Oregon. Pecan trees are monoecious; that s, the male and female flowers are separate but on the same trees. The male flowers are in slender drooping catkins furnishing the pollen for the small erect clusters of the female flowers. Later, the nut clusters will be found here. Leaves 12 to 20 inches long, composed of 8 to 17 leaflets of bright yellowgreen, cover the tree all summer, turning to bright yellow in autumn. The fruit, 3 to 11 in a cluster and four-angled, opens at the winged sutures when it reaches maturity. The nut is reddish and smooth, with thin shell and a sweet kernel.

Mr. Mellett Would Abolish Dual Programs, but Can He?

AMUSEMENT'S.

Russian Play to Open Here December 14 as Guild Attraction

By ANDREW R. KELLEY.

Lowell Mellett, chief of the Office of War Information's Bureau of Motion Pictures, sounded what many in the industry consider the doom of double features on the screen, in a speech last week to the annual conference of the National Board of Review.

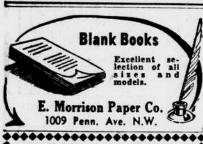

His arguments were sound, well organized, logical. "We would like to see the double feature eliminated if only for the duration of the war," he said. "There is only so much * screen time in a day, only so much time for the presentation of the best and most helpful entertainment and for the presentation of vital information. We frankly want the small part of the total time that is required to deliver this information. Double features make it difficult to provide this time." Mr. Mellett added. The National Board Andrew R. Kelley. of Review by resolution endorsed the Mellett proposal.

Double features are not a major evil in this immediate exhibition area, but throughout America and in the small towns the dual program has been established, is entrenched with both exhibitor and patron. The voice of rural America will be heard before the double feature vanishes. Small Companies Opposed.

Hollywood producers who manufacture products for the double screen feature service will also be heard. Republic Pictures, for example, has already come out against the Mellett plan. This company releases some 30 Westerns, half a dozen cliff hangers (serials), and service approximately 12,000 theaters in the small towns. Monogram is another company which depends upon this small-town patronage and pro-vides economical features, and Universal also caters to the cinemas of imited capacity.

To eliminate the double feature it will be necessary for producers, distributors, chain theater operators and independent exhibitors to agree on a program, and it is doubtful whether the ban can be enforced without the power of an executive order from the President or legislation. Mr. Mellett's recommendations can be traced partially to the fact that many small exhibitors pay for the Government shorts but put them on the shelf and do not run them. They take up time required for double features. The chainoperated theaters of the big producers make it mandatory with managers to run the OWI shorts and other abbreviated reels produced to stimulate the prosecution

Poll Favored Two Features. According to Pollster George Gallup, the American people do not want double features eliminated. He took some extensive samplings for RKO on the habits, likes and dislikes of moviegoers. The American Institute of Public Opinion conducted 194 surveys for the picture company and made some interesting findings. Among them:

That 65 per cent of the picture audience bolts its food before 6:30 p.m. and has plenty of time for double features. Ninety per cent That only 4 per cent of the col

Hemingway Story for Which $150,000 Was Paid Evolves Into Celluloid

Great pictures always get under way with a flash and flourish that leaves no one in this movie-minded Nation unaware of what's going on. But, the last day's shooting is something else again. There was great public casting of the picture, with every feminine star in Hollywood considered for the plum role of Maria. A budget of $2,670,000 was set on the film. Last November 10 production actually got under way. "Toll" Is Finished.

A few days ago, "FWTBT" came to a shooting end. It ended with Gary Cooper, the hero, sunning himself at Palm Springs. Ingrid Bergman, the heroine, out of town for 10 days. Katina Paxinou, the Greek actress, home working on her memoirs. Akim Tamiroff in the wardrobe department testing for his next role. It ended on the studio's Chatfield, telling her that Chatback lot. No fuss, no fury. Director Wood looked exhausted. He called his final "cut" in a tired voice, as three extras, known to none but their intimates, made their last gesticulations before the camera and walked over to the pay office to pick up $7.50 checks. There were no congratulations, no gay windup party for the cast and crew. For Sam Wood, the habits of a year were broken. In the gathering dusk
