It is considered likely also that be the first to feel whatever rethere will be a campaign to tighten control over the supplementary "B" and "C" books, and a cut in the value of those coupons also was a possibility. One confusing element was injected into the situation by the ancash one coupon for "emergency" purposes, the official interpretation them at 3 p.m. being vague, and reports indicating that determination as to eligibility was resting largely with filling station operators, who were applying varying standards - some exceedingly liberal.

Asked for more detail, Mr. Leary replied that he considered newspaper workers, for example, as entitled to emergency rations. Doctors and others engaged in maintaining the health and welfare of the community, he added, "of course, should get all the gas they need to perform their duties." He declared those in the "essential" classification should be allowed to cash a second coupon if needed, but that this should not be done unless work had proceeded on schedule this the supply in the gas tank was lower than the amount called for by the coupon.

Woodrum Urges Sane Fiscal Policy, With Cut In Non-War Costs

Virginia House Member Wants 'New Ventures' Abandoned for Duration

Appeal for wartime abandonment of "all further social and economic experiments and new ventures" came today from a leader of the Southern Democratic bloc in Con-

Expressing hope that efforts "for a sane national fiscal policy may be about to bear fruit," Representative Woodrum, Democrat, of Virginia declared that the Nation's first objective must be financing and winning the war.

"The American people," he said in an interview, "are willing to be taxed for whatever it takes to train, equip and maintain our fighting forces, but they have a right to demand that all non-war activities be curtailed and expenditures for the same cut to the bone."

Congress to Check Costs. Mr. Woodrum's remarks followed announcement by Chairman Cann'on that a special House Appropriations Subcommittee is working on a plan to give Congress an inde-pendent system for checking up on Government expenditures.

Meanwhile, Capitol Hill farm leaders said the drive for redefinition of agricultural parity, to include farm labor costs in farm prices, would be resumed immediately on the convening of the new Congress. Chairman Fulmer of the House

Agriculture Committee told newspapermen the resignation of Price Administrator Henderson would affect in no way his plans to reintroduce the parity revision bill. On the other side of the Capitol.

Senator Thomas, Democrat, of Oklahoma, a farm leader, said he felt certain the parity battle would be resumed there. Parity Rise Seen.

According to Government economists, the redefinition would mean parity levels, used in computing ceilings and floors for agricultural commodities. Mr. Henderson has steadfastly opposed the revision. and a message from President Roosevelt expressing "unalterable opposition" defeated a farm block effort to write the formula change into the anti-inflation bill last September.

However, the matter was brought into the House again a few days before the Seventy-seventh Congress ended, and it was approved without a dissenting vote. It was caught in the legislative log-jam in the Senate and failed to come

The union president also urged drivers not to remain uptown on call boxes when they take passengers in that direction, but to return to the downtown area, where the call for cabs is more pressing. The Public Utilities Commission

Mr. Fulmer said he did not believe the great majority of the American people "hold the President altogether responsible for what is going on in connection with the operations of our war agencies," and predicted the new Congress would make every effort to assist the administration without "attempting to pass drastic legislation which would tend to take over the administration of the war

Prompt Confirmation As New Head of OPA Indicated for Brown

Farm Bloc Opposition Probably Will Be Held To Private Protests

By the Associated Press. An administration checkup indicated today that Senator Brown, Republican, of Michigan will win prompt confirmation as price administrator if President Roosevelt submits his name to the Senate in January to succeed Leon Henderson. Despite opposition expressed privately by some farm leaders, Senator Brown's name is expected to go to the Senate shortly after the new Congress convenes and to receive favorable action so he can take over the reins of the Office of Price Administration by January 15. Senator Aiken, Republican, of Vermont, who has criticized an interpretation Senator Brown placed on the language of the Price Control Act, which permitted the fixing of agricultural price ceilings at a point lower than farm bloc members contended was legal, said he believed there would be no organized opposition if Senator Brown is picked for the job Mr. Henderson resigned

Gillette Predicts Confirmation.

The resignation, accepted by the President, will be effective with appointment of a successor. Senator Gillette, Democrat, of Iowa, another farm State member, predicted speedy confirmation, and Senator Johnson, Democrat, of Colorado, said he felt "a very bad situation" might be corrected with the proposed change. "Senator Brown is the very man for the job, if he can be induced to accept it," Senator Johnson said.

"He's familiar with the law, the attitude of Congress and with the Germans Use Force problems of the office. He's from a farm State and a small town."

Senator Brown, a Democrat from St. Ignace, Mich., who was defeated for re-election, the appointment.

Farm organization leaders are known to have protested privately to some Senators that they would have preferred to have Mr. Henderson remain in the price control pest rather than to see Senator Brown take over.

Their opposition was represented as stemming from the successful fight made by Senator Brown in the Senate to prevent adoption of an amendment to the price-wage-salary stabilization bill which would have boosted agricultural parity price standards by taking into account farm labor costs.

In the course of that fight Senator Brown named the heads of several farm 'organizations and urged his colleagues in a Senate the Reich without notice and with- said he had decided to follow the speech not to "turn the leadership of the legislative branch of the Government over to these gentlemen," who, he said, were not hired by the American people, but "hired by the people whose interests they

The farm labor cost provision, approved later by the House in a separate bill, will be brought before Congress again shortly after it convenes and is expected to provide one of the major issues.

Yule Turkeys Scarce Here; Chicken, Capon Quantities Limited

10-Cents-Per-Pound Rise Over '41 Level Recorded In Chicago Fowl Market

Turkeys are hard to find, roasting chickens and capon may be had, but in limited quantities, and there is a scarcity of duck, poultry wholesalers and the big meat-packing companies here reported today.

One retailer reeled off the names of seven major District wholesalers whom he had telephoned frantically for turkey, but without result. "Most of the turkey from the country around here is being bought up by the Army for all the big camps," he said. "We usually get many turkeys from the Middle West, but that market has disappeared, too." Labor shortage, speculators and transportation difficulties were given as causes of the scarcity.

Chicken Available.

Reports on stocks on hand varied from firm to firm. All seemed to have roasting chicken and capon, but in very restricted quantities. One man proclaimed that "there are no ducks in the whole city," but his pronouncement was softened by others who said they had some ducks, but that supplies were "very scarce."

One dealer, who in an ordinary year would have had some 700 turkeys on hand six days before Christmas, said he had "150 turkeys in sight." They had been promised him by friendly farmers in nearby country sections, but he seemed dubious about actual delivery.

Meanwhile, from Chicago the Associated Press reported a sharp pre-Christmas rise in live tuckey prices, similar to that which occurred before Thanksgiving, which indicated the housewife will have to pay as much as she did a month

Prices Up 10 Cents. Wholesale turkey prices are 10

In the live wholesale market in Chicago yesterday young toms were quoted as high at 361/2 cents a pound compared with 30 cents on Monday. Top grades of hens also were around 361/2 cents, or only 21/2 higher than on Monday. A year ago quotations were around 23 cents. In the dressed market top grades were quoted around 40 cents, about a dime higher than a year ago.

Must Maintain Records. Due to the delay, many consumers used promissory notes instead of ration coupons to obtain fall supplies of oil. Now, with coupons being issued, the fuel oil companies must take coupons in payment of the notes and set up office records for their customers-during what normally is their busiest season for filling orders for fuel.

The three operators questioned by Mr. Goldthorp could offer no specific suggestions for amendment of between heating periods.

According to Lester Scott, chief of the oil heating division of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, who conferred earlier this week of oil for home heating either in with John G. ## Miss Herlihy Faces Attempts to Break Self-Defense Story

Defendant Tells Jury Capt. Carr Was Berserk; Threatened Her Life

By the Associated Press. BISBEE, Ariz., Dec. 19.-Margaret Herlihy returned to the witness stand today to face a cross-examination attack on her story that she shot and fatally wounded Capt. David Carr after he inexplicably went berserk and attempted to choke her to death.

The red-haired defendant, weeping but struggling for composure, related to a tense jury on direct examination that the handsome officer she loved so desperately suddenly turned into a bestial creature whose hands clawed at her throat. Love At First Sight.

It was love at first sight when she and Capt. Carr met at Fort Huachuca last May 10, she said. Tragedy began unfolding, she testified, when, under the influence of liquor pressed on her by Capt, Carr, she went through a Mexican marriage ceremony. She was 21, he 27.

Newspaper Guild Wins INS Bargaining Election

By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, Dec. 19.-The American Newspaper Guild announced yesterday that it had won a country-wide election naming it the national collective bargaining agency for employes of the International News Service by a vote of 134 to 32 as counted at the regional office of the National Labor Relations Board.

Wilbur F. Bade. Guild international representative who directed the union's organization in INS. said negotiations for a country-wide contract would open next month. He added that among INS employes eligible to vote, only 23 failed to do so in the NLRB election.

Mr. Blade said the INS, a Hearst organization, was the only major wire agency not now under Guild contract, nationally or locally.

Talking It Over

It is gratifying to note that both the Office of Defense Transportation and the Office of Price Administration are working with the fuel oil dealers in Washington in an effort to help them with the extraordinary burdens imposed by the fuel oil rationing system and the first touch of really cold weather.

The ODT evidently has assured the dealers that restrictions on mileage will not penalize them in the delivery of fuel. The OPA is making an inspection at first hand of the dealers' problem, to be considered in reaching an early decision regarding further modifications of period rationing and other requirements.

There is a certain amount of complaining from every class of business hit by war restrictions. That is only natural. But it is not believed that the complaints of the fuel oil dealers have been actuated by merely selfish considerations and they seem to have ground for legitimate fears that the whole retail delivery system will break down unless modifications in the original rationing plan are made. Much of the oil now in the householders' tanks, for instance, was stored before cold weather created a sudden and urgent demand. Under the period coupon system, already modified to some extent, a great many people may exhaust their supplies at the same time, creating a situation that would exceed the delivery capacity of the dealers. Some of this can be avoided by delivering more oil than is permitted for one period now.

Everybody realizes the seriousness of the oil shortage and the inevitability of much personal inconvenience and perhaps some real suffering. It is also realized that everything possible has been done to move supplies. Such unpreventables are not the cause of complaints over the fuel oil rationing. And if there is a sincere effort on the part of the authorities to examine the rationing program through the eyes of the dealers and if there is willingness to make every helpful change that can be made. the authorities will have the dealers and their customers working with them to make the rationing program

Emphasis on Technology

The announcement of the Government's program for the training of approximately 250,000 young men along technical lines correlated to the problem of winning the war will be received with satisfaction by the majority of those most directly concerned in it. American boys long ago anticipated the prevailing crisis, realized that they would be wanted for national service and made whatever psychological adjustments were requisite in preparation for conscription. The call which now is coming to them carries no surprise, no shock. which they did not expect. Rather, the plan set forth by the Secretaries of War and the Navy Thursday represents just about what they had hoped might be arranged.

All college students in medicine, engineering and approved technical subjects who are within two years of graduation will be permitted to finish their courses. Perhaps those who have completed only their preliminary studies in the same specialties likewise may be granted continuance at their work. The need for men skilled in science of every sort is bound to increase during the next decade. Boys whose minds are inclined to technical endeavor certainly should be encouraged to be faithful to their bent. The whole purpose of the program is to speed up the education of youthful citizens who, whether in the Army or the Navy, can contribute efficiently to the business of achieving victory over enemies who admittedly are cunning and clever in the tactics of aggression. Imperatively, then, the emphasis must be on practicality. There will be no time, no facilities for the mere embroidery of learning. Mr. Stimson bravely faced the inevitable question regarding the "destruction" of so-called "liberal education" in America, conceding that the Army plan temporarily will have a deleterious influence in that respect "so far as the able-bodied men of college age are concerned." But he denied that there is any authentic danger to the cultural standards of the country-save that of losing the war, in which event there would be no hope for anything idealistic. Such an attitude undoubtedly is correct. The Secretary of War, had he wished, might have argued with reason that the Nation will be bene- Lease-Lend Act. Sted through an illimitable future by present concentration on scientific studies. Probably there was a time when college and university opportunities were luxuries to be accepted casually and without much sense of obligation to society at large. It is freely confessed that numbers of people have received diplomas in the past without having earned them by labor worthy of the name. The time for "conspicuous waste" of that variety, however, has departed. Hereafter the world will be a place in which every individual must justify his existence in terms of useful contributions to the common welfare. Civilization, when peace has been accomplished, is to be a benefaction to the entirety of the human race. Such is the meaning of this war. The Army and Navy program for streamlining and accelerating technical instruction is intended to have immediate expedient application, but its impact should be felt constructively for centuries yet to dawn.

Desert Fox Hunt

Announcements from Cairo and London that a large section of Marshal Rommel's retreating forces has been overtaken and trapped by the pursuing British Eighth Army come as a pleasant surprise. When Rommel abandoned his strong position at El Agheila without a fight, it was generally assumed that he had left only a thin screen of troops and that the main body of his forces was well on its way to Tripoli, the main Axis base, some 500 miles to the westward. It was likewise assumed that even this slender rearguard would make good its escape, because British dispatches from the Tripolitanian front emphasized the maze of Axis land mines through which the pursuers had to pick their way.

Now, however, we are informed that British mechanized vanguards have raced ahead so fast that they have outflanked a large portion of Rommel's army less than 100 miles west of El Agheila. This force, consisting of picked Germans with many tanks and mobile artillery, is caught between the British outflanking units and the main body of the Eight Army coming up from behind. Unless Rommel turns in his flight and involves more of his forces, the fate of his rearguard is apparently sealed.

The question at once arises why Rommel, reputed a skillful tactician in desert warfare and known even to his foes as "the desert fox," should have been caught in such a trap. The most likely answer is his inferiority in the air. This nemesis has dogged his footsteps all the way across North Africa. Persistent Allied aerial bombing of his supply lines was originally responsible for his defeat at El Alamein, and then took a terrible toll of his retreating columns across Cyrenaica to his temporary hideout at El Agheila. Indeed, his escape on that retreat was due largely to a spell of bad weather which obscured visibility and grounded Allied planes.

Rommel's present retreat toward Tripoli has no such helpful cloud cover. The weather is fine, and his columns, strung out along a single coastal highway with only occasional inland detours, are plain targets for Allied air squadrons, working in ceaseless relays both by day and by moonlight, their command of the skies being virtually unchallenged by Axis aircraft. This unremitting aerial bombing has literally telescoped the retreating columns. breaking their line at many points and causing numberless delays while road blocks due to blasted trucks and tanks were cleared away. It is this crippling process, slowing Rommel's retreat more than his land mines have delayed the enemy's advance. that has enabled the British to gain on the hunted quarry and to encircle the rearguard. With something like 400 miles still to go before reaching Tripoli, the Axis remnants may be badly battered and disorganized in this prolonged ordeal. Furthermore, Tripoli itself will presumably be merely another way station toward the ultimate destination, which is Tunisia. For the past week, Allied air scouts have reported troops and trucks moving westward from Tripoli toward the Tunisian border, some 100 miles away. The indications point clearly to a concentration of all Axis forces in North Africa for a final stand in Tunisia. The less Rommel can get thither, the easier will be the task of the Allied armies for the final squeeze play which will eject the Axis from their last African foothold.

Congress Does Its Bit

The Seventy-seventh Congress has done its bit toward preparing the country for total war, and its "bit" has been very considerable indeed. The purse strings of the Nation have been loosened to permit the expenditure of more than $200,000,000,000 for the war program. Power in greater measure than ever before in America's history has been delegated to the President. The economic life of the people has been completely revamped, through the enactment of the price control law, through taxation and through the Selective Service Act. The life of the Seventy-seventh Congress was divided into two distinct phases. The first, preparation for national defense and extension of aid to the Allied powers fighting the Axis. The second, actual participation in the war. During the first phase, sharp divisions arose in the Congress-with party lines disregarded frequently-over the foreign policy of the administration. Charges were made that the course pursued was leading the country into war. Bitter was the debate over the

gress acted as a unit to declare a state of war existing between the United States and the Axis powers, in rapid succession. It was virtually a unit in passing the huge appropriations needed for the Army and the Navy and for military equipment of all kinds. It was prodigal in its grant of "war powers" to President Roosevelt. Division of opinion arose over the character of price fixing legislation. Violent disagreement arose over the proper persons and the proper manner of handling farm prices. In the main, however, Congress acted with promptness and harmony on the important measures. Nevertheless, the Congress was made the target of critics dissatisfied with the conduct of the war at home and abroad. It was held up to ridicule because it voted pensions for members of Congres at this time. It was denounced because additional price control legislation was delayed, while the representatives of farm States fought for better terms for American agriculture.

In recent weeks, the Congress has viewed with distaste and alarm the maze into which the people have been drawn through countless regulations and questionnaires, put out by Government agencies, including the WPB and OPA. It has been further alarmed by the Government's handling of such essentials as oil and gasoline. Many of its members are looking to the new Congress to deal drastically with these problems provided a better system and a better administration are not supplied promptly by the Executive.

Gasoline Crisis

The ban on gasoline sales to holders of A, B and C cards, except for extreme emergencies, was caused by what the President has described as a hurry-up call for fuel from the North African fighting front. As was to have been expected, the motoring public has responded cheerfully to this demand upon them for sacrifice, and they will be willing to lay up their cars for whatever period may be necessary to supply the Army with the fuel it needs for combat opera-

Nevertheless, this incident is not without its disturbing aspects. The nature of the fuel emergency which arose in North Africa has not been disclosed, and presumably cannot be disclosed for military reasons. But it is perfectly evident that the authorities in charge of civilian petroleum supplies were taken entirely by surprise, and have had to resort to the hastiest kind of stop-gap measures to prevent a disastrous breakdown of transportation in the New York area. If this means only that, because of an extraordinary military situation, the sale of gasoline to civilians has to be curbed for a few days until supplies can be replenished, it is not a serious matter. But if this is not the case—if we may expect a succession of these hurry-up calls from the military fronts—then it is necessary that some provision be made to protect essential civilian gasoline supplies from the danger of total exhaustion.

How this is to be done is a matter to be worked out by the President, Petroleum Administrator Ickes and the military authorities. Obviously, the best plan would be some arrangement whereby reasonable notice of a forthcoming demand would be given by the military authorities, thus enabling Mr. Ickes and his associates to make advance preparations. But this, of course, would not be feasible in the case of a bona fide emergency. In these circumstances, it would seem that the most to be hoped for is an understanding that truly essential civilian requirements cannot be disregarded, even though legitimate military needs must have first call on the available resources. There is a point below which civilian gasoline supplies cannot be reduced without breaking down the war effort, and in the long run a breakdown on the domestic front might be no less disastrous than a military reverse. The best planning cannot protect against any and all emergencies, but if appropriate weight is given to the factor of essential civilian needs in the over-all program, we can at least be assured that shortages such as the one now confronting the Eastern Seaboard can be held to an absolute minimum.

Wake Up, America

The war shortage of alarm clocks, as was inevitable, has been called alarming by many who could not resist the temptation. And as is usual in cases of shortage, a substitute is offered. According to report, Federal officials, unidentified, suggest that war workers wake up to the seriousness of the problem and employ roosters to get them up early.

Strangely, they seem to have overlooked the most efficient sleep smashers of all, small children, beside whom even the most clanging clock and the most raucous rooster are mere soothing lullabies. If the sleepy war worker has none of his own, let him borrow some neighbor's for the duration, preferably a brother and sister of near the same age, each convinced that the other is of the wrong sex and willing to prove it in combat. Setting the alarm may be troublesome at first, but after a few nights one may find how many hours they sleep, and send them to bed according to the time desired for the alarm. Not only is the war worker waked, but he will have no chance to drop off to sleep again. He will have to stay awake, to keep the children from waking up the rest of the neighborhood, not all of whom will be war workers. He will wake up to another fact, too. namely, that Macbeth was a piker. He murdered sleep only once in his but a public service.

Finnish Relations With America Clouded

Writer Discusses History Of Struggle Involving Russia and Axis

By Bertram Benedict. The United States is in something of an anomalous position in remaining at peace with Finland. The Soviet Union and Great Britain, our allies, are at war with Finland, a Finnish Army is on Russian soil and German forces are using Finnish territory as a base from which to attack United Nations convoys

Obviously, the United States hopes to detach Finland from the Axis military camp. Finland, on its side, has a bear by the tail as long as German forces are in the country in sufficient force to take it over, also to execute Finnish leaders instrumental in pulling out of the war. Whether Russia is in a position or a frame of mind to lend aid to Finland against Germany is highly problematical; certainly Great Britain is in no geographical position to do so.

In October, 1939, soon after occupying Eastern Poland, the Soviet Union made demands on Finland which Finland, although willing to grant them in part, declared would reduce her to the status of a Soviet protectorate. On November 30, Russia opened war. As a result Russia was expelled from the League of Nations in the following month for unjustified aggression, although the League had taken no such action against Japan in 1931, nor against Italy in 1935. For a time Finland held out, but was soon forced to surrender. In the peace treaty of March 12, 1940, Finland ceded about one-tenth of its area, containing about one-eighth of its total population of 3,650,000.

In September, 1940, Finland, over British protests, granted to Germany the right to use certain Finnish railroads to transport troops to Northern Norway. On June 17, 1941, five days before Germany invaded Russia, Finland withdrew from the League of Nations. Russia declared that at the same time Finland mobilized its army and evacuated civilians from certain cities, thus evincing bellicose intentions. At all events, when Hitler announced his war on Russia, he spoke of German troops being "united with their Finnish comrades" to protect Finnish soil.

Actual hostilities seem to have been precipitated by Russian air attacks. Moscow claims that these were delivered only against German forces and depots in Finland, also that almost at the same time Finnish forces attacked Russian positions. Some opposition to the new war was manifested within Finland; it increased as Finland regained all the lost territory and went across the old Russian frontier. Now Finland holds about as much territory in Russia as Russia took from Finland in 1940. For some months the Finno-Russian front has been quiet. Finnish forces occupy a part of the Murmansk - Leningrad Railroad, but outh of the junction with a line running east, over which transportation to Moscow is available. Finland has signed (November, 1941) the Anti-Comintern Pact, but not the Berlin-Rome-Tokio military alliance.

In 1939 American sympathy was almost unanimously with Finland, and Congress voted Finland a credit of $10,-000,000, later increased to $30,000,000 for non-military purposes. Congress also authorized Finland to postpone her war debt payments due in 1940, 1941 and 1942. In June, 1941, the United States froze Finnish funds and credits in the United States. In November Secretary of State Hull publicly warned Finland that its course was alienating American sympathy, and in the following month, after Pearl Harbor, the United States took over Finnish vessels in American ports. The United States did not declare war on Finland at the same time as on Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria, but these three Balkan states had previously declared war on the United States. In July, 1942, the United States closed its consulates in Finland and Finnish consulates in the United States: it did not follow the example of Germany, Italy and Japan in sending cordial greetings on Finland's 25th anniversary of independence on December 6, 1942.

Wants Teachers' Salaries Considered by New Congress,

To the Editor of The Star

We hardly can believe it. Congress adjourned without giving our local school teachers and personnel any salary increase. We might think it must have been by accident but for the fact that apparent negligence on the part of Congress in meeting the tribulations of these worthy local servants is quite Congress saw to it that the pay of our policemen and firemen was raised, but not our teachers. Then why were the claims of these worthy servants ignored? Don't they labor night and day, often under severe strain? Their minds are not only crowded by their professional duties, but too often with endless community duties, endless clerical details of an exacting system. They are America's front line.

Consider the kind of teacher our local educational system demands. Her work is highly specialized. She must be skilled by long and intensive training and development in qualifying for her career. Then after her appointment all of the time taken to keep abreast with her profession must be at her own expense and time. And when all of this is done she is on an income level below that of an unskilled laborer.

Who is responsible for this penny pinching of these servants? It has no virtue and is shameful parsimony.

The blame and shame for this injustice lies at the doors of the citizens civic fraternal and business groups in this city. Congress should be importuned when it convenes to give this matter attention to the end that the necessary appropriation be authorized without fur-

THIS AND THAT

If you live in the suburbs, and want ! to give the squirrels in your yard a real Christmas treat, fix them up a coconut shell.

Coconuts are still available, and one of these, hollowed out and filled with sunflower seed, makes something any squirrel will like.

The filled coconut shell must first be hung by a long wire in the center of an arch or from the limb of a tree. The wire is necessary because the squirrels will bite through any other material. We have seen this arrangement advocated as a means of outwitting the squirrels and have wondered what kind of squirrels the advocates have had in their own yard. There are no squirrels in our yard bet would regard the coconut shell stuffed with sunflower seed as anything except a direct challenge. Nor have we ever seen a squirrel which could not solve the problem offered him. Each one does it in his own way, and that is where the fun comes in. * * * * Recently we put up such a coconut feeder. It was hung by a length of bell cord wire about 18 inches long from the center of an arch. Below the shell about a foot is the top of a gate. Several days went by before any squirrel tried his paw at the device. For those two days chickadees, titmice and nuthatches found the going good. At last the squirrels began to take notice. Why they had not done so before we do not know, because they are the same squirrels which frolicked on the same coconut last year. Maybe they were just being coy.

One big fellow, the proud possessor of a perfectly tremendous tail, first ran up a tree about 4 feet away.

He eyed the shell with a mixture of evident distrust and longing, but when he saw a chickadee pop in the hole bodily and come out again bearing the prize of a fine sunflower seed, he hesitated no longer.

Hoisting his banner in the breeze, he leaped through the air with the greatest of ease.

Down on the top of the arch he came. Below him stretched the wire.

This was his first attempt, and he was not at all sure just how to go about it. He looked down the wire for a time. Holding on with his hind feet to the top of the arch where the wire went around. he walked down the wire with his fore paws, as far as he could without letting go with his hind paws.

This did not satisfy him. He did not think he could make it. He decided to try again. This time he ran down the side of the arch to the top of the gate. He could reach up and touch the coconut, but this was too easy.

where it was attached to the middle of the arch.

His marvelous little paws, so like and down he slid.

By Charles E. Tracewell.

His body passed the shell until his fore paws came to the end of the wire. And there he was, seated on top of the shell as neatly as you please. All he had to do was to poke in his head and come up with a seed.

We watched him eat one seed after another for a long time. His rate of consumption ranged from two to four seconds per seed. Unless you had seen it done you would not believe that the outer covering could be cracked so quickly and the seed devoured at such a rate.

All this time the coconut was bobbing around like a small boat in a stormy sea. Part of the movement was due to the quick and incessant motions of the animal, but there was a strong wind blowing, too, and this kept waving the coconut shell boat and its furry mariner in a most decided manner.

There are few sights in the home garden more amusing than this.

* * * * After he had gotten his stomach full, he descended to the gate and from that vantage point made several practice leaps to the wire, down which he slid with evident gusto.

We will never have any more difficulty in identifying this particular squirrel because he will always get into the coconut shell in this one and only way for

In this way the joy of life is never ending. We feel sure that once this squirrel feeder and gymnasium has been seen in operation, no one will begrudge them the seed which is put into it. There need be no fear that the birds will not get their full share, too. Squirfels are so volatile that they never stick to anything very long. It takes a song bird only a few seconds to dart in and fly away triumphantly with a big seed.

What is more, the squirrels in swinging on the wire kick out many whole seeds, which fall to the ground at the bottom of the gate. Recalls Mark Twain's Story

Of How to Make Difficulties.

Your paper recently stated that Leon Henderson had asserted "he was damn proud of the fuel oil rationing job," and he would do it the same way again, except he would have about a million people working on it. He might as well appoint all fuel oil users as workers and let each one process his own application. A lot of oil users do not share his pride. Most of us, I believe, thought we would receive about 20 or 25 per cent of what we used last winter. A straight percentage cut, even if as much as onethird, would have been fairer to the great majority of users, and produced no more inequalities than the Einstein-type formula that so laboriously was worked up. There would have been less dissatisfaction with allotments and a lot less time wasted by both ration board workers and oil users. Exceptional cases would have been spotted and adjusted. But that would have been entirely too simple for Mr. Henderson's rah-rah boys and much below their dignity. They were in about the same fix as Tom Sawyer when he and Huckleberry Finn were trying to figure out a scheme to rescue the run-away slave, Jim, they found confined in an old cabin at Aunt Sally's. Although they had access to the key of the cabin and easily could have taken Jim right out through the door. Tom said that would be too simple. and wouldn't be approved by the best authorities. "And so it makes it so rotten difficult to get up a difficult plan. You got to invent all the difficulties," he said. They decided to dig a tunnel under the cabin wall and, as it would be too simple to use a pick and shovel, they would dig it with a case knife and a

Mr. Henderson says the percentage plan would have penalized the householder who had weather-stripped and insulated his house. My house is weather-stripped, and a couple years ago I had it insulated, which cut down oil consumption by 20 per cent or more. I saw no space on the application sheet to show this information, and my allotment is a little less than two-thirds of the amount I used last winter, a mild winter.

The papers at various times have described OPA spokesmen as a doctors of philosophy, doctors of psychology, youthful professors of economy, etc. It would be encouraging to taxpayers and buyers of War stamps and bonds if they felt sure that their money went to pay salaries really earned by some doctors of plain common sense. Especially when one considers the blunders of the "X" cards, the three weeks' advance notice to the coffee hoarders, tire inspection, and now this amazing oil formula FUEL OIL USER.

Fuel Rationing Problems As Seen by One Working Woman.

are frantic as well as cold. Could you take up a few additional points for us? Is it fair to base allotments on last winter's consumption when that was the mildest in seven? Despite a lower thermostat we have had to use more oil this season than in previous ones because cold weather set in earlier and we had a briefer than usual Indian summer.

1935-36 1,587 gals. 1938-39 1,557 gals. 1936-37 1,450 " 1939-40 1,940 1937-38 1,580 " 1940-41 1.290 1941-42 1,147

Allotment for 1942-43 855 Should allowance be made for those over 70 years who, although not bed ridden, are not active enough to keep warm in a 65-degree house and whose resistance to colds is low?

Could ration board members and staffs be available once in a while in the evenings and publish their hours in the newspapers? Women Government workers who have jobs, not positions, are jealous of their 26 "vacation" days because those 208 hours must be stretched out to go on business errands, nurse our sick, wait for repairmen who do not show up, and do the many other things that a woman must do when she is running a house as well as holding down an essential Government assignment. Must we spend quite so many of these precious hours on ration business and on futile attempts to snare an elusive "some one" on the board?

Can something be done for women who are trying to keep intact the homes their men are fighting for while the men are at war? Will OPA "crack down" as they threatened to do on women who have not "converted" even though those women last summer were told: "No materials," "no workmen" or "no job till after January 1"? If OPA worked without letup as these women are doing from 6 a.m. until 10 or 11 p.m. with not much rest on Sundays (and no Sunday rest as soon as they lose their Saturday half-holidays) would they have the energy to "crack down" on anybody?

Does the public in general realize what is going on in the homes of the women who did "convert"? There are no men for hire to attend to coal furnaces: women who never saw a coal furnace before can get no one to give them instructions for running them, and some homes remain cold until sick women recover enough to go back to stoking. I wonder how happy two fighting men would be if they could see their tiny, gallant mother of 60 who rented the "boys'" rooms to help with the housing problem, as she shovels coal, removes ashes and carries bucket after bucket of ashes through a long back yard so that a burly young ashman (who flunked his draft physical) will not have to waste his strength in opening her gate and walking to her back door.

OPA Staff Needs Full Overhauling

Public Must Be Sold Importance Of Rationing

By DAVID LAWRENCE. There are two aspects to the Leon Henderson resignation as OPA administrator. One is that the job of rationing will not be much easier for his successor -it's a tough task for any one. The other is that the departure of one man will be meaningless unless the basic policy and administrative staff undergo an overhauling.

The primary mistake in the OPA is its in- David Lawrence. ability to sell to the public the importance of rationing and the reasons for it. Public relations is perhaps the most vital factor of all, because once the co-operation of the public is assured, almost any scheme can be made to work.

In defense of Leon Henderson's effort to make his rationing schemes work, it must be said that he never had the entire responsibility. Decisions with respect to fuel oil, for instance, were affected by what WPB did or what the petroleum administrator did, to say nothing of the restrictive orders from the Office of Defense Transportation.

President Roosevelt, in permitting Leon Henderson to resign, recognized that a new hand might do better with this perplexing job, but matters will not be improved unless authority is clear-cut and all phases of a given problem can be grouped under a single administrator.

More important still is the selection of staff officers. Business men have had little to do with some of these programs because of a predisposition to consider them too much concerned with their own industry. As a matter of fact, this fallacy has cost Washington and the whole program more than any other single mistake made.

Little Selfish Interest.

For the rare and occasional case where a selfish interest is given prior consideration by a business man in government, there are thousands of instances in which the interests of the Government are given the better of the argument. Actually, a business man familiar with the intricacies of a given industry and one who is going to spend his career after the war in that same industry is more likely to be fair than unfair, scrupulous rather than unscrupulous, because he must live with all his colleagues and competitors thereafter Declining Under Prosecution and competitors thereafter.

It is hard for war executives in high places to persuade business men to come to Washington to take administrative posts. The Truman Committee, with all its constructive work, has done more to discourage the dollar-a-year men from coming ence. For the Truman Committee the sentencing yesterday of Gulam ment, who listened to "Moslem" has been imposed upon by the labor Bogans, 45, alias Elijah Mohammed, meetings here as an undercover reppoliticians and lobbyists who, the and David Jones, 41, both colored, resentative of the Federal Bureau moment they see an important business man in a given post, begin to attack his business affiliations.

The bombs are made and the statisticians should be given things to do which are not administrative and there should be some efficient administrators brought into the picture. #### Rationing Essential.

But, above all, no matter who is appointed to the position of price administrator, there must be a new telationship between the OPA and the public. Men of the type of B. M. Baruch or President Conant directed him to defend himself only of Harvard or President Compton if attacked. of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who comprised the Baruch Rubber Committee, have the confidence of the people. Had they been entrusted with the task of carrying through to the public with other tasks, there would have been a greater measure of acceptance. Rationing is essential, because the inary. Yet large segments of the public don't believe the need is imperative. Here is where the voice of men of prestige is required.

Leon Henderson as an economic adviser, to check on the figures of other economists, could be a valuable man in Government, but it was a mistake to ask a man who had never held elective office or occupied an administrative position in a large business enterprise to tackle a job with which, to begin with, Congress as the representative of thousands of protesting citizens, was unsympathetic. Maybe Senator Brown of Michigan, who is slated to succeed Mr. Henderson, will have better luck. He is well liked on Capitol Hill by both parties and is rated as able and fair-minded.

Part of Afrika Korps Saved

Sizable Force May Have Escaped To Tripoli, Maj. Eliot Believes

By MAJ. GEORGE FIELDING ELIOT.

The most immediately interesting military question with regard to Marshal Erwin Rommel's retreat from Agheila is that of the distribution of his forces. At Agheila as previously pointed out in these articles, his action was that of a typical rear guardforcing the enemy to deploy and make all p r eparations for an as-Maj. Eliot. sault, and then himself withdrawing as the assault was about to be delivered. What is not clear is the crucial point as to whether the bulk of Rommel's force was still at Agheila and is now fleeing westward toward Tripoli, or whether he already had succeeded in withdrawing important elements of his Afrika Korps to safety in Western Tripolitania.

If the latter is the case, the German purpose is, of course, to concentrate the whole of their North African forces in Tunisia, and we may expect to hear of German forces moving from Tripoli northward along the coastal road toward Tunis. If, on the other hand, by reason of lack of fuel or lack of transport, Rommel has been unable to get very much of his fighting force away from Agheila, it begins to look as though the Afrika Korps may be broken up piecemeal along the cruel desert road to Tripoli and that very little of it will escape.

Allies Rule Skies. The British apparently have complete air superiority in this area, and where such superiority exists the capabilities of the airplane in pursuit are formidable indeed. The action at Wadi Matratin indicates that Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery's pursuit on the ground likewise is being pushed forward vigorously, which is evidence that his supply system is working with that efficiency and precision which was to be expected. Not only have we already seen one example of Gen. Montgomery's remarkable abilities in the organization of lines of communication but we mustremember that in the present instance his communications have been almost entirely free from hostile air interference.

However, the rapidity of the German withdrawal suggests that the German elements at Agheila were possessed of considerable mobility themselves and it still seems quite likely that there was nothing left there except those mechanized and motorized forces which could be withdrawn quickly when the time came. It does seem probable that Rommel underestimated the swiftness and vigor of the British pursuit, but even so there remains a very good possibility that Rommel has contrived to move at least a part-how large a part is the great question-of his original force westward to areas where it can be refitted and reinforced for operations in Tunisia.

Plan Last Stand in Tunisia. The German foothold in Africa is becoming more and more constricted in size. It is quite possible that in the end the Germans plan to consolidate and hold a small area in Northeastern Tunisia as long as possible to maintain control of the Sicilian Strait. Their great difficulty in so doing is, of course, their tenuous line of communications, which cannot be maintained by sea and which requires the constant and active presence of a large air force to protect it.

How long the Germans will consider the maintenance of their Tunisian position to be worth the constant drain on their air power remains to be seen. Certainly, from their point of view, a trained soldier already in Africa is worth half a dozen soldiers sitting in Sicily awaiting transportation to Africa which may get them there or may not. For this reason the extent of loss inflicted on Rommel's retreating army by the British is of great importance.

It must, of course, be expected that the rate of Montgomery's advance will slow down as he proceeds westward. He is still a long way from Tripoli, and the closer he gets to the Axis air bases in western Tripolitania the greater will be the enemy interference with his supply columns. He is marching through a completely barren and waterless country, along a coast devoid of ports, where naval support is of little value to him. He is, therefore, not likely to take Tripoli or even Misurata in one grand rush.

But when all this has been said, it is nevertheless plain that the great Allied pincers in North Africa are closing in upon the Axis forces and that the days of Axis domination of any part of the African continent are definitely numbered.

Nazis Disdain Laval's Offer of Quisling Army As They Act to Extend French Labor Draft

By CONSTANTINE BROWN. Chief of Government Pierre Laval is now pinch-hitting for Marshal Henri Philippe Petain and has become the factual head of what he calls the French armed forces, but which in fact are only According Constantine Brown. diers will fight side by side with the Germans. The only thing standing in the way of his accomplishing this desire is the fact that there is no longer such a thing as a French army. The Nazis are fully aware of this and have treated with haughty coolness the advances of the latest Quisling.

The French army and navy were disbanded after the Germans penetrated Unoccupied France in November and a military police force armed with rifles and small machine guns was maintained under the orders of the German Field Marshal Karl Gerd von Rundstedt.

Soon afterward Laval is reported to have offered to conscript a new army "imbued with the new spirit" of collaboration. The officers' corps had been weeded out and Laval said the young men at his disposal were all reliable and unlikely to pull "another Darlan" on the Axis.

It appears that the Nazis, who are beginning to feel the pinch of manpower now that they have to fight on two fronts, may have been inclined to accept Laval's offer had it not been for the formal opposition of Marshal Rundstedt himself. The marshal, of course, has intelligence officers everywhere and their reports were definitely opposed to such a plan. Can't Trust One in 100.

The Germans reported that there was not one man in a hundred throughout France who could be trusted. There might be quite a number of young men between 18 and 25 who would be willing to sign up for the duration and undergo military training, but their motives will be join to get food and clothing for themselves and possibly some advantages for their families. But they would be less reliable than the medieval mercenary troops. Their loyalty would go only to the extent of their pay and supplies of uniforms and If Laval's proposal were accepted, 10 to 20 divisions could be mustered without trouble.

But after these men were trained and equipped there would be no assurance whatsoever, the Nazi military men maintain, that at a given critical moment whole regiments would not go over to the Allies.

The French Legion fighting in Russia has not proved particlarly valuable and has been kept mostly behind the actual fighting line. And this legion was handpicked from men who had a clear record of being anti-communists. An army such as Laval suggested, Nazi military authorities concluded, could not be relied on to fight even in Russia, much less against an American or British

It is equally doubtful whether a sufficient number of "indoctrinated officers" could be found to lead a new French army. Practically the entire officers' corps is still loval to the "Marechal." but Marshal Petain is now known to be less than a figurehead. According to reports from neutral countries, a large number of generals and colonels besides Gen. Maxime Weygand were arrested after Admiral Darlan's desertion and the sabotaging of the French fleet at Toulon.

Those who have escaped arrest have been placed on the retired lists and sent home where they are under the vigilant eye of Gestapo agents. The few who are still in uniform because they command the military police or happen to be particular pals of Laval, Jacques Doriot or Marcel Deat, are equally suspected and their services are accepted for more or less perfunctory duties. Hence, the Laval plan to create a French army to fight on the side of the Nazis appears doomed from the beginning.

But while the Germans have turned down this proposition they have made a counter-offer which has been accepted. Instead of proceeding to draft young Frenchmen for military service Berlin has asked Laval to proceed with drafting French workers, to go the Reich. Because of danger of Allied bombings from England and North Africa, factories in certain French areas are being removed rapidly into Prussia, Czechoslovakia and Poland. This wholesale removal of machine and factory hands had started on a relatively small scale about three months ago but was effected mostly by a voluntary departure of the workmen who were offered good pay and a fair quantity of food.

ne voluntary system is now coming to an end and Laval soon will issue a proclamation ordering the French workers removed to the Reich in large bodies. German SS troops who have made their appearance in the strategic portions of France will see that Laval's orders are obeyed instantly. Whether Laval likes this version of co-operation or not is immaterial. So long as he wants to hang on to his position he must play the Nazi tune.

It's enough to make Francis Scott Key charge one of those ramparts -ne was watching when he wrote our national anthem, the way the song gets treated these day. A night club is no place for the national anthem. It's a little bit sickening to see a bartender poise a Martini in mid-air when he hears the first strains of the song that tells of the flag that will never be lowered. It is a little bit disgusting to see a tipsy gent try to come to attention as the brass hits the high notes that tell of the home of Men are dying under the flag, just as they did when Mr. Key wrote the sight, or even the thought of the sight, of that flag standing out in the wind, do not belong in smokefilled, satin-lined rooms of pleasure.

Part of Double Feature.

The same is true of moving picture shows. "The Star Spangled Banner" is being played at the end of each complete program. It has become, mind you, a part of the double feature. It is just another part of a program that records the perils of Lana Turner, the growth and development of Betty Grable, and the sarong activities of the Messrs. Abbott and Costello.

It is a shame. It can't help but be a shame, that the song that is carried in the hearts of our fighting men all over the world, is with them when they take battle stations against the foe, is played as ushers show people to their seats, other people waddle down the aisles, and usherettes lead people to their seats in the loge and mezzanine.

It seems to me that the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner" should be reserved for those times when men and women are worthy of listening to it. It should serve as an inspiration, not as just another piece of music that the bands have on their racks.

Haegg Is Forgotten Athlete of 1942

Not that it will alter the course of the war or even cause anyly to miss a stroke with the soup spoon if they're rude enough while eating but there's a suspicion a character named body to miss a stroke with the soup spoon if they're rude enough to read while eating, but there's a suspicion a character named Gunder Haegg may qualify as the most-neglected athlete of 1942.

At this season, when basket ball, ice hockey, etc., fail to give the sports pages enough to get excited about, it's customary to name the year's outstanding athlete, the goofiest events, the biggest disappointments, etc., to take up the slack. That is where Mr. Haegg, of whom you never may have heard, enters the scene.

When it came time to name the year's outstanding athlete, Sweden's Mr. Haegg was neglected. The distinction went to Georgia's Frankie By the Associated Press. Sinkwich, who seems to be indorsed as the Nation's top college football player. Bluntly, Sinkwich doesn't deserve it.

We're guilty. Without thinking too much about it we named Johnny the opinion of writers throughout Bearley of the St. Louis Cardinals the big boy, with Don Hutson of the the country, was engineered by Green Bay Packers second and Haegg third. The finish in the Associated Press poll was: 1, Sinkwich; 2, Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox; 3, Hutson; 4, Beazley, and 5, Haegg.

Breaks Eight Track Records in Year

Haegg is privileged to ask, "What goes on?" Here's a fellow that could take Paavo Nurmi and Glenn Cunningham on the best days they teams or individuals in the annual ever had and run them into the cinders. Here's a fellow who breaks Associated Press poll of 86 sports eight world track records in a year, yet finishes fifth when outstanding editors. Fifty of the voters awarded athletes of 1942 are mentioned.

Sinkwich is the Nation's best college football player and, therefore, the world's outstanding athlete according to the vote. Georgia's Frankie was playing on a team of 11 men, 10 of whom contributed to his fame. When he threw a pass somebody had to be there to catch it or Mr. Sinkwich wasn't so astounding.

When Frankie ran even Georgia's most enthusiastic rooters will admit he required an occasional gap to sprint through. The gap was created by his mates. When he punted he needed protection to get it away. Haegg was on his own in his running-picking 'em up and putting 'am down rapidly enough to break records that have existed since stop Sinkwich's ability is a combination of fact and opinion. Haegg's ability is based on fact and fact alone. He broke records from 1,500 to 8,000 meters, at 1, 2 and 3 miles without aid.

Higher Rated Stars Are Not Peerless

Williams' claim to fame is the fact he batted .356. Just a few of the batters who have hit better than .356 include Nap Lajoie, Ed Delahanty, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Bill Terry, George Sisler, Harry Heilman, Babe Ruth, Heinie Manush, Goose Goslin, Lou Fonseca, Al Simmons, Lou Gehrig, Charley Gehringer, etc. How many athletes have run a competitive mile 12 4:04.6, two miles in 8:47.8 or three miles in 13:32.4? The answer in mch instance is Haegg and Haegg only.

Hutson established numerous pass-catching records with the Packers, out, as in the case of Sinkwich, he had help. He had the help of one of the fine passers of all time in Cecil Isbell. Haegg, we repeat, was on Beazley won 22 games as a rookie, then won two more in the World Series. Beazley was one-ninth of a team. He was the team's most batting championship. The St. Amportant part when he was pitching, perhaps, but he had eight players Louis Browns were fifth with 29 there to help him at all times. The list is long of pitchers who have won 22 games or more in a season, but the list of athletes who have run the fastest 1,500, 3,000 and 5,000 meters in history begins and ends

Gunder Gets His Marks Without Help

It adds up to the fact that Sinkwich, Williams, Hutson and Beazley sport. are considered better than their opponents. Of the quartet only Hutson did anything new. He established records, but he had help. Haegg properts he came up with the hest ner ances of all times at a variety of distances and nobody contributed to his success. When he was on that track he required no help and couldn't summon it if he did.

Haegg may not have been appreciated because he did his running some 3,500 miles—give or take a few kilometers—from these shores. But they space the minutes, seconds and split-seconds just as accurately in Skid back to 1934, when Nurmi, Cunningham, Bill Bonthron and Lauri Lehtinen of Finland were the big shots of distance running. That year Cunningham held the recognized competitive mile record at 4:06.8 and was being hailed as the wonder runner. This year Haegg ran that distance in 2.2 seconds less time.

Some Apologies Due Swedish Ace

Nurmi was the world record holder at two miles with an 8:59.6 mark This year Haegg ran that distance in 8:47.8. Lehtinen held tre threemile mark at 13:50.6. Haegg merely clipped 18.2 seconds off that record. Haegg sliced 16.8 seconds off the 5,000-meter record of that year. He olipped 17.2 seconds off the 3,000-meter mark of only eight years ago. Bonthron was the 1,500-meter champ with 3:48.8. Haegg bettered that by three seconds. -

Haegg accomplished his marks in one year-those six plus two others. He wasn't named the outstanding athlete of 1942, but the record book will show him one of the outstanding athletes of all time. Haegg has some apologies coming to him.

Go Sign for Racing at Tropical Held Up by Ban on Gasoline

Horsemen Hopeful of Monday Inaugural Await Track Heads' Decision Tomorrow

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 19.—Hopeful horsemen got ready today for the opening of winter racing here Monday, without knowing whether new gasoline restrictions would sound the death knell for the sport in Florida.

The greatest crisis to confront racing in this State since pari-mutuel wagering was legalized in 1931 caused Tropical Park operators to postpone until tomorrow the go-ahead signal for the inaugural program, already lined up. They were waiting to see whether the Office of Price Administration would loosen the temporary clamp on gasoline sales put into effect yesterday. Turf circles agreed that it was a

Beau, Kayo Victor Over Larkin, Will Tackle Winner of Event

By SID FEDER,

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—The Jersey bounce, as a piece of jive, is a small chunk of music which makes sense to no one but rug-cutters, except that Beau Jack owns a piece of the world lightweight championship tolay because he is slightly acquainted with the Jersey bounce.

Beau-real name Sidney Walkers a busy little Negro flailer out of the locker room of the Augusta (Ga.) National Golf Course. He came up from Georgia to give the Jersey bounce to a guy from Jersey last night. And he gave it so well he flattened Tippy Larkin in three heats of a 15-rounder before 18,817 of the faithful in Madison Square

In making the birdies sing for the kid from Jersey, Beau hit the "hepcats" with the bounce, all right. But what he left as a means of settling the confusion over the lightweight championship, which sprang up over Sammy Angott's abdication a few weeks ago, would make the bounce resemble something out of Mozart, with slight traces of Toscanini.

Disregarding the symphonic for the moment, all Jack did was to win himself that portion of the lightweight crown recognized in New York and New Jersey.

The National Boxing Association, for instance, sings a different tune, with the chant that, regardless of the discords on the New York State Commission pipe organ, it will recognize only the winner of a national elimination tournament. Last night's shindig, says the NBA, is just the first step in that direction. And Maryland, which has its own bounce, is about to recognize the survivor of a forthcoming fuss be-tween Willie Joyce, the Gary (Ind.) individualist, and Slugger White, a Baltimore belter with an idea about fighting that wouldn't be bad for a machine gun to copy.

There is no doubt that Beau gave Pippy the Jersey bounce last night. After flooring the slim Italian in the first round with a short left hook, he went all out in the third and tossed Tippy to sleep with a right uppercut.

Tippy Is Well Iced.

The question seems to be a bit academic, since it concerned only conflicting rules, but the coaches are ready to start blowing the whistle on one another and there's no telling where it may stop. For years it's been an open secret that some of the coaches engaged in free-handed recruiting and that many players weren't averse to changing their names on Sun-days to pick up a bit of cash. As long as it wasn't too flagrant, nobody cared much, but now that basket ball definitely is in the big time and a successful team means real dough, the game seems to be suffering the same sort of growing pains that football felt in its early days. Runs Little Over Third On Track and Is Just About 50-50 in Ring

By JOHN LARDNER.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.-Eight or 10 years ago Jack Doyle, dean of the Broadway mathematics department, who died in Florida recently, told me he estimated that the favorites win 35 per cent of the time in horse racing, 50 per cent of the time in prize fights and anywhere from 80 to 90 per cent of the time in

This was an appraisal based on something like 30 years of scrutiny of the three sports in question. The old master struck an average from the shifting conditions of those 30 years and undoubtedly form was truer at certain times than at

Track form may be checked. I don't know offhand what the percentage of winning favorites was in 1942, but my guess would be that less than 35 per cent of the favorites won their races at all tracks during the year. Less, but not much less. The average still hovers around onethird. In some recent years, it may have gone to 30 per cent or lower.

In Basket Race

Racing Estimate Still Good. Remember, though, that Doyle's calculation was based on bookmaking favorites, while today parimutuels make the odds—in other words, the $2 bettor, at the track, is wholly responsible for the designation of the favorite. In 8 races out of 10 he will agree with form as conceived by professional handicappers. In the other two, he may waver sufficiently to set the stage for what the handicappers call a "false favorite"-false in their professional judgment, that is; there have been times when the public was right and the consensus wrong.

No one who studies race charts ean fail to notice that "second choices" win a great deal these days and favorites run second. Discounting the element of dishonesty among trainers and jockeys, which affects the general percentage scarcely at all, the chances are that many of those second choices would have been favorites in Doyle's heyday. The bookmaker was influenced by the public, but seldom to the extent of reversing his judgment.

rood today

Change in Fight Game. His figure of 50 per cent for winring favorites in prize fights was tased on main bouts, important main bouts, involving champions or well-known contenders. I think it is safe today to say that main-bout favorites win more often than they lose, but here again there has been a change of circumstances since the golden age of Doyle's soothsaying. Champions fought less often 20 and 30 years ago than now. This was true in all brackets, from heavyweight down. Age and inaction told against them when they finally went to work. Titleholders or uncrowned champions nowadays are in action continuously-speaking in peacetime terms-and their quality is bound to tell on the percentage figures when applied in steady doses. Ray Robinson and Willie Pep, never beaten as professionals, tilt the scales strongly. Joe Louis has been beaten only once, in some 58 fights, since turning professional. These three men, and a few others like them, always are betting fa-

On the other hand, there are enough Fritzie Zivics, Lou Novas, Lee Savolds and Lew Jenkinses, losing as often as they win after first gaining fame, to keep the fight game well within the business range of the short-end bettor.

College Football Form Gone. As for college football, now comparatively the biggest betting sport in the country, it is shot from the point of view of the form student. Doyle's estimate of 80 to 90 per cent was rational 10 years ago. In 1942, not more than 67 per cent of the favorites won in major college

The whole structure of betting form in sports should be overhauled and brought up to date, and what this country needs today, along with victory and a good nickel cigar, is a new Jack Doyle to approach the job with wisdom and devotion.

Five years ago-National Football League announced season attendance as 1,176,476, topping all previous records.

4 Hospital Beds Per 1,000 Held Excessive Here

WPB Spokesman Says Survey Shows 3.5 Would Be Adequate

A War Production Board spokesman revealed today that a recommendation against provision of four beds to each 1,000 population in the District will be one outgrowth of the survey now under way to determine the necessity for expending essential war materials in the construction of new buildings as a part of the proposed local hospital expansion

Four beds per thousand persons was the formula used by the Federal Works Agency, the Government bureau charged with investigating local hospital needs and allotting therefor, and whose recommendations now are being held up while the WPB makes its own investigation.

The Federal Works Agency allots funds made available by the Lanham Act, which is not an enabling act, but legislation designed to assure proper expenditure of funds wherever an emergency need exists. Asked today whether the FWA planned to bring the delay in the hospital program caused by the WPB survey to the attention of the President, as the responsible official for proper administration of the act. an PWA official said the agency was not planning such action and that if the matter did reach the White House it would have to get there through some other source.

The WPB survey has shown, according to the spokesman, that three and a half beds per 1.000 population would be a fairer population would be a fairer average than four beds. This conclusion, it was explained, is supported by the fact that most other cities have only a three-bed average and that use of beds in local hospitals, even during the most crowded times, has averaged only three and a half per 1,000.

The spokesman said the survey is being carried on by two experienced hospital consultants, one of them the head of a 600-bed hospital in a large Eastern city for the last eight years. The study, it was added, has been under way for two months and should be completed within the next two weeks.

He scoffed at the suggestion that politics had played any part in either the order for the investigation or recommendations which will be included in the final report. He said the study was ordered not with the thought that the District does not need the additional 1,172 beds proposed, but with the idea that these beds might be provided in the

by which the hospital projects were prepared with the aid of the United Dies; Was Domestic prepared with the aid of the United States Public Health Service, has pointed out that the WPB and FWA had reached an agreement in writing last summer as to what ma-terials are regarded as essential to the war effort. The projects as submitted were in accordance with this criteria, it was said.

The WPB spokesman said the head consultant brought here to aid the war agency in its rulings concerning priorities involving hosnitals has wide experience both in engineering and hospital administration. He was graduated in engineering from a leading American university and served in the Medical Corps during the First World War, holding a responsible assignment in a hospital in France. During his years as a consultant, he has visited practically all of the largest hos- pital of pneupitals of the country.

Will Review Report. The spokesman reported that the survey already has revealed that much of the new construction in- at St. Charles cluded in the $4,689,700 hospital program can be eliminated. He announced further that the WLB had gone into the survey solely with the war effort in mind. A board of review will consider the findings and will either reject or approve them. All recommendations are prepared after a careful investigation by the consultants. Past reports and applications have been shelved, it was explained, and new findings are based on what the specialists actually have found by their own

Expect Criticism.

"The final report, we realize, will not be received without criticism," the spokesman said, "but we believe its findings will be for the best of all concerned. Some local hospital officials already have told us that they agree with the findings of the consultants and believe that the substitute plan would be best at present Changes mentioned in the report will be those which are considered essential and which will save vital material, he added. The consultants are paying particular attention, he said, to projects for enlargement and addition of obstetrical wards, which they consider

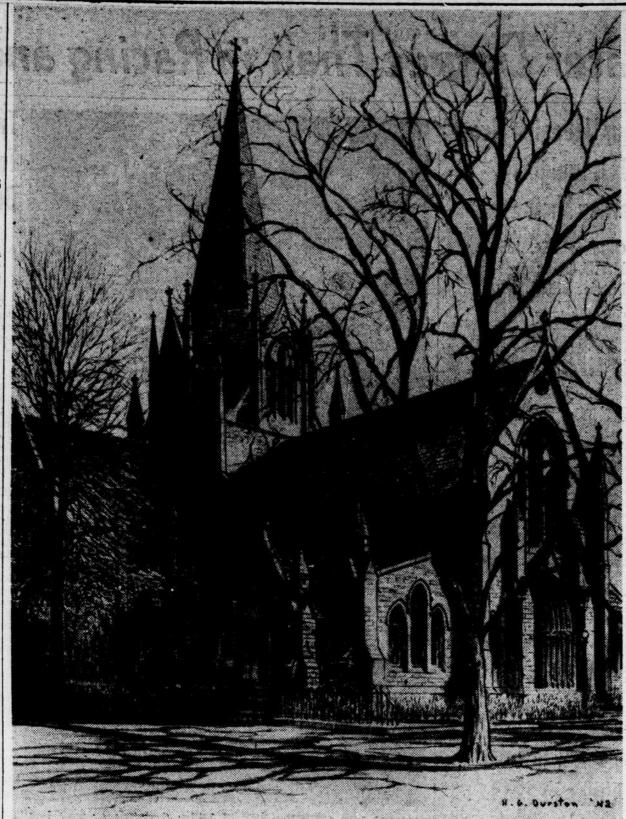

"To show the sincerity of these consultants in their work," the spokesman related, "it was the hospital head from the Eastern city who kept the 150-bed obstetrical addition to Gallinger Hospital, now in progress, from being pigeon-holed. This project was virtually shelved when the consultant came to its

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S CHURCH-Helen Gatch Durston has drawn the granite structure and steeple of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church as they appeared to her from the intersection of Eighteenth and Church streets N.W. Among the hundreds of Episcopalians who worship here, perhaps the most famous parishioners are Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt. The President has often attended services at St. Thomas on special holidays like Thanksgiving and Christmas. This Thanksgiving, when he decided to conduct his own service in the East Room of the White House, he called in St. Thomas' pastor, the Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson, to help him arrange the ceremony. Mrs. Roosevelt last year addressed the ladies' group of the church.

Organized in 1891, St. Thomas' is a leader among the Episcopal organizations in this vicinity. Parishioners increased as the city's population began to grow, and by October, 1941, parking places were very scarce around the church on Sunday morning. Consequently Dr. Wilkinson announced that those attending the 11 a.m. service could park their cars on a Connecticut avenue lot at low rates to be paid by the pastor himself. Lately, however, parking space for motoring parishoners has not been a problem at St. Thomas.

As Maryland Senate Leader

Little Change Likely In Either House For 1943 Session

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Dec. 19.—James J.
Lindsay, jr., of Baltimore County, former floor leader of the House of Delegates, is slated to be given a similar post in the State Senate when the General Assembly convenes January 6, it was indicated today With the exception of the Lindsay appointment, it appeared certain that the Senate and House leadership of both parties would be the same as two years ago.

Leadership Lineup. This lineup showed Arthur H. Brice, Democratic Senator from Kent County, as president of the Senate; Delegate Thomas E. Conlon, Democrat, of Baltimore, Speaker of the House; Delegate John S. White, Democrat, of Prince Georges, House majority floor leader; Senator Wilmer Fell Davis, Republican, of Caroline, minority floor leader, and Delegate J. Milton Dick, Republican, of Aleghany, House minority floor

Mr. Lindsay would succeed Senator Dudley G. Roe of Queen Annes County, who passed up the Senate race in November to make an unsuccessful campaign against Representative Ward for the first congressional district seat. Another Senator mentioned for floor leadership was John B. Funk of Frederick County. Friends declared, however, that rather than upset the Democratic organization, Mr. Funk would not offer any determined opposition to Mr. Lindsay.

Must Resign From PSC. Mr. Brice, whose home is at Betterton, now holds a $6,000-per-year post as member of the Public Service Commission, and must resign, even if only temporarily, to take his seat in the Senate. That he is planning to return to the Senate only a $1,000-a-year propositionhas stirred some comment in political circles, since as president of the Senate, Mr. Brice also would become lieutenant governor.

Others declare that Mr. Brice would step down from the PSC only for the 90-day legislative session, fully intending to return in April. Mr. Davis, from Federalsburg, is veteran of four sessions, as is Delegate Dick, whose home is Lonaconing. Party leaders expressed no doubt that both would head their minorities in the coming session

Mr. Conlon, from the 5th Baltimore City district, was elevated to the House speakership by Democrats four years ago. When Mr. Brice became a member of the Public Service Commission, Mr. Conlon was elected chairman of the Legislative Council.

The Democrats have an experienced floor leader in Mr. White, former Mayor of Colmar Manor. He also would be chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

"On Top" of Legislation. Mr. Conlon, Mr. White, Mr. Davis and Mr. Dick also are members of the Legislative Council, which was created in 1939 to prepare bills in advance for submission to the Legislature as a time-saving device. Thus, as leaders of their respective parties, all would be in a prime position to be "on top" of most legislation at all times. The formality of electing legislative leaders will be accomplished at party caucuses, expected to be called at Annapolis on the eve of the Legislature's opening, January 5. Galen S. Tait, State Republican Committee chairman, has summoned House and Senate members ceived from home owners before last for a party caucus on that date, and

A War Production Board spokesman revealed today that a recommenda-tion against provision of four beds to each 1,000 population in the Dis-trict will be one outgrowth of the survey now under way to determine the necessity for expending essential war materials in the construction of new buildings as a part of the proposed local hospital expansion

Four beds per thousand persons was the formula used by the Federal bureau charged with investigating local hospital needs and allotting money therefor, and whose recommendations now are being held up while the WPB makes its own in-

The Federal Works Agency allots funds made available by the Lanham Act, which is not an enabling act, but legislation designed to assure proper expenditure of funds wherever an emergency need exists.

Asked today whether the FWA planned to bring the delay in the hospital program caused by the WPB survey to the attention of the President, as the responsible official for proper administration of the act, an FWA official said the agency was not planning such action and that if the matter did reach the White House it would have to get there through some other source.

The WPB survey has shown, according to the spokesman, that three and a half beds per 1.000 population would be average than four beds. This conit was explained, is supported by the fact that most other cities have only a three-bed average and that use of beds in local hospitals, even during the most crowded times, has averaged only three and a half per 1,000.

The spokesman said the survey is being carried on by two experienced hospital consultants, one of them the head of a 600-bed hospital in a large Eastern city for the last eight years. The study, it was added, has been under way for two months and should be completed within the next

Need Admitted.

He scoffed at the suggestion that politics had played any part in either the order for the investigation or recommendations which will be included in the final report. He said the study was ordered not with the thought that the District does not need the additional 1,172 beds proposed, but with the idea that these beds might be provided in the present emergency without using

In answer to this, a representative of the Federal Works Agency, by which the hospital projects were States Public Health Service, has pointed out that the WPB and FWA had reached an agreement in writing last summer as to what materials are regarded as essential to the war effort. The projects as submitted were in accordance with this criteria, it was said. The WPB spokesman said the head consultant brought here to aid the war agency in its rulings concerning priorities involving hospitals has wide experience both in engineering and hospital administration. He was graduated in engineering from a leading American university and served in the Medical Corps during the First World War, holding a responsible assignment in a hospital in France. During his years as a consultant, he has visited practically all of the largest hospitals of the country. Will Review Report. The spokesman reported that the already has revealed that much of the new construction included in the $4,689,700 hospital program can be eliminated. He announced further that the

Expect Criticism. "The final report, we realize, will not be received without criticism." the spokesman said, "but we believe its findings will be for the best of all concerned. Some local hospital officials already have told us that they agree with the findings of the consultants and believe that the substitute plan would be best at present Changes mentioned in the report will be those which are considered essential and which will save vital material, he added. The Natural, Inquest Rules consultants are paying particular attention, he said, to projects for enlargement and addition of obstetrical wards, which they consider

"To show the sincerity of these consultants in their work," the spokesman related, "it was the hospital head from the Eastern city who kept the 150-bed obstetrical addition to Gallinger Hospital, now in progress, from being pigeon-holed. This project was virtually shelved near the Paddock, Charles Town when the consultant came to its

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S CHURCH-Helen Gatch Durston has drawn the granite structure and steeple of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church as they appeared to her from the intersection of Eighteenth and Church streets N.W. Among the hundreds of Episcopalians who worship here, perhaps the most famous parishioners are Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt. The President has often attended services at St. Thomas on special holidays like Thanksgiving and Christmas. This Thanksgiving, when he decided to conduct his own service in the East Room of the White House, he called in St. Thomas' pastor, the Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson, to help him arrange the ceremony. Mrs. Roosevelt last year addressed the ladies' group of the church. Organized in 1891, St. Thomas' is a leader among the Episcopal organizations in this vicinity. Parishioners increased as the city's population began to grow, and by October, 1941, parking places were very scarce around the church on Sunday morning. Consequently Dr. Wilkinson announced that those attending the 11 a.m. service could park their cars on a Connecticut avenue lot at low rates to be paid by the pastor himself. Lately, however, parking space for motoring parishoners has not been a problem at St. Thomas.

Post-War Boom Seen For Private Financed Homes

FHA Survey Discloses Ample Reserve of Fund $183,000, or $3,000 each. For Peacetime Buildin

The Federal Housing Administration today predicted a sharp revival of privately financed homeis based on a survey just completed among bankers providing finances in the home mortage field.

FHA Commissioner Abner H. Ferguson, meanwhile, announced arrangements for 100,000 new dwelling units financed through the FHA were concluded during the first six months of operation under war housing amendments to the National Housing Act of last June.

These war housing units, which are now under construction by private builders or scheduled for starting under FHA inspection, are being financed by mortage loans of approximately $409,000,000 advanced or to be advanced by private lending institutions with the protection of FHA war housing insurance issued under Title VI of the Act, Mr. Ferguson said.

Mortgage Insurance Boosted.

The 1942 amendments to the Act increased the FHA'S war housing mortgage insurance authorization under Title VI by $500,000,000, broadened the terms of Title VI to cover all general types of privately financed war housing of permanent type, and effected other changes designed to assist private construction of essential war housing units.

During the six months that operations have been conducted under the new amendments, FHA field offices have issued commitments to insure Title VI mortgages of $392,-761,210 on 88.767 one-to-four family structures, which will contain more than 95,000 dwelling units.

In this same period. FHA commitments were issued to insure mortgages totaling $16,251,900 which will finance construction of 32 large-scale rental projects containing 4.129 dwelling units for war workers. These commitments were issued under Section 608, which was added to Title VI as part of the review of the statements discloses ephasis upon new technological developments in materials and methods of construction, as well as account upon the stimulus to post-war home buying likely to result from the large volume of war-time savings.

The rehabilitation of blighted neighborhoods is cited in a number of instances as one of the outstanding problems of the post-war housing era. Other problems foreseen in some cases include the possibility of deflationary post-war influences in areas having a large volume of war housing or resulting from rising construction costs and values during the war-time period.

In numerous instances, stress is placed upon the assistance antici- built by the Defense Homes Corp. pated from the FHA insured mortgage system in stimulating postwar new home financing.

"The possibilities of the development of housing after the war are so enormous they stagger the imagination," said William W. Slocum, president of the United Savings Bank of Detroit.

Building Official Asks Private Construction Of 1943 War Housing

Burns Says Projects Would Be Cheaper, Better Than Now

Claiming that private constructors can do the job quicker, cheaper and better, Fritz Burns, president of the National Association of Home Builders, declared today that "whatever war housing that should be built in 1943" should be left to private firms. Writing in the current issue of the American Builder, he states: "The private builder can be implemented to do war housing far better than any public agency. He can do it with less materials and more quickly than the cumbersome procedures involved in any job run in Washington. He isn't asking for subsidies; he isn't asking for cost plus contracts, but for the opportunity to build the greatest amount of decent war housing with the least materials and with the minimum of Government ownership and a minimum of post-war repercussions."

Restrictions Hit. But, Mr. Burns pointed out, com petent builders are being killed off like flies, needlessly and wastefully, by the conditions which have been put upon them in the vital job of producing accommodations for war workers. The horns of the dilemma for the private builder have been the limited material allowed by WPB and FHA limitations as to the by kind of house it will insure.

By Building Trade

"As a result of uncertainty after uncertainty, the very existence of one of the greatest industries in the In 1942 Reported country is being pinched out, unnecessarily, at a time when it is vitally needed in the war effort," he declared. Why private building in the war period is preferable to public building, and why every effort should be made to give it conditions under which it can work are given in the following points by Mr. Burns: Lack of monotony. The personalizing and individualizing of privately owned homes through landscaping, fencing and other exterior adornments, such as trellises, etc., is a factor in keeping war workers satisfied and productive. Less Waste Claimed. Less wastage in maintenance. Greater care taken of the home, which represents a private invest-

More efficient use of priorities by private builders. In fact, the private builders were much more successful in procuring materials than public housing projects, which in many localities were stymied until additional priority ratings were granted

Private been trained in facilities built by the people in our largest cities desire housing doesn't have to "wait to fill up." Local experience has been that private war housing sells or is rented Qualified occupants are already and munitions are being manufacwaiting for houses for which the builders are just pouring the foundation. There are many public housing projects throughout the country that have large percentages of vacancies. These may be filled because of continued demand, but they do not have spontaneous public acceptance.

Privately built housing is less apt to be wasteful or excessive beyond the actual need in areas subject to fluctuating populations. It is meticulously programmed and allocated through NHA and is further screened through the economic judgment of the lending institutions which must provide the capital. Most important, it is guided by the acutely keen localized judgment of the private builder who contributes the enterprise and the financial risk.

Many problems in post-war housing are seen by Arthur G. Erdmann, president of the Bell Savings and Loan Association of Chicago. He believes, however, that with the backlog of demand due to cessation of private home construction, home building and financing should be among the major industries of the post-war economy.

G. M. Wallace, president of the Security First National Bank of Los Angeles, confined his forecast to FHA-insured mortgages, of which his bank has made and kept in its own portfolio more than $100,000,000. "It is a satisfaction to us." he said, "that the thousands of homes built in Southern California in recent years under FHA-insured mortgages constitute the best designed and constructed houses in this area. We look forward to an expansion in our FHA lending activities when peace returns."

While almost entirely devoted to war purposes, the construction industry this year has done $14,000,-000,000 worth of business, largest volume in history. Dan W. Kimball, president of the Associated General Contractors of America, Inc., reported today.

He noted that two significant facts of the industry were that it had been almost completely converted to war work and that during the fall season this type of work reached its peak. Mr. Kimball said this was the conclusion of a gradual process from the time of the bombing of Pearl Harbor. At that time, he pointed out, the industry already had been converted 75 per cent to

All the small parts of heating equipment need care. The valves on the radiators sometimes become clogged with dust and impair efficiency. No amount of coal can keep a house warm when the radiators are not full and functioning prop-

Now that so many householders are using coal again, the problem of soot, coal dust and ashes is ever present. Weatherstripping on all doors leading from the basement prevents coal dust infiltration. ## Home Purchase Loans Show Seasonal Gains During Last Quarter

Ralph H. Cooke Reports Total of $91,672,000 Advance in October

Following a seasonal trend in home lending activities as evidenced in previous years, more money is being advanced in the last quarter of this year than in earlier periods, Ralph H. Cake, president of the United States Savings and Loan League, reported today.

However, he added, purposes for which loans were granted by savings, building and loan associations made some notable shifts between January and October. His latest figures show $91,672,000 was advanced in Loans for War Housing.

Mr. Cake, though, qualified his statement by noting the comparison was made against the first months of the year before the home building restrictions became effective.

Loans for war housing, privately built and financed, accounted for some 11.54 per cent of all the associations' October disbursements, and this meant that construction loan volume in October was about half of where it was last January, when people could still build housing in if they could get the ma

On the other hand, home purchase loans were 65 per cent greater in volume in October than in January. "Ever since April we have been

Two-thirds of the new homes, had the war economy people in the cities declared that the not intervened, stayed sold on the idea of owning their homes and have kept up the market for existing properties since building was restricted," he added.

Ohio Associations Lead.

The largest volume of home purchase loans was made in Ohio, Pennsylvania and California. Ohio associations led in war housing construction loans, followed closely by California groups.

These two States with New York and New Jersey accounted for near-ly half of all the construction loans made by associations in October. A breakdown of the figures shows that $10,572,000 went for construction; $3,498,000, repairs and modern-ization; $58,060,000, home purchase; $14,694,000, refinancing, and $6,380,-000, miscellaneous.

Miss Mildred Louise Gillikin Wed To Kenneth Chenoweth Last Night

The week end is a popular time for brides and its beginning last night was marked by the weddings of two Washington girls. Miss Sara Catherine Botsford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman L. Botsford, became the bride of Lt. J. Roger Hamilton, son of Mrs. Lota D. Hamilton of Medford, Mass., at 8:30 o'clock in the Western Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Charles Stewart McKenzie officiated at the ceremony.

Miss Betty Eunson was the bride's maid of honor wearing a purple taffeta gown styled with three-quarter-length sleeves and a sweetheart neckline. A double ruffle, one of periwinkle blue, extended from the waistline to the hem of the skirt. Miss Eunson wore a hat of purple plumes with a circular shoulder veil. She carried American beauty roses tied with a periwinkle blue ribbon.

Other attendants for the bride were Miss Drucille Dille and Miss Anita Mammele. Their periwinkle blue & costumes, having a contrasting ruffle of purple on the skirt, matched that of the maid of honor in style and their headdresses were of purple plumes and shoulder veils. Their By Residents bouquets of American Beauty roses were tied with purple ribbons.

Kay Johansen, the flower girl, wore a frock of pink taffeta. Mr. Botsford gave his daughter in marriage. She wore a gown of ivory satin made with a sweetheart neckline which was trimmed with rose point lace that was worn by her great-great-grandmother. The gown had long sleeves and a gathand carried a shower bouquet of white orchids and bouvardia. Lt. Norman L. Botsford, jr., was the best man and serving as ushers were Lt. Tom C. White and Lt. Thomas Hagood.

A Lesson for the Week Christmas and War Linked By Present Conflict's Aims

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

It took me years to find out one of the most significant facts in the Christmas story. Like most other persons, I had assumed that the appearance of celestial beings to the shepherds on Bethlehem hills was one angelic manifestation. Then it dawned on me, one day when digging into the Greek as far as an untaught man could, that Luke reports only one angel, plus a "heavenly host:" These terms definitely have different meanings. The evidence, once .

pointed out, is clear to any reader. First to appear amid the Shekinah glory that had fallen upon the overwhelmed shepherds was a solitary angel, or messenger-"aggellos" in the Greek. Then, "suddenly, there cult task in the open air. have summoned. These soldiers of God from the realms above were a singing host. I have often heard the Russian soldiers sing while on the march; an unforgettable experience that my mind links with this chorusing company in bright array who caroled above the prostrate shepherds on a Bethlehem field.

Few persons are really aware that the Christmas message of peace was first of all a soldier song. It was the "heavenly host," the army of God, who first chorused.

"Glory to God in the highest. And on earth peace, good will toward men." With this dramatic truth comes the reassurance, so needed today, that God has His armies, an irresistible company, for

Four Weeks' Volume 11 Per Cent Ahead Of 1941 Period

By EDWARD C. STONE. Indicating further expansion in Christmas trade, department store sales in the Capital for the week ended last Saturday, December 12, climbed 15 per cent above the record Chicago Grain for the corresponding week a year ago, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported today. The gain in the previous week over last year was only 4 per cent. Department store sales in the 5th Reserve district last week were 21 price paid for any futures contract per cent better than last year, scored a 27 per cent increase in Baltimore and 23 per cent in a group of other cities, the report said. Washington trade last week was 11 per cent ahead of the preceding week this year. The 5th district gain over the previous week was 15 per cent, moved up 12 per cent in the cities grouped together, and was pushed up 20 per cent in Baltimore where war industries are spending so much money.

With less than a week to go, Capital merchants asserted again today that Christmas trade will exceed all previous records by a generous mar-

A low trump was returned from dummy, East played the nine, South played the queen and West ducked. At this point South should have gone after the diamonds, content to let West make the ace and jack of spades at his leisure. By doing so, South would have made his doubled contract, scoring 740 points. Instead, South decided that West had doubled with just three spades to the ace and that East had held the jack-nine. Acting on this theory, South led the king of spades, much to West's delight.

Since he has failed to show any sign of strength at all, you must give him a little leeway. Score 100 per cent for two spades. 60 per cent for three spades.

Bob Hope Annexes Radio Title in Annual Voting

Screen Comedian Becomes Champion of Network By Ballot of Editors

By ANDREW R. KELLEY.

Bob Hope has become a double-threat man in the world of amuse ment. He has just won the annual poll taken by Motion Picture Daily among radio editors of the Nation's newspapers as the champion enter-tainer of the networks. Comic Hope is already well established as the No. 1 funmaker of the screen, with good prospects of being voted the star comedian of the soldiers, based upon the box office ratings of Army Motion Picture Service.

Title stems from a Walt Whitman poem, though the screenplay is derived from a novel by Olive Higgins Prouty.
