Congressional furore over military expansion, deferment of farm workers and a civilian labor draft broke out on the entire manpower front today and brought the first move toward legislative restrictions on the size of the Army.

As the controversy widened, a special White House committee of topranking presidential consultants calld a meeting to draft an initial report on how men and women best can be mobilized for war work. The committee, composed of Harry Hopkins, James F. Byrnes, Admiral William E. Leahy, Bernard M. Baruch and Justice Samuel I. Rosenman, met amid persistent reports that the whole civilian war organization may be overhauled.

Members of a Senate bloc opposed to increasing the armed forces to 10,800,000 this year on the ground it would absorb needed farm and industrial manpower, disclosed plans to submit a resolution directing the Appropriations Committee to refuse

The measure, authored by Senators Bankhead, Democrat, of Alabama; Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, and Thomas, Democrat, of Oklahoma, would compel cutting the Army's projected size of 8,200,000 by approximately 2,000,000.

Reiterating advocacy of compulsory manpower legislation, Mr. Stimson said he had concluded "that one of the reasons why industry and agriculture and the whole civilian population have not moved more rapidly toward an all-out effort is that we have relied almost entirely on voluntary co-operation.'

Roosevelt Calls On Congress for Peace Economy

Resources Board Plans Submitted In Special Message

Recommendations for a vast program of Government aid to industry and individuals in switching to a peacetime economy after the war and assuring expended development of national resources with social security for all were submitted to Congress by President Roosevelt

In a special message, the President urged that Congress give the recommendations "full consideration during this session" in order to insure against returning to the "inequities, insecurity and fears of the past" when peace comes.

The recommendations were contained in two voluminous reports drafted by the National Resources Planning Board, one dealing with postwar development of national resources and one with security work and relief policies.

Calls for Responsibility.

"Formal acceptance by the Federal Government of responsibility for insuring jobs at decent pay to all those able to work regardless of whether or not they can pass a means test," was urged in recommendations for a greatly broadened social security program.

Specific proposals were put forward for aiding industry in the cluded with a famous phrase used transition from war to peacetime economy, including a suggestion for immediate provision in Federal tax (Rommel's offensive from the laws for establishment of "conversion reserves" by war plants and the day before this dispatch was provision for Federal rehabilitation grants to be used where needed for according to Allied headquuarters conversion of war factories to peacetime production.

The board recommended "extension and new forms of joint private and governmental partnership" in some industries in connection with its proposals for demobilization of wartime industry.

Crucial Industries. "Consideration should be given to the desirability of various types of partnership in the direction of those industries of crucial importance in both a wartime and peacetime economy and in which the Government has made great investments," the report said.

In this category, it listed aluminum, magnesium, shipbuilding and aircraft. "Government has a direct responsibility," the board asserted. "and should participate in the decisions as to what areas and what concerns should continue to operate in these industries. The report also emphasized that as essential safeguards of demoocracy, steps should be taken to give labor a share in management as well as uphold its right to collective bargaining. Measures to prevent "the rise of new industrial oligarchies" through strict enforcement of anti-trust laws also were urged.

In transmitting the recommendations to Congress, Mr. Roosevelt declared that "We can agree on our objectives and in our common determination that work, fair play and social security after the war is

He informed Congress that when it has agreed on procedures for the consideration of problems mentioned in the two reports, the executive agencies responsible for administration of the programs involved will be ready to give all assistance within their power "in devising appropriate ways and means to accomplish these high purposes.'

Nine GOP Members Say 'Labors Brought Forth a Mouse'

The House Ways and Means Committee today approved a compromise income tax collection plan imposing a 20 per cent withholding levy on taxable portions of all wages and salaries and leaving to each individual the option of remaining a year behind in tax payments or 'doubling up" taxes in one year and going on a pay-as-you-go

No tax abatement is provided. The withholding levy against pay envelopes and salary checks would become effective July 1.

The committee thus abandoned all long-debated current tax collection proposals and transferred to the House floor the issue of whether one tax year should be canceled to put all taxpayers on a pay-as-you-go basis, as proposed by Beardsley Ruml, New York banker.

Opposed by Nine Republicans.

Approving the compromise plan were 15 Democrats and one Republican, Representative Gearhart of California. Nine Republicans were

The Republicans issued a statement saying "the mountain has labored and brought forth a mouse," and "it is obvious that the House will have to take the matter into its own hands if taxpayers are to be made current."

The 20 per cent withholding levy (covering both income and victory taxes) would not be an additional tax, but a means of collection against actual taxes.

Means Committee gave this explana-"The plan continues the existing system of collecting the individual

Welles' Plea Welcomed, He Tells Commons: Wallace Plan Backed

LONDON, March 10.-Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons today that the British government welcomed the proposal made by Sumner Welles, United States Undersecretary of State, for a conference now on post-

At the same time. Vice President Henry A. Wallace's proposal that a understanding be reached by the Western democracies and Russia before the war ends received emphatic indorsement from most of the influential sections of the press in Britain, which now has a 20-year treaty of collaboration with the Soviet war aims and economic problems.

Mr. Eden said there had been a number of informal meetings with Allied governments represented in London and there were "continuing" conversations with the Dominions and India on financial questions.

Welles' Statement Displayed. Replying to a query by Emanuel Shinwell, Laborite, whether Russia had been consulted in such postwar discussions, Mr. Eden declared that Mr. Shinwell apparently was referring to Mr. Welles' staetment on United States and Soviet consultations and this was a matter for the two governments concerned. Mr. Welles had advanced the proposal February 26, in an address at the University of Toronto. Regarding an "understanding with Russia," the London Times devoted nearly three columns in its wartime edition of only 10 pages to an exhausitive argument for "truly close collaboration" among Britain, Russia and the United States.

Nearly all the newspapers gave prominent display to Mr. Welles' statement that Ambassador William H. Standlev's assertion in Moscow that the Russian people are not being told the full story of American aid was made without consultation with Washington.

Expensive Fur Coats And Costly Jewelry Among Items Mentioned

y the Associated Press. Price regulations on so-called uxury items such as expensive fur coats may be abandoned in a new policy shift toward concentration and simplification of OPA controls over basic cost of living articles.

Price Administrator Brown was reported today to have told a committee of Senators he could see little value in attempting to regulate the selling price of articles which are not competitive with the necessities of

Committee members said they inerpreted Mr. Brown's statement as indicating clearly that he proposes to narrow the price control field to exclude luxury items, the selling level of which has little bearing on inflation prices. Members mentioned expensive fur coats and higher priced jewelry as falling within this

Mr. Brown also was reported to have discussed the possibility of simplifying the administrative work of the agency by taking controls off Mr. Brown told reporters he dismany small and relatively inexensive items such as department stores sell, where there is difficulty in enforcing regulations.

Appears Before Committee. Mr. Brown, himself a former Senator, apparently won general approval of his OPA policies in an appearance before 10 members of the Senate Finance and Banking Committees at a closed session yesterday. Discussion of OPA personnel was said to have led to Mr. Brown's disclosure that the agency now employes 2,700 lawyers. He told the committee members that Great Britain's food control organization employed only 10 lawyers and left no doubt that he had in mind drastic reduction of the OPA's legal staff.

Mr. Brown also told the Senators he intends to reduce price ceilings in cases where the unit cost of producing goods has declined because of expanding production. He denied this policy is designed to control profits. The administrator said "my job

FOUR HOTELS ONE STANDARY

A good hotel possesses individuality. In operating four of New York's finest hotels under one general executive direction, we have jealously guarded those qualities which have given each of them its character.

But, while encouraging individuality, we constantly judge all by one standard of performance. Each, in its own way, must meet our rigorous test of excellence. In any of the four, the New York visitor is assured of relaxing comfort, of cordial, conscientious service, of fine food, of gracious hospitality.

Lease-Lend Expected To Win Overwhelming Victory in House

Extension Receives Unanimous Approval Of Senate Committee

By the Associated Press.

Out of the international uproar over American lease-lend aid to Russia one fact emerged clear-cut today-that the House will approve continuance of the program for another year, and probably by an almost unanimous vote.

The House roll call will come late today. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee gave its unanimous approval to the extension today, agreeing to a suggestion by Senator Nye, Republican, of North Dakota that it write into its favorable report a statement that the committee feels the act should in no way commit this Government on future economic

Senator Nye said he believed the State Department went "beyond the powers of the act" by including in an agreement with Great Britain a pledge of mutual action against "all forms of discriminatory treatment in international commerce" and for "the reduction of tariff and other

Even though Republican and House Democratic leaders expressed confidence the bill would win overwhelming approval, the assertion of Ambassador William H. Standley in Moscow that the Russian people are not being told the full story of American aid still excited comment. Reaction in Congress was mixed. It ranged from the suggestion of Chairman Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee that this Nation "be patient," to the statement of Senator Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana that "Stalin is a realisthe's for Russia first and last." Senator Wiley, Republican, of Wisconsin called it all a "tempest in a

At the Soviet Embassy a spokesman said Ambassador Standley's remarks were "rather puzzling," inasmuch as Soviet newspapers from time to time have published news of American and British supplies sent to Russia. The Red Army newspaper Red Star, he said, recently carried such an article, Inquiries at the State Department disclosed that the Moscow Embassy itself had informed the State Depatment on January 25 that Pravda, official organ of the Communist party, had published an item summarizing American and British aid to Russia. The Moscow Embassy's report did not say how extensive the summary was nor what prominence was given it by the newspaper.

Painting by Mattson Wins First Prize at Corcoran Biennial

Awards Are Announced: Public Display at Gallery Opens March 21

Henry Mattson of Woodstock N. Y., who won third prize in the Corcoran Biennial Exhibition of Contemporary American Oil Paintings eight years ago, returned to the exhibition to take first prize of $2,000 and the Corcoran Gold Medal this year, the Corcoran Gallery of Art announced today.

The selections of Mr. Mattson's "Rocks" and three other prize pictures were announced after five members of the committee of selection had been deliberating on the decision for a week. The $5,000 worth of awards offered through the W. A. Clark Fund and the medals will be officially presented to the four winning artists if they can attend the private showing of the exhibition on Saturday, March 20. The public will get its first view on Sunday,

Second prize of the Corcoran Silver Medal and $1,500 went to Aaron Bohrod, instructor at Southern Illinois State Normal University, for his "Wilmington Evening," town street scene. Mr. Bohrod is a former pupil of John Sloan, Boardman Robinson and Richard Lahey, principal of the Corcoran School of Art and chairman of the committee of

Have you had to stand in line for dining car service? If so, we're truly sorry. If not, we're truly surprised!-for Santa Fe is handling more than twice as many passengers as in 1941, and with the same equipment! No more diners can be built during the war.

Five settings are frequently necessary today - two used to do. Dining car employes are working extra hard, doing the very best they can.

Your own good spirit is sincerely appreciated-especially if you're making it a point these days to release your seat as soon as you've finished eating. We know how restful it

WEDNESDAY

A Neglected Opportunity

In their minority report on the Hobbs anti-racketeering amendment, on which the House soon will vote under a special rule, Representatives Celler of New York and Lane of Massachusetts state that the basic objection to this measure is "its wholly unwarranted reflection on the organized millions of men and women in this country." That statement deserves some examination. The amendment is aimed chiefly at one specific practice of certain union locals. The practice is to stop trucks entering a city and to collect a fee, said to be equivalent of a day's pay for a union driver, from the owner or driver. The collection of the fee is made under threat and those who in the past have refused to pay it have been beaten. The Government lost its attempt to prosecute union locals under the anti-racketeering law when the Supreme Court held that the practice was a union practice, which Congress had exempted. The Hobbs amendment wipes out such exemption.

Now the opponents of this amendment make no attempt to condone the practice. "On the contrary," say Mr. Celler and Mr. Lane in their minority report, "it is our own belief that these activities are in the long run disadvantageous to those comparatively few locals who engage in them and to the organized labor movement in general." President Daniel Tobin of the teamsters' union, according to the report, has disavowed the practice and prohibited in the future "such outrageous conduct on the part of unions under | entius in 312 A.D.—the miracle must his jurisdiction."

But it is evident that such disavowals and such orders have not been sufficient to end a practice which is condemned by the critics as well as the friends and members of organized labor. Why, then, should a law designed to stop this practice be interpreted as an "unwarranted reflection" or, for that matter, as any reflection, on members of organized labor? Do the laws against murder, arson and bank robbery reflect on the millions of citizens who do not participate in such crimes? Opposition to the amendment reflects an apparent weakness in labor leadership which is not conducive to the progress of organized labor, and which does the labor movement more harm than good. There are other practices which are not condoned by responsible labor leaders and which violate fundamental precepts of individual freedom in this country. Unable or unwilling to remove them, those responsible for labor policy leave their removal to outraged public opinion. But instead of gaining the advantage which lies in really effective condemnation of obnoxious practices, labor leadership is placed, as in this case, in the position of defending them.

The Hobbs amendment undoubtedly will pass the House and it should be approved by the Senate. Wise labor statesmanship would be to work for its enactment, not to oppose it by making it appear that the vast majority of decent, lawabiding citizens who belong to labor unions feel any differently toward the elimination of labor rackets than their fellow-citizens who are not end, for the advancement, not the detriment, of organized labor.

certainty which results from such self-contradictory statements. Every one realizes that Mr. Wickard cannot determine the exact extent to which our food supply is going to be affected by reduced planting or such unpredictable factors as weather. It seems clear from his testimony before the Senate committee. however, that he is revising his own estimates downward, and it would be a good thing if he would tell the people, so far as it is possible to do so, what kinds and quantities of food they may expect to receive this year. The reassuring impression created by the promise of a "healthful and well-balanced diet" will prove to be a boomerang if Mr. Wickard and his associates, knowing that the facts no longer justify such a forecast, should neglect to put the record straight for the benefit of the public.

The theme of his pronouncement was the conduct of the forces of the United States in the conflict with Spain. Reports of barbarities perpetrated by the enemy against the civilian population of Cuba had prompted a question as to "why God had made this Nation great and strong if it was not for an hour and a work" like the repression of such atrocities. "The war." he declared. "is waged on Red Cross lines, for humanity, for the relief and succor of the starving and helpless. And how magnificently it is waged! Can human sympathy be too large * * * for those brave fellows of our Army and Navy * * * ??

Mr. Harrison's expression, first published nearly four-and-a-half decades ago, applies in its essential significance to the issues of today. The cause is very much the samecivilization against savagery. Methods are not vastly different. The objective is justice and mercy in the world-more definitely so than at any previous time. But the struggle with Spain was a "small affair" and the prevailing contest with the Axis powers is as big as the globe itself, as compelling as fate, as impressive as destiny. No words are meaningful enough to tell the need for the salvation of mankind from slavery, poverty and death. The Red Cross is a symbol of the purpose of America and her Allies. ### New Draft Policy

In prescribing a new method for handling the occupational draft deferment of Federal employes, President Roosevelt has followed closely the mechanics suggested by the Bellamy committee. Basically, the principles heretofore governing deferment under the September order of the War Manpower Commission are unchanged-that is, exemption from military service still is to be determined largely by the nature of the employe's duties, and their relation to the war effort. The new regulations, however, go somewhat beyond the old in emphasizing the capacity of the individual, "actual effectiveness" on the job being one of the factors to be considered.

Special committees now will sift the deferment cases in each agency, and final decision rests with a review committee to be established in the Manpower Commission. One of the criticisms the Bellamy committee made of the former system was the lack of uniformity in the policies of the several agencies, and it is reasonable to suppose that this condition will be remedied by channeling all cases through the one unit, which members. Certainly such labor will be able to set standards and restatesmanship would work, in the quire the subgroups to conform to them. Under the changed setup, the Civil Service Commission, which was empowered to make recommendations on deferments to the War Manpower Commission, is relieved of that responsibility. The Bellamy comnew point rationing plan, Secretary | mittee had been critical of this form of Agriculture Wickard discussed of centralized control, holding that this country's food prospects in it was too slow, and could not take rather optimistic fashion. Assuming | cognizance of work requirements and good management of our food supply, individual fitness. It also constihe said, "we will not only have tuted a departure from the principle

In outlining the plan, the combalanced diet." He acknowledged mittee explained that it sought to "produce a usable and practical malines and that there would be less chinery for deferment." The obstacles to accomplishment were freeaside all suggestions that there ly recognized, as was the likelihood might be a really serious shortage. A possible reason for thus disposing of one of the committee's most important recommendations, however, lies in the fact that the Budget Bureau at present is working on a retrenchment program.

The Safer Bet

Secretary of War Stimson has made a reasonable, clear and convincing statement of the imperative need for maintaining the Army at its presently contemplated size. If there is an adequate answer to the facts and persuasive arguments which he set out in his address last night it has not yet been developed. And it is to be hoped that those who would bolster our civilian economy at the expense of our armed forces will desist from that course until such time as they are prepared to Benjamin Harrison probably was show wherein the Secretary of War was in error. Mr. Stimson pointed out that the size of the armed forces was fixed of the war.

The first step consists of the training of the men—a painstaking process under which the recruit is inducted, schooled as an individual and then gradually brought along through larger and larger units until finally he emerges as one cog in a full division composed of many diverse elements. This is a process which requires at least a year. Once set in motion, this stream of training cannot be disrupted at a moment's notice. If we curtail the rate of induction this summer, it will be next summer before the effect will be felt in the form of a smaller number of trained divisions available for service. But if subsequent experience should demonstrate the error of a curtailment this year it would be too late next summer to do anything about it. We would have to suffer the consequences, for a modern army or a modern division cannot be pulled out of a hat.

A second important point to remember is that our plan of campaign for next year necessarily is based on the assumption that a certain number of additional trained divisions will be ready when needed. We are committed to this plan of campaign and it has been getting results. The enemy is on the downgrade and the prospect of a shortened war rests on the plan to deliver additional blows against him next year. But if these blows cannot be delivered as planned because of a cut in the size of the Army, it is only reasonable to suppose that the enemy will be better able to organize his defenses and thereby prolong the war, with a correspondingly greater loss of American lives.

Mr. Stimson did not attempt to ignore or evade the contention that we cannot maintain the Army as planned and still supply it, transport it and meet minimum civilian needs. Instead, he met it head on, his reply being that the industries producing weapons, ships and civilian goods can produce enough with the working force that will be available if we have the determination to do so. It is the duty of every citizen, he said, to examine into his own life and his own community and see whether production in industry and on the farm cannot be increased enormously; whether absenteeism, threatened strikes, complacency, business as usual, or even insistence on hoped-for standards of living are not going a long way to prevent what could be accomplished by an all-out

This, then, is the real issuewhether we should timidly resign ourselves to a smaller and weaker Army or whether we should make the effort of which we are really capable to raise and maintain the Army that the experts believe to be necessary. It is a question of which is the "safer bet"-to follow the advice of those who have made a careful study of the problem and upon whom rests responsibility for the conduct of the war, or take the counsel of those who seem to think first in terms of what cannot be done. With these two choices before us, it is difficult to see how any one can advocate the latter.

A Moving Tale

Regardless of housing shortages and limited gasoline, these are moving times. "The grass is always greener in the other fellow's yard,' but as long as the other fellow doesn't know that, or doesn't want grass, in the game of life it is always somebody's move. In the little town of Vale, Oregon, the other day it was almost everybody's move. A banker settled down in a variety store: the proprietor of the latter. for variety, set up business in a barber shop. The barber packed up his shears and his conversation and went to another tonsorial emporium. The village blacksmith took over a deserted filling station, where he stands with brawny arms under the spreading fuel pump, which is blighted as severely as the chestnut tree of his ancestors. The loose ends now consist of a stray gasoline proprietor, a loose barber, an empty bank and a vacant smithy. The possibilities of completing the chain are obvious-after which it might be a good idea for the Chamber of Commerce, before it moves out, to change the name of this bustling town from

Rommel's Plight Now Becoming More Acute

Maj. Eliot Says 'Fox' Faces Disaster as Even Weather Turns Favorable to Allies

By Maj. George Fielding Eliot.

In Tunisia, we must view the operations of Marshal Rommel as energetic efforts to get the best returns out of a central position and a mobile force which is not strong enough to overwhelm either of its opponents

For Rommel to stand on the defensive would be to waste the mobility and striking power, and the excellent equipment, training and experience of his Afrika Korps. He is employing it to upset the dispositions of his opponents and thus delay the final reckoning which he must know is coming. All this is perfectly consistent with the underlying and fundamental mission of the German forces in Africa-to gain time in Europe by keeping the Allies fighting in Africa as long as possible.

To be successful in operations of this nit-and-run character, it is, of course, necessary that Rommel should be able to disengage his forces after accomplishing his immediate objectives, without sustaining crippling losses. That means that his losses must not be greater than can be readily replaced, within the capacity of his somewhat precarious lines of communication.

A certain amount of personnel, spare parts and other items can be brought to him by air from Sicily and Italy; but for the bulk of his heavy supplies, for replacements of tanks and motor transport, he is dependent upon the safe arrival in Tunisian ports of a reasonable proportion of the shipping that sets out to make the dangerous passage across the Mediterranean. In this latter respect, his situation is becoming more difficult. The greatest single cause of this is the coming of better weather over the waters of the Mediterranean. The season of low ceilings, thick mists and rain squalls is passing. This means better visibility for Allied aircraft to discover Axis shipping and better visibility for Allied surface craft and submarines to attack that shipping. The passage from Italy and Sicily to the ports of Tunisia is becoming more dangerous, as is evident by the increased sinkings reported in Allied communiques. Thus Rommel will not easily replace the 50 tanks which he lost in his sortie out of the Mareth Line against the British 8th Army and it may well be questioned whether, on balance, this operation has, from the German point of view, been justified by the results obtained.

Moreover, there are signs that Allied air superiority is, at any rate for the time being, increasing on all parts of the Tunisian front. The better weather will enable us to reap extra dividends from this superiority. The Luftwaffe will have to draw again upon its reserves if it is not to abandon the control of the African air to British and Ameri-

There is nothing in the present situation in Africa which suggests any reason to depart from the opinion previously expressed in these articles, that the days of the Axis in Africa are numbered and that it is only a question of how long it will take to oust them from that continent altogether. Admiral of the Fleet Sir Andrew Cunningham, the extremely capable British commander of the inter-Allied naval forces in the Mediterranean. expects the Germans to attempt a withdrawal of their African forces as the hour of their final defeat approaches, but he does not believe that this attempt will be successful.

Certainly it would seem a suicidal business now, in the face of Allied naval and air superiority, to attempt to take perhaps 200,000 men out of the various ports of Tunisia and transfer them to Sicily. Such a German Dunkerque would seem likely to end in one of the greatest slaughters that this war has yet seen. Yet in the end the German choice might be between attempting such a withdrawal and surrender. The Germans are fighting now to stave off the day when that choice may have to be made; the Allies are fighting to impose that choice upon the enemy as quickly as possible. ### Working With Russia

The truth is that we have not yet fully accepted the fact that we shall have to live in the same world with Russia after the war. Only one leading Western statesman, so far as we can see, has made up his mind. He is Anthony Eden, Foreign Minister of Great Britain, who last year negotiated Britain's 20year treaty of mutual assistance with Russia. That treaty also calls for mutual planning of the peace. It seems as if Eden is basing English policy and his own future on the hope of working with Russia. We Americans have no such treaty, merely an indefinite executive agreement. Shouldn't we, now, during war, enlarge the British-Soviet 20-year treaty into a British-American-Chinese-Soviet 20-year treaty? Can't we end the guessing game that continually clouds relationships between Russia and

The Anti-Social Hoarder

There are analogies for the hoarder and hoarding which ought to reveal him, even to himself. If he were one of a family at dinner, and, because he got there first or could reach farther, piled his plate while others went without, he would have a time squaring himself on any ground of forehandedness. He would be called by his right name, as he should be in the larger family, which is the community. Actually he is one with the ineffable Goering, who told Germans the other week that whatever the fate of the captive countries, they could be assured they would not lack for food. "We eat first" is the Goering platform, as it is the American hoarder's. There example, if every householder had bought according to his or her minimum requirements, there would have been no gives them numbers, and then says that call for rationing of that item. ### THIS AND THAT

By Charles E. Tracewell.

"BETHESDA, Md.

'Dear Sir:

"An old wire trash basket or burner will do a great deal toward discouraging pigeons from coming to a bird feeding station designed for small birds. "I tried it out recently, with fair results, but not perfect; the pigeons still came, but not so many, and certainly they did not get so much to eat. "I expect a real reduction in my feed bills from now on. "Here is the way I worked it.

"I put the small feeding station squarely on the ground, and then simply inverted the basket over it. That is, the bottom of the basket was now the top. "This put a circle of wire around and over the feeder.

"It was interesting to watch the pigeons circle in.

"They came in confidently, having had a long experience of eating at my house. "I had grown tired of trying to feed so many. There were 20 or more of them all the time. I simply wanted to feed the small songsters, the titmice, chickadees and all the rest of them which all of us who live in the suburban areas know and love.

"I had never intended to feed pigeons but they kept coming, and I didn't do anything about it, until at last there were 20 or more of them

"I didn't want to hurt them, but they refused to go away. My feed bills were far more than I could afford.

"The worst feature of it was that the pigeons, instead of perching on my house-which I was glad enough they didn't do, I will admit-perched all the time on my neighbor's house

"Now this neighbor is a good man, and a little mite testy, as good men sometimes are, and although he never said anything, being a Christian, I know he wished those tarnation pigeons had never come around, and that they would stay off his house.

"I shooed them, and he shooed them, but it did no good. Every morning, get their necks through. there they were, lined up on his roof, not on mine

"Now, I am a Christian myself, and I did not want those pigeons on his roof. Nothing I could say to them, however would convince them that they should fly over to my house.

* * * * "At last, in desperation, I thought of the trash burner.

"Inverting it over the filled feeding station, I went back into the house to watch results.

Stalin Himself Has Been Blunt On Second Front

By DAVID LAWRENCE.

The real question raised by Admiral Standley's comments in Moscow given to the press is not whether the American Ambassador spoke out of turn or whether what he said was possibly not intended for publication, but whether what he did say is the extensive Amer- David Lawrence. ican lease-lend aid is to Russia? It newspapers, copies of which have reached New York, there are published references to American aid under the lease-lend program. But it still may be true the the essential facts are being withheld, because in Russia newspapers are not circulated beyond certain areas, and it may well be that the radio, for example, has not been permitted in Russia to convey the facts about our lease-lend aid to the Russian Certainly Admiral Standely had some reason for making the statements attributed to him. The State Department here says it was not consulted in advance, which may or may not mean that what the admiral said is repudiated. Actually, the department takes the customary discreet and diplomatic attitude that the admiral could not surely have intended to imply that there was any lack of trust between the Rustian and American governments.

Practiced by Stalin.

The incident is just as puzzling in some respects as the occasional bits of seeming indiscretion which Premier Stalin permits himself to practice. Thus, every now and then he makes a statement or a speech apparently minimizing the second front in North Africa and giving the impression that Russia is bearing the brunt of the war. If the head of the Russian government can speak so frankly about Russian-American relations and cannot be accused of attempting to foster disunity, then it seems plausible that an American Ambassador might speak his mind, too outspoken comments are believed to be relished by the Russian Premier. so it might well be that Admiral Standley has done a bit of that famous "prodding" which Wendell Willkie indulged a few months back when he gave an interview from Moscow urging a second front. Many American observers were flabbergasted, but apparently Stalin liked the prodding and apparently Admiral Standley has begun a little prodding of his own.

The American Ambassador was once chief of naval operations here and is not the kind to go off halfcocked in a delicate situation such as envelops American-Russian diplomacy. He evidently is after something—possibly to impress on the Russians that they must not minimize American aid or what we the major points of the war effort No Path Yet Leads are doing in North Africa and also to date is something for which he to persuade them to develop a closer should be commended instead of 'Better' Mousetrap collaboration with us on military condemned. and naval matters.

The inference which appears most plausible is that high officials here want some sort of showdown with Russia on postwar plans as well as women less than men for the same or victim. Allied collaboration, particularly in work, respect to the use of Siberian bases to help in the war against Japan. And it may be that Admiral Standley chose his own way of bringing about the desired intimacy between Russia and America, especially while the lease-lend bill is pending. It would be a risky piece of pressure. but it is not unknown in diplomacy. especially in the devious history of Russian maneuvers in world affairs.

On the Record

Wickard Is Either Painting Bogey on U. S. Food Or Admitting Worst Disorganization in History

By DOROTHY THOMPSON. If Secretary of Agriculture Wickard now warns that "we are approaching a level of nutrition such as we have in Great Britain," he is either painting a wall for the sake of forcing greater co - operation with the rationing schemes, or he is describing the worst disorganization in the history of the

The British nutrition level is that of a country that supports 46,000,000 people on a territory approximately the size of New England and that normally imports more than 60 per cent of its food. Today, with a maximum intensification of agriculture, it still imports 40 per cent.

Our own food shortages are not due to lease-lend shipments to either Britain or Russia. We are normally huge exporters of food, and we are canalizing exports to our Allies. But Britain still gets an enormous percentage of her imports from the commonwealth. The lease-lend hearings and the Stettinius report dispel any illusion that Americans may go hungry because our Allies are being fed. For instance, we have not sent an ounce of butter to Britain

If we go hungry, or fall to the nutrition level of Britain, it will be wholly because of abominable planning in agriculture. Just now it is fashionable to attack "planners." But the truth is that our whole war effort is screaming aloud for really efficient planning. In agriculture we have had lack of foresight, knowledge and, above all, lack of courage.

As for foresight, it is only a few months since Secretary Wickard was gaily carrolling that there were no food shortages whatever in sight - although the veriest amateurs with some knowledge of the farm situation, were already deeply perturbed.

As for knowledge, the mis-estimate of stocks and the misunderstandings of connections between various price ceilings, food production and labor shortages and labor prices still persists.

As for courage - instead of making an overall production plan, at the outset, in which all count - a publicly announced farmer in the country would know what the problem was and what the demands upon him, we parently afraid of telling the whole truth, and have chosen to wait until the facts were so obvious that public pressure would support measures taken. Now there is a crisis-a genuine crisis. And spring is here and still there is no considered and comprehensive planning. We should have this summer an army of at least 100,000 women, and 300,000 or 400,000 high school boys and high school and college girls working on the land, with some previous basic training or at least mental conditioning for the tasks. But that would have involved getting busy last fall, not in the middle of March. The extension service of the Agriculture Department has had a good program, based on well-tested experience, for the recruiting, placement and supervision of youth, in which the Department of Education and the Federal Employment Service could each have performed an appropriate function. But Congress has not yet passed the appropriation, because there are other things in the farm bill that

To turn loose thousands of hastily recruited high school students without careful selection and adequate supervision will accomplish very little. The time is too late

Trained farmers are still leaving farms for the higher wages of industries, and being accepted unquestioningly by the industries. The priorities system through which a farmer has to pass in order to get the simplest replacements for machinery or plant is unbelievably cumbersome, and wasteful of time and energy. And it is ridiculously centralized. Decisions that could be made by a bright stenographer in any township, according to clear standards and rules, have to pass through three or four bureaucracies and be settled

The waste of food in restaurants-where 15 to 20 million people eat daily—is shocking. In in a New York chop house, an individual can still gobble down a full pound of beeksteak as one portion, and bread and butter are served to people who eat neither. Under the sanitary laws this uneaten bread and butter is then shoveled in to the garbage

The distribution of food stocks complicates the problem. Huge amounts of grain are stored in the Middle West, and there is no transportation for it to the East. One wonders why these stocks were not redistributed at the outbreak of the war, as they would have been if there had been people with brains, authority, and the courage to make decisions. And the net effect of all the bureaucratic rules is to dampen and strangle the enterprise of the individual instead of releasing into creative, productive

What we need is an overall, long-range plan, based upon facts, and not upon propaganda, and then the mobilization of all the farming people and communities of the country to realize it. Instead of releasing creative energy the whole machinery of farm production is slowing down from confusion and discourage-

America dedicates the first Spring month to "The Greatest Mother In The World". There's work to be done-so much work-in so many places. Today the Red Cross needs the help of everyone of us as never before. Metropolitan Washington is counted upon to raise a fund of $1,555,400, during the month of March. That's a challenge to our minds and our hearts. It's a personal privilege and duty to contribute. Let's each of us give generously in the traditional American Way, for the alnuman suffering on all our fighting fronts and at Once Upon A Time. Upper Connecticut Avenue, Wisconsin Avenue, upper 14th Street, Georgia Avenue, other busy streets were far out of town. Land was cheap, with few buyers. Imagine a shopkeeper opening up in a cow pasture. What changed those avenues and streets into populated and prosperous sections of Washington? The answer is public transportation - Street Cars first and then Buses. When people were provided with dependable transportation, the "way out" avenues and streets outgrew the farm days. The same was true of every section of Washington; it is true today. Street Cars and Buses are the red corpuscles of Complaints have come from a On Sedition Charges number of war-industry centers that these craftsmen are not getting the nourishment that hard physical labor requires, and plans are under way to solve the situation.

Problem of Distribution. Officials would like to see that factory cafeterias and restaurants have, regardless of rationing and ordinary civilian supply, ample meat and other food which hard workers guilty crave and need. This, they explained, presents no particular difficulty, except, perhaps, problems of supply and distribution in certain war-boom communities where transportation facilities have not kept pace with the swift growth in population. Restaurants and hotels generally are being limited to percentages of their former purchases of food now The Food Distribution Administration, assigned the responsibility of administering a set of food priority regulations recently issued by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, has authority to give the green light to shipments of food "for governmental agencies and essential civilian users." But Roy F. Hendrickson, food distribution administrator,

"Priorities for essential civilian users of food will be used only as a last resort in an emergency and only after all other means to procure food have been exhausted." OPA Must Concur. Mr. Hendrickson also said priorities for civilians would not be issued without concurrence of the Office of Price Administration, which carries out all food rationing programs decreed by Mr. Wickard. The armed forces, the Maritime Commission, the War Shipping Administration and the Lease-Lend Administration get automatic priority ratings. Failure to extend this to employes of war industries was said by a Government spokesman to be motivated by reluctance to upset civilian rights and habits any more than is absolutely necessaryin other words, not to treat all civilians alike. "Our people," he added, "resent by tradition regimentation and interference with their normal ways The war has made a certain amount of this invasion of private rights necessary. But the Agriculture Department and the OPA don't want to go any further than seems essential. People naturally would resent seeing certain classes of civilian receive preferences, especially if it were done by force.' Waiver Plan Considered. With meat rationing rapidly approaching, officials are inclined to believe it will be enough to waive rationing requirements for eating places in heavy war industries, allowing them to buy what they can on the open market. Whether war workers who do muscular and exhaustive tasksthose employed in steel mills, munitions plants, shipyards and mines -also will get preferential treatment in their homes is another matter. This, it was said, involves complications of rationing which might be insuperable. There would be the procedure of deciding which families were entitled to more meat than others, which had breadwinners doing work classed as hard physical labor. For it is recognized that those doing somewhat lighter tasks get just as hungry and need nourishing food as much. If the war worker got at least one meal a day with plenty of meat-his meal at the plant, which might be at midday, at 6 p.m. or at midnight, depending on his shift-perhaps he

CASH LOANS

FOR INCOME TAXES, MEDICAL BILLS OR FOR ANY WORTHY PURPOSE

2% PER MONTH ON ALL LOANS $50 to $300.00

Employed men or women may use Domestic's Personalized Loan Service to obtain cash up to $300 for any worthwhile need. No co-signers necessary. The main requirement—your integrity and ability to repay. Repayments arranged to fit any budget.

If you are going to need additional cash to help pay your income taxes—ask about Domestic's special income tax plan whereby you may borrow each quarterly tax payment as it becomes due. The amount you borrow each quarter is repaid in three equal monthly installments. Thus each loan will be paid up before obtaining additional cash to pay the next tax installment. The table below shows typical loan and repayment plans.

Congress May Reopen Dependency Limits For Men in Service

Security Official Sees More Elastic Plan as Solution to Problem

NEW YORK, March 10.-Watson B. Miller, assistant Federal security edministrator, predicted last night that Congress may reopen the question of dependency allowances for men in the armed services and may consider a more elastic allowance

Speaking at a general session of the regional meeting of the National Conference of Social Work, Mr. Miller reported that of the 3,000,000 babies born in 1942, many were the children of servicemen.

He said that a recent survey by the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor indicated that probably 140,000 members of the armed forces will become fathers within the next few months The survey further showed, he saiad, that many of the servicemen's voung wives who are expecting babies are without adequate medical

"The Congress has set up a system of allotments and allowances for the dependents of members of the armed forces," he said, "which is more adequate than that which prevailed in the last war, but which still leaves something to be desired. "Welfare leaders were strongly of the opinion that there should be elasticity in the amounts alloted by the Government to cover cases of special need, but the Congress did not look at the matter from the same viewpoint and did not include provisions for special needs "The increasing probability of the induction of larger numbers of famally heads into the service makes it probable that the whole question may be reopened and that consider-

The EQUITABLE

Life Assurance Society of the United States REPORTS TO THE PUBLIC

PROTECTING THE FAMILY

$590,000 A DAY is the rate at which benefits were paid in 1942 by The Equitable. Behind this impressive figure are thousands of human stories, many from families in this State.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA families received Equitable benefits amounting to $1,591,662 last year. Of this, $535,200 was paid to widows, children and other beneficiaries-holding families together, providing funds for education, clearing homes of mortgage debt, and accomplishing many other cherished purposes. In addition, $248,453 in annuity payments brought comfort and peace of mind to older persons. Policyholders in the DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA also received $808,009 in matured endowments, dividends and other payments.

The flow of these benefits to families

THE EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY

OF THE UNITED STATES

in this State and all other States, totaling $215,354,000 for 1942, is doubly important in wartime because it helps strengthen the home front, benefiting not only individual families but the communities in which they live.

SERVING THE NATION

In direct aid of the war effort, The Equitable purchased $489,999,000 of U. S. Government securities last year.

Other funds are invested in essential industries helping win the battle of production, in public utilities, producing power for victory, and in railroads, performing vital transportation service. These assets, while providing family security, are at the same time contributing to the economic stability of the tional morale, it is particularly significant that the life insurance protection provided by The Equitable increased $359,025,000 in 1942 to $7,966,328,000.

Because family security helps nas

The premiums paid on life insurance policies represent funds flowing into a useful, permanent channel of thrift and help the Government's efforts to check rising living costs.

It is in the national interest to own life insurance and to buy additional life insurance if the present protection of your family is inadequate.

Looking ahead, the one great hope of all Americans is for a speedy conclusion of the war, with victory for a way of living that upholds the dignity and freedom of man. The Equitable is resolved to meet its every responsibility to the nation to help bring this about.

Brother Duos Prove Giant Killers as Favorites Fall in College Court Strife

Eastern Washington And York Romping In National Test

Kaedings, Lothspeichs And Leifers Produce Winning Punches

Associated Press Sports Writer KANSAS CITY, March 10.-Take

That was the theme of little York (Nebr.) College and Eastern Washington College of Education, Cheney, as they continued the popular policy of erasing highly touted teams from the national intercollegiate basket ball tournament.

What the brothers took were passes that led to baskets-and grief for favored Akron (Ohio) University and Valparaiso (Ind.) University on last night's program that concluded the first round.

No brother act in vaudeville ever worked as hard for laughs as Jim and Wayne Kaeding of York did for goals. Irwin and Bob Leifer and the Lothspeich boys, John and Bill. of Eastern Washington were dwarfed by the giant Valparaiso team.

Yell "Timber" and Giants Fall. In the case of the Washington brothers the problem of stopping the Valparaiso squad, tallest in the tourney, was a simple one. They merely shouted "timber," stepped back and watched the giants fall.

Valparaiso boasted two players, brothers, incidentally, who towered 6 feet 10 inches-Don and Wallace Warnke. The team also had one performer 6 feet, and Ted Bean, 6 feet 3, just to mention a few of the visiting skyscrapers. But the big guys were just so the steady flow of entrants to the at least another year.

In the light of the foregoing description of the purpose and process of our Army's training, I think one can see more easily the danger of meddling with that process. Plan and process are tied together. The plan contemplates a succession of carefully directed blows at our enemies. The size and character of these blows and the aggregate forces which are necessary have been carefully thought are being carried out by men who have been through a year's training, the men now being brought into the Army are to be trained for campaigns a year ahead. Our main object is to continually build up a force which will strike without interruption and with cumulative effect. That purpose can be thwarted by a mistake made now.

Must Have Lasting Punch.

asking that we should slow up or for victory. interrupt our work fail to realize the far-reaching effect of interruption. Furthermore they do not understand the psychology of combat They do not realize that battles are won by continuous rapid blows upon an enemy and that when an enemy begins to show signs of demoralization these blows must be continued and, if possible, redoubled in order that he may not have time to reform his forces. Once the enemy is checked or shaken on the field of battle, he must be constantly pursued and hammered until he is completely beaten or surrenders. The very fact that it is known that we have trained forces ready to do this tends towards his demoralization.

On the other hand, the commander who after an initial success stops and gives his broken opponent time to reform and reorganize only finds that he must fight his battle over again. If after the battle of Gettysburg, the Federal commander had been able to pursue and destroy his defeated enemy, the length of the Civil War might have been shortened by more than a year. On the other hand, the fact that in 1918 Foch was ready to remorselessly follow up and shatter the German enemy who had been shaken at Soissons on July 18 and again at St. Quentin on August 8. permitted the last great war to be finished in November, 1918, instead of lasting over into 1919 as had been expected. I speak with careful consideration when I say that if we should halt this great training establishany loss which we are likely to sustain on the field of battle.

Critics' Assumption Not True.

Another argument of our critics is that by constructing too large an Army we are making undue inroads into our limited manpower; that we are taking necessary work-ers from the factories which are ers from the factories which are providing Army equipment and machines; and that we are similarly slowing down the construction of merchant shipping which is necesalready said, this argument ignores Air Associates .125e the careful study which has been Air Investors

D.C. Hotels Hope To Be Labeled War Essential

Meeting All WMC Orders for Industry, Association Says

The hotel industry heard reports today that War Manpower Commission regional directors will be given authority to class them as "locally

Pending a decision by the District War Manpower Commission as to the essentiality of the hotel and restaurant industry, a spokesman for the hotel association declined Nathaniel G. Burleigh, director of WPB's service equipment division, that hotels must cut their manpower and materials requirements

Evidence of Curtailment.

As evidence of curtailment actually going on, even before the essentiality question is determined here, the hotel spokesman called attention to these factors:

1. Every hotel is undermanned. 2. Women are being trained and substituted for men as clerks in front offices, as waiters in dining rooms, as dishwashers and cleaners. Their utilization as bellboys and porters awaits a Manpower Commission ruling, an uncertainty being the total weight any women will be allowed to

3. Large banquets, dinners and lunches to more than 50 are out because of the heavy load imposed on a hotel's kitchen and entertainment facilities. Buffet "serve yourself" banquets soon may prove the rule rather than the exception.

Hope to Be Essential.

Mr. Burleigh, in saying hotels must cut to the bone, added that each curtailment "must be weighed care" fully to prevent destruction of a civilian service essential to the war effort and to our domestic economy. Under a War Manpower Commission ruling giving regional directors authority to classify the essentiality of hotels and restaurants in warcrowded communities such as Wash-centers to hire workers for them.

The Prince Georges County Board of Education yesterday authorized Supt. of Schools Nicholas Orem to refund $4,525 to the Government and $9,700 to the State "if found necessary

Mr. Orem explained that the money was obtained last year for the education of children in the new FWA homes at Greenbelt. At that time, he said, the Government appeared unwilling to pay to the county a sum in lieu of taxes on the homes. Since then, however, such action has been taken by the FWA and the School Board has been requested to return the money. The State has asked that its funds be returned for the same reason.

Big Cut in U.S. Personnel Seen By Flemming

Civil Service Official Is First Witness At House Inquiry

By WILL P. KENNEDY. Early and substantial reduction in the number of Government employes was forecast today by Arthur S Flemming of the Civil Service Commission as the House Civil Service Committee began hearings on the Government personnel problem.

Mr. Flemming, the first witness alled in the investigation, testified that the rapid increase in Federal employment had slowed down in Republican, of Kansas, ranking minority member on the investigating committee, promptly remarked that "it is strange that pressure had to be applied by the threat of investigation by Congress before the slashing started. We know that we can compel a far deeper cut. Mr. Flemming replied, "I think events of the next few days will show this committee that something is ing done in that direction."

Mr. Flemming admitted that there is just criticism of "practices in the executive branch of the Government," but he warned the investigators that "there is also a favorable side to the picture.'

"When the commission fails to provide the personnel requested by a department head," Mr. Flemming said, "we are censured for not doing our job. We simply do not have authority to question requests for additional personnel.

Alexandria Council Votes Pay Raises for Police and Firemen

All Grades to Benefit; $13,500 Is Appropriated To Buy Fire Engine

Alexandria police and fire department personnel were voted salary raises, effective as of March 1, by the City Council last night

Police department salaries will be $1,800 per year for recruits, increasing to $2,260 for patrolmen with five years or more of service. First-class privates are to receive $2,320; traffic corporals, $2,380; line corporals, $2,440; sergeants, $2,600; lieutenants. $2,970, and the chief of police will now get a salary of $3,960.

In the fire department, recruits will also start at $1,800, ranging to $2,260 for operators with five years of service. Assistant chief operators will receive $2,600; chief operators, $2,660; inspectors, $2,660, and the chief. $3,960

City Manager Carl Budwesky was authorized by the council to make an application to the Federal Works Agency for a grant to cover the cost of the new station house

Mr. Budwesky indicated the application will be based on the premise that the new station will serve not only the 1,700 dwelling units in Parkfairfax, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.'s housing development on Glebe road, but that the city will also agree to give fire protection to the 3.200-unit Defense Homes project in Arlington County since the proposed fire station will be closer to the development than any of the existing fire stations in Arlington.

Renew Playground Offer. Following a petition from the North Alexandria Citizens' Association, the council voted to renew its offer of $8,000 to buy a tract of land on the north side of Washington street, between Slater's land and Bashford lane for a playground. The Council had refused a request to rezone the property for an apartment development several months ago, and had subsequently offered to purchase the tract at a price which was rejected by the owner. In event the offer is again refused, the Council voted to instruct the city attor-

Bolivian Embassy Opened Auspiciously Yesterday

Fete for Vice President Serves as Housewarming

By Katharine Brooks.

There was no traffic jam in the vicinity of 3012 Massachusetts avenue yesterday afterment yet the large and spacious rooms of that house, which now is the Bolivian Embassy, were comfortably filled with guests invited to mee, the Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace by the gracious hosts, the Bolivian Ambassador and Senora de Guachalla. These attending the reception made their way out Massachusetts avenue by bus which passes the door or walked as the Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora de Martins did. True, they are next-door neighbors of the Bolivians, but their houses are about a block apart. Others came to the party on their way home from office or Red Cross work and thus kept a clear conscience by not using extra .-

Press Club Told Of Teaching English by Radio

Miss Pin Pin T'an Describes Course Beamed to Latins

By Frances Lide.

A young Chinese woman, teaching basic English by radio to Latin America, is the unusual international combination represented in Miss Pin Pin T'an, who was one of two guest speakers to address the Women's National Press Club at a luncheon meeting yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

The diversified program also featured Col. E. W. Timberlake, commanding officer of the anti-aircraft artillery in the military district of Washington, who called attention to the need of anti-aircraft volunteers as he discussed the setup of his organization.

Although his military references were off-the-record, Col. Timberlake tossed on-the-record bouquets to the women now serving under him as volunteers. "They are doing a man's job." he said, "and doing it damn well.

Each volunteer must work a fourhour shift every three days, the speaker explained. "And they must be on the job, come hell or high water," he added.

24-Hour-Day Duty.

"Volunteers are on duty 24 hours a day, every day," he said. "They are under Army regulations. They are examined by the FBI and they are sworn in. And there is no reward except the knowledge that they are doing their duty with honor for their country."

As a sly inducement to interest more women in the work, however, Col. Timberlake pointed out that the volunteers wear a "charming" uniform consisting of blue slacks and blouses with a touch of white to make the costume more attrac-

'And they can wear slacks well,' he remarked with a smile as he pointed out that the women must bend over so often that slim waist lines are inevitably acquired. "They are losing inches and pounds," he said, "in the performance of their

The speaker explained that volunteers must register with the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office at 2324 F street N.W. and that they may call Republic 5105. From the CDVO they are referred to Mrs. Franz Stone, director of anti-aircraft volunteers. A three-day basic training course is required.

Native of Peking. The Chinese guest speaker was introduced as a native of Peking who came to this country several years ago on a scholarship from the Rockefeller Foundation and who is associated with the World Wide Broadcasting Foundation.

Miss T'an learned her own fluent English from an Americ ess, but in 1939 agreed to do a series of broadcasts in and on basic English for the World Wide Foundation, a cultural institution dedicated to the furtherance of international goodwill and understanding.

Launched without any fanfare, the series brought in so many enthusiastic letters from all parts of the globe, she said, that the program was broadened to include daily newscasts in basic as well as special programs on such varied topics as social work and mountain climbing.

In 1940 the foundation decided to pioneer in still another field—the teaching of English, through basic, over the airwaves to Latin America.

The first course was planned only for the Spanish-speaking countries, but the people of Brazil clamored for one in Portuguese and, until such a course could be broadcast, Portuguese listeners would follow the lessons explained in Spanish, translate their notes into Portuguese and send them to the foundation for

Being in England from September, 1940, to June, 1941, during the winter blitz has well equipped the Hon. Mrs. Charles Winn for almost any war work she might do in this country. When the war started she was living in Yorkshire and there served as the deputy area leader of a district for the Women's Voluntary

Services. When her husband was ordered to London to duty with the RAF and the Winns' country house was taken over by the Army Mrs. Winn took the nurse's aide course in London and served at the Bottley War Hospital, Since the war started she has made six cross-

Jay Carmody there are no two players in the universe who could read lines like that and make them sound like something an audience would like to hear. When J. B. Priestly was in his cosmic cycle a few years ago be wrote a play about two scientific darkly mathematical people who talked like that upon occasion. Not all the time, understand, just often enough to indicate that these were lovers unlike any other lovers in the history of stage and screen. That was true, but it was also true that their very unlikeness made them, and Mr. Priestly's play, a great bore and a quick flop. That couldn't happen, no doubt, in the case of a picture based on Mme. Curie's life, but moments in which her impersonator carried on in the words above would have a distinctly hollow sound.

The only two scientific young people we ever knew in their tender moments were a young bacteriologist and a fellow on his way to being quite a surgeon. The way they used to talk to each > Let's take a brief look at Montgomery's background and see if that will yield a clue to his current somber looks. He is one of 15 children, all of whom were born in Russia with the exception of George and another brother. Thirteen of the children are living. George is the youngest. He has just sent his entire family back to the ranch in Montana. Living is cheaper there, and George has always supported his parents. The family name is Letz. Greta Garbo may not realize this.

Kyser's case is the only one that has reached the appeal stage and. although the OWI no longer asks deferment for other than full-time, salaried members of its staff in ker positions, Mr. Meservey added, the agency is supporting him because his case has stretched out for "four or five months" and withdrawal now would be unfair. Kyser, who will be 37 next June 18, appealed on the ground that he was a necessary man and could do more for the war effort in civilian life than in the armed forces. However, his case brought up the question of whether morale building is a qualification for deferment. Principally a showman, he is not an instrumental musician. Mr. Meservey said Kyser deserved major credit for aid in framing and "putting over" the OWI program swinging public support behind various home front war drives-such as the scrap salvage and laborrecruiting campaigns-through use of radio.

Met Own Expenses.

It was Kyser, he said, who suggested that the Government's wartime appeals be tied in with radio's most popular programs and pushed by the program stars instead of given routine "plugs" outside the continuity of the airways shows. He added that Kyser had spent $104,000 out of his own pocket last year to cover added expanses of putting on his programs from camps of the armed forces, had sold vast numbers of War bonds, and had made transcontinental plane trips weekly at his own expense to advise OWI on pro-ous difficulties of the WPB in material control plans, Mr. Krug declared that the root of the trouble was that "contracts were let for more ships and tanks and facilities than we could supply with steel plate and structural shapes. More things were ordered requiring copper than we could supply with copper.

Says Sights Not Too High.

He pointed out that "each agency naturally wanted as much and as good equipment as it could procure for the very laudable purpose of winning the war quickly. As a result,' he continued, "all agencies ordered more than there were materials available to produce

Mr. Krug warned that "as long as we attempt to make more than we can, no mere material control-no dustry to turn out a maximum of military products." He said that the WPB did not believe, however, that they had set their overall sights too

"We do not really know how much of the problem is caused by excessive programs and how much by overordering and advance ordering," he

He predicted that the schedule for some things may have to be cut, that in some cases present schedule can be maintained only if les critical materials are substituted and in other cases, when over-all ordering is eliminated, to increase schedules. The solution of the problem, he declared, required action on three fronts

'(1) The refinement of our overall war production program so that it will be not only properly balanced from the point of view of strategy but also feasible in terms of material supply, industrial capacity and labor availability.

"Vertical" Control.

"(2) The careful scheduling of end products and components in accordance with this program. "(3) A means for flowing material to fabricators in accordance with the approved schedules. Mr. Krug reviewed the various control programs during the war the Cont terials Plan announced last No-

"It is significant that both England and Germany, after a long period of experimenting with priorities and other allocation devices, turned to plans of vertical allocations very similar to CMP," he

He explained that the basic idea of CMP was that "materials should be controlled vertically-that they should be alloted by the claimant agencies (who are responsible for scheduling) for their prime consumers, and suballoted by prime consumers among their secondary

Mr. Krug, who took as his topic "War Production and Materials Control," spoke under the auspices of the American Institute of Electric Engineers. The meeting, in which nine engineering groups took part, was held in the auditorium of tthe Commerce Department.

New Book on Children

"The Attractive Child," by Constance L. Foster, recently published by the Garden City Publishing Co., has a delightful foreword by that eminent authoron children, Angelo Patri. Mr. Patri firmly believes that beauty and attractiveness are far more to be desired for a voungster than riches or power. for, as he puts it, "beauty wins her way and maintains it, while riches fail to do either.

Here, then, if you are a farseeing mother, is a guide to achieving this valuable possession for your child. Mrs. Foster has consulted the leading authorities in the fields of pediatrics, dermatology, posture and body mechanics, plastic surgery, child psychology and all those other scientific branches that go to make up a lovely and sound human being. All the techniques for preserving and developing your child's attractiveness are provided in this book, and presented in such a clear and simple manner that the suggestions are easy to follow.

No longer do mothers have to accept with a sigh of resignation the homely child, the child with an unfortunate personality, or even the child with physical deformities. Modern science and research have made it possible to wave a magic wand over nearly every ugly duckling, and turn it into a swan.

Emily Post Says—

Dear Mrs. Post: We have always lived in a house with a large hall and the coats of arms of both families hung there. But now we have no large hall and the only available space seems to be in a living room.

Answer-Yes, perfectly so. In fact, the only important question is: Are they becoming to their surroundings? And that is something almost impossible to tell until you hang (or hold) them in place and see how you think they look. Assembling the furnishings of a room is always like trying on clothes and choosing their accessories. You can't tell much about them until you see how they look on you-and together.

Answer-Brothers and sisters of the bride and bridegrooms who are roofs are still considered immeditrue of grandparents.

Dear Mrs. Post: My grandmother

Erik's Collection Shown Locally

"Substitutions in millinery are not yet necessary," said Erik, "but the creative mind must prepare for them nonetheless." This is one of the important themes around which the well-known hat designer has built his new collection-a collection to be shown in Washington through tomorrow

Recognizing that the rich fabrics and materials for which he is famous may become limited, Erik has experimented with "standins," and with great success. Included in the spring array is a tiny, forward-tilted Easter bonnet edged with a paper doily that has been lacquered to make it water-resistant. Also interesting is a hat and bag set of bright green raffia—that's the stuff they use for artificial grass. There are sailors trimmed with upholstery cord and one made entirely of cane seating! However, Erik's interesting presentation is not only composed of substitutes. There are new satins, felts and straws, flowertrimmed or swathed in veiling. Through the collection runs a definite Greek influence seen in colors such as Aegean blue, Olympian red and Athenian violet, and in silhouettes such as a tassel-trimmed beret like that worn by the Royal Guard. Even the fluffy malines hats suggest the "ballet skirts" worn by Greek Remember there were two crimes and two criminals. Did you spot

West was one. With two entries in his hand he could well afford to lead another spade. And since one of these entries was the diamond ace, he could, at the same time, have knocked out South's only entry to his diamond suit by making his second lead the spade queen. South would have to take his ace in order to preserve two stoppers. After that when West won the second diamond lead with the ace, South would be unable to get back to his hand.

And that is why South, too, was guilty. On the first spade lead South should have played dummy's 10! Then, if West continued with the queen, declarer could keep an entry to his hand, the spade nine, by playing dummy's spade jack and winning the trick with his ace.

given. In the rocks were found skeletons of many kinds of fish. Another name for that period is the "Age of Fishes." It was given because fish were then the largest forms of animal life. Water covered a great deal of space where we now nave islands and continents. Besides the broad oceans, there were fresh water lakes and rivers. It is believed that the first fish lived in fresh water, not in the salt sea. Saved in the rocks are skeletons of fish only two or three inches long fish, or animals very much like fish, were the first to have backbones. This is an important fact. Many other kinds of water animals had shells around them, but there were no bones inside their bodies.

In the latter part of the Age of Fishes, some fish found their way to salt water. There they could feast on seaweeds, and could eat some of the small animals which already lived in the sea.

The fish also must have been quite pleased to eat one another. That is how it is today, and we may suppose it was the same long ago. Certain fish of that time were

"armored." Their heads and the front parts of the body were covered with hard shields. Some fish also had good coats of scales to cover the rest of the body. Thanks to shields and scales, the armored fish were able to escape being eaten, at least to a large ex-

(Spinosella plicifera). Plant or animal? What would he your guess? Sponges are in- ence for a brief period; then they vertebrates—backboneless animals. They are composed of cells arranged in three layers and supported by a primitive skeleton made of slimy, for domestic use each year. The insilicious or horny spicules.

The live animal which constructed this framework is usually a brown filled with holes so that water may pass in and out freely, bringing in tiny particles of food and carrying away waste matter. The inner cells have minute hairlike projections. It is their constant movement that sets up the currents.

The skeleton prevents the soft cells that make up the living sponge's body from collapsing into a helpless jelly mass. Some sponges consist of spicules of carbonte of lime or silicon, or spongin fibers. These spicules are of various shapes, though constant for each species and of great value for identification. They are built up within special cells from material the sponge ex-

Are you quite sure that Mrs. Quack will come back to the Smiling Pool

"She said she would," replied Peter. "Last night she came just a little while before dark, and I think she will do the same thing tonight to see if there is any corn for her there. You know, Farmer Brown's boy put some there for her yesterday, and it tasted so good to her that I don't believe she will be able to stay away even if she wants to. I think your plan is perfectly splendid, Sammy Jay. I do hope Blacky the Crow will help." "He will. Don't worry about that," replied Sammy. "Hello! There

Cigarettes in Demand, But Tobacco Dealers Feel Future Uncertain

Foreign Markets Loss, Using Reserve Stocks. Are Current Problems

By MAX HILL

Associated Press Staff Writer. DANVILLE, Va., March 10 .- The man on the street hasn't made a practice of worrying about where the tobacco in his cigarettes comes from, but he may in the near future.

This Southern Virginia city, where tobacco is more of a business than a habit, can't help feeling a trifle uneasy, and its qualms are matched by those of tobacco men in scores of other auction and market centers Pemberton Penn, a wiry and amiable but tart-tongued dealer, distilled the plight of the independent firms formerly depended on foreign markets into one sentence: "Come in," he said, leading me

"I got a heap more time than money. The problem of all dealers such as Pemberton & Penn is to switch their business from foreign trade to back through a row of musty offices.

the domestic market. In 1940 there were more than 80 places to which American tobacco was exported. Now, eliminating the Lease-Lend business which is in Government hands, you can almost count the export countries on the fingers of one hand.

A. Berkley Carrington, president of the Tobacco Association of the United States, says there are four immediate and difficult problems facing the industry. They are: New markets to replace those lost through the war. Farm labor to replace men now In the Army or in war plants. Whether Government grading is to replace the old and picturesque system of auctions.

Ships in which to carry tobacco to the few foreign markets which are left.

An associate, Col. S. W. Minor. mentioned another problem, the urgent need of American cigarette manufacturers for the type of tobacco called Virginia bright and grown all along the Eastern seaboard. Manufacturers are using up supplies in storage, and some of them are down to cured stocks not more than two years old. They usually have tobacco piled up from at least three crops and sometimes

Domestic demand, however, is bouncing up at such a rapid rate that, with one-third of the bright crop put aside each year for leaselend purposes, they are digging

It's the cigarette which now is taking most of the tobacco.

Mr. Carrington is sure the war won't change the tobacco habits of smokers, no matter where they live. American tobaccos, he said, have a flavor and taste of their own, and no other soil ever has been able to match their qualities.

There's one odd trait all tobacco has, no matter where it is grown. The Japanese tried to eliminate their purchases of Virginia by importing seed, but within three years the plants were transformed to the Japanese type and flavor.

We never have been able to grow Turkish tobacco for the same reason. Within three years it has "gone native" completely. Soil and climate are the reasons.

The tobacco men have a high regard for the thoroughness with which the Japanese went after the problem. Not satisfied with just importing the seed and trying to match the climate, one industrious Japanese bought 400 pounds of Virginia soil, packed it in bags and toted it back to Japan. Even that didn't work, and the Japanese went right on buying the best quality of Virginia bright until the China war put their financial structure on the in cigarettes among the men I talked with, and men who know these canny merchants say they have a trick to impress buyers of tobacco. They carry four packages of cigarettes-one of each of the leading popular brands-which may make their pockets bulge a little suspiciously but helps business. The obvious question was, Don't they ever make a mistake and pull out the
