Senators Study Farm Draft Deferments

16-Unit Standard Urged as Yardstick For Local Boards

(Earlier Story on Page A-1.) A Senate Agriculture Subcommittee was in executive session late today discussing a plan which would give local draft boards considerable leeway in the granting of selective service deferments to essential farm workers.

The plan calls for employment of the Agriculture Department's 16-war-unit standard which is now in effect, but the Selective Service System would be required to instruct the local draft boards not to apply the standard "as a rigid yardstick."

Each State office of the Selective Service System would be permitted, it was said, to work out its own plan, using the 16-war-unit standard only in the sense that it is a national form.

May Deviate at Times. By reason of regional or area variation in production methods, committee members said the 16-war-unit standard obviously may be either too high or too low. Based upon conditions existing within their own localities, local draft boards would be justified in deviating from the national standard, committee members agreed.

It was said, however, that it would appear unreasonable under any circumstances for a local board to consider for selective service classification in 2-C or 3-C any registrant whose efforts do not result in the production of a certain number of war units of essential farm products. The committee was planning to recommend this flooring at this afternoon's session.

Deferment Outlined. The deferment of an essential farm worker under the 16-war-unit standard, roughly is as follows: One who now cares for 12 cows and who next July 1 will care for 16 cows.

One who cares for or harvests 80 acres of corn, 240 acres of wheat, barley, oats or rye, or 192 acres of flax or 32 acres of potatoes or peanuts. One who tends 320 hogs, or 240 range cattle, or 600 broilers, or 1,200 egg-producing chickens, or 480 sheep or 2,560 lambs in feed lots or 720 lambs on range, one who cares for 640 turkeys.

Earlier in the day manpower and agricultural officials were informed by the full Senate Agriculture Subcommittee members that "you are breaking down the morale of the country by enforcing complicated draft regulations."

Manpower Chairman Paul V. McNutt, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard and Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director, sat silently as Senator after Senator recited "what was going on in this country."

The committee started hearings on ways to relieve a shortage of manpower on the farms. Members informed Secretary Wickard that he had devised a draft deferment formula that was too complicated for the average draft board to understand.

Senator Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, told the Government officials that the raising of an armed force of 10,000,000 men is "going to break down the morale of the people."

"You should get out in the country and listen to what the people are saying," Senator Wheeler said. Gen. Hershey interposed with an observation that the draft calls for (See FARM LABOR, Page 2-X.)

Soviets Launch New Offensive, Nazis Report

BULLETIN. LONDON (AP).—Reuters quoted the German news agency DNB tonight as reporting that Soviet tanks had breached the main German line in the Caucasus.

By the Associated Press. LONDON, Jan. 13.—The German high command announced tonight that the Russians have launched a new offensive in the Voronezh area, the Berlin radio said in a broadcast heard by Reuters.

Voronezh is the anchor of the entire Russian line running southward to Stalingrad and the Caucasus. The Germans last summer attempted repeatedly to take the city and sweep beyond it upon Stalingrad from the north, but the Red Army held its ground and the Germans never penetrated beyond that point.

With the exception of the Russian offensive on the central front which regained Velikie Luki, all Russian winter offensives which are pressing against the Germans in the south have started below Voronezh. This latest drive, if confirmed by the Russians, indicates that the Red Army might attempt a sweeping move to the west and southwest into the Ukraine toward Kursk and Kharkov.

Utility 'Death Clause' Upheld by Circuit Court of Appeals

Two SEC Orders Against North America Co. Are Affirmed in New York

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—The constitutionality of the so-called "death clause" section of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 was upheld today by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals which affirmed two orders of the Securities and Exchange Commission against the North America Co.

The court upheld SEC orders directing the public utility holding company to divest itself of all securities of the 80 companies it operated in 17 States and the District of Columbia with the exception of that part of the public utility system known as the "St. Louis System."

The court also affirmed a SEC order denying the company's motion for leave to present additional arguments that the commission was without power to designate the particular system to be retained as its "single integrated public utility system" as defined by the 1935 act.

Also decided in favor of the SEC was a question raised by the company's petition as to the construction and application of a section of the act and the petition's challenge of its constitutional validity.

The company was formed in 1890 under New Jersey laws and has its main offices in New York City. Its business consists of acquiring and holding for investment stocks and other securities, principally in the electric utility field.

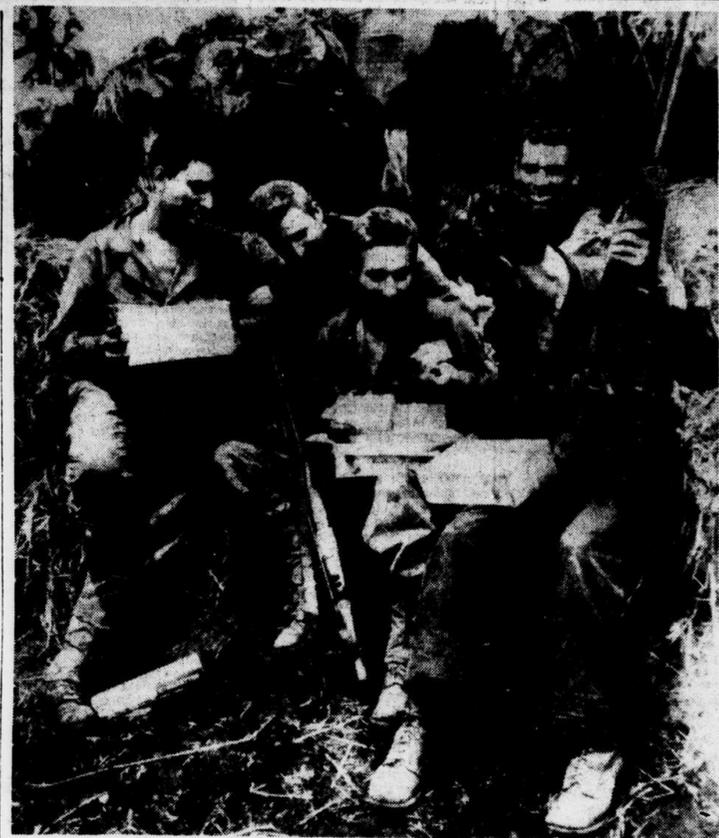

Bridges Would Quiz Hull On Flynn Nomination

(Earlier Story on Page A-5.) Senator Bridges, Republican, of New Hampshire said today he hoped the Senate Foreign Relations Committee would ask Secretary of State Hull whether he approved of the nomination of Democrat National Chairman Edward J. Flynn to be Minister to Australia.

Talking to reporters, Senator Bridges expressed hope also that the committee would hear testimony by members of the grand jury which heard charges against Mr. Flynn in the New York City paving block case and exonerated him. This jury investigated charges that a court yard on Mr. Flynn's estate was paved with city materials and labor.

NLRB Hopes to Offer Direct Testimony in Kaiser Hearing Today

Motion to Suspend Proceedings Pending; Others Are Denied

By the Associated Press. PORTLAND, Oreg., Jan. 13.—Attorneys for the National Labor Relations Board hoped to introduce direct testimony today in a hearing for three Kaiser Shipbuilding Co. yards accused of discriminating in favor of the AFL.

Appeals for restrainers, injunctions and dismissal of the hearing, called to consider charges brought by the CIO filed the first two days of proceedings before Trial Examiner Robert N. Denham.

Mr. Denham yesterday denied the latest motion for dismissal, offered by Kaiser attorneys on grounds that the Government owns the yards and that the workers consequently are Government employees, who do not come under NLRB jurisdiction.

Kaiser Counsel Harry S. Morton said he would introduce the motion again, and Mr. Denham agreed to review it later. Still pending is a motion in Federal district court for an injunction to suspend the hearing. Judge James A. F. has set Monday for arguments on the motion.

Meanwhile NLRB representatives expect to get down to the case itself. Night sessions have been ordered for tomorrow and Friday so that shipyard workers may testify without losing time from their jobs.

The Kaiser yards have a collective-bargaining agreement with AFL unions. The CIO contention is that since the contract was made the employment roll has grown tremendously and that if another election was held, the workers would choose CIO unions as bargaining representatives.

Eight Accused by Army In Bohn Strike Discharged

By the Associated Press. DETROIT, Jan. 13.—Eight workers accused by the Army of responsibility for a series of unauthorized strikes last month at the Bohn Aluminum & Brass Corp. plant here were discharged from their jobs today.

Late News Bulletins Reported Sinking of 13 Tankers Cited by Walsh at Oil Parley

Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Massachusetts said today in describing the seriousness of the fuel oil shortage in the East that the German radio had reported the recent sinking of 13 tankers in a convoy on the Atlantic. Walsh said there was no official confirmation of the sinkings, explaining to a group of New England and coastal members of Congress that he mentioned it merely to show what the military and naval forces may be up against.

China Reports Seizure Of Sinyang; Greatest Victory in Months

Nearby Town Also Taken In Battle Costing Lives of 600 Japs

By the Associated Press. CHUNGKING, Jan. 13.—Sinyang, important Japanese base in Southern Honan Province on the Peiping-Hankow trunk railway, has been recaptured by the Chinese, the Chinese high command announced tonight.

This was considered the most significant Chinese victory in months in the Central China war theater. "The high command's communique also reported the recapture of Hwangchuan, east of Sinyang, in a battle in which 600 Japanese were slain.

It also reported renewed fighting in Western Yunnan, near the Burma border, where the Japanese attacked Mengma January 8. They encountered Chinese resistance and fighting was continuing two days later.

Sinyang, a key point in the Japanese defense in Southern Honan, has been a base for their operations since 1939, and a favorite starting point for numerous "mopping-up" expeditions.

The communique said the Chinese attacked the city on the evening of January 9 and at dawn the next day one column penetrated the west gate. Several street fighting ensued.

Italian Fezzan Conquest Completed, De Gaulle Says

By the Associated Press. LONDON, Jan. 13.—Gen. Charles de Gaulle told the French people in a broadcast tonight that the Fighting French forces of Brig. Gen. Jacques Le Clerc have completed the conquest of Italian Fezzan, in the Libyan desert, and now are in position to "fight decisive engagements on the shores of the Mediterranean."

The accomplishment of Le Clerc's men "constitutes an exploit which is no less than the finest in our history," De Gaulle said.

The column of Fighting French under that name to save relatives in France from reprisal, has swept up from the Lake Chad area of French Equatorial Africa and has overcome Axis resistance in the Fezzan area in fierce fighting.

Six Victims Identified In Army Bomber Crash

By the Associated Press. SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 13.—Six Army flyers from the Walterboro, S. C., air base who were killed yesterday when their two-motored medium bomber crashed near here were identified today by Capt. E. J. Healy, public relations officer of the Savannah Army Air Base.

The dead: First Lt. A. W. Kay, pilot; Second Lt. F. A. W. Hale, co-pilot; Technical Sgt. R. S. Zuffall, Staff Sgt. A. A. Lasset, Staff Sgt. R. Medlin and Corpl. G. B. Silva.

$2,500 Fee Proffered By Radio Station to Cox, FCC Told

Stockholder Testifies Georgia Representative Refused Retainer

By the Associated Press. I. C. Gortatowsky of Albany, Ga., a stockholder in the Albany Herald Broadcasting Co., testified at a Federal Communications Commission hearing today that the stockholders had approved the proffer of $2,500 to Representative Cox, Democrat, of Georgia as a retainer for services he might render in a "legal and ethical" manner as a member of Congress.

The testimony was brought out during a consolidated hearing on application by the Albany Herald Publishing Co., operator of the radio station WALB, for a renewal of its license, a change in frequency and voluntary assignment of the license to the Albany Herald Broadcasting Co.

Mr. Gortatowsky said that Representative Cox had refused to take the $2,500 proffered him. He said that the stockholders had felt that "he should be paid for past and for future services he might legally and ethically render as a member of Congress."

Representative Cox was not present at the hearing when the first mention of a fee for his services was mentioned, but Mr. Allen said he would be present when H. T. McIntosh, president of both the publishing company and of the broadcasting company, took the stand at the afternoon session.

Meal Packers Report Nation-Wide Black Market

By the Associated Press. ST. LOUIS, Jan. 13.—The National Independent Meat Packers' Association, calling for establishment of maximum price ceilings on livestock, declared today "an extensive and Nation-wide black market exists with enormous unlawful slaughter of animals."

In a telegram to the OPA, the association said processors of meat products were "again subjected to a dangerous squeeze caused by upward pressure of unregulated live animal prices against fixed ceilings of pork and beef prices."

Wilbur La Roe, Jr., of Washington, general counsel of the association, said many farmers all over the country were privately butchering hogs and cattle in excess of regulations and were finding a ready market at higher-than-ceiling prices.

To conserve critically low supplies of gasoline, the Office of Price Administration ruled today that under the ban now in effect in the District and 17 Eastern States automobiles may not be used to attend the President's birthday ball or any other charity affair.

Oil Dealers Face Closing Threat, Senators Told

Revision of Ration Program Described By Scott as Vital

By J. A. O'LEARY. Many small fuel oil dealers in Washington and other parts of the East face the necessity of "closing shop" unless the present ration program is revised, Lester Scott, director of the Oil Heating Division of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, told the Senate Oil Investigating Committee today.

Mr. Scott said the over-all reserve of oil in consumers' storage tanks has steadily decreased to the point "where a very large number of homeowners are going to run out of oil at the same time, and it is going to be physically impossible for the dealers to catch up on deliveries because there are not enough trucks."

Under such circumstances, he said, it won't make much difference whether or not "we have plenty of oil in the bulk terminals."

He called the whole fuel oil coupon rationing system one of "delay and confusion" and indicated his belief it has broken down the efficient plan of delivery to which the oil-heating business was geared.

Most Critical Situation. "I have been in business a great many years, in NRA and other industry crises, but the present situation far surpasses anything I have ever gone through or anything I could have imagined six months ago," Mr. Scott said. "If we have no oil, then we will have to take it on the chin, but to have oil at hand and not be able to deliver to home owners enough oil to keep them warm should not be permitted to happen."

Mr. Scott's chief recommendations were that the oil supply coming into this area be allocated and distributed proportionately to all dealers and that rationing regulations be modified to enable dealers to avoid a multiplicity of small deliveries, which, he said, has reduced the efficiency of delivery service.

Chairman Maloney asked Mr. Scott whether he was familiar with the new OPA anti-discrimination order, which requires primary suppliers to furnish oil when it is available to any dealer presenting coupons. The order also requires dealers to supply oil to this area be allocated and distributed proportionately to all dealers and that rationing regulations be modified to enable dealers to avoid a multiplicity of small deliveries, which, he said, has reduced the efficiency of delivery service.

Mr. Scott replied that he was familiar with the order, but believed that "instead of eliminating discrimination it creates discrimination." He interpreted the order as meaning that if one dealer came to the primary supplier station with coupons for 100,000 gallons he would have to be given that amount while other dealers might go without.

Urges Locked Room. Asked by Senator Barbour, Republican, of New Jersey what he would do to improve the situation Mr. Scott said that if representatives of OPA, ODT, the petroleum industry and spokesmen for the local industry and an expert on consumer problems could be (See RATIONING, Page A-8.)

Charles Bedaux Held In North Africa

Charles Bedaux, American citizen who retired in 1937 to arrange a tour of the United States for the Duke of Windsor, is under arrest in North Africa, Secretary of State Hull said today.

Mr. Hull said he had no details. It is understood that Mr. Bedaux is accused of trading with the enemy.

Mr. Bedaux once perfected a "whisper" speed-up system that caused a considerable section of organized labor in this country to protest when he took the Duke of Windsor and the Duchess under his wing shortly after their marriage and proposed to bring them to the United States. The couple was married in his home.

Mr. Bedaux then was living in France, where the Duke and Duchess were making their home. The trip was canceled.

Witness Struck by Man Sentenced for Perjury

By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—A few minutes after he had been sentenced in Federal Court to 18 months' imprisonment for perjury, Allan Keeler, 49, today assaulted Conrad Ouer, 56, a Government witness.

As United States deputy marshals and Keeler waited for an elevator in the corridor outside the Federal courtroom, Ouer walked out. Keeler lunged at him and landed a punch on Ouer's jaw. Deputies overpowered Keeler and pulled him away.

Keeler, Queens automobile mechanic, was convicted of perjury before a Federal grand jury which had been investigating the whereabouts of Edward James Smythe, indicted with 27 others in Washington on charges of sedition. Keeler had denied seeing Smythe when Smythe was a fugitive from justice, but Ouer and Grace Penn, 48, testified Keeler had visited Smythe several times in August, 1942.

Both Ouer and Grace Penn pleaded guilty to harboring a fugitive and received suspended sentences today before Judge Samuel Mandelbaum.

Driving to Birthday Ball Banned by OPA Ruling

Clarifying its recent definition of pleasure driving, the Office of Price Administration ruled today that under the ban now in effect in the District and 17 Eastern States automobiles may not be used to attend the President's birthday ball or any other charity affair.

Interpretations of pleasure driving were included in a ruling sent to OPA attorneys throughout the East, where driving has been curbed to conserve critically low supplies of gasoline.

OPA stated a car may be used to drive to a nearby restaurant if it is necessary because of lack of public transportation and the purpose is eating and not entertainment.

"However, driving to dances, balls, theaters and other places of amusement is regarded as pleasure driving," OPA stated, "even though such functions are held for the purpose of raising funds for charity."

Nazis Throw Tanks and Planes Into Stiffening Caucasus Stand, But Soviets Report New Gains

More Villages Taken
By Reds; Intensity
Of Battle Increases

By HENRY C. CASSIDY,
Associated Press War Correspondent.

MOSCOW, Jan. 13.—The Germans threw tanks and warplanes into a stiffening stand in the Caucasus today in a desperate attempt to cover their forces holding the Malkop oil fields and the Black Sea coast farther west, but the Russians reported further gains and more villages recaptured.

Red Star, mouthpiece of the Russian Army, said the battle was becoming more violent, particularly along the rail line toward Rostov from recaptured Mineralnye Vody. Battle-front dispatches said the Russians were maintaining their pressure along a whole 100-mile front from deep in the Caucasus to the lower Yalmukh Steppes, while other forces just to the north bore down on the Nazi Sal River line in preparation for the siege of Salsk, another milestone on the road to Rostov.

Strong German counterattacks were reported on the Lower Don front as well as in the Caucasus.

Threat Is Repulsed.
Izvestia the government newspaper, said one such attack in the Lower Don threatened an important Russian line of communications but was repulsed by Red Army reserves, which were moved up nearly 40 miles overnight. The Ger-

Germans Indicate New Major Drive By Red Forces

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN (From German Broadcasts), Jan. 13.—Violent fighting on the Russian front has spread to the sector between Lake Ilmen, near Ladoga and Leningrad. German military quarters announced today. They commented that this heavy fighting is in progress along almost the entire eastern front. Russian attacks on the Leningrad and southern Ladoga fronts failed, they asserted.

This may indicate that the Russians have opened a new major offensive. Several times in recent months the Germans have been first to report the launching of Red Army drives, with Moscow withholding announcement until they are well under way.

mans were forced to retreat, Izvestia reported.

The Don offensive was hampered by the cold wind which howled across the snow-piled steppes. The progress here was slower than in parts of the Caucasus, but the Russians were reported pressing ahead at a steady pace to prevent the enemy from regrouping shattered divisions.

In the close-quarter fighting in Stalingrad the Red Army made an important gain by thrusting forward from a northern factory district to the western outskirts of the city.

Long-range guns on the east bank of the Volga continued to shell German lodgements on the west bank around Stalingrad as the Germans kept up their pressure on the German forces which have been cut off there from retreat to the west.

(The Soviet noon communique said several more populated places fell to the Russian Caucasus army in the night's fighting and added a significant report. That Red Army planes had swept far west to Krasnodar in a series of raids on the airfield at that key German stronghold and rail center, 150 miles south of Rostov and only 60 miles east of Novorossisk, on the Black Sea.

(Ten German planes were destroyed on the ground, about 30 were brought down in an aerial duel, the communique said. It was broadcast by the Moscow radio and recorded in London by the Soviet Monitor.

(A German tank advance in the lower Don area was thrown back in vicious fighting and several towns were occupied in one sector, the war bulletin said.)

More Points Captured.
The Soviet midnight communique pictured the far-flung central Caucasus advance as moving steadily along both sides of the railway that angles from Baku, oil center on the Caspian, northward to Rostov, at the mouth of the Don, near where the river splits to flow into the Sea of Azov 25 miles below the city limits.

The recapture of six more points (See RUSSIAN, Page A-20.)

British Bombers Range Far Into Burma Unchallenged

NEW DELHI, India, Jan. 13.—British bombers ranged far into Burma yesterday without encountering air opposition from the Japanese and attacked railway transportation and river and coastal shipping, a British communique said today.

Two villages on Akyab Island were bombed by fighter-escorted Blenheims, it was reported, and low-flying fighters machine-gunned railway buildings and rolling stock in the Shwebo district of Central Burma.

The fighters strafed enemy river craft on the Chinwin and Irrawaddy Rivers and in the Rathedaung area, 25 miles north of Akyab, and sampans carrying supplies near the Burma coast south of Akyab were hit and damaged, the communique said.

Hornet Carried Tokio Raiders, Japs Say in Report of Sinking

Destruction of Aircraft Carrier Declared
Revenge for Attack on Capital April 18

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—A Japanese broadcast asserted today that the United States aircraft carrier Hornet, identified Monday by the American Navy as the aircraft carrier sunk October 26 in the battle of the Santa Cruz Islands, was the vessel which carried the planes that raided Tokio last April 18.

The broadcast, beamed for Japanese communities in East Asia, said, without giving the authority, that it was "disclosed" that the Hornet "brought the North American bombers during the attack on Japan." The broadcast was reported by government monitors to the Office of War Information.

Enemy Plane Bombs U. S. Positions Near Guadalcanal Field

One Dead, Several Hurt; Munda Again Attacked By American Flyers

The Navy reported today that an enemy plane dropped five bombs on United States positions near Henderson Field on Guadalcanal Island January 11, killing one member of our forces and wounding several.

This was the same day in which a force of American planes encountered 12 Japanese Zeros between Santa Isabel Island and New Georgia Island and shot down one at the cost of one of our planes. Observers believe these planes had come from the new Japanese airfield at Munda and that one may have gotten through to Guadalcanal to drop the five bombs.

First Bombing in Month.
The bombing was the first in the area since December 13. At that time one plane dropped three bombs. Today's communique also said that a force of Martin Marauder medium bombers, escorted by Bell Aircraft and Lockheed Lightning fighters, bombed the Munda field on New Georgia. No air opposition was encountered, but anti-aircraft batteries were active. Results of the bombing were not reported, and all United States planes returned to their base.

Small-scale offensive operations were reported in the remaining Japanese in the Guadalcanal hills "are progressing satisfactorily," the communique said, adding that several small positions have been isolated.

The lone plane which got through to Guadalcanal obviously was aiming its bombs for Henderson Field. It had been feared also that should the Munda airfield become an active operating base, long-range bombers from other ports might pick up fighter escorts as they passed over Munda, which is 180 miles northwest of the Guadalcanal Field.

The constant bombing of the Munda ground installations is designed to prevent the Japanese from using that field for attacks on Guadalcanal, like the one reported today.

It is believed that should the Munda airfield become an active operating base, long-range bombers from other ports might pick up fighter escorts as they passed over Munda, which is 180 miles northwest of the Guadalcanal Field.

Allied Planes Carry Drive Into Salamaua Area

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA, Jan. 13.—Allied ground forces in New Guinea advanced further the Japanese salient extending 1 1/2 miles inland from Sannananda Point on the Papuan Peninsula of New Guinea yesterday as Allied planes carried the triumphant campaign to the Salamaua area of New Guinea. Allied headquarters announced today.

After announcing the destruction of Japanese positions at Sannananda Point in the previous communique, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters reported today further gains against the remaining enemy positions.

Allied planes raided the trail leading from Salamaua to Komiatum, 10 miles to the south, and destroyed a bridge, the communique reported.

Replacements Give Britain More Carriers Than in 1939

LONDON, Jan. 13.—A. V. Alexander, first lord of the Admiralty, declared today that "although we have had heavy losses in aircraft carriers, we have more now than we had at the beginning of the war after replacing our losses."

(Britain has announced the loss of five aircraft carriers, the Ark Royal, Courageous, Glorious, Hermes and Eagle.

(Since the start of the war she has completed the Indomitable, Formidable, Victorious and Illustrious—and, from Mr. Alexander's statement, apparently also the new Indefatigable and Implacable to the fleet. Jane's Fighting Ships listed them as scheduled for completion in 1942.

"This would indicate a total of seven, the only pre-war carrier remaining unsunk being the Furious.)

In connection with his statement, it was recalled that Mr. Alexander told a Sheffield audience last September 20 that the Royal Navy's capital ship, carrier and cruiser losses of the last two and a half years had been replaced.

"We have had in the last three or four months very heavy attacks by U-boats," Mr. Alexander said in a speech today, "and we have taken a very heavy toll of the enemy.

"Our naval losses in this war would constitute a great feat, yet, in spite of the fact that we have had to replace those ships, today we have a far larger naval strength than in 1939."

34 Nazi Planes Riddled in U. S. Raid on Tripoli

All American Craft Return Safely Despite Desperate Attacks

By the Associated Press.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Jan. 13.—United States warplanes destroyed 34 Nazi aircraft in the air and on the ground in a raid yesterday on Castel Benito airfield, 10 miles south of Tripoli, it was announced today.

B-17 Flying Fortress which led the attack into Tripolitania from the west knocked out 20 planes on the ground and downed 14 more during a blazing 75-mile running battle high in the air, a spokesman said.

It was the heaviest blow yet struck by Allied forces from the west against Marshal Erwin Rommel's defenders of Tripolitania. An Allied headquarters communique which announced the raid identified the 14 planes shot down as Messerschmitt 109's.

(This was the deepest reported penetration into Libya by Fortresses based in the west. Other American bombers, B-26 Martin Marauders, made an attack last Saturday against an airfield 10 miles from Tripoli, possibly the same field.)

Nazi Fight Desperately.
Apparently instructed to stop the Fortresses at any cost, the Germans avoided the escort of P-38 Lockheed Lightnings and raced into the concentrated fire of the big four-motored bombers.

Despite the enemy efforts, all of the American planes returned to their base, although one plane came home on only two motors two hours after the others.

Air activity dominated day and night near the port of Sousse, the ground fronts indicated only patrolling in the Bou Arada and Goubella areas of Northern Tunisia.

The RAF's Blisley attacked the Nazi supply line along the Tunisian coast near the port of Sousse, ranging over the highways by moonlight and blasting trucks and transports with bombs and machine-gun fire.

Rommel's Lines Pounded.
The Allied strategy of striking Marshal Rommel from both sides was operating like clockwork. From the east the RAF and the American Air Force with the British 8th Army pounded Rommel's transport and supply lines leading through Tripoli to Tunisia.

(A Cairo communique said today that near the port of Sousse, ranging over the highways by moonlight and blasting trucks and transports with bombs and machine-gun fire, the RAF's Blisley attacked the Nazi supply line along the Tunisian coast near the port of Sousse, ranging over the highways by moonlight and blasting trucks and transports with bombs and machine-gun fire.)

Almost at the same time the American Lightnings struck across the Tunisian border into Tripolitania in other attacks.

Sweeping close to the ground along a long line of Axis transport vehicles, some of them crowded with troops, the cannon and heavy machine-guns of the swift fighters left a trail of smoke and destruction.

On the way back the Lightnings shot up a seaplane near Gabes and downed a Messerschmitt 108B which tried to intercept them.

In those dogfights there ensued the only American plane loss of the day—one P-38 which was shot down. At least one Messerschmitt was damaged.

B-26 Martin Marauders topped off the aerial show by scoring a hit on two bridges, one on a highway and the other on a road between Sousse and Sfax.

Arkansas Bill Would Bar Japs From Owning Land

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 13.—A bill has been introduced in the Arkansas General Assembly to prohibit any person of Japanese birth or ancestry from ever owning land in the State.

Senator D. Frank Williams, a planter from Osceola, introduced the measure in the Senate yesterday, asserting that because of the standards of living of the Japanese, a white person cannot profitably compete with the Japanese either in agriculture or business.

Two relocation centers for Japanese, moved from the West Coast, have been established in Arkansas.

Petroleum Prospects For 1943 Subject for Forum

Secretary Ickes, petroleum administrator for war, and Senator Ralph O. Brewster of Maine will participate this evening in a National Radio Forum discussion of the prospects for petroleum this year. The National Radio Forum is a Blue Network feature, arranged by The Star and broadcast locally from Station WMAL at 10:30 p.m.

The fuel oil situation in the East is reported to be so serious now that a system of priorities for industrial users, in order to keep homes supplied with fuel, is said to be under study. Secretary Ickes and Senator Brewster will give some of the facts and figures relating to the supplies of petroleum now available and expected to be available this year.

Small Business Faces Long, Hard Fight for Survival, Ickes Says

Warns That War Can Be Crushing Blow Unless Little Man Is Protected

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of Interior Ickes told the Senate Small Business Committee today that "it will take men of hard intentions and strong determination to protect and assure the future of America's small business."

"We face the brutal fact that the war can be the final, crushing blow to small business as you and I have known it," he added.

"Pointing out, 'we are fighting to preserve our free way of living,' he said, 'we must guard against the loss of traditional freedom of enterprise, a loss that would result in creating a dictatorship by a few corporations closing down for lack of jobs and the relinquishment thereby of our individual freedom of living.'

"We can clearly see the trends—the major proportion of war production contracts going to a few large corporations, the hundreds of small businesses closing down for lack of work, for lack of material, for lack of outlets for the many talents developed over many years of hard struggle.

Sees Job for Small Business.
"The war reminds us that billion-dollar orders to billion-dollar corporations may be too few cannon; that the pressure to even great small to be spurred. Cannon and shell are made of the metals of our mineral ore, not of dollars and orders. But these needed ores lie in the ground beyond the application until the pressure is even greater, talents of a whole people.

"The fundamental fact and problem that we face is that both mineral resources and business talents lie idle. They must be brought together. In this aspect, small business, mineral ores and metals compose one problem."

When he was questioned by members of the committee, Mr. Ickes criticized the War Production Board for failing to approve projects for development of domestic manganese, chrome and antimony, which the Interior Department's Bureau of Mines had recommended.

Urges Pressure for Materials.

Mr. Ickes said these enterprises "bogged down" in the WPB. He mentioned particularly the development of manganese from the low grade ore found abundantly in certain sections of the West. Quoting from a letter in which War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson has said that "we shall never know how much material we really can muster until the pressure is even greater, talents of a whole people."

Draftee With 'No Dependents' Found to Have Family of 12

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—This is the Army, Pvt. Christian: $140 a month for the wife and 11 children for the duration, an appendix at Atlantic City and the local draft board wondering how it all happened.

Queens Draft Board 244 officials said that when Arthur Christian, 38, filled out his questionnaire he indicated he was single, with no dependents, and wanted to be put in 1-A.

So he was inducted into the Army November 7, and after three days at Camp Upton, N. Y., was transferred to the Army Air Forces at Atlantic City. Then Mrs. Christian appeared at the Draft Board and said she had not been receiving dependency allotment checks.

"No dependents," said a draft board official.

"No dependents!" exclaimed Mrs. Christian. "How about our 11 children?" and she produced birth certificates and a wedding certificate.

Col. Arthur W. McDermott, director of New York City selective service, yesterday cleared the board of any blame in the matter, said the Government would have to pay Pvt. Christian $50 a month and his family $140 "in spite of the fact Pvt. Christian obviously had deceived his local draft board."

But Pvt. Christian, home on furlough after an operation for appendicitis in Atlantic City, had a statement of his own.

"I listed my wife and all my children when I filled out my occupational questionnaire, which I did long before filling out my draft board questionnaire," he said.

He said he was told to leave the matter of dependents blank in his draft questionnaire, since he had been on relief, and "I guess somebody else filled in 'single with no dependents.'"

"I told the whole truth to some fellow at the draft board. I not only told him about the wife and 11 kids, but I also told him that I have a stomach ulcer, sinus trouble and am slightly deaf in my right ear. But I guess that didn't matter, because I passed my physical examination all right."

Petrillo Promises Move to End Ban on Making Music Records

Tells Senate Probers Radio and Recording Men Have Some Justice on Their Side

By the Associated Press.

James C. Petrillo promised a Senate committee today to take his American Federation of Musicians into immediate negotiations with radio broadcasters and recording companies in an attempt to reach an agreement which would end the ban on making records.

Pressed for a bill of particulars on the musicians' demands, Mr. Petrillo told a Senate Interstate Commerce Subcommittee he believed the time had come to "talk business with these boys," adding, "I think they've got some justice on their side."

Previously he had said the union would lift the ban on "canned music" if it could receive royalties on all records sold.

Mr. Petrillo would not agree, however, to a suggestion from Senator Clark, Democrat, of Idaho that he lift the ban against recorded music during the progress of the negotiations.

"I'm satisfied this committee wants quick action," the witness said. "But I've negotiated with these people locally and nationally for years. If they are permitted to make records while the negotiations (See PETRILLO, Page A-8.)

French Monarchists Arrested in Inquiry Into Darlan's Death

Some of Those Seized Said to Have Aided American Landings

By the Associated Press.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Jan. 13.—Frenchmen of monarchist leanings were among several additional persons arrested in the last few days in the continuing investigation of the assassination of Admiral Jean Darlan, it was reported today.

The names were not officially announced, but identities were generally known to the Algiers population, among whom the arrests caused widespread comment. Some of those newly arrested were said to be men who risked their lives to bring the original American landings in this area.

The status and whereabouts of the Count of Paris, pretender to the non-existent throne of France, who came to Algiers shortly after Admiral Darlan's assassination, were the subject of speculation. It was variously reported that he was critically ill in Algiers and that he had returned to his pig farm in Spanish Morocco.

Giraud and De Gaulle to Meet.
Gen. Henri Honoré Giraud, new high commissioner of French North and West Africa, and Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the Fighting French, will meet soon, a spokesman for Gen. Giraud said last night.

Gen. Giraud's spokesman disclosed that additional "personages of Algiers" had been arrested in the case and others arrested earlier had been released, said the investigation of Admiral Darlan's assassination Christmas eve was being prosecuted "without consideration of the prompt."

Bomb Damages Home Of Writer Jean Giono

BERLIN (From German broadcasts), Jan. 13.—A bomb exploded in front of the home of the French writer and poet, Jean Giono, at Manosque in the lower Alps Monday night, causing considerable damage, but no one was injured, Transcan reported today in a Vichy dispatch.

Giono was arrested after the war began in 1939 because of his pacifist views and "of late he has advocated French-German collaboration."

Giono was arrested September 16, 1939, by Premier Edouard Daladier's war government for having made what officials described as "defeatist statements."

Threat to Seize Mines Brings Peace Move

Thousands of Strikers Consider Truce as WLB Plans Action

By the Associated Press.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Jan. 13.—Thousands of striking miners in the Pennsylvania anthracite fields were called into mass meetings today to consider a possible truce after the War Labor Board hinted it may ask President Roosevelt to seize all strike-bound collieries and end "this threat" to the prosecution of the war.

Strike leaders received the Labor Board statement—its second in two days—at a meeting last night and immediately acted to convene their local unions, affiliates of the United Mine Workers, today to "get the re-education" and consider peaceful negotiations.

The WLB, in telegrams to John L. Lewis, UMW president, and heads of five companies, declared that "anthracite coal stockpiles are at a critically low level endangering the health of our people and the prosecution of the war," and added:

To Exercise "All Powers."
"Unless this threat to the safety of our Nation is immediately terminated, the board will exercise all powers within its jurisdiction to fulfill its obligation to the country."

Spokesmen for the 19,000 participating in the 15-day-old wildcat strike took this statement to be a strong indication that the board, if necessary, would recommend that Mr. Roosevelt seize the 15 strike-bound collieries in the name of the Government.

The board's message was read to the strike leaders from a news dispatch.

Meanwhile three local unions at nearby Olyphant, Pa., appealed to Mr. Roosevelt to intervene, in telegrams dispatched last night, but at the same time voted to remain on strike.

The strikers demand a $2-a-day bonus over wages estimated unofficially to average $8.50 a day. They also are protesting against an increase in union dues from $1 to $1.50. The boost was voted at a meeting here last October. The strikers, who opposed the increase then, say that delegates from bituminous coal fields, who favored it, had an unfair balance of power.

The wage dispute was certified to the War Labor Board yesterday by Secretary of Labor Perkins. Earlier, the WLB had appealed directly to the strikers to return.

The same appeal has been made by Solid Fuels Co-ordinator Ickes, the Senate committee investigating the war program, the industry's governing committee of twelve, made up of six operators and six UMW representatives, and many UMW leaders themselves. The UMW consistently has condemned the strike since it began December 30.

In many sections of the ill-rationed East, the walkout has created the worst coal shortage since the World War. Production has been reduced by about 30,000 tons a day.

One anti-strike leader, Michael Kosik, of the UMW's district 1, told the strike organizers last night after the WLB statement was read that "now I'm afraid the matter is out of our hands."

"It is now in the Government's hands," Mr. Kosik said. "What the Government wants to know now is what are we going to do, go back to work or not?"

Disaffection among the strikers with UMW leadership was revealed further at the meeting in statements from Hugh Cavanaugh and Phil Cheney, strike leaders.

"Let John L. Lewis call a meeting of the International Executive Board and take the 50-cent increase off and we'll go back to work," Mr. Cavanaugh said.

"Why can't Lewis be big enough to drop the increase?" Mr. Cheney added.

Eight anthracite producing companies issued a statement in New York today reviewing the situation and concluding:

"Notwithstanding this serious situation (decreased coal production) and appeals from the Government, resolutions have been voted by local unions to the effect that unless a $2-a-day increase in wages is granted by the operators beginning January 15, there will be a general strike.

"Coal companies are abiding by their contract with the United Mine Workers. Both the coal companies and the miners are subject to Government rules and regulations on wages."

"These strikes and threatened strikes are in direct violation of the union contract and union and Government understanding—and completely contrary to American sense of fair play and patriotism.

"In the face of the above facts, we ask—can a strike at this time be justified?"

Brig. Gen. L. G. Saunders Tells of Day and Night in Guadalcanal Holes

By CHARLES McMURTRY, Associated Press War Correspondent. HEADQUARTERS, 7th AIR FORCE IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC, Jan. 13.—Brig. Gen. Laverne G. Saunders, who led six bombing raids on Japanese ships and bases in the Solomon Islands and met fighter opposition in each raid, believes a day and night shelling he underwent at Guadalcanal was the worst experience he had in more than five months in that area.

"I wouldn't want to go through another night like that," said the former West Point athlete, who has just come out of the Solomon for the first time since he entered that battle area in July and who yesterday was wearing for the first time the star of a brigadier general.

"We had just returned from raiding Buka (on the northern tip of Bougainville Island) where we hit two Jap transports. Coming over Guadalcanal we saw our own destroyers firing their anti-aircraft guns.

"I was afraid they might be mistakenly shooting at us. Then I saw 30 Jap bombers overhead. They dropped a string of bombs but missed the Guadalcanal landing strip, so we landed and they left. This was about 12:30 p.m.

Bombed All Night. "We thought that would be all for the day, but the Japs came over again. We dove into a bomber crater which was covered by a few palm tree trunks. The trunks seemed to be too widely spaced, so we pulled them closer together. The raiders succeeded in damaging the field runway.

"Then, wham! At 6 p.m. old Miller Mike (a Jap 75-mm. field gun) started shelling the field and everybody hit the foxholes again. They dumped bombs on us all night and kept at least two bombers overhead at all times.

"At 1 a.m. all hell broke loose! Two enemy battleships and some cruisers began working us over. Let Burroughs tell you about that."

Lt. Hubert Burroughs of Los Angeles, son of the writer, Edgar Rice Burroughs, laughed and said, "That night I jumped into the garbage dump."

Gen. Saunders continued the narrative: "There were two athletes in nearby foxholes. Pretty soon one of them yelled to the other in a foxhole 50 feet away, 'Brother, do you see the light?'"

"Not yet," the other athlete shouted back.

Was Army Football Tackle. "A little later the first man yelled again, 'Brother, do you see the light now?'"

"When somebody in my foxhole shouted, 'Just stick your head out of this hole and you'll see plenty of light.'"

"The shelling continued until dawn. It was a tough night. "People who read about a shelling don't think much of it, but those who have gone through such a shelling don't want any part of it."

Gen. Saunders was a star football tackle at West Point from which he was graduated in 1928, and later he served as a plebe and line coach at the school.

His bombing squadron, which he led as a colonel, was the first to sight a Jap force of 40 or more ships trying to reinforce Guadalcanal troops, and gave the warning which led to the Japanese rout in the November 13-15 battle off Guadalcanal.

Wickard—He Feeds the World

By GEORGE KENNEDY. Nominated for the 1943 man on the spot—Claude Wickard, War Food Administrator. He has to hold the food end of the line against inflation. He has to see that the public gets enough food so that it doesn't ask for more money to buy more food.

In this he has to fight off the demands of his own people, the farmers, a sizeable portion of the public in themselves and a powerful portion politically.

"The farmers want higher prices so they can compete for men with the shipyards," Mr. Wickard said last night when asked about it. "That would be fine, wouldn't it, for the white collar workers with their salaries frozen? My hardest job is one of informing the farmers. I've got to make them see that there wouldn't be any more men even if they could pay more money."

Many Promises to Fill. Crops are bumper—but Mr. Wickard has taken responsibility for any shortages.

He is to fill the promises of food to Europe. He is to help feed the 45,000,000 of the British Isles. The other day 16,000,000 more showed up on the receiving line—a new market Lt. Gen. Dwight Eisenhower opened in North Africa.

Why any one should want the job is hard to understand. But Mr. Wickard had to step fast and talk persuasively to where he is. Former Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York was mentioned for it. Lee Marshall of Continental Baking, the man who put vitamins in bread, was another. But James F. Byrnes, economic stabilization director, said it ought to be Mr. Wickard and so it was.

That is quite a rise for an Indiana farmer who was asked to come into the Agriculture Department in a minor position 10 years ago. He is getting somewhere when he became Secretary of Agriculture, head of 74,000 full-time and 200,000 part-time employees—a cabinet officer entitled to 19 guns should he stop in at Fort Myer to see how the soldiers were doing.

He might have been making history on that Sunday night when he was called to the White House for his advice, along with the other cabinet officers, and told that the Pacific Battle Fleet had been blasted at Pearl Harbor.

Always a Farmer. But now Mr. Wickard is more than a cabinet officer. He is a man in a food czar and all he has to do is to feed the United States and its armed forces and help feed the United Nations.

What fascinates many in the Agriculture Department is that he is a farmer. He has never made a cent living at anything else. One of the problem children fostered generation after generation by that great institution has become his head. His predecessors, it is true, made a great deal of money out of their farms when they were men and an ex-minister administration building next to the Smithsonian Institution. But the Wallaces, father and son, were farm publishers and Jardine and Houston were professors. Mr. Wickard's assistants are economists and public relations men and an ex-minister. He is the wonder of them all and they never tire remarking about it. He is a farmer!

Yesterday was M day in that other world of America, the agriculture world. When the kids filed in to school they were farmers filed in and tried to make themselves comfortable at the little desks all over the land. Over the radios, they heard talks on the urgency of food production from Maxim Litvinov, Ambassador, and Mr. Wickard from Washington. Lord Woolton, British Food Minister

"We need more hogs and soybeans and peanuts. Cotton seed is our biggest oil crop. But we have too much cotton and we can get much more oil out of the same land with peanuts. Mr. Wickard's main problem now is to get conversion. Last year's crops approached capacity but much too much of it was in the surplus of crops—wheat and short-crop cotton.

Two Ws are credited with the 1942 bumper crops. Mr. Wickard and the weather. He would have been a good market operator had he not been called to play a more important role. He called for more hog production in 1940, and many of the department's economists, thinking as usual of price maintenance, said he was crazy. The British have had a little more to spread on their bread as a result.

Washingtonians had not heard of Mr. Wickard before he was appointed Undersecretary and later Secretary. He had not been the head of one of the great bureaus that comprise the department. They soon heard of him. There was a fight with Price Administrator Henderson. In all fairness to Mr. Wickard, it was not the brawl that Congress made it seem. Mr. Wickard has had a promotion since.

More promotions? An earlier food administrator (Herbert Hoover) became President. And his predecessor as Secretary of Agriculture (Henry A. Wallace) is Vice President. But Mr. Wickard doesn't rate as they did in the winter books. He's on the spot. He has to deliver and there isn't enough to go around.

Is he a New Dealer? He's for the underdog, and the brain-trusters say that's a postulate of the philosophy.

"I never dreamed of any enormity greater than I have committed. I never knew, and never shall know, a worse man than myself."

"I went to the woods because I wished to live deliberately, to front only the essential facts of life and see if I could not learn what it had to teach, and not, when I came to die, discover that I had not lived."

"Time Is a Stream." "Time is but the stream I go fishing in."

"Men sometimes speak as if the study of the classics and English would make way for more modern and practical studies; but the adventurous student will always study classics, in whatever language they may be written and however ancient they may be. For what are the classics but the noblest recorded thoughts of man? They are the only oracles that are not decayed and there are such answers to the most modern inquiry in them as Delphi and Dodona never gave. We might as well omit to study Nature because she is old."

"How many a man has dated a new era in his life from the reading of a book."

"Society is commonly too cheap. We meet at very short intervals, not having had time to acquire any new value for each other."

"I have a great deal of company in my house, especially in the morning, when nobody comes."

"A man sits as many risks as he runs."

"Let the noon find thee by other lakes, and the night overtake thee anywhere at home."

"It is not worth the while to go around the world to count the cats in Zanzibar."

"Only that day dawns to which we are awake. There is more day to dawn. The sun is but a morning star."

from London and a service star farm mother from Minnesota named Mrs. Smitz. They also heard a commendation from President Roosevelt, read by Mr. Byrnes. This in every township of our 3,012 agricultural counties. For the next two weeks committee men will call on their fellow farmers, going over their property field by field and telling them what they are expected to produce.

Spread on Your Bread. One of Mr. Wickard's main problems is to get us something to spread on our bread. We will have plenty of bread. Wheat's in surplus. Remember about Germany choosing guns instead of butter? Why all this talk about butter? Because butter is what you miss. Ask anyone who has gone on a Hollywood 14 day reducing diet.

And don't worry about your dislike of substitutes when there will not be enough butter for you. We haven't the edible oils to replace all the butter with margarine. That's the problem. Glycerine for explosives comes from the same oils. There's a little more cocconut oil from the Pacific. New Zealand is laden with butter. And Australia with mutton. But the United Nations have lost many ships to the submarine. Britain is being fed largely by 40 round trips to New York. Wickard was busy at Chicago working for the vice presidential nomination of his boss, Mr. Wallace, and the boss that greeted Mr. Wallace's nomination did not come from the rural delegates from the Corn Belt. They were from the city wards.

One of Biggest Tasks. One of his biggest tasks is the reorganization of the Agriculture Department, as he is authorized to do in the order making him Food Administrator. Under Mr. Wallace every new thing the department undertook called for a new agency until there were 30 bureaus and staff offices reporting directly to the secretary.

What's Mr. Wickard like? He's got a grin like movie actor Edward G. Robinson. He's so sentimental that he almost chokes up when visiting delegations of farmers say goodbye with the old heartfelt good wishes. There's no talk among the underlings that the job has gone to his head. He's an unusual administrator in Washington in that he listens instead of talks when his subordinates get some time in his office. Friendly critics say he doesn't delegate enough. But everyone agrees that he has what Dale Carnegie sells as the most important thing: He gets along with people.

Mother Retains Hope For 5 Navy Brothers Missing in Action

Sullivan Boys Enlisted To Avenge Friend Killed at Pearl Harbor

By the Associated Press. WATERLOO, Iowa, Jan. 13.—The five Sullivan boys got what they wanted—a crack at the Japs. And they got that chance together—just as they wanted it.

The Navy notified their parents yesterday that the five brothers were "missing in action" following the sinking last November of the light cruiser Juneau, aboard which they had served together ever since the ship was commissioned a little less than a year ago.

But the Juneau took part in the blinding battle of Guadalcanal in which the Japanese were defeated with extremely heavy losses and the brothers probably averted Bill's death—and that's what they wanted.

"You see," explained George Sullivan when the five enlisted together a little over a year ago, "a buddy of ours was killed in the Pearl Harbor attack—Bill Ball of Fredericksburg, Iowa."

"That's where we want to go now, to Pearl Harbor," put in Francis, and the others nodded.

Were Kept Together. So the brothers joined the Navy with the provision that they not be separated.

They were: George T., 29, gunner's mate, second class; Francis H., 26, coxswain; Joseph E., 23, seaman, second class; Madison A., 22, seaman, second class; and Albert L., 20, seaman, second class.

Sons of Thomas F. Sullivan, a railroad freight conductor, the boys all worked for a Waterloo meat packing firm. George and Francis had completed four-year Navy hitch just six months before re-enlisting. All were single but Albert, whose wife and 22-month-old son joined the brothers' mother and only sister.

"All we can do is hope, now," said the 49-year-old mother. "Maybe they'll all show up somewhere, some day soon. But if they are gone, it will be some comfort to know they went together—as they wanted—and gave their lives for their country and victory."

Will Sponsor Navy Tug. Navy Secretary Knox some time ago invited the mother to christen a Navy tug soon to be sent down the ways, and she was asked if she planned still to take part. She smiled through her tears.

"Of course I'll take part. The boys want it that way, I know. They always wrote at the end of their letters, 'Keep your chin up,'" Mrs. Sullivan recalled. "And now's a good time to do just that."

Naval officers said at Washington the loss of the five brothers was the heaviest blow suffered by any single family since Pearl Harbor, and "probably in American naval history" since Navy policy is to divide members of family in wartime service. They pointed out the brothers had insisted on staying together despite repeated recommendations of their ship's executive officer.

Man Found Unconscious. Found unconscious at his home, 915 Twelfth Street S.E., last night, James Cady, 56, was reported "improved" at Casualty Hospital today after treatment for scalp lacerations and other head injuries. Police are investigating.

Retail Sales Tax Plan Revived in Congress; More Support Seen

Urged to Help Meet 16 Billions Additional Asked by Roosevelt

By the Associated Press. Another fight over a national retail sales tax—this time with possibly more legislators on the "pro" side—was assured today when Representative Robertson, Democrat of Virginia announced that he would re-offer this method of helping to raise the $16,000,000,000 in new taxes requested by President Roosevelt.

A member of the tax-framing House Ways and Means Committee which will start consideration of pay-as-you-go and other tax legislation within the next 10 days or two weeks, Mr. Robertson said he believed the income tax had reached the saturation point.

"If we are to raise another $16,000,000,000," he told reporters, "I don't see how we can do it without a sales tax. Income taxes have reached the limit of ability to pay for a great number of people. I don't see how we can go any further on this."

Move Rejected Last Year. Mr. Robertson was unsuccessful in an effort last year to get the Ways and Means Committee to consider a sales tax. The vote then was 13 to 8. Since then the committee has undergone some change, with six new Democratic members being added the other day to fill vacancies.

As last year, Mr. Robertson said he would propose only that the sales tax principle be considered, with the committee fixing the rates once it has agreed to the principle.

Advocates have estimated roughly that a 3 per cent levy, with Government and State purchases exempt, would raise $2,500,000,000.

Pay-as-You-Go Plans Studied. Members of the Ways and Means Committee expressed belief that the Ruml plan and other pay-as-you-go tax-collecting proposals designed to make it easier for individuals to pay the ever-mounting taxes to defray war costs would be given first consideration.

Representative Carlson, Republican of Kansas, who started a round discussion on the House floor yesterday when he advocated a plan to shift taxes from past to current income, said later that he understood the Treasury was working on a plan of its own, as was the Joint Congressional Internal Revenue Committee.

Mr. Carlson told the House that 27,200,000 citizens now are "in debt to the Federal Government for taxes on their 1942 income, an increase

Flynn Jury Selection Goes Into Third Day

By the Associated Press. LOS ANGELES, Jan. 13.—The glamour of Hollywood hung intangibly over the courtroom of Judge Leslie E. Still today as the task of selecting a jury to try Errol Flynn on three charges of assault went into its third day.

Attorneys for State and defense in questioning the men and women of the jury panel asked them about their movie-going habits and whether they had seen any of the defendant's pictures.

Two of the first three peremptory challenges exercised by the State were directed against veniremen with relatives in the motion picture industry, one of them herself a former actress. Two of the persons remaining in the jury box at that point were relatives of studio employees.

In defense, in its turn had exercised three of its own 10 peremptory challenges, two of them against elderly men. One was a widower with a 40-year-old son and the other a married man.

Women predominated in the jury box throughout the first two days of the trial, and after 19 veniremen had been questioned, the count stood nine women to three men.

The actor is charged with twice attacking Peggy La Rue Satterlee, 16-year-old Hollywood night club entertainer, during a cruise on his yacht Sirocco at Catalina Island and back August 3, 1941. He is charged in another count with assaulting Betty Hansen, 17-year-old Lincoln, Neb., schoolgirl, during a party in a Bel Air mansion September 27, 1942.

Diamond Heads Division For Red Cross Drive. Clark G. Diamond, vice president of the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy, has been appointed chairman of the residential division for the 1943 war fund drive of the American Red Cross, it was announced today by A. Mr. Diamond is air-raid warden for his district, a member of the board of Columbia Hospital and Children's Hospital, a director of the Rotary Club and member of the Lincoln, Neb., University Club and Burning Tree Country Club. In the recent Community War Fund drive he acted as vice chairman of group solicitation for zone 1. Mr. Diamond will have his headquarters at 1615 H street N.W. in the Red Cross drive.

One Small Voice —By John Kieran

Cons Volume Borrowed in 1917

Mention of books for soldiers (and sailors and marines and men of the Coast Guard) sent this reader to the bookshelf to look over an old book with something of a record. It's a small book, somewhat tattered and torn, but still serviceable.

It was obtained by way of straight barter—one book for another—from Pvt. Henry Wacker, Company A, 11th U. S. Engineers, a little over 25 years ago (December, 1917), on the Somme, near Peronne, in France. Pvt. Wacker was a former Dartmouth College varsity pitcher who enjoyed a brief trial with the New York Giants. He volunteered quickly on the outbreak of war and soon became a sergeant in the 11th Engineers. Stout fella, Henry.

But the Cambrai show that started November 20, 1917—the first time tanks were used on a large scale in modern warfare—cast Henry down. He went AWOL from Company A to take temporary lodgings in one of the British tanks as it rumbled into Jerry territory. When the tank was knocked out, he strayed off to join the Irish Guards in Bourton Wood, which was a very hot spot at the time. When he was finally chased back to his own company he found that he had been reduced to the rank of private for this unauthorized venture into holly disputed territory.

Got Thoreau's "Walden." What book this reader traded to Pvt. Wacker escapes memory, but the one received in return—a treasured volume—was Thoreau's "Walden," the account of the two years that Thoreau spent in a cabin on the fringe of Walden Pond. The subtitle of the book (rarely used) is "Life in the Woods" and Henry Wacker always did like adventure in the open or life in the woods.

There were long blacked-out nights over there when a fellow could do a real stretch of reading by the light of a candle in a hut, and Henry had marked some of his favorite lines in the book. Other markings were added when "Walden" passed into these hands. In case some of the modern soldiers—or general readers—are interested, here are a few of the passages that were marked (and remain marked to this day):

"As if you could kill time without injuring eternally."

"The mass of men lead lives of quiet desperation. What is called resignation is confirmed desperation."

"Often if an accident happens to a gentleman's legs, they can be mended; but if a similar accident happens to the legs of his pantaloons, there is no help for it; for he considers, not what is truly respectable but what is respected. We know but few men, a great many coats and speeches. In a scarecrow in your latest shift, you stand shiftilly by, who would not soonest salute the scarecrow?"

"There are a thousand hacking at the branches of evil to one who is striking at the root."

"I never dreamed of any enormity greater than I have committed. I never knew, and never shall know, a worse man than myself."

"I went to the woods because I wished to live deliberately, to front only the essential facts of life and see if I could not learn what it had to teach, and not, when I came to die, discover that I had not lived."

"Time Is a Stream." "Time is but the stream I go fishing in."

"Men sometimes speak as if the study of the classics and English would make way for more modern and practical studies; but the adventurous student will always study classics, in whatever language they may be written and however ancient they may be. For what are the classics but the noblest recorded thoughts of man? They are the only oracles that are not decayed and there are such answers to the most modern inquiry in them as Delphi and Dodona never gave. We might as well omit to study Nature because she is old."

"How many a man has dated a new era in his life from the reading of a book."

Revived Escadrille Quickly Gets Down To Serious Fighting

Americans in Africa Extend Warm Greeting To French Aces

By The Associated Press AT A UNITED STATES FIGHTER BASE IN AFRICA, Jan. 12 (Delayed)—The French American Indian war chief—the emblem adopted over a quarter of a century ago for the Lafayette Escadrille—flew over the Tunisian battlefields for the first time today, once more the symbol of the United States and France united in a war on Germany.

The first squadron of the new Lafayette Escadrille, composed of picked French aces who shot down an average of seven to eight planes each in the brief battle of France, flew into this base at dusk yesterday, ready to take up the fight where they left off two and one-half years ago. This squadron, which also calls itself the Lafayette-Storks, got a warm greeting from the ordinarily uncomplimentary American pilots and ground crews.

Americans Cheer Heartily. These men who seldom waste a glance at the sky unless they think enemy raiders are coming, dropped their work to wave heartily as the group which had fought for France in two wars circled the field and came in. The temper of these Frenchmen was shown in virtually the first words they uttered. Escadrille Leader Maj. Kostia Rozanoff, 37-year-old Parisian whose grandfather was Russian, leaped from the cockpit of his P-40 fighter, saluted the hands with Maj. Robert H. Christian, Port Washington, N. Y., commander of an American squadron, and asked: "The Pocke Wulf-190, you have fought with him?"

Maj. Christian replied with expressive gestures and the few French words at his command—three fingers for the number of his combats with the fast climbing Nazi war plane and a single finger for the one he shot down. Equipped by Americans. From the sleek P-40s they were flying down to meet kits and handkerchiefs, the French aces were equipped by the Americans. They spent some time training in the United States with their new planes. All had flown in 1940 or before, the Curtiss P-26, the grand-daddy of their present fighters.

Maj. Rozanoff wears the ribbon of the Croix de Guerre—green and black instead of the familiar green and red in token of France's mourning of its 1940 downfall—with a leaf and star award for his feat of twice shooting down two German planes on a single sortie. Another of the Escadrille's leaders, of the Croix de Guerre is Lt. Le Grand, whose 11 triumphs over the Luftwaffe in 1940 make him the leader in the French forces in North Africa.

Maj. Rozanoff told American pilots he was fortunate enough to be assigned to staff duty in Morocco when the United States troops landed and therefore was not ordered to fight against the Americans.

CREWMEN FIGHT VAINLY TO SAVE HORNET—View on the flight deck of the U. S. S. Hornet as crew members vainly fought to save the carrier after a Japanese dive bomber had crashed into the ship's signal bridge. Because of this and other damage sustained during the October 26 battle off Santa Cruz Islands the ship had to be sunk by American guns. —Navy Photos.

Hornet Took Heavy Toll Before It Was Sunk, Navy Says in Full Account of Exploits

By The Associated Press. The aircraft carrier Hornet "made the Japanese pay dearly for her sinking," the Navy said yesterday in releasing the full account of the ship's exploits in the battles of Midway and Santa Cruz and during raiding missions in the South Pacific. Identification of the ship was following up its announcement last November that the aircraft carrier, then unidentified, had been severely damaged in the Santa Cruz engagement that she had to be sunk by American warships.

All but 129 of the Hornet's 2,900 men were rescued by other vessels, the Navy said. Two destroyers were ordered to sink the Hornet with torpedoes and shells, with the sinking finally effected about dusk on October 26, 10 hours after Japanese planes had mortally damaged the vessel.

Text of Navy's Report. The text of the Navy's account of the Hornet's career follows: "The U. S. S. Hornet, identified by the Navy Department as the aircraft carrier lost October 26 in the battle of the Santa Cruz Islands, wrote her valiant history in blazing gunfire. On the day she perished, the Navy task force of which the Hornet was a part, shot down 156 Japanese warplanes.

"The Hornet's final attainment, nevertheless, pales when placed alongside the destruction she logged in the five months preceding her sinking. "Even more devastating to the enemy were the blows the Hornet struck at warships and auxiliaries. Her squadrons—Scouting Eight, Bombing Eight, Torpedo eight and Fighting Eight—Midway and Santa Cruz produced the following minimum results: "At least one torpedo hit on a carrier.

"Two 1,000-pound and one 500-pound bomb hits and two 1,000-pound torpedoes on battleships. "Six 1,000-pound hits on another cruiser. "Two 500-pound bomb hits on a cruiser. "One 1,000 and one 500-pound bomb hits on destroyers. "One destroyer struffed by fighters. "Seven 1,000-pound bomb hits on a carrier, larger than any American carrier, which was last seen blazing from stem to stern, and crossing in the water. "Four 10,000-ton transports with a capacity of approximately 5,000 men each, sunk.

"That is the damage list for Midway and Santa Cruz. At Santa Cruz, Grumman Avenger torpedo planes and Douglas Dauntless dive bombers from another United States carrier helped avenge the Hornet's sinking by laying two 500-pound bombs on a carrier of the Shokaku class, two 1,000-pound bomb hits on a cruiser. They also strafed a cruiser and shot down 23 Jap planes. "Between the Midway and Santa Cruz battles, the Hornet launched an attack on the Sulphur Islands, scoring hits on a tanker, a light cruiser and two cargo ships, and bombed the Cahili Airfield. They also made another land at Rekata Bay, where two beached transports were hit and burned, landing barges and supplies were fired, fuel dumps and anti-aircraft installations destroyed and 12 seaplanes shot down. "Commanded at the climax of her career by Rear Admiral Charles F. Mason, U. S. N., of Pensacola, Fla., the Hornet thus made the Japanese pay dearly for her sinking. And in the final analysis, the Japs themselves could not sink her. She survived attack after attack. One raging fire was extinguished by bucket brigades after the fire-fighting apparatus was destroyed. The Hornet was taken in tow and began to leave the battle area. Subsequent attacks damaged her badly. At the height of an attack, a 1,000-pound bomb pierced the Hornet's deck and entered the room next to the ordnance room—and it did not explode. The ordnance chief entered the room and disarmed the bomb—in the dark!

All But 129 Rescued. "Finally, after 10 hours under attack, the order was given to torpedo the Hornet, to preclude any possibility of her falling into enemy hands. But the Hornet was not done fighting. Two destroyers were ordered to sink her, and this they did with torpedoes and shells. As dusk crept over the South Pacific, the Hornet slid beneath the surface. Other surface vessels had rescued all but 129 of her complement of 2,900 men. "The Hornet had had a narrow brush with disaster about two months earlier, on September 6. The torpedo, launched from an enemy submarine, was speeding toward her hull when the pilot of an avenger torpedo bomber managed to hit near the torpedo with a depth charge. The deadly missile broached and changed course, passing safely beyond the carrier.

"The enemy force faced on October 26 was one of the greatest warship concentrations in history. There were, in one group, two cruisers, seven destroyers and two carriers; in another group, two battleships, one heavy cruiser, one light cruiser, seven destroyers and one or two carriers. "The Hornet's scouting squadron eight, speeding in Dauntless dive bombers to attack the Jap carriers, contacted the ships of the enemy. Led by Lt. Comdr. William J. Widhelm, U. S. N., of Humphrey, Neb., the squadron roared past three vessels. Their orders were: "Get the carriers."

"With a sighting distance of the first enemy flat-top, and after the squadron had been under constant, fierce attack by Zeros for half an hour over a distance of 75 miles, Widhelm himself was shot down. His squadron—the rear gunners of which were credited with 15 Zeros—was quickly closed up and went in after the carrier, a ship of the Zaukau class, described by pilots as larger than either the U. S. S. Lexington or U. S. S. Saratoga, largest in the United States Navy's history. "From a rubber lifeboat, Widhelm, the carrier's rear gunner, Aviation Radioman George D. Stokely of Newport, Tenn., watched their mates lay seven 1,000-pound bombs on the deck of the carrier, which broke into roaring flames for her entire length and went virtually dead in the water.

40 Jap Planes Shot Down. "The remarkable dive-bombing feat of Widhelm's 'Bombing Fools' as they had become known to the fleet—was accomplished by 11 of the Douglas dive bombers which took off from the Hornet's flight deck. One in addition to Widhelm's had been shot down and two others, damaged, were forced to take refuge in the clouds. The remaining 11 dropped the seven 1,000-pound bombs that probably spelled the doom of the Jap carrier. "Widhelm and Stokely were rescued by Consolidated Catalina patrol bomber three days later, and rejoined their mates and the other Hornet squadrons to continue fighting from land bases. Scouting Squadron 8 claimed a total of approximately 40 Jap planes shot down during their operations from the Hornet, mostly by their rear gunners. Lt. Comdr. Widhelm shot down one with his six guns. "The saga of the Hornet began in late May, 1942, when returning to Pearl Harbor after an extended cruise in enemy waters without contacting the Japanese, she was ordered immediately to carry a squadron to the vicinity of Midway in company with a task force.

Fought in Midway Battle. "In the Midway battle, these squadrons played a major role in defeating the Japanese fleet and rolling back the greatest threat of invasion of Continental America in the war. From June 4 to 6, the hard-hitting Hornet air group made five separate attacks and scored more than 14 direct hits and two near-misses on Japanese warships heavily straffed a destroyer with 30-caliber machine gun fire, and shot down three Zeros and two dive bombers. In addition, the Hornet acted as a foster home for the famous Fighting Squadron Three, credited with the destruction of 25 enemy airplanes and probably 15 more, after this squadron's carrier, the Yorktown, had been put out of action. The Hornet at that time was under the command of Capt. (now Rear Admiral) Mark A. Mitscher. "The carrier left Pearl Harbor about June 1 to help intercept the enemy force off Midway. Her airplanes took off from shore and joined her at sea. Widhelm was unable to get his airplane started and was flown out to the ship in the rear seat of a torpedo bomber. He was credited in the ensuing action with two direct hits with 1,000-pound bombs on a Japanese battleship. Subsequent action credited the Navy Cross for this action. "The Hornet's air group first roared into action at 9 o'clock in the morning of June 4. In search of a Japanese force of four aircraft carriers, reported to be more than 150 miles away, Torpedo Squadron 8, accompanied by fighters and dive bombers, took off on what was to prove one of the most heroic episodes of the war. Torpedo Squadron 8 pressed straight on to the target in spite of the fact that it became separated from its escorting fighters. Several miles before it reached the group of enemy carriers, it was attacked by an overwhelming force of Japanese Zeros. In spite of the hopeless odds against it, the squadron never wavered, but held course straight for the carriers.

Only One Plane Returns. First one member, then another, then others in quick succession fell before the Jap attack. How many torpedoes hit the carriers before they were separated from the carrier, is not known, for only Ensign G. H. Gay, U. S. N. R., returned from this squadron's heroic action. Gay himself scored a hit and it is probable that several of his squadron mates did also. All pilots from this squadron were later awarded the Navy Cross and their gunners were awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross. With the exception of Ensign Gay, all awards were posthumous. "Some of the scout bombers which had become separated from the torpedoes were able to return to the carrier; the others, with the accompanying fighters, returned to Midway to refuel. "A number of the Hornet's Grumman Wildcats had remained on land to furnish a protective combat air patrol over our own carriers. These fighters helped to intercept the Japanese attack on the nearby Yorktown, and in this action shot down three Zeros and two Japanese dive bombers.

The second attack by the Hornet air group was launched at approximately 6 o'clock the same afternoon. A large force of Dauntless dive bombers was launched and scored three direct hits on a battleship and two on a heavy cruiser. "The third attack came the next day, when another group of Dauntless planes was launched to search for the remaining Japanese carriers. The Wildcats were ordered to locate the carriers, so attacked the nearest available target, a light cruiser, and returned to the Hornet. "The fourth attack was launched on the morning of June 6 by a large force of Dauntless dive bombers, escorted by Wildcats. This force attacked an enemy group consisting of a battleship, a heavy cruiser and three destroyers. Two 1,000-pound bombs and five 500-pound bomb hits were scored on the battleship. Two other 1,000-pound bomb hits were scored on the heavy cruiser and one 500-pound bomb struck the stern of one of the destroyers. Four of the Wildcats teamed up to strafe another destroyer with their 50-caliber machine guns. This attack caused heavy personnel losses on the bridge and deck of the destroyer. "The fifth Hornet attack was launched that afternoon by Dauntless dive bombers. Their target was a Jap force of two cruisers and two destroyers more than 100 miles distant. One of the cruisers was left completely gutted by fire, with its personnel abandoning ship.

Ship Halved by Torpedo, Stern Remains Afloat

By The Associated Press. NORFOLK, Va., Jan. 13.—Striking a small British cargo ship in the Indian Ocean, enemy torpedoes caused the forward half of the vessel to break away and sink, leaving the undamaged stern afloat, survivors related here. "The individual purchaser of a tube of toothpaste or shaving cream must continue to turn in a used tube for each new tube purchased. "It's common sense to be thrifty. War bonds help you to save and help to save America.

Old Glory still flew from the gaff of the Hornet's signal bridge after the Japanese pilot's suicidal dive left it a twisted mass of wreckage.

Northampton Captain Describes Destruction of Jap Force

Enemy Invaders' Fleet Off Guadalcanal 'Blew Up All Over the Place,' Officer Says

By The Associated Press. SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 13.—"They just blew up all over the place!" Those were the words Capt. Willard A. Kitts III used to picture the destruction of a Jap invasion force off the coast of Guadalcanal. It all happened in about 15 minutes at about midnight November 30. "The Japs, Capt. Kitts declared, lost eight destroyers, two cruisers and four transports. "Capt. Kitts lost his own ship, the heavy cruiser Northampton, but not until his gunnery crews had contributed to the tremendous destruction handed the enemy. His men got at least two Jap destroyers. "The Navy Monday night disclosed loss of the Northampton, two other cruisers, the aircraft carrier Hornet and seven destroyers in the Solomon area between October 26 and December 1. "Capt. Kitts, 48, is visiting his family in San Francisco. "Large Part of Crew Saved. "We were fortunate to save a very large per cent of our crew due to their discipline," he declared. "My most lasting impression was the wonderful spirit of my men. They are beyond all praise. They are cheerful, witty; you can't get them downhearted."

He said he believed every one able to leave the ship was saved. Part of the crew was able to escape because of the fact that "sharks operate by daylight." He mentioned, too, the miraculous escape of a wounded seaman in that hell-like fury when his big ship was flaming to destruction and ammunition was exploding so that the length and breadth of the vessel looked like a great field of fireworks. "The severely wounded seaman (Capt. Kitts did not know his name) was in a watch loft high in the mainmast. Shipmates reached him and were able to get him to a slightly lower level. He was given an opiate, but even this helped little. He demanded of those with him that if the ship was abandoned he be left there, as he couldn't bear the pain of being moved another inch. They left the youth, with two life jackets, in his elevated station. "In a short time all others took to lifeboats and rafts. "Injured Man Floated Off. "As the big cruiser keeled over slowly and the mainmast dipped into the sea, the injured man supported by the two life jackets, floated out into the waves. He was picked up quickly and now is recovering in a field hospital. "The captain had another story: From his lifeboat, as the Northampton slowly overturned and then poised, bottom up, he was sure he saw two figures dashing madly across the overturned keel. Then he decided that such things couldn't be. But after the rescue, he said, he learned that his eye had not betrayed him: that two colored mess attendants—non-swimmers—had been so loath to take to the water that they stuck with the ship, and as she rolled over they scrambled across the bottom like loggers riding a spinning log, and then jumped into the sea.

Library of Congress Gets American's Creed Record

By The Associated Press. Representative Stefan, Republican, of Nebraska, has presented to the Library of Congress a radio recording of the "American Creed," by its author, the late William Tyler Page, longtime employe of the House. "Library officials said the recording will become a permanent part of the archives of American folk songs and speeches and characterized it as of "immense historical value because it is the only known recording of the reading of the creed by the author."

Mr. Stefan explained that the recording was made here October 10, 1941, for broadcast over the Norfolk (Neb.) Daily News radio station WJAG. It consists of an interview of Mr. Page by Mr. Stefan, during the course of which the Representative asked that the author read the creed. "Starting as a page boy, Mr. Page was an employe of the House for 61 years. He was chief clerk at one time and was special clerk to the minority at the time of his death last year. He was born at Frederick, Md., October 19, 1868.

Tin for Tooth Paste Tubes To Be Further Curtailed

By The Associated Press. In an order designed to save 100 tons of tin during 1943 the War Production Board further curtailed today the use of tin in toothpaste and shaving cream tubes. Effective immediately, the order prohibits the use of tin in the manufacture of shaving cream tubes, but allows manufacturers to use up tubes containing up to 1.5 per cent tin which they had in their inventory today. "Beginning April 1, the tin content in toothpaste tubes is to be reduced from 5 per cent to 3 per cent of the weight of the tube. "During 1943 a manufacturer may not pack more than 75 per cent of the amount of toothpaste he packed in 1942 in tubes containing tin. Previously the pack had been restricted to 100 per cent of the amount packed in 1940. "The order prohibits the manufacture and use of all-tin tubes used by druggists to fill prescriptions. Druggists, however, are permitted to use tubes they have on hand. "As a result of the order, WFB said, tubes in the future will be made largely of lead. "The individual purchaser of a tube of toothpaste or shaving cream must continue to turn in a used tube for each new tube purchased. "It's common sense to be thrifty. War bonds help you to save and help to save America.

British Again Smash At Nazis' Ruhr Area In Night Air Assault

One Plane Is Missing; Raider Bombs Town in Southeast England

By The Associated Press. LONDON, Jan. 13.—British bombers smashed at the Ruhr again last night, the Air Ministry announced today. It was the seventh attack on the area in 10 nights. One of the attacking planes failed to return, a communique said. A number of persons were reported killed and many injured in a dawn attack today by two German raiders on a town on England's southeast coast. After dropping their bombs, the German raiders machine gunned the area. Ambulances from three centers were called to remove the injured to hospitals while rescue squads dug into the debris to release persons buried in the ruins of their homes. France also was struck by a procession of daylight raiders which took off after midnight and flew through bright, springlike skies over the Poikstone area toward Boulogne.

19 District Graduates To Get Commissions At West Point

400 Members in Class Advanced 4½ Months Because of War

Nineteen Washington men, including the sons of two generals, will be among the more than 400 cadets who will receive their commissions as second lieutenants at graduation exercises Tuesday at West Point.

Originally scheduled either for late March or early June, the graduation finally was advanced four-and-a-half months under the Military Academy's new three-year course program. Maj. Gen. Francis B. Wilby, superintendent, has announced that in keeping with present-day conditions, there will be no class reunion or alumni exercises during graduation week.

The baccalaureate service, and the superintendents' reception in Cullum Hall for members of the graduating class and their families and friends will be held Sunday and the graduation parade and dance Monday.

The Washington graduates are:

D. C. Graduates Listed.
Ernest D. Scott, son of Gen. and Mrs. Scott, 3549 Springland lane N.W., graduate of Staunton Military Academy and former student at Millard's Preparatory School here. During his first year at West Point he was made a cadet sergeant. He was president of the Dialectic Society and a member of the Ring Committee. Upon graduation he will receive his commission in the Air Forces with pilot's wings.

James E. H. Rumbough, son of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. W. S. Rumbough, of the Kennedy-Warren Apartments. He is a graduate of St. Albans High School and attended Millard's. During his first year at West Point he was a cadet supply sergeant. He expects to be commissioned in the infantry.

Charles A. Wirt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin B. Wirt, 3142 Quesada street N.W., a graduate of the Hume Fogg High School of Nashville. He attended Vanderbilt University and Marion Military Institute and was serving in the Regular Army when appointed to the academy. During his first year, he was made a cadet sergeant and took part in soccer, lacrosse and skiing. He will be commissioned in the infantry.

Assigned to Air Forces.
Darric H. Richards, son of Col. and Mrs. George J. Richards, 3601 Connecticut avenue, and graduate of Woodrow Wilson High School and former student at Brown University. During his first year at the academy he became cadet lieutenant and was a member of the Dialectic Society, choir, Ski Club and a chapel usher. He will receive his commission in the Air Forces.

He will be commissioned in the Engineer Corps.

Adrian St. John, son of Col. Adrian St. John of this city. A graduate of Balboa High School, he attended Millard's and during his first year at the academy attained the rank of cadet lieutenant. He was a "hop" manager, member of the Water Carnival Committee and Squash Club. He will be commissioned in the cavalry.

technologists of this Nation are not as yet giving sufficient attention to certain processes and operations, which although small in size would be highly beneficial and highly competitive. I have reached this conclusion because of the department's unsuccessful efforts to obtain support for and acceptance by various agencies of some of its competitive processes.

"It may be that if we freed technology from the restrictions of interlocking corporate control and the ideology of monopoly we could reap a harvest of new, highly efficient and self-contained medium and small sized operations."

Mr. Ickes urged that "raw materials should be made available to all business enterprises rather than to a select few," a point which, he said, had been advanced for years. He regretted that the department's plan for developing resources of the West to "furnish the industries of the Nation with a backlog of resources to draw upon should foreign supplies be cut off" had been accepted only in part. Some plants have been established close to raw materials, he pointed out, such as Shipbuilder Henry Kaiser's integrated steel plant near Los Angeles, but the achievements have not been extensive.

Asks Aid for Little Fellow.
"We can't win it," Mr. Ickes insisted, "live to see the day of the common man's cartel. This would be not so much for the sake of small business as for the sake of us all. Should the small business go, we will all go. In fighting for him, we fight for all of us."

In opening the hearing, Chairman Murray said the committee was "acutely aware of the strategic importance of our materials supply in the war program."

"This committee," he added, "also feels that it's responsibility toward small business includes the thousands of smaller mine operators who have thus far been unable to participate effectively in the production of critical and strategic materials. The committee has heard testimony from small mine operators to the effect that the War Production Board has failed to take action looking toward the expansion of production of essential materials.

"It is a well known fact that the war construction program has permitted an over-expansion of factories that cannot be fully utilized because of the lack of sufficient metals and minerals. In other words, we have an over-expansion of factories and an under-expansion of the mines needed to produce the materials needed by the factories," Senator Murray said.

Lowell Leaves $260,000; Bulk Already Given Away
By the Associated Press.
BOSTON, Jan. 13.—Because the bulk of the estate of A. Lawrence Lowell, president emeritus of Harvard University, was given away anonymously to public institutions or charities during his lifetime, Executor Caleb Loring announced today, the executor's will, disposing of more than $260,000, contained only a single public bequest.

Filed in Suffolk Probate Court today, Dr. Lowell's will contained private bequests to associates, employees and servants, and relatives, and bequeathed to the State of Massachusetts trustees of public reservations an estate known as Canaanet, comprising 130 acres in the towns of Mashpee and Palmyra. The trustees were given $10,000 in addition, the income to be devoted to upkeep of the property. The total value of the estate divided by the will was not estimated.

To his secretary, Nora A. Dwyer, Dr. Lowell bequeathed $10,000 outright, $3,000 annually for life and his share in the Boston Athenaeum, a private library and literary institution. Other provisions set up yearly incomes ranging from $150 to $500 for a dozen former employees or servants. None of the outright individual bequests exceeded $25,000. Provision was made for proportionate division of any residue among nieces and nephews and their children.

metals. Without the metals of these ores small business cannot operate. Old concepts, threadbare business and financial habits and attitudes of ancient administrative procedures that block the way must be boldly reshaped or removed.

Critical shortages exist in minerals and metals, Mr. Ickes emphasized, adding that "this is but the fact and not necessarily criticism of the several wartime agencies now concerned with minerals and metals production."

The Senate committee is seeking to enlist Government co-operation for small mine operators.

Mr. Ickes recalled and deplored that "this Nation, with its apparent unlimited wealth of minerals, in past years had crooned itself into thinking that it need only concern itself with the largest and richest ore deposits."

"Such ores were considered basic to our minerals industry. When we could no longer find them at home we went abroad. Imports of chrome, manganese and bauxite are good examples. When war came, men now in Government and industry, who were trained in the peacetime business of getting minerals from bonanza ores, thought that we could continue to import. 'Oh,' they said, 'quite naturally, ample ships will be available.' The Nazi submarine was Hitler's comment on that optimistic assumption!"

Points to Own Program.
Citing the Interior Department's program to expand power and mining facilities, Mr. Ickes said it constantly was thinking in terms of new processes which, if applied to lower-grade materials, "would economically and competitively produce metals and chemicals on a par with those of the larger operations."

"I believe," he added, "that the Father John's Medicine was originally compounded for Rev. Father John O'Brien of Lowell, Mass., in 1855. He afterwards recommended it to his parishioners and friends.

In this way it became popularly known as Father John's Medicine and many thousands have since been benefited by this valuable preparation. Many impressive endorsements have been received from clergymen, doctors, nurses, hospitals and institutions covering the period of over 85 years.

No amount of advertising alone could have built its reputation during 85 years unless it proved its merit. Father John's Medicine helps build resistance to colds when the body needs more vitamin A. It is also rich in vitamin D. Father John's Medicine gives quick relief from coughs due to colds by soothing the throat, and is pure, wholesome and nutritive.

Connecticut Farmers Urge Roosevelt to Put End to Strikes

Telegram Cites Troops' Sacrifices, Condemns 'Labor Racketeers'

By the Associated Press.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 13.—A telegram strongly condemning "labor racketeers" and deploring all strikes was sent yesterday to President Roosevelt by the Connecticut State Grange, meeting here for its 58th annual session.

"Coal miners are out on strike," the telegram said in part. "New England is cold and growing colder. We need coal, oil, gasoline, rubber and food. Men in essential industry are out on strike. Farmers are bending their backs under a heavy load. Farmers are short of man-power, materials and machinery. Farmers are too patriotic to strike.

"This is America (our country) of which we speak. Our boys are fighting gallantly on the seven seas and on every continent. Every man-hour lost is the enemy's gain.

"Mr. President, the farmers of America look to you to end all strikes forthwith. We deplore all strikes in times like these. We condemn labor racketeers. Mr. President, American farmers are looking to you to find a way to end the strikes.

Similar sentiments were expressed by Sherman K. Ives, master of the State Grange, in his report.

"It is, indeed, regrettable, if not tragic, that our farmers should now have to be giving thought and effort to combating labor organizers on one hand and the enemy's social experimentation on the other when their sole endeavor should be food production in this crisis."

He charged that the United States Agriculture Department had issued a "misleading statement" on current agricultural prices, which he said are "lower than in 1939 or 1941, while industrial wages are higher.

"In spite of this, farmers have performed an almost miraculous feat of production in 1942," he added.

Army Identifies Ten Killed in Plane Crash

By the Associated Press.

ALAMOGORDO, N. Mex., Jan. 13.—Ten airmen were killed in the crash of a B-24 Army bomber at the Alamogordo Army Air Base yesterday.

The plane was on a routine flight, the base said, and the cause of the accident will be determined by a board of inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—J. Edgar Hoover, Federal Bureau of Investigation director, told a Federal Court jury yesterday that although Newell Mecartney, Chicago attorney charged with sedition, sent him a copy of a speech which Mr. Mecartney delivered last spring, he saw it for the first time within the last two weeks.

The speech was delivered March 24 before "We, the Mothers, Mobilized, Inc.," and Government prosecutors have charged it contained seditious statements.

Mr. Hoover was called as a defense witness in the trial of Mr. Mecartney and two others, Elmer W. Soller and Elmer Hartzell. Mr. Mecartney testified he sent the speech to Mr. Hoover and received an acknowledgment.

Shown the letter of acknowledgment, Mr. Hoover identified the signature "J. E. Hoover" as not his personal signature, but one affixed to routine letters by his secretary. He said he had sent the address only about two weeks ago.

The speech in question said in part: "Pearl Harbor, no doubt, is the first of well-deserved punishments for this country."

Saga of Rickenbacker To Be Made Into Film

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Negotiations are under way here for a motion picture production based on the life story of Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, it was disclosed today by Christy Walsh, the flyer's authorized representative.

Mr. Walsh said no contract or commitment has been made as yet with any motion picture company or individual. A number of proposals have been made for the screen dramatization of the career of the World War ace and hero of the recent rescue of a flying group forced down in the South Pacific.

"The War we're in is the war to win! Buy War bonds!"

Rickenbacker Calm As Plane Hit Sea

This is the second installment of the day-by-day story—told here in full for the first time—of Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker and the seven companions with whom for more than three weeks he fought thirst, hunger, sharks and the elements in the equatorial South West Pacific.

By LT. JAMES C. WHITTAKER, United States Army Air Corps, Ferry Command, as Told to Charles Leaville.

Our big flying fortress thundered confidently along above the clouds of the Southwest Pacific just as though its pilots knew where they were going. But we were hopelessly lost. A takeoff accident at Hickam Field, Honolulu, had damaged our ocean with the result that its erroneous readings had sent us off our course.

Our distinguished passenger, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, whom we were carrying on a War Department mission, appeared unperturbed. Capt. William T. Cherry, Jr., pilot and commander of the fortress, was telling him that the only station able to set a radio course for us was 1,000 miles away and that we had only 4 hours' fuel in our tanks.

"What do you expect to do?" Capt. Rickenbacker asked.

"We'll try the best procedure first," Capt. Cherry replied. "And then there are a couple of other things that may help."

Flying the Square.

In the box procedure a lost plane flies a course that describes a square. This enables the crew to scan a vast area inside and outside the box. At 5,000 feet we were 2,000 feet above the overcast, which now had broken about 50 per cent, giving us a good view of the ocean below.

Capt. Cherry decided to fly 45 minutes on each leg of the box course—a total of three hours. As we went into the first leg, Capt. Cherry ordered Staff Sgt. James W. Reynolds, our radio operator, to raise the island of our destination, which we had overcast. When they answered, he asked that they begin firing anti-aircraft shells at five-minute intervals and timed to explode at 8,000 feet.

They replied they were starting to fire immediately and were clearing planes to search for us and guide us in. Our crew was posted at all windows and ports to watch for the bursts and planes. Capt. Rickenbacker and his mixer, Col. Hans Adamson of Washington, assisted at this.

In the cockpit beside Capt. Cherry, I strained my eyes for the grayish-black shell bursts that would locate our island and for the planes that would lead us in. I searched the far rims of the cloud bank, the blue vault of sky above me and the watery blue floor far below. Never had I seen a world so ominously empty. We completed the first leg and the second. We drew to the end of the third. We banked into the final leg, still without seeing shell burst or plane. Capt. Rickenbacker's countenance—what I could see of it—was inscrutable. The "some folks in Quail, Tex.," we have been proud of Capt. Cherry's poker face.

Emergency SOS.

The last of our three hours ticked off. We were back at our starting point. Capt. Cherry summoned Sergt. Reynolds.

"Go on emergency frequency and start pounding out SOS," he said, "some one will hear us and get bearings on our course." Capt. Cherry then gave Sergt. Reynolds our speed and course.

"Jim," he said to me, "we'll have to set her down in about an hour. Let's talk about how we're going to do it."

So far as either of us knew, no four-motored land plane ever had been set down into the sea without casualties. In most cases no one of the crew had lived to tell about it. When a plane is put into the ocean against the wind it meets the waves head on. If it touches on the crest of a wave, the nose will be plunged into the middle of the next one and cave in. The first wave is hit too hard the plane breaks in two.

I suggested, therefore, that we go in cross-wind and try to settle in a trough (the valley between two waves). Bill agreed to this and said he thought we ought to go in under power while we still had gasoline in the tanks. This seemed logical to me. A controlled landing always is better than an uncontrolled one. Eventually, we had agreed on all points.

Capt. Rickenbacker, who had sat in on part of our talk, took over disposition of the crew. He led every one except Sergt. Reynolds to the compartment back of the bomb bay and told them to lie on the floor, their feet toward the tail and their head braced against the bulkhead. Capt. Rickenbacker stationed himself beside a port to call out our altitude after we had gotten too low for bill to judge it from the cockpit.

Nose to Last Landing.

Bill pushed the wheel forward and or big olive drab war bird nosed down toward its last landing. I got tired rest cushions, which Bill and I put against our stomachs, then fastened the safety belts over them. At 200 feet we cut the two inward motors and feathered their propellers to keep them from turning in the wind.

We were losing altitude swiftly now and Bill's eyes were glued to the sea, which was leaping up to meet us. At that instant we heard the voice of Lt. John J. De Angelis, our navigator, "Do you fellows mind," he asked, "do you mind if I pray?"

"What in the hell do you think we're doing?" Capt. Cherry snapped, without lifting his eyes. Lt. De Angelis returned to the others and in a moment Capt. Rickenbacker's voice sang out, steady and calm:

"Fifty feet" and almost immediately, "30 feet."

It was strangely still in the plane. The muffled roar of the two outboard engines seemed far away. There was a faint whooshing of air wind about the fuselage. The whine of Sergt. Reynolds' radio rose above it, sharp and strident.

I recall feeling irritation then at Lt. De Angelis' mention of prayer. How differently we used to feel in the days to come. But that's how I felt then.

"Twenty feet."

Loosens Escape Hatch.

Young Johnny Bartek, our engineer and the only private aboard, raced forward from the stern and loosened the lugs that held the escape hatch over the cockpit. The lid whipped off and was gone in an instant. He paused in the bomb bay, freed his hatch there and sped back to his station on the floor.

The wind was a roar now. We were coming in at 90 miles an hour with the landing flaps and wheels up so there would be nothing to snag in the water. You can't realize the will power it takes to put a plane into the sea with even a teacup of fuel left in the tanks.

"Five feet," Capt. Rickenbacker shouted. "Three feet... one foot!"

"Go it," yelled Bill. I pulled the main-line switch, killing every electrical connection in the ship. Bill hauled back on the wheel, hooking the tail into the water. The fuselage came down into the trough and landed, but did not leave the surface. The waves rolled up about us and we were in. From almost 90 miles an hour we came to a full stop in a little over 30 feet—about 10 steps.

The shock and pressure of that landing is almost indescribable to a person who hasn't been through one. Despite the cushions, the safety belt seemed slicing me in two. A vinegary taste filled my mouth. My eyes seemed to spin around like an already tight spring that is winding up to the snapping point.

I couldn't see. I thought I was losing consciousness. Then my eyes began to unwind and the pressure inside my head reduced swiftly.

Rubber Rafts Freed.

I don't remember leaving my seat, but the next thing I knew I was up, yanking the rip cord that freed our three-place rubber life raft from the forward trap on top of the fuselage. Capt. Rickenbacker was doing the same with the after raft.

I saw Lt. De Angelis shoving the tiny two-man raft up through the escape trap over the bomb bay. Helping him was Sergt. Alex Kaczmarzyk, who was en route to rejoin his unit somewhere southwest after 45 days in the hospital with yellow jaundice. Lt. De Angelis and Alex were assigned together because they were the smallest and lightest.

Capt. Bill Cherry was scrambling out of the pilot's seat unscathed. Blood was trickling from a cut across Sergt. Reynolds' nose. He had left his sending key only when Capt. Rickenbacker yelled: "Three feet." He didn't know what he had hit, however. I had a slight arm cut and Col. Adamson a wrenched shoulder.

I don't know the order in which we left the plane. Uppermost in my mind was that for the first time in history, a four-motored land plane had been put down in the ocean without casualties and I wanted to keep it that way. We got out fast. I did see that Capt. Cherry emerged last. He was captain of the ship so that was as it should have been.

Everybody worked together as a good bomber crew should. There was no hitch. We were out and in 60 seconds our life rafts had been inflated from the metal flasks of compressed carbon dioxide. We launched them, then every man jacket of us was violently ill. I think it was the shock of landing that did this, as no one was seasick after this brief attack. Capt. Rickenbacker maintained with a straight face that he had not been upset in the least. I am under the distinct impression, however, that I saw three heads bent over the gunwale of the raft occupied by Rick, Bartek and Col. Adamson.

I had little time to think of that then, however, for no sooner had our little fleet shoved away from our derelict plane than I saw something swish past my raft. I turned for a good look.

The shock I had then was almost as severe as the one during our crash landing. The water about us was alive with the triangular dorsal fins of sharks!

Blow Hot or Cold But Elsewhere, Buglers Warned

PINE CAMP, N. Y., Jan. 13.—Those guys who blow so sweetly in here and make it come out so sour here—the Army's buglers—have their troubles, and not solely with disgruntled soldiers at dawn.

Corpl. Herb Dube, who conducts a class for tooters of the instrument so abhorred by men in the ranks, begs to report:

That one of his students showed up recently with a lip, looking like he had stopped somebody's fist with his mouth. He admitted having blown two front teeth loose from a dental plate while practicing his calls.

That another gave every appearance of having stuck his face into the business end of a sausage machine. He had attempted a few hot notes on a cold bugle, and after some thawing, yielded a substantial area to the barracks and recreation halls.

But, Corpl. Dube adds, the boys have found a refuge. They use the airtight chamber in which the chemical warfare section demonstrates poison gases—when the chemical warfare section isn't using it.

Admiral Scott's Death Revealed as on Atlanta

By the Associated Press.

PEARL HARBOR, T. H., Jan. 13.—Rear Admiral Norman Scott, formerly of Kirkwood, Mo., lost his life when the cruiser Atlanta was sunk during the battle of Guadalcanal last November, it was disclosed yesterday.

His death had been previously reported, but not the circumstances or time. Announcement by the Navy Department in Washington of the loss of the Atlanta permitted the disclosure that the admiral had gone down with the Atlanta in the naval engagement of November 13 to 15 in the Solomons Islands area.

WLB to Decentralize, Set Up 12 Regional Offices to Speed Cases

Area Boards' Powers Will Be Final on Wage Agreements and Disputes

The War Labor Board, it was learned today, has decided on a drastic reorganization of procedure calling for the creation of regional boards with power to rule finally in labor disputes and voluntary wage and salary agreements.

The regional boards will be set up in the 10 cities in which the WLB now has regional offices, with two others located in Detroit and Seattle. Two more may be established later. Details of the plan probably will be announced in a week, and the boards will start functioning as quickly as the necessary personnel can be obtained and the machinery organized.

A growing backlog of cases and complaints of delay which sometimes in a few cases themselves in "quickie" work stoppages, led the board to decide on this virtual all-out decentralization and delegation of authority.

Previous Plan Inadequate. Previously the WLB had planned to establish 30 or more permanent panels throughout the country and to give certain review powers to the existing regional advisory boards, but found that plan was not far-reaching enough to keep abreast of the heavy case load. Instead, the advisory boards will be reconstituted into regional War Labor Boards. The regional boards will be almost exact counterparts of the WLB in Washington. They will have 12 members each—four representing industry, four labor and four public members. It is possible, however, that only half that number will serve on a full-time basis at first. The present regional director in each case will become one of the public members as well as chairman.

Hopes to Speed Cases. By this method the WLB hopes to speed up greatly the disposition of disputes and to reduce to a mere trickle the volume of cases coming to Washington. In effect, the WLB will constitute itself a "supreme court" in its field, deciding those cases which affect basic policy. Cases may be appealed to Washington in certain circumstances, and the WLB will retain its right to call up a case and review it on its own motion.

The cities in which these boards will be established are Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Cleveland, Chicago, Kansas City, Denver, Dallas, Detroit, Seattle and San Francisco.

Meanwhile, the WLB announced the establishment of a shipbuilding commission, to settle labor disputes and pass on requests for wage and salary increases among the Nation's 900,000 shipbuilding workers. The commission will consist of seven members—a chairman, two members representing management and two representing labor, to be selected by the War Labor Board; one member to be appointed by Secretary of the Navy Knox, and one to be named by the Maritime Commission.

Continues Committee. Under the board's order, the Shipbuilding Stabilization Committee, created by the War Production Board last August, will continue to perform its functions, "except that no new wage rate fixed by the zone standards agreement shall become effective until approved by the War Labor Board."

$90,000,000 Numbers Ring Reported Broken in Massachusetts

A State Police Arrest 20 Men and 3 Women in 12 Simultaneous Raids

These conferences resulted in the establishment of uniform wage agreements in four zones. In order to interpret and administer these agreements, the committee was increased to 31 members last August. The committee, however, had no power to issue orders on labor disputes, and lacked authority over wages in yards which had not voluntarily come under its stabilization agreements. These agreements fixed a wage rate of $1.20 an hour for standard skilled mechanics, but did not lay down a uniform schedule for other wage rates.

Acting as the agent of the WLB, the new commission has been given authority to approve or disapprove requests for voluntary adjustments of wage rates or salaries for any type of job in the shipbuilding industry. Under the board's order, it is instructed to apply zone standards to yards which have agreed to these standards.

The new commission will be under orders to follow the wage stabilization and other wage policies of the WLB. Rulings of the commission will be final, subject only to review by the WLB.

Educators Propose Program to Ease Teacher Shortage

State-Wide Surveys, Financial Aid for Students Sought

State Surveys Urged. State-wide surveys by State Departments of Public Instruction to reveal the number and types of positions likely to be open at the beginning of the 1943-4 year.

Registration through local schools of all persons now teaching but qualified to teach or able to qualify with three months of full-time training.

Special summer programs of all types of teacher education institutions to meet the needs of persons requiring "refresher" courses.

Teacher placement services, both institutional and governmental, to register and make available to employing officials on a non-commission basis the teachers qualified for employment.

Financial Assistance. If necessary provide financial assistance to individuals seeking teacher training to be administered by some such organization as the present NYA and to employ similar procedures of allocating funds in order to insure the needed supply of teachers and the fullest utilization of training opportunities.

The sponsors of the plan also suggested that, if financial assistance to local communities was needed to provide teachers in shortage fields, Federal grants be made available to "those school districts which are unable to keep or employ teachers because of inadequate resources with which to pay satisfactory salaries."

$90,000,000 Numbers Ring Reported Broken in Massachusetts

State Police Arrest 20 Men and 3 Women in 12 Simultaneous Raids

By the Associated Press. BOSTON, Jan. 13.—Declaring they had cracked one of the Nation's largest number pool lottery rings, reputed to have grossed $90,000,000 in the past eight years, State police today held 20 men and three women under heavy bail.

Investigators from Attorney General Robert T. Bushnell's office said Federal authorities were investigating the possibility that the ring had defrauded the Government of $1,500,000 in taxes on income.

The investigators added that they had evidence, backed with motion pictures taken by detectives who shadowed the ring since last June.

These pictures, the investigators continued, showed small-time "bookies," as well as some "big shots," blossoming out in new automobiles and new tires.

The automobiles bore basic "A" gasoline ration stickers, but, the investigators added, one moving picture showed a member of the ring refilling his car's gasoline tank from a five-gallon tin carried in a rear compartment.

This has led, they said, to an investigation of a possible "black market" in gasoline.

State police made the arrests in 12 simultaneous raids yesterday.

Guani Visit Viewed As Significant for Uruguayan Progress

U. S. Loan and Relations With Russia and Canada Believed Main Topics

By ALLEN HADEN, Foreign Correspondent of The Star and Chicago Daily News. MONTEVIDEO, Jan. 13.—The official visit to the United States and Canada of Alberto Guani, Foreign Minister and Vice President-elect of Uruguay, may mark another significant stage in Uruguayan foreign policy...

U. S. Loan and Relations With Russia and Canada Believed Main Topics

Observers believe that the loan Guani will seek will carry Uruguay over the rough spot which a budget shows a deficit now of about 10,000,000 pesos, or about $10,000,000.

Relations With Canada

Diplomatic relations with Canada are in line with the noticeable efforts that Canada has made in recent years to increase her contacts with South America.

Will Be Official Guest

The excuse was the failure of Russia to buy a diminutive quantity of cheese. Guani, then Uruguayan representative to the League of Nations, faced Russian Delegate Maxim M. Litvinoff, now Ambassador to Washington.

Willkie to Return $10 To Deatherage If He Ever Gets It

'Retainer Fee' May Be In Unopened Mail, Attorney Declares

Wendell Willkie, 1940 Republican presidential candidate, today promised to refund the $10 "retainer" reputedly sent him by George E. Deatherage—if it ever shows up. At the same time, the Government pushed plans for the trial of Mr. Deatherage, 49-year-old civil engineer, and 32 others, who are charged with conspiring to undermine the morale of the armed forces.

It Has to Work

As the pinch of the oil shortage becomes more painful, more than one investigation on Capitol Hill may be undertaken in the understandable effort to find a convenient victim and roast him on the spot. But undoubtedly the greatest public service that can be rendered now is to persuade the people that the fuel oil shortage in the East is really serious, that it is not going to get any better as long as cold weather lasts and that the individual citizen who relies on oil for fuel will be injuring himself if he imagines that more oil is just around the corner.

It is possible that the present emergency could have been averted, with proper foresight. But that is true of so many things, from Pearl Harbor on down the long list of losses and shortages from the war, that it is a waste of time to talk about things that could have been done but were not done. The thing to do now is to prevent actual suffering by making every effort to see that fuel oil rationing works, and that the available supply is divided as equitably as possible.

In this connection, the OPA is correctly insisting that there be no discrimination by the dealers in servicing their customers with oil; that every consumer with valid coupons must be given oil. That principle is sound, as long as there is enough oil. But it is obvious that the dealer should not deliver his last 100 gallons to a consumer who already has 100 gallons, merely because this consumer asked first, and pass up the customer whose tank is empty. Some modification in practice may be necessary, such as setting some maximum amount of oil to which a consumer is entitled before he can receive further deliveries.

The OPA is determined that delivery of oil to the homes is the first consideration, as it should be. Every effort is going to be made to see that deliveries to the homes are maintained, even if it becomes necessary to shut off commercial consumers. By concentrating available means of transportation on oil and with "pleasure" gasoline eliminated as a drain on this transportation we may be able to exist on a hand-to-mouth basis in fuel oil until spring. But it is going to require conscientious conservation by everybody to accomplish even this. There is nothing "phony" about the oil shortage.

Rule of Reason

In accusing Office of Price Administration officials of "Gestapo" methods in enforcing the ban on pleasure driving, Representative Miller of Connecticut probably has overdrawn the picture.

The question of what constitutes Gestapo methods, of course, is something that will vary with individual interpretation. Representative Miller cited the case of a doctor who had been stopped twice in one night by police who wanted to know where he was going. This sort of thing undoubtedly is annoying, and in the case of a doctor with his professional insignia on his car would seem to be unnecessary. But it takes quite a stretch of the imagination to read Gestapo tactics into such an incident.

The whole problem narrows down to the fact that if there is going to be a ban on pleasure driving there must also be some means of enforcement. A majority of the people probably would respect a request to discontinue all unnecessary driving, but if the undertaking is to be a success, and if those who comply willingly are not to be discriminated against, some method must be found of dealing with the minority who will not co-operate. The OPA is attempting to do this by making an actual check on motorists operating their cars under circumstances indicative of pleasure driving. Perhaps this is not the best way of doing the job, but if there is a more desirable and equally effective method it has not been proposed by any of the critics.

This does not mean that the method currently in use cannot be over-emphasized. It was announced yesterday, for instance, that the OPA will not object if a motorist on his way home from work stops off for a few hours for a social visit or if he drives a friend home, provided that he does not go out of his way in either event.

Such an interpretation is sensible enough in itself, but it is indicative of the boundless confusion into which an attempt to be too literal in defining pleasure driving can lead. Obviously the OPA cannot assign investigators to trail people in and out of cocktail lounges or theaters to determine whether they just dropped in on the way home from work. Nor can they follow a motorist who is giving a friend a lift to ascertain whether he drives a few blocks out of the way enroute to his home. Any attempt to do this would clutter the ration boards with a multitude of frivolous cases and would interfere with a proper handling of the really important cases. As originally announced, the restriction on pleasure driving contemplated a blanket prohibition, with the individual motorists being expected to establish the legitimacy of their driving. This, if subject to proper administrative supervision, is still the best plan.

General Justo Passes

For the second time within the war period, sudden illness and death have intervened in Argentina's political scene. The unexpected death of General Agustin P. Justo after a brief illness removes one of the most colorful and influential factors in Argentina's political life. Unfortunately, both those bereavements have been detrimental to that country's attitude toward the United States and Pan-American co-operation.

General Justo, who died at the age of 66, had behind him a long career as both soldier and statesman. After able service as Minister of War during the troubled years which fell upon Argentina during the worldwide economic depression, he was elected President for the six-year term from 1932 to 1938. Ineligible immediately to succeed himself under the Argentine Constitution, General Justo did much to insure the election of a coalition ticket by which Roberto M. Ortiz became President and Ramon S. Castillo Vice President. The new chief executive was pledged to a program of liberalism and reform. When the European war broke out in the autumn of 1939, President Ortiz at once showed his solidarity with the Pan-American policy of the United States and his moral sympathy with Britain and France as against Axis aggression. Had he remained at the political helm, the isolationist and indirectly pro-Axis policy of Argentina would never have evolved.

Unfortunately, the President was stricken by an illness which soon incapacitated him for his office. As provided by the Argentine Constitution, the executive functions were taken over by the Vice President, who exercised them, first in a temporary capacity and then as President when Ortiz' sickness was diagnosed as incurable.

Ramon S. Castillo represents the most conservative, not to say reactionary, elements in Argentine politics, centering in the big landowners and commercial interests, which play a political role disproportionate to their voting strength. Partly for domestic reasons and partly because of economic considerations, those elements favored a policy of aloofness toward the war and toward Washington's mobilization of the New World against aggressive Axis aims. Both as Acting President and as Chief Executive, Castillo has hewed consistently to this line, despite growing opposition at home and increasing diplomatic pressure from abroad.

Against this isolationist foreign policy, General Justo has registered consistent dissent. Especially since the entry of the United States into the war, he came out as a staunch supporter of Pan-American solidarity and the cause of the United Nations. When Brazil declared war against the Axis, General Justo offered his services to that country, thereby arousing such anger in conservative circles that he was pelted with a barrage of eggs and tomatoes when he left a meeting in which he had made a strongly pro-Ally address.

Argentina's political pot is already beginning to boil in anticipation of the next presidential campaign, and General Justo's name was prominent on the list of prospective candidates. That he had presidential ambitions is more than probable, and his political shrewdness combined with his excellent connections rendered him a likely rallying point for a coalition of several powerful elements which could unite on his candidacy more easily than on any one else. His sudden removal from the political arena probably will have a disturbing effect on the formulation of campaign plans. As a power behind the scenes and as a potential candidate, General Justo will not be easily replaced.

Not Full Citizens

It has been customary to compare the political status of the District citizen with that of the alien, the convict and the lunatic—three other classes of our population deprived of the right of representation in Government.

But the alien enjoys a privilege not shared by the inhabitant of the District of Columbia. The alien can demonstrate his fitness for the obligation of citizenship and under the laws of the land become a full-fledged citizen. The resident of the District has demonstrated his fitness for citizenship and loyally complies with such responsibilities of citizenship as bearing arms in time of war and paying his taxes to support his community and his Government. But he can never hope to achieve the full rights of a citizen as long as he makes his home in the Capital of the Nation.

It is a fine thing to make the acceptance of an alien to full citizenship the occasion for some ceremony and discourses by members of the bench and bar on the solemn obligations of citizenship in a free country. But as demonstrated in the naturalization ceremony in Justice Lett's court yesterday, the newly naturalized citizen must fit his notions of this democracy somewhat belatedly by realization that while he steps from the lowly status of alien to the high estate of American citizenship, he still must stand on a lower rung of the ladder as long as he remains a resident of the Capital of the United States. Before taking his oath as a citizen he has been instructed in the American form of Government, our Constitution and our freedoms. How confusing it must be for him to learn that these noble principles prevail everywhere but in the Capital of his adopted land!

The District Bar Association representative, James R. Kirkland, took the occasion yesterday to solicit the help of the newly naturalized Americans in obtaining for themselves and for native-born Americans the rights of suffrage in the District of Columbia. Until they do, they will discover that their title to full citizenship has a flaw in it.

Library Budget Problem

It probably is unnecessary to explain that the Washington Public Library is not a luxury. Most residents of the District of Columbia know that its facilities are, in effect, as useful to the community as those of any other imperative institution. Especially in wartime, the library is integrated to every vital phase of the city's life. It serves the Federal and municipal governments, the Army and the Navy, the universities and colleges, the hospitals, the business and industrial organizations and all independent professional and cultural groups of the Nation's Capital. A reasonable point of view concerning its utility is represented in the suggestion of a civic leader that the library merits support as the public schools do, the library indeed being recognized by law as part of the educational system of Washington.

The accuracy of such an appraisal is demonstrated by the constant increase of reader demand since the war began in 1939. Books and periodicals of a technical character especially are wanted by men and women endeavoring to improve their talents for the performance of labor requisite for victory. Such publications naturally are more expensive than ephemeral literature. It follows that the cut of $15,000 in the budget allotment for the purchase of new titles and replacements during the next fiscal year is a subject which Congress well might wish to think about constructively.

Other slashes in the library's request for operating funds perhaps are unfortunate. It had been hoped that money would be made available to extend the service hours at the Chevy Chase and Woodridge branches and to permit the opening of a badly needed sub-branch at Langston Terrace. The elimination of these items evidently was in accordance with the budget policy of holding down operating expense and consequently is understandable. Any decrease in provision for new books and periodicals, however, is a serious handicap for the library in its effort to meet the unquestioned requisition of its patrons. If there is any way to restore that sum to the budget, it should be taken.

Hero and "Legend"

"The Message to Garcia," according to the Dictionary of American Biography, is "a highly romanticized legend popularized by Elbert Hubbard's article in the Philistine, March, 1899." But there was nothing deserving of criticism in the story of what Andrew S. Rowan actually did. He was a lieutenant in the infantry who had been graduated at West Point in 1881. It happened that he had learned Spanish while acting as Military Attache at the American Legation in Santiago, Chile. When a courier was wanted to convey a certain oral communication to the Cuban rebel General Calixto Garcia, he was recommended. Disguised as "an English sportsman—a type commonly met in the late nineties," he arrived at Kingston, Jamaica, April 23, 1898, the day before the United States declared war on Spain.

Hubbard imagined details which were fantastically inaccurate, yet the main points of his famous "piece" were true. Rowan made a dangerous trip through the jungle to Garcia's headquarters at Bayamo and thence to the north coast of Cuba. Accompanied by two of the revolutionaries, he reached Nassau in the Bahamas. Back in Washington by the middle of May, he was introduced at a cabinet meeting—and forgotten until Congress gave him a Distinguished Service Cross in 1924. "The important part of his mission was the information he brought from Cuba."

Rowan later won distinction for gallantry in action in the Philippines. He retired in 1909 and settled in California, where his neighbors accepted him as one of themselves without regard to the celebrity with which the Sage of East Aurora continued to endow him. Millions of copies of Hubbard's pamphlet were circulated. Their sale brought their publisher a fortune. Meanwhile, his hero lived on a major's pension. The movies dragged him from his voluntary obscurity when he was old and ill and did not wish to be disturbed. Much more congenial was the recognition which came to him when just a few weeks ago he was mentioned with appreciation in relation to Major General Mark W. Clark's adventures in North Africa.

Immortality is assured to all such brave and intrepid soldiers, but Rowan's feat in common fairness to the man himself ought not to be exaggerated. Dying at 85, he leaves a name which does not need to be kept alive by the devices of fiction.

Nazis May Take Stand To Protect Maiko Oil

Retreating Germans Being Forced Into Arc Around Rostov

By Maj. George Fielding Eliot.

It would appear from the Russian reports of yesterday, that the Germans are making a rather hasty withdrawal from their positions in the eastern part of the North Caucasian area. The whole of two important branch line railways, together with the mainline junctions of Georgievsk and Mineralnye Vodi, would hardly have fallen into Soviet hands on a single day had the Germans made anything like a determined effort to hang on to them. Such fighting as there was appears to have been merely the delaying action of rear guards covering the retreat and gaining just enough time for the main bodies and perhaps some supply elements to get clear.

How far the German retreat will go remains to be seen. The Russian forces in this area, commanded by Lt. Gen. Maslennikov, appear to have considerable striking power. Gen. Maslennikov is the only Russian Army commander whose communications are unimpeded by enemy action. He draws his supplies and equipment from the Russian military depots in Transcaucasia, by way of the Baku Railroad, and receives support from American and British arsenals by way of the Persian Gulf, the railways of Iran and Iraq and the Caspian Sea. This latter is a long line and a difficult one, but here as in the north it seems likely that the Russians have been hoarding their receipts of planes, tanks and guns all summer long while they prepared for their great counterstroke.

A glance at the map will show that the Germans in the North Caucasian area are now being gradually herded back into a semi-circle covering Rostov. The direct pressure is from Maslennikov. His right is now linked with the left of the Russian Army coming down the Stalingrad railway by the mobile Russian forces operating over the Kalmyk steppe. The army on the Stalingrad rail-line has made another advance, to Kubler, which threatens the left flank and rear of the forces withdrawing before Maslennikov.

Meanwhile, the Germans appear to be worried about the Russians on the Black Sea coast, in the Tuapse area. These forces are supplied from the same sources that serve Maslennikov, and the Russians still have both naval and merchant shipping on the Black Sea which could land additional troops if necessary. A powerful thrust from this direction, moving north against Novorossiisk, Maikop and Krasnodar, may well be within the possibilities of the immediate future. German resistance is stiffening in the areas closest to Rostov—that is, on the Don and Donetz Rivers and in the Kubler area—but it is stiffening, of course, at the price of using up the available reserves, and a new attack from the Black Sea coast might be just too much. The Russians throughout their offensive operations have shown great capacity for meeting stiffening resistance in one sector by a new blow in another.

It should, however, be kept in mind that the great Russian difficulty is now their extended communications. Except for Maslennikov, none of their army commanders has a clear, open line of railway communications back to main centers of supply. This will continue to hold out; they are selling their lives dearly and they are certainly buying precious time for their comrades, for were they to give way now it is hard to see what could save Rostov and the German troops in the Caucasus. The farther the Russian armies go from their distant railheads north and east of the Don the greater the strain put upon their motor transport and upon their engineers engaged in trying to improve and keep open the poor road system of this region. The Germans, on the other hand, enjoy the full support of open and operating rail lines.

On this basis it would seem likely that barring an immediate German collapse at Stalingrad, which is a possibility always to be reckoned with, the Russians will for a time gain ground more rapidly in the Caucasian area than elsewhere. However, their advances in the south will put increased strain on the German reserves and will force decisions on the German high command which may help other Russian forces to advance. Probably the controlling factor of most immediate consequence is the extent to which the Germans have determined to withdraw. If they make a definite stand anywhere south of the Don it will doubtless be at a position to cover the Maikop oil fields. Their chances of retaining these fields could hardly be considered good, but they have built many hopes upon them and may try to keep an asset for which they have paid so heavily. Quotes Old Folk Saying About Mistakes of the Past.

"Chickens come home to roost" is an apt saying to apply our present critical fuel shortage. All through the twenties, and the years of this present administration, enough money has been wasted to run pipe lines to every large city in the country, as well as build plants to convert the oil into its various by-products. But every proposal and demand to give a supply equal to all emergencies has been sidetracked in favor of some special group. The same is true of rubber. The rapid advance and output of automobiles alone called for synthetic rubber. Instead of allowing the formulas for this commodity to become the personal property of special interests, they should have been used for the good of the public.

But they were not, and so the chickens are returning to roost in idleness. The Government is faced with the loss of millions in revenue because of this lack of foresight. Thousands of places of business will be forced to close—they depend on the autos for patronage. The loss of revenue from the oil lying idle in the fields is a sizable item. Along with these losses will come the loss of employment by thousands when their employers are forced to close. The Government will have to care for this army by placing them in branches of work to which they are not adapted. BOSTONIAN.

THIS AND THAT

By Charles E. Tracewell.

"ROCK SPRING ROAD."

"Dear Sir: "It has very recently been my privilege to observe several tree sparrows in the weed patches in Roschs Run Bird Sanctuary located in Virginia a short distance south of the Highway Bridge. Since these sparrows have apparently not been seen in the Washington area for several years, this observation would seem to be an event of sufficient importance to be called to the attention of your column. Incidentally, several competent observers have reported the presence of these birds in the weed patches in this and other areas farther down the Potomac.

"The tree sparrow breeds in the far North. During the winter season it migrates South and regularly reaches the Northern and Middle States. Possibly the recent zero weather induced it to visit the Washington area this winter. "This bird is approximately the size of an English sparrow or a song sparrow. It has a distinctly reddish-brown cap and some brown on its back and wings. It has two well defined wing bars. It has a conspicuous dark or black spot (in some lights resembling a dimple) centered in the upper portion of its dull white breast.

"Should these birds remain in this area during the remainder of the winter, what are the probabilities that they will come to our window feeding stations—particularly if we should have a substantial snowfall? "As has been stated in your column, approximately 19 species of sparrows have been recorded in the Washington area. They are all natives except the imported English (house) sparrow. Probably the best beloved of the native sparrows in this area is the song sparrow. To merely name some of the others: Our regular winter visitor—the white-throated sparrow, the migrant fox sparrow and the early spring arrivals—the field and the chipping sparrows. The closely related junco (snowbird) should also be included in the list.

"Any one who is inclined to 'dispose' of the sparrows in his yard or garden should take the time and trouble to differentiate between the English sparrows and the native sparrows. The differences are fairly obvious to any one giving a little attention to the matter. A moderate amount of study and observation will demonstrate that there is little that is objectionable in the conduct and habits of our native sparrows. They are plain, hard-working bird citizens who go about doing good for mankind; they are the salt of the earth. To give but a single illustration, it is estimated that the tree sparrows, in one agricultural State, annually consume approximately 875 tons of weed seed. Furthermore, the native sparrows play an important part as vocal soloists and as a part of the avian chorus—the simple, sweet lay of the song sparrow, the plaintive whistle of the white-throat, the cheery trill of the field sparrow and the plain 'chorus' part of the chipping sparrow.

"The readers of your column already know what has been stated above. Permit me to urge that these friends of the native sparrows make it a point to spread the 'gospel' among their friends, neighbors and acquaintances. "Sincerely yours, A. H. F."

How much would you guess a tree sparrow weighs? Not more than seven-tenths of an ounce! Yet this mite, with his thousands of companions, manages to eat vast quantities of weed seeds, as our correspondent says, making him one of the farmer's most valuable helpers.

Scientists tell us there are 119 kinds of sparrows in North America north of Mexico. This includes climatic variations. Actually there are only 37 species, not counting the English sparrow, which is really not a sparrow at all, but a weaver finch, and is classified in a different family from America's sparrows. The English sparrow, however, has earned his right to be called American as well as sparrow.

Not to call him sparrow seems rather straining a point, since he looks as sparrow-like as any song sparrow, white-throat, or what have you. (We may add, in passing, that this is the first time in 20 years that this column has ever used the expression, "or what have you.")

We feel certain that our correspondent's mention of persons who might feel inclined to dispose of the sparrows in their yard does not include killing of house sparrows, either.

These little birds, properly seen, are birds as well as any, and almost always win the admiration and often affection of persons who are willing to watch them closely. They are shortly seen to be no way near as black as painted. As a matter of fact, in recent years the pendulum of dislike of this bird among bird lovers has swung clear over. Now most persons are willing to accept them, since there seems to be little else one can do.

Good food at feeding stations brings out the color and sheen of their coats, and makes them altogether different birds from the famous "street arabs" of the horse and buggy days.

Their habits are meritorious enough, with the exception of the tendency to drive native birds away. As we have often stated here, our native birds are not simpletons; they may be driven away from one yard, but they go to another, or to the woods.

The decline in numbers of our native birds can only be laid at the door of the English sparrow by a person who does not care to look thoroughly into the matter. There are scores of reasons for this decline, and many mysteries in it, too.

The English sparrow, or finch, cousin to the cardinals, is a very fine little bird, and we sincerely hope that, in this day of too much killing, no one will go out of his way to kill these splendid birds.

If tree sparrows are around, there is every likelihood that they will come to a feeding station properly stocked and kept filled. They prefer small seeds. There is on record an instance of a tree sparrow flying in at an open window, and eating from a saucer of feed on a radiator, while quite evidently enjoying the

Q. What is the title of the native ruler of Tunisia?—E. S. H. A. It is Bey, a modern Turkish word derived from the older "beg." This has been the hereditary title of the ruler since about 1705.

Q. Does the roadrunner build a trap for rattlesnakes?—T. B. B. A. This desert relative of the cuckoo is credited with building a hedge of thorn-covered cactus pads about a coiled rattler, to prevent its escape. This is just another nature myth, but the roadrunner does feed principally on lizards, small snakes and insects. It seizes them expertly with its strong bill.

Q. Has it ever been proved that one of the Popes was a woman?—O. M. P. A. A story was current for several centuries that a woman, Johannes Angilicus, born in Germany of English parentage, at one time occupied the papal chair, under Leo IV, who died in 855, and Benedict III, who died in 858. There is no known historical background for this tradition which was spread principally by a French Dominican monk in the 13th century. It was first refuted by the French Calvinist David Blondell in 1647.

Q. What is the origin of the bugle call in horse racing?—D. E. N. A. The first racing in America was conducted under the auspices of officers of the British Army. Hence the bugle call to the post was adopted, and has since been in the rules of racing. The earliest racing took place about 1700 or a little before on Long Island, N. Y.

Q. When did Winston Churchill see his first battle?—G. R. A. On his 21st birthday, 1895. He was serving in Cuba as a military observer with the Spanish forces.

Q. Is the flesh of ostriches edible?—A. W. G. A. It is. The flesh is especially delicate when the young are fed on poultry food and is similar to that of the turkey.

Q. What country produces the most inventions?—R. T. M. A. More than four-fifths of all the inventions in the world have been produced in the United States each year.

Q. How should the military decoration known as fourragere be worn?—F. B. J. A. The War Department says that the French military decoration, the fourragere, is attached to the left shoulder by fastening the buttonhole thereof to the left shoulder loop button, under the shoulder loop, passing the fourragere under the left arm, and attaching the loop on the ferret into the shoulder loop button, allowing the ferret to hang down in front.

Q. Can anything be added to water in which English ivy is growing to keep it from becoming ill-smelling?—R. C. E. A. The addition of a small amount of charcoal will tend to keep the water fresh. A little charcoal should be added from time to time.

Oxen Against a Lowery Sky

Stop the hill the oxen stop for breathing, Their red flanks blotting out the lowery sky In one back-bracing wedge of heaving muscle To hold the laden rick from coasting by Until against the leader's rump the farmer, Striding loose-jointed, pricked his ready goad. Again beneath the yoke the stout necks straightened And down the hillside creaked the toppling load.

They left the sky line to unbroken greyness, They left the meadow shorn to stubble sods; As in his father's father's day the farmer Ticked, each step, thick hides with knowing prods.

He knew his oxen trusted him for goading As much as for the water in their trough And for the oats and hay in their full manger And for the yoke his hands laid on and off.

The man and oxen leave the hill to silence And go to their own peace in house and stall. Safely within wide lofts the hay is garnered Before on yawning fields the slow rains fall. GERTRUDE ROBINSON.

Letters to the Editor

Wants Planner of "Permanent Peace" Recognized for His Priority. To the Editor of The Star: Gould Lincoln in his column in The Star, January 9, stated that Gov. Harold E. Stassen was "the first to give a concrete outline of a world agency to enforce peace." I have great respect for Mr. Lincoln's opinions and enjoy reading his articles but feel that this statement should be challenged.

Dr. William C. Brewer in his book "Permanent Peace," published more than two years ago, set forth a concrete outline of a world agency to enforce peace by the use of international military, naval and air forces. He drafted a complete constitution for the proposed world government providing for the establishment of a world parliament, council and court, the free use of all transportation routes and the promotion of world trade.

Proper credit should be given where it is due, and the principles advocated by Dr. Brewer are those necessary for the enforcement of peace, liberty and security, everywhere in the world now being proposed by Gov. Stassen, Wendell Willkie and some of the leaders of the present administration. D. L. S.

Replies to "Simple Simon" In Text of Old Folk Fable. To the Editor of The Star: I am not a farmer's wife, but I do know the life of the farmer and his family quite well. As regards Simple Simon's letter to the editor of The Star, published December 31, I should like to say that Simple has failed to realize that the farmer's wife is the greatest conservator of food in the Nation—she was even before the Department of Agriculture gave her suggestions as it does today. We need not fear that she will deplete the stocks at the stores. Any one, but Simple should realize that his food selection will be the greater and the more varied because the farmer's wife has conserved. To me it seems unfair to require the farmer's family to live on a diet of beans and corn—or whatever there happened to be a surplus of last summer—without a variety just because Mrs. Farmer was an A-1 conserver. Remember, she worked early and late, while Mrs. Simple Simon was free to play bridge, to visit the beauty parlor, to take in the latest movie—or perhaps to shop for the latest and best bargains in town.

Mrs. Farmer will not make a run on the stores. Don't worry about that. She has to save her pennies, too—far more than Simple or any other salaried person can comprehend. Simple mentioned the fact that there are more children in the average country family than there are in the average city family. True, but it also is true that half-grown boys and girls whose day begins at 5 and 8:30 in the morning and runs to 8:30 and 9:30 at night are heavier eaters than adult men whose greatest physical exercise is a sprint around the corner to catch a bus. Simple, Simple Simon, thank your lucky stars that the farmer's wife has rows and rows of food. You will eat better because she has. And, if she is not penalized for conserving, I know she will do even a better job next summer—all the better for you to eat.

Simple Simon is up to his old tricks. He would have the pleman's wares without paying.

MISTRESS MARY QUITE CONTRARY. Diseases Education In Preparation for Work. To the Editor of The Star: Having taught school for 10 years and never having lost interest in education, I was attracted to the column of Dorothy Thompson in The Star of December 28 in which she takes issue with a statement by Mrs. Roosevelt on the value of so-called "useless knowledge."

Now I would like to add the weight of my testimony to the columnist's view that "useless" knowledge as a matter of fact is most useful and also the weight of my testimony to Mrs. Roosevelt's point when she says: "I don't believe people can get by without working in the world of the future." I am glad, this issue has been raised. Maybe it will give me an opportunity to get across a vital principle that I have held for years and never lost an opportunity to advance.

Mars is a terrible fellow, but he brings about changes which no other agency can. It is no wonder that we are reminded that when he is in the saddle we are to "look up and lift up our heads for then our redemption draweth nigh." Thirty-odd years ago in a treatise on economics I described what I called "the lucky combination that unlocked the wheels of progress, namely, the educated and intelligent mind, directing the trained hand, engaged in actual work, with leisure for experiment and research."

In the treatise referred to I urged that all young people be taught some useful and necessary trade or occupation along with intellectual training. I further urged that industry should be so organized that every person able and willing to work should be guaranteed the opportunity to do so, in order that every one might live a normal life, and be able to develop all faculties—physical, intellectual, social, moral, spiritual.

These cardinal principles were not popular 34 years ago and only slowly have been gaining ground, but they are making much more rapid progress now since Mars has taken a hand. They are being talked about everywhere by many people. Vice President Wallace has demanded full employment as a postwar measure. Wendell Willkie also has declared for employment for all. So likewise President Roosevelt advocates freedom from want. Many others are seeing the light. S. L. HOOPER.

White Paper Bares Faulty Leadership

People in Dark On Officials' Strong Stands

By DAVID LAWRENCE.

Although the State Department has not yet released the full texts of the documents showing the record from 1931 to 1941 of America's official expressions to other governments of the world relating to the effort to preserve peace, the so-called "White Paper" gives enough of the summary to indicate that most of the speeches now being made about the post-war world and methods of keeping the peace completely miss the point.

David Lawrence.

This point is that the people do not know what their governmental representatives are saying till a decade passes and that one department of the Government adopts a firm attitude, sometimes threatening and sometimes implying threats, and the country as a whole doesn't know that there is anything of such a grave nature going on.

The newspapers report the ups and downs of negotiations, but official texts are rarely given out. Few, for instance, of the notes that were exchanged between Japan and the United States over critical periods were published. During the time that many serious things were said in informal conversations with foreign ambassadors the American people did not know that they didn't have an Army or a Navy or an Air Force adequate to back up those words.

President Must Lead.

If the President of the United States—as the man who knows everything that is going on in the confidential relations between our Government and other governments—doesn't assert his leadership in order to build up the Army, Navy and Air Force, the people as a whole cannot bring their influence to bear to support his requests.

An examination of the record as given out in the "White Paper" leads to many a query as to why the President, who has shown himself such a masterful radio speaker and so successful a mobilizer of opinion, did not see that the people insisted on more national defense equipment being voted by Congress.

During the years that Hitler was building up armament—he came into office in February, 1933—the United States was not only indifferent to the already demonstrated lessons of air power, especially in the Spanish Civil War, but the United States Navy was not given the aircraft carriers or the airplanes or the cruisers or the battleships needed to defend our interests in the Atlantic as well as in the Pacific.

Even in May, 1940, when total war broke out, there was not the emphasis on defense that there should have been and construction was allowed to lag as the administration emphasized "social gains," while strikes were at their height. Similarly the President a few years ago made a spectacular fight to impose the "death sentence" on holding companies in the utility field, but he made no such aggressive fight to get Congress to vote the armament needed to prepare America's defenses. He could always become an aggressive leader when he was in the mood to take an issue to the country.

It is true, of course, that the United States leaned heavily on Britain and France and assumed that, because they were much closer to the scene of possible trouble—Germany and Italy—those democracies would be stirred to take safety measures along large scale lines. But it is apparent on the other hand, from a study of the "white paper," that Japan was counting on Britain and France and even America becoming involved in the European maelstrom and that the leaders of the United States did not awaken the people of this country to the dangers of a two-ocean war.

High-Sounding Speeches.

So there's little use paying much attention these days to high-sounding speeches about a world organization to protect the peace when leaders refuse to risk their political lives to store their country along the right course. Thus it will be argued that Mr. Roosevelt would have been frustrated in Congress, and perhaps even beaten in 1936, if he had made an issue of national defense. But if he had been defeated on that issue in 1936, he would have been returned by an overwhelming vote in 1940. He would be in a far stronger position as the Nation's leader today had he insisted on facing a possible defeat in order to carry through a vital principle.

It was Woodrow Wilson who once said in a public address: "I would rather fall in a cause that I know some day will triumph than to triumph in a cause that I know some day will fail."

Until public men can adopt that course, it seems futile to talk about "world organizations" to protect the peace. Germany was completely disarmed in 1918 and stayed that way till 1933—a period of 15 years—but the United States, Britain and France failed to keep Germany disarmed, because the leaders of the democracies refused to pay the price—possibly the momentary loss of their own posts, if they told the truth and endeavored to rally their countrymen to face the truth. Till candor comes in public affairs, documents like the "white paper" will continue to tell a tragic story of lost opportunity and lost leadership.

On the Record

1918-1942 History Gives No Assurance United Nations' Alliance Will Last 10 Years

By DOROTHY THOMPSON.

In his speech to Congress on the state of the Union the President carefully avoided going into any details about the future peace, and suggested that it would be well for all of us "at this critical period to confine ourselves to the larger objectives and not get bogged down in argument over methods and details."

Dorothy Thompson.

At this stage of the war this is certainly common-sense advice. Yet the President himself did make two positive statements regarding post-war policy, as it affects our present enemies, the Axis. The first was that after the war we shall maintain the present grand alliance, United States-Britain-Russia-China, together with the smaller United Nations, and disarm and keep disarmed Germany, Italy and Japan.

The main idea dominating the President's thought is security: Security in the domestic life, and security in international life; permanent protection against the possibility of aggression ever happening again. The President does not believe that "magnificent idealism" will afford us this security, or that we can "maintain peace by good intentions alone." He apparently believes that any future menace might come from the Axis powers alone, since the United Nations are bound together "in solemn agreement that they themselves will not commit acts of aggression or conquest against any of their neighbors." He accepts the thesis that the roots of trouble, in the future as in the present, will remain permanently the same.

Historical Perspective.

Now, on this, it might be well to have a little historical perspective. The first aggressions in this war were committed by two nations who were our allies in the last one: Japan and Italy. So the idea that a beaten enemy will always be the first again to take up arms is not necessarily correct. Japan and Italy emerged from the last war as victors disatisfied with their victory. Mussolini, who emerged into power to turn Italy into an aggressive, imperialistic state, was the very man, who in the previous wars, had contributed most to leading Italy into the camp of the Allies.

Furthermore, both Italy and Japan were committed to keeping the peace after the last war. They were members from the beginning of the League of Nations, and signed all the "solemn agreements" to outlaw war which were so numerous in the 20's. Germany and her central European allies were unilaterally disarmed after the last war, and for years there were international commissions busy seeing that they remained disarmed. Nevertheless, they rearmed eventually, in a tremendous way, and with the open or tacit consent of some of their former allies. At no point did either Britain, Russia, or the United States oppose German rearmament. For years the Russian government allowed the Germans to test out new arms in Russia. Britain went so far as to make a naval treaty with Germany, allowing her many new ships, including submarines, after Hitler had declared the disarmament clauses of the Versailles Treaty null and void.

France alone, and the small countries surrounding Germany, were for security by permanent German disarmament.

Power Politics.

Now, why did this happen? The real reason was that the victorious powers after the last war immediately began to play a balance of power politics amongst themselves. When France appeared too mighty in the balance of power situation, they closed their eyes to the coming up of Germany. Russia wanted to keep the Western Powers divided because she feared an anti-communist crusade, and therefore tried to intensify the antagonisms between Germany and the Western Powers, and even to back up Germany as a sort of buffer state.

Mussolini, having tried to get concessions by the consent of Britain and France, and hoping for fish out of troubled waters, troubled the waters, and the best way to do that was to back Germany. Finally, even the democratic elements in German felt the injustice and insecurity of a disarmed nation in the midst of a highly armed world.

The point in re-hashing this history is only to get a realistic view of the future. There is, on the record, no assurance that a grand alliance will outlast 10, 20, or 30 years. If it is only a negative alliance to prevent the rise again of one's late enemies, and not a positive collaboration for the creation of a new world, and if the second is the aim, then it must be accompanied by every effort to dissolve old antagonisms and integrate former enemies into a new and higher entity of the world.

If the disarmament of our enemies is to be regarded as the last step in the war, we will all agree. But if it is to be regarded as the first step in making a truly constructive peace, then I greatly fear it will turn out to be the first step toward the next war.

The Great Game of Politics

In War as Well as Peace, Public Can Refuse To Tolerate Questionable Political Appointments

By FRANK R. KENT.

It is the White House thesis, concurred in and supported by all the administration spokesmen, that it is extremely reprehensible to point out that so far from rising above partisanship and politics in the conduct of the war, the President is consistently mindful of politics and his New Deal aides are using the war as a screen behind which to play their New Deal political game.

Frank R. Kent.

It is a shocking thing that this should be so but the proof is overwhelming. Nor is the performance rendered more palatable by the effort to make it appear that all protests are partisan and unpatriotic. Apparently this administration wants support of its war policies to include freedom to do, without comment or criticism, exactly what it pleases in domestic affairs.

The affront of this attitude is supreme. It assumes that the people as a whole are booby, who, because we are engaged in a great war, must abandon their own sense of right and wrong and accept the idea that Mr. Roosevelt's every act is commendable.

Silence Offers No Cure. A more nationally stultifying notion could hardly be advanced: nor one better calculated to weaken our fiber as a people in this great struggle.

Instead of silent acquiescence to the acts of this Administration—instead of accepting them as something that should not be mentioned because we are in a war and Mr. Roosevelt is commander in chief—instead of that, these things should be exposed and expounded, denounced and condemned, until those responsible for them cease doing them and an end is made to this sordid political maneuvering in, perhaps, the most serious period of our history.

No other course can be justified. To permit these things to pass without protest is unintelligent, unwholesome and against the national interests. Take, for example, the occurrences of the last few days. The country had hardly ceased applauding the President's really good speech on the progress of the war when he stepped down from the lofty plane upon which that was delivered to a level low enough to permit him to name Edward J. Flynn, the New York politician, Minister to Australia.

Mr. Flynn, whose paving-block experiences made unfeasible his retention as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, is thus— if the Senate confirms him—to succeed an outstanding career diplomat as the President's personal representative to a sensitive nation whose friendship is of very great importance to us.

Other Political Doings.

The inexcusable nature of this appointment of a man without any known qualification for such a post, is further aggravated by the news that, through presidential influence, an important post in the War Department is to be conferred upon Charles Poletti, former lieutenant Governor of New York and for some 20 days acting Governor in the gap between Gov. Herbert Lehman's resignation and Thomas E. Dewey's inauguration.

Mr. Poletti is another New York politician who distinguished himself in those 20 days by releasing from jail an unprecedented number of criminals, among them a labor thug, whom he pardoned without consultation with either presiding judge or prosecuting attorney.

In addition, Mr. Roosevelt, as other Presidents have done, recently has provided jobs for various labor duck Representatives and Senators defeated in the last election. These are not particularly creditable though not bad enough to cause concern or call for criticism. But the Flynn appointment is without excuse or defense.

Here, this politician, replacing a man with a fine record and conceded ability, is given an important post in an Allied country where our interests are vital and our relationships delicate—a post for which he is totally unqualified and to which he has no claim. The Senate cannot do anything about the Poletti appointment, but it can about that of Mr. Flynn.

Support of the war and loyalty to the President's foreign policies ought not to include tolerance of such a selection as this. Rejection by this country, an act of friendship for Australia and helpful to the President, in that it might convince him that he cannot, with impunity, follow the noble words of a fine speech with such ignoble acts.

Diplomatic Quarters See Solution Near In Giraud-De Gaulle African Squabble

By CONSTANTINE BROWN.

Diplomatic quarters believe that in the near future there will be a solution to what appears to be an interminable and useless dispute between the high commissioner of North Africa, Gen. Henri Giraud, and the leader of the Fighting French movement in England has been a major headache for us. After Admiral Jean Darlan was assassinated, it was hoped here that nothing would prevent a merger of all Frenchmen under the banner of Gen. Giraud, who has accepted without reservation our Gen. Dwight Eisenhower as supreme commander and authority in North Africa.

Constantine Brown.

The Imperial Council which was set up at Algiers had the full approval of Gen. Eisenhower and his political adviser, Robert Murphy, who has been detached from the State Department to serve as President Roosevelt's representative with Gen. Eisenhower.

Unfortunately, Gen. de Gaulle and his backers in London are continuing their objections to certain personalities comprising the Imperial Council on the ground that the governors on council had all been Vichy appointees.

We have been pointing out to our friends in London that this was inevitable since the territory was under the control of Vichy before we entered it. The Americans in North Africa are, however, pleased with the co-operation of the Vichy appointees. They are most helpful to us.

British Act as Middlemen.

The British—who are now acting as middlemen between Gen. de Gaulle and ourselves—propose to do away with the Imperial Council and leave the governors such as Gen. Auguste Nogues and Pierre Boisson in their present provincial posts.

Passive Attitude.

Unfortunately, the plan failed because some of the commanding officers in the area adopted a passive attitude when it was announced that the British 1st Army was going to take over Tunisia, and the Nazis, taking advantage of the situation, disarmed and interned the majority of the French troops who should have fought against them. Admiral Esteva was imprisoned within 48 hours after we landed in North Africa.

Had our strategists foreseen that the French would not play along with us, it is doubtful whether they would have supported the plan to invade North Africa during the rainy season. They would have waited until spring. But the offensive in North Africa had to be started as early as possible because of political considerations. And with the exception of the campaign in Tunisia, which now is stalemated until the rainy season is over, our operations have been more successful than was actually expected.

Major Headache.

In this otherwise pleasant picture the controversy between the authorities in North Africa and the leader of the Fighting French movement in England has been a major headache for us. After Admiral Jean Darlan was assassinated, it was hoped here that nothing would prevent a merger of all Frenchmen under the banner of Gen. Giraud, who has accepted without reservation our Gen. Dwight Eisenhower as supreme commander and authority in North Africa.

The Imperial Council which was set up at Algiers had the full approval of Gen. Eisenhower and his political adviser, Robert Murphy, who has been detached from the State Department to serve as President Roosevelt's representative with Gen. Eisenhower.

British Act as Middlemen.

The British—who are now acting as middlemen between Gen. de Gaulle and ourselves—propose to do away with the Imperial Council and leave the governors such as Gen. Auguste Nogues and Pierre Boisson in their present provincial posts.

The presence of Sir Robert MacMillan, former Undersecretary of the Colonial Office in London and now head of an important diplomatic mission in North Africa, is considered by the members of the Imperial Council as a definite indication that a purely De Gaulle organization will eventually take hold of North Africa and Gen. Giraud will remain only the nominal head of the civil administration.

Whether or not this point of view of the governors will prevail remains to be seen.

The Allied forces which are marking time at the gates of Tunisia will be ready to attack in the next few weeks. And we do not want to have any kind of squabble which would bring discontent among the French forces on whom we shall have to lean heavily in the forthcoming campaign.

McLemore—

Hunts for Exercise, Lands in Doghouse

By HENRY McLEMORE.

The ban on pleasure driving, which, if I know my Ickes, will soon be extended to all 48 States, has made it impossible for millions of Americans to get their customary exercise.

Under the rules, a man caught driving to a tennis court, or a bowling alley, or a golf course, or a handball wall, or a riding academy, or a badminton, or a volleyball court, will get his name in the papers as a sort of Benedict Arnold on wheels and have his A, B or C card removed from his wallet for good.

The rule doesn't bother me a great deal, because I am about as athletic as Alexander Woolcott, who, if you don't know, is the only man ever to engage the services of a second and a trainer before engaging in a rough and tumble game of croquet. But it will bother millions of my countrymen who are accustomed to overdoing themselves at strenuous games.

Naturally, they mustn't be allowed to stop exercising overnight. Like race horses, who are walked round and round the barns after finishing a race to allow them to "unwind," the exercisers must be provided with some means of gradually tapering off, else—and my authority is a celebrated Viennese quack who used to endorse yeast as a cure for everything from household's knees to beri-beri—else they will be subject to all sorts of maladies.

"Fog at Fresno."

But what can they substitute for the games they used to play when gasoline was plentiful and the phrase "nil 'er up" hadn't passed from the language? The average American home doesn't have a basketball court or bowling alley or tennis court. Even the homes that do boast them now won't boast them for long, what with that $25,000 ceiling closing in like a fog at Fresno. (I don't know whether Fresno has fog or not, but you'll have to admit that "fog at Fresno" has a ring to it. As a matter of fact, if Fresno doesn't have any fog it might be smart to cultivate some.)

Out of the fondness of my heart I have thought up several ersatz sports to take the places of the ones that the ban on pleasure driving eliminated—sports that can be enjoyed (if that is the word for exercise that leaves you as limp as yesterday's salad) right at home, without any cost.

Dog washing, that's the first one. Washing a dog combines all the play of muscles. If you don't happen to have a dog, you can still play the game. You can always borrow a dog to be washed. There never was an owner of a dog who wouldn't lend him for washing purposes.

To wash a dog properly, you must use the fitness that tennis calls for, the will to win that is such a part of golf, the endurance that goes along with basketball, and the patience that belongs to chess. Washing a dog involves many steps.

First Catch Your Dog.

First you have to catch the dog. Dogs don't have a great deal of sense which is proved by the fact that there has never been a dog mayor, a dog governor, a dog senator, or even, a dog dog-catcher. But they have enough sense to know when they are going to be washed. Start the water running in the tubs, and they are off and flying. So the leg muscles are employed in catching them. The arm muscles are used to convey them to the tub.

Golf muscles come into play when the dog is dropped into the water. The over-lapping grip is just as good on a dog's hind leg as it is on a brassie. The backhand badminton shot is useful in knocking down a dog who wants to leap from the water, and, after shaking himself so that every one in 10 yards gets drenched, runs to the nearest pile of sand or dirt and rolls.

The dog, being more agile and crafty, always gets out of the tub. That is when basketball muscles come into play. Holding him off at a distance, so he won't soak you, you throw him back into the tub, just as a basketball forward makes a long shot from the center of the floor.

Now, for the next ersatz sport—that of pressing your own clothes.

I can't write about it. Only today, in experimenting, I burned the shoulders off a suit that, lacking one more payment (the left leg payment, I believe) was mine.

May I cry?

Boo.

A motion to send letters to the District Commissioners, the Federation of Citizens' Associations and the Police Department asking that the auxiliary policemen be allowed to continue their services and that medical treatment for injuries incurred in the line of duty be available to auxiliaries was made by Robert C. Clements and unanimously passed by the Benning Citizens' Association last night.

A recommendation that walk lights be erected at the intersection of Benning Road and Minnesota avenue was sent to the District Commissioners at the suggestion of Frank E. James.

An invitation was extended to the Parent-Teacher Association of the Benning School to meet with the Benning Citizens' Association February 9 to conserve on fuel required to heat school and to increase attendance in both organizations. It was also suggested that a social gathering be held after the meetings and that refreshments be served.

Bible Class Dedicates Union Mission Room

The Vaughn Men's Bible Class of Calvary Baptist Church has dedicated a room at the Central Union Mission that the class had furnished for children in memory of the late James W. Bell, a former president of the class.

The dedicatory address was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Clarence W. Grunford, pastor of the church. John A. Patterson made a brief address on the life of Mr. Bell.

IT'S W.M.E. MILLER'S FOR AUTHENTIC COLONIAL the Story of Duncan Phyfe:

In 1782 a poor widow and her children came from Scotland to the new world of opportunity, and settled in Albany, New York. They found life quite hard, and the oldest boy, 16 years of age, was apprenticed to a cabinetmaker. Thus was fostered in the heart of young Duncan Phyfe the ambition to be America's greatest name in furniture. Soon after his 21st birthday he established his own shop in New York City. Duncan Phyfe furniture became the vogue. He made furniture in many designs, following Chippendale, Sheraton and Empire style of Napoleon. Behind almost every piece of genuine Duncan Phyfe furniture that has survived the years there is a romantic story. In a house known as Federal Hill, near Bardstown, Kentucky, there is a beautiful table... the story goes that General Lafayette purchased this table from Duncan Phyfe as a present to his host and hostess there. In later years came another guest, a struggling young musician named Stephen Foster. He was so impressed with the beauty and hospitality of this old home that he was inspired to write "My Old Kentucky Home"... helped no doubt, by the lovely furniture of Duncan Phyfe. Typical of the outstanding present-day pieces in the Duncan Phyfe manner are those in the group below. Genuine mahogany throughout, with authentic fabrics and faithful detail, yet priced no higher than run-of-the-mill furniture. The Sofa $149, the Fan Chair $75, the Drum Table $35, the Coffee Table $49. These are selections from Furniture's Hall of Fame

Herbert Hoover Writes:

Japanese Standard of Living Is Better Since Pearl Harbor

Cargo Shipping, However, Is 'Achilles Heel' Of Her 'Co-Prosperity Order' in Asia

(Third of a series by Mr. Hoover.)

By HERBERT HOOVER.

Japan is an entirely different problem from the European Axis. Her home front at this time is the reverse of the European home front.

Japan also differs from our European enemies on the military front. The European Axis is depending mainly on land war.

Japan's ultimate destiny depends mainly on sea warfare. Germany's conquest over land and Japan's are basically conquests over sea.

Japan with Manchuria is normally auto-supporting as to food. Her conquests have given her far more rubber, oil, tin, lead, zinc, copper and hardening metals, rice, and vegetable oils than she needs.

Like Beads on a String. The spirit of her people, depressed during some years by costly and inconclusive fighting in Asia, has been given a fresh impulse by apparent victory over the white races.

Her great weakness is that all her conquests are like beads on a string. And the string is her merchant marine and its air and naval protection.

The Japanese airplane, ship and tank output is not one-fourth what we can produce. Her ships, planes and men are under steady attrition from the British and ourselves.

Merchant shipping is the Achilles heel of her 'co-prosperity order' in Asia. And if her sea transport be steadily crippled, she will start degeneration in munitions and raw materials on the home front.

200 Million Victims. The Axis armies have overrun 12 independent democratic countries and part of Russia.

Their ground crops are decreasing. Their fertilizers have greatly diminished. Their agricultural machinery is run down.

The 'normal' ration of meats and fats combined in these countries ranges from two to four pounds per month. Compare this with the American consumption rate of about 20 pounds per month.

I have a survey of a number of Belgian industrial areas which shows 35 per cent of the children are suffering from scurvy, rickets and tuberculosis.

During the last 18 months I have repeatedly insisted that the blockade should be opened to allow an experiment in supplies for their soup kitchens which feed the women, children and unemployed men.

is there now any reason why the Swedes and Swiss should not be allowed also to save the children in Belgium, Holland, Norway and Poland? They are willing to undertake it; they have ships that cannot be placed in Allied war service.

Future of Freedom. The Germans can save their people from famine by surrender. These people are helpless.

Food for the small democracies has a bearing on the whole future of freedom. These people are the only centers in Europe of fidelity to democracy.

Latest Items Include New Cream, Soap Compound in Powder Form

By Helen Vogt
These are days of sensible buying, as you well know, and it's more important than ever that you know what you're getting for your money. Careful spending is the order of the day, whether you're buying lingerie, lamb chops—or cosmetics.

When you buy anything today, ask yourself why you have chosen it. Consider the quality and usefulness and decide whether the cost is worth the returns you may expect.

French Toast Is a Quick Way to a Thrifty Meal

Small Amount Of Fat Gives Best Results

By Edith M. Barber

You may call it French, German or Spanish toast, "plain perdu" or "pictostie," but after all it is only fried bread. You may saute it or cook it in deep fat and you will have different results, as the former will be soft and tender and the latter crisp.

Sauteing is the method most generally used and there is one trick which should be remembered. Only a small amount of fat should be put in the frying pan and more added as necessary. Then you will have good French toast. If too much fat is used the bread will be limp and soggy.

It is preferable to use bread two or three days old, as in this case the milk and eggs which form the batter will not be too thoroughly absorbed. You may dip sandwiches instead of slices of bread. Sliced cheese or deviled ham may be placed between the bread slices and after they are sauteed or fried in deep fat you will have a good main luncheon dish.

French toast is sometimes used as a foundation for a creamed meat or vegetable. The largest use of it, however, is for dessert when you serve it with sirup, honey, molasses, marmalade or mixed sugar and cinnamon.

If you happen to have stale bread on hand you may feel very thrifty and at the same time make yourself popular with the family by serving French toast for dessert for lunch or even dinner.

FRENCH TOAST.

- 1 egg, slightly beaten.
- 1 cup milk.
- 1/4 teaspoon salt.
- 6 slices stale bread.
- Mix slightly beaten egg, milk and salt. Cut bread in halves and dip in egg mixture. Saute in butter on heavy griddle or in frying pan, keeping pan almost closed during cooking. Brown evenly on both sides. Fry in deep, hot fat, 350 degrees F., until light brown. Drain on soft paper and serve with cinnamon and sugar or sirup for a dessert, or use as canapés. Yield: Six servings.

WELSH RABBIT SANDWICHES.
1 1/2 cups (3/4 pound) grated American cheese.
1 teaspoon dry mustard.
1/2 teaspoon salt.
12 slices bread, buttered.
1 egg, well beaten.
1 cup milk.

Mix cheese with seasonings and spread on six slices of bread. Cover with remaining slices of bread and press slices together tightly. Combine well-beaten egg with milk. Dip sandwiches in deep hot fat (375 degrees F.) two or three minutes, until golden brown. Drain on soft paper and serve at once. Yield: Six servings.

Note—The sandwiches may be sauteed until brown in butter or canapés. Instead of frying in deep fat if desired.

Pink Blossoms for Spring

By Peggy Roberts

Begin now to enlarge your supply of table linen for spring entertaining. Sprays of pale pink dogwood and deep pink cherry blossoms are especially appropriate for the spring season and on a light gray, brown or cream background they make exquisite and delicately colored designs. Satin stitch, buttonhole stitch and outline stitch are used to outline and shade the petals and leaves. The eight large motifs may be used on a cloth of any size or on place mats, towels or runners.

Pattern envelope contains hot-iron transfers for 4 corner motifs, each about 9 by 4 inches; 4 side motifs, each about 10 by 3 inches; 6 napkin motifs, each about 2 1/2 inches; color chart, stitch illustrations and full directions.

Why Grow Old?

By Josephine Louman

We hear lots about writing to men in the armed forces and certainly letters from home must mean a great deal to them; they deserve them, and it is impossible to imagine that any one would be careless about sending them off to loved ones.

However, nothing has been said about how much letters from them brighten life for the women who are left behind. Since I am addressing my remarks this week to men I would like to call your attention to this fact.

The person who is left behind is always more lonely than the one who leaves. This is natural because change of scenery, active new duties, new contacts and filled-to-the-brim daily routine simply do not leave the absent one much time for indulgence in nostalgic thought.

On the other hand, the woman in the home is living in the same surroundings and still moves in the same pattern she once shared with a loved one. She is surrounded by constant reminders: The civilian clothes, the golf clubs, the car key on the mantel, the basket ball sweater and the general heart-warming litter which the average man or boy leaves about the house. Even if her routine and her surroundings are changed she still leads a much more lonely life than the man in camp.

Life in an Army camp or naval training center or air base is strenuous, I know, and leisure time is so filled with ready-made companionship that it must be difficult to find time for a letter to the little lady back home. Yet these letters are really the things which brighten up her day and make the separation more bearable.

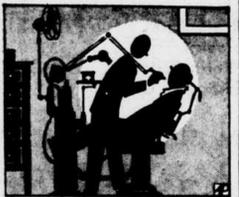

Very young men are particularly likely to be careless about this. Remember that letter you are writing to your mother means more to her than you can ever imagine.

It's Patriotic To Keep Well!

By Wilda Camery, R. N.

The greatest single cause of rejection among Uncle Sam's draftees is defective teeth. Many such defects are easily corrected, but others are more serious. Doctors frequently attribute certain deep-seated difficulties such as some forms of heart disease, kidney infections and rheumatism, to infected teeth. The tragedy is that these conditions could be prevented so often and are not.

Most of us brush our teeth after each meal and teach our children to do likewise. We follow our dentist's advice and use a firm brush with widely spaced bristles. We teach our youngsters to brush upward on the lower jaw teeth and downward on the uppers.

But this is only half the story. Some of us fail to realize that first of all the teeth must be properly nourished. Strong, firm, well-spaced, begin with the mother's diet, before her child is born. To promote strong, healthy teeth for the coming baby and to keep in good condition herself, an expectant mother must have foods that provide sufficient calcium, phosphorus and vitamin D for tooth building—a quart of milk a day, three or four times a week, daily servings of fresh fruit and raw vegetables, two cooked vegetables, whole grain breads and cereals, and at least one protein food such as cheese, fish, liver or other meat.

To continue adequate nourishment and development of the baby's teeth after he is born, it is important to keep him under the care of a pediatrician or child health station doctor and to follow the doctor's advice carefully. When first teeth appear, the baby should be given opportunity to exercise his gums and teeth by biting on soft, chewy foods. At about 2 years of age, the baby should be taken to the dentist because only a dentist has the skill to detect small breaks in the enamel early enough to prevent serious decay and because the child's teeth need periodic cleaning just as do the adult's.

Observation of the first teeth for overcrowding or other defects is also important so that the dentist can plan corrective work if needed at the age when it can best be done.

How to Reduce With Minimum Pain

If you're troubled about those extra pounds—although gas and food rationing ought to take care of them nicely within a month, or so—you can't go wrong in investing that last lone dollar and a half in a copy of Marion White's "Diet Without Despair," just published by M. S. Mill Co., Inc. of New York.

This little book, bound in fashionable fuchsia color, is one of the best guides to reducing I have found. It is not too drastic to scare you off the whole project, but it is so sensibly thought out, the menus and recipes so skillfully concocted, that you will find yourself dropping that excess tonnage without so much as one hunger pang. In fact, some of the meals seem almost too lavish.

The calorie chart that comprises the second chapter is one of the best and most practical we have seen. All the foods eaten by the average person, in easily understood measurements, are there, and you won't have the slightest excuse for slipping up on your allowance of calories—you'll know just how many are in every bite you eat. In such work, a boy or girl can be that insidious cocktail, on the midnight snack that you can't resist—and there's a calorie table of the foods usually selected by the business girl who grabs her lunch from the drugstore or nearby restaurant.

Lowdown on Beans To Be Victory Special From January 18 to 23

Bureau of Home Economics, USDA

Looking for a main dish that will help stretch the family's meat share? Consider the dry bean as a likely candidate. Here are some of the reasons. Dry beans are a compact source of food energy—the kind of food that stays by you and satisfies that hungry feeling. They contain body-building protein. This protein, though not the same high quality as that of meat and other foods of animal origin, still is of great value in these days of wartime protein shortage. Beans rate high as a source of blood-building iron and two of the important B vitamins, riboflavin and thiamine. And they lend themselves to a variety of hearty dishes.

Diet plans worked out by the Bureau of Home Economics, Agricultural Research Administration, United States Department of Agriculture, suggest dry beans, dry peas or peanuts as something to put on your shopping list each week. In recommendations for diets at low cost, the home economists suggest beans be served with meat and other foods (the many food values they offer at low price). Nowadays, they say, dry beans may well be used frequently as a main dish no matter what the food budget. For, besides being a good food in their own right and a spacer-out for meat, they are more abundant now than most wartime foods.

While many foods are limited or rationed, dry beans are such a notable exception they have been designated a "Victory Food Special" from January 18 to 23. During that time, consumers are being urged to give them special attention. For homemakers who take advantage of bean plenty, the Bureau of Home Economics reviews some basic bean facts.

White, pink, speckled... big, little, medium... well known or less familiar—all dry beans are pretty much alike as far as cooking and food value are concerned. You can buy beans in fairly large amounts. They're easy to keep. Simply put them in a tight bag or can and store them where it is cool and dry.

First steps in preparing any bean dish are washing and soaking the beans. Wash them through many changes of cold water and soak them six hours to overnight. Use soft water for soaking and cooking if possible. Cook beans slowly—at low heat—for a long time. Never add soda. Soda destroys part of the vitamin content.

Now that canned baked beans have become a casualty of war, your family will doubly welcome home-baked beans.

Start with dry beans of any variety. For the Boston Saturday night favorite, little white beans ordinarily are chosen. Soak them, cook them until they start to soften.

Wartime Helps Adolescents To Mature

By Angelo Patri

Before the war our adolescent boys and girls were being held as children and not as young people. Because of our labor laws, some of them wise, some of them oppressive to youth, boys and girls, longing for usefulness, for a respected place in the community, were denied recognition and kept as helpless children in classrooms, where they had nothing to gain and much to lose.

The war changed this. Our older boys and girls can now find usefulness. They can do work that is needed and feel themselves a part of the National effort. They can have what they have been aching for: a chance to shoulder responsibility as adults.

Adolescent boys and girls are as mature in some ways as ever they will be and those powers should be, must be, used at the time of their appearance or it was of them will be lost. Responsibility matures an adolescent and that process of early maturity increases his chance of further growth.

Give these young people work and let them carry it through on their own and you will see them develop powers unbelievably rich. By welcoming them into association with their elders, as partners in any undertaking, their feeling of personal dignity and worth is stimulated and childishness drops from them as an outworn garment.

These children can do good work. In fields usually exclusively adult. They have more speed, more energy, more endurance than most grown people. They lack knowledge and experience, of course, but they gain these quickly under the stimulus of necessity. All they need is a chance to prove themselves in office, farm, kitchen and shop. Their growth needs the stimulus of appreciation, of responsibility, of adult recognition.

The teachers are burdened with work and responsibility these days and they can be relieved of some of it by these boys and girls. During the sugar rationing, many of them acted as helpers and did as well, or better than their elders. In such work, a boy or girl can be assigned as the teacher's partner, making a team, and a very good team they are. It is delightful to see the young person's ability and power and personality unfolding under the stimulus of adult association, adult responsibility.

Manners of the Moment

I find that women still have plenty of complaints against cigars and cigar-smokers. Somehow, no matter how tolerant of smoking a woman is, it always takes her years to learn to accept the habits of the cigar-smoker.

Latest complaint to come my way is that of a wife who says that she can stand the rest of it, but that she nearly goes crazy when her husband picks up the last quarter of his cigar, with its chewed-up end, then starts to relight it. He gets the match so close to his face that she is sure he will catch fire himself. And then, somehow, that last quarter of the cigar looks so terribly unappetizing. She says she always wants to get up and offer him a fresh cigar.

But, apparently, that last quarter of the smoke, even though it's a warmed-up quarter, seems to be something he cherishes. At any rate, the wife has taken to finding something to do in the kitchen toward the very end of every cigar. She says it's much better for both of them to stay away from each other during that part of the smoke.

Concert at Home May Be Planned For Friends

Arrange the Program So That the Guests Will Enjoy It

By Emily Post

"I have no way of knowing whether certain young singers belong in a musical group or whether their friends are average neighbors. Her letter merely asks, 'What kind of invitations shall I send for a concert which I would like to give at our house? I have been studying voice for several years and during this time so many of my friends have asked me to sing something for them that I had to make it a rule to refuse every one. I'd like to sing now for them on a Sunday afternoon for several hours. Please tell me how to go about this?'"

Of course, I do not know how interested your friends may be, but even if they are devoted to you, I hope you do not mean literally that you will sing for several hours! If I were you I'd telephone or write on note paper, "Will you come in on Sunday at . . . 4 o'clock? Mr. Tonnetti (your teacher or accompanist) is going to play and I—going to sing."

At a little after 4—or when the people you expect to arrive—you should sing a group of three short songs, or two longer ones. Then let Mr. Tonnetti play alone. After this you sing two or three other songs. If applause is insistent, then sing one or two encores. In other words, don't let that to-be-people wish you had sung more, is success. To have them wish you had stopped sooner, is failure.

Dear Mrs. Post: Your column often refers to the bridegroom in the "groom." We had always been schooled to believe that a groom is a staid man and taught very emphatically to use the term bridegroom in referring to weddings. Will you please be good enough to set us straight on this point?

Answer: "Bridegroom" is in every way the preferred term. But in a column such as this not only must space be contracted but the connotation of bride makes the addition of the extra "bride" prefixed to "groom" more annoying than satisfying. If the word is used once I always write bridegroom but if it must be written several times some of the repetitions are written "groom."

Dear Mrs. Post: I would like to know what is proper concerning my wedding ring. I am now a divorcee with no children. May I wear my wedding ring? It is a very pretty one and some of the stones in it belonged in my family. However, I don't want to do something irregular.

Answer: Usually the ring is discarded because it has lost its significance and the divorcee dislikes wearing it. But you may wear it if you choose to—especially since part of it belonged to your family.

'At Home' in Washington Even Tiny Room Can Be Charming And Restful at Small Cost

By Margaret Nowell

No matter how busy she is, every woman likes her living quarters to have a "home-like" atmosphere. She may be in uniform for the duration; in the Navy, the Army, a member of the Women's Voluntary Services or other service organizations. She may wear suits and spectacles and be the most businesslike expert all day, but when evening comes she prefers to forget it all in an attractive room or apartment where for a few hours she may "be herself," entertain her friends, or relax in an atmosphere of home.

This respite from routine is most important to women. It gives them time to "unwind" and restores the peace and serenity which is as much a part of the life of women in the military and in business as it is to the mother, housewife or young social whirl.

Deep Breathing Is Important Aid To Beauty

Improve Posture by Exercising Chest, Torso Muscles

By Patricia Lindsay

Girls who desire to enlarge their bust and those who have a sunken chest instead of the attractive, uplifted line, should include deep-breathing exercises in their daily, 20-minute routine. For such movements are all-round good; they keep the bust lifted, the shoulders back and down, the head nicely poised and they encourage rich, speaking tones. They are universally ignored too—for women prefer spot-reducing exercises to those which only tone the body!

To test how weak are your abdominal, back and pectoral muscles try doing this: Lie flat on the floor with toes pointing to ceiling and arms parallel with body. Raise arms about 8 inches from floor and with no assistance slowly bring yourself up to a sitting position—keeping toes pointing to ceiling! Ouch! I bet that hurts. I also bet you cannot make it the first time you try!

Well, lady that is proof of the pudding. You need to practice these exercises to do them every single morning for 30 days.

Exercise I.
Sit on the floor, legs straight out in front of the body. Head well poised. Tuck a yard stick, hold it with a hand at each end and as you inhale, raise it over your head and bring it back down to your shoulder blades WITHOUT LETTING YOUR HEAD BEND FORWARD. Then return to starting position as you exhale.

This must be done slowly and rhythmically. And it is not easy to do. Repeat at least 15 times.

Exercise II.
Lie face down on the floor. Place hands on the floor near bust-line. Pushing on your hands force the upper part of your body upward and as you inhale deeply. Slowly lower your body as you exhale. This may be repeated five times the first day.

New Dainty for Bridge Teas

If you want to serve something exceptional and unusually good, almond-mallow tea strips are tops. For smart bridge teas or showers, where dainty servings are still in vogue these strips will be warmly received. Be sure to serve this tea accompaniment hot, that's half its charm.

- ALMOND-MALLOW TEA STRIPS.
- 4 slices white bread, cut 1-inch thick.
 - 24 marshmallows.
 - 4 teaspoons water.
 - 1/2 cup puree made from cooked prunes.
 - 3/4 cup chopped roasted blanched almonds.
- Remove crusts from bread. Cut each slice of bread into three equal strips. Combine marshmallows and water and heat over hot water until marshmallows are melted. Blend with prune puree. Roll bread

Monty Woolley Begg to Be Given the $64 Question

Erudite Professor Hopes To Show Off Knowledge For Radio Audiences

By ANDREW R. KELLEY.

Monty Woolley, erudite ex-college professor, is as hard to fit with film roles as an elephant to pajamas. He has a luxurious growth of chin whiskers, which hirsute adornment makes him a natural Santa Claus, a role which he played recently at Macy's department store.

Out in Hollywood they call him "The Beard," which is descriptive enough. Since he hit in "The Pied Piper," Twentieth Century-Fox resurrected an Emlyn Williams play "Yesterday's Magic," which failed with Paul Muni on Broadway, but which has been sweetened up by Nunnally Johnson to make it a happy ending instead of a tragic one. It was screened here yesterday.

Mr. Woolley is continually mistaken for and by an Englishman, which he is not, and sends this department a monograph indicating he is as Andrew R. Kelley.

Well grounded on general information as John Kieran, hence he craves a place on a quiz program, perhaps to show off some of his dry, biting wit. We yield the platform to Mr. Woolley:

"Nobody asks Monty Woolley the $64 question, and Monty Woolley is beginning to lose a little faith in copybook maxims and all that stuff about the rewards of faithful effort. 'I have always believed in a good education. One of the symbols of America is the schoolroom: people are universally educated. And since though most people take me for an Englishman—my foreign accent came to this country in 1907, I am doubly convinced that to know things other people don't know is the most intriguing part about the American way of life.'

Concentrates on Drama. "To that end, and following copybook maxims to the letter, I went to fine Eastern schools. I studied hard. I got plenty of tutoring on the side. All of this took a great deal of time and money. By the last, when my prep school days were over, I made another big American step and went to college. Here I applied myself triply hard. I studied constantly. I had had my nose in more books than hankies—chiefs. The year was 1907. Four of them. And finally I was graduated. This was not enough. 'I concentrated on the drama. I took post-graduate courses. And since, in studying drama, it is necessary to study a little about almost everything, it was necessary for me to study harder than ever.'

"Eventually I got my reward. I was made a professor at Yale University. My knowledge of the stage and matters pertaining thereto was supposed to be profound. I could tell you in an instant and to a fraction the time of plays. My reader would without confusing him with Meleager, and the number of States in Malay Confederation in the next moment and the square root of 773—all without batting an eye.

"All this took time and money and more time. But this was not enough. A well-rounded education demands living experience as well as book learning. I left Yale. Since that time I have devoted myself to the science of living, and of being an actor, and after 'The Man Who Came to Dinner,' I came to Hollywood and learned about the picture business. I completed 'The Pied Piper' for Twentieth Century-Fox and have just finished 'Life Begins at 8:30.'

Envises Lucky Ones. "Out of all this lifetime of study I sit by my radio and hear dozens upon dozens of lucky people getting cars, radios and suits of clothes, and good, hard money, just for answering questions. Quiz questions. Questions whose answers my whole life has been devoted to. Everybody, but Monty Woolley.

"I know that Nietzsche holds the world's record for 3-mile trotting—won it at Nashville, Tenn., October 20, 1893, in 6:55. I know that all the flowers in the world belong to nine primary types. That the first submarine torpedo was launched in—hold your breath, brother—1771! That the steamboat was invented by Fulton—not Fulton—in 1787. That a British quart or gallon holds more than an American ditto. The distance from Adrianople to Istanbul is 198 miles, and from London to Folkestone is only 71. That the first person to go over Niagara Falls in a barrel was a woman—Anna Edson Taylor—and she did it in 1901. That there have been 2,507 wars in the past 2,500 years—and the index for the 20th century reached a total eight times greater than all preceding centuries.

Craves $64 Question. Spain leads with wars during 67 per cent of the years of her history. England is next with 56 per cent. And Germany is low man on the list with 28 per cent—but with the worst all-round record. The population of Iceland is 115,870 and that there are 11 universal languages, ranging from Volapuk, Esperanto, Ro and Novlatin, to Ido, Anglie and Mendolinguo. The water power of Alaska is 1,400,000 horsepower. William Shakespeare was born in 1564 and died in 1616, and Frances Tavernier is at Broad and Pearl streets, New York.

"That'll give you some idea of what I'm sitting back here stuck with, listening on the set. 'Life Begins at 8:30' every day to other people winning millions of things in AMUSEMENTS.

Millions of contests. I'm ready, I've spent my life studying, I'm going to go. I'm a full professor. I've got the best-known beard in North America. Won't somebody please ask me the $64 question.

February Attractions. "Claudia" with the original John Golden company, including Dorothy Fagure, Donald Cook and Frances Starr, comes to the National Theater February 1. It will be followed by a return engagement of Max Gordon's "Junior Miss." Speaking of old-time "smoothies," Ice-Capades has a comedy team, Orrin Markhus, 51, and Irma Thomas, 44, who stop every show with their fun capers. Mrs. Thomas is the mother of the steel blades with the Ice Polles. Mother Thomas never had her feet on skates until six years ago when she switched over from golf for her outdoor sport. A number of Hollywood stars, through their attorneys, have asked the United States Treasury to raise their application on the $25,000 wage ceiling. What they ask is that the amount over the $67,000 overall they are permitted to earn, be placed in escrow and given to the Government rather than to the picture companies which employ them. Edward Arnold, who was planning to come for the Washington Birthday Ball Celebration, will have to pass it up. He's in the hospital for an operation. Loew's will christen its new screening room atop the Capitol Theater tonight with an invitation showing of "Tennessee Johnson," which stars Van Heflin and Lionel Barrymore. Gilbert and Sullivan has sold out all evening performances at the National Theater, when it runs up $16,000, record business at $2. *

C. Aubrey Smith's 50 Years. Dean Murphy, who imitates celebrities including President Roosevelt, has been released from rehearsals for the Ziegfeld Follies so that he can make a one-day appearance in Washington for the birthday celebration. He will be master of ceremonies for the midnight show at the Earle Theater, leaving thereafter to rejoin the follies. C. Aubrey Smith, who co-stars with George George in "Spring Again," the Guthrie McClintic comedy success, which comes to the National Theater next Monday, January 18, is this season celebrating his 50th anniversary as an actor. The role of Halstead Carter in "Spring Again" marked Mr. Smith's first Broadway appearance in 12 years. During that time he has become a popular character star in Hollywood. He has acted in more than 50 pictures. C. Aubrey Smith's last Washington appearance was for David Belasco in the title role in "The Bachelor Father." When "Spring Again" finishes its week's run at the National, Mr. Smith is slated to return to Hollywood. He has been playing his current comedy for the past year and a half.

Print for Posterity. Sol Lesser has notified National Archives he will present a print of his picture "Stage Door Canteen," to be held in the vaults for posterity. His letter says: "A print of this picture will be placed in a vault in our National Capitol and also a print in an appropriate building in London, so that people a hundred years from now can know a few straight facts about show folks and how they worked and gave of themselves as hostesses, bus boys, entertaining on the canteen stage, or otherwise waiting on the soldiers of all the United Nations. 'Yes, how they played their part in helping thousands of boys at the Stage Door Canteen find a few brief hours of happiness before they sailed away to battle.'

A Linguist Now. Loretta Young learned 12 lines of the Mandarin dialect—the official language of China—for her role in Paramount's "China." She became so interested that she continued taking lessons from Wei F. Fshueh, the picture's technical adviser, until she mastered 150 common Chinese words.

Errol Flynn's Song-Dance Last Until Legal Decision

Picture Was Hastened To Permit Star Chance For His Day in Court

By SHEILAH GRAHAM, North American Newspaper Alliance.
HOLLYWOOD—Errol Flynn's song and dance in "Thank Your Lucky Stars" was rushed to conclusion during the week end because his producers did not know when he would again be available for picture work. Errol's current role of defendant in the California law court, was a taboo subject on the set where the boy, playing a cocky cockney, did three easy dance steps and chanted a number titled, "That's Not You Errol's heroic exploits in his past movies and means that's not you jolly well get when you boast too much. Well, there is nothing boastful about Errol in his present predicament. And I guarantee that he will be a much better behaved boy in every way, if he is—or if he is not—acquainted of the serious charges against him.

Linda Darnell has been absent from picture making for quite a while, but she comes back to work in "Army Wife" by Ursula Parrott. It's a story about a girl who trains flying fighters. But authoress Parrott trained a soldier fighter—replied herself—into a big heap of trouble. Significant Title Change. Lana Turner's next movie, titled "Careless," was too suggestive of the events leading up to her present situation (her discovery that Stephen Crane was not free to marry her when they eloped last summer). And the name has been changed to "Slightly Dangerous." I have a better suggestion yet for Lana's film title. How about "Born to Trouble?"

Lana certainly can get herself into more trouble than any other girl her age and weight in Hollywood. However, you can start making bets now that she will wed Crane at the end of this month, by which time the soldier fighter's previous wife will be final. She will do this for the sake of their child expected in the summer. I saw Paulette Goddard playing tennis on Sunday and she told me that in addition to the jewels she received at Christmas, she was gifted with a victory poultry farm by certain Charles Chaplin. Paulette is nothing if not practical, and eggs are more precious this year than the biggest diamond. She also received some Remour and Degas drawings from her admirers, and when I asked her how that happened she replied calmly, "Oh, I'm collecting pictures now."

"But how did your friends know that?" I persisted. Paulette winked, and said, "I just started talking about paintings." Nice talking if you are the pictures. Talking about chickens, did you know that roosters are not allowed in Beverly Hills? The residents of that swank neighborhood object to the noise of crowing by which roosters herald the new day. Poor, tired souls.

Taylor Joining Up. Robert Taylor joins the ferry command when he finishes his present picture, "Bataan Patrol." Bob is 31 and too old for combat fighting (which is what he would really prefer). Mrs. Robert Taylor (Barbara Stanwyck) will limit herself from now on to one picture a year. "One quality picture," she tells me. Barbara's price is around $100,000 per picture, and with the salary ceiling of $25,000 she apparently sees no point in working for nothing.

Like Hedy Lamarr, who has brought a lawsuit on just this point, Barbara and all other movie stars would prefer to hand over themselves the excess money they earn to the Government. There is something rather depressing in allowing the money to go back into the coffers of the already rich corporations.

Greta Garbo walked into one of the offices of the Community Chest recently and handed over $5,000 on condition that the fact was not published. I was told about it by a friend of hers who was indignant with a columnist who stigmatized Greta as "close-fisted."

Phyllis Brooks, who plays with Ginger Rogers in "Lady in the Dark," is sporting a huge bruise under her right eye. She got it in a motor accident during the week end. Phyllis and I discuss jewelry in general (and Paulette Goddard in particular).

"I once had some jewels," moans Phyllis, "but I gave them all back to Cary Grant when our romance ended."

And now I suppose they are in Barbara Hutton Grant's collection.

There are more than 70 convenient branch offices for Star "Want Ads" located throughout the city.

'Waterloo Bridge' Returns to Little

"Waterloo Bridge," Vivien Leigh's first film appearance following her success as Scarlett O'Hara, opened a week's revival engagement at the Little Theatre today. The story of a woman separated from her fiancé by war, "Waterloo Bridge" tells with tenderness and candor the tragic fate which befalls her, as it will may to others of her kind left alone in wartime. Miss Leigh portrays Myra, the girl who believes her lover has been killed at the front, and in a frenzy of sorrow takes "the easiest way" to earn a livelihood. Upon his unexpected return, she finds she cannot in honor become his wife, despite his protestations of devotion, then kills herself on the bridge on which they first met.

Miss Leigh's performance is perhaps the most sensitive of her screen career, "Gone With the Wind" included. Mr. Taylor's, likewise, is one of his most serious efforts. The supporting cast includes C. Aubrey Smith, Maria Ouspenskaya, Lucie Watson and Virginia Field, all of whom are excellently cast.

Standley in Moscow After Visit to U. S.

By the Associated Press.
MOSCOW, Jan. 13.—Admiral William H. Standley arrived in Moscow in a Liberator bomber from Kulybshv yesterday after a three-month absence for consultation in Washington on closer war collaboration between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Brig. Gen. Joseph A. Michela, Military Attache, and Rear Admiral Jack H. Duncan, Naval Attache, accompanied him.

The remainder of the company performed in a gay spirit, but with the exception of Robert Pitkin, Philip Tully, Catherine Judah and Margaret Roy never quite looked the parts they played and hardly ever did justice to the music. As for the curtain-raising "Jury" period costuming still is missed. But despite whatever shortcomings the production may have, its assets seem decidedly preponderant, witness the jammed tiers of the National these past two evenings. "Trial by Jury" and "Pinafore" again will be repeated at today's matinee and to better orchestral support than that supplied for the last engagement.

Theater Orchestras Salute Allies

Warner Bros. Earle and Loew's Capitol Theaters will each present a medley of United Nations songs as part of their activities to celebrate "United Nations Week," beginning tomorrow.

The Earle will present their musical offering in the form of an overture, which will include "Rule Britannia," "Russia," "Chinese Lullaby" and "God Bless America." Jo Lombardi, conductor, and Freddie Clark made the arrangements. The Capitol Theater will have Xavier Cugat, Latin American orchestra leader, presenting their United Nations medley. The tunes for the occasion are being selected and arranged by Mr. Cugat.

Same Old Sofa

Mary Martin and Dick Powell do a love scene sitting on a davenport in Paramount's "True to Life." Mary recalled that that same piece of set furniture had been used when Bing Crosby wooed her (in "Rhythm on the River"), Basil Rathbone whispered tender words to her (also in "Rhythm on the River") and Don Ameche had proposed to her ("Kiss the Boys Goodbye").

Air Transport Civilians To Get Special Uniforms

By the Associated Press.
 The War Department announced yesterday that pilots and other civilian employees under contract to work exclusively for the Army Air Transport Command would wear special uniforms and insignia. Members of flight crews will wear Army officers' uniforms with plastic buttons, a disc insignia representing the Kitty Hawk Memorial on the shoulder straps and a blue embroidered emblem with the letters "USATC" on the lapels. Ground crew members will wear Army non-commissioned officers' uniforms with plastic buttons and similar lapel emblems. A number of commercial airlines operate supply routes flying personnel and material to the combat zones under contracts with the transport command.

Mayor Kelly Seeks Fourth Chicago Term

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—Edward J. Kelly, Democratic Mayor of Chicago since 1933, gave notice yesterday that he would campaign for another four-year term. The Mayor, who also is Democratic national committeeman for Illinois, filed nominating petitions with the city clerk and thus made the Democratic primary a two-way race. His only opponent so far is Alderman John S. Boyle, an independent. Four men are seeking the Republican nomination—Roger Faherty, organization-indorsed; John H. Lyle, former Municipal Court judge; Arthur F. Albert and Robert McCormick Adams. The primary is February 23.

'Self-Selection' Plan Predicted for Stores in Clerk Shortage

Retailers' Convention To Tighten Controls. By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—To overcome the shortage of help, retailers will be forced to institute "self-selection" service within six months, it was predicted at the convention here of the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

Franklin Lamb, president of the Printing Association of Chicago, said "self-service" stores were out of the question, but that "self-selection" was the next best step.

Picturing the department store of next summer, Mr. Lamb said articles would be well displayed with a sign reading: "Please select the style you want and ask a salesgirl for your size."

Tighter OPA Controls Due. Dr. J. Kenneth Galbraith, deputy administrator of the OPA, said that the OPA was "over the hump" in organizing price controls, and that 1943 would bring tighter, and not lighter, direction.

Dr. Merle Fainsood, director of the retail, trade and services division of the Office of Price Administration, told delegates that the OPA did not plan "any basic retreat" from its present program.

In a special meeting of the National Association of Retail Secretaries, Mr. Fainsood warned that the change of price administrators in Washington was no indication that there would be any laxity of price control.

Power Output Increases After Holiday Slump

By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Electric power production rebounded sharply from the holiday slump, the Edison Electric Institute report showed today, recovering to a total of 3,952,587,000 kilowatt-hours in the week ended January 9.

This compared with 3,779,900,000 kilowatt-hours in the preceding week and with the record high of 3,975,873,000 set in the week ended December 19.

Pacific Coast and Southern States power plants turned out the largest increase from last year's figures with rises of 25 and 22.7 per cent, respectively.

For other regions increases from comparable figures of a year ago were: New England, 2.7 per cent; Middle Atlantic, 6.3 per cent; Central Industrial, 11.3; West Central, 13.6, and Rocky Mountain, 11.4.

Your Income Tax—No. 10—Care in Preparation of Return

A Federal income tax return is a report to the Government of one's taxable income for the year. It is a statement required by law of all single persons, and all married persons not living with husband or wife.

checked for accuracy by the Internal Revenue Service, and the taxpayer may be subject to examination or inquiry relative to matters connected with the return, or his income, and he may be asked for further substantiation of statements made in the return.

It is important, therefore, that persons subject to the income tax prepare complete and accurate returns, as required, both in their own interest and in the interest of economy in the administration of the law.

Byrd Committee Calls Hearing to Show Uses Of Government Cars

Inquiry by Agencies Fails To Present Over-All Picture, Says Spokesman

Failure of certain Government agencies to standardize and consolidate their reports on the use of Government-owned cars prompted the Joint Committee on Reduction of Non-Essential Federal Expenditures, headed by Senator Byrd, Democrat, of Virginia to call for an early hearing on the problem, it was learned today.

While the Budget Bureau, the General Accounting Office, the Office of Defense Transportation and other agencies were each reported to be proceeding with investigations, little or no moves have been made to consolidate and study the joint findings.

Would Check Army, Navy. A Byrd committee spokesman pointed out that the Budget Bureau and General Accounting Office were never able to get together on their checkups of how Government-owned cars are used. He said the committee's aim is to bring them together.

One of the phases of the study by the GAO, the spokesman revealed, was that of how Army and Navy passenger cars and trucks are used around Washington. Just how the committee can get the "run-around" from certain agencies was explained by the committee spokesman, who cited the investigation now under way to determine the disposition of the Civilian Conservation Corps trucks and cars since the organization was disbanded.

Some Equipment Located. Whenever the CCC was asked what had become of its equipment, he said, officials answered that everything had been turned over to the War Department. But the War Department was vague on this subject. Finally, he added, when the committee traced the equipment to the Interior Department and Agriculture Department, representatives of the former department simply replied, "It was too difficult to make out a detailed report."

The Byrd committee is pushing its investigation of the disposition of CCC materials, and has ordered agencies concerned to get busy on full reports. Meanwhile, the committee has received reports that CCC cars and trucks, with good tires, are being permitted to rot in fields or warehouses.

Mexican Envoy and Wife To Entertain at Embassy

Marks Presentation of Decorations To Service Officers and Others

By Katharine Brooks.

Invitations of more than usual interest which were in the mail yesterday included those from the Director General and Assistant Director General of the Pan-American Union, Dr. Leo S. Rowe and Dr. Pedro de Alba, and those of the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera. The popular Ambassador and his wife will entertain Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock, giving a reception at the Embassy to mark the presentation of decorations to several Army and Navy officers of the United States, as well as a number of officials, diplomats and civilians.

The Ambassador will present the Aztec Eagle, the highest Mexican decoration to Vice Admiral Alfred M. Johnson, who is head of the United States section of the Mexico-United States Commission and to Maj. Gen. Stanley D. Embick, former head of that section. A similar decoration has been awarded to Brig. Gen. Amaro Soares Bittencourt, former military attache of the Brazilian Embassy, who now is in Brazil. The assistant Military Attache of the Brazilian Embassy, Lt. Col. Stenio Calo de Albuquerque Lima, will receive the decoration for Gen. Bittencourt as well as one for himself. The Brazilian officers have served in Mexico City and officially attended the inauguration of the President of Mexico, Gen. Avila Camacho. Col. Erik de Laval, counselor of the Swedish Legation in charge of the Rumanian and Hungarian interests in this country, who has served in Mexico, will receive the medal plaque and diploma of the Aztec Eagle which also will be given the Second Secretary of the Portuguese Legation, Dr. Joao R. Simoes Affra, who was in the official party attending the Mexican President's inauguration. The third diplomat to receive this Aztec Eagle is Senor Don Raul Diaz de Medina, financial counselor of the Bolivian Embassy, who attended the inauguration in Mexico City and through his writings has been helpful in presenting Mexico. Col. Edgar Erskine Hume, Medical Corps, U. S. A., who has been a member of the United States Military Mission to Mexico, will be awarded the decoration of Military Merit of Mexico.

Dr. Tomas Cajigas, an Aztec Eagle medal and diploma for his aid to Mexicans who need medical attention and are financially embarrassed as well as for his medical skill and devotion to Mexico. Dr. and Mrs. Cajigas have a room in their house which is a reproduction of a Mexican room. The presentation of these awards will be followed by a light buffet supper and the guests probably will not number more than 75 or 100.

The cards from Dr. Rowe and Dr. de Alba are for the late afternoon of Wednesday, January 27, when a short program will be given at 6 o'clock in commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the death of James G. Blaine. The late Mr. Blaine, who was Secretary of State in the cabinet of President James A. Garfield and diploma for his aid to President Benjamin Harrison, was a pioneer in working to make the Monroe doctrine what it was intended to be, an instrument of co-operation. The late Mr. Blaine revived Pan-Americanism which had been dead since the days of Henry Clay, and issued invitations to all independent nations of the Americas to a conference to discuss arbitration and inaugurate an era of good will. The invitations were issued November 2, 1881, and recalled after the assassination of President Garfield, and President Chester A. Arthur selected Mr. F. T. Frelinghuysen as his Secretary of State. Mr. Blaine's Latin American policy was dropped for several years until, through his efforts, a bill was introduced in Congress and passed October 2, 1889, calling a Pan-American Conference. This was held in Washington the following year and the conference authorized the establishment of the International Bureau of American Republics. This name was changed in 1910 to the Pan-American Union. The late Mr. William H. Fox, of the United States Consular Service, was head of the bureau for some years. He was the son of William Fox, editor of the National Republican, a daily paper of the National Capital many years ago. When the Bureau of American Republics became the Pan-American Union the late Mr. John Barrett became its director general and he was succeeded by the present director general, Dr. Rowe.

The program for this commemoration of Mr. Blaine's death will include addresses by the Bolivian Ambassador, Dr. Don Luis Fernando Guachalla, Senator Wallace H. White, jr.; the Undersecretary of State, Mr. Sumner Welles, and the former President of Panama, Senor Don Ricardo J. Alfaro. Dr. Rowe, who is popular in many circles in addition to that of the Latin American diplomats, through the efforts of Mr. Paul Murphy of the Pan-American Union, has opened the stately building for three consecutive Sunday afternoons for the benefit of the many young women who are here from other cities working in the war effort. Last Sunday an exhibition of photographs was an attraction and 400 young people attended in addition to the benefit orchestra. Next Sunday a short program of music will be given by Senor Terri LaFrancini, Mexican tenor who will appear in his chamo-Mexican cowboy costume. He will be accompanied at the piano by Miss Elena Crivella of Washington.

Miss Patricia Miller Becomes Bride Of Ensign Gordon F. Burgess, Jr.

Miss Patricia Miller of Milwaukee and Ensign Gordon F. Burgess, jr., of the Naval base at Solomon's Island, Md., were married last evening in St. Paul's Church, Alexandria, with the Rev. Alexander C. Zabriske, dean of the Virginia Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ernest W. Miller of Milwaukee and is a graduate of Lake School for Girls, Milwaukee Downer Seminary and Smith College. She made her debut in Milwaukee several seasons ago with the former Miss Patricia Post, who is now Mrs. Thomas Trump, and for the past few months has been in the Navy Department in this city. Ensign Burgess is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Burgess of Falmouth, Mass. He attended Holderness and Fessenden schools, was graduated from Dartmouth College and is a member of Theta Delta Chi. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in street costume and was attended by her sister, Mrs. Otto Karl Bach of Grand Rapids, Mich., as matron of honor and by Miss Margaret Ann Rush of Oil City, Pa., and Miss Alice Powers of Bronxville, N. Y., as bridesmaids. Ensign and Mrs. Burgess will make their home at Solomon's Island temporarily.

MRS. GEORGE ALLEN RADY, JR. Mrs. Rady is the former Miss Mary Virginia Rolfe. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Garfield Rolfe, sr., and State, Mr. Sumner Welles, and the former President of Panama, Senor Don Ricardo J. Alfaro. Their marriage took place recently at the home of the bride's parents in Poolesville, Md. —Bachrach Photo.

Resumes Studies

By the Way—

Before Pearl Harbor Mrs. Howard Rayley led the life of the averaged young matron whose most strenuous duties were looking after a home and a husband and two husky little boys. She loved horse-back riding so she did that occasionally, played games with her children, and because she and her husband are both young and attractive had a wide circle of friends. Then came December 7th and suddenly Mrs. Rayley became a young woman of purposeful activity. She started, and ran alone, "Victory Housing Committee," which was her idea of getting friends to give rooms in their own house to some of the busy war-workers that began to flood the city. She worked as assistant to Mrs. Mason Gulick, who was in charge of the volunteers at the President's Lounge for servicemen at Union Station. She became a member of Mrs. Martin Vogel's Home Hospitality Committee and every Sunday she herself prepared all the food that was served to the servicemen in Mrs. Vogel's cool gardens for the picnics throughout the summer. She was made a captain at the Stage Door Canteen, and she became chairman of the Movies, Cards and Games for Troops Committee under the War Hospitality Board.

MRS. HOWARD RAYLEY. Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes has given an auditorium in the new Department of Interior (which will accommodate 5,400 men at a time) so that servicemen may have free movies over the weekends. The only thing that's lacking are the movies—so now if some good angel will just step forward with some movies everything will be wonderful. Mrs. Rayley says that she and her husband have lived here off and on since 1932. Mr. Rayley was first with the RFC and is now on the Civil Aeronautics Board. Although she is really a native of New York City, where she attended Finch School (she was later graduated from the Dwight School) and lived for a time in Alpine, N. J., Mrs. Rayley's family have distinguished themselves in the history of the Nation's Capitol. It was an ancestor of hers Maj. Andrew Ellicott, who assisted Maj. L'Enfant in laying out plans for the city and who laid the original corner-stone for the District of Columbia. Two years ago at the 150th anniversary of the event at Jones Point, Alexandria, small Peter Rayley represented the family, being the seventh great-grandson of Maj. Ellicott, by laying the corner-stone at the re-enactment of the ceremony. A grandfather on her paternal side was Edwin Sweet, a member of President Wilson's "little cabinet," and her uncle, the late A. Mitchell Palmer, was Attorney General, also under President Wilson.

When we arrived at her house for our interview she was returning from an afternoon of assorting games and cards collected for the servicemen and with her a young sailor and a soldier who had been helping her all afternoon. "This is 'Joe' and 'Bill,'" she introduced gaily. "I don't know their last names, but they're coming while we talk, and then I'm taking them on to a party." Joe and Bill both beamed, and Bill the sailor immediately went to work, giving 7-year-old Peter Rayley a boxing lesson in the drawing-room. "What does this mean, movies and cards and games for the troops?" We asked, "How do you get cards and games, and where are they sent?" "They are sent to the day rooms in the camps in and around Washington," she said. "To date we've collected loads of cards, but not nearly enough

Korean Explains Jap Strategy to Church Society

League Representative Declares Nipponese Utilizing Conquests

By Gretchen Smith.

The belief that Japan should be "knocked out" before the United Nations concentrate on an offensive in Europe, was expressed by Kiloo Haan, Korean nationalist and Washington representative of the Sino-Korean People's League, yesterday.

Speaking before the Women's Society of the First Congregational Church, Mr. Haan, who has given years of study to the military strategy of the Japanese and their objectives, based his statements on confidential information received through members of the Sino-Korean People's League as well as information obtained through personal contacts. Speaking Japanese fluently, Mr. Haan was at one time on the Japanese consular staff in Hawaii.

"The United Nations should attack Japan before she has too strong a foothold in India," the speaker declared.

Strategic Advantage.

With the great British drydocks of Singapore and the United States "Dewey Drydock" in the Philippines repaired and operating for the Japanese, the latter already have a strategic advantage over the United States with ship repair facilities close at hand, he contended.

Japan is working "feverishly" now to establish a two-track railroad from Southern China through French Indo-China to Singapore, Mr. Haan asserted. If that line is once consolidated Japan will not need the merchant marine now required to transport supplies nor the number of naval vessels for their conveyance. These vessels, he pointed out, could then be used in other places against the United Nations.

With 38 per cent of her chemical plants in Korea and a large percentage of her airplane assembling centers now transferred to Batavia, Japan can carry on for a much longer period if she completes the railroad being constructed, the speaker added.

Weakest Points.

The United Nations should strike at once at Japan's weakest point, the Kuril Islands, he advised. The enemy is fighting desperately to hold her position in the Aleutians, realizing that is the weakest point in her defense of Japan proper, he said. The Alaskan highway now almost completed should be used by the United States to rush supplies and build up strong air bases in Alaska to be used now as a base in an offensive, Mr. Haan continued.

An important source of Japan's strength is her ability to refuel submerged submarines, the speaker explained. Hovering off a distant coast, Mr. Haan asserted, Japanese submarines are able to obtain fuel from sympathetic persons of those countries who transfer fuel and other necessities in fishing vessels to submarines. A special container shot up to the surface by the submarine receives the supplies, the speaker explained. He added that Japan has many submarines sufficiently large to transport both troops and planes and expressed his opinion that many reinforcements to the Solomons have been transported by submarines.

Strong in Marshalls.

"There are enemy submarine bases in several of the Marshall and Caroline Islands," he declared. The speaker told how information on these bases had been obtained by two loyal Koreans who, posing as Japanese, served with the southwestern Japanese fishing fleet in 1937 and personally saw cement foundations for big guns and tunnels for submarines and seaplanes installed on seven distinct islands in this group.

Japan is strong, Mr. Haan continued, but her fighting men cannot compare with those of the United Nations.

"In spite of the apparent indomitable courage of the Japanese they can't fight as the American soldier with a Christian spirit, and the knowledge of what he is fighting for," he declared.

Reiterating his statement that the United States "knock out Japan now," the speaker declared that if Japan can consolidate her present

Mrs. Mark Thatcher, president of the Women's Society of the First Congregational Church, looks over figures submitted by Kiloo Haan, Korean nationalist, showing Japanese strength and Japanese losses. Mr. Haan spoke at a meeting of the society yesterday.

Girl Scouts Here To Aid National Expansion Drive

Mrs. E. W. Sturdevant Re-elected Head of District Council

Participation in the national expansion program of the Girl Scouts of America under the slogan, "A Million or More by '44," is the major job ahead of the District Council of Girl Scouts, according to a statement made yesterday by Mrs. Edward W. Sturdevant on her re-election as commissioner of the District council.

Mrs. Sturdevant said that the President and Government officials have urged the national organization to bring the Girl Scout code and activities to as many girls as possible in order to provide useful outlets for the energy of those too young for adult war jobs.

One of the objectives of the expansion program will be to help meet the problems of increasing juvenile delinquency, Mrs. Sturdevant indicated.

Points to England.

"In England, after a year of war," she said, "the number of children under 14 convicted of offenses was 41 per cent larger than in previous years. Reports on increasing juvenile delinquency in this country vary, but they range from 10 to 60 per cent. There is no doubt that the trend is upward and that an ever-growing number of delinquent girls are under 14."

Main features of the campaign will be increasing the size of existing troops to take in those on waiting lists, registration of every girl and adult active in scouting and recruiting of new leaders.

Mrs. Marshall Digges, a member of the District council, recently completed a spot survey of the city which showed there are new communities in wartime Washington in which no recreational facilities are provided for girls under 14.

Several new field representatives already have been added to the local Scout staff and are investigating the possibilities of expanding the number of troops from 24 to 30, with the present leadership.

Council Officers.

Elected to serve with Mrs. Sturdevant as council officers were Mrs. W. M. Kiplinger, Mrs. F. W. Milliken and Mrs. Maury Middleton, deputy commissioners; Mrs. Edgar J. Goodrich, recording secretary; Mrs. Proctor L. Dougherty, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Harry C. Kramer, treasurer, and Mrs. Jesse Miller, assistant treasurer.

New chairmen appointed by Mrs. Sturdevant were Mrs. William MacKall, membership, and Mrs. C. F. Conrad, training.

Chairmen reappointed include Mrs. O'Neal Johnson, program; Mrs. Kiplinger, public relations; Mrs. P. C. Alexander, Camp May Flather; Mrs. Frank A. Helleman, day camp; Mrs. H. Cochran Fisher, overnight camping; Mrs. Samuel Boggs, organization, and Mrs. J. Miller, finance.

The council voted to omit its annual report luncheon this year in order to save time, food and transportation.

The best way to root for victory is to dig deep into that pocketbook or purse and buy War savings stamps.

B'nai B'rith Unit Meets Tonight

Mrs. Lawrence Koenigsberger, recently re-elected second vice president of the Women's Supreme Council of B'nai B'rith, will address the Victory Auxiliary at 8:30 o'clock tonight at the Jewish Community Center. Mrs. Koenigsberger is war service activities chairman for district No. 5 of B'nai B'rith.

The Victory Auxiliary has sold over $9,000 worth of War bonds in the Victory Auxiliary work which includes making surgical dressings and bandages for the Red Cross. Plans also have been completed for furnishing a day-room at Bolling Field.

Phi Omega Pi Elects Officers

New officers of Phi Omega Pi, national social sorority, have been elected for 1943 and will be installed at the February meeting at the home of Mrs. Leland B. May, 1422 Somerset place N.W.

Headed by Mrs. G. D. Kinzer, the president, they include Mrs. Herman Pagenkopf, vice president; Mrs. May, secretary; Mrs. Ernest Walker, treasurer; Mrs. William Pfleger, jr., publicity editor; Miss Marlon Worthing, Panhellenic delegate, and Mrs. May, alternate delegate.

All States Meeting

Miss Kathryn Fox of the District of Columbia Employment Center will be guest speaker at a meeting of the All States Club at the Young Women's Christian Association tomorrow evening. She will lead a discussion on new occupations open to women in the District. Miss Fox is division chief of the service department.

Mrs. Luce and Miss Stanley Feted by Women of Press

By FRANCES LIDE.
 Topics ranged from Danbury hats to women's opportunities for employment after the war when the Capital's two self-styled "Rookie Congresswomen" shared the spotlight last night at a supper meeting of the Women's National Press Club at the Willard Hotel.

The occasion honored all the women members of Congress, but the speeches were made by Representative Clare Booth Luce of Connecticut and Winifred Stanley of New York and most of the questions afterward were directed to the two newcomers to Capitol Hill.

What they said in their opening remarks was for members and guests only, but Mrs. Luce and Miss Stanley agreed to talk for the record in the question and answer period.

The subject of Danbury hats came up when Representative Luce told how a picture taken last week showing her on the Capitol steps with a scarf tied over her head had served as an introduction to what a woman Representative's mail is apt to contain.

Members aren't allowed to wear hats in the House of Representatives, she explained, so she slipped on the scarf when she went out of doors to keep her hair from flying.

In addition to those letters wondering if Danbury's interests were to be properly represented, some of her correspondence raised another issue, suggesting that for her to go around wearing a bandana on her head like a Russian peasant would only serve to "fan the flames of Communism."

Mrs. Luce added, however: "I do have a hat. It's a masterpiece. And if I know that hat, it will keep you busy for a week."

Asked if it were a Danbury hat, she paused a moment, then replied: "There are times when all statesmen must rise above principle—yes."

Both women proved to be raconteurs par excellence, as they answered many an inquiry with an apt anecdote. But the occasion was by no means limited to humorous remarks.

Representative Stanley expressed the hope that she would represent her constituents, and women as well, with efficiency and dignity and also answered a question as to how more women can become elected to Congress.

To the latter, she said: "The more we have good men and women who say 'Politics, deliver me from politics,' the less we'll have good, well-informed people there."

She admitted, however, that she would be most unfeminine if she denied that it was fun to be singled out as one of the two new women Representatives.

As to what would happen to women now replacing men in essential industries after the war, Miss Stanley expressed the opinion that women would have a greater opportunity than in the past to stay in those jobs—if they want to.

Representative Luce was asked if she planned to write any plays during her stay in Congress.

"I may be primarily a playwright," she said, "but I'm a rookie Congresswoman. That's a job I've taken on and one I intend to finish." There will be "very little time to write plays," the author added.

Illness and official obligations prevented three of the feminine legislators from attending the dinner, but Representatives Luce and Stanley had the support of three of their colleagues: Representatives Edith Nourse Rogers, Frances Bolton and Margaret Smith.

Betty Hynes, the vice president, presided in the absence of the president, Christine Sadler.

Judge Plain, Defender Of Billy Mitchell, Dies

By the Associated Press.
 AURORA, Ill., Jan. 13.—Frank G. Plain, former city attorney and Kane County judge, died in a hospital yesterday at the age of 78.

Judge Plain assisted in the defense of the late Gen. Billy Mitchell when the latter was court-martialed at Washington.

Way Cleared to Seal Gov. Snell in Oregon

By the Associated Press.
 SALEM, Oreg., Jan. 13.—Oregon gets a new Governor today, just 45 ballots and 48 hours after the scheduled inauguration.

The way was cleared last night for the seating of Gov.-elect Earl Snell, Republican, by termination of the State Senate's prolonged fight over election of a chamber president.

Forty-four times in two days the Senate split evenly in voting, then Mrs. Dorothy McCullough Lee, one of the candidates, told W. H. Steiwer, her opponent, that she would withdraw in his favor if he would share committee appointments with her.

He agreed and was elected on the 48th ballot.

Mr. Snell was obliged to stand by because the State constitution provides that organization of the Legislature must be completed before a new Governor takes office.

New Governor Reports Nobody Asking for Job

By the Associated Press.
 TOPEKA, Kans.—More than 40,000 persons sought State jobs after Gov. Payne Ratner's inauguration four years ago.

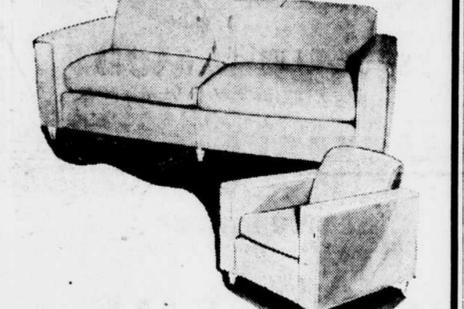

Yesterday Kansas—now dotted with war industries—inaugurated a new Governor, Andrew Schoepfel.

Gov. Schoepfel said today not a single State job applicant had contacted him.

So Your Husband's Gone to War!

By ETHEL GORHAM

CHAPTER X. Week-End Marriage.

You'll learn that there's more than domesticity to a furlough. There's more than talk. There's more than memory. You'll find that you want to gulp all the special things you've done together in one long draught each time he comes home. But you can't revisit every romantic spot, dine in every restaurant you love, walk down every avenue you've ever walked before.

A furlough is compounded of many moods. It's made up of everything that has ever gone into your marriage—the rages, the indignations, the pleasures, the sympathy, the old battles and the antagonisms, the comradeship.

One of the most perplexing difficulties of a week-end leave is the time itself. Too short for a real adjustment. Just long enough for all the tenderness and fear to come to a head.

So with time and tension against you, how can you go about a week end leave so you don't get too emotionally mauled, so you give your husband the sense of having dipped again into your common life, so what you have left after is some measure of solid, mutual understanding?

Monday raises its ugly head here and this is as good a time as any to look it squarely in the face. Whatever you and your husband plan to do over the week end, it is going to cost money.

The odds are long that your husband isn't earning the same money as in civilian life. And although his manhood is completely vindicated by the job he is doing, when he leaves his barracks and comes to town he starts, even though still in these week ends home is the sense of pressure. Because you want to hold on to time with such urgency, you run the risk of becoming as distraught and embarrassing as a jealous woman. You know how uncomfortable the woman makes you feel who is always picking at a bit of lint or smoothing a strand of hair on the dear one's head or casting coy and mournful glances her loved one's way. It makes a man fidget. It makes friends fidget. And you know better than to act that way anyway.

We've gone through a muddle and confusion the twenties never dreamed about. We're not the lost generation and we don't have to act it. We can be as sentimental, honestly emotional and loving as we please. But it is uncomfortable and bad taste to get so wrought up about the sense of passing time that you cling to your husband as if he were in danger of kidnapping by hobgoblins, Nazis, and assorted camp followers did you but let go.

The thing you must do most is try and recapture again and again and again the feeling of steady security between you. It's a kind of play acting consisting of little things and an absolute rote memory of the lines. "This is not for a day, not for an hour, this is the way it has been for years and the way it is going to go on being."

"They're hard lines." They seldom ring true. But you must act as if they did. At least they're easier to believe if he can come home for furlough. Sometimes you'll find you have to visit him and the transience, the strangeness lends an air of impermanence no make-believe can overcome. But at home there are all the reminders of what you have in common. The phonograph, and records you bought together. You can play the new ones for him and suddenly it is as if he had never been away and these were only a continuation of your joint collection. The magazines, new issues piled up in the same familiar place above the old, and he reads the current ones and feels no time has elapsed. Sunday mornings—the bulk of the paper—the long and leisurely breakfast. Going to church if you've gone before. Or putting around the garden if that's the way you choose to commune with the heavens on the Sabbath. Or just being lazy and Sundayish as if war were a hundred years away and no concern of yours.

How well these dear familiar things help ease the heart and heal the rift. A man needs that kind of brief return to normalcy. You need it too. This is what made up your happiness once; it makes up your happiness now. Never forget that what was good enough for all the time you loved each other before should be good enough again. Better, because all these simple things have been carried in memory and the heart returns to them like a carrier pigeon.

I know a woman who used to spend her time about the house in slacks and sweaters. She used to give her Sundays to painting old furniture, or walking the dogs, or taking the baby's bike apart and putting it together again. Her husband came home on his first leave and found her in a black satin negligee, a negligee and frou-frou of lace in the wrong places, and a Camille look in her eyes. He also discovered that she had hidden his old bathrobe with the cigarette burns in the backside and the stain of India ink on the sleeves and substituted a very handsome new one in its stead. Surprise! Surprise indeed for the poor man, who spent Sunday trying to find his old robe and to hide his embarrassment at having a glamour girl for a wife. He had hoped that at least one thing in this changeable world had remained the same for if a man can't count on the inviolability of his own home and fireside, what has he got? One important thing to remember about furloughs at home is to keep nagging domestic details from creeping underfoot. Rare is the husband at any time who likes being annoyed with maids, menus, the latest villainy of the butcher, your recent run-in with the laundry. Rarer still the husband who likes it in wartime, when his leisure is limited and his emotions on edge.

Keeping your household calm involves a special problem if you have a child or children. And you will learn after your husband's first furlough what to do and what not to do with regard to the young.

uniform, to think like a civilian about money. One of the most distressing things he has to face is that he can't pay his way around the way he used to. You have to pay it. And he doesn't like it.

You want your husband to be happy on leave. As a matter of fact, most of your own fun comes when he is home. But going out means spending money. And you're the only one who has it. You don't want him to resent you. But you don't want to resent him. It calls for intelligence and shrewdness on both your parts. But since men are never wizards at working out situations, the intelligence and shrewdness are up to you.

Never make it obvious. If you are used to going to night clubs on big evenings, why can't you go and stand at the bar instead of taking a table with a cover charge? The effect is the same. You're out. It's the same place. You see the same people. So you stand; so what?

You can always get cheap seats at the theater if you get them far enough in advance. And the neighborhood movies have the same pictures as the Main Street Palaces, a week late, and half the price.

Of course, there are the many happy things you do that cost only a bus fare and not a farthing more. Those you will do as you always have. Steak picnics and museum hunts and ferry rides, they're yours for the asking.

But manage to give things a taste of those other gala things you used to do, even if it's only a smattering. Foot the bills with neither a smile nor a frown. The trick is to make it look as if it were manna from heaven. And hope your husband has the good judgment not to really believe it's only pretty green paper with more where that came from. D. C. Bar Association Asks Senate's Prompt Approval of Rutledge

Supreme Court Nominee And Justice Vinson Speak at Meeting

Pointing out that Americans today stand united in a vital struggle to preserve their institutions, Associate Justice Fred M. Vinson of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia told the District Bar Association at its monthly meeting at the Mayflower Hotel last night that the present war "magnifies the blessings of American rights and liberties so often casually considered."

"At times I marvel at the commonplace manner in which we view the rights and liberties acquired through the struggle of centuries," he said.

Rutledge Introduced.
 Introduced by Paul P. Cromelin, association president, as "a great lawyer, a great judge, a true gentleman and a beloved and respected American," Associate Justice Wiley Rutledge, nominated by President Roosevelt on Monday to the Supreme Court, spoke briefly, telling members of the association that "It is a privilege to be among, and one of you."

Justice Rutledge was warmly applauded, and the association adopted a resolution urging prompt Senate confirmation of his nomination to the Supreme Court.

Justices Justin Miller and Henry White Edgerton of the United States Court of Appeals, also were guests. Justice Vinson described the organization and procedure of the United States Emergency Court of Appeals, established by Congress last year under the Price Control Act. Justice Vinson is one of the court's three members.

Passes on Validity.
 "The court's responsibility is confined to the judicial determination of the validity of regulations, orders, or price schedules effective under the Price Control Act, to which proper protests have been denied, either in whole or in part," he explained.

Only 15 cases so far have come before the court, he said. This paucity of complaints, he said, demonstrates one of three things, or perhaps all of them. First, that Congress did a good job in the enactment of price control legislation. Second, that the price administrator has done an acceptable job in administering the law. And third, "that the American people, affected by the legislation, visualizing its purpose, have buckled their belts, that the businessmen of the country, large and small, are as patriotic as we would have them be, and though pinched in spots, have yielded to their financial discomfiture for the good of the country."

A feature of last night's program was a "how" skit—illustrating the proper methods of arguing a case in the Court of Appeals. Those taking part were Justice Miller, Justice Edgerton, Ross O'Donoghue, Lyle P. O'Rourke and Charles E. Smoot.

Miller Gives Pointers.
 Justice Miller then gave the lawyers some pointers on the technique of presenting cases to the Court of Appeals, stressing particularly the importance of defining the issues clearly in each case.

Mr. Cromelin announced the appointment of a committee of three to receive applications to fill the place of Warren Browning, who recently resigned as legal aid attorney for the bar association at the Municipal Court. Members of the committee are John Wilson, chairman; George McNeil and Richard Gallier.

Committee reports presented last night included those of the Committee on Americanization by James R. Kirkland, the Committee on Red Cross drive by John J. Wilson, the Annual Dinner Committee by Chairman Jerome Barnard and the Ambulance Committee by Joseph McGarraghy.

Gyro-Compasses Put On Mass Output Basis

By the Associated Press.
 DETROIT, Jan. 13.—Dodge division of Chrysler Corp. announced yesterday that it has just swung into quantity production of Sperry gyro-compasses on a contract with the compass division of the Bureau of Ships at Washington.

Although the compass weighs several hundred pounds, it is described as one of the most delicate pieces of precision work in the war effort. One of its vital properties is said to be the fact that it is unaffected by the devices the United Nations developed to combat the Axis magnetic mines.

Police Ask Kidnapers To Follow Child's Diet

By the Associated Press.
 NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Police appealed by radio in Spanish and English today to the person who took 5-month-old Edelia Torres from her carriage to follow a physician's prescription in the child's diet.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pablo Torres was taken from in front of her home last Saturday. Police Lt. Charles Malley said he believed the seizure of Edelia was the act of a frustrated mother.

A 3-month-old boy was stolen from his home and returned five months later in excellent health in the same neighborhood. Lt. Malley said he believed the person who took Edelia might have returned the boy and set about finding a girl.

Mimeographed descriptions of the child in both English and Spanish have been distributed over a large

Bar Committee to Hear Gen. Wickersham Tonight

Brig. Gen. Cornelius W. Wickersham, commandant of the School of Military Government at Charlottesville, Va., will speak on "Military Government" at a meeting of the Federal Bar Association and American Bar Association at 8 o'clock tonight in the Mayflower Hotel.

Col. William Catron Rigby, chairman of the Joint Committee on Military and Naval Law of the associations, will preside.

A general discussion will follow the address. Many high ranking officers in the military and naval services are expected to be present.

Meat in D. C. Up 1.8%, Fruits and Vegetables Climb Nearly 4%

District food costs advanced 1.7 per cent between November 17 and December 15, as compared with an average rise of 1.2 per cent in other large cities, and are now 17 per cent above the December, 1941, level, the Labor Department reported today.

Meat prices in the District rose 1.8 per cent during the month and fruits and vegetables advanced 3.9 per cent. Eggs, sugar and fats and oil were fractionally higher, while prices of cereals and bakery products remained unchanged. Costs of beverages declined slightly.

The increase in food costs in large cities—1.2 per cent—was the same as that reported for the preceding month. Higher prices of uncontrolled fresh fruits and vegetables were chiefly responsible for the rise in food costs during the month, Secretary of Labor Perkins said. Prices of foods not under direct price control increased 7 per cent, while the average advance for controlled foods was only 0.5 per cent.

The food cost index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics on December 15 stood at 132.7 per cent of the 1935-1939 average, 9 per cent above May, 1942, 17 per cent above a year ago and 42 per cent higher than in August, 1939.

Canada Asks Murray to Act In Steel Union Strike

By the Associated Press.

SYDNEY, Nova Scotia, Jan. 13.—The Canadian Labor Department last night asked Philip Murray, president of the United Steel Workers of America (CIO), for his "active intervention" after 5,000 workers struck at the huge Dominion Steel & Coal Corp. plant here, and another estimated 5,000 at the Algoma Steel Corp. at Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, voted unanimously to strike tomorrow.

The strike here and the threatened walkout at Sault Ste. Marie by the SWOC unions in protest against the majority report of the Barlow Steel Commission, which recommended that no increases be made in steel workers' basic wages except for certain categories of maintenance men. The strike climaxed two years of effort of steel workers to obtain higher wages.

In a telegram to Mr. Murray, the Labor Department explained that special representatives had been appointed to carry out the commis-

...sion's recommendations, and asked Mr. Murray's aid in urging the plan of conciliation should at least be given a fair trial and might "dispose of many of the disputed steel companies concerned and my rates."

Seabees Repair Carrier As It Sails Into Battle

An aircraft carrier was repaired in mid-ocean by 75 Seabees who worked even as the carrier was in the midst of battle, the Navy said yesterday.

The Seabees, naval construction and repair units who have gone to all parts of the globe, were put to work on this damaged carrier—unnamed by the Navy—when it came to port for repairs and found no regular repair crew available. In the midst of their job the carrier received notice to proceed at once to sea and engage the enemy. There was no time to complete the repairs, so the Seabees sailed along, working throughout the battle.

This remarkable job brought a commendation from Admiral William F. Halsey, commander of the South Pacific area, for the "willingness, zeal and capability" of the Seabees.

Florida Yard to Launch All-Purpose Navy Barge

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 13.—Shipbuilders whose plant is a converted motion picture studio, relic of the Florida land boom, will launch an all-purpose barge Thursday, the first of a number being constructed for the Navy.

The vessels are built on an assembly line, starting bottom up at one end and progressing to the launching strip on the Miami River.

This barge, built by the Florida State Senator, will sponsor the first craft at ceremonies headed by Capt. H. H. J. Benson, chief of staff for the 7th Naval District.

Playwright Wins $3,960 In Plagiarism Suit

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 13.—Louise Howard, playwright, was awarded $3,960, plus attorney's fees, in her plagiarism suit against Twentieth Century-Fox film studio. The writer alleged a portion of the film, "Hotel for Women," was based on her play, "Women's Hotel."

The studio contended the screen play was from a story by Elsa Maxwell and Kathryn Scola. The judgment was awarded by Federal Judge J. F. T. O'Connor.

New Citizens Urged To Work for Suffrage In National Capital

16 Out of 89 Applicants Admitted to Citizenship At Special Proceedings

America today welcomed 16 new citizens, 14 of them residents of the Nation's Capital, following a special naturalization proceedings in Justice F. Dickinson Letts' District Court yesterday in which the candidates were urged "to work for suffrage for the Nation's Capital."

Among the 16 admitted to citizenship out of 89 applicants were a 72-year-old Italian and a 41-year-old soldier, British by birth, now stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Group Includes Russians.

John Abramedes (Turkish), 47, of 608 Main street, Clifton Forge, Va.; Mrs. Josephine Du Guay Kerr (British), 37, of 4831 Thirty-sixth street N.W.; Joseph Anthony Arnato (Italian), 46, of 915 New York avenue N.W.; Joseph Schwarzman (Russian), 46, of 917 H street N.E.; Santa Crupi (Italian), 47, of 924 Fifth street N.E.; Giuseppe Paggi (Italian), 72, of 33 N street N.W.; Mrs. Theodora Soukaras (Greek), 61, of 9 Ninth street N.E.; Lepirino Cologero (Italian), 44, of 1642 Gale street N.E.; Pvt. Sydney Baker (British), 41, Fort Belvoir, Va.; Mrs. Anna Cleonice Martorelli (Italian), 51, of 923 Fourth street N.E.; Mrs. Maria Benedetti (Italian), 58, of 1022 Sixth street N.E.; Morris Fivnick (Russian), 57, of 927 G street N.W.; Mrs. Rosa Casamento (Italian), 47, of 3232 Q street N.W.; Vito Nicola di Geronimo (Italian), 56, of 623 Irving street N.W.; Dinos George Katro (Greek), 46, of 1300 Massachusetts avenue N.W.; Jacob Telbeffer (Russian), 60, of 3133 M street N.W.

James R. Kirkland, representative of the District Bar Association, urged the candidates "to work for suffrage for the Nation's Capital."

"All the States of the Union have suffrage, but the District does not have it," Mr. Kirkland said. "When you take your oath it should act as an immediate challenge to you to work for suffrage for the Nation's Capital."

Meets Deadline.

The special hearing, made colorful by the participation of an American Legion national guard of honor, was held to meet a deadline set by the Nationality Act of 1940, which ordered that all naturalization cases filed before January 13, 1941, must be disposed of by January 13, 1943.

Justice Letts outlined the principles of the American Constitution and Government and reminded the candidates that District residents do not enjoy the right to vote, a point on which Mr. Kirkland expanded.

Mrs. William E. Richardson spoke to the candidates on behalf of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Assisting Justice Letts and James A. Hamilton, jr., examiner for the Office of Immigration and Naturalization of the Justice Department, were Miss Maude Aiton, administrative principal of the Americanization School, Tenth and H streets N.W.; Mrs. Helen T. McGraw, naturalization clerk for District Court, and Mrs. Caroline G. Berry, District Court deputy clerk.

Former Austrian Prince Is Inducted Into Army

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Prince Gaetan de Bourbon Parme of Austria yesterday became a private in the United States Army.

The 37-year-old brother of former Empress Zita and uncle of Archduke Otto was inducted in ceremonies in the Orchid Room of Delmonico's, now used by the draft board.

The prince, father of an 11-year-old daughter, Diane, now in France, fought with Franco in the Spanish civil war of 1938. He said he was wounded six times.

Lifer Is Denied New Trial As Catoe Denies Killings

With his scheduled execution in the District Jail electric chair two days away, Jarvis Catoe, 37, colored, convicted sex-slayer, today clung steadfastly to his story that "I haven't killed nobody."

At the same time, a petition by James Matthew Smith, 43, colored, convicted murderer, for a writ of error, in which he asked the court to grant him a new trial, was denied in Motions Court by Justice James M. Proctor.

Court-appointed counsel for Smith pointed out that the petition was based exclusively on an alleged confession of the murder of Mrs. Florence Dancy in 1935 made to police by Catoe. In a District Jail interview last Friday, Catoe denied he killed Mrs. Dancy, 66, colored, for which crime Smith is serving a life sentence.

The deposition, presented in court yesterday, revealed that Catoe not only denied the Dancy murder, but denied all others with which he is charged. He was convicted for the slaying of Mrs. Rose Abramowitz in March, 1941.

Three-Way Squeeze On Tripoli Believed Aim of Allied Moves

Array of Equipment Also Reported Ready to Use Against Rommel

By JOHN H. MARTIN.
Battle developments in North Africa suggested today that the Allies—who far outnumber the Axis —were getting ready to apply a three-way squeeze to Tripoli, the big Axis base in Western Libya.

The reports indicated, too, that the Allies were going to throw an array of superior equipment against Marshal Erwin Rommel, who lost more than half of his army in the long retreat from Egypt.

Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery's British 8th Army was reported massing tanks and guns for another smash at Marshal Rommel's troops deployed along a series of gullies at Wadi Zem Zem, 120 miles south-east of Tripoli; fighting French forces coming up from the depths of Africa were 300 miles to the south in the Sahara Desert, and Allied bombers based to the west in Tunisia or Algeria were increasing their blows at Axis points in Western Libya.

8th Army Numbers 150,000.
On the basis of available reports and estimates, here's how the Axis and Allies stack up against each other in North Africa:

Gen. Montgomery's 8th Army has been marking time until its aerial arm could establish advance bases and its air and shipping transport services could bring up supplies from Egyptian bases 1,000 miles away. The nearest supply port, Bengasi, is 400 miles east of Zem Zem. United States air transports have been flying huge cargoes of arms and supplies from Egypt to the front.

The 8th Army numbers at least 150,000, but many of these troops are guarding the long Mediterranean coast line from Egypt to Libya. Even so, Gen. Montgomery's advance forces apparently equal the estimated 50,000 available to Marshal Rommel, and their artillery and tanks also are considered a match for the 200 left to the Nazi marshal. The Axis leader lost 75,000 men, more than half his original army, in his retreat from Egypt but has gained reinforcements since then.

The British and their Fighting French allies moving up from the south to outflank Marshal Rommel have good equipment, much of it American-made. Allied aerial superiority in this theater thus far has been obvious. As the British moved westward they also were aided by British planes based on Malta in the Mediterranean. These planes have been doing valuable work in intercepting both Axis ships and air transports moving from Sicily to Libya and Tunisia.

British Have Many U. S. Tanks.
Gen. Montgomery originally broke Marshal Rommel's back at El Alamein in Egypt with a powerful barrage of approximately 450 artillery guns, each placed 23 yards apart over a 6-mile front. Most of these were British 25-pounders, but the British also have some of the new United States 105-mm. anti-tank guns mounted on caterpillar half-tracks. They also have hundreds of American tanks, including the new Gen. Sherman.

Although Marshal Rommel has the advantage of operating close to his big base at Tripoli, his supply problems also are prodigious because of increasing Allied pressure in Tunisia to his rear.

Tunisian operations are another story but all part of the same plot to smash Marshal Rommel as well as Gen. Walther Nehring's troops in that French territory.

The Allies knowingly outran their aerial protection in the early stages of the Algerian-Tunisian campaign in a gamble to beat the Germans into Tunis and Bizerte. They failed because of that lack and also because of the weather. Now the Germans are estimated by Gen.

Henri Giraud, French high commissioner, to have 70,000 troops in Tunisia, and a long hard fight is ahead.

With their French Allies the Americans and British in Tunisia apparently far outnumber the Axis. The French alone are believed to have at least 40,000 men in forward battle zones while scores of thousands are receiving training in the rear with new equipment.

Allies Well Equipped.
The Americans and British are excellently equipped and each side apparently has several divisions in Africa. The United States troops are equipped with the latest American weapons, including the self-propelling 105-mm. guns, all types of fighters and bombers and medium and heavy tanks.

The Nazis have poured some of their best troops into Tunisia and an American general recently said United States medium tanks had engaged and whipped the latest Nazi Mark IV tanks, "so fresh out of the factory that they have gone less than 300 miles."

The United States 105-mm. gun, this general said, was "more than a match" for the famous Nazi 88-mm. weapon. The Germans have mounted many of these 88s on big, heavy tanks, using them as mobile pill-boxes. They are said to be ideal for defense—and that is what the Germans are concerned with at present, just holding on.

Several hundred German planes are based in the Tunis-Bizerte area, including the new Focke-Wulf 190s. But the Germans apparently have nearly 1,000 more based on Sicily and Sardinia in the Mediterranean and are reported using their twin-engine, long-range Messerschmitt

The Germans are strongly entrenched in a circle of strongpoints outside Tunis and Bizerte, they have the best all-weather fields available in the area, their supply lines to Sicily and Italy are short, compared to the Allies, and the heavy rains that have bogged down Allied tanks thus far favor them.

McNutt Unit Probing Racial Issue in Jobs May Be Overhauled

Fair Employment Group Functions Declared Due For 'Cooling-Off' Period

By JESSE O. IRVIN.

The War Manpower Commission's Fair Employment Practice Committee is slated for a thorough overhauling and until this is perfected its functions are to be subjected to a "cooling-off" period, it became known today.

Decision to reorganize the committee, which has been investigating war industries allegedly having racial discrimination policies, is said to have emanated from the White House.

Authoritative sources said that was the reason behind the announcement by Manpower Chairman Paul V. McNutt indefinitely postponing a three-day hearing the committee had scheduled for January 26, at which the railroad industry and labor unions were to answer charges of discrimination against the employment of colored workers.

The committee's recent decision against the Capital Transit Co. and its extensive preparation for the railroad hearing, which was to be preceded by a mass meeting of liberal and colored groups, were said to have caused the White House considerable concern.

"Showdown" Indicated.

Mr. McNutt was reported to have been notified by the White House last week to call off the hearing. He transmitted this notice to Lawrence Cramer, the committee's secretary. It was said the reason given was not satisfactory to members, and Mr. Cramer refused to act. Mr. McNutt then assumed full responsibility.

Mr. McNutt's brief statement to newspapermen was to the effect that the Manpower Commission would intensify its activities in order to have full utilization of manpower on the railroads, possibly through the Office of Defense Transportation. He said he had not consulted with members of the committee.

Mr. McNutt's announcement created considerable stir among committee members and the committee is reported planning to meet at an early date to demand a "showdown" over its future. At this meeting, informed sources said, members will be told that their functions would be shelved pending a reorganization.

One committee member, Milton P. Webster, an official of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, said final plans for the railroad hearing were made at the last committee session and there was no indication of any opposition.

Role of Unions Cited.

Other committee members, who declined to be quoted, were inclined to ascribe Mr. McNutt's action to the strengthening of influence of the Southern congressional members with the administration since the last election. They felt, too, that industries and labor unions, which have been cited by the committee for discriminatory practices, also played a part in the decision.

Mr. McNutt refuses, since issuing the statement of postponement, to elaborate on the reason. However, it is known that some activities of the committee have caused the Manpower Commission considerable embarrassment, and reports coming into the commission tend to show that these activities were stirring up more trouble than they were allaying.

The State Department several months ago requested the committee to postpone hearings in the Southwest called for the purpose of examining charges of discrimination made by alien Mexicans against smelting and refining companies. Hearings scheduled next month in Detroit were called off at the request of the Navy Department.

The committee, originally known as the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, was transferred to the Manpower Commission last July. Enjoying their independent status, committee members vigorously protested the transfer, and the White House was called on to intervene. It was agreed that the committee would continue its independent status and would absorb the functions of the Negro manpower division of the commission. However, its decisions were subjected to Mr. McNutt's approval.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People made public yesterday a telegram it said it sent to Mr. Roosevelt, in which it was stated that if Mr. McNutt's decision was allowed to stand the committee would be "robbed of its last vestige of justification for its existence."

The Negro Victory Committee also made public its telegraphic protest to the White House.

10-Point Laval Deal With Hitler Said to Pledge More Workers

4,800 Square Miles Of Territory Reported Given Up Permanently. By the Associated Press. LONDON, Jan. 13.—Adolf Hitler has made a 10-point political deal with French Chief of Government Pierre Laval which permanently deprives France of 4,800 square miles of territory comprising two departments along the Belgian border, involves sending 400,000 more skilled French workers to Germany and promises to strengthen Laval's position among the collaborationist French leaders, a Fighting French spokesman said yesterday.

At the same time, the long-awaited agreement which turned down Hitler's reported plan to conscript Frenchmen to fight in the United Nations and put Laval in control of the French police in the former occupied zone, with fuller administrative powers generally, contained fewer concessions to the Germans than some observers had expected. Area Already Forbidden Zone. The departments which will not be restored to the French state are those of Nord and Pas-de-Calais, extending from the North Sea southward for about 100 miles along the Belgian border. They are part of the recently created "forbidden zone" in which the Germans are building fortifications, and most Frenchmen already have been removed from them.

Hitler strengthened Laval's hand against his collaborationist rival, Jacques Doriot, leader of the French Fascist Popular party, to the degree that he assured the former that his government was the last with which Berlin will negotiate. As part of the agreement Laval promised to turn over to Germany five French destroyers and two large tugs, presumably the remnants of the French fleet scuttled at Toulon. Question of Capital Postponed. A settlement was postponed on the question of making Paris the French capital, leaving open a matter which has vexed Vichy-German relations. Hitler, under the agreement, will become arbiter of further negotiations between France and Italy, presumably concerning the island of Corsica and other French territory under Italian occupation. The agreement gives Germany full control of French industry, finance and agriculture, thus formalizing what is already virtually the fact in these fields.

The best way to root for victory is to dig deep into that pocketbook or purse and buy War savings stamps.

Crime Doesn't Pay! No. 136

We don't think we're giving away very much by admitting that the crime in today's hand occurs during the play of the cards, for the bidding is obviously very reasonable. The correct play, curiously enough, is not as well known as it should be.

South dealer.

The bidding:
South West North East
1♣ Pass 1♥ Pass
2NT Pass 3NT Pass

West led the nine of spades, dummy and East played low, and South won with the king. South then led diamonds, and West took the diamond ace. Another spade lead then permitted East to take four tricks, setting the contract.

It should be easy to spot the criminal, since you know that the crime took place during the play. But where was the crime? Try to find it for yourself before reading on.

South's crime took place at the very first trick. He should have put up dummy's queen of spades!

The opening lead of the spade nine was obviously the top of a short suit, placing the ace and jack in the East hand. Had dummy played the queen, East would have won with the ace, but then he could not have returned the suit without allowing South to win two spade tricks.

East's best defense would have been a shift to clubs. That would allow South to put up the club ace and knock out the ace of diamonds. No further defense could stop South from winning four diamonds, three hearts, and at least one trick in each black suit.

Yesterday you were Theodore Lichtenner's partner and, with neither side vulnerable, you held:

Surprise Words of the Week

The correct pronunciation of these botanical names will surprise many a reader: Bougainvillea, Calendula, Gladiolus, Verbena, Zinnia. These names should not be pronounced: "BOE-gin-VEEL-yuh, KAL-e-n-DOO-yuh, glia-DEE-on-luss, ver-BEE-yuh, ZEEN-yuh."

The following pronunciations are in accordance with American dictionary consensus:

BOO-gin-VILL-ee-uh
küh-JEN-ee-uh
GLAD-ee-oh-LUSS or: gluh-DYE-oh-luss
ver-BEE-uh
ZIN-ee-uh

For the correct pronunciation of hundreds of other botanical names, send for my free pamphlet "Every flower lover should have it." Send stamped envelope to: "Surprise Words of the Week," by Frank Colby, in care of The Evening Star. Ask for FRANK'S Pamphlet.

It's Hard to Believe

Fort Wayne: Is there any connection between RESTAURANT and the word "rest"?—Mrs. J. H.

Answer—No. Restaurant (correct pronunciation: RESS-toe-rant) is a word from the French. In that language the literal meaning is "a restorative; that which restores one's strength or vigor." The Larousse French Dictionary gives this example: "Le vin est un bon restaurant (wine is a good restorative)."

It's hard to believe that a few drops of spirits of ammonia given to a fainting woman may properly be called a first-class restaurant, but it's true!

Paint Supply Adequate

Fortunately for the home owner, good paint and varnish products generally remain in adequate supply on the shelves of dealers here, and with the exception of a few specialties, such as aluminum paint, painters and property owners will find little change from previous years in the character of the merchant's paint stocks.

Some merchants still have some left-over supplies which they are free to sell for necessary maintenance and repair purposes.

NATURE'S CHILDREN —By Lillian Cox Athey

SEA DRUM (Pogonias cromis)

If, while on a visit to Florida, you have purchased sprays of flowers, "jewelry" or other articles made of fish scales, the chances are the sea drums' scales were used. This fish possesses such large tough scales of silvery sheen that they have been used for this novelty for several years. To remove the scales from the drum, a hatchet or heavy knife must be used.

The drum belongs to a genus with two species, both American. Both species are large, coarse fishes and among the largest in the family. This drum is the most economically

But the drum is a sluggish sort of fellow. His time is spent in searching the mud bottoms for mollusks and crustaceans which are readily crushed by the drum's teeth. Oysters are said to be a weakness of the drum, and quite a few complaints have been lodged against him by oyster bed owners.

This fish came by his common name because of his famous habit of drumming. By profession, these drummers make "music" when they get courting and the lady drummers answer in a restrained fashion of drumming also. It is said that no fish under 20 inches has the gift of drumming; if this is true, then the fish comes of age at this time.

Drummers cannot resist the temptation of a bit of shrimp or crab dangling at the end of a hook. When hauled aboard, there is much protesting in the form of drumming. Usually, these fish are caught in traps or seines. On the end of a hook and line, they make strenuous efforts to regain their precious freedom.

It's common sense to be thrifty. War bonds help you to save and help to save America.

LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME —By Thornton W. Burgess

There was no hope, not the teeniest weekest ray of hope in the heart of Chatterer the Red Squirrel, as Farmer Brown's Boy picked up the wire rattrap in which Chatterer was a prisoner and started for the house—Black Pussy, the cat, following at his heels and looking up at Chatterer with cruel, hungry eyes. Chatterer took a farewell look at the Old Orchard and way beyond it the Green Forest, from which he had been driven by fear of Shadow the Weasel. Then the door of the farmhouse closed and shut it all out. If there had been any hope in Chatterer's heart, the closing of that door would have shut the last bit of it. But there wasn't any hope. Chatterer was sure that he was to be given to Black Pussy for her breakfast.

Farmer Brown's Boy put the trap down on a table. "What have you there?" called a great voice. It was the voice of Farmer Brown himself, who was eating his breakfast.

"I've got the thief who has been stealing our corn in the crib," replied Farmer Brown's Boy, "and who do you think it is?"

"One of those pesky rats," replied Farmer Brown. "I'm afraid you've been careless and left the door open sometime and that is how the rats have got in there."

"But it isn't a rat and I don't believe that there is a rat there," replied Farmer Brown's Boy, in triumph. "It's that little red scamp of a squirrel we've seen racing along the wall on the edge of the Old Orchard lately. I can't imagine how he got in there, but there he was and now here he is."

"What are you going to do with him?" asked Farmer Brown, coming over to look at Chatterer.

"I don't know," replied Farmer Brown's Boy, "unless I give him to Black Pussy for her breakfast. She has been teasing for him ever since I found him." Farmer Brown's Boy looked over to the other side of the table as he said this and his eyes twinkled with mischief.

"Oh, you mustn't do that! That would be cruel!" cried a soft voice. "You must take him down to the Green Forest and let him go. A gentle face with plying eyes was bent above the trap. "Just see how frightened the poor little thing is. You must take him right down to the Green Forest right after breakfast."

"That's just like mother!" cried Farmer Brown's Boy. "I believe it would be just the same with the ugliest old rat that ever lived. She would try to think of some excuse for letting it go."

"God made all the little people who wear fur, and they must have some place in His great plan," said Mrs. Brown.

Farmer Brown laughed a big hearty laugh. "True enough, mother," said he. "The trouble is, they get out of place. Now this little rascal's place is down in the Green Forest and not up in our corner."

"Then put him back in his right place!" was the prompt reply, and they all laughed.

Now all this time poor Chatterer was thinking that this surely was his last day. You see, he knew he had been a thief, and he knew that Farmer Brown's Boy knew it. He just crunched down in a little ball to miserable to do anything but tremble every time any one came near. He was sure that he had seen for the last time the Green Forest and the Green Meadows and Jolly Mr. Sun and all the other beautiful things he loved so, and it seemed as if his heart would burst with despair.

Pay Increase Bills For D. C. Backed by Southeast Council

Plan to Relieve Traffic At Barney Circle Also Is Indorsed

A resolution to indorse the McCarran bill now before Congress, which provides for a temporary increase in District teachers' salaries for the duration of the war and six months thereafter, was adopted last night by the Southeast Council of Citizens' Associations at a meeting at the Anacostia Junior-Senior High School.

Also indorsed was a plan by which the pay increase for District teachers, firemen and policemen would be combined in one bill instead of the two at the present time.

William A. Devall, chairman of the special committee investigating the traffic conditions of Barney Circle, presented a tentative plan to the council. The plan was indorsed and authority invested in the committee to proceed in its actions toward the improvement of traffic hazards at the circle.

Mrs. Ramsey Denies WCTU Advocates 'Culprit' System

Mrs. Ida W. Ramsey, president of the District Women's Christian Temperance Union, today denied that the WCTU advocated a system "which makes culprits of the men in the Army."

Her remarks were directed at a report on drinking among servicemen made by the Army and Navy recently and issued by the Office of War Information.

"We have been asking that the taverns be removed from the Army's vicinity," she explained. "They are the ones to be punished, not our men in uniform."

Mrs. Ramsey said she agreed fully with a release of the National WCTU which labels the OWI report as an "official Government whitewash."

Clean-Up Plan Favored By Thomas Circle Group

The Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens' Association last night favored some "city-wide block movement" to clear streets and alleys of Washington of unsightly refuse.

Mrs. Ella M. Thompson, president, said that since the war had created a shortage of help, it is the duty of each resident to keep refuse, especially milk and whisky bottles, out of streets and sidewalks. The matter will be brought to the attention of the Federation of Citizens' Associations at their next meeting.

The group indorsed Senator McCarran's bill to increase the salaries of school teachers, firemen and policemen. A sales tax was favored as the fairest means of taxation. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Thompson.
