Creation of an agency to serve as the advocate for the home front as demands of war cut deeper into the civilian economy is under consideration by high Government officials, it was learned yesterday. The new agency would handle rationing and integrate the work of a myriad of Federal agencies now tribution of food, fuel, clothing

Proponents of the plan, held likely to be adopted at least in part, point out that while there are well established programs for the armed services, lease-lend and such semimilitary industries as transportation. there is no over-all program or planning for civilians, who are called on to keep the home front operating at a constantly increasing rate of efficiency with decreasing amounts

Wide Shake-up Of OPA Is Seen Under Brown

Pressure Reported Used by Democratic Committee

By ALFRED TOOMBS.

A thorough-going shake-up of the Office of Price Administration, designed to make that agency more politically acceptable, is being contemplated when Leon Henderson steps out as administrator this week.

Strong forces are being marshalled to bring pressure on Mr. Henderson's successor, former Senator Brown of Michigan, to effect a sweeping reorganization of the price and rationing agency, it was learned. The Democratic National Committee has taken an active interest in the proposed reorganization, and officials of that organization are planning to confer with Mr. Brown at the earliest opportunity. The committee officials were understood to be urging that a number of OPA officials, whose actions have not met with favor in political circles, be removed. To replace these officials, the committee is prepared to recommend appointment of men whose names have been cleared through party channels.

Early Action on Brown Seen Mr. Henderson, who has been the center of a violent political storm almost since the day he started OPA functioning, will leave his job just as soon as Mr. Brown's nomination has been confirmed by the Senate. This may take place by

Well-informed officials insist that Mr. Henderson's resignation was entirely voluntary and that he could have stayed on if he wished. In his nore candid moments, however, Mr. Henderson had admitted that the OPA had become increasingly a political liability. This view of the matter was shared thoroughly by leaders of the Democratic Party. In fact, the political leaders have decided that the OPA was largely responsible for the Democratic defeats in last fall's congressional elections.

Mr. Brown, in contrast to Mr. Henderson, enjoys popularity on Capitol Hill, and it was understood that he has already held conversations with many of his former colleagues relative to changes in the price administration. More suggestions will be forthcom-

Democrats Expected To Name Walker as Chairman Tomorrow

Problem Faces Party Meeting on Supporting Flynn Appointment

By GOULD LINCOLN.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.-Postmaster General Frank C. Walker is slated to be elected chairman of the Democratic National Committee at a meeting of the committee here Monday morning.

Mr. Walker is the choice of President Roosevelt for the job. Judging from the comment of early arriving members of the national committee there will be no opposition to his election and no other candidate will be placed in nomination.

Mr. Walker will succeed Edward J. Flynn, the present national chairman, who has been appointed Minister to Australia, with a kind of roving commission in the Southwest Pacific.

Mr. Flynn's appointment has brought an avalanche of criticismmostly from Republicans, although there are plenty of Democrats who feel uneasy over the matter. The Democratic National Committee is expected to adopt a resolution expressing its appreciation of the services of Mr. Flynn, who has been chairman since the summer of 1940, when he succeeded James A. New 5 Pct. Victory Tax To Have No Effect on Income Returns

Experts Are Available At Revenue Building to Explain Withholding Levy

The new five per cent Victory Tax, now in effect, will cause no complications in the income tax returns that many Americans now are struggling with in order to have them ready by March 15. This was emphasized last night by experts familiar with the new tax, which has raised many questions recently regarding its withholding provisions.

Washingtonians already have begun to calculate the 1942 income ax, one-fourth of which must be paid on or before the filing date. At the office of the deputy collector in the revenue building, Twelfth street and Constitution avenue N.W., inquiries already are pouring in. People have begun much earlier this year than ever before, officials said, to get a line on how much they Actually it Is Simple. They also want to understand the victory tax. Experts are available at room 1002 of the revenue building, not only to help taxpayers make out their returns, but also to explain the new victory tax. There is no reference whatever to the victory tax in the 1942 income tax return applications.

While the victory tax has appeared complicated, revenue experts declare in reality that it is simple. The withholding provision, by which employers now are taking out 5 per cent of any pay over $12 a week is merely a compulsory system of saving until the tax falls due in March, 1944. Regardless of how or when the first "withholding" was made in payrolls over the end of the year, the amount taken out is merely set aside, and turned over to the Treasury, to help the taxpayer "pay as you go," on this 5 per cent levy. At the end of the calendar year 1943, the exact income will be computed, and the exact amount of victory tax due can be fixed.

Refunds May Be Made. In hardly any instance, tax experts point out, will the individual have saved up through "withholding" the exact amount of the tax he will

Liberal Interpretation. The collector of internal revenue interpreted "paid" liberally, it was explained, to give employes the 'fairest possible treatment." ruled that all wages "constructively paid" before January 1, 1943, would be exempt from withholding. That is, wages for payroll periods ending on or before December 31, 1942, even if actually delivered in 1943, were held to be available in 1942, and therefore not subject to victory the withholding began, it was emphasized.

Take the matter of employers reporting employes' income to the Government, for instance. For the past year 1942, employers are required to report to the Treasury the total amount of money paid to employes, on a form known as 1099. Careful Check Planned.

For this year, 1943, form 1099 is abolished, and employers will begin reporting on new forms known as V-1. These are little yellow slips which the employer must send to the Government at the end of each quarter of 1943. On these slips he will report the amount of Victory tax withheld

There will be no "gap" between the old form 1099, which is printed in green ink, and the vellow form V-1, experts said. So when income tax returns filed in [larch, 1944, reach the auditors, there will be careful checking of all acomes, so that no individual pays more tax than he should, nor less. Past income reports also will be checked against new ones.

Rail Targets in Western Germany Also Raided; Only Two Bombers Lost

LONDON, Jan. 16.-The RAF returned with a heavy attack last night on Lorient, Hitler's principal submarine base on the Atlantic, setting large fires on the docks and pens in the second raid there in two nights.

Railway targets in Western Germany, France and the Low Countries were raided at the same time and pilots reported attacks on 15 of Germany's badly needed locomotives.

In all the extensive raids, only two British bombers were lost. Reports of the attacks indicated the RAF was employing new bombing tactics. The Evening News said the bomber command obviously realized that new ruthlessness was necessary to knock out the submarine pens and that the RAF apparently was trying to demolish the administrative machinery of the submarine warfare around the port as well as the lairs.

Besides dock facilities, Lorient has machine shops, torpedo and ammunition dumps and food and fuel stores. There also are power plants and barracks for submarine crews. Most of the buildings are near the center of the town and much more vulnerable than the concrete U-boat hangars, said to be capable of absorbing the blasts of the heaviest s the Associated Press. BOSTON, Jan. 16.-A general Parker Lumber Yard in the Charlestown district late today, causing damage estimated at between $250,-000 and $500,000.

Hundreds of men, manning scores of pieces of land apparatus, fireboats and Coast Guard craft battled the blaze for two hours before it was brought under control.

Four firemen were reported injured-three were hospitalized suffering from smoke inhalation and one with a fractured wrist-as the flames raced through the structures of the 110-year-old company that processes mahogany and veneers for defense purposes. Service trucks brought 125 Coast

The buildings destroyed included one housing a tank or seasoning room; a structure containing the boiler room; a 50-foot tower filled with sawdust, and a four-story brick storage building, well stocked with veneer and African mahogany. House Group Studies Pay-as-You-Go Tax As Separate Measure

Would Push It Through By March 15; Limited Hearings Proposed

By the Associated Press.

Members of the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday considered a plan to push through a pay-as-you-go income tax act by March 15 by separating that feature from other tax legislation and limiting hearings on the subject.

Representative Knutson, Republican, of Minnesota, a committee member said he believed it would divorce pay-as-you-go consideration from the general tax problem in the interest of speed. He expressed the opinion that the 25 committee members were agreed unanimously that "we must have a payas-we-go system," though he emphasized there was no agreement as to what form it should take.

Another member, Representative Disney, Democrat, of Oklahoma, commented, "I think we should deal with the pay-as-you-go problem separately, put a time limit on hearings and put payments on a current basis by March 15 if humanly possible. In my opinion it is absolutely sible. In my opinion it is absolutely

Chairman Doughton said the committee would hold its first meeting Wednesday to determine procedure for dealing with the tax matters confronting it, including President Roosevelt's request for $16,000,000,000 of new revenue from taxes and compulsory loans. Mr. Doughton believed it was too early for much speculation about the form of the new tax bill because "nobody knows yet what it is going to look like."

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau appealed in a statement for early filing of tax recollectors' offices."

Parisius Says Belief In Crop Curbs Prevails In Agriculture Unit

Resigned Official Declares Farm Goals Are Set Too Low, Land Improperly Used

Herbert W. Parisius, resigned director of the Food Production Administration, charged yesterday that the Agriculture Department was failing to utilize thousands of underproductive low-income farm families to produce war foods, and that unnecessary and critical shortages were likely to result.

He attributed the asserted failure to prevalence of an "economy based on restricted production" and the insistance of groups within agriculture that crop production control programs be kept in operation. Some farm leaders, he declared, do not want maximum production because they fear possible post-war surpluses and depressed prices.

"The American people don't know what they are up against," Mr. Parisius said.

"Crop goals for 1943 have been set only about 7 per cent higher than last year. But the people are not told this," he declared, adding that the 1943 crop goals should be raised 20 per cent more. He hoped that his resignation would lead to an immediate increase in the projected schedule

Wickard rejected his plan for reorganizing department units concerned with production. A reorganization was ordered by President Roosevelt when he placed responsibility for the war food program under Mr. Wickard. Mr. Parisius told a press conference his plan of reorganization was designed to liberalize and unify department production and credit agencies and policies with the objective of providing greater credit and assistance to farmers who needed it in order to increase their output and to make maximum use of their family labor supplies. Back of Mr. Wickard's rejection of his plan, Mr. Parisius said, was a fear that the Farm Security Administration agency, would become the dominant agency in the farm program. The key agency under the present setup is the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

'The AAA philosophy," said Mr. Parisius, "is pretty much the same as that of those who fear possible surpluses. The FSA, on the other hand, is anxious to help farmers produce more.

"Some people were afraid that if I carried through farm production would be made a program of social reform. That is not true. My objective was to get maximum production needed for the war crisis.

"It is essential that the use of all agricultural land in America be reviewed at once and that it, like man- today, has discussed this problem power, be used for its most valuable and contribution to the war effort. No should be taken to institute rationland can lie idle. Land must not be ing of evaporated milk in the Disused for unessential purposes."

The restrictions on corn acreage January 18. were taken off this month only after a terrific fight, Mr. Parisius said, adding, "we out to take the restrictions off wheat. Wheat is food. In spite of the fact that we will have a storage problem this summer and fall for our 1943 wheat crop. I think we ought to knock off the restrictions and grow all the wheat we can on the plains that are good only for wheat growing. We will need that wheat for meat and dairy cattle

Cotton Producers Assailed.

The biggest pressure against conversion of farm lands to war production on the same scale as factory conversion comes from the cotton producers, Mr. Parisius declared, "Of course, they would rather produce cotton for warehouses at 20 cents a pound instead of producing food for our people."

Mr. Parisius opposed the $400,000,-000 budget request for AAA payments for this crop year. He quoted an editorial in an lowa farm publication which said the payments would not increase production and would only contribute to the infla-

Mr. Parisius said agriculture needed additional new farm machinery, but that the War Production Board had refused to make sufficient material available for machinery. He said Mr. Wickard should have taken this matter to Mr. Roosevelt.

A former regional FSA director at Madison, Wis., Mr. Parisius was succeeded as food production director by M. Clifford Townsend, former Indiana Governor and more recently AAA administrator

A request that rationing of evaporated milk start tomorrow has been made to War Food Administrator Wickard by 12 representatives of local organizations in a letter dated January 16.

"It has been brought very strongly of our attention during the past Red Mass to Be Held to our attention during the past few days that there is a critical shortage of evaporated milk in the District of Columbia. This is extremely serious because so many infants are depending on canned milk

Neither the release of evaporated milk reserves without rationing, nor the improvement in market conditions without rationing, will in our opinion solve this question for the immediate present and probably not for the future.

Mile-o-Dimes Stand Opens at New Site On F Street

First Contribution Made By Mrs. Roosevelt and Commissioner Young

The traditional milk bottles were in readiness for the Mile-o-Dimes at its new stand on F street yesterday, but some of the State signs got lost between the sign painter's shop and the stand, and new ones will not be available until tomorrow. The Washington Committee for the President's Birthday, headed by Commission Young, is looking for a fourth cashier for the stand, which

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Commissioner Young opened the drive yesterday by placing their two dimes on the line. Immediately afterward they delivered brief addresses over five local radio stations.

The drive was given impetus last year by on-the-spot radio talks by donors. This year censorship authorities have prohibited the use of open microphones on streets and thoroughfares, lest saboteurs use them as means of conveying information to enemy agents.

The stand was donated by Atchison & Keller, heating engineers, who have renovated and redecorated it, since it was used last year on Fourteenth street, between H street and New York avenue. The stand is 33 feet long, with grooves for dimes, quarters and half-dollars. It will accommodate 15,000 dimes. It takes 89,872 dimes to make a milelong line. BOND BREAD

because of "Controlled Rising" to the Perfect Flavor Peak

OW that the Government has ordered no more sliced bread, you may have trouble doing your own slicing, if you aren't using Bond Bread. You'll find the slices crumble, wad up, tear apart, come out ragged.

Try Vitamin-Enriched Bond Bread and notice the difference. How easily and smoothly it slices! How delicious it tastes. Better sandwiches, better toast! A million women who buy Bond Bread every day will tell you it's finer bread ... in every way.

Ordinarily one would be inclined to the opinion that they could not because the retreating army from the Caucasus has good rail lines available, while the Russians in the areas mentioned have no open railways behind them, are operating at the ends of long and lengthening lines of communication over bad roads and are encountering ever stiffer German resistance as they approach Rostov itself. But there are complications. First. Lt. Gen. Rasmenikoff is doing a very good job in the way of pursuit. He is keeping his advance going on a fairly broad front, and he is making bold use of his mounted and motorized elements, as testified to by the speed of his advance and his continual sweeps to the flanks

Moreover, he has way, and if his engineers can quickly build a connecting link from Budyonovsk to Blagodornoe, along a route already surveyed and over comparatively easy terrain, he can begin to use a second line of railway as he advances.

Thus, Rasmenikoff seems to have at least a fair chance of increasing his pressure on the retreating Germans and perhaps compelling their main force to stand and fight to avoid being broken up in detail.

Next, we must give a little thought to the operations of Lt. Gen. Yeremenko, coming down the Stalingrad-Rostov Railway toward its junction, at Tikhoretz, with the Rostov-Baku line. Yeremenko has just taken Doivnaya, which is about 120 miles from Tikhoretze. He is encountering heavy resistance; his lines of communication are difficult because they are blocked, at Stalingrad, from direct rail communication with the main Russian supply bases, and he can make only limit-

German Strength Dwindles. The German forces at Stalingrad must, however, be in a sorry plight by this time. They are entirely dependent on their dumps, plus a trickle of supplies by air; they must be starving, they are undoubtedly hoarding ammunition like precious jewels, and they have undoubtedly lost all mobility through the death of their animals and the exhaustion of their motor fuel. Their strength is probably now reduced to something under 200,000 men, perhaps to a far lower figure. We started the day with sips of water rationed by Capt. William T. Cherry, who had been pilot of our Flying Fortress and commander of the party. We got 11/2 inches of water in the bottom of a flare shellabout 11/2 jiggers. And during the morning the Lord provided a few bites of food.

Shark Provides Food.

Among our shark escort that day was a little fellow about two feet long. Cherry got to teasing it with an unbaited fishhook.

To our surprise, the shark took it. Capt. Cherry hauled him over to the raft, drove in his sheath knife, and yanked him into the boat. The fight was on, and it was a rouser. That little devil jumped, slashed, and whipped about with his tail at uncomfortably close quarters. When there are three men in one of those rafts, there is little room for an enraged, 2-foot shark. Our raft careened, took water and once almost capsized. At last Capt. Cherry plunged his blade through the shark's head, and the battle was that's coming will hurry up and the bottom of the raft, and a geyser of water shot up. There were several near fights as the fellows rubbed against one another inadvertently. A sergeant cursed a lieutenant. The lieutenant threatened to cut his throat. Men were beefing at one another in all three rafts.

Because I had escaped the scourge I acted as peacemaker. And I had to be a pretty heavy handed peacemaker at times.

The waterless afternoon in equatorial heat seemed to take something both physical and mental out of our company. The water we had had undoubtedly helped to keep life in our bodies, but it did little to ease our searing thirst.

"THAT THEY MIGHT LIVE"

A Dramatic and Thrilling Show . . . Every Sunday at 12:30 P.M. E.W.T.

THE President of the United States has made it clear that the campaign of the American Red Cross to preserve the health of our Nation is a vital battle of the home front.

Starting Sunday, January 17th, at 12:30 P.M. E.W.T., millions of Americans will hear a great and exciting radio program-"That They Might Live"-dramatizing this campaign. The goal of this drive is to recruit 36,000 nurses for the armed forces, 100,000 nurses' aides to assist in civilian and veterans' hospitals, and 1,000,000 home nurses to protect the health of the individual, the family, and the community.

Every week, an outstanding star of the stage, screen or radio will perform in an important and interesting drama on this program—a radio event you can't offord to miss.

The National Broadcasting Company in donating time to this program, knows of no greater service to the people of our community that could be rendered.

What you will hear will be more than entertaining-more than exciting. It will be important to you and every member of your family!

Your health, the well-being of everyone you love, is at stake. Listen to this program and learn how you can do your share in keeping your family, your community, and your country, healthy and strong in the difficult days ahead.

Naturalization of Alien Doctors to Be Speeded

Because of the acute shortage of civilian doctors throughout the country, Attorney General Biddle has directed the Immigration and Naturalization Service to expedite the naturalization of alien physicians, it was announced yesterday. Through Immigration Commissioner Earl G. Harrison, instructions have been issued to speed the filing of petitions for naturalization, and to hold hearings in advance of their regular order on the calendar on applications of practicing alien physicians or aliens who would be qualified to practice if they were

Mr. Harrison pointed out, in issuing the instructions, that many States, either by statue or by administrative rulings of licensing boards, require applicants to establish their American citizenship before they are permitted to practice medicine. Other States issue temporary licenses which are subject to cancellation unless citizenship is obtained within a specified period of Attorney General Biddle emphasized that the new procedure in no way affects the statutory requirements for naturalization, but merely expedities the handling of applica-

WRC to Aid Red Cross In Recruiting Nurses

Co-operating with the American Red Cross in a three-month campaign to recruit war nurses, nurse's aides and home nursing students, Station WRC will broadcast a 13week series of programs to arouse interest in the project.

The opening program at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon will feature Howard Lindsay and Dorothy Stickney, stars of "Life With Father." Miss Mary Beard, director of the Red Cross service, will announce quotas. The Nation-wide goal is to recruit 36,000 graduate, registered nurses for the Army and Navy; 100,000 Red Cross nurse's aides, and 1,000,000 students for home nursing

Leper Mission Official To Lecture Twice Tuesday

Dr. Eugene R. Kellersberger, gen-eral secretary of the American Mission to Lepers in Africa and the Orient, will speak on the mission's work at a supper meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Sherwood Presbyterian Church at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday. Dr. Kellersberger will tell what the mission is doing to maintain its service in as many as possible of the 100 leper colonies overseas, it was announced.

Earlier on Tuesday afternoon he is to lecture on "Tropical Medicine" before the nurses of St. Elizabeth's Hospital. He is said to be an authority on leprosy and tropical diseases, including sleeping sickness. Dr. Kellersberger, who also is an ordained minister of the Presbyterian Church. South, was a medical missionary in the Belgian Congo

The story of the outfit, the first THOMAS. SUSAN. On Friday. January 15. 1943, SUSAN THOMAS, stepmother of William Meade and stepgrandmother of Paris Staples.

Remains resting at the Malvan & Schey funeral home, N. J. ave. and R st. n.w., where services will be held Tuesday. January 19. at 10 a.m. Interment Arlington National Cemetery.

The story of the outfit, the first complete war history of an Army Air Forces group, was made public yesterday by the War Department. It was compiled under the direction of Capt. James B. McAfee, Charlotte, N. C., intelligence officer of the group, from the diaries and official reports of the handful who reached Australia.

Only 19 Survivors Active. Only 19 survivors of the 27th are still active. Most of the 400odd were left in the Philippines and presumably are prisoners. Of the 27 who got away, 8 have since been reported killed or missing in action. But the 27 who reached Australia battled the enemy in the air and won more than a score of decorations for gallantry.

The group was created in February, 1940, at Barksdale Field, La., and its first commanding officer was Col. (later Maj. Gen.) Clarence L. Tinker, who was lost in the battle of Midway. In October the group moved to Savannah for training in dive bombing and ground strafing. Its operations officer then was Maj John H. Davies, Oakland, Calif. who was a colonel and commanding officer of the group by the time the 27th sailed for the Philippines after the 1941 maneuvers in Louisiana. The men arrived at Manila late in November, but their planes still had not arrived when the Japanese attacked the Philippines December

Nine New Democrats Selected for House District Committee

Men From Large Cities With Experience in Municipal Affairs Chosen

By WILL P. KENNEDY.

Nine new Democratic members have been selected for assignment to the House District Committee on Committees, it was learned last night. The nine are:

William A. Rowan, Chicago; Michael J. Feighan, Cleveland; John W. Murphy, Dunmore, Pa.; Eugene J. Keogh, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Ed Gossett, Wichita Falls, Tex.; John Lesinski, Dearborn, Mich.; Hugh Peterson, jr., Ailey, Ga.: Henry M. Jackson, Everett, Wash., and Cecil R. King, Los Angeles.

It has been the purpose of the committee on committees to select for the District Committee, as far as possible, men with experience in municipal affairs and who come from large cities. They are encouraged to serve for at least two years on the District Committee with the promise that later they will be moved to more important commit-

Local U. S. Buildings Heated With Oil Are Ordered to Convert

Must Show Good Cause In Cases Where Step Cannot Be Taken

All oil-heated Federal buildings in the District, including the offices of national OPA, have been ordered by District OPA to convert their heating plants to coal promptly or show good reason why this can not be done, it was learned last night.

The same "convert-or-else" order that has gone out to all non-residential users of fuel oil in the District -under direct instructions from National OPA, incidentally—has been issued to those in charge of Government buildings heated by oil. Paradoxically, even though the District OPA is a mere subsidiary of the parent agency, it has jurisdiction over the buildings that house the national office.

As a matter of fact, if the local OPA wanted to be literal about interpreting Leon Henderson's order, it could cut off rations of all nonresidential buildings, Federal as well as private, not complying with the order of last night. Such action could be aimed not only at Federal offices but at schools, police stations, firehouses, department stores, private office buildings, rooming houses, hotels-whatever buildings are heated by oil and where conversion has not actually begun or in cases when it has not been satisfactorily demonstrated that it is not feasible.

No Drastic Action Seen. There is excellent reason to believe, however, that the District OPA intends to take no such steps. Few people hereabouts expect that drastic action, if any, will be taken before next winter. Many commercial establishments, it is believed, will As Neglecting Duty get around to converting their plants without much prodding after the new 25 per cent cut in allotments becomes noticeable this week. As for the others-if they can manage on 50 percent of last year's consumption, they probably will be bothered more by their patriotic conscience than by the OPA during the remaining cold weeks this sea-

Neither the national nor the District OPA has relaxed its attitude on the necessity for conversion. But there are practical problems involved which might make it difficult to take a hard-boiled stand on the matter at this time.

In the first place, it is scarcely a secret that local rationing boards are so busy with other problems done by physical instructors during right now that they could scarcely the last 24 years in America. afford to take on the tremendous job of making owners of non-residential buildings convert to coal. sical training than we did last year,'

Parts Hard to Get.

An even more urgent reason for the need, not by how much better not pressing the matter now is the | we are doing." incontrovertible fact that it is easy neither to get necessary parts nor to obtain coal once the heating plant has been converted.

Heating contractors in the city Dr. Lloyd said, and should "help us provements. say that it still takes from four to out" in the responsibility for keepsix weeks to obtain equipment from ing the country fit. the manufacturers. One contractor, who thought he had everything he needed, undertook a job recently and discovered, after he had taken out the boiler and the fire bricks that certain parts had been broken in the base when oil had been installed years before. He had no replacements on hand. So his crew had to spend a full day putting the old oil equipment

Coal Supply Small.

Those who do manage to convert are discovering that coal is not as bountiful as they had hoped it would The strike of anthracite miners cut deeply into the District's supply of hard coal, and many consumers are having to accept bituminous coal and like it. Even if there were enough coal in the District, the problem of distribution would

Coal dealers, like everyone else, are suffering from the shortage of manpower. Even veteran customers are learning these days that if they want coal they must make their own arrangements for getting it into Another complication is the fact that dealers are not accepting any new customers. Most of them can scarcely get around to the old ones. So, unless a consumer who has converted happens to have bought his oil from a company that also deals in coal, he may have a rough time of it trying to find a dealer.

New Statler Hotel To Open Two Floors For Occupancy Today

250 Rooms to Be Made Available as Work on Remainder Continues

The streamlined new Statler Hotel at Sixteenth and K streets N.W., which will open in part tomorrow, was revealed for the first time at a preview for the press yesterday.

Some 250 sleeping rooms on the fifth and sixth floors will be put to use tomorrow. Occupants will be admitted to the building-still closed to the public-by special passes. According to Fred G. Kenny, manager, enough inquiries for permanent residence have been received to fill the hotel three times over. All rooms are for transients only and each guest will be limited to a few days' stay.

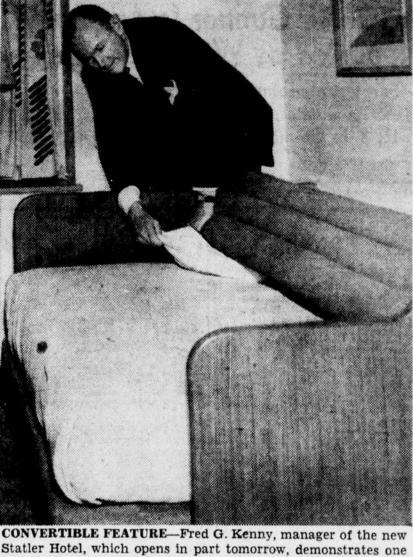

The 850 guest rooms are decorated in green, gray and cinnamon color schemes. Air conditioning and room temperatures from 65 to 80 degrees are regulated by dials on the window sill. There are no ceiling or wall bracket lights. Bureau, dresser and writing table are combined into a single piece of furniture. All bedroom walls have wide built-in mirrors with one full-length panel. Flat-top furniture is constructed of a new plastic with photo-finish grained like fine wood. Neither smoldering cigarette butts nor wet highball glasses will mar the surface. Bed tables have a magazine rack, three radio dials and a fourth dial for uninterrupted music without commercial announcements. The master radio receiving set will be turned off at midnight. Bathrooms have convenient high and low shav-

McCarran May Ask Inquiry on Outlay To Expand Hospitals

Would Have Committee Compare Amount Spent With Results Obtained

Continuing his fight to increase wartime hospital accommodations in Washington, Senator McCarran, Democrat, of Nevada, said last night he may ask the Senate Appropriations Committee soon to inquire into how much has been spent thus far out of funds appropriated by Congress for that purpose

The Senator, who is a member of the appropriations group as well as chairman of the District Committee, said he would ask the Appropriations Committee to find out how much has been spent for overhead expenses and compare that with facilities actually obtained."

Should Apply Elsewhere.

The survey, he said, should apply not only to the District, but elsewhere. In addition to the funds appropriated for emergency public works in crowded defense areas throughout the country, Congress allotted $17,500,000 for similar projects in and around Washington including hospitals, schools, sewer, water and similar public facilities.

The planning of projects to provide additional hospital space was the task of the Federal Works Agency, but the projects must pass through the War Production Board to obtain priorities for materials before they can be carried out. The latest development at WPB was the issuance of a letter on Janing them to report on how many beds they could install in their present buildings, without added construction.

Green Defends Labor's Right to Peacetime Strike as Inherent

Southern Group Hears Speakers Criticize Worker Absenteeism

ATLANTA, Jan. 16.—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, addressing a Southern AFL war labor conference here today, assailed antistrike legislation and asserted that the "right to strike is an inherent, God-given, democratic and personal right.

He added that "so long as the American Federation of Labor exists, we will fight to the death for the right to strike, with all the energies and powers at our disposal.

"On the other hand, we have voluntarily pledged to our Government that we will call no strikes for the duration. . . .

"Labor has made progress through the right to strike. The right to strike is the chief defensive weapon of labor. It is our gun. But, we have agreed to place the gun behind the door for the duration. In other words, we have voluntarily agreed to do what we will not be forced to

How a 20-year-old boatswain's mate, wounded in the North African campaign, returned to the United States to learn his 46-year-old father had been drafted into the Army, was revealed here yesterday.

There can be no question that Louis J. Levesque, sr., is serving in the Army, his son and namesake said in an interview at the National Press Club Legion Post's entertainment for servicemen.

Citizens' Federation Asks Strengthening Of D. C. Police Force

More Duties for Auxiliary Or Larger Municipal Unit Suggested by Group

The Federation of Citizens' Associations last night voted to support a report of its Police and Fire Protection Committee recommending "that provision be made for strengthening the police protection of the city, either through increasing the Metropolitan Police force or through defining and enlarging the duties of the Auxiliary Police.

The civic group accepted an amendment which called for the arming of auxiliary police "after proper training." The amendment was presented by Walter Wasson, first vice president, who has served as captain in the auxiliary of precinct No. 3.

Referring to the recent order of the Commissioners limiting duties of auxiliaries to raid tests or raids, the committee stated:

"As for the legality of the opinion of the Corporation Counsel and the order of the Commissioners stemming therefrom, there seems to be little doubt. As to its wisdom there is considerable.

How They Would Fare Under Nazi Regime Vividly Described

Achievements of America's colored citizens in a few decades and their stake in this country are sketched vividly, in word and picture, in a booklet called "Negroes and the War," of which the Office of War Information began distributing 2,000,000 copies vesterday. In a pungent preface to the pamphlet. Chandler Owen, Chicago publicist, writes:

"Some Negro Americans say it makes no difference who wins the war. They say that things could not be any worse under Hitler. These are the people who emphasize liabilities; they never appraise their assets. They magnify the bad. They minimize the good."

Mr. Owen then points out with well-documented citations, what colored Americans have now and what they would have under Hitler. In Hitler's "Mein Kampf," the writer explains, the Fuehrer "brutally calls Negroes 'half apes.'"

Colored Athletes Snubbed.

"At the 1936 Olympic Games in Berlin, he greeted Aryan winners at his private apartment, so that he would not have to shake the hands of Jesse Owens, Cornelius Johnson, John Woodruff and the other great Negro athletes who played so large a part in bringing victory to the United States. Hitler's newspapers called these fine, university-trained boys 'the Black Auxiliaries.

Mr. Owen adds: "Hitler and his members of the auxiliary force shall of Germany that a Negro has false prophets have told the people have the full power of members of neither a soul nor an intellect, that the department, "but that members he is incapable of being civilized. of the auxiliary, except when so The man in the street in Germany. That provisions be made through the Hitler lie, would not believe deluded by the very magnitude of you if you told him that our Army is proud to have in its ranks many who may be injured in the line of regiments of Negro soldiers, that there are now two full divisions of Negro soldiers, that Negroes serve in all branches. He would not being and hospitalizing any member lieve you if you told him that there are Negro officers in our Army, Negro judges on the bench, Nogroes in State legislatures and in the American Congress."

The publicist asks: "Just what stake does the Negro have in America? What has he got to lose? French Colored Troops Half Starved. We have come a long way in the last 50 years, if slowly. There is still never faster than now."

last much longer. Would Present Claims.

The proposed agency would determine and regulate the amounts of goods and services required for essential civilian purposes. Having determined minimum needs, the agency would present claims for materials, industrial equipment and facilities to WPB. It would present claims for food, fuel, rubber, transportation, clothing and other necessities to the "czars" and responsible branches of WPB and work out means of meeting these needs.

Would Control End Products. In addition to distribution and other programs related to civilian economy, the agency must have control, as far as possible, over production of civilian end products. This means it would take over control of the consumer and consumertype end product industry divisions of WPB. With respect to the goods used equally by the military and civilians, the agency would be the 'advocate" of the people in presenting claims to the "czars" for sufficient goods to keep the economy sound and healthy. In order to supervise production of civilian products the agency would have direct control of concentration of production, simplification and standardization of products and establishment of quality standards now under WPB's Office of Civilian Supply. The new agency in fact would take over that agency as well as some other WPB increase in Negro labor organizations; many so-called 'white' unions have abandoned color-line policies. "What would happen to labor under Hitler? I can tell you what happened to the Czechs, to the French, what happened to the Germans themselves. Their labor unions were suppressed. Strikes were prohibited. Union treasuries were seized.

"This, applied to America, means that the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, the tens of thousands of Negroes in the United Mine Workers of America, the Negroes in the automobile, steel, rubber, packing, shipping, needle trades and transportation unions, all would be reduced to economic impotenceturned into slaves or turned into

How the colored artists, scientists, musicians and educators would be driven from their professions under Hitler is described in the light of what he has done elsewhere. "Under Hitler, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People would be outlawed. The Urban League would become a criminal organization. And the Negro press would vanish. The doors of 300 newspapers and periodicals would be locked the day the Nazis took over. Hitler says half-apes need no newspapers."

Mr. Owen cites an account of how captured French colored troops were thrown into a separate concentration camp and treated far worse than their white comrades—half And Mr. Owen cites that in 1890 starved and not even cared for when they fell sick.

Landis Says District Agreed to Provide Trucks for Fire Pumps

Follows Disclosure $25,000 Worth Is Stored For Lack of Equipment

In the wake of the disclosure that more than $25,000 worth of auxiliary pumps for the District's firefighters is in storage here for lack of trucks and hose parts, Director James M. Landis of the Office of Civilian Defense yesterday pointed out the District had agreed to furnish the trucks if it got the pumps. A spokesman for the District Fire Department said it had not yet been able to locate vehicles strong enough to stand the 1,400-pound weight of the "skid-mount" pumps. Since the pumps have to be Installed on the trucks with a crane, he pointed out, they could not be taken on and off at will. He said he had spent several weeks looking for District trucks that could be spared on a full-time basis but as

Mr. Keen said there was no rush about finding trucks, since all the connections for the pumps had not yet arrived but, once the fittings come, he said, he assumed that the District could take care of the pumps. The District, he added, "has a lot of trucks."

Allotments of pumps to the District, originally based on the 1949 population census, were increased to take into consideration the expanded population of the past year.

District's Allotment. District gets 63 skid-mount pumps, including 17 for Fairfax County, Va.; 69 of the trailer type pumps and 23 of the front mount pumps, the least expensive of the three types of pumps. Skid-mounts cost $550 each and the trailer type, $800. Other points made by Mr. Landis

Director Landis also said such missing parts as suction sleeves and hose nozzles are similar to those already owned by the District and that the ones the District has can be used on the 21/2-inch hose without adapters. Both the suction sleeves, which draft water, and the hose nozzles are in production, the OCD director said.

U. S. Diplomats May Take Hand In Balkan War Within War

Britain Openly Backing Gen. Mikhailovich Forces and Soviet Russia the Partisans While Hitler Exploits Yugoslavian Racial Feud

By Marquis W. Childs.

perienced hands having failed thus far, war within a war that is now raging in

At first glance this civil war in Yugoslavia seems a small incident in the America. world-wide panorama of conflict. Americans know about it in only the most general way. They have heard of a hero, Gen. Drazha Mikhailovich, who is fighting the Naxis that occupy his country. They know that the Mikhailovich forces have somehow become embroiled with other Yugoslavs called the Partisans but the whole thing appears confusing and unimportant

The fact is that in this struggle within a struggle may lie the origins of a third world war. That is the serious view of persons who know Eastern Europe well. among them Louis Adamic, the author, a native of Yugoslavia. The reason is that Soviet Russia is more or less openly backing the Partisans and Britain is more or less openly backing Mikhailovich. Conservative Yugoslavs, conservative Poles, anti-German but conservative elements in the Balkans in general, believe that Britain with the aid of America must ultimately save Eastern Europe from the "bolshevik menace."

Racial Background.

Partly, of course, the Yugoslav civil war has a racial background-the ancient feud between the Croats and the Serbs-one of those blood grudges that have kept the Balkans under arms for more years than any one can remember. Hitler's gauleiters shrewdly exploited this feud when Yugoslavia was occupied with the objective of exterminating as many Slavs, whether Croats or Serbs, as possible. The savagery, the cruelty, the insecurity of all human life in that part of the world simply cannot be described.

But beyond the bloody struggle growing out of ancient native causes is the outline of the larger conflict. The Yugoslav government-in-exile, with Gen. Mikhailovich in Yugoslavia the minister of war in that government, the other ministers in London, represents the old order, the narrow dictatorship that controlled the country before the Nazi invasion. The Partisans, and they include many who are far from Communists, want change, a new order, an end of the harsh domination by a little group. The war against the Nazis is worth fighting only if such a change is possible, they

This same conflict is apparent in other of the United Nations. In China, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has restricted the Communist armies that have done so much of the fighting. It has been freely predicted that the end of the war will see a bloody revolution in China. In French North Africa we are backing Frenchmen who would find it difficult or impossible to maintain a government either in France or the colonies if France were free. Men and women who have suffered for their democratic convictions will not be content with a restoration of

> After the conquest of Yugoslavia, Hitler partitioned that unhappy state in such a way as to cause the utmost bloodshed and chaos. He had various Quislings ready at hand to do his bidding. As Author Adamic explains the tangle, Hitler made Gen, Milan Nedich, long a pro-Nazi, his Quisling overlord in Serbia proper. The Bulgarians and Hungarians were allowed as a reward for good behavior to lop off corners of Yugoslavia. For Croati, made an "independent free state." Hitler had a particularly revolting Quislingite, Ante Pavelich, who had organized the assassination of King Alexander in 1934

Gen. Mikhailovich with the collapse of Yugoslavia in April, 1941, had organized scattered Yugoslav forces into a guerrilla army. Long an ardent anti-Nazi, trained in guerilla methods, he did an excellent job, as ranking officer, in pulling together the random bands of men who still wanted to fight the Axis. They proved an effective force, waging all-out battles with crack Nazi troops, winning fame far beyond the bleak mountains where this no-surrender warfare occurred.

Name Calling Begins.

As early as July of '41, however, they had clashed with bands of partisans who rallied after the German attack on Russia. Increasingly the clashes were between partisan groups and Mikhailovich's forces. Name calling began. Gen. Mikhailovich denounced the Partisans as a "Communist rabble." The Partisans replied with the charge that Mikhailovich was "pro-Axis." This was taken up by the so-called "Free Yugoslavia" radio station which claims to operate from behind the Partisan lines. According to the Yugoslav government in exile, the station is operated from the Caucasus under the supervision of the Soviets.

It was taken up, too, by the Communist Daily Worker in New York, which almost every day has some scorn or contempt to pour on Gen. Mikhailovich and his men. It is echoed in the Inter-Continent News, a mimeographed service which is a fairly faithful reflection of the Communist line as displayed in Moscow and New York.

Gen. Mikhailovich himself was deeply concerned over the increasing frequency of the clashes between the two sides hat were supposedly fighting the Nazis. He was disturbed, too, at the broadcast charges that he was "pro-Axis." Gen. Mikhailovich appealed to the Yugoslav government in exile to do something about the Partisans. Apparently he believed that through negotiations with the Soviet it would be possible to bring the Partisans under his direction.

While there were some vague efforts in this direction in London, they did not succeed and the rift between the two

WILLIAM T. STONE.

Long, gray and bare, it seems just another of those one-story emergency buildings into which the war Capital has spilled its overflow activitiees. Distinguished by a letter of the alphabet from a crowd of identical wooden barracks, it nevertheless brings echoes of Graustark and Ruretania, with flourishes of E. Phillips Oppenheim. When all can be told, the sprawling structure may inspire thrillers of international intrigue under such titles as "The Case of the Prodigal Furs," "The Mercury Flask Mystery" and "The Swastika Homing

For Temporary-T, at Constitution avenue and Fourteenth street, houses the Board of Economic Warfare, one of the most picturesque, romantic and controversial of Government agencies. Until a short time ago it was also one of the most secretive. Waging what is known as "the war behind the war," it ranked in hush-hush privacy with naval intelligence and the War Department's G-2. But during last month Secretary of Commerce Jones attacked BEW in testimony before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. By way of defense, the board's chieftains lifted an edge of the veil and allowed the public to snatch a hasty peep at a few of its

Many months ago, it appears, BEW was requested by the armed services to provide an exhaustive survey of natural resources in Northwest Africa, with a view to determining the extent to which the prospective Anglo-American expedition under Gen. Dwight Eisenhower fould have to rely on supplies from the United States. It was essential that adequate supplies should be sent, but it was equally essential that no more shipping should be used than was absolutely Vital Mineral Exhausted.

Once upon a time-the date is still a military secret—the United States got down to about a week's supply of a mineral without which no airplane can fly. The principal known source was a land in the Far East outside the sphere of Japanese conquest.

Working with the Army Transport Command, BEW flew to that remote

They not only speeded up output, but were able to eliminate all but the part which would yield virtually 100 per cent of value-the pure block without dross. Soon they brought back 200,000 pounds of the mineral.

Then it was learned that quantities were available at a half-abandoned mine deep in the South American interior. Three experts were dispatchd to the scene. Within a few days they cabled a recommendation that the entire operation should be taken over so as to insure quickest possible development. In 20 minutes BEW officials arranged a loan of $1,300,000 with which to buy the prop-

During last year BEW scouts discovered that a European neutral was purchasing American furs in a volume much beyond its normal requirements. ust before Pearl Harbor, another European neutral brought into this country several thousand tons of vegetable oil, which came under suspicion as a prospective component of Nazi munitions. BEW impounded the oil and turned a deaf ear on heart-rending diplomatic outcries that followed. Under one brilliant deal, American shell factories got a deficiency metal in trade for bulletproof Packard cars in which a foreign usurper and his minions could parade with pomp and safety.

BEW projects have an astounding range. Bugs have been flown from the Fiji Islands to combat pests attacking hemp crops in Central America and the Caribbean. The national economies of Brazil and Peru were "bailed out" through contracts to purchase the former's exportable surplus cotton and the latter's normal quota of coffee sent to the United States. Quinine and rubber seeds have been transported around the world by air and planted in the Western

Except under individual license, it was found necessary to prohibit the exportation of photographic films which purportedly had been unexposed. Enemy agents were in the habit of partially exposing occasional squares of film, putting the sheets back in the package and shipping them to neutral countries. Under a pre-arranged code, the exposed bits could be made to tell a running story or give a connected strategic pic-

BEW's career has been one of rapidly expanding authority. It began as the Economic Defense Board, which was set up by executive order on July 30, 1941, "for the purpose of developing and coordinating policies, plans and programs designed to protect and strengthen the international economic relations of the United States in the interest of national defense." On the following September 15, President Roosevelt transferred to the board the duties vested theretofore in the administrator of export control.

Sought to Placate Japs.

This agency had been established, at the request of the armed services, for the purpose of conserving strategic and critical materials of domestic origin. It was staffed by military officers. But the licensing of such exports was a function of the State Department, with the result that the Office of Export Control became the instrument through which it was sought to placate Japan by means of shipments of petroleum, scrap iron, tin plate and other commodities.

Its jurisdiction was confined to materials, chiefly strategic and material, which were so designated by the President. Two days after Pearl Harbor this jurisdiction was extended to all commercial exports by an order of the executive director of the Economic Defense House proclamation of August 29. On December 17, Mr. Roosevelt changed the

It was empowered to execute War Production Board directives regarding such imports, and to issue its own directives to the Federal departments, establishments and agencies concerned. The fued with Secretary of Commerce Jones sprang from this provision and another one authorizing the board to direct the Reconstruction Finance Corp. to set up any corporation or corporations needed to finance the board's operations. With its subsidiaries, RFC is the Government's lending system. Its administration is vested in the Secretary of Commerce.

The board's jurisdiction over exports was confirmed by an act of Congress which was approved last June 30. It broadly empowered the President to prohibit or curtail the exportation of "any articles, technical data, materials or supplies," and directed the BEW to perform the duties and functions accorded to the President by the statute.

According to the Chinese, Berlin is on the Asiatic mainland as quickly as possible. Germany has no interest in seeing China utterly defeated and is willing to act as the "honest broker" between the two antagonists. The Nazi diplomats and strategists point out to their Japanese colleagues that the strenuous efforts they are making in China can be of no real advantage to the general cause of the Axis; that so long as the United States and Great Britain are not defeated, all the conquests of the Japs remain ephemeral because the Allies will turn with extreme violence against Japan as soon as the European end of the Axis

Urge Honorable Terms to Chiang. They point out that while the German nation eventually may come to some terms with the Allies-should Hitler be defeated-the racial bitterness against Japan is such, particularly in the United States, that the people of this country will never rest until Japan is destroyed and reduced to the same rank of power as Korea or Manchukuo. Under these circumstances, says Berlin, why waste time on China, since a compromise with Gen. Chiang or some of his more powerful generals is possible?

The Nazi diplomats are urging Japan to grant "honorable" terms to the people they have been fighting and robbing since 1931 and turn their entire might on Russia or the United States.

Japan, on the other hand, has not in the past desired a German victory over Russia. Under the present circumstances, however, she begins to fear that Russia might defeat the Reich.

Relations between Moscow and Tokio are excellent. Two armies are facing each other on the Siberian-Manchurian border, but they are in no hostile mood Japan is known to have helped Russia in the past in many ways, either directly or by shutting her eyes, which would not have been the case had she desired an early defeat of her northern neighbor. Russian supply ships have been allowed to carry all kinds of goods from our West Coast ports to Sakhalin and Vladivostok under the nose of the Japanese fleet which controls that area.

The Japanese have traded quantities of rubber from Malaya and Sumatra to the Russians for pig iron and coal. The various problems such as the question of fishing rights in the waters of Sakhalin, which a few years ago were considered important enough to bring about a clash between Japan and Russia, have been now settled amicably. There is no question in the minds of most observers that had Japan wanted to liquidate the Port will be a blacked-out, windy island where no sailor would even want a shore leave; and the fleet will be there only a few hours before its resumes its lonesome trip to a frigid nowhere.

The trip began at an Alaskan port where snow blew across the docks and men on shore leave spent their time skating on a frozen lake. It was a routine assignment through waters officially designated as a combat zone. But a half dozen hours away from port the entire picture changed.

In the middle of an anti-aircraft firing practice, the fleet received orders which made the convoy delay, the warships put on full speed. A Japanese fleet, the admiral was informed, was believed heading east. This fleet was to intercept and destroy it. Just like that, The size of the enemy fleet was in doubt. It might have bigger ships, heavier guns. But the orders still specified, "meet and destroy."

On the first day, the "strip ship" order was given. Jig-saw puzzles went overboard. So did wooden desks, magazines, curtains which had given some privacy to officers' quarters. Everything that would burn and was not essential to operation in battle followed. Linoleum came off the decks and went over the

A genius must have selected those pictures, because it would have required a genius to locate so many so bad. But on a blacked-out ship, in weather that makes going on deck poor recreation, men at sea will watch anything.

Periodically, the fleet's own planes went up on reconnaissance. Nothing dramatic about it-just reconnaissance. The launching, each time dependent on exact timing of catapulting mechanism with the roll of the ship, is routine. So is the return, when the plane must land, in heavy seas, and be pulled aboard. That the planes occasionally swing against the side of the ship, crushing its wing tips, is to be expected and requires only quick shipboard repair. It is not so simple if the pilot or gunner happens to fall off during the swinging. There is no guarantee either of them the water is cold.

But however careful the organization of the international and intercontinental superior authorities, it cannot replace work at particular quarters where disturbing elements exist. In order to assure settled conditions based on President Roosevelt's four freedoms, a "police force" imposed from outside will not suffice. How-Not When

It would be more to the point, in the minds of many taxpayers, if Chairman George of the Senate Finance Committee and Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee would unite in a joint statement informing taxpayers how they are to meet their first quarter payments of 1942 taxes on March 15.

The joint statement they made Friday, reflecting a curious anxiety on the part of the Treasury Department, was to emphasize the fact that returns and tax payments must be made on March 15, regardless of what other tax plans eventually may be shaped. The Treasury officials are conscious of a state of confusion in various parts of the country, indicating to them that many taxpayers believed no returns would have to be filed March 15.

Undoubtedly some of this confusion arises from the constant discussion of the Ruml and other payas-you-go plans, none of them in operation, in the newspapers and on the radio. It is surprising that this discussion, as the Treasury seems to believe, has obscured the importance of the fateful day of March 15. One would think that the taxpavers would remember that date, and its requirements, above everything else.

But there are other causes for this confusion. And one of them is the plain inability of many taxpayers to understand how, in addition to what they are expected to do now in buying bonds and paying Victory taxes, they are to make the tax payments on March 15 on 1942 income out of 1943 income and then assume the additional obligations on 1943 income implied in the President's suggestion of immediately raising sixteen billions in new taxes or compulsory savings.

Taxpayers are not asking for relief from what the Government is calling on them to do to finance the war. But they are asking for relief in the form of a simplified, pay-asyou-go method of meeting their tax payments out of current income. Unless some method enabling them to do it is adopted, the Treasury is going to have many involuntary taxdefaulters to deal with, regardless of how well they remember the date when taxes and returns are due.

North African Tempest

Recent statements by spokesmen for the British government have made some of the critics of American political policy in North Africa look just a little bit ridiculous.

This criticism has been aimed directly at Robert D. Murphy, our Minister in North Africa, and, through him, at Lieutenant General Dwight D. Eisenhower, North African military commander and backer of Mr. Murphy. The substance of the complaints has been that General Eisenhower is a good military man, but a pretty hopeless diplomat, and that Mr. Murphy, who ought to know better, is either unwilling or unable to rub out the remnants of the pro-Vichy officialdom in North Africa, who are supposed to be pro-German in sentiment. All of this, the critics have been saying, is getting the United States into hot water with the British, the Fighting French and a variety of other governmentsin-exile.

But now, as a result of the official British statements, it begins to appear that this criticism, despite the vehemence of the critics, is made of flimsy stuff. Bracken, British Minister of Information, says that neither the British nor the American government is backing any particular candidate for leadership of the French, and, particularly, that the British are not supporting the aspirations of General De Gaulle and his Fighting French, and that the United States is not backing General Giraud, French High Commissioner in North and West Africa. Furthermore, according to Mr. Bracken, the British government has "the greatest possible confidence in General Eisenhower and is backing him to the utmost." This was followed by a statement from Harold MacMillan, British Minister for North and West Africa, who, while asserting that there must be changes in some things-particularly the attitude of the North Afri- | Hoffman, general manager of a can regime toward the Jews-never- | cleaners and dyers union, who had theless predicted that an agreement | been found guilty of sewing incenwill be reached and said that a set- | diary pellets in the lining of clothing tlement is in sight.

arrangements in North Africa have not been satisfactory to everybody, and it is not conceivable that any arrangement could have been made which would have pleased all parties. General Eisenhower and Mr. Murphy set up a political organization which, in their judgment, was best calculated to aid the military campaign. They enjoyed a large measure of initial success, but obviously there still is a lot of hard fighting ahead, and since General Eisenhower is the man who will be held responsible for getting the final results, he ought not to be hampered by the sniping of poorly informed critics in Washington and London.

Relief for Leningrad?

One of the most intriguing aspects of the winter war on the eastern front is what may be happening on its northern sectors. Nearly a month ago, Germany's ace military commentator, General Ditmar, asserted that the heaviest blow in the Russian offensive was coming, not in the south, but toward the northern end of the line. Shortly thereafter, Marshal Timoshenko, hitherto in command of the southern Russian army group, was transferred to a northern post. This shift could not have been a demotion, in view of his brilliant record. His proven skill in organizing elaborate offensives made it seem logical that he had been given a fresh task in line with his strategic talents.

Slightly over a fortnight ago came the powerful Russian smash at Velikiye Luki, the extremely important hinge of the German front, just where it bends eastward into the big Rzhev-Viazma salient threatening Moscow and covering Smolensk, the key point of the Axis' central front. Just what happened at Velikiye Luki is even now uncertain. Moscow said it had fallen, and the capture of this first German "hedgehog" was hailed as a Russian triumph portending greater things to come. Berlin has consistently denied its loss. Perhaps neither claim is wholly correct. Those big German hedgehogs are more than a single fortified point. They are rather an extensive fortified area. So the Russians may have taken the town itself without expelling the defenders from a maze of bunkers and trenches perhaps several miles in depth. Even Moscow does not claim to have advanced much beyond the town in any direction and speaks of powerful German counterattacks. So we may consider that sector at least provisionally stabilized.

It is interesting to note that the Russian attack on Velikiye Luki was first reported by the German side. Now Berlin announces another big Russian attack farther north, while from neutral Sweden come dispatches describing this new offensive as directed toward the relief of Leningrad. Such a move might be anticipated if the Russians have enough reserve striking power. The great Russian metropolis, once the capital of Czarist Russia and still the Soviet Union's outlet on the Baltic Sea, must be in desperate straits. For nearly a year and a half it has been besieged by land and blockaded by sea, the only contact with the rest of Russia being across Lake Ladoga to the eastward. That tenuous line of communication is sadly insufficient for its vast population and big garrison. Last winter, something like 1,000,000 persons are supposed to have died from starvation, cold and disease. The second siege winter must now be taking a fearful toll. Moscow may well deem it necessary to make a supreme effort to remedy this situation.

The task is a difficult one. The Germans have undoubtedly fortified their siege lines with all their engineering skill. The key to their defense system is the bristling "hedgehog" of Schluesselburg, a natural fortress situated at the southern tip of Lake Ladoga. Here the German front comes to an apex, only a few miles across between the defenders of Leningrad and their comrades from the rest of Russia. Those few miles, however, must be battered down literally yard by yard. The tenacious defense of Stalingrad shows how slow and costly is the process of reducing a well-fortified area stubbornly held to the utmost. It can be assumed that Schluesselburg is garrisoned by picked German troops ready to fight to the last. We may, therefore, be about to witness another ferocious death grapple, with Russians and Germans exchanging combatant roles.

Strange Procedure

It is understandable that the circumstances under which Charles Poletti commuted the sentences of three convicted labor racketeers during his brief service as Governor of New York should have aroused considerable criticism in the State. Mr. Poletti served as Governor during the interim between the resignation of Herbert H. Lehman and the inauguration of Thomas E. Dewey. During that period he commuted the sentences of fourteen persons, and in all but three of these cases the customary procedure of referring the matter to the Parole Board for investigation was followed. In the exceptional threeall convicted of violence in connection with labor activities-the investigations were made by the Governor's office. The most prominent offender in this latter category was Alexander sent to a cleaning firm, the purpose In the face of these statements it | being to terrorize the operators of | Finnegan, U. S. A., is running a rail-and the New York Court of Appeals, Hoffman began serving a prison term of from four to eight years. Mr. Poletti commuted the sentence after Hoffman had served seven months and eleven days.

Later it developed that Hoffman had been arrested on four other occasions for alleged complicity in terroristic acts, although he was not convicted. Mr. Poletti said that at the time of commuting sentence he knew nothing of these incidentsthat the investigators he had assigned to the case had not told him about the prior arrests. "I was advised," he said, "that Hoffman enjoyed an excellent reputation as an honorable citizen before he was tried in this case."

No doubt Mr. Poletti was in ignorance of these earlier arrests, but that is beside the point. The pertinent question is why an unusual investigating procedure was followed in the case of the three labor offenders, when the customary reference to the Parole Board would have brought all of the relevant facts to the attention of the Governor. Nothing that Mr. Poletti has said by way of explaining his act suffices to clear up this point.

Rommel's Race

One of the most intriguing episodes of the war has been the prolonged retreat of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel and his Afrika Korps across a big section of North Africa. It is now two months and a half since Rommel's army was routed from its fortified lines at El Alamein, almost within sight of Alexandria and the Valley of the Nile. Rommel was then in a desperate situation. Most of his tanks and heavy artillery were lost, while his rearward communications were disrupted by continuous blasting by British and American air power that had attained absolute mastery of the skies. Only heroic measures could save any part of the shattered Axis forces.

Those measures were taken. Ruthlessly abandoning his Italian allies, Rommel fled westward with his picked Germans packed on motor trucks, fighting only occasional rearguard actions with a light screen of machine gunners and mobile artillery, deliberately sacrificed at a few strategic points where the pursuing British could momentarily be held up. More than once motorized British units cut inland, trying to outflank Rommel and bring him to bay. But each time he slipped away. His heavy losses were partially recouped by garrison and supply troops picked up en route, so that his net force continued to average between 40,000 and 50,000. That was enough to render his pursuers circumspect, lest they run into a trap, and circumspection became more advisable as the British tended to outrun their own supplies over rapidly lengthening communications.

The latest phase of this interminable obstacle race over a course already more than 1,000 miles long now is shaping up at Wadi Zemzem. As its name indicates, this is the canyonlike course of a river, dry except for occasional cloudbursts. which extends inland for over 100 miles and falls into the Mediterranean through salt marshes just east of the town of Misurata. This is the last defensible position left for Rommel east of Tripoli. For the past fortnight the British Eighth Army has been concentrating against it, and Berlin reports the enemy massed for an attack, though Cairo and London are as yet silent on the alleged operation. Meanwhile, far to the southward, a Fighting French mobile column is advancing through the desert, aiming at Tripoli. But this force can hardly present an immediate flanking threat to Rommel, since it still is some 300 miles from the coast and has bad

The outcome of current operations at Wadi Zemzem should depend on whether the British have strength enough to launch a strong frontal attack combined with an effective encircling movement. The chances are that Rommel has left merely a strong rearguard while the bulk of his forces move westward toward Tunisia, evacuating supplies and materiel from Tripoli, the main Axis base in North Africa prior to their recent occupation of the Tunis-Bizerte triangle. Since that development Tripoli has ceased to have capital importance. Axis strategy would seem to dictate a junction between those occupational forces and Rommel's Afrika Korps. Once out of Tripolitania, Rommel might block the further advance of the British Eighth Army at the Mareth Line, a strongly fortified position in depth constructed years ago by the French as a barrier against a possible Italian invasion of Tunisia from adjacent Tripolitania. This Mareth Line runs due southward from the coast at the Gulf of Gabes along the crest of the Ksour Mountains deep into the desert. Presumably it already is in Axis hands. It is likewise protected from attack from the rear by salt marshes which extend from the coast to the Algerian border. Whether Rommel will win this logical end to his long race should soon be evident.

Regulations just issued by the Tokio government ban all music of British or American origin. For the time being, perhaps; but it is not unlikely that the Mikado's subjects some day will become thoroughly familiar with "Halls of Montezuma," "The Caissons Go Rolling Along," "Rule, Brittania" and "The British Grenadiers."

Food Shortages Developing

By Owen L. Scott.

A really serious shortage of many kinds of food lies ahead for civilians in this country. This shortage has begun to appear in a few commodities and in a few localities. It promises to become more general and more widespread in the months to come

The reasons why the American people particularly those of the middle and upper income classes, are not enjoying the superabundance of food to which they have become accustomed are several in number. They add up to the prospect of a simpler diet for the war's duration and to a diet restricted in volume of food as well.

For one thing, the military and lendlease demand for food is skyrocketing. A short time ago officials estimated that this demand would amount to one-fifth of all of the food produced in the United States during 1943. Then the estimate was raised to one-fourth. Now it is being revised upward once again.

At the same time that food is being siphoned off for military purposes, there is an immense increase in demand from civilians. Workers who never before had the income with which to purchase the steaks, hams, milk, butter and other things that they wanted now possess that income. They are in the market competing with the persons of higher income at a time when the supply of food is declining.

All of this is occurring before any appreciable amount of food is diverted to people of conquered countries. A little food is going to North Africa. If Italy should be defeated in 1943 much more food would have to be directed there. Promises have been made that large quantities of American food will be provided for peoples who are freed by American, British and Russian Armies.

The result is a colossol demand for food. That demand already is so great that it is to force widespread rationing. Rationing, in turn, involves a sharp reduction in the amount of rationed food available to the middle and upper income groups in order that all people may share equally in available supplies. Under a system of rationing a Southern sharecropper, if he has the money with which to pay for it, is entitled to as much beef, butter, milk or other rationed products as is a New York millionaire. Inasmuch as the lower income groups now have money to spend, there is going to have to be a sharp reduction in the amount of many products that has been going into the diets of millions of families.

For example, the average family may have to get along with little more than one pound of beef per person and a pound and one-tenth of pork per person in an average week. Fish will be scarce and poultry not too abundant. It is going to be necessary to cut butter consumption to around one-quarter of a pound per week for each person. This means that more cooking will have to be done with lard and with vegetable oils but there will not be any abundance of these

Milk probably will have to be rationed in some areas, and ice cream already is a scrace commodity. Canned goods available for each individual will be cut about in half. The volume of canned goods may be little more than half a pound per week for each person. Sugar is going to be rather scarce unless more shipping is allotted to bring in a larger volume of Cuban sugar. However, there will be plenty of bread and a fairly large volume of potatoes. Vegetables, unless home grown, may be less abundant due to transport difficulties.

An equal division of food would assure American families a diet much more varied and abundant than that of the British or Germans. However, the machinery for rationing food is far from being in working order. It may be several months before it is geared to an efficient operation and during that time there probably will be critical shortages

The experience that lies ahead should educate the American people to one fact. That is that there really is no American farm problem if the American people have the income with which to buy the foods that they want and which they can consume. The shortages in meat, milk and butter that now are occurring are shortages that have developed before military demand has reached the very large proportions that it is going to reach. Those shortages, too, are not traceable to hoarding because you cannot hoard perishable products. What has happened to date is that the wage earners of the United States, with incomes expanded, are in the market for the foods that they always have wanted but which they have not been able to afford in the past. When they buy, the American farmers must work overtime to try to provide their wants. The farm surplus problem tends then

The demand for food that is to develop during 1943 will be so great that it can only be restrained by widespread rationing. Even then there will be tight situations. Officials now are agreed that it is going to require an organized effort in the United States, comparable to that in England, to get the food production that war demand requires.

A Western Justice

From the Topeka Capital Nomination of Wiley Rutledge to the Supreme Court bench by President Roosevelt involves some innovations that commend the appointment. In the first place, the former law school dean will be the first justice named by the President who had not previously been associated with the administration at Washington in a political way. Apparently he had only his judicial qualifications to commend him for consideration to this high position. Something new, also, is the fact that Justice Rut ledge is the first of the eight justices thus far named to the high court by President Roosevelt who has been advanced directly from a lower Federal bench. For the last three years he has been associate justice of the Federal Columbia.

The Sense of Security

By the Right Rev. JAMES E. FREEMAN, D. D., LL. D., D. C. L., Bishop of Washington.

There is an unfounded and irrational kind of optimism too characteristic of us. It is strikingly evident in our life today. We of America have so long enjoyed uninterrupted privileges, so great freedom, such a sense of detachment from the problems and ills that deeply concern other peoples, that we have foolishly assured ourselves that we have a paid-up policy that guarantees us immunity and security against all the evils and afflictions common to humanity in general. We are possessed of inexhaustible supplies, we have fertile and expansive acres capable of feeding all the Americas and more if necessary; we know all the answers to our own and others' problems; our standard of living is high, why worry? Even now, with a global war raging and millions of our sons bearing arms, there is little evidence, at least on the surface, that we are deeply concerned. Every public speaker, every commentator assures us of complete victory; the only warning voice we have heard, that of Ambassador Grew, and he speaks out of an intimate knowledge of one of our enemies, suggests that we are faced with a grave and serious situation that will prove costly before order and peace are at-

Yes, we have a kind of confidence, born of our ingenuity and skill, that is quite common to us. It is reflected in many practices of our life. Our social usage and indulgences are among them. There is little curtailment so far as these are concerned. "Let us eat, drink and be merry," this is still a popular slogan. The sobering influence of a world tragedy is not evident in our way of life. We are not arguing for a habit of mental depression or a gloomy outlook upon the ultimate issues of the war; we believe that much of our stability, yes, and our efficiency, resides in a hopeful way of appraising, at their full worth, the issues we face.

A phrase in the Old Testament, addressed to a people in need of a sustaining confidence and hope comes to mind: "In quietness and confidence shall be your strength." Underscore "strength," the element indispensable to the realization of any kind of attainment. Weakness means failure, strength implies accomplishment, ultimate success. This is what we are striving for today. The victory and the peace.

two conditions to its attainment are quietness and confidence. Quietness means freedom from hasty and impulsive action. It is not characteristic of us. As a people we are intense, our movements are hurried. We are the greatest advocates of speed in the world. In many respects our capacity for quick action is a virtue with us. Witness it in the rapidity with which in a short space we have converted all our machinery to war purposes and amassed a fighting force of trained men. In all this we are quite incomparable. The quietness that makes for strength is concerned with a state of mind: the capacity to be reposed and reflective in the face of any and all conditions. This is a supreme need today. It can be had, despite the distractions and deep concerns of a world tragedy. It is finely expressed by St. Augustine where he says: "Our souls are restless 'til they rest in Thee.

To take time out to think, reflect and pray; to make every day a day of new appraisals; to put ourselves right with the world and to believe and strive for "an ultimate decency of things"; to divorce ourselves from practices, social and other, that are inconsistent with a world at strife; this means to gain poise and the kind of mental and physical repose that lead to strength. Out of such a habit grows, inevitably, confidence —confidence that is sane and reasonable: that is unaffected by environing conditions or the mercurial and changing views of the daily press or the volumes of books that clutter our libraries. "The War of Confusion," is the suggestive title of one of the many books that look up at me as I write. It expresses by its very title what is generally true of us, and it has much of merit. The confidence we need must come to us by a fuller, deeper understanding of the mind of Him who said: "Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth. give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." A mighty promise this, and one that can be had for the seeking. Do we need it? We need nothing so much. Strength that comes from quietness and confidence; this we can have if we will discard our self-confidence and our hectic ways and put our house in order. When we as a people have it we shall gain both the

Capital Sidelights

By Will P. Kennedy.

When Representative James Michael Curley of Massachusetts, formerly in both branches of the State Legislature, Mayor of Boston, Governor and former member of Congress, took his seat in the present Congress after an absence of 28 years, there was only one House member who was in Congress when he first came to the House. That was Representative Adolph J. Sabath, dean of the House and chairman of the Rules Committee, who is starting his 37th year of consecutive service-and whose service antedated Mr. Curley's by four years. They recalled that they had served together 32 years ago on the Immigration Committee. Seated beside Mr. Curley at the opening session was a commanding figure—who anteceded Mr. Curley by 10 years and Mr. Sabath by six years -former Representative Joseph A. Conry, now in his 75th year, tall, straight and erect, conspicuous for his bearing and shock of white hair-still a vigorous and eloquent orator, a fluent writer and a courteous gentleman. Mr. Conry has been an outstanding lawyer, consul of Russia, decorated by Czar Nicholas II. subsequently director of the port of Boston. He now is aiding in the victory drive. There is one House member who took the oath with Mr. Curley, the day he was sworn in—Representative Robert L. Doughton of North Carolina, now chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and three members who served with him between 1911 and 1914-Representatives Sam Rayburn, Speaker; Chairman Hatton W. Sumners of the Judiciary Committee and Allen T. Treadway, veteran ranking Republican on the Ways and Means Committee.

Representative William P. Elmer (Republican, Missouri) is the father of nine children. His father answered Lincoln's call for Union soldiers in 1861; his mother's folks were in the Confederacy. He studied law under a former instructor in William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Va., where the Revolution started, and has practiced law for 55 years. He was Speaker and floor leader of the Missouri Legislature, author of scores of progressive laws and a candidate for lieutenant governor.

Two former all-America football stars have come into the new Congress-Representatives Frank L. Sundstrum (Republican, New Jersey) and La Vern R. Dilweg (Democrat, Wisconsin). Mr. Sundstrum was a Cornell gridiron warrior, as also was Representative Dan A. Reed (Republican, New York). Mr. Sundstrum was all-America tackle on Walter Camp's team in 1923 and the following year coached football at Indiana University. He is a member of the Touchdown Club of New York, Mr. Dilweg, who is one of the founders of the Blue Jay baseball team, Green Bay, Wis., played end on the Marquette football team and was a member of the all-America team in 1925, played one year with the Milwaukee Badgers' professional football team in 1926, joined the Packer team in 1927 and played through 1934, was a member of the 1929, 1930 and 1931 championship teams; was all-America end on professional selection for three years. After quitting professional football in 1934 he continued in the role of an official, and is now one of the Big Ten officials. He married Eleanor Coleman of swimming fame.

Fifty Years Ago In The Star

Fifty years ago a former President of the United States died. The Star of January 18, Death of 1893, carried Rutherford B. Hayes the news: "Ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes died last night at 11 o'clock in his pleasant home, Spiegel Grove, a short distance outside of Fremont, Ohio. He was surrounded by his family. Although over 70 years old, he was the picture of ruddy health until suddenly stricken down by neuralgia of the heart. He had suffered from the disease for many years and when the death of Mrs. Haves was announced to him two years ago he was overcome by a severe attack and revived with great difficulty. . . . The death of ex-President Hayes has caused universal sorrow in this city (Piedmont), where he was known and admired by every one. * * * Spiegel Grove was the center of social gavety for young people until the death of Mrs. Hayes two years ago. Death came quietly and easily." Mr. Hayes, the 19th President, was also a distinguished soldier. For conspicuous gallantry at South Mountain, Civil War battle, where he was wounded, he was promoted from major to colonel of the 23d Ohio Volunteer Infantry and later became a general. After the war he was elected to Congress, later became Governor of Ohio and later still, rather against his wishes, was nominated at Cincinnati as the Republican candidate for the presidency. In the election he won easily.

At the same time, another ex-President quietly was standing by waiting again to become President

The Star of Jan-Inaugural Plans uary 16, 1893, detailed some of the plans for Mr. Cleveland's coming inauguration: "A number of members of the Inaugural Executive Committee were at headquarters today engaged upon the task of preparing the lists of the various subcommittees in shape for the printers. * * * The crack military organization of New York, the famous 7th Regiment, will have a prominent place in the inaugural parade. . . The Subcommittee on Civic Organizations has its work well in hand now and intends to make the civic portion of the parade a very attractive feature." Gen. Martin T. McMahon, having been appointed grand marshal of the parade, gave out to the press a partial list of the various organizations expected to be present.

It is practically the first session of the National League of Good Roads and the beginning of a movement which those interested hope will result in an effort, national in character, to improve the system of highways in this country. The first general meeting of the friends of good roads ever held took place last October in Chicago." The question of good roads was more or less taken out of the hands of this organization by the introduction of the automobile, forcing such demands on the States that the roads came in time.

Public Becoming Tax Conscious

By Frederic J. Haskin.

In a democracy where people can express their opinions freely without fear of suppression or punishment, mass thinking leads to reforms. It is this process of public interest that swings the pendulum from a danger point into a zone of safety. When any great number of people in a democracy become interested in a subject, formal action to their way of thinking is usually the

One noticeable cycle of current public opinion is the subject of taxes, the more apparent because of its interest to men and women representing varying degrees of income and wealth. Servants of the people on Capitol Hill are evidently becoming aware that large numbers are seeking some restraint upon mounting Federal tax burdens. They are not objecting to increases resulting from the war, but to the spending of huge sums for what appears to be non-essential. Insistence is being made that expenditures which call for tax collections be more carefully scrutinized, and the new Congress has given expression to this demand on the part of the public. This is a very practical demonstration of a government by the people, and it also fully demonstrates one outstanding difference between a democracy and a dictatorship.

Debt is a contributing factor to the cause of taxation, although there would have to be taxes to support public enterprise to meet current expenses. The interest an individual pays on a personal debt is a form of taxation which the individual personally imposes. Interest on a public debt must be covered by taxes imposed through constitutional channels. Thus it follows that the individual who is a borrower and a taxpayer pays a double tax-one private and the other public. The individual who borrows of his own volition rarely thinks of the fact that officials whom he has helped to elect can and do borrow in his name as a taxpaver, obligating the taxpayer's future and in many instances the future of his children. It is, however, because of a fuller realization of these facts that the American people are becoming tax-conscious. It is one of the healthful signs of the times.

One of the paradoxes of public life is that credit is popular and taxes unpopular. To keep taxes from becoming more unpopular, the process of hiding them is employed. In these instances taxes are lumped with the sales price of an article, and the consumer takes his medicine without tasting the unpleasantness. If merchants marked their taxed merchandise with the commercial price, and then added to the price the tax that is hidden, consumers would become rebellious. Merchants are not responsible for the system, and consumers apparently like it for they are willing to support it.

When the credit of an individual is good and his income normal, there is a tendency to pay little or no heed to taxes and less heed to interest charges personally contracted. When credit is weak and income uncertain, the individual is faced with the stern reality that interest charges and tax payments remain the same, or go higher. It was this situation that struck such a terrific blow to many people between 1929 and 1932. Wages and salaries during this period dropped more than $20,000,000,000, dividends decreased approximately $3,000,-000,000 and rents and royalties declined by more than $2,500,000,000. Yet in the face of such disastrous shrinkages in incomes of all classes, interest on private and public debts remained substantially the same. Money-lenders, however, could not be blamed, because they were legally entitled to their rights under contractual agreements. Individuals and governments began to realize the danger in the general practice of borrowing, and taxpayers also realized that their fortunes were jeopardized by permitting extensive and long-term contracts for

This situation not only brought home to the American people the dangers and difficulties of extensive borrowings based on future taxes, but helped to fix in the minds of taxpayers that the length of a debt becomes a rigid factor in any economic situation. Taking cognizance of what had happened, and what could happen to a more serious degree, statisticians began to reveal to the public how far ahead business and governments had obligated investors' assets and public interest, either directly or indirectly.

As an example of these revelations, many Class I railways had issued bonds maturing at intervals between January 1, 1960, and January 1, 2862. Actually it was found that one railroad as early as 1886 had issued bonds for redemption on January 1, 2361. On all these borrowings the average rate of interest was 4.58 per cent, and under long-term contracts this rate could not be changed, Public carriers are not singled out except for illustration of the possible dangers of public borrowing where profits or taxes must be relied upon to pay interest and principal. It is obvious that the redemption of these obligations can have no conceivable relation to the conditions under which they were contracted. The same principle applies to individuals and governments, local and national, and is indicative of the economic difficulties involved in long-time borrowing. Continuous borrowing perpetuates tax burdens, for interest mounts with principal.

It is evidently because of a public consciousness of the whole ramification of debts, private and public, that concern is being manifested over non-essential spending by the Federal Government. According to the President's recent budget message to Congress, the public debt at the beginning of the 1942 fiscal year was $48,961,443,535.71, and the estimated amount of this debt for 1944 is $210,549,-150,549.22. The interest the Federal Government pays on borrowed money is usually lower than what an individual pays on a private debt, but the required tax money to meet interest payments has reached a staggering sum. The Government's policy of borrowing on short-term loans has lessened the volume of interest be paid, but taxpayers have not felt any difference because of the constant increase of the public debt. It is this gradual increase that has become a disturbing factor in the de for the elimination of all unnecessary

Rapid Advance of Russian Forces Marks Otherwise Uneventful Week of Warfare

America's 58th War Week * 176th Week of World War II

By BLAIR BOLLES.

The Russians are still looking for that second front in Europe, Admiral William H. Stanley, United States Ambassador to Moscow, said last week after he talked for an hour with the Soviet foreign commissar, Vyacheslav Molotov. The Russians' American and British Allies yearn for it, too. The second front in Europe probably will mean that success has been complete on the front in Africa. It will mean that the Mediterranean has passed to the control of the United Nations. In months to come you can be sure that a great sea and air fight will rage for the Mediterranean. The map which accompanies this review is worth preserving so that this fight of the future can be understood.

For the present the mud is thick in Tunisia, and the war in Africa is almost at a standstill. On the Mediterranean Axis ships still steam. The Reds, bent on undoing the Nazis' summer work in the Caucasus, pressed forward across that isthmus on a 100-mile front last week so swiftly that foot soldiers, following the tanks and motorized infantry, had to go as far as 30 miles in one day. Black-coated Cossacks swept the Germans back and mountaineer battlers planted anew the Red flag on peaks which but a few months ago passed to the Axis. The wet jungle battle in Papua brought new gains to the Australians and Americans squeezing the fight out of the Japs penned in Sanananda. The dogged Chinese won Sinyang. in southern Honan Province, from the Japanese, who for almost four years have been using this town as a base of operations.

African Front

Little happened last week in Africa, and, as usual, little was written about what was going on. The paucity of news has inspired a vast assortment of rumors and apprehensions about the course of events in North Africa, military and political, which early in the week forced the suggestion that the British and American governments were moving | British Minister of Information, last in opposite directions at a time when, in view of the prospect of the war in the Mediterranean, their close union is needed more than ever before. British newspapers, with near unanimity, have been condemning both the slowness of the development of the war in Tunisia to push the Axis out of Bizerte and Tunis and as well the political arrangements established by Lt. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the Allied commander, for the administration of Morocco, Algeria and the part of Tunisia under Alagent is Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, who has stirred dissatisfaction in some quarters because among his intimate advisers are officials who apparently believed thoroughly in the old Vichy policy of collaboration with the Germans.

The British protestants, and they have their friends over here, have been urging the ousting of the collaborationist element and also the institution of some sort of North African role for Gen. Charles of the Fighting French. The consequence of these debates is that a battle rages in Africa not only between the Allies and the Axis but also between fiercely opposed Allied schools of thought about the manner in which the war against the Axis should be conducted. Gen. Eisenhower finds himself in the middle of both wars, the soon meet with Gen, de Gaulle.

Gen. Eisenhower's French of its aims. The complaints probably would subside also if the officials, military and political, in North Africa permitted the dissemination abroad of the news of what exactly the situation there is. Even the name of the murderer of Admiral Darlan is not yet permitted to be known publicly outside North Africa. Who could help being suspicious of events there in the face of this suppression of news? Some men arrested last week in connection with the murder were reported to be among those who risked their lives to help the American landings in Algeria last November. The men in control of the news passing from North Africa saw to it last week that the French were glorified in the battle for the dark continent. The 1st Army, under Gen. K. A. N. Anderson in Northern Tunisia, a prisoner of the mud, could do no more than send out patrols. The 5th Army being organized under Lt. Gen. Mark Clark is not yet ready for action. But the French soldiers were not to be denied.

In Tunisia the French fight south of the positions taken by the 1st Army, which, when, the rains will permit by ceasing, is to put the Vital Heights squeeze on Bizerte and Tunis. These French threw the Germans from two strategic heights 15 miles northwest of the important citadel of Kirouan-Jebel Haoub and Jebel Bou Dayouss. These are in Central Tunisia, and the German radio announced that the French had advanced along a wide front in fighting among spurs of the Atlas Mountains. These operations could in time, if they continued to unfold successfully, make it hot for the Germans holding the long shore of Tunisia running southward to Tripolitania from Tunis city.

French aces who fought gallantly in the brief battle for France took to the skies once again last week, over Tunisia, as members of the new Lafayette Escadrille, named after a brave outfit which played a celebrated role in the World War. Flying American P-40s. they blasted the way for the ground fighters who took the two hilltops near Kirouan. There were active engage-in the mountain chain running south of Pont du Fahs, 30 miles southeast of Tunis, and a French spokesman said the French troops had made considerable gains at the place called Karachouan, south of Pont du Fahs.

While the ground fighters marked time, plans were made for better Allied co-ordination in the air. Air Marshal Sir Arthur William Tedder, vice chief of staff of the RAF; Sir Keith Park, air vice marshal for Malta, and Air Marshal Sir William Welsh, commanding the RAF in North Africa-the three high-ranking British air officials in the Mediterranean - conferred, and their meeting presaged a three-way aerial attack against Axis forces. Commentators in London said that if the conference resulted in a unification of the air command, the need for which has been expressed in some quarters, one valuable result would be that Allied flyers could shuttle between eastern (Egyptian) and western (North African) bases in relay bombings of Axis positions. B-17 Flying Fortresses, operated by

Americans, had a go at Tripolitania early in the week and destroyed 34 Axis aircraft in the air and on Holds Allies the ground at Castel

Benito airfield, 10 miles south of the city of Tripoli. Fortresses also battered the Tripolitanian fort at Ghadames, 450 miles south of Tunis at the juncture of the frontiers of Tunisia, Algeria and Tripolitania. Both the raids were calculated to irritate Marshal Erwin Rommel, commander of the Axis Afrika from his outermost post of Wadi Zemzem. The war against Rommel's army has gone slowly lately, and he is probably preparing for a strong defense somewhere in Tripolitania so that he can assist Axis forces in Tunisia at the

An indication of the strength that the Allies are building up North Africa for the campaign which will come in earnest when the weather turns good was given in an official report that the British Navy successfully escorted 971 transport, supply ships and other vessels totaling 7,600,000 tons between Gibraltar and North African ports between November 8, when the AEF made its first African landings, to January 8. The strength of the British Navy meanwhile was shown to be on the increase. A. V. Alexander. first lord of the admiralty, declared that Great Britain now has more carriers than it had at the war's beginning. Since the war began the Royal Navy has lost five carriers—all but one of the six it had when the war began.

Russian Front

The Russians pulled a little tighter the strings of the net in which they are trapping the Axis forces in the Caucasus. In everywhere but Russia the war is almost at a standstill.

Along the Don and the Donets they drew a few miles nearer Rostov, which, if it is captured, will be the great conquest of the winter. They showed new action around Velikie Luki and the Germans reported new signs of an attempt ments between French and Axis troops | Korps, whose army stretches eastward | to rescue long-beleaguered Leningrad. The Russian siege of the important junction town of Salsk is imminent—a siege that could simplify the conquest of Rostov and the victory in the Caucasus. But it is notable that the Axis still has its anchor in the Don River at Voronezh. and still controls the strong central front points of Rzhev and Vyazma, west of Velikie Luki.

The distances stretching before the Reds in the Caucasus yet are great, but the distance they have advanced they have covered so quickly that now they have to pay the customary military price of speed. They have to reorganize their supply so that the forward march won't outdistance the supply line.

Moving up Baku-Rostov rail line, the Caucasus armies of the Soviet Union gained in some points more than 100 miles during the week. They took Mineralnye Vody and Georgiyevsk and then they took Essentuki, at the terminus of a branch line of the railway. They struck as far west as the Kuban River The advance is spread out so that the Reds in the Caucasus operate a 100-mile

(further up toward Rostov) of Voroshilovsk and Armavir and finally at the German strongpoints of Krasnodar and Kropotkin. In the meanwhile, while Russian forces surrounding Stalingrad fought on against the Germans within that city, the Red Army moving along the railroad which runs from Stalingrad to Tikhoretsk approached Salsk. From Salsk the Reds can send a new force toward Rostov and at the same time seal the northern avenue of escape from the Caucasus for the Axis. Then only the sea will remain

Across the Black Sea from Russia the Germans were having trouble last week in Rumania and Bulgaria, two satellite countries of the Axis. Gen. Ion Antonescu, the Rumanian dictator, was forced to create four new divisions of troops to preserve "internal security" in view of liberal outbreaks against his regime which has resulted in the arrest of Juliu Maniu, the liberal peasant leader. Reports of rioting in Bulgaria reached Istanbul, in Turkey. One account said students at the Sofia Military College had fled to the mountains for guerrilla operations after several days of dis-

Looking forward to the second front that the Russians hope will come, the Germans last week took steps to protect the Mediterranean approaches to Europe. The German high command was reported to have handed to the Bulgarian war minister, who is visiting in Berlin, a comprehensive plan of action in event of an Allied debarkation on or near Bulgarian territory. Moreover, the Germans are said to be sending heavy reinforcements to Crete, including units especially trained for defense against commandos.

Pacific Front

In New Guinea the Japs hold the outpost of Mubo, and they hung tin cans on wires in the jungle around Mubo so that attackers of the post would shake the cans and arouse the Japs. Last week an Australian force raided Mubo and did not shake a single can. The Japs were taken by surprise and in three days of fighting more than 100 of them were killed. Mubo is part of the defense network around Salamaua, about 200 miles northwest of Sanananda, which is in Papua. This is the last Papuan place held by Japs, and when Gen. Douglas MacArthur has taken Sanananda he can begin to give some thought to a major strike in the Salamaua direction.

It was revealed on Monday that the Allies shot down 138 Jap planes in an attack on a convoy that was bringing reinforcements to Lae, New Guinea. This was the convoy whose assembling at Rabaul caused Australians the previous week to predict an invasion attempt against their continent. For the most part it was quiet in the Southwest Pacific. The Navy Department disclosed that the American carrier lost in the Bolomons last October 26 was the Hornet,

Russian problems she would have taken advantage of her plight of last summer when the Nazis were moving fast against Stalingrad. Not only would this have been a brilliant opportunity to conquer parts of Siberia without too much effort, but it also would have facilitated the task of Herr Hitler; Marshal Timoshenko could not have drawn liberally on the divisions and the planes of the Siberian

But while Tokio has looked with an obviously pleased eye at the difficulties Hitler's generals were encountering in Russia, the Japs' happiness is likely to disappear if Tokio's military leaders begin to feel that the present Russian offensive, coupled with an eventual Allied drive in Western Europe, might sound the death knell of the Axis. The Japanese do not believe the Allies will worry about their losses and let the enemies in the Pacific go scotfree in the event of a German collapse

Even if such a thought could be detected in the minds of some members of the United Nations' combination of power, there is no doubt that the present military clique, including possibly the Emperor, would have to go and that, of course, does not suit the present leaders

Change Seen in Jap Attitude.

The horrors perpetrated by the Axis soldiers must be multiplied tenfold when compared with the atrocities the Japanese have been visiting on conquered civilian populations and prisoners of war. Tojo knows full well that whatever the state of mind of the Government of the United States, public opinion in this country will demand a reckoning with Hence, the passive and almost friendly attitude of Japan toward Russia will have to change soon

Berlin has experienced some difficulty in explaining to the German people why Japan, a member of good standing in the anti-comintern pact, does not attack the Soviets. So long as the Japanese had spectacular victories against the American and the British forces, it was easy to explain that Tokio would turn against Russias as soon as it had liquidated the remainder of the American fleet in the Pacific and had conquered

But that story no longer satisfies the Germans. In spite of the strict censorship it is known in the Reich that the dated and that Australia is less worried fight to crush the German forces is too and was naturalized in 1923. borness leads them to be doctrinaries in their strategy. They may make another attempt to wipe out the naval forces under Admiral Halsey, but when they realize that this is not possible they may turn on the Russians with the twofold purpose of helping the hard-breathing Nazis and also feeding their own victoryhungry people with another spectacular military success.

It appears that the diplomatic efforts of the Tokio government to bring about reconciliation between the Russians and the Nazis has fallen on deaf ears in Moscow. This endeavor is said to have been attempted early in December. The Japanese Ambassador at Moscow was not able, however, to see Premier Joseph Stalin and the suggestions reportedly made to Foreign Minister Molotoff made no dent in Russia's determination to fight the war with the Nazis to the bitter Since these last peace attempts have failed, it is obvious that Japan will make a real effort to come to the rescue of the hard-pressed European end of the Axis. Whether her military actions will be directed toward the South Pacific or toward the Indian Ocean or toward Siberia, nobody knows. In any event, it seems necessary for the Japanese to liquidate the Chinese situation, which is keeping 750,000 Japanese soldiers and a portion of the Japanese air arm busy.

Chinese Patience Taxed

Gen. Chiang is aware of this. He personally does not think of leaving the cause of the Allies any more than President Roosevelt does. But he has to reckon with many of the generals and their troops. The generals under Gen. Chiang are good men, but sometimes lose their patience when they see that they are fighting the enemy with almost the same weapons they have been using

They had hoped that by joining the Allies they would receive the necessary tools. The occupation of Burma by the Japs has cut off the Burma road. The amount of war material and other supplies now begin received by caravan and by transport plane from India is of little consequence. Also they see the American and British forces are fighting a defensive war in the Pacific. This may suit the strategy of the Allies, but it does not suit the Chinese, who have been fighting and retreating for nearly five

When Mr. Perkins took hold of his present job about 16 months ago, the staff consisted of two men, Mr. Wallace and himself. Today there is a personnel of 3,000, of whom 2,800 are in Washington and 200 in the field, principally in Latin America. Several of the key men were drawn from the Agriculture Department, including Mr. Wallace and Mr. Perkins; the latter's right-hand man, Edwin W. Gaumnitz, and the board's general counsel, a former St. Louisan named Monroe Oppenheimer. But others were recruited from the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in the Commerce Department, the United States Tariff Commission and the Office of the Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs.

The board's structure was cunningly fabricated as a sort of plywood of three different layers of men. There are veteran Government employes, thoroughly at home in the labyrinth of the Federal establishment. There are practical businessmen, chiefly exporters and importers, scores of whom formerly earned from $10,000 to $80,000 a year. Finally there is a band of economists to supply theory, research and analysis. Either group would be helpless without the others, but together they are believed to form a tough and supple alloy.

The organization is divided into three shops—an Office of Exports, an Office of Imports and an Office of Economic Warfare Analysis. Their respective chiefs are Hector Lazo, Morris S. Until last September the Office of Exports was mainly a policing agency, with the negative duty of preventing strategic materials of domestic origin from falling into Axis hands. Then came a sharp switch of policy, under which it is sought to turn such resources into aggressive war weapons. Some of the devices employed under this head are as startling as they are confidential. Among harmless examples may be cited the allocation of United States exports to Mexico and Brazil with the BEW's most characteristic and fascinating operation, known as preclusive buying, is under Mr. Rosenthal, a New Yorker who was eminent for a quarter century as an international trader, and who took his first Government job in December, 1941, as assistant director in charge of the board's Office of Imports.

are barred. Though waged in the economic theater, it is war to the limit, face to face with the enemy. The magnitude of such activities is shown by the fact that operations of the Office of Imports are now at the rate of two billion dollars a year. There are two other types of import transactions. One is the procurement or planning of supplies essential to the American military program which must largely be obtained abroad. They include such materials as natural rubber, tin, mica, bauxite, certain forest products and various fats and oils. The second is the purchase and storage of products which are vital to maintaining the economic stability of Allied or friendly nations, such as cotton in Peru, coffee in Brazil and wool in Australia. For the present, these are often potential imports, which may not be delivered in the United States until after the war.

For instance, Winfield Riefler is a special assistant to Ambassador Winant in London with the rank of minister. Reports of the agency are said to have determined changes in blockade measures and to have helped in the selection of targets for bombing raids in Europe.

In a few cases BEW serves as a line agency, with its own "task forces." This is true of Latin America, Spain and Portugal. But it functions on the whole as a general staff of economic warfare, taking its field agents wherever they are to be found. These may be representatives of the State Department serving abroad, of the Army and Navy and of the RFC system. It works in close association with the State Department. the War Production Board, the War Shipping Administration, the Office of Inter-American Affairs, the Army Air Transport Command, the Naval Air Transport Service and many other establishments, as occasion arises.

Though its transactions run annually into the billions, BEW has a direct appropriation of only $12,000,000 a year, for administrative costs. Its operating money is provided chiefly by four RFC concerns—the Defense Supplies Corp. the Metals Reserve Co., the Rubber Reserve Co. and the United States Commercial Co. The last of these handles preclusive buying. It is the only RFC subsidiary which is independent of RFC domination. The majority of its Board of Directors consists of representatives of the department, BEW and the Office of Inter-American Affairs.

camps widened. Mr. Adamic says that information reaching him indicates that "some of the best, most idealistic, decent and forward-looking people in Yugoslavia" are in the ranks of the Partisans. "Their military skill no doubt has improved with experience. Whether intelligently or not from the point of view of orthodox military science, they believe in action, in immediate, day-byday resistance, paying no heed to consequences." The Partisans were increasingly suspicious of the Mikhailovich forces, believing that they were no longer interested in fighting the Axis but merely in bargaining for power, perhaps even bargaining with the notorious Quisling, Pavelich.

Complicating the situation was the Nazi policy of shooting a fixed number tives—that is, to give orders—to RFC. The impression was left that if BEW should see fit to requisition the entire five billions covered by the bill, RFC would have no choice save to obey. Senator Danaher, Republican, of Connecticut became so alarmed that he talked of introducing an amendment giving Mr. Jones veto power over BEW direc-

The idea seems to have been dropped after Mr. Wallace and Mr. Perkins testified in rebuttal. They maintained that policies regarding exports originate by and large in the State Department; that policies concerning private imports are determined chiefly by the War Production Board, and that BEW's function is that of passing on these directives to RFC, and of supervising their execution.

Has "Screwball" Aspects. Probably no other agency excites such opposite reactions as the Board of Economic Warfare. According to admirers, its ruthless campaigns in the economic area constitute brilliant counter-measures against Axis total war, and add signally to the chances of victory. But for conventional men BEW, particularly with respect to its "unbusinesslike" procedures of strategic buying, ranks at the top of the Government's "screwball" es-

Sounder criticisms are that efficiency and speed have been lost through decentralization, with decisions made in Rio de Janeiro or Madrid instead of Washington, and that the board's personnel contains too few production experts and too many international tradesmen. Strange to remark, the severest censure came from none other than Mr. Wallace.

of hostages for every Nazi killed. This tended to check Mikhailovich and his men, and understandably. The Nazi massacres in Yugoslavia appear to have been far worse than, for example, Lidice, in Czechoslovakia. Mr. Adamic writes of an eye-witness account of the slaughter of some 4.000 men and boys between the ages of 15 and 50, most of the male population of the city of Kraguyevats. For such horrors, Gen. Mikhailovich and his men blame the Partisans.

In the face of this grim picture the Yugoslav government-in-exile seems particularly futile. It is made up of various representatives of the old order. who spend not a little time quarreling with each other in London. They had a shake-up the other day in which the reactionary Foreign Minister, Momchilo Ninchich, was replaced by another old man, Premier Slobodan Yovanovich. Any effect this change may have had was wholly negative.

Captive of London.

It was announced that Gen. Mikhailovich would continue as Minister of War from within Yugoslavia. If the government-in-exile is a captive of London, so, in a sense, is Gen. Mikhailovich. His communication with the outside world is through a radio sending set brought into Yugoslavia by the British. It is operated under the direction of a British intelligence officer and the messages sent over it are subject to censorship in London.

The British Foreign Office tried to help put an end to the war within a war but with little or no success. After repeated suggestions to the Soviet that something be done about the Partisans, Russia came back with the answer that naturally this was no concern of hers, since it was occurring outside her borders and since she had no control over the Comintern which may or may not have supplied the Partisan leadership. Thus the Soviets maintained the same bland fiction that has been a convenient screen in other parts of the world.

It is possible that American diplomats will try their hand at "conversations" looking toward an end to the Balkan civil war. This has not definitely been decided on, but it is under consideration. Every one agrees that "something must be done," but no one quite knows what to do. Any course is hazardous, but to do nothing is also highly dangerous. Anglo-American strategy may decide on an invasion through the Balkans to get at Germany by the back door. It would be extremely embarrassing, and perhaps very costly, if American and British troops had to suppress a civil war before they could move on the enemy. (Printed by Special Arrangement With the

Vermont Avenue Home Once Washington Showplace

By John Clagett Proctor.

A house which would attract most any one's attention because of its unique architecture and setting, is the old Montgomery C. Meigs residence which stands at the southeast corner of Vermont avenue and N street. It was erected by Gen. Meigs about 1866, and here that noted civil engineer made his home up to the time of his death, January 2, 1892.

Subsequent to this it was occupied by Howard S. Reeside and Reginald S. De Koven, the talented writer of light operas, and it may have been occupied for brief periods by Senator Dwight M. Sabin of Minnesota and others, though this is not likely. In 1905 it became the property of Frank B. Noyes, now president of The Evening Star Newspaper Co., and here he and his lovely wife, Mrs. Janet Newbold Noyes, recently deceased, spent many of the happiest days of their congenial married life, and where they delighted in entertaining many close and distinguished friends.

Being by nature an ardent lover of art. flowers, conservatories and fountains, and, of course, beautiful gardens, it was but natural that the things Mrs. Noves loved most should predominate in making her city home as attractive as possible. Indeed, upon one occasion, when Mrs. Noyes was not feeling well enough to travel to Florida, where it was her custom to spend the wintermonths, a spacious conservatory was erected for her to the rear of the home and filled with many varieties of tropical plants and flowers, and a bit of Florida, so to speak, was brought back to her Washington home for her enjoyment.

This conservatory, which was treated as an outdoor garden, adjoined the house, being entered through the library, and was so artistically arranged and draped with plants and vines that it was difficult to realize that one was not stepping right out of the house into a dreamland of exquisitely beautiful plants and gorgeous blooms.

This winter garden was one of the show settings of Washington and was visited by many garden clubs from other Beautifying Washington.

But the beautifying of her home was not all that Mrs. Noyes did to spread sunshine and happiness, for she was always greatly interested in the pleasure of others and in the beautifying of work. Further sums of $250,000, $1,000,-000, $800,000 and $500,000 were later made, bringing the total appropriation for the Washington Aqueduct, to June 25, 1860,

The building of this aqueduct entailed a considerable amount of engineering skill and this is particularly true of Cabin John Bridge, which will ever remain a monument to Gen. Meigs' ability.

was added, with which to continue the considerable portion of the abutments Pension Office, which was begun in the horizontal cornice alone, supported by autumn of 1882, when ground was first broken, and by March, 1883, nearly all of the foundations were in and the bricklaying begun. Because Congress had urged haste in erecting the building in order to save rent, Gen. Meigs, the supervising architect, speeded up the work considerably and to such an extent that the inaugural ball of Cleveland and Hendricks was held there on the evening of March 4, 1885, and the clerks began to move in on June 15 following.

Old Pension Office.

However, though Gen. Meigs justly received much praise in connection with building the Washington aqueduct, including the erection of Cabin John Bridge, yet on the other hand he was then and is still being soundly condemned for the erection of the Pension Office Building, often referred to as "Meigs' Old Brick Barn."

But whether the architecture and general construction of this building is good or bad, it is a matter of record that Gen. Meigs got his ideas for the design from the Farnese Palace at Florence, Italy, the lines of which, however, he did not strictly follow, introducing some new ideas inconsistent with the old. Perhaps the most reasonable part of the criticism against this building is its exterior appearance, for we are forced to admit it really does have a barnlike appearance, but Gen. Meigs was very thoughtful of the use the building was to be put to and quite considerate for the health and comfort of the clerks and constructed the building that they might have abundance of fresh air and light.

But so adverse was the criticism regarding this structure around the time it was completed that many even ridiculed it, and the story is told that upon one occasion when Gen. Meigs had taken Gen. Philip H. Sheridan to see it, he asked the great cavalry leader what he thought of it, and Sheridan is said to have replied: "General, I have only one criticism to make—the damn thing is fireproof." And, as we all know, it is still standing and is now occupied by the General Accounting Office.

The cost of this building, according to an early account, is given as $440,000, and its description, here quoted, says:

"The building is located in the northern part of Judiciary Square, just to the southwest of the site of the old District jail. It occupies the square bounded by bridges in the world. A corner in the library of the Frank B. Noyes residence.

But to return to the old Meigs' house not a bad touch at all was given to it when it was occupied by Reginald de Koven, and for a few years just prior to it being occupied by the Noyes family in 1905. The property was recently sold by Mr. Noyes and is now occupied by the Columbia Tech Institute, Inc., to which it is leased by the present owners.

Mr. De Koven, who composed many tuneful operas, came here in 1902 and founded that year the Washington Sym-

One authority puts the number of bricks used as 15,000,000 and tells us that the interior will accommodate 18,000 persons at an inaugural ball and will hold 59,000 persons, which gives a better idea of the size of the structure.

Army engineers are very exacting and technical in what they do, and any construction work given them to perform is likely to be well done, and, above all others, Gen. Meigs was one not likely to slight or neglect details. As an illustration, the competing bidders for the bricks were required to submit samples, which were tested at the United States Arsenal, Waterford, Mass. Each was compressed between cast iron platforms, after the faces of the samples had been ground flat, when it was found that the weakest bricks crushed under a total pressure of 210,000 pounds, being 6,750 pounds to the square inch, and the strongest, which was a hand-burned arch brick, crushed at a total pressure of 324,500 pounds, being 10,290 pounds to the square inch.

Inaugural Balls.

To the visitor the most interesting thing about the Old Pension Office is the fact that seven inaugural balls were held there-Cleveland, 1885 and 1893; Harrison, 1889; McKinley, 1897 and 1901; Roosevelt, 1905, and Taft, 1909.

To the writer's way of thinking the most elaborate, perfect and successful of these was that held in honor of President Cleveland and Vice President Hendricks on the evening of March 4, 1885. Indeed, this was the first time the Democrats had elected a President since James Buchanan went into the White House in 1857, or after an intermission of 24 years, and they surely celebrated the occasion as it had never been done before, and quite likely has never been done since. The ball, of course, was only a climax to a notable event and a grand celebration, and if there was any enthu-until 1905. It is possible that some people do not recall Reginald De Koven, but few bridal couples of the last half century, who had music at their weddings, will ever forget the strains of his "Oh, Promise Me," the words of which were written by Clement Scott. And, if they ever saw Robin Hood, it is quite certain they will never forget hearing Jesse Bartlett Davis sing this piece as it will never be sung again-or at least that is what they will think. Robin Hood was the first of the popular De Koven-and-Smith light operas. It had its opening on June 9, 1890, at the Grand Opera House in Chicago. Its success is said to have been entirely unexpected, and even after the first performance Messrs. De Koven and Smith would gladly have surrendered their entire rights to Barnabee and Mac-Donald, who produced the opera for $1,500, but the latter were not sufficiently sanguine to make the investment, with the result that up to 1903 they had paid to De Koven and Smith $140,300.50, and this did not include the author's fees for the performance of the opera in England and Australia.

And so, the next time any newlywed passes the Meigs House or any one who may be past the newlywed stage for that matter, just take a peek at the Meigs house and the Noyes conservatory, which can be seen from the Vermont avenue side of the residence, and at the same time recall, if you can, the words of "Oh, Promise Me," which go like this:

"Oh promise me that some day you Will take our love together to some

The woman: Mrs. Clarence Hirsch, Kansas City, wife of a doctor, daughter of a former hospital president. The dream evolved into the Jackson County (Kansas City) Health Forum, which sponsors monthly free lectures by renowned physicians. A thousand persons is a small audience.

The forum is built around the women's auxiliaries of the county's six accredited hospitals, organizations of doctors' wives and other feminine relatives who take care of the thousand and one little out-of-the-ordinary chores that plague hospital staffs.

Five years ago Mrs. Hirsch stood up in meeting and said she thought the auxiliary women should have a chance to find out a little more about diseases, symptoms and treatments.

"If we're going to do some of the dirty work," she reasoned, "we ought to have a shot at some of the fine theories and a knowledge of the real problems of our menfolks."

Furthermore, she thought it was terrible to hear doctors say with a sad wag of the head that "I could have saved that man if he had come to me in time."

Public Invited.

So Mrs. Hirsch invited the public to attend her health education program. She campaigned for several months with letters, speeches and conversational prods before the county medical society granted consent to begin the experiment.

She was given a tiny office off the medical society's suite and went to work. She still stays in the office every afternoon, five days a week. Mrs. Hirsch was named the forum's first president and still holds the job.

Of the forum, Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association and several times a forum speaker, says: "I find the audience one of the best to which I speak anywhere in the United States. I feel that the method of approach to the public with a view to educating them as to sound medical material and as to what constitutes competent doctors is a most useful one."

Mentioning several other forums, Dr. Fishbein says: "I doubt, however, that any of these have had the success of the Kansas City forum.'

Prevention Taught.

Formally the forum puts its purpose at teaching "preventive medicine before serious illness occurs." Mrs. Hirsch, a blunt-spoken, energetic little woman, says it's this: "Teach people to see a doctor while there's still something for the doctor to work on, and to drive the quacks out.'

The forum's sixth season began in October. In November the man who made the first address came back. He is Dr. Walter C. Alvarez of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn.

His topic was indigestion. His advice: "Eat in peace; take your time."

Don't get angry and demand an operation if your doctor says your indigestion is caused by nervousness, he cau-"I've always said you can't change a Pomeranian into a bull pup with an operation.

How to Know Quacks.

"And don't fall into the hands of a quack. Remember, you can always tell a quack because he guarantees a quick cure and charges you a tremendous fee in advance.

Dr. Alvarez gave out specific advice to all comers in a question-and-answer session after his talk. He prescribed nothing, but directed sufferers to their own doctors. That's a policy of the forum.

Another rule is to have no home-town speakers, although some local doctors are authorities in certain fields. Stirring up professional jealousy would be one of the quickest ways to wreck the forum, Mrs. Hirsch reasoned.

CHICAGO.-In 1904 the Paulist Fathers called for boys interested in founding a choir, with the following result:

Only one appeared for a tryout. His voice passed the test against the clanking of a rickety piano in the basement of the old St. Mary's Church rectory. He became the nucleus of the celebrated 100-voice Paulist choir, of which a critic once wrote: "I regard it as the greatest organization of its kind that I have heard either here or abroad.'

In six years the choir climbed from the basement to national prominence and has remained in the forefront ever since. It has been heard in every important musical center in North America.

In 1910 it placed first among boy choirs in the Philadelphia national contest. In 1912 the boys toured Europe, won honors in the Paris international competition, sang for royalty and the Pope. They has developed. At play they may not orize such a volume of music. They're business and professional men and have too many other demands on their time." Father O'Malley said that in spite of the arduous training program a choirboy's health generally is better than that of other boys, probably because breathing and muscular exercise required of

singers and because of the choir's "dress

sensibly" rule. Modern living, affording many nonmusical diversions in and out of the home, has made a choirmaster's work far more difficult than it was before movies, radio and grammar school sports programs became popular. "In 1912, when I joined the choir."

These were preceded by a full-rigged Father O'Malley recalled, "a boy would not think of applying for membership unless he could sing fairly well. Today 105-mm, howitzer and an anti-aircraft some of my best solo boys have no piano gun, all of which have traversing and in their homes and must practice at the homes of neighbors. "In 14 years as conductor only one boy has come to me able to sing a song well. Most of them can't sing 'My Country 'Tis of Thee' through; they don't even know the words." Father O'Malley accepts boys who have an ear for music and whose voices have not been abused. They are placed on probation for periods ranging from a month for some to a year for others, depending on how well they respond to training.

"A sad aspect of choral work," the conductor said. "Is that the public judges you according to your soloists. Yet the soloists reflect the ability of the trainer the least. Soloists are born with fine voices; choirboys are manufactured, so to speak."

Food Ration Chief Tells How System Will Work

By Jane Eads,

The man who is going to tell the American people what they can eat learned about food by cooking it. Director of food rationing for the Office of Price Administration Harold B. Rowe cooked his way through college. Born on an Iowa farm, he went to Iowa State College and took his graduate work at the University of Minnesota in economics.

"I got into the food business by cooking, but I started by waiting on tables will include most canned fruits and vegetables, fruit and vegetable juices, soups, dried fruits and frozen fruits and vegetables. "It sounds like a formidable business, but it is very simple." Rowe declared, "even though it's a job comparable to mobilizing an army.'

A million and a half OPA volunteers must be recruited and trained to handle the registration of every man, woman and child. The mechanics of the new rationing system must be explained to every food processor, wholesaler and at the college cafeteria," he said, his portant of all-the public must be inin his face getting deeper.

"The first day I dropped a tray of glasses, so the chef taught me to cook. "I prepared the fried potatoes, the French toast, cereal, bacon and eggs every morning. The customers didn't get a chance to criticize the food. . . . We heckled them for their peculiar tastes first."

Dreaming up a perfect meal for himself isn't an easy task for a man like Rowe, who likes almost everything edible except perhaps, sauerkraut and truffles. He'll settle, though, for ham 'n' eggs for breakfast and roast beef and pumpkin pie for dinner. He gets a wistful look in his eyes when he talks about that roast beef. and admits that rationing of meat probably will affect him more than anything else.

"But," he adds, "I don't expect there'll be any serious disruption in our diet, even though we will have wide rationing. "There's still going to be plenty of food to feed every one well up to the minimum requirements."

Rowe is the man whose task is to make this country's first point-rationing program work. After the available supply of foodstuffs is determined, it will be his job to divide up the total into 130,000,000 portions so that every one can have a fair and equal amount.

Coming into the Government two years ago after teaching six years at the Massachusetts State College and a sojourn with the Brookings Institution, he established the food section of the old OPACS. Later he took over direction of food rationing for the OPA.

Sugar and coffee were rationed through the use of unit coupons. The point system of rationing, similar to that being used in England, was adopted as the "simplest and most effective method for distributing the wide variety of canned and processed foods."

More than a couple of hundred different items will be rationed upon the issuance of War Ration Book No. 2. expected sometime in February. These to understand point rationing.

Every housewife will have a book of stamps, which will constitute an allowance of points for the foods to be rationed under the point system.

"It is quite analogous," Rowe explained, "to the problem of the housewife who has a limited income to budget. only every one here will have a limited ability to buy certain things."

War-rationing book No. 2 will contain two sets of stamps, blue ones to be used for processed foods, and red ones to be used later for meat. Though the total number of points that will be allotted to each civilian and the specific point value of any food to be rationed have not been determined, the book will have 96 blue stamps and 96 red ones. A number on each stamp will give its point value. Each stamp also bears a letter of the alphabet, which will designate the ration period when it may be used. The stamps will be in denominations of eight points, five points, two points and one point. If the Government decided that you could use the first three rows-A, B and C-during the first month of the rationing, you would know that you could get processed foods which total 48 points. The foods, or juices, or soups which are more scarce will be rated as worth the greater number of points. A can of peas. for instance, may be worth five, or even eight points, while corn might be worth only one or two. In that event you'd probably buy more corn than peas.

"The housewife, however, has complete freedom of choice and can spend her points any way she wishes," Rowe explained, but if she chooses the things which are scarcer she'll use up her points faster than if she plans carefully to use a variety of other, more plentiful things.

It's a pretty big job Rowe has on his hands. But he looks less harried than said Mr. Wall, whose family is one of a man making out his income tax. three that live on the island to protect Affable, mild-mannered, he's the kind of a man you'd like to play bridge with

Time for Eddie La Fond

To Erupt in Boxing. La Fond and the Catholic University gym are normal, then the college boxing season arrives in all its lusty, haywire glory. M. La Fond becomes word is dispossessed—and the gym victory, 49-43. takes on the ointment-laden atmosphere of a small fight club.

In normal times, La Fond, a prein March. But these are unusual 6-2. times and Eddie is as carefree as a bird in May. Expects Much From Cody, Mild-Mannered Heavy.

A 2-by-4 athlete who expanded into a 5-by-5 coach, Eddie had less material this year than your oil dealer. His captain, for example, had been in three fights and two of those were exhibitions. That would be Bernie Cody, a heavyweight. Eddie expects a lot of him this thought was going to be priest, can be depended on to give his all. Whether it will be sufficient depends on the brand of competition the Cardinals face

At the opposite end of the batting order - er, lineup - is Price Welch, a youngster who broke into the fight game because he happened to own a car and live in La Fond's neighborhood. Back in the good old days last year when nobody but Government clerks rode streetcars, Welch picked up La Fond one morn-Ing on the way to school. Eddie Despite Differences on Team is a persuasive orator and he hapis a persuasive orator and he happened to need a 120-pounder.

When they arrived at Brookland date, but a lad willing to take the chance. Welch's physique rivals that of "Skinny" Ennis of radio fame but he was game and under his passenger-coach's tutelage he gave a good account of himself, winning one fight, drawing one and losing two. Before the season ended La Fond was doing the driving.

Crowd in Melee; Roosevelt and Eastern Win

Two Players Ejected From Game Between Ramblers, Raiders

By GEORGE HUBER.

Nobody was hurt and a good time was had by all in a young riot that spiced proceedings last night, as Western, 37-22, in the feature of the high school series basket ball double-header at Tech gym. The game, close until the fistic foreworks. was a walkaway for Eastern after officials quieted spectators and players who for a few minutes weaved in a free-swinging mass all over the floor. In a steady and quiet opening game Roosevelt won as expected over Coolidge, 34-16.

The trouble came shortly after the start of the fourth period at a time when Eastern grimly was holding onto a 26-22 lead, biggest margin it had had. During a scramble for the ball Eastern's Billy Deck and Western's Lewis Beatty collided, and Deck ended in a tangle of chairs among the sideline spectators. In a second many were up and swinging, spectators more than the players, the latter being pulled from the melee as soon as possible by coaches and officials.

Beatty and Deck Ejected. After order was restored, Beatty and Deck were thumbed from the game, and it continued with Eastern scoring almost at will while Western never again was able to hit the fast. pace that kept it close and at several times had it ahead.

Western, 100 per cent improved over its weak showing of last week, made a surprisingly tough battle of it for three periods. Dick Harlow hooped three fast snowbirds for the Red Raiders before Eastern was able to fall into step, and the lead changed hands twice in the first period which ended with Western ahead, 12-11. Fred Seaton, who took individual honors for the Ramblers with 14 points, tallied three goals during the opening quarter to keep Eastern in the running.

Score Even at Halftime.

Eastern pulled even at halftime, and on three foul shots went ahead, 21-20, to enter the final frame. It never gave up that edge as Ray Love with one goal, was the only Raider to tally in the last period. After the melee, which started two minutes after the last quarter began, Tom Wingo, Seaton and Sam Dellinger combined for five quick baskets to give the Ramblers their victory.

at a good pace thereafter. Citrenbaum and Charley Howard the Riders' big center, paced the attack, Howard getting 11 points and Bunny 10. Three of the latter's five goals were on fancy one-handed pivot shots under the basket.

Howard and Preston Wannan under the basket keynoted the tight combination zone and man-for-man defense the Riders were using, and the Colts were able to make only two inside lay-up shots all night. Forced to take pot shots from outside they were not accurate enough to threaten after the first period. Has Big Lead at Half.

Roosevelt ran away to a 15-6 lead at the half with Howard, Citrenbaum, Winnan and Ollie Kennedy sharing scoring honors, and Howard the second half to give Roosevelt an easy victory Jim Watkins and Charles Green-

"There's one thing about it." the former manager of the New York Giants pointed out, "they're all in the same fix. No matter how slow the start, they'll be able to operate.'

Terry's "they" might yet be changed to "we" if the trip he took to New York this week bears fruit. He looked into the possibilities of handling the Philadelphia Phils and conferred with President Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers. If he's wanted, they doubtless know where he is. "If I were handling a ball club," Terry said, "I'd write the boys right away and tell them to start getting in a little extra work at home. You'd be surprised how much that can help, particularly if the player has the right attitude And he'd take cold weather over indoor training any time, he added, because you just can't get the wind and legs of the players in shape properly if you work indoors "Even if it's very cold outside, you can still throw if you take it slowly at the start," he added. "It seems to me that it would be smart for the boys who live in warm climates to stay home and work on their throwing. Especially fellows like Carl Hubbell. They need the warm weather and they probably can get it better where they are than in the North.'

Terry said he couldn't see why some of the clubs "are going up to New England.' "Boy, it really gets cold up there," he said, "and there'll be plenty of snow. Why, one year in the regular season when the Giants went to Boston we played five games in five days, and the warmest it got was 35 degrees."

Jacobsens, All-Stars To Battle in Heurich Second-Half Start

Girl Basketers Meeting In Exhibition on Loop's 4-Game Bill Tonight

The directors of the Heurich Basket Ball League regret to announce there will be no playoff for the firsthalf championship this week. Instead, second-half activities will get under way tonight at 6:45 with a quadruple-header, one game an exhibition between the GAO girls and Georgetown Fleetwings.

There will be no playoff because Manager Lenny Mills of Jacobsen Florists underestimated the United States Marines. The Florists needed victory over the sixth-place Devil Dogs to tie Petworth Citizens' Association for the title, and Mills announced it was just a matter of playing the game. He proceeded with plans for the playoff and somebody even handed in stories to the sports department about the coming title set. To make a long story a spacesaver, the Marines won last Wednesday night, 69-56, and Mr. Mills' face is a deep cerise. Joe Miles' All-Stars, formerly GAO, will make their debut in the loop tonight, meeting Jacobsen in the final game at 9:45. Harry Martin. Lou Zipple and Jerry Smerick will play with the All-Stars, who expect to make their presence felt. Petworth and Hydrographic will open the program, with Navy and Marines meeting in the second and the girls taking the floor for the

Wheat Growers Face Problem Cashing In

Want to Get Highest Possible Price, but May Wait Too Long

By FRANKLIN MULLIN, Associated Press Financial Writer

CHICAGO, Jan. 16. - Farmers, with about 400,000,000 bushels of 1942 wheat held in storage awaiting higher prices, now have paper profits estimated at several million dollars, according to grain trade estimates This "profit" is represented in an appreciation in value ranging from 15 to more than 25 cents a bushel from the time this grain was stored to the present. Actually, to realize their profit, farmers would have to sell their grain on the open market were General Electric, Woolworth, which might jeopardize the price

Baltimore Markets

Special Dispatch to The Star. BALTIMORE. Jan. 18.—Live poultry uotations held firm here this week, prices being on practically the same levels prices being on practically the same levels as last week's close. Receipts continued light throughout the period and there was some stock, especially of the better grades, that was somewhat short.

Turkey receipts were unusually low. At the opening of the week some items were practically unavailable. Much o, the demand still was for the better grade stock, young broilers, fryers and roasters moving about best. However, there also were many calls for better fowl and capons which, where available, met with ready response.

Demand for ducks and geese also was good.

Broilers and fryers continued to move well at 29a31, with roasters weighting and those well at 29a31, with roasters weighting 4 to 5 pounds bringing 33a34 and those 5½ pounds and above selling 35a36. Medium and heavy fowl were firm at 27a28½, with smaller birds moving out at 24a25½, Most ducks sold at 27, regardless of weight.

weight.

Geese continued to bring 26a27½, with heavy, fat birds of the Kent Island variety bringing up to 30.

Capons weighing 8 pounds and up met with good call at 37½a39. Those weighing under 8 pounds also moved well at 36a36½. Smaller turkeys, scaling under 18 pounds, were steady at mostly 37½ with the larger stock, weighing over 22 pounds, moving at 35a36.

Egg Prices Down.

With egg receipts showing an increase here, quotations on best current receipts whites recorded a slight decrease late in the week. Mixed colors were practically steady, however. The best whites sold 43-45 dozen, with a few unusually large ones commanding a slightly higher price.

Mixed colors brought mostly 3842. with quotations in almost all instances interest the changed from last week.

Nearby Golden sweet potatoes brought 1.50a1.65 bushel for best, with poorer stock moving at 1.00a1.25. Best Goldens sold 75a90 half bushel and less desirable stock 60a65. Best Goldens from Eastern Shore territory brought 1.65a1.75 bushel, a few a little above these prices and poorer after a little above these prices and poorer stock 1.25a1.50.

Louis C. Uhl, ir. local representative.

Moderate activity prevaled throughout the period as interested processors took hold of the available supply. Week's top was 16.00, paid for a small lot of good to choice baby beef heifers. Next highest price was 15.25-15.80 for good to choice around 1220-pound steers. Strictly good 960 to 1300-pound arrivals sold 15.00-15.25. Bulk of good cattle that created a fair test of the market cleared 14.10-14.85, averaging 960 to 1240-pounds. Medium grade steer sales were recorded 13.00-13.90 and a few common lots moved scaleward at 12.75 downward. Heifers made up only a small part of the receipts with good grades turning 13.50-13.75. Bulk of supply, being in the common to medium grade, found clearance 10.50-12.00. The cow supply was not as plentiful as it had been in former weeks and all grades were taken freely by interested buyers. Canners and cutters moved 7.00-9.00 and common and medium grades 9.50-10.50. A few outstanding weighty heifer type individuals cashed 12.00-13.00. The demand for all grades of bulls continued brisk. Common to medium sausage bulls found clearance 10.00-12.00 with good grades moving 12.25-13.25. Occasionally weighty beef type individual sold as high as 14.25. Vealers and calves again were steady. Choice grades unred 17.00, practical too Medium to good lots moved 15.00al3.00. With a few good grades unred 15.00al3.00. Foreign Visitors Still Arriving

The Former Ambassador Of Colombia Now in City

Dr. Turbay Here for Medical Care; Dr. Edouard Benes Expected Soon

Among foreign visitors who have come to Washington recently is the former Colombian Ambassador, Dr. Gabriel Turbay.

Leaving here little more than a month ago to assume his new duties as Minister of Foreign Affairs for his country, the former Ambassador found it necessary to return to this country for medical treatment. He will be at the Embassy for several days at least before going to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. Dr. Turbay resigned his post as Minister of Foreign Affairs, though it is understood that the post still is his and he will resume his duties when he returns.

Senora de Jaen Guardia, wife of the Panama Ambassador, who has been in her home on the Isthmus since the summer, left there yesterday for Havana. She will visit her brother-in-law and sister, the Panama Ambassador to Cuba. Senor Belisario Porras. jr., and Senora de Porras. Senor Porras is a son of the late President of Panama. Senora de Jaen Guardia was accompanied to Havana by Senor Carlos Eleta and Senora de Eleta, the latter formerly Senorita Dora Boyd, daughter of the former Minister at Washington, Senor Augusto Boyd and Senora de Boyd. No time has been set for Senora de Jaen Guardia's return to Washington but she probably will join the Ambassador in the early spring, when the setting of the new Embassy on Woodland drive will become more attractive and the building of the chancery will be nearer com-

The Czechoslovak Minister, M. Vladimir Hurban, who went to has set no time to return but probably will wait there to accompany the President, Dr. Edouard Benes, when he comes to visit President Roosevelt. A program of entertainment for the hero Executive of that country will be arranged similar to that for other heads of foreign governments who have been visitors during the past year, with a dinner at the White House and a dinner and reception at the Czechoslovak Legation, which by that time may have joined the group of Embassies. The New Zealand Minister, Mr.

Walter Nash, is in Philadelphia over Sunday having gone there to make an address last evening. Tomorrow the Minister will go to New York where again he will make a speech.

A visitor from Ecuador who will be here for some time is Col. Hector Solgado, chief of police of Quito, who has come to study methods of the Federal Bureau of Investigation as well as the outstanding penal institutions of this country.

Senor Eloy Alfaro, son of the Ecuador Ambassador, has joined his mother and brothers in Panama after spending Christmas with the Ambassador in Washington. Senora de Alfaro went to Panama in the middle of the summer accompanying her youngest son, Senor Olmedo Alfaro after his graduation from the Military Academy at West Point last year. The three young men have entered business with headquarters in Panama and Senor Eloy Alfaro will make a trip through a number of the Central and South American countries before the spring. Senora de Alfaro also is expected to return to Washington before

Miss Marianne Rose Maas Bride Of Lt. Elmer J. Wood Yesterday

Representative Melvin J. Maas / of Minnesota yesterday morning escorted his daughter, Miss Marianne Rose Maas, to the altar of St. John's Church in Forest Glen, where she became the bride of Lt. Elmer John Wood, U. S. M. C.

The arrangements for the wedding of the attractive member of the younger congressional set and the young Marine officer, in keeping with the times, were marked with simplicity. A simple

Margaret E. Paine Engaged to Marry Maj. W. G. Whyte

Capt. and Mrs. Roger W. Paine, U. S. N., of this city, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret Elizabeth Paine, to Maj. William George Whyte, U. S. A. son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Whyte of Chicago.

Miss Paine, a graduate of Western High School, attended Hood College in Frederick, Md. She also is a graduate of the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York City.

Maj. Whyte was graduated from the University of Illinois and later took post-graduate work at Northwestern University At present he is attached to the Office of the Chief of Staff, Bureau of Public Relations, in Washington.

The wedding will take place early in February.

display of white flowers and palms was used on the altar and organ selections were given preceding the ceremony

Father Joseph T. Kennedy officiated at the 10 o'clock service and later members of the immediate families went to the home of Representative and Mrs. Maas in Silver Spring for an informal wedding breakfast.

The two younger sisters of the bride, Miss Patricia Maas, age 17, and Miss Katharine Maas, age 14, were the bride's only attendants. They wore dainty dresses in a lovely petunia purple shade, tiny pink ribbon hats and carried oldfashioned nosegays of pink, white and lavender sweet peas.

Ensign James Frawley was Lt. Wood's best man and the ushers were Mr. George Harmon and Mr. Jack Hoskinson.

The bride chose for her wedding a becoming gown of pale blue silk, street length and with a sash of crushed brown velvet tied in a bow. Her small hat of ostrich feathers matching her gown had a face veil of blue tulle, and she carried an arm bouquet of purple orchids and white sweet peas.

Lt. Wood is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Wood of Evanston, Ill., and his mother and sisters. Miss Florence Wood and Miss Dorothy Wood, came on for the wedding.

Both Lt. and Mrs. Wood attended Carlton College in North-(See MAAS WEDDING, Page D-7.)

Jeanette Lemanski Ensign; Mr. Karrick To Get Commission

Lt. Comdr. and Mrs. J. A. Lemanski and their daughter, Ensign Jeanette Lemanski, of North Arlington, have returned from Northampton, Mass., where they attended the graduation exercises of the WAVES at Smith College, at which time Miss Lemanski received her commission and was assigned to active duty in Washington. Ensign Lemanski, who has resided in Arlington for the past two years, is a graduate of William and Mary College.

Col. Samuel N. Karrick, U. S. A., and Mrs. Karrick of North Arlington are leaving today for New York to attend the graduating exercises on Tuesday at the United States Military Academy. Their son, Samuel Nairn Karrick, is graduating with a star rating in academics, and also is commissioned cadet captain of the regimental staff. He likewise has the distinction of being one of the youngest members of the

By the Way—

Her personality and her life are as colorful as the flaming titian of her hair. And Mrs. Herbert Friedenwald has lived just about all over the world-Morocco, Palestine, China, Italy, France and all over South America. First because she likes to travel, second because she likes to paint. And she can too. She is an extremely talented artist. She served in the last war making doctors' slides. She now is doing her bit to help win this one by making AWVS posters for propaganda purposes, and utility posters for the canteen; also for the office of Civilian Defense and other war-working groups that need directional signs and Helping her with this work were a group of Junior Auxiliares of the AWVS who worked under her direction three days a week; also a group of 15-year-olders under the chairmanship of Rosamond Fowler, a Corcoran Gallery of Art student. Some of the most faithful included Eleanor Evans, Barbara Peyser, Connie Potter, Katherine Stanley-Brown, Sue Grosner, Florence Kaufman, Hilda Goto, Peggy Hunter, Juan Williamson and Dora Winters. They all did a good job and came regularly but now that they're back at school they can't come so often-but after school closes they will again they say-all of

Mrs. Friedenwald has been working with the American Voluntary Services since December a year ago. Last summer she taught a group of youngsters how to paint and to make these effective posters; taught them in a large sunny room which the Junior League contribtued for the purpose. Some members of the class were children of Junior League members, but for the most part they were youngsters from all over the town and from a of life, So interested did they become in the painting and poster making that Mrs. Friedenwald arranged several contests for them and herself gave the bonds that were prizes. Some of these posters were later shown at the King-Smith School and created no end of favorable comment.

Just now she is doing most of this AWVS poster work in the sunroom of the Wardman Park Hotel apartment, which she and her husband have occupied since they sold their own house on Bancroft place here. It was Mrs. Friedenwald and her husband, Dr. Friedenwald, who organized the Friedenwald Foundation for Higher Learning with headquarters in Baltimore - with which city the Friedenwald family have long distinguished themselves in the field of medi-

When Mrs. Friedenwald went to France she worked for textile people there and a great many of these textiles later were sold in this country. She also learned to speak French and in her various other travels she learned Spanish, a little Hebrew and to understand (although not speak fluently) a little Chinese and German.

She is an enthusiastic and tireless worker, and she is modest about claiming any credit for what she does.

"See, I'm still a buck private," she says, pointing to the shoulder of her gray-blue AWVS uniform which bears no emblem. Her husband, she says, calls her "a lone ranger!"

Miss Jacqueline Jones Married To Lt. Howard Stephens Rue, Jr.

The Chapel of St. John at the Washington Cathedral was the scene of the marriage of Miss Jacqueline Bond Jones to Lt. Howard Stephens Rue, jr., U. S. N. R., which took place last evening at 7 o'clock The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Roy Kehlor Jones and the late Lt. Comdr. Jones, U. S. N., and Lt. Rue is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard S. Rue of Tarrymoor, Bryn Mawr, Pa. White snapdragons and gladioluses in two baskets and lighted candles decorated the church for the ceremony, at which the Rev. Armand Eyler of St. Margaret's Church officiated. A program of nuptial music preceded the ceremony. Given in marriage by her brother, Midshipman Roy Kehlor Jones, II, the bride wore a gown of white faille styled with a full skirt and a fitted bodice. The sleeves of the gown were long and a fringed ruffle trimmed the shoulder line and was around the skirt. Her veil of tulle fell from a tiara of orange blossoms and the bride carried an old-fashioned bouquet of white roses and white

Attendants for the bride were Miss Corinne Phelps, who served as maid of honor; Miss Dixie Ross Kinne of Sweet Briar College, a cousin of the bride; Miss Judith Ann Kinne of Randolph-Macon College, another cousin of the bride; Miss Lora May Hoover, Miss Peggy Taylor and Mrs.

Sidney Cook of Hampton, Va. They wore matching gowns of brocade which were made with full skirts and fitted bodices. Two of the attendants wore blue, two were in pink and the others wore yellow. Their coronets of tulle matched the colors of their

Transportation Will Not Curb Lecture Series

Women Overcoming Obstacle for United Nations Event

Members of society are not letting the transportation problem interfere with giving their time and support to the forthcoming events in music as well as to the Today and Tomorrow lecture series of the United Nations. Sponsors are faithful in attending the various meetings in the interest of their favorite projects, either walking or taking a bus or streetcar to be on hand.

Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, one of the leading patronesses for the lecture of the United Nations, like many others went by bus to a meeting last week when plans were completed for the discussions which will open Monday, January 25. Dr. Hubertus J. Van Mook, Minister of the Netherlands Colonies, will be the first speaker, his subject being "The Occupied Territories Look Ahead." While in the Capital, Dr. Van Mook will be the guest of the Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. Loudon at the Embassy

Couple Leave On Honeymoon Trip to Florida

Miss Sandra Lee Rodgers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Rodgers, and Mr. Alexander Blair Thaw, son of the late Rev. and Mrs. Stephen Dows Thaw of Pittsburgh, were married early yester day afternoon in St. David's chapel where the Rev. Spence Dunbar officiated before the candle-lighted altar. White flowers, ferns and white-ribboned pews also decorated the chapel, making a lovely setting for the wedding.

Escorted by her father, the bride was clad in ivory satin made with a fitted bodice buttoned down the front, sweetheart neckline and full skirt ending in a long train. Her veil of ivory illusion fell beyond the train of her dress and was held by a headdress of ruching and orange blossoms, and she wore a string of pearls that were the gift of the bridegroom and carried a bouquet of calla lilies.

Her maid of honor was Miss Dorothy Alice Rundles, who wore purple velvet with a headdress of talisman buds and purple veiling and carried a bouquet of talisman

Mr. Benjamin Thaw of Chicago, brother of the bridegroom, was his best man and the ushers were Mr. Russell Ellett of Rixeyville, Va., and Mr. Frank Slattery of Boston. A reception and luncheon after the ceremony was held at the 1925 F Street Club, following which Mr. and Mrs. Thaw left for Florida. Mr. Thaw returned recently from Switzerland, where he studied and lived with his mother and brother for 14 years. On their return from Florida he and Mrs. Thaw will make their home at 5037 Millwood lane.

Zimmerman, Jarvis Wedding Here Yesterday

Couple to Reside In North Carolina After Honeymoon

The marriage of Miss Mary Grace Zimmerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Michael Zimmerman of this city, to Lt. Norman Francis Jarvis, U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice H. Jarvis of Bladensburg, Md., took place yesterday morning at 10 o'clock in St. Ann's Church, with the Rev. Timothy N. Mc-Carthy officiating. The church was decorated with palms and white flowers, and Mr. Conrad Bernier, organist, and Mr. John J. McMahon, soloist, presented the nuptial music.

Escorted to the altar by her father. the bride wore a gown of ivory bridal satin styled with a full circular train and long pointed sleeves. The paniers of the skirt were edged with Chantilly lace and the bride wore a full-length veil of bridal illusion with a coronet of matching lace. She carried a white prayer book with a white orchid.

Mrs. E. Stuart Lyddane was the bride's matron of honor. She was gowned in purple faille taffeta and her Victorian bonnet was trimmed with ostrich plumes matching the gown. Her cascade bouquet was of purple and blue sweet peas mixed with peach gladioluses and talisman

Other attendants for the bride were Mrs. David Mead and Miss Elizabeth Sterling. Their gowns were of amethyst faille, and, like that of the matron of honor, the plumes which trimmed their Victorian bonnets matched the color of their gowns. They carried bouquets of purple and blue sweet peas and peach gladioluses.

Shelia Jarvis, sister of the bride-groom, and Alice Joan Winston, cousin of the bride, were flower girls. They wore peach gowns made with full skirts and short puffed sleeves, and their miniature cascade bouquets were also of purple and blue sweet peas and peach gladi-oluses. They wore wreaths of fresh flowers in their hair.

Lt. Charles E. Jarvis, U. S. A., brother of the bridegroom, served as best man, and the ushers were Mr. Lawrence Jaris, another brother, and Mr. John W. Zimmerman, U. S. N. R., and Mr. Raymond M. Zim-merman, jr., brothers of the bride.

Following the ceremony, a recep-tion was held at the Hotel Roosevelt. Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mrs. Steven Lafferty of Newark, N. J.; Miss Eileen Flynn of Bridegport, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. James Pierpoint of and Miss Betty Eiseman, daughter Hamilton, Va.; Mrs. Richard Powers of Mr. and Mrs. Julian Eiseman, of Philadelphia; the Rev. sport, ... thousands of untried menus can make scarcer foods go farther and taste just as good! You'll find several worthwhile hints in BUY-LINES this week, -why not try them?

Once upon a time, you MIGHT have taken a chance about vitamins ... but now that milk, butter, meat and so many other foods are scarce, it behooves any wise woman to make SURE about vitamins and minerals. In these trying times you can't afford to be tired, nervous, low in resistance due to vitamin deficiency! That's why I mention VIMMS to you again,-those tasty vitamin-mineral tablets that match the SIX vitamin formula doctors endorse and give you three vital minerals, too! Your Druggist has VIMMS,-cost to you is only a few pennies a day! Try them yourself, -and help your family form the healthful VIMMS habit,-get that wonderful V-I-M-M-S feeling!

A big family,-and not much meat can become a real problem. So why not try TENDERONI as a "meat-spreader"? It's that new treat for macaroni and spaghetti lovers, -made with egg whites and exceedingly thin walls that hold their shape while cooking and yet absorb sauces, meat and other food combinations for a more tempting tasti-ness. You'll be amazed at how far TENDERONI can make your meat go when combined! Ask your Grocer for this wonderful new Van Camp's food ... nutritious, digestible and mouth-wateringly delicious whether served in meat combinations or in your own favorite way! TENDERONI cooks in just 7 in wintertime - for cold chaps and chafes tender skin into ugly scaliness. So make SURE that your lipstick BUY-LINE helps pro-tect at the SAME time it colors lips into provocative beauty! Angelus lipstick from The House of LOUIS PHILIPPE does JUST that,-for its "special" creamy base gives lips a smooth, tender protection that won't smudge or appear greasy and caked when properly applied. And how vibrantly exciting the Angelus "Patriot Red" lipstick is - full-bodied red, especially lovely with winter fashions! Ask at cosmetic counters for "Patriot Red,"—so thriftily priced

Weaming Mi and white gladioluses with lighted candles and palms made a pretty setting in the Petworth Methodist Church for the wedding early last evening of Miss Betty May Crowder to Mr. Herbert Madison Lewis, which took place at 7 o'clock with the Rev. Frank Steelman officiating. Mrs. Ardis Cannon played the wedding music and accompanied Miss Florence Byham, who sang solo selections as the guests assembled for the ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley A. Crowder and Mr. Lewis is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence P. Lewis.

Wearing a gown of ivory faille taffeta, the bride was escorted to the altar by her father and given by him in marriage. The dress was made with a fitted bodice, sweetheart neckline and full skirt ending in a train. A halo of orange blossoms held her full length veil and she carried a bouquet of white roses and orchids. Hats-Balm to the Feminine Heart, Herald Spring

Leaders in the Millinery Field Are Turning Out Morale-Lifting Headgear; Gay Colors and Flowers Will Predominate

You should be nothing short of astounded to learn that the millinery business in America involves some $200,000,000 yearly. What's more, that sum represents 100,000,000 dizzy bonnets purchased by the ladies of the land. When you consider that there are about 130,000,000 people in this country, including men and children, you wonder why on earth the milliners fret about the "hatless craze" that has had them worried lately. Now, there must be a reason for this tremendous amount of business, something more than a mere "yen" for a new chapeau every now and then. And, at the risk of greeting a small, select lynching party composed of dress and shoe designers, we're going to say that we think it's because the millinery industry is more in step with the times than any other branch of the fashion

It is true that dress and shoe designers must work under yardage, fabric and color regulations. Milliners have none of these headaches to cope with. Yet the spring collections indicate that the top hat designers have voluntarily taken on restrictions and have keyed their creations to the lives, duties and needs of the American woman. Officials say that there never will be rationing of hats because "you can make a hat out of anything," but

Washington Is Wearing—

All too frequently the fashion world announces a "trend" and finds that women refuse to accept it, for one reason or another. This, however, is not true in the case of the "femininity trend" which has been discussed ever since the war began. Washington women, for example, know that in wartime they must look their prettiest and most appealing, even as their clothes become simplified. And with this in mind, they have taken to all the beguiling touches and flattering fashions the style world

Looking like a painting was auburn-haired Phoebe Tobin in a bright blue velvet suit and exactly matching hat with modifled "coachman" effect. One of the smartest chapeaux of the winter belongs to Newsgirl Jane Eads. It's a narrow-brimmed white sailor, the high crown spangled with jet . . . Pretty Winifred Smithdeal wears a really smooth "up-swept" hairdo topped by a frilly little crocheted cap . . . Francesca Magill, home for a visit, looked lovelier than ever in a navy dress with large, uneven plaid of fuchsia and white. The same fuchsia tone was repeated in a perky little off-the-face hat, flatteringly veiled . . . Jean McCall accents her very dark hair with a tiny pillbox hat in scarlet velveteen.

With a simple black dress, Jo Glavis likes interesting necklaces such as her beautiful one in turquoise and gold. Helene Kravadze is wearing the most fascinating ring these days . . . It looks like a tiny-crown of gold set with gleaming pearls, the whole thing really beautiful and an, Winifred Stanley, looked lovely when the ladies of the press met her at dinner the other evening. Her Dresden-like features and snow-white hair were emphasized by a trny black calot trimmed with white flowers and worn with a simple black frock. ... Also in a flower-trimmed bonnet was Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, hers adorned with pale blue feather morning glories.

Very chic is Marie Simpson's upswept hair style with a pompadour dramatically accenting the "silver fox" effect of her prematurely gray hair. New York's new Congresswom-

we think there never will be hat rationing because the designers are being wide-awake about our demands. They watch our hair styles and create millinery that suits them; they look at our simplified dresses and give us "pretty-pretty" hats; they realize that we'll be living in suits, so they do a collection of suit hats that we actually can wear, and they know that certain commodities such as elastics are scarce, so they think up new ways to anchor our bonnets to our heads. But most important of all, they consider our wartime budgets and give us fine hats at prices we can afford, copies of very expensive chapeaux at moderate. cost, so that every woman can look her best this spring.

Outstanding, of course, are the 60 hats created by Millinery Fashion Inspiration, Inc.—the trade name for Lilly Dache, John-Frederics and Sally Victor. This is the second time the "big three" have done a co-operative collection to be copied by manufacturers and sold with the MFI tag at reasonable prices. Last season their designs in stores throughout the country were tremendously successful because they were original, becoming and non-budget busting.

Soon you will be seeing the MFI spring collection, so watch for these trends when you buy: New suspension arrangements to make the hats stay firmly on the head without benefit of elastic. Some have an ingenious clasp of whalebone springs, stiffened ribbon, felt or straw. These springs may be covered with ribbon or felt and are a vital part of the hat's shape or decoration. Watch for new silhouettes such as the "half-shell" which moves forward and leaves the back of the head uncovered, the "pinch bonnet" which looks like something worn by Queen Alexandra, the "half bonnet" like a sailor cut in half, the "young sailor" perched on the back of the head, the "flexible brim," adjustable to suit the contours of your face, the "winged brim" and the "disc shape," a round plateau that sits on the top of the head. Color will be the order of the

"Daisy chain" is the name Walter Florell gives to this orange and yellow striped taffeta hat with its small, forward-tilted effect. Soft and feminine, it has oversized white daisies set at a precarious angle and tied on with sapphire blue ribbon, repeated in a little Renoir choker.

Old Treasures Come Into Their Own

Those Precious Quilted Coverlets, Stored for Years, Will Brighten the Home

Using the possessions you have tucked away to enhance your house is one way of making up for some of the things you cannot buy. In many cases these need a bit of improvisation. hand work or ingenuity to fit them into the contemporary scene, but with the new vogue for needlework most of us find that we can perform "miracles" with former acquisitions.

We saw a most charming bedroom a few weeks ago built around a beautifully quilted coverlet that has been passed down from mother to daughter for nearly a hundred years. Each owner had packed the coverlet away in lavender, used it once or twice, washed it to keep it white and put it away again. The fact that it was made of white cotton was the main reason it had seldom been used, as it did not seem it fit in with the color needed to make most bedrooms attractive. The present owner decided to dye the coverlet and build the whole room decoration around it. Selecting a flowered chintz with a pale pink background covered with old-fashioned moss roses for draperies and slip covers, she then dyed the counterpane pale pink to match. The headboard for the bed was upholstered in the flowered chintz and a petticoat ruffle of the same spread. Two deep chairs were slipcovered in chintz and placed before the draperies. Wishing to repeat the quilt design somewhere else in the room, she traced the pattern from the coverlet to make a dressing table cover and two pillows for the

as an underskirt for the bed-

Priorities are a source of inspiration to milliners who are creating "exclusive" spring collections as well as those to be copied by moderate-priced manufacturers. Florell's

"Duchess," a tilted toque of toyo, the straw worked in long fringes and a shorter section used for the under brim.

Another upholstering job with an old quilt made an interesting fireside group. This quilt was of the patchwork variety, finely pieced of red, blue and white calico, backed with white cotton and intricately done in an unusually beautiful swirl pattern. Unfortunately, when it was made at least one-third was done with used materials and the rest of new cloth. The result, after many years of use, was that twothirds of the quilt was still in perfect condition and the other third had the whole patchwork surface completely worn off. The owner, wishing to utilize the charm of the old quilt in some way, decided to uphoister a small fireside love seat with it.

The results were so pleasing that she covered a large hassock for the other side of the fireplace with leftover pieces of the quilted design. The quaint pattern, faded to soft tones of red and blue by many years of wear and washing, is exactly the right note in this small Colonial-type house. Nothing could have been found in the shops which would have so completely "belonged" as this piece of handwork. There are many years of wear in the quilt, and when it is soiled it may be untacked, washed and returned. Piecing and quilting were one of the many "ladylike" arts in grandmother's day. Five-yearolds made doll quilts by piecing squares neatly together. Twelveyear-olds could turn out a passable family quilt, which they "tied" with bits of bright yarn to hold the covering to the cotton filling. Young ladies in their teens made "hope chest" counterpanes combining the arts of piecing, quilting and applique, many of them so lovely that Smithsonian here in Washington and the Metropolitan in New York exhibit them. Any one can piece a coverlet, but as in so many other handcrafts it is the color selection and minute care in execution of the pattern that brings each piece into the fine

Quilting will become a national pastime now that quilted dresses, lounging robes, jackets and similar bits of wearing apparel are fashionable. These warm-appearing items will be followed by accessories for the house which give a comfortable, luxur-day, or the season. This collection features Sally Blue, Tiger Lilly Pink, Johnny Blond and Freddy Green, among others. There are novel touches, too, such as hats anchored with decorative hatpins and those adorned with defense stamps.

Flower-trimmed hats will be important in the millinery picture, some of the best done by Designer Walter Florell who sprinkles posies with glistening "dewdrops" or repeats the flowers in a muff or demure choker. Florell is doing tiny, tiny hats called "Short Stories" which will be perfect for dining and dancing, elevated brims to show upswept hairdos, tailored suit hats with buckles covered with multicolored flowers. Hats with narrow brims and extended fronts, incidentally, are sure to make fashion news, for the revival of this medium-sized hat will be welcomed by many women.

As you probably have gathered, we think the millinery "big shots" deserve a lot of credit this year. They will go on making "exclusives" for their wealthier clientele, but they have not forgotten for a moment that the woman with good taste and a limited budget also wants flattering and wearable hats for

How to Repay Hospitality

Again and again the typical (and admirable) American impulse to return hospitality for hospitality received is made evident in letters sent me. Today a young business girl writes me: "A friend of mine has lately married and has a beautiful new home. and always serves the most delicious food. She has invited me to dinner many times and up to last week I still had made no return. Then I learned her husband was away, so I invited her to meet me after my office hours and took her to a very nice restaurant for dinner. In the evening we went to the theater. I paid the check and tickets as I had fully intended to do. I couldn't very well make plans to pay either beforehand. A few days later she invited me to supper at her house and insisted that I let her pay for half of the evening that was my treat. I wouldn't hear of it and when I got home I found the money in my coat pocket. I feel very much hurt. I think she was very wrong. Won't you please tell me what I can do? Certainly, I can't go on and on just taking and giving nothing in return."

I think that it was thoughtless of your friend, after having accepted your invitation, to then take from you your right to set yourself straight in your own eyes. On the other hand, I can understand her feelings, because you have obviously repaid her invitations to you by being a delightful, appreciative companion. -Emily Post.

GOP Women in Spotlight At Press Club Supper

League of Republican Women Plans Reception at Clubhouse Next Sunday

By Frances Lide,

"It looks like a Republican year," commented the presiding officer at the supper meeting last week given by the Women's National Press Club for the feminine legislators in Congress.

It wasn't planned that way, for all the women congressional members were invited, but the five honor guests who turned out all wore the GOP label. They were a good-looking group, too-all smartly gowned and groomed and obviously women of poise and accomplishment.

The superb "performance" given by the two featured "rookie" members-Representatives Clare Boothe Luce and Winifred Stanley-was well supported by the appearance of the group as a whole, which included the popular "dean" of the GOP women delegation, Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers; the versatile and efficient Mrs. Frances P. Bolton and Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith, who combines a New England reserve with a nice sense of humor. Miss Jessie Sumner, the other Republican on the list, had to decline because she was taking care of constituents.

Illness kept the two Democratic women legislators from putting in an appearance. Representative Mary &-T. Norton was unable to accept and Catholic Daughters

Mrs. Gann, who goes about cheerfully on streetcars and buses from one meeting to another these days, has been a leader in this wartime program, coming to the club each Monday and Thursday for Red Cross sewing and going over with a group of members to the Walsh House on Wednesdays and Fridays for a home nursing course.

Back to the reception, the arrangements are being directed by Mrs. William S. Culbertson, entertainment chairman, who is being assisted by Mrs. Maurice H. Thatcher, Mrs. William H. Each year thousands of timid young women, who never have been told certain facts, enter marriage completely uninformed. In this dilemma, what is the young wife to do? Because of natural shyness or lack of confidence in the knowledge of friends, she hesitates to seek the advice of others. Too often she either places her dependence on weak, ineffec-"home-made" mixtures; or resorts to over-strong solutions of acids for the douche which can actually burn, scar and even desensitize delicate tissue.

Today such risks are needless. Science has given womankind a safe-yet amazingly powerful liquid for the douche, Zonite. So powerful is Zonite, that it kills immediately all germs and bacteria with which it comes in contact. Deodorizesby actually destroying odors, leaving no tell-tale odor of its own. Protects personal daintiness. Yet! Zonite is non-caustic, non-poisonous, safe for delicate tissues. Over 20,000,000 bottles already bought. 'Something for the Boys' Gratifying Musical Hit

Broadway Warmly Greets Ethel Merman Singing Cole Porter's Tunes

By Lawrence Perry,

North American Newspaper Alliance. NEW YORK .- Herewith Michael Todd of "Star and Garter" fame. is cited as a public benefactor. For, in his new musical, "Something for the Boys," presented at the Alvin Theater, he gratifies the eye with color and artistic embellishment; he seduces the senses with music and saltatory rhythm and, above all, he provides occasion for amusement which frequently burgeons into hilarity. Hemingway Novel Ready For Release If and When Washington Approves

By Andrew R. Kelley.

On October 25, 1940, Ernest Hemingway's novel, "For Whom the Bell Tolls," was purchased by Paramount Pictures for $100,000, involving an additional royalty to be paid according to the number of books sold On October 31, 1942, camera work on the picture was completed. This past week Director Sam Wood completed the rough cutting of the film; next week it will be "sneak" previewed. In between these dates the producers have poured out approximately $2,000,000, have had many political "headaches," assembled

'Eve of St. Mark' Shows Transition Of a Nation

Anderson Play Is Fitting Command Performance

Maxwell Anderson is no believer in playwriting-as-usual in wartime. He has given twofold proof of this in the case of his outstanding play, "The Eve of St. Mark," which has been designed to play the single "command performance" at the National Theater, Washington, on Sunday, January 24.

With this play Mr. Anderson became the first American playwright Hollywood May to present Broadway with a fulllength work concerning America's active participation in the world struggle. "The Eve of St. Mark" dramatizes the transition, at once simple and infinitely complex, between the life of peace and the life of war in a young American of average circumstances, his parents, his brothers, his girl and his comrades. Beginning in a quiet Eastern rural community, the story moves to a Southern Army camp-thence to an ambarkation point-finally, in the climactic scenes, to an island of the Philippines.

Nor is there anything "usual" in mind than that which patronizes the Broadway playhouses. "The Eve of as a timely piece to fill the needs of the National Theater Conference. an organization ministering to what has come to be called "the tributary for a test at MGM.

First Beethoven Festival in Five Years Opens Here

Washington's first Beethoven Festival in five years will be held tomorrow evening in Constitution Hall when the National Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Hans Kindler, presents the first of three concerts devoted to his works. The festival will be continued on Wednesday evening and will be concluded the following night. Beethoven's masterpiece, the "Ninth Symphony," is scheduled for Wednesday, which is the regular fourth midweek all-subscription concert. It will be repeated the following evening. In addition, the "Romance in F" for violin and orchestra will be heard at Thursday's concert, played by Marguerite Kuehne, violinist, soloist with the National Symphony. In all, six soloists and four choral groups of 250 massed voices will participate. Twenty-two-year-old Carroll Glenn, American violinist, will be soloist in the "D Major Violin Concerto" tomorrow evening. Vocal parts in the Beethhoven "Ninth Symphony" on Wednesday and Thursday nights will be sung by Juanita Carter, soprano; Jean Presents Full-Handzlik, alto; John Hamill, tenor, and Howard Vanderburg, bass baritone; the choral portions will be executed by the combined voices of the Washington Choral Society, Louis Potter, director; the George Washington University Glee Club alumnae, Dr. Robert H. Harmon, director; the choir from the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, Charles D. Beaschler, director, and the choir from the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church in Baltimore, J. Edward Moyer, director. Miss Kuehne, the sixth soloist, will be heard, as mentioned above, on Thursday.

Carroll Glenn, tomorrow night's soloist, has a schedule this season that even a Heifetz or a Menuhin might envy, including 20 appearances with symphony orchestras and a total of 50 engagements. Miss Glenn has achieved her renown here in America by means open to any other equally gifted youngster. Beginning on a mail order house instrument under her mother's instruction at the age of 4, Miss Glenn continued her music studies at the University of South Carolina, traveling 65 miles every Saturday for her lessons. At 11 she was acquiring her technique from Edouard Dethier at the Juilliard School, practicing from five to seven hours a day. As a result she is said to possess a tone of richness and breadth that few masculine violinists attain.

The second violinists appearing on the Beethoven Festival is Marguerite Kuehne, assistant concert master of Mme. Helen Traubel, brilliant Wag- torium February 5 and 6, to be the National Symphony. Like Car- nerian soprano of the Metropolitan roll Glenn, Miss Kuehne was a Opera Association, who, on Decemchild prodigy in her native State, ber 4 last, made her debut as Isolde. California. Oscar Levant Opens New Series Here

Oscar Levant, noted musician and composer and perhaps most noted as a member of the famous "Information, Please." program, will inaugurate the "15 to 30" concerts, the new series of "youth concerts" on Wednesday evening, January 27, at 8:30 o'clock., at Constitution Hall. Mr. Levant will give a piano recital embellished with his own spicy comments in which Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" and "Concerto" will be featured. Dr. Hans Kindler will conduct the National Symphony Orchestra for all three programs of the series. The concerts are managed and programmed by the "younger set" of Washingtonians under the chairmanship of Patricia Morris.

Choral Rehearsal

The Cathedral Choral Society of Washington will resume rehearsals tomorrow night after a brief vacation following the presentation of the Mendelssohn "Elijah" in Washington Cathedral before Christmas. During the coming season the society again will be under the direction of Guest Conductor William Strickland, a member of the faculty of the Army Music School of Fort Myer, Va.

Work will begin tomorrow night on the Bach "B Minor Mass" and plans announced for the society's spring concert. Singers who are interested in joining the society are invited to attend this first meeting, and auditions will be held immediately following the rehearsal period.

The rehearsal will begin at 8 o'clock in the Whitby auditorium of the National Cathedral School for Girls, located across Woodley road from Washington Cathedral.

Federal and District Officials Will Join Trade Board Members in Dedication

Barring unforeseen developments, the $2,500,000 grade-separation structure at Fourteenth street and Maine avenue S.W., will be opened to full vehicular traffic Tuesday, January 26, with brief ribbon-cutting Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst said last week that he considered the project one of the most important undertaken in years and that when it is finally completed. it will relieve the most highly congested spot in the city.

First Planned in 1939.

The grade-separation structure originally was planned in 1939 and Congress included in the 1940 District Appropriation Act funds for the preparation of preliminary plans and surveys, which were completed in the latter part of 1940. Construction of the low-level bridge was authorized by Congress in the 1942 Approstarted on this structure in October,

The grade-separation project made it necessary to extend the railroad bridge across Maine avenue. It was also necessary to complete the building of the low-level bridge and the paving of Fifteenth street prior to starting work on the main structures along Fourteenth street in order to provide adequate detour routes during the construction of the major

Director Whitehurst said that when the necessity arose for the improvement of the approaches to the Potomac River bridges it was evident that the program of construction that had been developed on a normal basis had to be speeded up.

Emphasizing the congestion at Fourteenth street and Maine avenue, Mr. Whitehurst said that the turning of streetcars into Maine avenue from Fourteenth street seriously interfered with the heavy traffic that flowed north and south along Fourteenth street. Traffic through this intersection averaged 44,000 vehicles a day and traffic as high as 51,000 vehicles a day has been recorded.

More Tie-ups in Summer. During the spring and summer months, when traffic from Hains Point flowed directly into Fourteenth street. Mr. Whitehurst said that congestion was complicated still further. He said that during the peak periods, traffic would bank up for several blocks in all directions and at times extended to the Virginia side of the Highway Bridge.

Highway Bridge is carrying today. Mr. Whitehurst said, a traffic volume of 38,000 vehicles, and with the completion of Federal Government buildings in Virginia and an anticipated increase in commercial traffic the bridge probably will carry as large a volume of traffic as it did prior to the emergency. Highway Bridge is on U. S. route No. 1, a main connection between the North and South, and is used extensively by commercial traffic, he

At present paving and incidental work at Fourteenth and C streets is in progress, the last remaining work to be undertaken on the surface so that traffic flow along Fourteenth street above Maine avenue may be restored. The ramp road from the structure to Maine avenue probably will not be completed for a few days after the main structure is opened to traffic.

The completion of the car terminal, which will be used by employes of adjoining Federal buildings, should follow the opening of the street to traffic by about one week, Mr. Whitehurst said. The main structure and the car terminal cost

How Congress Operates

Roland Young Explains Function And Suggests Reorganization

This Is Congress

By Roland Young. (Alfred A. Knopf.)

Like other legislative bodies, the American Congress, in recent years, has come under a heavy barrage of criticism. The attacks have covered a wide range. Congress has been assailed both because it needlessly delays some legislation and because it passes other measures too hurriedly Critics have taken it to task for yielding to pressure groups, for failure to think nationally, and for the sectionalism and parochialism that determine the pattern of much of its legislative product

Roland Young, a former secretary of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations and instructor in government at Harvard, explains in this book how Congress actually operates, describes the defects in its organization and suggests reforms, which, in his opinion, will make it a more efficient legislative body, better able to meet the demands of present-

"How well equipped is Congress, whose members are ordinarily not experts and who have all too little time for affairs of state, to legislate and to control this immense government, and to plan for the future?" the author asks. His answer is that it could be much better equipped for this job than it is today. Analyzing its weaknesses, he finds that Congress is not organized to think nationally, that it is pretty well isolated from taking part in important decisions of policy, that it has failed to develop efficient methods for controlling delegated power, and that its supervision over the Federal bureaucracy is often "tenuous and

"We are accustomed to thinking of Congress as the body which makes the laws, but to an extent greater than most people realize, Congress is now a revisionary body which influences but which does not itself make public policy," he says. "The initiative in originating legislation has passed almost entirely to the President and the bureaucracy which he directs."

As an illustration of the isolation of Congress from the main currents of governmental action, he cites the fact that Secretary of the Navy Knox, after his inspection trip to Hawaii following Pearl Harbor, reported his findings to newspapermen, and not to Congress, with the result that the legislators first learned the results of the Knox investigation by

"Once the laws are passed and the money appropriated, Congress does not have effective methods of influencing or even of learning the end result of its legislation," he points out.

Real political power, the author tells us, belongs to the administration, and the exclusion of its members from positions of power "makes Congress a frustrated and somewhat fretful body." As a result, Congressmen tend to turn their attention toward local interests, and this explains why localism and parochialism play so large a part in con-

The committee system, under which leadership is assigned on the basis of seniority, is a major obstacle to congressional efficiency, he declares. Not only are there too many committees (there are about 100 in the two houses), but they are not organized, he points out, "to answer the need for specialization or the need for political power."

Particular interest attaches to the author's suggestions for a reorganization of Congress "to improve the position of Congress as a thinking agency, and an agency which supervises the operation of the To this end, he proposes four "reforms": First, reduction in the number of legislative committees to not more than 10 in each chamber, and election of their chairmen by party caucus; second, organization of the committee chairmen into a Legislative Cabinet charged with general direction of the work and energies of Congress; third, establishment of better communication between Congress and the executive by permitting congressional representation in the advisory councils of the administration, by allowing Congress to discuss and pass on many of the important problems now decided exclusively by the administration, and having administrators submit to the legislature more complete reports on their activities; fourth, the setting up of an improved budget procedure, to give Congress a more effective control over Federal finance and public spending.

Written for the average layman interested in public affairs, the book gives a good picture of Congress as it operates today, and its place in the governmental system. That a national legislature is an essential part of the democratic process is a fundamental tenet in our political faith. This being so, it is of vital importance to our democratic institutions that Congress, in the words of the author, "develop superior procedures for coping with the world of the present and the world that

World in Trance

By Leopold Schwarzschild. (L. B. Fischer.)

Treaty of Versailles and the bombing of Pearl Harbor has been a fateful succession of avoidable blunders, according to Mr. Schwarzschild, a German editor who left the Reich in 1933. His thesis is convincing, if not original, and he has written a coherent study of our times.

The first mistake, he says, was an inherent weakness in the machinery of the League of Nations. Through the "stubborn idealism" of Woodrow Wilson, the League was deprived of the power of physical compulsion to enable it to crack down on rebel states. Then followed a long series of mistakes during the years when the world deluded itself that it could keep the peace by appeasing Germany-or any other aggressor. Hitler's rise to power, the aggressions of Italy and Japan and the sneak punch at Pearl Harbor culminated these years of "lofty dreaming and low demagogy." The world had been in a trance. The spectacular, if not enduring, successes of Fascism awakened it.

Mr. Schwarzschild examines the period between World Wars I and II and comes to the conclusion that Germany made suckers out of the democracies, foisting on the world during the period in which she built up her panzer divisions and the Luftwaffe the monstrous lie that her intentions were peaceful, that she was mistreated, abused and exploited by capitalist democracies. The entire period the author views as two decades of double-dealing, artful dodging and duping of naive democracies which spent their time arguing with gangsters while the gangsters picked the world's pockets. This has all been said before, but rarely so convincingly and by one more familiar with the German political scene. He makes out a damaging case against the German military, which spawned Hitler. But his case against Hitler is even more forceful. The author attempts to show that the intricate political network spun by the democracies—and Germany either was tied to outrageously impractical idealistic theories of the inborn peace-like qualities of man or had its basis in the most brazen self-interest and total disregard of democratic principles. The Germans, reminds the author, not only played the democracies for suckers, pitting one against another and eliciting mutual distrust among the Allies, but took Russia and the forces of the left for a ride, too. The Nazis had both the right and the left and most of the intervening shades bewitched at one time or another, matching one against the other with diabolical brilliance. On the world's stage, as a backdrop for this tragedy, was the ludicrous picture of the League of Nations, brainchild of a great dreamer, Woodrow its family as real entities. While Wilson, whose worst mistake was not the creation of the league, but the creation of a league without power to achieve the goal he set for it.

"The forces for good, that was the Achilles heel," Mr. Schwarzschild observes in speaking of league problems. "Would they really mete out Irish maid, who in time assumes the deserved punishment to violators of the Covenant? Could we rely on their doing it? How could we make sure they would?" The author answers these questions, in part, by posing the parallel of a decent citizen walking along the highway and suddenly confronting self-sublimation are the core of the murderers armed with knives and revolvers attacking a stranger. The decent citizen usually takes to his heels. And so will nations in like circumstances, he says.

The author's slant on post-World War I history leads him to certain conclusions: That the world must not again risk leaving Germany to that here is a real person. It is she that the individual is nothing, the state everything, when a Hitler to pour from the presses, there are her own devices, that democracies must not "succumb to the myth that | who points out the function of the heads it power and armaments and compulsion are of themselves sinful and evil steel mill not only in the annals of as such," that "we must not believe that power and compulsion can be the Scott family, but in the history larly well worked out. replaced by any economic or social magic," and that in the business of enforcing peace there is no substitute for our own will and power. LESTER GRANT.

Rudyard Kipling

By Lucile Russell Carpenter. (Argus Books.)

This book, subtitled "A Friendly Profile," has a demerit which the reviewer would have said was impossible concerning Kipling-it protests too much. The reviewer, however, would limit her license to be pro-Kipling in the matter of his literary genius. He was a great writer. But when it comes to making Kipling a Cheryble brother in his personal qualities, particularly in his attitude toward America, there is no such validity in the case.

Kipling was a friend to his friends and, where he deemed he had enemies, he was not notable for forgiveness. The present writer, in enthusiasm for the amiable qualities which he showed to his intimates, tries to gloss over the fact he was quite capable of violent emotional prejudice and of using his pen with the utmost animation to express the same. She would make it appear, because he had some American friends, that he cherished no permanent dislike for our country after his spectacular quarrel with his brother-in-law, Beatty Balestier, but forgave us all nicely. In his last book, however, his autobiography, he lashed out against the United States with impressively soaring fury. Kipling hated For the Mystery Fans America; there is no doubt about it; he said so, many times.

His hatred, moreover, was magnificiently unreasonable. It represented a complete reversal of his original attitude toward our country, and not a gradual reversal, but an extremely sudden one. It was based on his wholly personal difference with his eccentric relative-in-law and Tayler Yates (Macmillan)-Murder its aftermath of unpleasant publicity. And Kipling, too, was frank about it. He did not pretend, for the sake of a six-week lecture contract, that he doted on us. The reviewer, if she Holmes (Duell, Sloan & Pearce)had to chose between an Englishman who admitted hating America and Los Angeles crime involving a school stood on his hatred, and one who, for a fee, went around the country of writers which specializes in assuring the natives that they were really excellent people, would take the former any day in the morning. By Marcia Davenport. (Scrib-

The story starts in 1873, when a timid shanty Irish girl applies for her first job as a housemaid in the home of William Scott, ironmaster, of Pittsburgh. It traces not only her life and that of the family she serves, but the life and growth of the Scott Iron Works and, through it, the steel industry in this country. This is a theme that can lend itself to dramatic writing, and Miss Davenport makes the most of her opportunities. Her descriptions of the steelmaking processes have the color evoked in the artistically sensitive by the various stages of the evolution of that metal.

She brings the same fire and insight to bear on her characterizations. Unlike many books which picture many members of one family, this book presents the individuals of family resemblances, both of character and form, exist, they are resemblances, not identities. Mary, the the role of family spirit or soul, is. of course, the heroine of the novel. Her nobility and her passion for a book. Stella: A Gentlewoman of the Eighteenth Century

By Herbert Davis. (Macmillan.)

This is a group of lectures composed by the president of Smith College on the subject of the Swift-Stella correspondence. The line which Dr. in American foreign relations. Davis takes is perhaps what one might look for from a man devoted to feminine education; he deals not at all with the emotional relationship of Zeitlin (Harper)-The Romans, says the famous pair, but attacks the "Journal" rather for what it yields of this author. Swift's general concept of womankind. He finds that the great dean, who has sometimes been put down as a hater of women, was really a forerunner of sex equality, and that, when he castigated woman for her vanity and H. Wallis (Dutton)-Story of a man folly, it was done in scorn of customs and not of the female sex.

For himself, he advised women to cultivate good health by living active lives and recommended mixed company as the best method of developing minds and personalities. "I am ignorant," he wrote, "of one quality that is amiable in a man, which is not equally so in a woman. . Nor do I know one vice or folly which is not equally detestable in Out of the Blue both. * * * There is no quality whereby women endeavor to distinguish themselves from men, for which they are not just so much the worse. • • • You (women) ought to be wholly unconstrained in the company of and fire and fury that must be deserving men, when you have had sufficient experience of their discretion.

> One could hardly ask a convicted modern feminist for a more unprejudiced platform. Dr. Davis follows this line through his whole argument. Swift was interested, he says, in urging-or berating-women to be people, and the wrath which he frequently used was not for women themselves, but for the romantic and gallant fashions which they tried to follow with absurd and contemptible results. In short, he finds Dean Swift a friend of womankind, an early friend, before friendship was fashionable. His lectures are pleasantly written, and one does not need to be a scholar of the period to appreciate them.

But the war killed that trend before it had run its natural course.

A Plea for Prejudice

Hallett Abend Argues Against 'Soft Peace' With the Japs

Pacific Charter

By Hallett Abend. (Doubleday, Doran.)

"This is a frank plea in favor of prejudice." With this sentence, Hallett Abend, veteran correspondent of the New York Times in the Far East, opens his new book on Asia. "I have a deep prejudice against nations which glorify aggression and slaughter," he says. I have a conviction that they first must be disarmed and made powerless to resume their evil ways, and a conviction that then they must be re-educated in honor and in decency and in a new respect for the rights of fellow men and weaker nations."

Pleading for "blueprints for peace," Mr. Abend denounces advocates of a "soft peace." This is not just a war against war lords, he argues, but against the race which, for half a century, has "lived and expanded by conquest and loot." But Mr. Abend is not so hard-boiled as he apparently likes to present himself. For no sooner does he condemn advocates of a "soft peace" than he writes that "Japan must be subjected to no punitive indemnities other than the loss of her investments in land which she has invaded and conquered and suppressed. * * * If the victor discriminates against the vanquished in such humanitarian matters as food distribution, medical assistance, and the rebuilding of shattered economies, then the victors will prove themselves as bad as the savageries they will have quelled."

As pictured by Mr. Abend, the responsibilities of the United Nations in Asia after the war will be heavy, indeed. He warns that "no nation with selfish interests should be permitted to deprive the United Nations of the support and co-operation of the peoples of Asia by clinging to ancient 'rights' or by insisting on the perpetuation of ancient wrongs.

Specifically, Mr. Abend believes that the military caste of Japan must be discredited, that her system of education must be remade and that 'her form of government must be changed." She must also be permanently evicted, he believes, "from all the Asiatic mainland and from all the islands and bases east of Asia which she acquired since 1894." Although the author believes that Korea must be freed from Japanese rule, he does not think the country is ready for self-government. In regard to Indo-China, he says bluntly that its people have suffered under "rapacious French misgovernment," and that to "hand them back to French domination after their Japanese oppressors have been driven out would be criminal folly."

Mr. Abend declares that "China should be pledged the righting of all the wrongs she has suffered at the hands of Japan during the last half-century. Manchuria should be promised that the Japanese tyranny there will be brought to an end." Making good the promises of the Atlantic Charter in the East Indies must be intrusted to the "wisdom of the people of the Netherlands," he believes, adding that it will be "their task to reconcile the Indonesians to a period of tutelage to end with freedom of decision regarding their ultimate destiny. Whether one agrees with all of Mr. Abend's conclusions, it seems only fair to say that he has packed a tremendous amount of information and personal newspaper experience into a comparatively moderate-sized book of 300 pages. It will give no comfort to the imperialist and it will certainly not give any comfort to those who will want this country to crawl back into an isolationist shell when the guns cease their harsh roar.

Happy Land

By MacKinlay Kantor. (Coward-McCann.)

The line between sentiment and the sentimental is pretty vague, and is not always distinct in "Happy Land." Yet this is not necessarily a disadvantage in a short book of this sort-Mr. Kantor is writing about a situation that none of us will be able to view coldly for many years, if ever.

"Happy Land" is the story of a young sailor's death. It is not told on the torpedoed ship, but in the Illinois town where Rusty's father and mother live. There Lew Marsh owns the "good" drug store, and his wife Agnes manages the comfortable Marsh home. The two of them are people of good will-they do not talk much about the matter, but when things need to be done the Marshes do them quietly. Their life is simple, useful and, by the standards of Greenwich Village, it is also deadly dull. Mr. Kantor is able to make you see that it is by no means dull, however.

And Rusty is a good kid. He is too light for football, but the hurdles are his meat. He goes for a long time with a girl his people wish he would discard—and she discards him. Then he takes up with the girl next door, and the older Marshes are pleased. Rusty goes to a school of pharmacy, and plans to help enlarge the store, and to make a life for himself in Hartfield. But something quietly comes to a focus in his mind. He sees, perhaps indistinctly but still honestly, that the Navy needs him, and he

In Hartfield the store goes on much as usual until one day the telegram is delivered by a frightened messenger girl. The Marshes find it hard to believe, and harder to withstand the blow. In act, they yield to it, especially Lew Marsh. And then Mr. Kantor yields to th cock (Dodd, Mead)—Amusing as fantasy that is never very far from the center of his mind; he brings back the ghost of Lew Marsh's grandfather, complete with GAR uniform and gentle philosophy. The reviewer wishes he had not, because a few pages beyond grandpa, Mr. Kantor also returns Rusty's buddy. And Tony would have served to do all the things that Mr. Kantor makes grandpa do, without straining the reader's credulity. In fact, Tony is a grand boy, and grandpa is a pseudosalty old fake. But still, "Happy Land" makes a good point.

JOHN SELBY.

By Albert T. Lauterbach. (Princeton University Press.)

While the war is being fought, economists and industrial planners are thinking of post-war conditions. America's destiny is linked with that of the world; laissez faire ended long before bombs fell on Pearl

In a timely book, Mr. Lauterbach reviews the steps whereby totalitarian nations challenged the very existence of democratic countries, and points out the lessons in military economy and social structure which democracies must understand if a genuine world peace is to follow the global conflict.

Students of economics as well as political science will find this book a real contribution to an appreciation of the difficult problems peace will bring. The profound scope of Mr. Lauterbach's work is reflected in separate chapters devoted to topics such as "Changing Concepts of Peace and War," "The European Ordeal and Its American Aftermath," "Germany's New Economic Order in Europe," "Capitalism, Preparedness and Democracy," "Economic Conditions of American Security, Traditional Assumptions and Recent Changes," "Economic Power as a Weapon," "British Experiences and American Policies," and "What After Military Economy?

Mr. Lauterbach asserts that "the European economy will be very largely dependent on the United States for the wherewithal to get going again, and the amount and direction of American first aid to Europe will be of decisive importance." He is equally convinced that "following on the ordeal of military economy, and in many countries the additional ordeal of totalitarianism, a majority of the populations will probably reject any economic and social system that is not based on freedom of

Mr. Rutledge of South Carolina

By Richard Barry. (Duell, Sloan & Pearce.)

Believing that John Rutledge, first lawyer of South Carolina and signer of the Constitution, has been dealt with somewhat unjustly in past historical accounts, Mr. Barry, in this new biography, has tried to throw more light on this prodigious gentleman of the old South. He spent five years in research, digging into thousands of contemporary periodicals, reading several thousand more books and documents, and has emerged with a readable biography that leaves one in small wonder that the colonies made the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution stick if men of this type guided the destinies of the then-forming Nation. The background of the formative years of John Rutledge has not been neglected, and in these accounts the author breathes life into a figure equipped with a keenness of mind which no man has ever probed fully, and which was not understood by his contemporaries, with the exception of Benjamin Franklin, Samuel Adams and James Wilson. It was John Rutledge who wrote the clause giving the Chief Executive of the Nation his war powers. This clause Rutledge insisted upon because of a bitter lesson learned when he was President of the Republic of South Carolina and the British had occupied his capital, Charles Town. Here again an amazing talent is brought to light by Mr. Barry, who gives Rutledge most of the credit for the exploits of Marion's raiders and the defeat of Cornwallis at Yorktown. It was the belief of Rutledge that only the people, endowed with a will for freedom and a thorough knowledge of their country, could defeat the military might of Britain's armies. This he proved at King's Mountain, despite opposition from military men sent south by both Gen. Washington and the Congress.

Throughout the biography, John Rutledge is presented as the unerring, determined man who preferred to remain behind the scenes, but nevertheless, guide in statecraft the preservation of a Union of Colonies and the later formation of the United States.

By John Fernald. (Macmillan.)

There is something of Conrad in this, one of the finest and most readable books to emerge from the war at sea. Too much of the wrong thing already has been written since sea warfare began in October, 1939. Too little of the right thing has been written by Lt. Fernald, a reservist in the British Navy.

When the old, four-stacked Porchester (the name is fictitious, for obvious reasons) set out from a Canadian port early in 1941 as one of the 50 destroyers turned over by our Government to the British, she carried as oddly assorted a group of men as you could find anywhere, locations produced by totalitarian There was the young Scottish doctor, also a reservist, who suffered from seasickness and spent much of his time bemoaning the fact he had no "customers." I began by drawing a plan the size I wanted, and then started con-

During his college years he had begun to rebel against the Church of England, but it was not until after he reached Cork that he fully determined to accept a different religion. In that Irish city he heard a Quaker preacher, and was so much impressed that he decided to become a member of the Quaker church. The Quakers called themselves the 'Society of Friends." The name

'Quaker" meant "trembler," and was given by enemies of the religion. The Friends were of a gentle nature, but they were treated meanly.

Thousands were jailed and a great many died in prison. When Penn was 36 he decided to let King Charles know what the Quakers were suffering. With two friends, he presented a list of their wrongs. The King had owed a debt equal to about $80,000 to Penn's father, who was now dead. To repay the debt, Charles decided to give the son a large tract of wild land in Penn was overjoyed. He thought he saw a chance to obtain freedom for English Quakers. A charter, or bill of rights, was drawn up. It said that Penn and other "freemen" could make laws to govern themselves in the new country. The laws were to be written down and copies sent to the king within five years after they were made. The charter required that the new country should be called Pennsylvania, meaning "Forest-land of Penn."

The land turned over to Penn included more than 70,000 square miles and was larger than England itself Before going to America, Penn sent several shiploads of settlers across. Among them were Germans and Dutch, as well as Englishmen. A year later Penn started across himself. He left his wife and children in England however intending to send for them when he made a he says. "If the Japs announced we were sunk, it was a sure thing we were O. K." At Coral Sea, Comdr. Ernest Davis saw his gunnery crew, in their first time under attack, shoot down more planes in a very crowded 15 minutes than any ship ever had before in a similar period. Thirteen Jap planes went into the water close to the ship and the crew didn't count those farther away-but there were few of the more than 40 Jap planes which came in against their guns that got away. "My children stood up like veterans and beat those Jap planes off like nobody's business." Comdr. Davis said. Of his possessions that

watch given him by the crew after Coral Sea. But after that, the Yorktown was a marked ship. Its planes had run a day-long ferry bombing service to sink 14 Jap ships in Tulagi Harbor-"everything as big as a rowboat that would float." They had played havoc Lt. Fred W. Hallegan, 1817 Rhodes They had "scratched flat-tops" right > Singled Out as Target. Into the battle of Midway with little rest after its record-breaking cruise of 104 days, went the Yorktown, and it was paid its highest tribute by the Japs themselves. Planes from their carriers had only one target-the Yorktown-and they 'really sat on her." No other United States ships were attacked. As one of the salvage crew, Comdr. Davis was thrown overboard by the torpedo that finally sank the Yorktown. But he says he would have come out of that all right, too, except for "Southern laziness." When he reached the ladder to climb up the side, the Yorktown was rolling away from him, so he waited for her to roll back, so he "wouldn't have so > far to climb." Depth charges from the destroyer alongside exploded in those seconds, and he was doubled up into oily waters, with concussion and a fractured back, to be hauled out by two sailors and sent back to Pearl Harbor and a recovery that makes him a "museum piece." Now he waits not too patiently for his back to heal so that he can get back to another aircraft carrier-though he insists there'll never be another Yorktown-and to some unfinished business with Japs. Strangely, though the two Davis sons often were in the same general area in the Pacific, they met for the first time after the start of the war at their home in North Carolina. The nearest they came to each other was in the Coral Cea, and each knew the other was nearby. But there were more pressing things on hand that day than brotherly

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

BANK AND BUSINESS REF-ERENCES REQUIRED FROM EVERY ADVERTISER SEEK-ING CAPITAL THROUGH ADVERTISEMENTS IN THE STAR UNDER BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

Advertisers in the Business Opportunities columns of The Star seeking capital must furnish one bank and two business references. Announcements must also pass The Star's general rules of acceptability, which are framed to exclude all misleading, questionable or otherwise objectionable statements. While The Star does everything within its power to safeguard readers against the fraudulent, independent investigation should be made before definite closing of negotiations.

In order that sufficient time may be allowed for investigation such advertisements for The Sunday Star cannot be accepted later than 11 p.m. Thursday.

The Republican increase has something to cheer about! Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, in the center of that inverted V formation on the Capitol steps, leads the new Republican members of the 78th Congress in a pre-convening cheer. It was Representative Martin who hailed it from the rostrum as the Victory Congress.

Representative Will Rogers, jr., brings a great American name to the new Congress. Son of the late humorist whose home State of Cklahoma honors him in Statuary Hall, Lt. Rogers is shown getting down to business as a Democratic member of the House from California.

The man on the bridge of that nameless but renowned Yankee battle-ship! Capt. Thomas Leigh Gatch looks to sea from his history-making ship before setting out from Pearl Harbor to knock down 32 Jap planes in his first scrap, and in the next to sink four warships including three cruisers. You could believe the skipper foresees things.

The two ladies of the new Republican strength in the House. Representative Clare Booth Luce (left), the playwright from Connecticut, and Representative Winifred C. Stanley, from New York, only new women members of the Congress, do a bit of sight-seeing from the Capital steps.

They presented those Christmas bombs to the Wake Island Japs. Admiral Chester W. Nimitz pins the Distinguished Flying Cross on Col. William A. Matheny (dark glasses) of Spokane, Wash., leader of the attack, and Maj. J. E. Coxwell (right) of Billings, Mont., at Hickam Field, T. H., after the low-level plastering in which not a plane was lost.

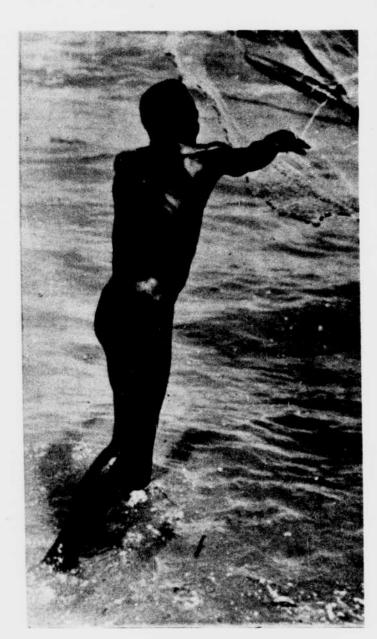

Hard-hitting Admiral William F. Halsey (left), whose closeness to the war doesn't dim his optimism, confers at his headquarters with Maj. Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift, leader of American forces of occupation in the Solomons. The commander of our South Pacific naval forces sees victory this year. O. W. I. Director Elmer Davis hopes he isn't too optimistic.

useful for conversion into powder bags. Wash them before turning them in. These pictures show how America's old silk stockings are reclaimed and processed on their rise to a more glorious service than they have known!

Here begins the process of making new silk out of old stockings. Cotton parts removed, they are being fed into a picking tender which shreds the material. This reclaiming of silk is another war triumph of American industry.

After picking, shredding and bleaching operations, the old stockings emerge as this white material. Here it is being fed into the breaker machine for conversion into thread.

And here's the silk thread as it emerges from the breaker machine which spins it. Next step is weaving the thread into the fabric of which those vital powder bags are made.

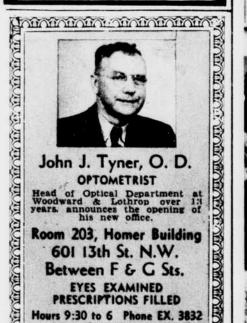

For the primer cap, at the breech end of the powder bag, the new silk fabric from the old stockings is cut into the circles which this ordnance plant worker is stitching. Fifteen pairs of silk stockings provide sufficient cloth for Photos by Office of War Information an average size powder bag.

to base hospitals by the use of ambulance planes is giving medical science a big advantage in lifesaving in this war. To provide for this on a greater scale the Air Evacuation Forces have been organized and the only school of its kind established at Bowman Field, near Louisville, Ky., to train its three types of personnel. These are the doctors and the nurses, who must learn the new twists medicine takes at high altitudes, and the medical technicians who pinch hit for the doctors on the flights. Above is the interior of a hospital plane as a nurse and technician make patients comfortable during a training period at Bowman Field.

Dressed in her altitude flight costume, Lt. Mae Olson, Army nurse of the Air Evacuation Forces, is helped aboard a big ambulance plane by Pvt. John Lupo at Bowman Field. Many of the girls at the school have been air line nurses. Age limits are 20 to 32 years and they can't weigh more than 135 pounds. They must be physically fit and stiff calisthenics keep them that way. Any of the Army's new transport planes can be rigged up in a jiffy as a stretcher

The Air Forces need thousands of WAAC members

TO HELP WITH GROUND DUTIES

Those clear-eyed pilots who zoom up to guard our skies, those bombardiers in the mighty Fortresses, those prowling eagles leading the offensive . . . back of them are ground crews, and radio intelligence, and supply clerks. And now, some of these vital duties are to be done by women - alert, nimble-fingered, disciplined members of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps.

The WAAC has scores of duties for the Air Forces: rigging parachutes, repairing the carefully-guarded bombsights, typing reports, weather observing, drafting, radio repair, radio operating, truck and tractor driving, photography, gunsight maintenance, welding, and glider instructing.

These are only a few examples of the type of

The beauty of the former Danish square-rigger Danmark, now a Coast Guard training ship, separates her from war as she moves through southern waters under full sail. But the young cadets who look aloft on her fair spread of canvas feel the hot breath of war. They are training to man the fighting Coast Guard cutters and the Nation's transports of war. Aboard the Danmark they learn about ships and the sea. U.S. Coast Guard Photo.
