

Outstanding Youths in Army Get Chance at College March 1

Procedure Outlined for Training of As Many as 150,000 by End of 1944

By NELSON M. SHEPARD.

Pvt. John Doe is going back to college to be a soldier-student in uniform—or so he reasonably hopes. Starting March 1 and gradually increasing in numbers, about 50,000 other soldiers of special aptitudes will be undergoing some form of technical or basic college training at the Army's expense this year. By the end of 1944, with the training program operating in high gear, perhaps as many as 150,000 men in uniform will have hit the trail back to campus to fit themselves for some special Army assignment.

When their schooling is ended, most of those who make the grade will return to active military service to become technical sergeants. Many others, there are ample reasons to believe, will prove themselves acceptable as candidates for officer commissions.

Our particular Pvt. Doe, who has just exchanged his campus slacks for a military uniform or sophomore year, perhaps, may think himself a likely candidate for the Army's specialized training program. In camp he will have ample opportunity to find out.

Basic Training First.

First tip to Pvt. Doe is for him either to come equipped with or write to his deans for a record of his college credits. That will help to expedite things.

First real hurdle to take in filling his ambition is to demonstrate leadership and solidarity qualities during his 13 weeks of basic military training in camp. For no soldier is sent back to college, except in rare exceptional cases, until he completes this initial period of soldiering.

If Pvt. Doe is endowed with certain qualifications to merit specialized training, a "screening" board of classification experts will examine him, stamp him "approved" and send him back to college for a prescribed course of fixed duration. These "screening" boards will function at every camp in the continental United States and where there are none, traveling boards will serve to meet the situation.

In fact, Pvt. Doe, once he has returned to college, will be "screened" at the end of each 12-week quarter or term by none other than the dean and his civilian college professors. If he flunks out, back he goes to camp to resume the trials and tribulations of an enlisted man in military training. Otherwise, the reward of good scholarship and aptitude is advancement to another term.

Why all this fuss and bother to give thousands of soldiers technical and professional training when there's fighting to be done on an ever widening scale?

Skilled Technicians Lacking.

Last May, when the Army numbered 4,000,000 men, Lt. Gen. Brehon Somervell, commander of the Service of Supplies, made the startling disclosure that it lacked approximately 838,000 skilled technicians. Something had to be done about it and done quickly. The Manpower Commission has helped but the Army, itself, limited in its own facilities for specialized training and hard pressed for time in turning out fighters, resolved to utilize the existing facilities of the Nation's colleges and universities. Now, with the tremendous expansion program of the Army, the need for skilled technicians is greater than before—hence the Army specialized training program.

There is about to open for the soldier-student a wide range of technical and professional courses. Engineering courses will begin first, with other types of training expected to be under way by April 1.

The bulk of the men to be trained will be students in some field of engineering, such as mechanical, chemical, electrical and civil. The second largest group will be in medicine. There will also be courses in psychology, with training directed toward classification work. A fourth group will take "foreign area" studies for soldiers with a liberal arts background, credits in international relations and a knowledge of at least one foreign language.

To Serve in Freed Territory.

The soldiers assigned to "foreign area" studies will become liaison officers to serve between the Army and foreign populations in captured territory, or in freed conquered countries. There will be the task of aiding in the rehabilitation of government and whole populations, in rendering relief and in feeding the starving until established civilian control is set up.

Then there will be another group of soldier-students—men with special advanced qualifications in scientific training who will never be expected to render active military duty.

"All wars produce some men who reach the top outside of military activities," explained Col. Herman Beukema, former West Point professor, who has been appointed director of the specialized training program.

Of such a type developed in the first World War, he noted, is Dr. Robert Andrews Millikan, world renowned physicist and Nobel Prize winner.

Col. Beukema explained for the Pvs. John Does of the Army how the college program will work in a typical and important individual case.

Take for example, he said, a freshman in sanitary engineering—and the Army has urgent need for lots of them.

Spends Service to Army.

If he stays in college and graduates in the shortened, accelerated curriculum institutions have adopted for the duration, he would then go into the Army. After 13 weeks of basic military training he would go to an Officer Candidate School for another 13 weeks.

"He wouldn't be available to the Army as a sanitary engineer until the lapse of a full three years, or 12 quarters," Col. Beukema said. If he is drafted and trained under the new program, he would be available in eight quarters.

Pvt. Doe isn't being sent to college to get an academic degree—he can get that after the war, maybe. The training is for undergraduates, only, and next year it is expected to be extended to include qualified high school graduates.

Major emphasis on training at the basic or freshman level, will be on physics and mathematics. Second to these subjects will be American history, utilitarian English (including one term of scientific writing) and world geography, with due emphasis on its dynamic aspects.

Branch Into Specialties.

After completing the basic level, Col. Beukema explained, those students selected for further instruction will concentrate on their specialties in engineering, medicine, psychology and foreign areas.

In 1918 under the Army Student Training Corps, college students were put in uniform. In 1943 the Army is putting the soldier-student in uniform. There is a distinct difference.

So, when Pvt. Doe goes back to college, he will find out he is still a soldier under strict military discipline. Reveille will be at 6:30 a. m., taps at 10:30 p. m. When taps is sounded he will be ready enough to call it a day.

He won't fall into a soft berth for the duration—as many no doubt are inclined to believe. His weekly schedule of approximately 60 hours will be somewhat harder than that of the average civilian collegian.

Here it is: Twenty-four hours in classroom and laboratory, 24 hours of supervised study assigned to be done outside the class, six hours of Army supervised physical training and five hours of military drill.

But all work and no play would even make the most ambitious Pvt. Doe a dull drudge. Somehow or other, he will be able to squeeze into this high-pressure weekly schedule an hour of leisure a day. On Saturdays, in midafternoon, he will be free to take a quick trip out of town, perhaps, or drop in at the nearest USO.

Furlough for Each Quarter.

The real vacation period, however, comes at the end of each 12 weeks—a week's furlough before the start of the next quarter. Many colleges now start the next quarter term the day following the end of the previous one, leaving perhaps a month between the spring graduation and the beginning of the summer term.

Pvt. Doe may have been "tops" in athletics during his college days. But in the new role of soldier-student, he won't be permitted to engage in intercollegiate sports on the college team. He simply wouldn't be able to spare the time out for varsity training, Col. Beukema said, and the War Department decision on such participation is an emphatic "no."

His physical training, however, will include some phases of competitive intramural sports. He will run several miles a day, hurdle the inevitable Army "obstacle" course, box, wrestle and learn a thing or two about rough and tumble, hand-to-hand fighting.

How long Pvt. Doe remains in college training depends entirely on the course to which he is assigned. The shortest course is mechanical engineering—a matter of six quarters of 12 weeks each. Electrical and civil engineering, for instance, will require seven quarters. If he is chosen as a "foreign area" student, he may expect to remain anywhere from six months to 15 months before going back to a military unit.

Regular Faculty Teachers.

When he reports to college for training, he will be turned over to the dean and faculty on the same basis as any other student transferred from another institution. His record, his intelligent quotient, his showing in Army tests and a transcript of his previous college record will go with him.

Except for his uniform and Army discipline and supervision, he will be much like any other student on the campus. His teachers will be for the most part regular members of the college faculty. Only the small part of his training that is definitely military will be done by Army personnel.

What he gets out of his college training depends mostly on himself. If he goes through with flying colors, the Army will have a better soldier and Pvt. Doe may have a reasonable chance to attach a lieutenant's bar on his shoulder at a later date.

It is a wrong impression to think that the Army specialized training program is being initiated with the sole aim of furnishing future officers. Selectees with advanced college training, for the most part, will be among those more likely to be sent direct to officer candidate schools. The soldiers with one or two years college training are the ones more apt to be sent back to college—to take their chances later at becoming officers.

Italian Leaders Quit Jobs, Rome Discloses

By the Associated Press.

The resignations of several important undersecretaries of the Italian government, including Gen. Antonio Scuro of the War Office, were announced yesterday in a Berlin broadcast quoting an official Rome dispatch. The Associated Press recorded the broadcast.

Others resigning included Michele Pascolato, undersecretary of agriculture, who was in charge of food rationing, and Sergio Nannini, who was in charge of reclamation.

Mussolini shook up his cabinet a week ago, when he ousted all but three of its members.

Brig. Gen. Antonio Sorice was appointed to succeed Gen. Scuro in the War Office. Other new appointments were undersecretaries in the Ministry of Agriculture, Carlo Fabozzi and the Duke di Spadafora, succeeding National Councilors Nannini and Pascolato.

Two Die in Bomber Crash in Colorado

By the Associated Press.

PUEBLO, Colo., Feb. 13.—Two crewmen were killed and a third was seriously injured in the crash of a four-motored bomber at the Pueblo Army Air Force base last night, the base public relations office disclosed.

The dead: First Lt. H. L. Eiler, St. Louis, the pilot, and Sgt. H. E. Sines, Westerville, Ohio.

In the base hospital is Lt. G. J. Hallaby, Brooklyn.

Text of President Roosevelt's Address on War Plans

The text of President Roosevelt's address last night follows:

"GREAT AND DECISIVE ACTIONS . . ."—President Roosevelt is shown as he spoke last night at the dinner of the White House Correspondents' Association...

It is nearly two years since I attended the last dinner of the White House Correspondents' Association. A great deal of water has flowed over the dam since then.

Two years ago—many months before Pearl Harbor—I spoke to you of the thought that was then uppermost in our minds—the determination of America to become the arsenal of democracy...

Tonight as I speak to you another thought is uppermost in my mind. This is our determination to fight this war through to the finish—to the day when United Nations' forces march in triumph through the streets of Berlin, Rome and Tokio...

I have seen our men—the Nation's men—in Trinidad, in Belem and Natal in Brazil...

In these places there is no actual fighting, but there is hard, dangerous, essential work...

I could not deny to our troops that a few chiselers, a few politicians and a few publicists—fortunately a very few—have placed their personal ambition or greed above the Nation's interests...

Our troops know that the Nazis and Fascists and Japanese are trying hard to sell the untruths of propaganda to certain types of Americans...

A fundamental of an effective peace is the assurance to those men who are fighting our battles when they come home they will find a country with an economy firm enough and fair enough to provide jobs for all those who are willing to work...

Because of the necessary secrecy of my trip, the men of our armed forces in every place I visited were completely surprised...

I wish that I could pay similar surprise visits to our men in the other fields of operation—the naval bases, the islands of the Pacific...

In North Africa we are now massing armies—British, French and American—for one of the major battles of this war...

The enemy's purpose in the battle of Tunisia is to hold at all costs their last bridgehead in Africa to prevent us from gaining access to the straits that lead to Nazi-dominated Europe...

The battle of Tunisia will cost us heavily in casualties. We must face that fact now, with the same calm courage as our men are facing it on the battlefield itself.

The enemy has strong forces in strong positions. His supply lines are maintained at great cost, but Hitler has been willing to pay that cost for his unrelenting determination of Allied victory in Tunisia.

These consequences are actual invasions of the continent of Europe. We do not disguise our intention to make these invasions. The pressure on Germany and Italy will be constant and unrelenting...

There are still a few who say we cannot achieve this and other honorable, reasonable aims for the postwar world. In speaking of these professional skeptics—these men of little faith—there comes to my mind a word used in our language—the word "pettifoggers"...

The formal dictionary definition and derivation of the word are neither here nor there. To most of us it brings to mind a man who is small and mean and tricky and picaresque—and in a word—petty. It is the type of man who is always seeking to create a smoke screen or fog for the purpose of obscuring the plain truth...

Today the pettifoggers are attempting to obscure the essential truths of this war. They are seeking to befool the present and the future and the clear purposes and high principles for which the free world now maintains the promise of undimmed victory...

In North Africa we are now massing armies—British, French and American—for one of the major battles of this war...

Hint From Moscow. In his address at last night's dinner of the White House Correspondents' Association, the President seemed to place special emphasis on his determination that the principles of the Atlantic Charter must be given world-wide application after the war.

"The right of self-determination included in the Atlantic Charter," he said, "does not carry with it the right of any government to commit wholesale murder or the right to make slaves of its own people or of any other peoples in the world."

discussions therefore is recommended to all persons interested in the problems of the age, the issues which must be settled constructively if the future is to be brighter than the past.

Allied Offensive. Winston Churchill rarely holds out false hopes. Therefore we may take at approximately face value his assurance to the House of Commons that the extended conferences at Casablanca had evolved a master plan for a detailed Allied offensive pattern during the balance of the present year.

The European continent, from Norway to Sicily and from the Pyrenees to the Ukraine, today form a gigantic Axis fortress. The Red armies are battering destructively at its eastern border, but Anglo-American bombers must be delivered at other segments if the structure is to collapse rapidly.

Axis circles are frankly worried at the prospect. Adolf Hitler's special mouthpiece, the Voelkischer Beobachter, admits that an Allied attack on continental Europe "appears very possible," and goes so far as to predict that the main drive will come in Western France, where Germany maintains "important submarine bases."

Once the Axis is expelled from Tunisia, an invasion of demoralized Italy looks easy on the map. But Italy is merely a junior partner of Germany, from which it is separated by rugged mountains. An Allied conquest of Italy therefore might be a dead-end road rather than the springboard for a fatal thrust at the Axis' heart.

An Allied invasion of the Balkans offers larger strategic possibilities, especially in conjunction with continued Russian offensives. Axis distasters on the eastern front are throwing the Balkans into increasing ferment. Unlike Italy, the Balkan peninsula affords direct avenues to the heart of Central Europe.

The United Nations intend to carry hostilities to the Axis enemies wherever they may be found. President Roosevelt has said as much on several recent occasions.

Lord Macaulay, so long ago as 1830, summed up the democratic conception of the efficiency of debate when he declared: "Men are never so likely to settle a question rightly as when they discuss it freely."

Using language not much different, the Greeks probably announced their expedition against Troy in 1193 B.C. Agamemnon was commander in chief.

The entire host of 100,000 men and 1,186 ships assembled in the harbor of Aulis. Here, while they were sacrificing under a plane-tree, a snake darted out from under the altar and ascended the tree, and there, after devouring a brood of eight young sparrows and the mother bird herself, was turned into stone.

Other classic invasions included those of the Persians into Hellenic territory—Darius, defeated at Marathon in 490; Xerxes, at Salamis and Plataea, 479. Then followed the campaign of Alexander which overthrew the Persian monarchy and took the Macedonians as far from home as Egypt and India, 334-331; Hannibal's drive from Spain through France and over the Alps into Italy, 218, and the two attacks of Julius Caesar upon Britain, 55 and 54. Each of those tremendous enterprises involved vast expenditure of sweat and blood. The same observation may be made with equal reason respecting the Crusades, beginning in 1095 and continuing for three centuries. It was largely in retaliation for the operations of the Moors in the Mediterranean area that the Christians sought to recapture the Holy Sepulchre.

The Norman invasion of England under William the Conqueror in 1066, on the other hand, was a political activity relatively inexpensive. A single battle—Hastings, where Harold was slain—decided the issue. Repeated attempts to reverse the process—Edward III's and Henry V's efforts to subjugate France in 1349 and 1415—came to nothing in the end.

As for the Western Hemisphere, the incursion of Cortez into Mexico in 1519 and Pizarro into Peru in 1524 are well remembered, yet the average American likes to think that Abraham Lincoln was correct when he affirmed at Springfield in 1837: "All the armies of Europe, Asia and Africa combined, with all the treasure of the earth (our own excepted) in their military chest, with a Bonaparte for a commander, could not by force take a drink from the Ohio or make a track on the Blue Ridge in a trial of a thousand years."

Postwar Air Policy. The House Rules Committee may, if it will, take a long step toward the development of a postwar aviation policy for the United States. The committee is considering a special rule for action on the Nichols resolution, calling for a standing committee of the House on aviation.

In peace, as in the present war, the airplane is destined to play an all important part. The potentialities of air transportation are almost limitless. The development of huge transport planes has been hastened during the present military operations. This development will continue for commercial aviation.

Speaking in the National Radio Forum Wednesday night, Representative Nichols of Oklahoma, Democrat, sponsor of the proposed new House committee, and Representative Clare Boothe Luce of Connecticut, Republican, joined in a demand that America prepare for the sure competition among the nations which is coming in the commercial aviation field. Time is of the essence, as Mrs. Luce pointed out.

The problem is complex, with several important angles. Mr. Nichols mentioned three. How far, he asked, will this country be willing to share with other nations the world air trade. The United States, for war purposes, has developed a huge airplane production capacity—far greater than any other nation. It will be in a position to transform this war production capacity to a peacetime capacity for commercial uses.

Mr. Nichols said that an "interested group of liberals in the administration" already is at odds with businessmen and conservative officials over these problems. America's great transportation systems, railroad, motor truck, shipping and more recently, air transportation, have been developed by private enterprise—sometimes with Government assistance and supervision, but without Government control and operation. To make commercial aviation in the future a Government operation would be unwise, inefficient and throw it into the field of politics.

Obviously there must be freedom for foreign airplanes to land in American airports, if the planes of America are to fly to the airports of those nations. Freedom of the seas has meant the use of our ports by foreign vessels. Stringent laws, however, have prevented the entry of foreign shipping into the domestic water-carrying trade of this country.

Other laws have defined how foreign shipping may enter and use American ports. Beyond a doubt such laws will govern the use of American airports by foreign airplanes. "Freedom of the air," a loose phrase at best, should never become a license to fly indiscriminately over American territory or into American ports. There are military reasons, as well as commercial, against such a thing.

As Mr. Nichols and Mrs. Luce have said, it will be too late to tackle these problems after the peace comes. It will be too late to develop the great commercial airplanes the country needs, if the plans have not been made and put partly into operation before the war ends. Other nations already are looking toward the vast air trade of the future.

In the old National League struggle, the outstanding combination was Tinker to Evers to Chance. In the present United Nations League, better results are obtained by eliminating the tinker and leaving nothing to chance.

Stake horses sometimes develop from the ranks of selling platers, by improvement. Nowadays if a selling plater gets worse instead of better, he may still wind up as a stake horse.

Discusses Europe's Minority Problems

Aspirations of Small States Held Source of Future Wars Unless Wisely Settled

By Blair Bolles. Under the blanket of war the seeds of possible future wars are sprouting in Europe, which today, just as before 1939, is beset by the ancient minority problems that long have kept the continent in upheaval.

Undersecretary of State Welles yesterday forced attention on the general problem of postwar arrangements in his speech in New York marking the opening of the United Nations month. He urged that the major powers agree to "lose no present opportunity for understanding between us as to the manner in which these great principles for which we strive shall be translated into reality when the victory is ours."

One of the hard legacies of the victors will be the need for making decisions at the peace conference on whether Hungary or Rumania has the better claim on Transylvania, whether Greece or Yugoslavia or Bulgaria should get the major share of Macedonia and whether Eastern Poland is more Russian than Polish.

Is Finland just in claiming territory that Russia claims? Would the nationalistic inhabitants of the Baltic states be happy in the Soviet Union? Should Southern Albania be a Greek province? In all these regions nationality interests clash. The Albanians of Epirus are uneasy neighbors of the Greeks of Epirus. Macedonia is a tempest pot because the different nationalities in Macedonia are rivals for Macedonia's mastery.

Out of these small rivalries grow great conflicts and wars. At the core of these problems is a consideration little talked about these days—ethnology. President Wilson made the "self-determination of peoples" one of his 14 points. He thought justice and peace would be served if each of the many nationalities in Europe were given a country of its own in which its national spirit could thrive.

This ethnological approach to peace—which was diluted at Versailles by many other thoughts—did not prevent war, but national yearnings are still so strong in Europe that to make a stable peace without considering them apparently will be impossible. The complex problem of Yugoslavia, for instance, is heightened in its complications by the frustration of the nationality feelings of one of the three Yugoslav peoples—the Slovenes.

The nationality drive of the Slovenes has survived centuries of repression and vicissitude. The fact that small nations can retain so ardently for so long their sense of their own distinction is what makes these nationality yearnings a very practical problem for the fashions of peace.

Until 1918 Slovenia, in the northern corner of Yugoslavia now, was a part of the Austro-Hungarian empire. The collapse of that empire was regarded as a day of deliverance by the Slovenes, who then looked forward to an era of nationalistic freedom within the partnership of Yugoslavia—the kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes.

But all the high hopes were not realized. During most of the period between 1918 and 1920, when the province was a large segment of Slovenia, known as the Julian March, was the property of Italy, gained by the treaty of Rapallo of November 12, 1920. From that day to this the Slovenes and Italians have disagreed about which people dominate numerically in this region at the head of the Adriatic Sea.

An Italian census in 1927 which reported that 51 per cent of the population there was Italian was challenged by Slovenes, who complained that the statistics lacked impartiality. The Slovenes held that Yugoslav—Croats and Serbs as well as Slovenes—were in the majority. The whole region in 1927 had a population of 991,363, and a Slovene writer, Dr. Lavo Cermej, estimated the Yugoslav members of it at 550,000.

This is the typical minority dispute—the conflict over the nationality nature of an area. The Italians of Austria-Lombardy before Italy's unification complained that they were oppressed by Vienna. The Slovenes of the Julian March protested just as loudly that they were oppressed by the Italians. Most of the place names in the region in 1926 were Slovene. Italy Italianized them. Zabec became Villa Grotte di Dante. Italian officials discouraged Slovene parents from giving their children Slovene names. A father named his child Gorazd, but the Italian registrar wrote it Gerardo.

The Slovenes felt that the Italians allowed them an inadequate voice in public affairs, that their press was discriminated against, that their social structure built around clubs was threatened, that their church structure was dominated by Italians and that the economic position of the Slovene in Italy was worse than that of the Italians in the same area.

Slovene-Americans not long ago adopted a resolution and sent it to Washington in which they said: "We join the Slovenians of Slovenia and those who have long been in Fascist Italy and Nazi Austria in their passionate aspirations for a united Slovenia after the conclusion of the current war."

The Slovenes hope that their sufferings in this war will be soothed after the war by a settlement of the problem of the Julian March. The pressure of events may force the American Government to take some notice of Europe's territorial problems before the war is actually over, although the policy here now is to stay aloof from all conference questions of what exactly will be done when the fire ceases.

The Julian March is discussed because it is only one of a dozen spots in Europe where the same problem exists. One nationality is buffeted by a second, and the second fears that the first will buffet it if the sovereignty of the territory changes hands. The time probably is not here for a decision about who is going to own the Julian March, but the time seems ripe for a declaration of principle about the disposition of such areas which goes further and makes a more precise statement than the Atlantic Charter.

Too Costly. From the Providence (R. I.) Evening Bulletin. It has become a truism in our modern age that the civilization of this shrunken and highly interdependent earth cannot afford to live through another peace like the last one.

THIS AND THAT

By Charles E. Tracewell.

"Dear Sir: "HOME FRONT." This is to let you know how very much I appreciate your column. I have a feeding station on the window sill, and thought you might like to hear about my mockingbird, which has been coming to it for about seven years.

"I am certain it must be the same bird, as he has the same habits. He is very smart. During the very cold weather he likes to drink the hot water which is emptied out of the automobile radiator. The minute he sees you let the water out of the radiator he goes right after it.

"Also, he likes to sit on the car bumper in front of the radiator, as he has discovered it is warm there. He looks very cute, sitting there. This particular bird never gets a mate until the middle of February, but during the warm spell recently he acquired a friend, so now I have two to feed raisins, which is the only thing he will eat.

"I use wildbird seed mixture, which I get from a seed store, peanuts and raisins. I usually have from three to five bluejays, one pair of cardinals and the mockingbird. Of course, I have lots of sparrows, but the mockingbird chases the sparrows away, for which I am glad, as they are no favorites of mine.

"Mr. Tracewell, your column is so nice. I wish all the school children would be given it to read for homework, as I think it would do them good. They seem to have so little appreciation for lawns, trees and wild life these days.

"Sincerely, A. D. R." The mockingbird is one of the few species which seems to have enough common sense to seek warmth.

Others are the starlings and the English sparrows. We will never forget seeing a couple of old starlings perched on a chimney. They had their tails hanging out and their heads poked over the opening.

In this way they managed to get a breath of warm air, and this no doubt helped them all day long. The wild creatures seem to be able to store up experiences, and the benefits therefrom in a way which is lost to human beings. That is, the good they derive in a few moments lasts them all day. Maybe man is going to force himself to rediscover this ability as a result of war deprivations.

Cats which are kept mostly outdoors seem to get as much satisfaction out of a brief roll on the rug as house-bound cats do from lying there all day long.

English sparrow too has this gift. Ordinarily they do not mind rain, but now and then seek the shelter of an overhang on the porch.

There they perch and chirp away for a few minutes. This seems to be all the shelter they

Q. What is the highest skyscraper outside New York City?—L. N. D. A. The Cleveland Terminal Tower, which has 52 stories and is 708 feet high.

Q. Was Socrates tried by a jury?—E. L. Z. A. The trial took place before a dikastery, or court of citizen-judges, similar to our present-day jury. The number of members present, however, is variously recorded at 500, 501, 557 and 567.

Q. Which of Chief Justice Marshall's sons was killed during a storm at the time of his father's death?—B. S. K. A. Thomas Marshall was killed by bricks blown from a chimney in Baltimore while hastening to his father's deathbed.

Q. Will a young woman, not quite 21 years of age, have to pay income tax?—H. H. A. An individual, although a minor and single, is required to file an income tax return if his gross income is $800 or over.

Q. When was the Pope first referred to as "Vicar of Christ"?—A. McA. A. Pope Innocent III is said to have been the first to describe the Pope as the "Vicar of Christ," using the following words: "Prominent over all since he is the Vicar of Him whose is the earth and the fullness thereof, the whole wide world and all that dwell therein."

Q. Which requires the greater amount of energy in a day's work, typewriting or ditch-digging?—R. F. S. A. It has been stated that when the effort required to strike a typewriter key is multiplied by the thousands of key depressions a day, the total effort is actually greater than that required in eight hours of ditch-digging.

Q. What proportion of the people of this country have speech defects?—Y. N. C. A. The United States Public Health Service says that one-half to 1 per cent of the entire population of the United States have speech defects. The majority of these are young children.

Q. What distance does Skyline Drive, in Virginia, extend?—D. C. J. A. The Skyline Drive, in Virginia, is the name applied to the road from Front Royal to the southern boundaries of the Shenandoah National Park. This drive is 96.9 miles long.

Q. What does the word "Ataturk" mean when used in connection with the name of the late Mustafa Kemal?—A. M. R. A. It means "chief Turk."

Q. Is Alexei Tolstoy related to Leo Tolstoy?—S. J. P. A. Alexei Tolstoy, one of Soviet Russia's living writers, is not related to Count Leo Tolstoy the novelist.

Q. What became of the Mayflower which carried the Pilgrims to America?—T. L. R. A. It is impossible to say with any degree of certainty since little information is available concerning the fate of the historic ship. There is an unsubstantiated story that after rotting at the wharves for many years, the timber from the Mayflower was used to build a country inn.

Elder Spiles. He knows the sun has only recently turned on a fiery heel to come this way, Yet he must go down to the lower field, Where silent creek is fringed with icy spray;

Where cardinal upon a crimson song, Weaves in and out of shadows winter thinned, And where around each naked elder bush Boldly cavorts the rowdy northern wind.

He knows what parts of elders make best spiles. . . Toughest by elements, yet velvety inside, With deftness he removes the pith, To form a spout for sap grown sugary;

And as he whittles, song is on his lips, As though now touched by spring's soft fingertips. ROSE MYRA PHILLIPS.

Letters to the Editor

Propose Cutting in Half Present Number of Paydays. To the Editor of The Star: It seems to me that the Federal Government could save a great deal by paying its employes monthly instead of every two weeks. I do not know how much it costs to make out all the checks on the Federal payroll, but I imagine it to be a rather expensive process.

Some may say that if you pay people only once a month they will spend it too fast and will run out of funds before the end of the month. I maintain that any one with enough intelligence to work for Uncle Sam should be able to manage his finances on a monthly basis. CECIL BARNES, Jr.

Columnist's Criticism Rouses Defense of Administration. To the Editor of The Star: David Lawrence in his column Saturday, February 6, reaches the conclusion that "the Roosevelt administration . . . has finally had its chance to control completely the Nation's economy and has made a mess out of it."

The first of these is a proposal made by Senator Gillette that the Atlantic Charter be ratified so as to become a legal treaty. There is much confusion on this charter. It was endorsed by Russia, Britain, the exiled governments and by the United States. Yet the interpretation of that indorsement is not clear. A treaty affirming "the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they live" would be a great foundation upon which to stand.

It is not necessary to defend every policy of the administration; there obviously have been blunders made in the execution of such a tremendous task, but the inescapable fact is that in one year this country has achieved total conversion to war production with the civilian economy cut to the bone, a record unequalled anywhere, any time. This accomplishment hardly supports Mr. Lawrence's conclusion that the administration has made a "mess out of it."

Objects to Exiled King Zog As Restored Ruler of Albania. To the Editor of The Star: I was amused by the letter published signed by the "Acting Representative of Albania," whatever that may mean.

To begin with, and in accordance with official pronouncements of the Department of State, Zog is but the ex-King of Albania and, as such, he has no right to have any representative anywhere, least of all in the United States.

By what right, then, can the person signing the letter present himself as "Representative of Albania"? Secondly, this so-called "representative" makes some very startling statements. He tells us, for instance, that his master issued a proclamation about a year ago in which he stated that, at the end of this war, Albania is going to benefit by his rule which is going to be thoroughly democratized.

What I wish to point out is something that is known to all who have taken any interest in Albania in the past 15 years. The point is that in the course of this period, and until he was thrown out of power by Mussolini himself—because he had ceased to be of any further use to the Italian dictator—ex-King Zog acted as the oppressor of his people under the thumb rule of Rome. Now, suppose that all the kindred Quislings of Europe, among whom Zog was the first to act in that capacity, similarly were to be kicked out of power, take shelter elsewhere and then proclaim

WISHFULLY WAITING.

Next Blow Seen Aimed At Japan

President's Speech Indicates Job Can Be Done in Year

By DAVID LAWRENCE.

There is evidence that America's war against Japan is to be stepped up sharply. The advocates of a large-scale effort against the Japanese may not have attained all they desired out of the Casablanca conference, but it is apparent that much more attention is to be given to the Pacific than heretofore.

When President Roosevelt said in his Friday night speech that "before this year is out, it will be made known to the world—in action rather than in words—that the Casablanca conference produced plenty of news," he was refuting an impression of disappointment that prevailed in some quarters. What Mr. Roosevelt now says—namely, that it will be "had news for the Germans and Italians—and the Japanese"—means that the plan to take the offensive against Japan has crystallized.

Since the Casablanca conference, British and American generals have visited Chungking to discuss strategy with Gen. Chiang Kai-shek. Secretary Knox denied and then the President also repudiated the idea that our plan is to proceed on an island-by-island basis in the Pacific. This is but another way of confirming that our procedure will be to strike major blows at Japan at her most vulnerable lines of defense.

Many Ways to Strike.

There are many ways to strike at Japan—from China by air, and from the various island bases we are acquiring, and by naval carriers which shall strike at Japan's vital supply depots. In due time, these movements of our forces will be revealed, and it is indicated that the war of nerves has begun to be imposed on the Tokyo crowd.

They do not know from which point the attack will come. It may even come some day from the Siberian area, in the event that Russia feels herself strong enough in Europe to take on the Japanese in the Far East. It would not be necessary for the Russians to enter the war, but merely to take the risks of war by affording opportunities to Allied airmen to transport materials and planes to certain strategic points. Benevolent neutrality, such as Turkey has embarked upon, would be a tremendous factor in the ultimate success of our campaign in the Pacific.

Perhaps the biggest piece of news revealed in the last 24 hours in relation to the Pacific is the statement made first by Prime Minister Churchill, and confirmed by President Roosevelt, that Britain has pledged herself to help with all her might in the Pacific when once Hitler and Mussolini are crushed in Europe.

News by Indirection.

This promise is news by indirection. For several months talk has been heard in Washington that it was all right to say that the war in Europe comes first and that Hitler must be beaten ahead of all other tasks, but wouldn't the British people be tired and be inclined to insist on demobilization of the armed services instead of pitching in and helping us to defeat Japan?

This question has been supplemented also by the frequently heard suggestion that, however earnest the British government itself might be about continuing the war at top speed, there would be an inevitable slowing down inside the British Army, Navy and Air Forces and a tendency to relax, especially because of a belief that the United States has plenty of tools and men to finish up Japan herself.

The United States can defeat Japan without any help, but it will take five years to do the job, whereas with the co-operation of the British naval and air forces it might be done in a year after Hitler is beaten and many American lives thus saved.

Meanwhile, it is agreed that the number one task is to beat the Axis in Europe, but it may well be asked whether the pledge given the President by the Prime Minister will be easy for any British cabinet to fulfill when once an armistice in Europe sweeps that continent and the war in the Far East seems so far off.

There is one compelling reason, however, why the British government will do its utmost to swing its public opinion in line. British prestige in Burma, China and the Malay Peninsula has ebbed considerably since the loss of Singapore and the surrounding territory. If Britain expects to be as close to Australia, too, in the future as in the past, she must play a vital part in winning the war against Japan.

For the time being, it may be assumed that more of our total production has been allocated for operations in the Pacific than heretofore and that, while the American Navy hasn't gotten all that it wanted, it has enough to make life miserable for the Japanese government and its slaves for at least the next 12 months.

GOP Leaders Call for the Campaign Slogan 'Down With the Bureaucrats and Deficits'

By GOULD LINCOLN.

"Down with the bureaucrats and deficits" will be the slogan of the GOP in next year's national campaign. At least that is the burden of important Lincoln Day addresses delivered this week end by Republicans leaders across the land.

Among the speakers were Wendell L. Willkie, the presidential nominee in 1940; Alf M. Landon, who carried the banner in 1936, and Representative "Joe" Martin of Massachusetts, House minority leader, and until recently chairman of the Republican National Committee.

From their remarks it is clear the GOP attacks upon the Democratic administration will charge above all that the country cannot hope for financial recovery after the war if New Dealers continue in control. New tax laws, it will be the charge, that the New Deal has built up a huge bureaucratic government, disdainful of Congress and constantly encroaching upon the fundamental rights of the American people.

Mr. Willkie's address particularly is significant—not only because he was the most recent Republican nominee for President, but because he will be knocking at the door for the nomination next year. Particularly it was a forward-looking document, well worth the consideration of the American people. It may make some of the more conservative Republicans, who still think in terms of high tariff duties, shudder. But it should inspire confidence among those who believe that this country must play its part, a co-operative part, in the post-war world, if the United States is to avoid a devastating depression.

Foresight and Courage.

The Hoosier-New Yorker has both foresight and courage. He has done much already to turn his party away from the old doctrine of isolationism, although that doctrine has as many lives as a cat and is dying hard. Looking into the future, Mr. Willkie now proposes that the party get away from its traditionally high tariff stand.

"Obviously," he said, "the sudden and uncompromising abolition of tariffs after the war could only result in disaster. But obviously, also, one of the freedoms to which we are fighting is freedom to trade. And if we are going to advocate freedom to trade we must recognize that this is a two-way proposition. We must bend our efforts to devise agreements and arrangements with other nations for the purpose of establishing that two-way flow."

Mr. Willkie contended the Republicans should not sit down under democratic criticisms that they are reactionary, concerned only with the erection of tariff walls high enough to make new millions, or to increase the profits of those already existing. It was Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock of Pennsylvania, the Democratic presidential nominee in 1880, who once declared that "the tariff is a logical affair." He was opposing the Republican theory of those days that the tariff was a national affair. Today, as Mr. Willkie and other Republicans are pointing out, the tariff is no longer a domestic or even a national issue. It is an international issue of grave importance to the United States and the new world which will arise after the war.

Noticeable in the addresses of Mr. Willkie, Mr. Landon and Representative Martin was an underlying theme for closer cooperation with the rest of the world. However, Mr. Landon was specific in denouncing the "handout" basis of co-operation, which he says the administration proposes. "America must help other nations to help themselves. Some sort of international role for this country is inevitable," he said—certainly a long distance from the isolationist days of Warren G. Harding.

Home Safety Course Teaches Danger Points to Watch

Do you know that oil rags, turpentine rags, paint rags, mops and polishing cloths may cause spontaneous combustion? Do you know that the flame of your electric washer should be grounded? Do you know that when you burn poison ivy and poison oak vines that you should stand clear of the smoke? Do you know that some dry-cleaning fluids are toxic, poisoning the system either through absorption through the skin or inhalation? Do you know that your gas range or your coal furnace is properly regulated and that if it is not, it may be releasing carbon monoxide gas in your home, and that even though the amount released may not be enough to cause a fever or direct illness it may be contributory to bad colds and other illnesses? These and many other interesting facts are brought out in home accident prevention courses conducted in various schools and church buildings throughout the District by the American Red Cross.

Indorsing this movement, Representative Paul Snider of Michigan recently stated in a letter to the local chapter of the Red Cross:

"I am glad to know of your excellent prevention program and would like to place a first aid in every home. It appears to me that this is a splendid idea and I wish you all success."

To make arrangements for classes and instruction in a way that will be most convenient for the public, readers are asked to fill out the following coupon and mail it to the American Red Cross, 3120 O Street N.W., Washington.

I am interested in attending a 9-hour accident-prevention course.

I am interested in taking a 20-hour course in first aid.

'I'd Rather Be Right'

Clare Boothe Luce and Wallace Seen Attempting To Escape the Present for 1949 'Globaloney'

By SAMUEL GRAFTON.

Clare Boothe's post-war world has an awful lot of airplanes in it. Everywhere you look, airplanes, airplanes shutting back and forth, and America in control of the skies, and England of the seas.

That is (in part) her vision of the future, and she invents the world "globaloney" to describe some of Henry Wallace's global dreams of milk for everybody. Somehow, to me, the picture of a mother feeding milk to her child, milk pure and plenty, seems rather less globaloney than the 2,000-horsepower turbine as dreamed up by Miss Boothe.

However, I am not prepared to choose between Miss Boothe's airplanes and Mr. Wallace's milk as the best prescription for 1949. Picking myself smartly on both cheeks, I come forward with a third position, to wit: Why don't both of you, my braves, stop escaping to the future and tell us what we ought to do right now, in 1943?

1943 Is Jibbering.

Neither Miss Boothe's airplanes nor Mr. Wallace's milk are going to mean very much in 1949, unless we make 1943 mean more than it means at present. Right now 1943 is jibbering. Its lips move in North Africa, but they are not forming intelligible words. It is grunting a kind of elaborate "no" to China. It is confirming the Indians in a policy of violence, a policy imposed on them and utterly uncharacteristic of them. Where 1943 does speak clearly, it sends in hollow tones that it intends Hong Kong to be British forever, and the East Indies Dutch ditto.

The entire war-aims debate has taken a turn for the worse. It is developing middle-age spread. The isolationist press is beginning to talk frankly about securing "victory's spoils." To Clare Boothe goes the doubtful honor of owning the first congressional voice to launch a campaign of imperialist rivalry with Britain, over the question of who shall dominate the air. She makes it a question of whether we shall control our own airfields, but that is obscurely; every child knows we shall control our own airfields; to dominate the airways we should have to control foreign airports, and no program could lead straighter to war than Miss Boothe's.

Meanwhile, the better spokesmen for war aims, too close to the administration for their own good, have been compromised by every administration compromise. They are now crowded back into a sterile, dreamy 1949. They are staring, with frightened eyes, over a stockade of years, at the incredible present, and while Miss Boothe proposes that we ride high above the probable miseries of 1949 in our air fleets, and while Mr. Wallace bids us get down among them with our milk, here is 1943, which chatters, through clicking-teeth, that we have no plans at all.

What's Going on Now?

That is what 1943 is saying, if it says anything, but I refuse to leave it for the summer pastures of 1949. I am stuck in 1943, and I intend to stay there; I won't budge out of it, until 1944, of course; a year to that I shall be equally partial when it arrives.

Don't we know what's going on in the world? That Chiang Kai-shek's administration, for example, is under great pressure, both economic and political; that he is sitting on top of a galloping inflation; that an increasing number of Chinese are saying to each other and themselves: "Now, look, we've been bleeding for six years, and what is this western alliance getting us?"

Under the circumstances, I would not want to be the one to say to Chiang: "Friend, which do you want for 1949, milk or air transport service? We've been talking it over, and we haven't been able quite to make up our minds."

Swedes Plan to Promote Relations With Americas

A Swedish committee to study and propose measures to promote better cultural and commercial relations with North and South America has been established in Stockholm under the aegis of the American-Swedish News Exchange announced today.

The chairman is Erik C. Boheman, secretary-general of the Swedish Foreign Office.

Moscow Aid Remembered.

Ankara has not forgotten that in the campaign of the late Ataturk Kemal for the establishment of the new Turkish republic in 1919-1923, the Moscow government had provided quantities of war material and replenished the treasury of the nationalist government with gold which enabled Kemal to purchase, subrosa, more war material from the Italians and the French.

These considerations, together with the definite promise of other United Nations governments that Turkey need not fear for her territorial integrity as long as she maintains her friendly neutral position, have nullified the attempts of the Nazi Ambassador to create distrust at Ankara against the United Nations.

But both in Spain and Turkey the spectacular and almost unbelievable victories of the Red armies have been a determining factor in the precarious neutral situation.

Neither Madrid nor Ankara was worried that the United Nations might force them into the war. But they were greatly concerned over the fact that if the Germans continued on the offensive on all fronts, Berlin might coerce them into joining the Axis. So long as the Russians were fighting a purely defensive action between the Don and Volga Rivers and the Allies were marking time, the German government was exercising a powerful pressure on these key neutrals.

This Changing World

German Armies of Thousands of 'Tourists' Hastily Withdrawn From Turkey and Spain

By CONSTANTINE BROWN.

Reports reaching Washington from Madrid and Ankara, the capitals of the two most important neutral states in Europe, indicate that the governments of Generalissimo Francisco Franco and President Ismet Inonu are leaning more heavily toward the Allies.

According to these reports, the thousands of "tourists" with hobnailed shoes, military bearing and Prussian haircuts have practically disappeared from Spain. They have crossed the Pyrenees into France where their presence in army uniforms may soon become very necessary.

The "commercial travelers" who have been infesting Turkey offering post-war goods manufactured in Germany, "after the Allies are crushed," have made an equally quick exit from Turkey back into Bulgaria. Some of their sample trunks, it is now revealed, contained objects other than Leipzig wares.

Ambassador Franz von Pappen is making an eleventh-hour effort to persuade the suspicious Turks that any association with the Allies would be fatal to Turkey since eventually she would be sacrificed to the USSR.

Moscow Aid Remembered.

Ankara has not forgotten that in the campaign of the late Ataturk Kemal for the establishment of the new Turkish republic in 1919-1923, the Moscow government had provided quantities of war material and replenished the treasury of the nationalist government with gold which enabled Kemal to purchase, subrosa, more war material from the Italians and the French.

These considerations, together with the definite promise of other United Nations governments that Turkey need not fear for her territorial integrity as long as she maintains her friendly neutral position, have nullified the attempts of the Nazi Ambassador to create distrust at Ankara against the United Nations.

But both in Spain and Turkey the spectacular and almost unbelievable victories of the Red armies have been a determining factor in the precarious neutral situation.

Neither Madrid nor Ankara was worried that the United Nations might force them into the war. But they were greatly concerned over the fact that if the Germans continued on the offensive on all fronts, Berlin might coerce them into joining the Axis. So long as the Russians were fighting a purely defensive action between the Don and Volga Rivers and the Allies were marking time, the German government was exercising a powerful pressure on these key neutrals.

Franco started by taking a thoroughly pro-Axis position, not only because he defeated the Loyalists with the help of the Germans and the Italians, but because he was genuinely worried about Russia's influence in Europe. He firmly believed that a defeat of the Nazis by the Russians would bring another rebellion in Spain, where he feared that a Communist government might be established.

The diplomatic action of Washington and London has finally dispelled these fears. The fact that the United States and Great Britain have agreed to feed the Spanish people under difficult circumstances when the two nations needed everything for themselves and their Allies has had a strong influence on Franco's government.

Moreover, Franco realized that had it not been for these shipments of food, gasoline and other materials for civilian consumption he might have had serious internal trouble on his hands. The trouble might have come from "Communist" quarters but it certainly would have played into the hands of the Nazis, who kept at least three divisions on the Spanish-French border to establish law and order in Spain in case the situation got out of hand.

The American and British diplomats have pointed out tactfully to the Spanish dictator that Spain is the westernmost point of Europe; consequently, it is far from Russia. The British Isles and the United States were close by. And having to choose between a Nazi regime, which inevitably would be established in Spain should Franco abandon his neutral attitude, and the friendship of the Allies, the dictator is said to have decided for the latter in spite of his genuine fear of Moscow.

Franco Is Good Soldier.

Franco is not a bad soldier. He was one of Marshal Pétain's pupils at the French War College. His sympathies for France have never been concealed. Diplomatic quarters in Washington believe that the harsh treatment to which the Germans are now subjecting the feeble nominal head of the French government together with the ungallant attitude they have taken toward the French Army has much influence on Franco, who until a few weeks ago was still wavering between the Allies and the Nazis.

In addition to these purely sentimental considerations there is no question that Franco, as a military man, fully realizes the Germans cannot win the war regardless of what military successes they may be able to obtain before they are compelled to quit.

McEvoy Gives Sixth Grade Valedictory

Bares Inside Dope On Easy Racket Of Authorship

By J. P. McEVROY.

(The Sixth Grade English Class of Nanuet, N. Y., has written me asking if I am not a misprint—and how could they misspell McE-mo-r-o-and get McEvoy out of it. Satisfied that this feeling must be general, Mr. McEvoy takes this opportunity to send his apologies to Mr. McLemore, his greetings to Mr. McLemore's readers, and the following reply to the Nanuet Sixth Grade English Class and "Sandy," who seems to be a class official of some sort.) Dear "Sandy":

J. P. McEvoy doesn't remember where he was born—but he has been told that it was New York City and that the year was 1894. He doesn't know whether this was a good year to be born in or not, and is glad now that nothing can be done about it. He didn't go to school—he was dragged.

This went on for a number of years, during which time McEvoy grew stronger and stronger—until finally he couldn't be dragged any more. This was officially called the end of his education—but it was really only the beginning, because from that point on he was dragged backward through life.

It's an Easy Racket.

Mr. McEvoy writes for a living. That means he puts a lot of words together. They are the same old words and most of the time he puts them together in the same old way. This is called authorship. He pretends that it is very difficult, but confidentially—and he wouldn't want the Nanuet Public School to spread this around—it is a very easy racket. All you need to do is put enough words together and some of them are bound to make sense. Mr. McEvoy still believes that, although he has been putting them together for 33 years he hasn't made much sense yet.

He lives on South Mountain road—within a stone's throw of the Nanuet Public School—if he could throw a stone as far as Washington could throw a dollar. But he has no intention of throwing stones at the Nanuet Public School and presents these few vague and ineffectual words with the hope that the Nanuet Public School will not throw stones at him.

In the last war Mr. McEvoy was a four-minute speaker, selling Liberty bonds. The only thing he has learned between wars is that if you talk only half as long you sell twice as many bonds—which shows that he has learned an awful lot. He only hopes he won't forget it when the emergency is over.

Mr. McEvoy has an assortment of children, the oldest being 26 and the youngest 4. In an absent-minded way, he gets his children mixed up with his grandchildren—but that doesn't seem to make much difference since neither children nor grandchildren pay the slightest bit of attention to anything he says.

Jap Double-Talk.

He is very proud of this, because if they really listened to him he would worry about them, knowing how often he has been wrong. He is particularly puzzled by his 24-year-old son who speaks Japanese—which sounds like double-talk—which sounds like Japanese.

Would you care for a cute saying—and how can you help yourself? Yesterday, the 4-year-old Peggy said, "Daddy, are you going to make some food on the typewriter so we won't be hungry like Hansel and Gretel?" On second thought, she said that isn't so cute—maybe she's really beginning to worry.

Every few days his secretary goes through Mr. McEvoy's wastepaper basket and sends the contents, letter-seller, in all directions, to a sucker list of assorted addresses she once bought for 10 cents. To every one's surprise, this junk later turns up as stories, plays, radio scripts, books, etc.

Mr. McEvoy hasn't the faintest idea of how they got into the wastebasket in the first place. His best guess is that he is a secret somnambulist and writes in his sleep. Writing is like that—once you start, you can't stop yourself. You go on and on until you are taken away by stern-faced men in starched white uniforms or shut up in an old garret and chained to the bedpost like a character in a play by Eugene O'Neill.

At present, Mr. McEvoy's favorite sport is lying down, his favorite exercise is breathing and his favorite hobby is chatting cozily and intimately with his rationing board. (Distributed by McE-mo-r-o Syndicate, Inc.)

FOR THE Thinking BUSINESS MAN

Here is a business story to interest you!

Six years ago there was no NATIONAL PREMIUM BEER. Five years ago it was hardly known . . . except to a few of us in Baltimore and Washington. And yet, today it is popular from coast to coast.

New York and Chicago and Los Angeles have NATIONAL PREMIUM in their finest hotels, restaurants and clubs, while in Washington, the nation's capital, where folk from all parts of the country gather to do the nation's business, NATIONAL PREMIUM BEER is setting a new standard for American brewing among cosmopolitan epicures. On crack trains running all over the country, in dining, lounge and parlor cars, NATIONAL PREMIUM is available for the man who knows fine beer.

But best of all, right here on the Middle Atlantic seaboard, NATIONAL PREMIUM has established itself as the working partner of the oyster, the crab and the lobster, bringing new fame to the products of our fertile valleys, teaming rivers and bays.

More than national advertising, national recommendation by critics and connoisseurs is responsible for NATIONAL PREMIUM'S phenomenal success. Indeed, the greatest advertising known . . . the most effective salesmanship ever invented, has been the kindly recommendations of Washingtonians as they travel throughout the country.

If you know NATIONAL PREMIUM, you know it's goodness . . . it's a trifle costly, but so very well worth it, that you'll be glad to pay the few cents extra. At the finest hotels, restaurants, clubs, and cafes in the capital . . . and from coast to coast . . .

Parachute Troops To Be Expanded To Tens of Thousands

Quickly Seeking Action Army's Spearhead

By WALTER McCALLUM, Staff Correspondent.

HEADQUARTERS, AIRBORNE COMMAND, FORT BRAGG, N. C., Feb. 13.—Action appeal of the air-borne infantry is one of the reasons parachute units have little trouble keeping their ranks full.

In the first place, the paratrooper realizes he is going to see plenty of action. He is quite likely to be tabbed as the spearhead of any military operation and as such he will meet the best men of the enemy before the enemy has been weakened by other means. His very means of getting into battle—his transportation by air and dropping by parachute—in itself is a thrill. Many a boy who wants action and plenty of it gravitates to the parachute troops because he is sure he won't fight the war twiddling his thumbs in a rest area and probably never will see the bald-headed row when the guns begin talking.

Planned expansion of the parachute infantry, with much of the training to be concentrated in the Hoffman (N. C.) area at a new camp under construction there, will bring paratrooper strength up to tens of thousands of men. Literally they will be the cream of the crop, even to get a chance to win the coveted curled wing insignia of the paratrooper they must be good.

40 Per Cent Rejected. "Rejections for physical reasons run about 40 per cent," said a medical major at one of the paratrooper reception and training centers here very high. "Our standards are very high. We must keep them so."

One understands why a paratrooper must be in topnotch physical condition before he goes through training that would bring on a heart attack in many men. The paratrooper has no monopoly on physical courage or equipment, but his training is as tough as that of any Army unit, even the Ranger units. The fact that he drops into battle from the plane and that to qualify as a member of that elite group he must pass a stiff qualifying course gives him that essential morale quality. Call it esprit, backbone, guts or anything else, the paratrooper has it. It is evident all through the country where the Uncle Sam's parachute infantry.

From the moment he drops from the door of the ship, throttled down to less than 100 miles an hour, and his parachute billows out in the prop blast the paratrooper is on his own. He knows he won't have any heavy artillery to blast his way for him; he must have only his own light weapons, his two fists and a sturdy, well-trained body to oppose an enemy presumably equipped with heavy weapons.

Capture Airports. Paratroopers may drop anywhere, but possibly one of their major missions will be capture and investment of enemy-held airports, the way prepared for them by heavy air bombardment of the country surrounding the fields to knock out enemy strong points. They may be used for demolition missions behind enemy lines, aimed at disrupting his supply.

Carries New Carbine. His main weapon the newest thing in light arms is the M-1 carbine which the parachute infantry is equipped with the most modern job in the way of individual infantry weapons. It weighs around 5 pounds, shoots a lengthy string of bullets as fast as a machine gun and is potent at long range. The gun itself is streamlined to fit the air and ground job the paratrooper does. He has other weapons, of course, including light mortars and the Army pistol. Chief of all, he is equipped with a machine gun that is rough-and-tumble job on any enemy outfits that may be in the hand-to-hand mode.

But the paratrooper, despite his glamour, is getting ready for grim and serious business. They aren't fooling in their training in the South. From high officers down they are earnestly trying and succeeding in preparing themselves for the combats sure to come, when the success of an action by other United States troops may depend on what the parachute infantry does.

Armour & Co. Indicted On OPA Charges

Held Forcing Dealers To Take Eggs With Butter

BOSTON, Feb. 13.—A Federal grand jury has indicted Armour & Co. and four employees on charges of conspiracy to violate OPA price ceilings by demanding and compelling customers to buy eggs as a condition of the sale of butter.

Four smaller firms were indicted by the same grand jury yesterday on charges of violating price ceilings on meats.

The conspiracy indictment against Armour also named Charles Chamberlain, New England district manager; Edward Hout, district manager of the Lowell branch; Norris Asher, Framingham branch manager; and Daniel Lucey, North Adams branch manager.

The branch managers were named as representatives of agents of Armour in another indictment listing 12 counts of alleged sales of butter in which the purchase of eggs was made a condition of sale.

Ickes Praises Congress Curb On Legislative Lunchings

Assails Dies Over 'Crackpot List' At Chicago Meeting Honoring Norris

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—To gain an everlasting peace, there must be "complete and utter disarmament of enemy countries," and no repetition of Versailles, former Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska believes.

"Paid tribute by several speakers last night at a testimonial rally for his 40 years' service in Congress, the 81-year-old Independent asserted that "if we insist upon our enemies signing a treaty like that signed at Versailles, we will only sow the seed of another war."

Speaking in praise of Mr. Norris, Secretary of the Interior Ickes commended the famous liberal's career with that of Representative Dies, and took the occasion to attack the chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities bitterly.

"We must learn by the lessons of the past to take things as they are," Mr. Norris declared. "We have said we are fighting for peace, but we won't establish it by creating any form of Hitlerism."

Would Ban Standing Armies.

"To secure that peace, we must have complete disarmament of enemy countries. * * * We must maintain our arms plants forever incapable of producing anything but what we must prohibit standing armies of any sort."

Declaring that the Versailles Treaty imposed obligations on the defeated nations far beyond their ability to pay, Mr. Norris proposed a peace treaty that would require the loser to liquidate all debts they incurred during the war.

Fraud Plot Charge Denied by Head of Indicted Firm

Says Plane Accessories Plant Has No Reason To Cheat on Contracts

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 13.—W. L. Mellor, president of the Baker-Mellor Manufacturing Co., Inc., last night denied Federal charges that his firm and four persons conspired to defraud on contracts for aircraft accessories used at the Army's Wright Field near Dayton, Ohio.

A Federal grand jury indicted the firm and five individuals: Mr. Mellor, his partner, J. William and principal administrative officer in the General Procurement Branch at Wright Field; Dahne W. Winebrenner, the firm's general manager; and Ben D. Christian, president of the Safeway Steel Products Co.

"I cannot understand this indictment because there is no reason or incentive for one to defraud the Government in these contracts," Mr. Mellor said. "All the contracts are subject to renegotiation."

"We cannot make more than 6 per cent and the Government has the right to go into all the elements that make up our costs, and if it is dissatisfied with them, or we are wrong in our costs or our salaries are excessive, the Government can rework it in this renegotiation."

"We have consulted with Government officials and have been advised our costs are as low as any of the 10 largest canvas goods manufacturers in the United States."

The Justice Department said the indictment charged the defendants arranged to submit "arbitrary, excessive and exorbitant bids" for manufacture of aircraft field maintenance shelters, parachute drying racks and dispersed position maintenance shelters.

Vanogreiff To Be Guest

CHARLOTTEVILLE, Va., Feb. 13.—Maj. Gen. Alexander Vanogreiff, who recently received the Congressional Medal of Honor for his service against the Japanese in the Solomon Islands, has accepted the invitation of the Charlotteville and Albemarle Red Cross to return to his birthplace for the opening of the Red Cross War Fund Campaign March 1.

Your Income Tax

No. 41—Trades and Exchanges (Part 1)

Among the forms of transactions to which consideration must be given in preparing a Federal income tax return are trades and exchanges of property. When a person receives goods for services, as in the case of a workman taking groceries for wages, or a lawyer receiving securities for professional services, a question of income tax liability arises. It also arises when a trader in farm produce for services or goods, such as groceries or farm equipment, or when cattle or farms or other property is traded. It arises frequently in security transactions, particularly in reorganizations, where one form of security is traded for another form of security of the same or a different corporation. All such transactions may give rise to taxable gain.

In the case of exchange of one's services or the product of one's labor (as farm produce) for goods or property, the value of the goods or property received in exchange becomes ordinary income, reportable in Item 1 of the return Form 1040. Where property is exchanged for property of another kind, or for services, the transaction may give rise to a capital gain or loss if the property exchanged is a capital asset.

reportable in Schedule G, item 8 (a) of the return Form 1040. In such cases, the measure of gain or loss is the difference between the basis of the property exchanged and the fair

Capital Store Sales Like Week in 1942

16 Per Cent Above Weather Vital Factor In Notable Upturn In District Trade

By EDWARD C. STONE.

Scoring a sharp advance, department store sales in the Capital for the week ended last Saturday, February 6, were 16 per cent higher than in the corresponding week of last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported today.

Sales in the Fifth Reserve District were 19 per cent ahead of last year, and 20 per cent in Baltimore and 43 per cent in a group of other cities. For the year, the Washington registers a jump of 35 per cent, the highest in the group, over the preceding week of this year, were up 35 per cent in the fifth district, 33 in Baltimore and 32 per cent in the other cities. These exceptional advances were largely due to better showing in the clothing and footwear categories. Cumulative sales in the past four weeks in the Capital were only 3 per cent ahead of last year. Here again weather was an important factor. In the week ended January 30, the ice storm caused a drop of 10 per cent from the same week a year ago and lowering the average materially.

Peoples Drug Divided Voted. Directors of Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., have declared the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents per share on the common stock, it was announced at the head office here today. The distribution will be made on April 1 to stockholders of record on March 8.

This is the same amount as voted in the first quarter of 1942. In the full year Peoples Drug paid $1.25 per share.

Planning for Future Urged.

John A. Reilly, president of the District Bankers Association, in an address to the auditors, urged that careful planning for the future be undertaken now. Bank executives of tomorrow must continue to apply their normal characteristics of common sense and judgment in dealing with current problems but above all they must have practical imaginations if the private banking system is to survive, he said.

Mr. Reilly declared that in America after the war opportunity will be as desirable as security.

United's 1942 Net Income.

United Air Lines net income for 1942 has been estimated at slightly above $2 a share compared with only 40 cents per share in 1941.

Net earnings of McCrorry Stores Corp. in 1942 was equal to $1.90 against $1.24 a share in the previous year.

Stocks Edge Higher, Utilities Active in Churning Session

'Pennys' Shares Swell Saturday Volume to Around 600,000.

By VICTOR EUBANK, Associated Press Financial Writer.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Swapping of low-priced utilities in large blocks enlivened today's post-holiday stock market, while it was more of a churning session than otherwise, according to analysts who said upward trends were likely.

"Pennys" generally were all over the ticker tape at the start. There was a let-down in activity in the final hour, however, although volume for shares was one of the best in the past year. Forward shifts of fractions, with a few wider moves, predominated near the close.

Win, Lose or Draw

Lesson for U. S. in English Sports Attitude

Over here the brass hats are talking about abolishing baseball, gagging horse racing and knocking the pins from under sports in general. Over there, specifically in England, supposedly up to its ears in war, they still carry on. At least results of no less than 64 football and rugby matches were reported by Reuters, the British AP, in Sunday's paper. Sixty-four is about par for a Sunday session of the British. Over here we seem to be dismayed by the problem of playing eight major league baseball games daily in season without hindering the draft, slowing down essential war industries and preparably damaging morale. President Roosevelt himself said we can't play ball this summer or that we can. He tossed a high hard'un at Steve Early and Marvin McIntyre, his fast-fleeting second-base combination, with instructions for a doubleplay. They're supposed to keep everybody smiling and happy. And he isn't kidding.

Reports Asked in Detail

Why not give the boys in the front-line trenches a voice in the matter? Why not ask them if they want the game to continue on its present basis—letting players play until their draft numbers come up? We don't have to stretch the imagination to figure out their answer. A breathless bundle of energy colored us on the street the other day and demanded to know if we had saved our play-by-play notes on the Redskins-Chicago Bears football game last December. Said he, he of energy was curly Cammita, one-time G. W. scholar and a sports fan since his first game of two-knocker. We wondered what anybody would write with notes of that ancient engagement.

One Way Out for Baseball

Stan Baumgartner's idea to continue baseball on a part-time basis if it gets down to that, is unsound. Baumgartner, a big leaguer himself before he turned into sports writing in Philadelphia, points out that innumerable big leaguers worked in shipyards and factories in the last war and played ball after hours. A pretty good brand of ball, he thinks.

Twelfth Straight Win Raises G. W. High's Metro Stock

Likely Rivals in State's Championship Event Also Are Victors

With 12 straight victories in a string stretching from early January, George Washington High of Alexandria is guaranteed a rating among the favorites for The Star's annual Metropolitan interscholastic basketball tournament, scheduled to bring together this section's best eight teams on February 23, 24, 26 and 27 at Tech gym.

The Presidents, who have lost only once in 16 games, continued to win yesterday, easily downing Richard Montgomery of Rockville, 50-22. Bethesda-Chevy Chase and Gonzaga, among the other likely tournament competitors, also marked up victories. The Barons won their fourth straight in defeating Loudoun, 50-19, taking over the lead early in the first quarter and improving steadily behind the sharpshooting of Johnny Slaughter and Eddie Sartz. Gonzaga showed a good balance of power while swamping Georgetown Prep, 36-13. After leading, 10-5, at the half, the Eagles turned on the real heat with Chester Coakley and Frank Cantrell the individual leaders.

One winning streak was halted yesterday when St. Paul's, one of Baltimore's best, stopped St. Albans after six victories, 36-30. Seventeen points by Bob Crockett of the invaders proved the decisive factor. Balancing this for Washington's private schools against Maryland competition yesterday was Friends School's 37-35 win over Sherwood in an overtime clash. Jack McCuen's goal in the extra session provided the margin.

National Training Was Another Winner

National Training was another winner yesterday, topping Briarley Military Academy, 36-21. Washington-Lee, last year's Metro champ, which has had trouble winning this season, ended a seven-game losing streak by defeating Fairfax, 28-21, yesterday behind the sharpshooting of Bob Phillips, who scored 12 points.

Wilson, Tech Choices In Schoolboy Court Battles Tonight

Coolidge Whips Central, Roosevelt Gains Lead In Nailing Eastern

Wilson is expected to earn a fourth-place tie with Coolidge when it plays Anacostia in the opening game of tonight's windup double-header in the high school basketball series at Tech gym, while Tech is favored to take over third place in its tilt with Western. Form doesn't prevail always in this series, but little trouble is seen for tonight's favorites.

Before next Friday and Saturday's championship round there will be a preliminary playoff on Tuesday between Wilson and Coolidge, provided Wilson wins tonight. The Ramblers improved to a 20-16 half-time lead, but after that the Riders took over.

Eastern gains early lead. Eastern's precision shooting gave it an early lead over the Rough Riders, with Fred Seaton's two key shots the big part of the Ramblers' 8-2 lead gained midway of the first period. Roosevelt started shooting over Eastern's zone defense, however, and was trailing only by 10-11 at the start of the second quarter. The Riders improved to a 20-16 half-time lead, but after that the Riders took over.

It required only a minute and a half of the second half to put Roosevelt in the lead. The Ramblers, with Bunny Pittman leading from then on the Riders increased their margin. Eastern rallied in the fourth quarter and pulled to within one point, 29-30, but Ollie Kennedy, Charley Howard and Kennedy again scored to lock up the game for Roosevelt.

College Sports Go On, Although Denied Use of Student-Soldiers

Few Coaches Feel Grid Game Is Doomed by Ban That Army Imposes

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Despite the Army's ruling against student-soldier participation in intercollegiate sports, college officials today expressed a grim determination to carry on.

Col. Herman Beukema, director of the Army's specialized training corps in Washington, explained that the soldier-athletes wouldn't have time for such extracurricular activities and added, "We are not sending the men there (to the colleges) to participate in big-time athletic programs."

His decision was the more stunner because previously the college authorities had hinted that soldiers sent to 271 campuses would be declared eligible to compete on the teams of those schools.

Maj. John L. Griffith, Big Ten commissioner, said in Chicago after studying the order that "I'm sure that we always will be able to find 11 boys in every school who want to play football. College football may be hurt, but it won't be killed."

Coaches Still Optimistic

Virtually the same sentiments were expressed in the East by Lou Little of the Pennsylvanians, who said, "I am sure that we will be able to find 11 boys in every school who want to play football. College football may be hurt, but it won't be killed."

In addition, H. Jamison Swartz of the University of Michigan, announced that this spring's "hard day track carnival at Franklin Field will go on regardless."

However, Asa Bushnell, director of the office of Eastern intercollegiate athletics, expressed regret at the ruling "because we have felt

Grid Outlook Here Becomes Darker

Local collegiate officials have adopted a policy of watchful waiting in regard to the possibility of presenting football teams to the public. It is the consensus here will be to play football here for the duration.

President Dr. Floyd Heck Marvin of George Washington, Dr. H. C. Byrd of Maryland and Father John J. Kehoe, S. J., moderator of athletics at the University of Pennsylvania, "We're going along and do the best we can, but all have admitted to friends that the outlook is becoming increasingly darker."

we could assist materially in the development of training of these younger members of the armed forces," and Athletic Director Bob Kane of Cornell declared that "it means the demise of inter-collegiate athletics here for the duration."

No Time for Major Sports

Col. Beukema said that the Army would begin shipping its first student-soldiers to the campuses by March 1 and that the plan would be in full swing by April 1.

He estimated that at its peak approximately 150,000 soldiers would be attending college and that the men would have to meet the scholastic requirements of the schools to which they were sent.

Tests will be given at the end of each 12-week period and the men will be returned to duty with their troops.

In addition to 24 or 25 hours of classroom work each week the soldier-students also would be required to participate in five hours of military drill daily, as well as an hour of athletics. "We're going along and do the best we can, but all have admitted to friends that the outlook is becoming increasingly darker."

Road Rough for De Paul, After 14th Win in Row

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—De Paul University's Demons, who have gone out twice in a row for their fourth straight basketball triumph and failed, will try again tonight.

But Coach Ray Meyer isn't exactly bubbling over with optimism. The question? Ed Diddle's Western Kentucky State's quintet which has won 18 in a row this season.

AAU Boxing Menaced By Meager Support

Opening Marked by Five Kayoos Draws Few Fans

Disappointed by last night's meager attendance at the opening of the District AAU boxing tournament, Chairman Billy Blake today said only a decided increase next week will keep the annual of publicity for last night's flop.

"If this tournament is unsuccessful, we probably won't have another," he said. "And in that event there won't be a tournament of any kind, including the Golden Gloves. The AAU has worked hard to keep the game alive, even before boxing was legalized, and we feel we are entitled to better support."

Old Liners' Chance for Playoff Spot Slim After Loss to Duke

Must Win 3 of 4 Loop Tilts Left to Get Bid; G. W. Routs W. & L.; A. U. Nosed Out

Whether Maryland's basket ball team will view with George Washington University's outfit the sights of Raleigh, N. C. site of the Southern Conference championship tournament next month, will be determined in the Old Liners' next four loop engagements, of which they must win three to stand a chance for a bid.

The Old Liners, who have captured only two of six Southern Conference titles, will clash with a weak Washington and Lee team tonight at College Park, then face North Carolina, William and Mary and V. M. I. in other conference tests.

Ring Board Is Charged With Unfair Tactics

Its Use of D. C. Officer As Counsel Contested

Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, the District Commissioners and members of the District Boxing Commission today mulled over official notices from Attorney Denny Hughes protesting the corporation counsel's legal services to the individual members of the ring body in their suit with Goldie Ahearn.

Hughes, who represents Ahearn, claimmaker for the Liberty A. C., in an action for alleged damages in a suit filed December 8 when the commission delayed a show at Union Arena, also demanded to know why the commission refused to sanction a bout between Tony Musto and Al Hart, a week from Monday at Uline's.

Takes Short Cut To Basket Final

Whirly, Out of New Orleans Test, to Be Given Rest

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 13.—Whirly, out of the $20,000 New Orleans Handicap to be run at the Fair Grounds track here two weeks from today.

Ben Jones, who trains Warren Wright's money-winning champion, asserts his charge has not trained well and that it would be impossible to get him ready for his best effort.

"There's nothing wrong with Whirly, but he hasn't had a letup for a long, long time and deserves a rest," Jones said.

Whirly, Out of New Orleans Test, to Be Given Rest

Jones added present plans call for shipping to Kentucky after his local trip to an official of the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association, today urged owners to meet the crisis which faces racing by weeding out their stables and shipping less valuable horses to Florida.

"There are between 10,000 and 15,000 thoroughbreds, including 2-year-olds on farms, in training in the United States," Murphy said. "With the curtailment already enforced and further curtailment almost a certainty, it will be utterly impossible for the surviving race tracks to care for this number of horses."

Struggling Lions Face Pittsburgh Hornets

The Washington Lions, who haven't won in their last five games, will try again tonight at Pittsburgh, where they face the Hornets in an American Hockey League tilt. Tomorrow night the cellar-dwelling Lions will visit Indianapolis to meet the Capitals.

In another league game tonight Cleveland will battle the loop-leading Hershey Bears at Cleveland.

N. Y. U.-Irish Court Feud Flares for Ninth Time

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—The rivalry that set off the now nationally known basket ball double-headers in Madison Square Garden—Notre Dame vs. New York University—takes the floor in the big sports arena for the ninth time tonight.

Both teams enter the fray with only a single defeat in their records. Notre Dame was won 10, New York University 13.

Blair Girls Win Again

Montgomery Blair High girls' basket ball team won its second straight game yesterday, defeating the Sherwood Lassies, 18-16.

Coolidge Routs to Victory

It was a wait for Coolidge, the most-improved team in the series, topped Central's rattled quintet. The Cougars held the opponent all through the first period while piling up 16 points and it was after 2 minutes 45 seconds of the second period before Central scored its first point.

Poodle Scores Unpopular Win In Westminster Club Show

Crowd Likes Spaniel, Mahoney's O'Toole, Over Pitter Patter; D. C. Dogs Shine

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—In spite of war and rationing, a big crowd watched the final evening's judging at the 67th annual show of the Westminster Kennel Club at Madison Square Garden.

In the last group of contestants was only one dog that had ever won a best in show before, and that dog was the popular choice for that honor here. He was the spirited, dark mahogany, Irish water spaniel, Ch. Mahoney's O'Toole, son of Ch. Handsome Mahoney. However, he was defeated by the smaller black, very gay miniature poodle, Ch. Pitter Patter of Pipper's Croft, owned by Mrs. W. P. B. Freilinghuysen of Morristown, N. J.

While Pitter undoubtedly deserved the win in the eyes of the experienced canine judge, it was an unpopular one with the New York crowd, which has always resented the dandified appearance of the well-clipped poodle. The award of the James Mottine Trophy for the best in show dog was an unpopular one to the Irish water spaniel, on the other hand, was greeted with loud acclaim.

Hoyas' Short Favored To Take Hollis '600' In Boston Meet

BOSTON, Feb. 13.—Past-starting Gil Dodds and fast-finning Earl Mitchell will match strides for the third time tonight in the Boston A. A. track meet's highly anticipated event and while so doing both will keep a close eye on Frank Dixon, New York University Negro freshman, who plans to be very close upon their heels throughout the race.

A week ago Dodds was subjected to a second setback by the speedy Mitchell, who was runner-up to Lee MacMitchell in last year's Hunsley event. Dodds, a Boston divinity student, set such a furious early pace that he burned himself out before Mitchell cut loose with his finishing drive just as the case last March when they staged their first mile duel in a Cleveland meet.

Small Towns' War Role Told To Editors Here

No Ballyhoo Needed In 'the Sticks,' Say White and Daniels

The Nation's two most venerable newspapermen, Josephus Daniels and William Allen White, yesterday spoke a kind word for "journalism of the sticks" and gently submitted that the Nation's small towns don't have to be "ballyhooed" into a war effort.

They are attending a two-day session of the American Society of Newspaper Editors at the Willard Hotel.

"Some of us are here to let Washington folks know that we from the smaller cities are for the war 100 per cent and they don't have to ballyhoo us into it," said Mr. Daniels, Secretary of the Navy during President Wilson's administration and editor of the Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer.

Mr. White, the "Sage of Emporia," and editor of the Emporia (Kans.) Gazette, agreed.

Human Institutions. "Don't forget," Mr. White said, "that newspapers are human institutions, with human failings—and they are maintaining a human average in this serious business on hand."

"We in Kansas and the Middle West are doing a commendable and suitable job—we know it and we think Washington should know it."

Mr. White, who celebrated his 75th birthday anniversary three days ago, lists himself as the "proprietor and editor of the Emporia Daily and Weekly Gazette." He said he is "not even worried" about Congress.

"Congress," he ventured, "will rear up often, but they won't do anything serious to us."

He admitted that restrictions on the newspaper business have been plentiful, but said he thought "we will wriggle through" without any trouble.

More Hardships Forecast. Mr. Daniels said that as far as hardships and Government restrictions are concerned, "we ain't seen nothing yet."

He said that home front conditions so far during this war haven't yet approached those of the World War.

"I don't seem to have forgotten about the cornbread we had to eat in 1917 and 1918," he said. "There wasn't any wheat then. They have forgotten that some of the big cities were without street lights every night because of the need to conserve power."

"Remember, this is a bigger war than the last in every respect. And the things we are going to have to go through here at home are going to be bigger."

The venerable Southern editor, who was Ambassador to Mexico from 1933 to 1941, said he was not too worried about Government restrictions on newspaper. Speaking of the cut in supplies of zinc:

"We had to cut the pictures of our brides down from two columns to one," he said. "The brides are kicking like thunder. Maybe the Government ought to give us back our zinc so our brides will be happy."

"Managing Editor" of Navy. Mr. Daniels insisted he has never really been out of journalism. "From 1913 I was really managing editor of the Navy," he said. "And when I was in Mexico I was foreign correspondent for the State Department."

He said he was "generally satisfied" with the manner in which the war was being conducted. "I'm at home front, except so far as the farmers were concerned."

"We ought to release some of the men in the services to go to work on the farms," he said. "We've got to get crops. An army still travels on its stomach."

Sees President. Mr. Daniels yesterday accompanied the other members of the ASNE to the White House, where he exchanged a few words with a man who once worked for him as Assistant Secretary of the Navy—Mr. Roosevelt. Previously, he had paid his respects to Navy Secretary Knox and to Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

"Mrs. Wilson and I remembered," he said, "how President Wilson wanted the war in which he would break out again in 20 years if the League of Nations wasn't accepted. Well, that's just the way it happened. He hit it right on the head. It was almost exactly 20 years."

Following an off-the-record discussion yesterday with the editors, OWI Director Elmer Davis said he believed the meeting "has done me more good than the editors."

"After all," Mr. Davis said, "these men represent all parts of the country and they can give us the actual reaction from every section."

Price Sees Benefits. Byron Price, director of the Office of Censorship, who also addressed yesterday's session, described the meeting as "beneficial and instructive from our point of view, and I hope from that of the editors."

Last night the editors were guests of the White House Correspondents' Association at a dinner meeting in the Statler Hotel, from which President Roosevelt's 40-minute message originated.

The ASNE today was to go into secret session with the Nation's leading military and civilian war leaders. Scheduled to address the editors today are Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff; Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States Fleet; and Lt. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commanding general, United States Army Corps of Engineers.

Later in the day they will hear Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson, War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt, Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown, Civilian Defense Director James M. Landis.

The sessions will close officially tonight with a dinner meeting at the Willard Hotel to be addressed by Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes and Col. John J. Estlin, chairman of the British Supply Council. Many of the editors have agreed, however, to hold another meeting tomorrow to be devoted exclusively to the discussion of newspaper problems.

Red Cross Drive to Open. STAUNTON, Va., Feb. 13 (AP)—A goal of $96,000 has been set for the Staunton-Washington-Alexandria Red Cross War Drive which begins March 1. J. Walter Callison, Staunton realty dealer, has been designated chairman of the fund.

LIBRARY OF HOWARD UNIVERSITY—Helen Gatch Durston has sketched the $1,105,000 Founders' Library of Howard University. The building was dedicated by Secretary of Interior Ickes in 1939. It replaces the Andrew Carnegie Library, now used for classes of the school of religion.

The collection of thousands of medical, law, religious and liberal arts textbooks now offered to Howard students is in contrast to the one book available when the university was founded in 1867. A sympathizer had presented the infant institution of learning with a copy of Webster's Dictionary.

Set up originally as a theological seminary, the university has since expanded its scope. About 11,600 doctors, lawyers, dentists, pharmacists, engineers, musicians, scientists, teachers, ministers, writers and businessmen have been graduated into the professions since the first five students enrolled 76 years ago. Last year's enrollment was 3,336 men and women. Named for its second president, Maj. Gen. Oliver Otis Howard, the university is now headed by Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson.

Rites to Commemorate Sinking of Maine

Ceremony to Be Held At Mast Tomorrow

Many patriotic organizations are to take part in a wreath-laying ceremony at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow under auspices of the District of Columbia Auxiliary, United Spanish War Veterans, at the Maine Mast in Arlington National Cemetery. The ceremony will be in memory of the sinking of the battleship Maine February 15, and as a tribute to the Americans who lost their lives aboard the battleship.

It was decided to hold the ceremony tomorrow instead of Monday, the actual anniversary of the sinking, to enable more persons to attend. The ceremony will be under direction of Mrs. Ethel E. Finn, department president of the auxiliary. A wreath is to be placed at the battleship's mast in the name of the President of the United States and the various patriotic organizations attending are to place wreaths. Mrs. Finn announced. Organizations scheduled to take part in the ceremony include:

The American War Mothers, Daughters of Union Veterans, Women's Relief Corps, Lineal Society of the Spanish American War, Department Auxiliary of the American Legion, Department Veterans Foreign Wars, Auxiliary Jewish War Veterans, Army and Navy Union, National Auxiliary, Blue Star Mothers, National Auxiliary, United Spanish War Veterans; Women's Patriotic Council, Sons and Daughters of Liberty, Daughters of '98 and So on of United Spanish War Veterans.

At 8 p. m. Monday the District of Columbia United Spanish War Veterans will hold Maine memorial services in the United Brethren Church. It was announced.

Lutheran Mission Drive Raises Fund of $7,000

The annual financial drive of the Washington Lutheran Mission Society exceeded its goal by $300, church workers reported last night.

Winding up a three weeks' campaign among Lutheran Congregations of several synods here, workers and church leaders held a dinner at the Reformation Lutheran Church, 212 East Capitol street, which a total collection of $7,000 was reported.

Principal speaker was Dr. James Oestling, executive secretary of the Baltimore Inner Mission Society. Dr. J. Harold Munner, president of the Inner Mission Board and pastor of Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, presided.

Miss Frances Dyingier, executive secretary of the society, was honored for her 15 years of service with the organization, which offered her a trip to Fremont, Neb., to visit her mother and father, Dr. and Mrs. Holmes Dyingier. Dr. Dyingier formerly was president of Midland College in Fremont.

Honeymoon Isle Developer Posts Bond on D. C. Charge

Clinton M. Washburn, 46, developer of Honeymoon Isle, off the Florida west coast, posted bond in Tampa, Fla., on charges growing out of an indictment here for false pretenses, the Associated Press reports.

Mr. Washburn was arrested in Tampa on information supplied by James E. Armstrong, investigator attached to the district attorney's office here.

The indictment charged that Mr. Washburn sold a piece of Florida property to James B. Anderson of Washington when he allegedly represented himself as having clear title to the property and received $1,000 in payment.

Detective Armstrong noticed Mr. Washburn's name in a newspaper which he devoted exclusively to the deal, remembered Mr. Ashburn's indictment here on November 12, 1942, and wired Miami police to apprehend him.

Mr. Washburn gained Nation-wide prominence in 1940 as host to 500 couples from all parts of the country whom he invited to spend their honeymoons on the tropical isle without charge.

American Science Mobilized To Meet Challenge of Nazis

Our science is now mobilized to meet the Nazi challenge. Joseph Borikin, Justice Department economist and co-author with Charles A. Welsh of "Germany's Master Plan," declared today in addressing a luncheon meeting of the Harvard Club of Washington.

"On the scientific front Germany has asked for it, and she is going to get it," he said.

"When American scientists make important medical discoveries, the information is given freely to the world," Mr. Borikin pointed out. "When we contrast this with German science, we realize the kind of enemy we are fighting" he said.

"They are planning for years have included the provision of secrecy for vital medical discoveries. Despite the fact they have borrowed from the general store of knowledge and research of the world.

"They have kept their discoveries secret because a nation which can keep its troops free from disease, by means which are denied to its enemies, can garner for itself an incalculable advantage.

"The Prussian spirit from which Germany derived its culture has also permeated its science. Wars in Europe have left thousands of dead on the field of battle and millions of dead from typhus. We have recently been informed that Germany has discovered a preventive for typhus, the knowledge of which it has denied the world.

"In every case, Germany borrowed the basic work of other nations. In the case of atabrine, substitute for quinine and a cure for malaria, Germany covered the world with patents containing faulty information and denied to other nations the right to use this critically important drug.

"In the case of germinin, a cure for African sleeping sickness, the Germans went so far as to offer the British their secret in return for the colonies they lost in the first World War. Turned down, the Germans retired, clutching their secret for the day when their armies would fight in Africa. In the case of typhus, every other country published the results of its research. It is apparent now that Germany held back its own information from the world."

Soothsayers Tell Reporter, For Fee, When War Will End

Then there was another reader of tea leaves who for half a dollar, set the date at 1945, and would have gotten the month and day for only half a dollar more.

Tired of tea leaves, the reporter next visited a crystal gazer. He fixed the peace for next February 11, and didn't even charge anything extra.

The palm tells a different story. It says October, 1943. But a second palmist made it December.

Then came the phenologist, who told by the bumps on the man's head and a peek into a crystal ball that the war would end in 1944.

And so it went, until the last visit, this time to a gypsy.

"You want to know when the war will be over? Mister, you'd better ask President Roosevelt. I wish I knew."

Howard U. to Receive Estate of E. H. Morris

Howard University eventually will receive the $300,000 estate of Edward Hezekiah Morris, colored lawyer, who died here February 3, according to terms of his will filed today in Berrien County (Mich.) Probate Court.

The will bequeaths the income from the estate to Denise D. Morris, an adopted daughter, until her death, when all reverts to the university.

Porter Says Ban On Sirens Will Impede Firemen

Believes Engines Will Have Difficulty Going Through Streets

Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter said today that the ban on the use of sirens on police and fire equipment ordered yesterday by the Commissioners would "retard our response to fires" as firemen are forced to travel over city streets with only bells, whistles and horns to warn pedestrians and traffic.

Under the order which originally came from Brig. Gen. John T. Lewis, chief of the military district of Washington, approximately 125 sirens will remain unused on the city's fire fighting equipment, he said.

The fire chief said he had no alternative but to obey the order of the military, although pointing out firemen would not be able to answer alarms as quickly as before the ban. The order goes into effect at midnight Wednesday. The new air-raid signals become effective here and nearby that day.

Inspector Milton D. Smith, in charge of police clothing and equipment, commented that "we will have to rely on auto horns and go through traffic the best way we can."

Scout cars have been equipped with flashing beacon sirens, and only a few cars have the old exhaust whistles. After Wednesday police will silence their sirens, but will continue to use the red flashers, he said.

The new air-raid signal is expected to be tested here for the first time next Wednesday through Saturday, probably at noon, the local Office of Civilian Defense announced today.

An OGD spokesman said a formal announcement would be made Monday. Final plans await clearance from the military district of Washington.

It was stressed that there would be no mobilization of selective services when the signals sounded. The tests are being made to familiarize the public with the new signals. The exact time of the test will be included in the Monday announcement. OGD said, although present indications are that the signals will sound at noon, the usual time for testing equipment.

The following signals will be sounded during the tests:

The "blue" signal, a long, steady blast on the sirens, indicating the probability of an air raid.

The "red" signal, a series of short blasts or rising and falling sound of sirens, indicating imminence of attack.

The "black" signal, a long, steady blast on the sirens, indicating enemy planes may return.

The all-clear signal, which will not be sounded on sirens, but probably announced via radio.

In Maryland and Virginia, a test of the new signals will be held Wednesday morning, according to Col. Henry A. Reninger, liaison officer for the third regional OGD. A night test is planned a week or ten days later.

PUC to Join in Appeal Of Gas Rate Decision

Attorneys for the Public Utilities Commission were authorized last night by a majority vote of the members of the PUC to join in the appeal to the United States Court of Appeals.

The case involves a $200,000 rate increase asked by the Gas Light Co. and granted by the PUC, which was denied by the District Court. Yesterday morning, according to Col. Henry A. Reninger, liaison officer for the third regional OGD, a night test is planned a week or ten days later.

The proposal would set up a child care fund in addition to the Latham Act appropriation out of which nursery school allocations are made.

Sergt. List to Be Soloist At Youth Concert Saturday

Sergt. Eugene List, outstanding 24-year-old piano artist, will appear as soloist with the National Symphony Orchestra under Dr. Hans Knipper at 8:30 p. m. next Saturday in the second of three youth concerts at Constitution Hall.

The young pianist was a corporal when he appeared with the symphony last July 24. At that time, he was soloist on an all-Tschukovsky program at the Potomac Water Gate concert of the season.

Dr. Kindler also announced that there will be a "surprise" guest artist for the youth concert Saturday. Single tickets may be obtained at Kirtz, 1330 G Street. Servicemen will be admitted for half price.

Scout Troop 83 Marks Its 24th Anniversary

Troop 83, Boy Scouts of America, last night celebrated its 24th year of scouting with a program at the Emory Methodist Church, at which mothers were special guests. Jo Morgan, Scout counselor, spoke on "Co-operation of Parents With the Scout Movement," and Randolph Carson presented a skit entitled "Ma Gorgenheimer." Roy Swab was host.

Shiflett Murder Case Jury Will Visit Scene of Crime

Justice Laws Orders Resumption of Trial On Monday Morning

The all-male District Court jury which is hearing the murder trial of Ernest James Shiflett, 42, accused of the fatal beating of Mrs. Patty Edwards, 40, in a Fifth street apartment last August, will visit the scene where the victim was found dead and probably will start deliberating the fate of the accused man Monday.

Justice Bolitha J. Laws, in whose court the case is being tried, ordered the jury to return to court Monday at 9 a. m. The jurors will visit the apartment in the 500 block of Fifth street in the custody of United States marshals, returning to court an hour later to hear concluding arguments in the case.

When the case is submitted to the jury, it will be presented only on the first count of the indictment charging Shiflett fatally beat Mrs. Edwards with his hands, fists and feet. A second count, charging use of a weapon, "Mike" Garrafa—a flatly contradicting previous testimony by Shiflett that police "beat" him in an attempt to extract a confession.

Testimony was concluded yesterday with three policemen—Detective Sergeants Walter D. Perry and Robert V. Murray and Precinct Detective E. "Mike" Garrafa—flatly contradicting previous testimony by Shiflett that police "beat" him in an attempt to extract a confession.

Mr. Perry said that Shiflett's testimony charging police brutality was not correct, that he did not strike Shiflett and that others did not strike Shiflett in his, Mr. Perry's presence. He added that Shiflett was treated "with utmost courtesy."

Mr. Murray corroborated Mr. Perry's statements and was joined by Mr. Caranfa, who denied that Shiflett had been beaten or threatened.

New Child Care Program To Go to President

A recommendation for a new program for children of working mothers operating on a grant-in-aid basis will go to the President for his approval from the Budget Bureau next week, it was learned yesterday.

The program, proposed by the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Service, was discussed at a hearing at the Budget Bureau Thursday afternoon, attended by officials of the Children's Bureau, the Office of Education and the Federal Works Agency.

The proposal would set up a child care fund in addition to the Latham Act appropriation out of which nursery school allocations are made.

H. C. Moorman Succeeds Stewart as Ration Chief

Heath C. Moorman, who has been steel consultant in the National Office of Price Administration, has been named chief rationing officer for the District of Columbia.

Mr. Moorman succeeds L. P. Steuart, who was removed from his post at the request of former OPA Administrator Leon Henderson by Whitney OPA director, announced last night.

Mr. Moorman, who lives at 2922 Twenty-eighth street N.W., is a native of Roanoke, Va., but has lived in Washington since 1907. He joined the OPA in May, 1941, and became executive assistant to the regional administrator six months later.

Mr. Moorman was closely associated with Mr. Thompson while the latter was executive assistant to Mr. Henderson.

MILITARY LEADERS CONFER WITH EDITORS—Behind closed doors, three of the Nation's foremost military leaders today discussed war problems with members of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, meeting at the Willard Hotel. Glamor Injected In Campaign for War Workers

Show Methods to Be Used; 48-Hour Week Rules Nearly Ready

As War Manpower Commission attorneys claimed they had almost completely drafted regulations governing the 48-hour work week, the commission moved today to place in effect a plan to inject glamor into the program to get men and women out of non-essential work into war plants.

Show business personalities and media will be used by the WMC, said Philip S. Broughton, information director, to put over the manpower recruiting campaign in various industrial cities early in March. Actresses like Helen Hayes and Betty Davis, Mr. Broughton said, will be engaged to stress the importance of war work.

He said Baltimore had been selected to start the program and the campaign there would be centered on obtaining workers for industries in and around that city. The program for the District has not yet been completed it was said.

Idea Is Explained. The "Get a War Job" local drive, it was explained, will be supervised jointly by the WMC, the Office of War Information and a committee of Government and show business representatives. The idea is to use local newspapers, radio stations and nationally known theater and radio performers in each industrial community where there is a manpower shortage.

No campaign is planned on a national basis, but WMC's headquarters here will provide material, such as posters, pamphlets and radio scripts to be used locally, Mr. Broughton declared.

Each local campaign will be of a week's duration, and the activities in each city will be climaxed with a parade in which citizens will be urged to visit the offices of the United States Employment Service and sign up for war jobs. Non-employed women and all people holding jobs not classified as essential will be particularly sought. The idea is to use the order will become effective first.

Until the 48-hour work week regulations are issued, WMC officials explained, the commission will not be able to give definite or authoritative answers to the score of questions being asked by employers in the 32 areas in which the order will become effective first.

Task Complicated. Regulations drafters said their task is being complicated by the great diversity of business firms and operating schedules within a city. It was pointed out that the President's order was aimed principally at manufacturing plants in which most of the workers are being paid by the hour and work in regular shifts.

But, they said, it also applies to hotels, laundries, retail stores, newspapers, railroads, and other essential establishments, which have salaried employees, irregular shifts and small specialized groups of workers. Official said they have found out that many of these establishments have their own peculiar problems and because of this are uncertain about what is expected of them.

They said the regulations will cover as many of these problems as possible.

Some WMC regional directors are urging industries to voluntarily adopt the 48-hour week at once, saying it would be mandatory in many of the critical shortage areas by July 1. Louis B. F. Ravcroft, regional director for Pennsylvania and West Virginia, declared that Philadelphia would need 100,000 additional workers by midsummer, and "we will continuously attempt to squeeze as many men out of less essential industries as possible."

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

All of the implements provided for our Army are not war machines. Some you've seen operating in peace time, such as the Caterpillar bulldozer. The Engineering Corps in the Army and Marines uses "Bulldozers" to build roads, to smooth off temporary airfields, camp-sites and for many other uses.

Particularly in the South Pacific, where there are no roads and tanks and trucks must be moved up to battle zones, the bulldozers and the engineers must move ahead to clear a road through the jungles. Your purchase of War Bonds helps pay the cost. Buy more and more War bonds every payday. "You've done your bit, now do your best."

Realtors' Head Sees Better Outlook for '43

Willmore Declares Tide Is Now Turned Against Bureaucrats

Calling on realtors to support the war effort for victory, Cyrus Crane Willmore of St. Louis, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, yesterday declared "we must oppose all acts of bureaucrats who go beyond the authority given them by Congress."

Mr. Willmore in a speech before the Washington Real Estate Board at the Mayflower Hotel warned his hearers nevertheless not to expect too much of the new Congress.

"The tide has turned," he declared, predicting that now both Congress and the "bureaucrats" might be expected to "listen more" to the voice of the people.

He pledged the co-operation of the 16,000 realtors of the country, with their total personnel of 200,000 in an all-out move to buy bonds, help the Red Cross drive, and in other ways and means to help win the war.

Calls for Free Press.

He championed the rights of free enterprise and a free press.

"Second only to winning the war," he declared, "we must preserve free private enterprise. Without free enterprise this war would have lasted months ago. Too many seem to forget that America was built by free enterprise."

"A free press means economic freedom. Should the press be stifled by Government, freedom will have flown out the window."

Taking an optimistic view of the real estate business in spite of "obstacles" which he said were placed in its way by Government, Mr. Willmore said the "outlook for real estate in 1943 should be better for many reasons, particularly because of the possibility of the largest national income in the country's history."

"In 1943," he predicted, "we will have an estimated income of $135,000,000,000. Of this it is estimated that 60 billions will be used for available goods, 30 billions for taxes, 25 billions for savings. This would leave 20 billions as an inflationary danger. Now that it is impossible to buy so many commodities—automobiles, bicycles, electric refrigerators—the Government should urge the purchase of real estate as an inflationary hedge."

Stand on Rent Control.

Mr. Willmore suggested that the Federal Government leave more autonomy to local communities on rent control.

"Rent control," he warned, "adds to the danger of inflation. The purpose of rent control was to keep rents from rising too rapidly, especially in communities where there was a large influx of new war workers. Large payrolls and high wages of workers in industry could be invested in homes, but OPA's policy prevents them from acquiring homes on reasonable terms, and the excess money is used to further aggravate inflation. Money that is used to purchase real estate and to pay off the mortgage debt on real estate already purchased leaves just that much less money for inflation."

"Home building is very largely at a standstill and will remain so," he said, "except in defense areas until the war is won. When the peace comes there will likely be the greatest demand for new houses and new living units in the history of our country."

Realtors should plan now, he said, to help plan for building the post-war world to help "cushion the rise" (See OUTLOOK, Page B-2)

'Friendship' Homes to Open Next Month

More than 3,000 applications have been received for accommodations in McLean Gardens, the elaborate housing project nearing completion on the estate formerly known as Friendship, on Wisconsin avenue at Porter street N.W., according to the Defense Homes Corp. of the Federal Public Housing Authority.

The first units are expected to be available for occupancy early next month, by people who will be selected by officials out of the huge pile of applications. Government warworkers only are eligible. Applications should be mailed to W. A. Zeigler, Defense Homes Corp., Longfellow Building, Connecticut avenue at M street N.W. Applicants should state their Government agency and the type of dwelling they want. Details of the procedure of selection of applicants are to be announced within a few days. The project includes nine residence halls and 31 big apartment buildings. The units to be occupied first will be those along Wisconsin avenue. Ralph S. Scott is the manager.

D. C. Building Permits Drop to $36,400 in Past Week

No Big Projects Listed; Extensive Repairs to Property Are Shown

Building permits issued by the office of Robert H. Davis, District Building Inspector dropped to $36,400 last week, as compared with $384,700 the preceding week.

There were no large projects on the list last week, most of the permits having been issued for repairs to various properties throughout the city.

The larger figures of the preceding week resulting from several row-house building jobs.

Permits issued last week included the following:

Howich Co., 1122 Seventeenth street N.W., owner: Martin Bros., builder: Joseph A. Parks, designer: to make repairs, 1229 to 1233 Twentieth street N.W.; to cost $25,000.

Washington Terminal Co., 50 Massachusetts avenue, owner, builder and designer; to erect one 1-story tile and concrete toilet, 50 Massachusetts avenue; to cost $3,500.

Albert M. Owen, 1813 Hamlin street N.E., owner: A. & A. Co. Berwyn, Md., builder: to make repairs, 1813 Hamlin street N.E.; to cost $400.

Edward S. Jones, 1212 Hamlin street N.E., owner: A. & A. Co. Berwyn, Md., builder: to make repairs, 1212 Hamlin street N.E.; to cost $400.

Jelleff Realty Co., owner: Davis Wick Rosenbaum Co., 613 Fifteenth street N.W., builder: to make repairs, 1216 F st. N.W.; to cost $800.

Joseph George, owner: Lawrence & Son, 2118 Tunlaw road N.W., builder: J. Murtough, designer; to make repairs, Seventh street N.W.; to cost $300.

Ambassador Laundry, Lyle O. Cook, 1426 Irving street N.W., owner: Davis & Platt, Inc., 7898 Georgia avenue, S. E., Md., builder: George H. Boyer, designer; to make repairs, 1424-1426 Irving street N.W.; to cost $4,000.

Preston W. Early, 1155 Forty-second street N.E., owner; Atlantic Home Improvement Co., 3408 Rhode Island avenue, builder; to make repairs, 1155 Forty-second street N.E.; to cost $800.

Owners Should Adapt Homes to Suit Demands

Few of us, particularly today, can build our own homes just as we want them. We must adapt ourselves to a house already built, a house which may be more or less badly designed for our needs.

So whether you rent, or whether you own your home, you should think first of how best to use your available space. Waste, or ill-advised use of space can make even the best planned house both uncomfortable and unattractive. Sensible handling of space, on the other hand, can bring out all the good features of a well-designed house and do much to overcome the worst points of a poor one.

Instead of asking first of all about each room, "How shall we furnish it?" ask, "Who will use the room? What is it to be used for?"

A room does not have to live up to its original name. It can be used for something quite different, or for more than one purpose. The largest bedroom does not need to be occupied by father and mother. It may be better suited for the children where they can have space to play in the daytime as well as sleep at night.

A dining room can be used not only for meals, but also for work and study. In the same way, a living room can sometimes be turned into a bedroom or a combination living-bedroom.

Private Housing Sales Rules Set Up by NHA

Move to Provide Fair Operating Basis for Builders

Rules and regulations clarifying and simplifying the requirements controlling occupancy and marketing of privately financed war housing have been established by the National Housing Agency, Administrator John B. Blandford, Jr., announced today.

The objective of the regulations, which implement the joint policy declaration of the War Production Board and the National Housing Agency agreed to on December 11, is to provide a fair operating basis for the builders of essential private war housing and at the same time to assure that private war housing is made available to the war workers for whom it is intended, Mr. Blandford said.

The new regulations apply only to private war housing built under preference rating applications filed on or after February 10. Occupancy and marketing of projects built under preference ratings applied for prior to that date will be governed by the requirements on those matters previously in force.

Conditions Set Up.

For projects covered by the new regulations, the following principal conditions are established:

1. For the duration of the war emergency, the housing must be reserved for rental occupancy by indispensable in-migrant war workers as defined by the National Housing Agency on November 27. These standards of occupancy also apply if the original owner sells or transfers such housing, as well as to re-occupancy of the quarters.
2. After four months' occupancy, the housing may be made available to the eligible war worker occupants by sale or under the lease option plan, provided that the option applies only to the tenant, that the total monthly payment shall not exceed a fair rental for comparable quarters, that the purchase price shall be a fair market price in no event exceeding $8,000 and that the option to purchase may not be exercised prior to four months' occupancy and shall continue in effect for at least 30 months. The purchaser also must abide by the same

Alexandria Reports January Increase in Building Permits

Many Properties Change Hands in Nearby Areas; New Building Planned

Building permits issued in Alexandria during the month of January totaled more than those issued during both November and December combined, according to A. R. Lash, building inspector. The January figure was $427,736, as compared with $78,910 in November, and $240,795 in December.

New residential construction amounted to $389,586 for six 1-family dwellings, 51 row houses and 4 apartment buildings. Non-residential construction accounted for $13,000.

The total amount of permits issued for repairs was $24,650, while $500 was authorized for installations.

Last week permits issued included: To the FBC corporation, construction of four 2-story brick apartment houses for eight families, each on the lot bounded by Alfred, Patrick, Church and Green streets; estimated cost, $160,000; to Joseph K. Seale, Inc., two groups of 2-story brick-and-stone row houses, on Alexandria avenue between De Witt and Leslie avenues, to cost $45,000. Application was filed by Stonehall

Horsehair Paintbrushes Substitute for Bristles

Horsehair is one of the substitutes for imported hog bristles from China and Russia in the manufacture of wartime paint brushes. Manufacturers of brushes containing horsehair state that to make such brushes last longer and give their maximum result in the application of paint the horsehair should be combed straight before any attempt is made to use the brush.

The new brushes should never under any circumstances be put in water, as water tends to curl, mat and twist horsehair.

If soap and water is used to clean such brushes, it is of utmost importance that the hair be combed straight so that there will be no matting after the brush has been washed. It is equally important that the brush then be dried thoroughly before it is again used. In the case of a new horsehair or mixed horsehair brush, after it has been combed, it should be put directly into paint.

Bedtime Stories

By THORNTON W. BURGESS. Welcome Robin on the wing. Swiftly he is drawing near. Cheer up! Cheer up! Cheer up! Peter Rabbit always feels that way, too, when it is about time for Welcome to arrive. Peter knew that now that Winsome Bluebird had arrived Welcome was likely to come almost any day, and so every day he listened for the sound of that cheery voice. At last, one sunny morning he heard it. Peter knew in an instant where Welcome Robin was. He was up in the Old Orchard. You see, Welcome's voice is very different from the voice of Winsome Bluebird. It is loud and clear and cheerful and you always can tell just where it comes from. Winsome's voice is soft and sweet and gentle and seems to come from nowhere in particular. As soon as Peter heard Welcome Robin's voice he started for the Old Orchard in spite of timid little Mrs. Peter's protest that it wasn't safe for Peter to be so far from the dear Old Brier Patch at that time of day. Lipperty-lipperty-lipperty-lip ran Peter as fast as ever he could until he reached the old stone wall on the edge of the Old Orchard close by Johnny Chuck's house.

coming. I'm glad you're glad I'm here and I'm glad I'm here, too," replied Welcome, cutting his song off right in the middle. "It has been a long journey, and it is good to feel that I have gotten to the end of it." "How long a journey has it been?" asked Peter, who, you know, really knows nothing about journeys. Welcome Robin looked across to the Old Pasture. It was perhaps half a mile away. Of course, Peter and Welcome Robin and the other little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows don't know anything about miles or such things. "Of course, you go over to the Old Pasture once in a while," said Welcome Robin. "Yes," replied Peter, "but not often. It is too far away." Welcome Robin laughed right out. "Do you call that far?" he exclaimed. "Now, listen, Peter. If you should run over to the Old Pasture and back 10 times a day for a hundred days, you wouldn't have traveled as far as I have just come."

Nature's Children POLAR BEAR. (Thalactoris maritimus). BY LILLIAN COX ATHEY. Six races of polar bear have been described, four of them found in America. The range of the polar or white bear is in every part of the Arctic Sea in the Old World and the New. It ranges very little on to the adjoining land. This bear has chosen its home among the broken ice offshore. It has been known to roam as much as 30 miles from the sea when in dire need of food. It is said that the ice king would prefer to swim miles out at sea than to amble over land. His couch of ice is perfectly comfortable, the sea yields an abundance of food and he can swim for recreation whenever he so desires. In the Arctic winter, when the Polar sea is a solid sheet of ice, he seeks the southern edges or goes to channels kept open by the tides. His mates retire inland to den up and sleep. The polar bear wears a royal robe for the homes of those who can afford one. The polar bear finds his mate in midsummer. When the autumn days arrive, he departs for the open waters far out at sea. His favorite game is seal—not that he can catch these wily creatures in the water, but he sneaks up on them while they are asleep on their couches of thick ice. Miles away, his mate, who has put on thick layers of fat during the summer, seeks a sheltered nook on the high dry land. She digs into a great drift of snow, and when she is deep into it she curls up and goes fast to sleep. The driving snows soon cover her retreat. There will be a small hole to admit fresh air, this vent being caused by the breathing of the occupant of the den. In January, the twins are born. They are no larger than a rat and almost naked, the birthday garment being a robe of fine down—surely no protection for such a chilly nursery. But they nestle close, and are told, in the deep fur, warmed by their mother's body, and she cuddles them. Soon, they are strong enough to climb over her great body, and as spring approaches she becomes restless. The heat from her body, together with her movements in the den, has made the room more spacious. The husky twins now have room to tussle and box—for bear babies must have a plenty of space for exercise. At last, the twins follow their mother out of their igloo. They toddle along as she ambles toward the sea. Soon, their lessons begin. The life of the polar bear is a strenuous one, fearless and full of courage.
