Federal Conciliator Has 'No Immediate Plans To Enter Situation'

Earlier Story on Page B-12.)

NEW YORK, March 22.-Charles O'Neill, spokesman for the Northern Appalachian soft coal mine operators, declared today that the wage conference with the United Mine Workers was deadlocked because neither party could reach a decision on the matter of retroactivity in a new contract.

Telegrams were sent by the operators Saturday to President Roosevelt and various Government officials which were understood to carry an implied request for Federal intervention, but Dr. John R. Steelman, head of the Federal Conciliation Service, said in Washington today that he had "no immediate plans for entering the situation."

The present contract for 450,000 miners expires March 31 and the union and the operators have made counterproposals for continuing negotiations for a month. The UMW offered to continue with the proviso that any contract would be retroactive to April 1, but the operators suggested that the retroactive date be fixed by a governmental

Trade Board Committee Names Mrs. Betty Moore As Office Manager

Edgar Morris, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Greater National Capital Committee of the Washington Board of Trade, announced at a meeting today at the Willard Hotel the acceptance of the resignation of Russell W. Schneider, manager of the Greater National Capital Committee since May, 1941, and manager of the committee's convention department since September, 1938.

Mr. Schneider is leaving to accept position of executive secretary to the Advisory Committee on Government Questionnaires, a new organization set up by private industry to confer with the Bureau of the Budget on the simplification of information-collecting procedures.

The committee also approved the appointment of Mrs. Betty Moore to the position of office manager to replace Mr. Schneider. Mrs. Moore has served with the committee for seven years.

Democratic Leaders Open Drive to Block Ruml Plan Coalition

Administration Forces In House Fear Passage Of Pay-as-Go Tax Bill

By the Associated Press. Democratic leaders today began a formal canvass of the party's House membership designed to head off a potential coalition of a segment of Democrats with Republicans that might spell House passage of the Ruml plan to skip an entire tax year in putting income taxpayers on a pay-as-you-go basis. Representative Ramspeck Georgia, the Democratic whip, said many Democrats still have "an open mind" on the tax issue and some are confused by the controversy over the Ruml plan and the Administration tax collection bill, drawn by a majority of the House Ways and Means Committee.

The tax debate begins Thursday. Knutson Predicts "Skip" Tax. Representative Knutson, Republican, of Minnesota, predicted 30 cans to pass the skip-a-year proposal. This plan originally was presented by Representative Robertson, Democrat, of Virginia and voted down in committee along with the Ruml plan.

Hitler Speech Subdued As He Emerges From 133-Day Silence

Claims Russian Crisis Is Past, but Admits 'War Zones' in Reich

LONDON, March 22 .- Adolf Hitler merged yesterday from a 133-day silence, which had given rise to rumors of his illness or death, to tell the German people in a radio broadcast the crisis on the Russian front had been surmounted, assure them their losses in war dead were relatively small, and yet admit that many parts of Germany had become war zones" as a result of incessant Allied bombing.

Listeners who have heard many of Hitler's speeches said they were onvinced it was his voice they

In one of the shortest and most subdued speeches he has ever delivered, the Fuehrer told a German war-dead memorial day gathering at the Zaughaus (military museum) in Berlin, the fourth such assemblage since the war began, that 542,000 German soldiers had been killed since the start of the conflict.

(Premier Joseph Stalin has set the total of German dead on the eastern front at 4,000,000, and Germany's own admissions of losses in their entrapment and defeat at Stalingrad would appear to make Hitler's total figure for two years of war unduly low.)

Reports War Output Rising. Hitler told his people the army despite its losses, was being rapidly strengthened by additional classes of servicemen and the return of wounded men who had recovered.

At the same time, he said, war production at home, spurred by the new "total mobilization" of the German people, was rising as a result of the utilization of older men, youths and hundreds of thousands of women and girls. "Thanks to the sacrifices and he

CIO Council Outlines Four Plead Innocent Policies to Maryland To Munitions Plant Members of Congress Fraud Charges

Nearly 100 Delegates Present Petitions on Current Legislation

Headed by Boyd E. Payton, president of the District-Maryland Industrial Union Council, and Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer, a "Victory" delegation of CIO unions from the council today presented the Maryland congressional delegation petitions on current legislation and governmental policies

The meeting, held in the Senate Office Building, was attended by nearly 100 delegates, including representatives from Maryland war industries and representatives of Government and newspaper workers from the District.

"We have come here in the belief that fundamentally all Americans are convinced that we must win the war in the quickest and most effective way possivle." Mr. Katz said in outlining CIO views on current legislation.

Service Bill Opposed. The CIO, he said, will oppose the Austin-Wadsworth national service bill, but will support the Pepper-Kilgore bill for the mobilization of civilian economy

Although favoring a pay-as-yougo tax system, the CIO, he continued, is opposed to the Ruml plan. He also expressed opposition to the enactment of a sales tax as part of the program to finance the war and urged abolition of the Victory tax. He also said the CIO is opposed to the passage of the pending District unemployment compensation bill.

Text of Churchill Broadcast on War's Progress and Postwar Hopes

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 22.—Following is the text of Prime Minister Churchill's address last night:

Let me first of all thank the very great numbers of people who have made kind inquiries about me during my recent illness. Although for weeks I had had a fairly stiff dose of fever which, but for modern science, might have had awkward consequences, I wish to make it clear that I never for a moment had to relinquish the responsible direction of affairs. I followed attentively all the time what was happening in Parliament and the lively discussions on our home affairs when peace comes.

It was very clear to me that a good many people were so much impressed by the favorable turn in our fortunes which has marked the last six months that they have jumped to the conclusion that the war will soon be over and that we shall all be able to get back to the politics and party fights of peacetime.

I am not able to share these sanguine hopes and my earnest advice to you is to concentrate even more zealously upon the war effort and if possible not to take your eye off the ball even for a moment. If tonight I turn aside from the course of war and deal with some postwar and domestic issues it is only because I hope that by so doing I may simplify and modify political divergencies and enable all our nolitical forces to march forward to the main objectives in unity and so far as possible in step.

Must Not Bend Selves To Future Conditions.

First of all we must beware of attempts to overpersuade or even coerce his majesty's government to bind themselves or their unknown successors in conditions which no one can foresee and which may be years ahead, to impose great new expenditures on the state without any relation to circumstances which might prevail at that time and to make them pledge themselves to particular schemes without relation to other extremely important aspects of our postwer needs.

The business of proposing expenditure rests ultimately with the responsible government of the day and it is their duty and their duty alone to propose to Parliament any new charges upon the public and also propose the annual budgets the means of raising necessary funds.

The world is coming increasingly to admire our British parliamentary system and ideas. It is contrary to those ideas that the ministers or members should become pledgebound delegates. They are a band of men who undertake certain honorable duties and they would be dishonored if they allowed their right and duty to serve the public as well as possible on any given occasion to be prejudiced by enforced premature contraction of obligations.

Nothing would be easier for me than to make any number of promises and get an immediate response of cheap cheers and glowing articles. I am not in any need to go about making promises in order to win political support or to be allowed to continue in office. It was on a grim and bleak basis that I undertook my present task and on that basis I have been given loyalty and support such as no Prime Minister has ever received.

I cannot express my feeling of gratitude to the nation for their kindness to me and for the trust and confidence they have placed in me during the long dark and disappointing periods.

I am absolutely determined not

I am absolutely determined not to falsify or mock that confidence by making promises without regard to whether they can be performed or not. At any time of life I have no personal ambitions or future to provide for. And I feel I can truthfully say that I only wish to do my duty by the whole mass of the nation and of the British Empire as long as I am thought to be of any use for

Resolved Not to Give All Kinds of Promises,

Therefore I tell you 'round your fireplaces that I am resolved not to give or to make all kinds of promises and tell all kinds of fairytales to you who have trusted me and gone with me so far and marched through the valley of shadow till we have reached the upland regions on which we now stand with firmly planted feet.

However, it is our duty to peer through the mists of the future to the end of the war and to try our utmost to be prepared by ceaseless effort and forethought for the kind of situations which are likely to occur. Speaking under every reserve and not attempting to prophesy, I can imagine that some time next year—but it may well be the year after—we might beat Hitler. By which I mean beat him and his powers of evil into death, dust and ashes.

Then we shall immediately proceed to transport all the necessary additional forces and apparatus to the other side of the world to punish the greedy, cruel empire of Japan, to rescue China from her long torment, to free our own territory and that of our Dutch Allies and to drive the Japanese menace forever from the Australian, New Zealand and Indian shores. That will be our first and supreme task and nothing must lure us from it.

Nevertheless, in my opinion, the moment when Hitler is beaten and Germany and Italy are prostrate will mark the grand climax of war and that will be the time to make a new declaration upon the task before us. We and our Allies will have accomplished one great task. I repeat, one great task.

Nazi tyranny and Prussian militarism which threatened to engulf the whole world and against which we stood alone for a fateful year—these curses will have been swept from the face of the earth.

If I should be spared to see that day and should be needed at the helm at that time I shall then with the assent of the cabinet propose a new task to British nation. The war against Japan will demand a very different arrangement of our forces from what exists at present. There will certainly be large numbers of British and also, no doubt, United States soldiers whom it will not be physically possible to employ across the vast distances and poor communications of the Japanese war.

Partial Demobilization After Hitler's Defeat.

There will certainly be large numbers of men not only abroad, but at home, who will have to be brought back to their families and to their jobs or to other equally good jobs. For all these, after full provision has been made for the garrisoning of guilty countries, return to something like home and freedom will be their hearts' desire. However vigorously the war against Japan is prosecuted, there will certainly be a partial demobilization following on the defeat of Hitler, and this will raise the most difficult and intricate problems, and we are taking care in our arrangements to avoid the mistakes which were so freely committed last time

Of course, these ideas may be completely falsified by events. It may be that Japan will collapse before Hitler, in which case quite another layout will be necessary. As, however, many people wish ardently to discuss the future I adopt for this purpose tonight what seems to me the most likely situation.

On this assumption it would be our hope that the United Nations, headed by three great victorious powers, the British Commonwealth of Nations, the United States and Soviet Russia, should immediately begin to confer upon the future world organization, which is to be our safeguard against further wars by effectually disarming and keeping disarmed the guilty states by bringing to justice the grand criminals and their accomplices and by securing the return to devastated and subjugated countries of mechanical resources and artistic treasures of which they have been pillaged. We shall also have a heavy task in trying to avert widespread famine in some, at least, of the ruined regions. We must hope and pray that unity of the three leading victorious powers will be worthy of their supreme responsibility and that they will think not only of their own welfare but of the welfare and future of all. One can imagine that under a world institution embodying or representing the United Nations, and some day all the nations, there should come into being a council of Europe and a council of Asia.

Causes of Two Wars Lie Within Europe.

As, according to the forecase I am outlining, the war against Japan will still be raging, it is upon the creation of the council of Europe and the settlement of Europe that the first practical task will be centered. Now this is stupendous business. In Europe lie most of the causes which have led to these two world wars. In Europe dwell historic parent races from whom our western civilization has been so largely derived. I believe myself to be what is called a good European and deem it a noble task to take part in reviving and restoring the fertile genius and restore the true greatness of Eu-

I hope we shall not lightly cast aside all the immense work which was accomplished by the creation of the League of Nations. Certainly we must take as our foundation of the lofty conception of freedom the law and morality which was the spirit of the league. We must try-I am speaking of course only for ourselves-to make the council of Europe, or whatever it may be called, into a really effective league with all strongest forces concerned woven into its texture with a high court to adjust disputes and with forces, armed forces, national or international or both held ready to enforce these decisions and prevent renewed aggression and preparation of future wars. Any one can see that this council, when created, must eventually embrace the whole of Europe and that all the main branches of the European family must some day be partners in it. What is to happen to the large number of small nations whose rights and interests must be safeguarded? Here let me ask what would be thought of an army that consisted only of battalions and brigades and which never formed any of the larger and high organizations like army corps? It would soon get mopped up. It would therefore seem to me at any arte worthy of patient study that side by side with the great powers there should be a number of groupings of states or confederations which would express themselves through their own chosen representatives, the whole making a council of great states and groups of states.

It is my earnest hope, though I can hardly expect to see it fulfilled in my lifetime, that we shall achieve the largest common measure of the integrated life of Europe that is possible without destroying the individual characteristics and traditions of its many ancient and historic races. All this will, I believe, be found to harmonize with the high permanent interests of Britain, the United States and Russia. It certainly cannot be accomplished without their cordial and concerted agreement and direct participation. Thus and thus only will the glory of Europe

Foolish to Argue Until War Is Won.

I only mention these matters to you to show the magnitude of the task that will lie before us in Europe and in Europe alone. Nothing could be more foolish at this stage than to plunge into details and try to prescribe the exact groupings of states or lav down precise machinery for their co-operation or still more to argue about frontiers now while the war even in the west has not yet reached its full height, while struggle with U-boats is raging and when the war in the Far East is only in its first phase.

This does not mean that many tentative discussions are not taking place between the great nations concerned or that the whole vast problem of European destiny—for that is what I am speaking of now—is not a subject of ceaseless heart searchings.

We must remember, however, that we in Britain and the Britain and the Britain and the Britain and though almost a world in ourselves, will have to reach agreements with great and friendly equals and also to respect and have care for the rights of weaker and smaller states, and that it will not be given to any one nation to achieve full satisfaction of its individual wishes.

I have said enough, however, I am sure, to show you at least in outline the mystery and peril and, I will add, the splendor of this vast sphere of practical action into which we shall have to leap once the hideous spell of Nazi tyranny has been broken.

Coming nearer home, we shall have to consider at the same time how the inhabitants of this island are going to get their living at this stage in the world story and how they are going to maintain and progressively improve their previous standards of life and labor.

I am very much attracted to the idea that we should make and proclaim what might be called the four years plan. Four years seems to me to be the right length for a period of transition and reconstruction which will follow the downfall of Hitler.

follow the downfall of Hitler.

We have five-year parliaments and the four year plan would give time for preparation of a second plan. This four years plan would cover five or six large measures of practical character which must all have been the subject of prolonged careful, energetic preparation beforehand and which fit together into the general scheme.

When this plan has been shaped it will have to be presented to the country, either by the national government, formally representative as this one is of the three parties in the state, or by a national government comprising the best men in all parties who are willing to serve. I cannot tell how these matters will settle themselves. But by 1944 our present Parliament will have lived nine years. and by 1945 10 years, and as soon as the defeat of Germany has removed the danger now at our throats and the register can be compiled and other necessary arrangements made, the new House of Commons must be freely chosen by the whole electorate including, of course, the armed forces, wherever they may be.

Difficult and Anxious Period Lies Ahead.

Thus, whoever is burdened with the responsibility of conducting affairs will have a clear policy and will be able to speak and act at least in the name of an effective and resolute majority. From what I have already said you will realize how very difficult and anxious this period will be and how much depends not only on our own action but on the action of other very powerful countries. This applies not only to the carrying to a conclusion of the war against Japan, but also to the disarming of the guilty and to the settlement of Europe; not only to the arrangements for the prevention of further wars in order that the ruin of our wealth may be rapidly repaired, that employment and production shall be at a high level and that goods and services shall be interchanged between man and man and between one nation and another under the best conditions and on the largest scale. The difficulties which will confront us will take all our highest qualities to overcome. Let me, however, say straightaway that my faith in the vigor, ingenuity and resilience of the British race is invincible. Difficulties mastered are opportunities won. The day of Hitler's downfall will be a bright one for our country and for all mankind. Bells will clash their peals of victory and hope and we will march forward together, encouraged, invigorated and still, I trust, generally united upon a further journey.

I personally am very keen that the scheme for amalgamation and extension of our present incomparable insurance system should have a leading place in our four years plan. I have been prominently connected with all these schemes of nation, compulsory, organized thrift from the 1 prought my friend Sir William Beveridge into publice service 35 years ago, when I was creating labor exchanges on which he was a great authority and when, with Sir Hubert Llewellyn Smith I framed the first unemployment insurance scheme. The prime parent of all national insurance schemes is Mr. Lloyd George. I was his lieutenant in those distant days and afterward it fell to me as the chancellor of the exchequer 18 years ago to lower the pensions age to 65 and to bring in widows and

Magic of Averages, To Rescue of Millions.

The time is now ripe for another great advance and any one can see what large savings there will be in administration, once the whole process of insurance has become unified, compulsory and national.

Here is a real opportunity for what I once called "bring the magic of averages to the rescue of millions." Therefore you must rank me and my colleagues as strong partisans of national compulsory insurance for all classes, for all purposes from the cradle to the grave.

Every preparation including, if necessary, a preliminary legislative preparation will be made with the utmost energy and the necessary negotiations to deal with the existing worthy interests are being actively pursued so that when the moment comes everything will be ready.

Here let me remark that the best way to insure against unemployment is to have no unemployment.

There is another point. Unemployables, rich or poor, will have to be toned up. We cannot afford to have idle people. Idlers at the top make idlers at the bottom. No one must stand aside in his working prime to pursue a life of selfish pleasure.

There are wasters in all classes. Happily they are only a small minority in every class, but anyhow we cannot have a band of drones in our midst, whether they come from the ancient aristocracy or the modern plutocracy, or the ordinary type of pub crawler.

There are other large matters which will also have to be dealt with in our four years plan upon which thought, study and discussion are advancing rapidly.

Let me take first of all the question of British agriculture. We have, of course, to purchase a large proportion of our food and vital raw materials overseas. Our foreign investments have been expended in the common cause. The British nation that has now once again saved the freedom of the world has grown great on cheap and abundant food. Had it not been for the free trade policy of Victorian days, our population would never have risen to the level of a great power and we might have gone down the drain with many other minor states, to the disaster of the whole world.

Abundant food has brought our 47,000,000 Britons into the world.

Here they are and they must find their living.

Will Have to Grow More Food at Home

It is absolutely certain that we shall have to grow a larger proportion of our food at home.

During the war immense advances have been made by the agricultural industry. The position of the farmers has been improved, the position of laborers immeasurably improved. The efficient agricultural landlord has an important part to play. I hope to see a vigorous revival of healthy village life on the basis of these higher wages and of improved housing and what with modern methods of locomotion and the modern amusements of the cinema and wireless, to which will soon be added television, life in the country and on the land ought to compete in attractiveness with life in the great cities.

But all this would cost money. When the various handicaps of war conditions are at an end I expect that better national housekeeping will be possible and that as a result of technical improvements in British agriculture the strain upon the state will be relieved.

At the same time, the fact remains that if expansion and improvement of British agriculture is to be maintained, and a reasonable level of prices is to be maintained, as it must be maintained, as it must be maintained, there are likely to be substantial charges which the state must be prepared to shoulder.

Next there is the spacious domain of public health. I was brought up on the maxim of Lord Beaconsfield which my father was always repeating: "Health and laws of health." We must establish on broad and solid foundations a national health service.

Here let me say that there is no finer investment for any community than putting milk into babies. Healthy citizens are the greatest asset any country can have. One of most somber anxieties which beset those who look 30 or 40 or 50 years ahead, and in the field one can see ahead only too clearly, is a dwindling birth rate in 30 years. Unless present trends alter, a smaller working and fighting population will have to support and protect nearly as many old people: In 50 years the position will be worse still. If this country is to keep its high place in the leadership of the world and to survive as a great power that can hold its own against external pressure. our people must be encouraged by every means to have larger families families.

For this reason, well thought out plans for helping parents to contribute this lifespring to the community are of prime importance. Care of the young and establishment of sound hygienic conditions of motherhood have a bearing upon the whole future of the race which is absolutely vital. Side by side with that is war upon disease, which so far as it is successful will directly aid the national insurance scheme. Upon all this, planning is vigorously proceeding.

Broader, More Liberal Education Is Needed.

Following upon health and welfare is the question of education. The future of the world is left to highly educated races who alone can handle the scientific apparatus necessary for preeminence in peace or survival in war. I hope our education will become broader and more liberal. All wisdom is not new wisdom and the past should be studied if the future is to be successfully encountered. To quote Disraeli again in one of his most pregnant sayings: "Nations are governed by force or by tradition." In moving steadily and steadfastly from a class to a national foundation in politics and economics of our society and civilization, we must not forget the glories of the past nor how many battles we have fought for the rights of the individual and for human freedom.

We must beware of trying to build a society in which nobody counts for anything except the politician or official, a society where enterprise gains no reward and thrift no privileges. I say "try to build" because of all the races in the world our people would be the last to consent to be governed by bureaucracy. Freedom is their life blood. These two great wars, scourging and harrowing men's souls, have made the British nation the master in its own house. The people have been rendered conscious that they are coming into their inheritance.

The treasures of the past, the toil of the centuries, long, builtup conceptions of decent government and fair play and tolerance which comes from the free working of the parliamentary and electoral institutions and great colonial possessions for which we are trustees in every part of the globe-all these constitute parts of this inheritance and the nation must be fitted for its responsibilities and high duty human beings are endowed with, infinitely varying qualities and dispositions, and each one is different from the other. We cannot make them all the same. It would be a pretty dull world if we

It is in our power, however, to secure equal opportunities for all. Facilities for advanced education must be evened out and multiplied. Nobody who can take advantage of higher education should be denied this chance. You cannot conduct a modern community except with an adequate supply of persons upon whose education, whether humanitarian, technical or scientific, much time and money has been spent.

There is another element which should never be banished from our system of education. Here we have freedom of thought as well as freedom of conscience. Here we have been pioneers of religious toleration.

Religion Is the Rock In Life and Character.

But side by side with all this has been the fact that religion has been the rock in the life and character of the British people upon which they have built their hopes and cast their careers. This fundamental element must never be taken from our schools and I rejoice to learn of enormous progress that is being made among all religious bodies in freeing themselves from sectarian jealousies and feuds while preserving fervently the tenets of their own faith. Secular schooling of the great mass of our scholars must be progressively prolonged and for this we must both improve our schools and train our teachers.

After school time ends we must not throw our youth uncared for and unsupervised onto the labor market, with its blind-alley occupations which start so fair and often end so foul. We must make plans for parttime release from industry so that our young people may have the chance to carry on their general education and also to obtain specialized education which will fit them better for their work.

Under our ancient monarchy, the bulwark of British liberties, that barrier against dictatorships of all kinds, we intend to move forward in a great family, preserving the comradeships of war, free forever from class prejudice and other forms of snobbery from which in modern times we have suffered less than most other nations.

other nations.

We have made great progress, but we must make far greater progress. We must make sure that the path to the higher functions throughout our society and empire is really open to children of every family. Whether they can tread that path will depend upon their qualities, tested by fair competition.

All cannot reach the same level, but all must have their chance.

I look forward to a Britain so big that she will need to draw her leaders from every type of school and wearing every kind of tie. Tradition may play its part, but broader systems must now rule.

now rule.

We have one large immediate task in the planning and rebuilding of our cities and towns. This will make a very great call on our resources in material and labor, but it is also an immense opportunity not only for improvement of our housing, but for employment of our people in the years immediately after the war.

In the far-reaching scheme for reorganizing the building industry, prepared by the Minister of Labor and the Minister of Works, will be found another means of protecting our insurance fund from the drain of unemployment relief.

Mr. Bevin is attacked from time to time, now from one side, now from another. When I think of the tremendous changes which have been effected under the strain of war in the lives of the whole people of both sexes and of every class with so little friction, and when I consider the practical absence of strikes in this war compared to what happened in last, I think he will be able to take it all right.

You will see from what I have said that there is no lack of material for the four years plan for the transition period from war to peace and for another plan after that.

Note of Sober Caution And of Confidence.

For the present during the war our rule should be no promises but every preparation, including, where required, any necessary preliminary legislative preparation. Before I conclude I have to strike two notes, one of sober caution and the other of confidence that all our improvements and expansion must be related to sound and modernized finance. A friend of mine said the other day in the House of Commons that "pounds, shillings and pence were meaningless symbols." This made me open my eyes. What then are we to say about the savings of the people? We have Just begun a "Wings for Victory" war savings campaign to which all classes have subscribed. Vast numbers of people have been encouraged to purchase war savings certificates. Income tax is collected from wage earners of certain levels and carried to the nest egg for them at the end of the war, the government having the use of the money meanwhile. A nest egg similar in character will be given to the armed forces.

Those whose houses have been destroyed by air-raid damage and who have in many cases paid insurance are entitled to compensation. All those obligations were contracted in pounds, shillings and pence.

At the end of this war there will be seven or eight million people in the country with two or three hundred pounds apiece, a thing unknown in our history.

These savings of the nation

arising from the thrift, skill or devotion of individuals are sacred. The state is built around them and it is duty of the state to redeem its faith in an equal degree

I am not one of those who are wedded to undue rigidity in management of the currency system, but this I say: That over a period of 10 or 15 years there ought to be a fair, steady continuity of values if there is to be any faith between man and man or between individual and state. We have successfully stabilized prices during the war. We intend to continue this policy after the war to the utmost of our ability.

to the utmost of our ability.

This bring me to the subject of the burden and incidence of taxation. Direct taxation on all classes stands at unprecedented and sterilizing levels. Besides this there is indirect taxation raised to a remarkable height.

In wartime our people are willing and even proud to pay all those taxes. But such conditions could not continue in peace. We must expect taxation after the war to be heavier than it was before the war, but we do not intend to shape our plans or levy taxation in a way which by removing personal incentive would destroy initiative and enterprise.

If you take any single year of peace and take a slice through the industry and enterprise of the nation you will find work which is being done at the moment, work that is being planned for next year and projects for the third, fourth and even fifth year ahead which are all maturing.

War cuts down all this forward planning. Thus when peace came suddenly as it did last time.

there were no long carefully prepared plans for future. That was one of the main reasons why at the end of the last war after a momentary recovery we fell into the dreadful trough of unen:ployment. We must not be caught again that way.

It is therefore necessary to make sure that we have projects for the future employment of people and a forward movement of our industries, carefully foreseen and secondly that private enterprise and state enterprise are both able to play their parts to the utmost.

A number of measures are being and will be prepared which will enable the government to exercise a balancing influence upon development which can be turned on or off as circumstances require. There is a broadening field for state ownership and enterprise especially in relation to monopolies of all kind. The modern state will increasingly concern itself with the economic well-being of the nation, but it is all the more vital to revive at the earliest moment widespread, healthy and vigorous enterprise without which we shall never be able to provide, in the years when it is needed, the employment for our soldiers, sailors and airmen to which they are entitled after their duty has been done.

In this brief survey I have tried to set before you both hopes and fears: I have given both caution and encouragement. But if I have to strike a balance, as I must do before the end, let me proclaim myself a faithful follower of a larger hope. I will proceed to back this hope with some solid facts. Any one can see the difficulties of placing our exports profitably in a world so filled with ruined countries. Foreign trade to be of value must be fertile. There is no use in doing business at a loss.

Nevertheless, I am advised that in view of the general state of the world after the defeat of Hitler there will be considerable opportunities for re-establishing our exports. Immediately after the war there will be an intense demand both for home and export for what are called consumable goods, such as clothes, furniture and textiles. I have spoken of an immense building program and we all know the stimulus which that is to a large number of trades, including electrical and metal industries. We have learnt much about production under the stress of war. Our methods have vastly improved. The layout of our factories presents an entirely new and novel picture to the eye. Mass production has been forced upon us. Electrification of industry has are some significant new industries offering scope for the inventiveness and vigor which made this country great and still lives. When the fetters of wartime are struck off and we turn free hands to the industrial tasks of peace we may be astonished at the progress in efficiency we shall suddenly find displayed. I can only mention a few instances. The ceaseless improvement in wireless and the wonders of radio-location applied to arts of peace will employ the radio industry, agriculture and the cottage home. There is civil aviation. There is forestry. There is transportation. We were the earliest in world with railways. we must bring them up to date in every respect. Here in these few examples are gigantic opportunities which if used will in turn increase our power to serve other countries with the goods they want.

been increased 50 per cent. There

Our own effort must be supported by international arrangements and agreements more neighborlike and more sensible than before. We must strive to secure our fair share of an augmented world trade. Our fortunes will be greatly influenced by policies of the United States and of the British dominions and we are doing our utmost to keep in ever closer contact with them. We have lately put before them and our other friends and Allies some tentative suggestions for future management of exchanges and of international currency, which will shortly be published. This is a first installment.

I have heard great deal on both sides of these questions during the 40 years I have served in the House of Commons and the 20 years I have served in cabinets. I have tried to learn from events and also from my own mistakes. And I tell you my solemn belief which is that if we act with comradeship and loyalty to our country and to one another and if we can make state enterprise and free enterprise both serve national interests and pull the nation wagon side by side then there is no need for us to run into that horrible devastating slump or into that squalid epoch of bickering and confusion which mocked and squandered the hard-won victory which we gained quarter of century ago. I end where I began. Let us get back to our job. I must warn every one who hears me of a certain unseemliness and also of danger of it appearing to the world that we here in Britain are diverting our attention to a peace which is still remote and to the fruits of a victory which have still to be won while our Russian Allies are fighting for dear life and dearer honor in a dire, deadly, daily struggle against all the might of the German military machine, and while our thoughts should be with our armies and with our American and French comrades now engaged in decisive battle in Tunisia, let us wish them Godspeed in their struggle. I have just received a message from Gen.

Montgomery that the 8th Army is on the move and that he is satisfied with their progress.

Let us bend all our efforts to the war and to evermore vigorous prosecution of our supreme

YOUR SAFEWAY CAN MAKE YOUR POINT RATION SHOPPING EASIER

Under point rationing you'll have to think about the price in points as well as the price in money. To make this easy Safeway has marked the point value on the shelf directly below each rationed item and also on the item itself. At Safeway you can make comparisons of values leisurely and select the items best suited to the amount of points and money you want to spend. But remember, point ration shopping will take more time . . . it's doubly important to shop early in the day and early in the week. You'll get the "hang" of it quickly, but at the start you'll probably have some questions. So at Safeway you'll find a "point ration information" clerk—who is qualified to answer your questions—and will do it cheerfully and in full date! and will do it cheerfully and in full detail.

Cut in Meat Supply Threatened by Feed Shortage and Cold

Hay Almost Exhausted; Next Three Weeks Seen As Cruicial Period

By the Associated Press. PORTLAND, Oreg., March 22.-A feed shortage and a late spring in the Pacific Northwest threaten to curtail further the United States' already meager meat supply.

Stockmen cannot send cattle and sheep out to graze, for grass is not growing except on sheltered ranges. Hay supplies, used to feed the stock through the winter, are almost ex-

Agriculture experts report sheepmen are suffering heavy losses from early lambing, that a few cattlemen are hard hit, but that the situation is not hopeless.

The experts say the next three weeks will determine the outcome. If the cold weather continues, losses will mount. Cattlemen from Idaho, Southern and Eastern Oregon predicted at market here that even some range steers would starve.

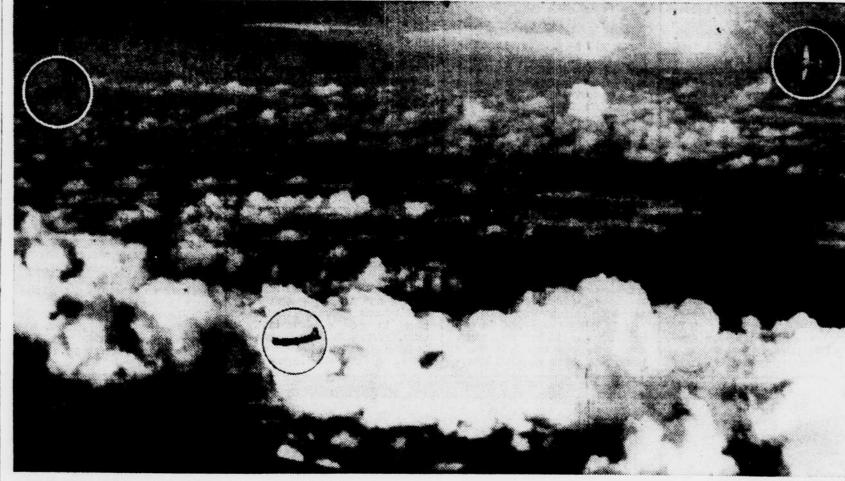

If the weather breaks, the range will turn green, the animals will have the grass they need to produce milk and lambing and calving will proceed with a minimum loss.

In the meanwhile stockmen are searching the country for hay. Western Oregon farmers are importing it from as far off as Montana, although the price is three times the normal level. Experts warned that this policy, if continued long, would result in financial losses

One Idaho cattleman summed up the situation: "There is almost no hay, and what there is sheepmen are buying and paying high prices for. We used to think that $8 a ton was high, but now sheepmen are paying $25. They

Madame Chiang Rests In Chicago; Is Slated To Broadcast Tonight

Wife of Generalissimo Given Warm Greeting By American Chinese

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, March 22. — Mme. Chiang Kai-shek planned a quiet day, without any public engagements, in order to conserve her limited strength for a broadcast speech at a stadium mass meeting

The wife of the Chinese generalissimo, in Chicago on a transcontinental tour being made despite physicians' wishes, is scheduled to speak from 11:15 to 11:45 p.m. over the Blue Network.

Since her arrival here Friday, the First Lady of China has kept a full schedule of both public appearances and private audiences. Two rides along the lake front have been her only respite from the streams of visitors coming and going between her public appearances. Yesterday Mme. Chiang spoke in

No Wonder That Nazi Aviation Mechanic Was Dazed!

A NAZI AVIATION MECHANIC was being grilled by his Allied captors not long ago. He was dazed, a worried little man.

"Those Americans," he said, "They can make a plane from hairpins and barrel staves!"

Well, maybe we could, and maybe we couldn't. If we had to, we would try. That's certain.

For instance... There was a "bottle-neck" in an aircraft factory. Certain rivets were hard to get at. So a young inventor came up with a rivet that contained a minute charge of high explosive. Now, an electric charge reaches into tight places where human hands once fumbled. The explosive rivet mushrooms out. And the job is done in one-fifth the time!

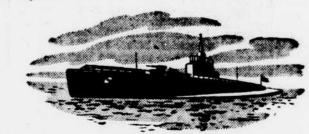

The war cut off much of our precision optical equipment. Today, a gigantic, new plant stands in West Virginia, manned by farmers and mountain people. It's producing lenses and prisms for bomb sights, periscopes, range finders, binoculars.

A mid-west manufacturer pooh-poohed the idea that only Eastern ordnance factories could make machine guns. He delivered a shipment, eight months ahead of schedule, cutting the cost 75%.

Submarines are being built hundreds of miles from salt water in in-land America. And they are floated down stream in giant barges to perform their vital, wartime job.

And that's just the beginning. One plant found a way to rifle 24 gun barrels in the time formerly required for one. There's a new machine that drills and machines three tank turrets at a time. Someone discovered that vessels could be constructed bottom-side up, then flopped over and a ready-made superstructure added. Still another plant cut the assembly time for an anti-aircraft gun from 450 hours to 14.

There are dramatic, new stories being added to this amazing list every day. Stories that tell of America's mechanical skill ... and America's ingenuity ... and America's "fight." Those are the "hairpins" and "barrel staves" that worried Fritz.

Today, many major fighting products are rolling off the production lines in the Crosley war plants.

Some of these products have never been manufactured by anyone before. Some were born in the Crosley Engineering Department. The "bugs" were worked out in tests that brought battle-front conditions to our Cincinnati laboratories. They were routed through assembly lines at a speed that could only be inspired by wartime necessity.

These fighting implements are today being used on every front. And every one of them that reaches the skilled hands of a soldier or sailor or marine carries with it a breath of hope which says:

"This is to help you when you need it. To help bring you home . . . and bring you home sooner."

It's a message from every one of more than 8,000 loyal men and women workers at Crosley who want to make every minute of their working day count for Victory.

The Tax Report

The arguments advanced by the majority of the Ways and Means Committee in its tax report lend strong support to the conclusion that only through adoption of the principle embodied in the Ruml plan can the income taxpayers be brought to a current basis.

The committee majority was in a difficult position. Its stated purpose was to "provide a method for the payment currently of individual income taxes." But it did not want to collect two years' taxes in one year, nor did it want to shift the tax base from 1942 to 1943 income. Thus was created the dilemma from which the committee majority, despite all the verbiage of the report, was unable to extricate itself.

From the nature of the arguments advanced, it appears that the majority was influenced by three main considerations-the fear that approval of the Ruml plan, or the modification known as the Carlson plan, might in some way benefit the wealthy at the expense of the poor; the apprehension that the revenue position of the Treasury might suffer at a time when we are faced with "the most frightful war" in history, and the belief that the "vast majority of the American people will not want to have their taxes forgiven."

In support of the first fear, the majority dwelt at length on the argument that abandonment of the 1942 tax base would mean a "benefit" of $854,000 to each of sixty persons with million-dollar incomes. This is a most unrealistic argument because of the simple fact—which the majority neglected to mention—that these individuals would pay as much or more in taxes if 1943 income were substituted for 1942 as the tax base. Much the same thing may be said of the concern for the Treasury's wartime revenue position. The facts are that, with the income tax based on 1942 income, the Treasury will get about ten billion dollars. But with the base shifted to 1943 income, tax receipts would rise to approximately thirteen billion dollars. This is not denied by the majority.

The third point, concerning what the people want, cannot be resolved by any resort to mathematics, but it seems clear enough that the committee majority has sadly misgauged public opinion. The latest Gallup poll shows, for instance, that 83 per cent of the Democratic taxpayers and 87 per cent of the Republicans want the Ruml plan. And it is especially interesting to note that the plan was favored by a higher percentage of taxpayers in the lower range of incomes.

To these people the proposal of the committee majority will be disappointing. Under this plan-despite the majority's concern lest it do something for the rich while not helping the poor-only the well-todo will be able to get on a pay-asyou-go basis. They would do it by paying two years' taxes in one, with a discount on the levy on 1943 income. But all of those who cannot afford to pay two years' taxes in one year-certainly the great majority of the people-will be left to struggle along, forever in debt to the Government. This is a fact which should give strong support to the position of the Republicans who are supporting the Carlson bill-the only feasible pay-as-you-go plan now before Con-

Job for Government

The reports that Federal conciliators soon will take a hand in the deadlocked wage negotiations between the United Mine Workers and the coal operators probably are well founded. Although John L. Lewis, head of the mine workers, has indicated from time to time that he would not submit the miners' case to the War Labor Board, the fact remains that this dispute, by its very nature, will have to be resolved by some agency of the Government.

In demanding a wage increase of two dollars a day and asserting that he will take neither more nor less, Mr. Lewis for practical purposes has invited Government intervention. The miners already have received all of the pay increase they would be entitled to under the little steel without abandoning the formula. a concession.

Furthermore, Mr. Lewis has im-Lifter the end of this month without I cause of it, the chief executive offi- la sidewalk.

extension of the period of negotiation | ceased to be figureheads. through April, with a provision for retroactive pay increases, has been turned down by the operators. In these circumstances, the possibility of a strike is too imminent to be ignored, and this is another reason for timely intervention by the Government.

Since this is the case it seems rather futile for the operators and the miners to continue their discussions of an issue which they lack power to settle. The handling of this dispute obviously is a job for the Government, and the sooner the appropriate Federal agencies step into the picture the better it will be for all concerned.

Attention Mr. Brown

One of the strangest phenomena of these times is the persistent refusal of lawyers representing the Office of Price Administration to recognize that there is a difference between a deliberate and an unintentional violation of the OPA price ceilings.

There have been two cases in the District in which the OPA, contending that the question of good faith was not material, has appealed to the courts for injunctions against price violators. In each instance the courts, unwilling to sanction such an unreasonable doctrine, ruled against OPA. And now a third case of the same nature has been decided in

The Chicago case involved a complaint against a meat wholesaler who, according to OPA, had overcharged customers to the extent of $226.39 on twelve meat sales during a period when total sales amounted to $247,299. Thus, the overcharges represented a very small fraction of 1 per cent of the gross business, and counsel for OPA admitted that the overcharges ranged only from two to thirty cents on each item. Despite this showing, the lawyers told the court that "the question of good faith has nothing to do with this type of case. There are thousands of cases like this. It is a large enforcement job and the only way OPA can handle it is to get injunctions."

That, on its face, is another way of saying that OPA intends to proceed against thousands of innocent violators of the price ceilings as the easiest way to reach the relatively few who are guilty of deliberate violations. But Federal Judge Michael L. Igoe, who heard the Chicago case, made it clear that he would not tolerate such high-handed procedure.

The OPA, he said, "must realize that they haven't exclusive rights on all the patriotism in America. They should not use the injunction process in cases of confusion and innocent error." When OPA counsel protested that the good faith of the offender was not entitled to consideration, the judge added: "Any man has a right to come into my court and show that he is operating in good faith." It is experiences of this kind, demonstrating the lengths to which overzealous administrative officials are capable of going, that confirm the wisdom of those who have insisted upon the maintenance of a free and independent judiciary for the protection of the individual. Those administrative officials who have been endowed with extraordinary power over the affairs of the people ought to restrain the excesses of their own subordinates, but if they are not going to do so it becomes all the more important to maintain the courts as a safeguard against persecution.

OPA Administrator Prentiss Brown is on record as saying that his organization is afflicted with too many lawyers who are blinded to the realities of their job by an excess of legalism. It would seem to be about time that he took some discriminating steps to rectify this condition.

Frank Orren Lowden

Historians writing half a century hence may appreciate Frank Orren Lowden more than the generality of his contemporaries did. He was a conservative thinker, yet it happened that he frequently was far ahead of his contemporaries in his political and social views. The paradox arose from the fact that his mind was not patterned to a rigid dogma. He was a "practising American" in the full and complete meaning of that term. Such a man is very apt to be misunderstood or perhaps condemned by his intellectually lazy

It would be a mistake, however, to suggest that Mr. Lowden was lacking in friends. The contrary is the truth. No political leader of his time was more affectionately loved by those who knew him well than he. Particularly by children was he appreciated. He found great joy in developing a summer health resort for youngsters brought from Chicago hospitals to recuperate in the country. His own distinctive quality of enthusiastic boyishness remained with him to the end. Born in a log cabin at Sunrise City, Minnesota, January 26, 1861, and educated at the University of Iowa. Mr. Lowden was a self-made success from the start of his active career at 15. His debut in Chicago was in the role of a clerk in a law office. He was graduated at Northwestern Law | point-busters. Mr. Lowden's farm thereafter was his principal concern. He made his 5.000 acres at Sinissippi an agricultural laboratory of worldwide importance. Better crops, better stock. better systems of marketing were his objectives. He achieved them and instructed other agrarian realists how to do the same.

Meanwhile, the dark shadow of tyranny which he repeatedly warned against spread across the sky of Europe and the East. Referring to the war against the Axis on his 81st birthday, Mr. Lowden spoke these words which now may be quoted as his epitaph: "Of course, we shall have to endure great hardship. Let us not forget, however, that the pioneers of America suffered more, made larger sacrifices and took greater risks to conquer this rich continent which they bequeathed to us than any we shall be called upon to make to save our great heritage."

National Income Rise

That the United States in 1942 progressed far toward the complete mobilization of its resources for war is evidenced by the Commerce Department announcement that national income and gross national product last year achieved record levels of $119,800,000,000 and $151,-000,000,000, respectively. The income gain for the year was more than $24,000,000,000, and the increase in gross output upward of $32,000.000,-000. War expenditures and the shift of our economy to meet the demands of total war were mainly responsible for both gains. Important changes in its composition accompanied last year's increase in national income. Farm proprietors, whose 1942 income is estimated at $9,700,000,000, had the largest percentage increase, a gain of 55.5 per cent over their 1941 income, and more than thrice that of 1939. This is the first year since the postwar inflation of 1919, according to the Commerce Department, that the net income of farm operators has exceeded $9,000,000,000.

The salary and wage component of national income, which includes pay of the armed forces, amounted to $80,300,000,000 in 1942, an increase of 32 per cent over the 1941 total and 80 per cent more than in 1939. Wage and salary payments made by privately owned enterprises advanced 27 per cent during the year.

Other components contributed little to last year's expansion in national income. Interest payments were estimated at $5,400,000,000, an increase of $200,000,000 over 1941, and net rents and royalties at $3,100 .-000,000, a gain of $500,000,000. After payment of taxes, 1942 corporate profits amounted to $7,600,000,000, slightly less than in 1941, an nearly $2,000,000,000 below the 1940 total.

This year, according to Commerce Department estimates, national income is expected to reach $140,000,-000,000 with all kinds of income payments to individuals totaling $135,000,000,000. Since all taxes paid out of individual income will take only $14,000,000,000 to $15,000,000,000, American consumers will have an unprecedented volume of income at their disposal for spending or saving. With the supply of civilian goods already limited, and with further reductions likely, as war production continues to expand, Secretary Jones seems fully justified in his warning that the country faces this year "a severe intensification of the inflationary threat."

Mme. Schiaparelli, noted stylist advises WAACS, WAVES, SPARS and Government girls generally "not to walk like men, but like girls." It is hoped that by that she doesn't mean consistently keeping to the left.

The Die Is Cast

At Pearl Harbor the die was cast for America, necessitating a large corps of factory workers, many of them die casters, and a huge Army that in leisure moments is also prone to cast dies, usually on a blanket. Dice, to employ more familiar terminology, serve the purpose of keeping democracy alive, granting the humblest private an opportunity to readjust the inequality of wealth unimaginatively prescribed by the paymaster. In previous wars this function of dice, and even their very existence, was denied, officially, but Uncle Sam has waked up at last. According to a news item, the quartermaster's depot has been provided with 750,000 pairs of dice, presumably not for parcheesi-enough to equip an army of seven million and a half, if each session is rationed to ten participants. They will make sure that the recruit will learn, the hard way, how to guard against lurking perils of war, such as deadly rumbling box cars, evilly glittering snake eyes and treacherous sevens that can come either from heaven in the form of naturals or from some quite dissimilar place in the form of

Arms Distribution Seen As Basic Problem

Major Eliot Discusses Rivalry Of Commanders for Machines And Materials of Victory

By Maj. George Fielding Eliot. The recent visit to Washington of Gen. MacArthur's air commander, Lt. Gen. Kenney, and Gen. MacArthur's chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Sutherland, is reported to have been for the purpose of obtainng an additional allotment of air power for the Southwestern Pacific area. This may or may not be so, but probably it is so. It offers the occasion for comment on the difficulties of making the basic decisions as to the distribution of Amer ican fighting strength.

The United States has no immediate local front. We are a power center, lying between the two main theaters of war. We produce fighting power, and we distribute it to the various places where it is required. We do this in two ways: By supplying our Allies with weapons and material and by sending out our own fighting units.

There is a limit to our production of power within any given period of time. We can look forward a year or so: we can estimate just about how much we shall be able to produce in that yearhow many planes of given types, how many tanks, how many pieces of artillery; how many machine guns, how many cartridges. But underlying these estimates must be the knowledge of how much steel, how much skilled labor. how much of a thousand other commodities are available. We must decide first of all what we want to produce. Our Allies will want some of our production-what things do they want? On the character of the things we send them depends in some part at least the kind of war they can fight. Hence, way back at the beginning of decisions for any long period, such as a year, must come a basic decision agreed to by all on plans of campaign for that period. If a great land effort is to be made, the emphasis must be on guns and tanks; if the major effort is to be an air offensive, the emphasis must be on planes. There are other limiting factors. The Russians are tied to a ground war, must have ground weapons as well as planes. Deductions must be made to insure enough shipping to get the material to where it is needed, and to provide escort for it on the way-in other words, the line of communications presents its bill first. Local defense and training must be provided for. The civilian economy at home must be taken into account

When all these decisions have been reached, there is still the job of allocating the available production between our Allies and our own forces. In many cases our Allies can say either: "Our need is the more urgent, for we are nearer to the enemy," or, "Give the tools into our experienced hands, for your men are yet to be trained in their use." Yet, on the other hand, any examination of the manpower factor shows that in the end the enemy can be beaten only by the use of great American forces, who somehow must acquire battle experience.

But even after the demands of leaselend have been met, and the demands of shipping, and the civilian economy, there are still many decisions to be made which are difficult and complicated. Every one of our commanders in every active sector is urging upon his superiors the needs of his own command and the vital importance of his own area or theater. No commander would be worth his salt if he took any other atti-

Yet all these demands add greatly to the burdens of those who must make the decisions. Gen. MacArthur wins a smashing victory by the use of air power; he sends his officers to Washington to get more air power that he may win more victories. Who can quarrel with him for that? Yet Washington is also hearing from Gen. Eisenhower in North Africa, Gen. Andrews in the British Isles, Admiral Nimitz in the Pacific, Gen. Chennault in China, Admiral Ingersoll in the North Atlantic and Gen. Bissell in India.

It is safe to say that all these officers want more air power, and want it quickly and are loading their dispatches with the most urgent and cogent reasons as to why they should have it right away. Unfortunately there is not enough to go around and so decisions have to be made as to what demands can be met, and what must be postponed or denied. On the wisdom, foresight and good judgment with which these decisions are made, and other decisions of like caliber in other related fields may well rest the lives of thousands or even millions of men, the lengthening or shortening of the war, and indeed the state of this world for the next 50 years.

To make any basic change in the allotments already determined upon is a weighty matter. It involves not only the reassignment of units, but changes in rail transportation, shipping, production and manpower plans readjustment of agreements with our Allies, perhaps changes in military dispositions on the other side of the world.

This is, of course, by no means to say that Gen. MacArthur's plea should be denied, or that it should be granted. It is merely to point out the tremendous burden of responsibility which rests on the men-the President, Gen. Marshall and Admiral King-who must make the basic decisions, the care with which they must try to peer ahead into the future, and the heavy weight in the scales against any far-reaching change of plan save under the pressure of the most urgent necessity or the most glowing opportunity.

No Time as Yet

From the New York Sun There are a good many sound citizens who are satisfied to pay through the nose for winning the war but are not yet prepared to hock their eye-teeth to pay for the winning of a social revolution. This may be very foolish and shortsighted of them, but people are just made that way. This will not be a very satisfactory answer, it must be admitted. The factors involved in bird plenty and lack are many, and perhaps no two observers would agree on them.

The presence of many trains running through the Takoma Park area may or may not help account for a lack of birds. Some persons believe that any noise frightens them away, whereas others point to nesting birds in the noisest parts of towns. It is probable that nesting is carried on where the birds do not ordinarily like to come. Chevy Chase, both in Maryland and small birds are desired. The growth of the numbers of large estates on the borders of cities may have something to do with the decreasing number of birds. In such places, with lands and forests kept as show places, hawks find opportunity to live unmolested, and thence to strike out at small bird sanctuaries in the neighborhood. These may be miles away from the roost for the hawk is a far fiver.

This possibility was pointed out in this column some time ago by a correspondent living near Bethesda, Md She declared that she could no longer raise chickens, due to the rate at which large hawks killed them. * * * *

Pigeons, starlings and English sparrows are held responsible, at least in part, for the decline in the number of more desirable song birds.

They are only factors, however, and it is difficult, if not impossible, to prove anything. Cats, too, are often declared responsi-

This dog is a great friend of ours, and regularly comes to the back porch to dine on what Tigger, the cat, has left. We whistled to the dog the other afternoon, during the air raid test. He came running eagerly.

As he came up, we saw at once that he had something in his mouth, but thought it must be an old shoe, or something of similar nature, which dogs love to wag around. He came up on the steps and dropped a crumpled cardinal at our feet. "Where did you get that, my friend?" we asked him, but he was unable to answer.

Whether he had caught it, or found it dead, there was no way of knowing. We suspect that he had caught it, because he is a lively fellow, and cardinals are not very wary at this time of year.

We advise our correspondent to make a careful inspection of the neighborhood. and to see if some of the factors named are not in operation. Their correction will be another matter. Perseverence in feeding may work wonders, but cannot overcome inimical trends in other di-

Q. When does the pay of an enlisted man in the Army commence?-T. E.

A. The War Department says that the pay of an enlisted man in the Army does not begin until he is called to active duty after the expiration of his seven days' furlough.

Q. Has Adolf Hitler a sense of humor?

-H. G. A. He likes jokes on other people but not jokes on himself. A widely quoted story concerns a new balcony that was built on the side of the chancellery. Some one suggested that its strength be tested, but Hitler replied: "That isn't necessary. Goering was just out there in full uniforms with all his medals on."

Q. What king or queen reigned the longest?-P. F. G.

A. According to Breasted, Pepi II became King of Egypt about 2566 B.C. at the age of 6, and reigned 91 years. Louis XIV of France ruled 72 years, Francis Joseph of Austria-Hungary, 68 years, and Queen Victoria of England, 64 years.

Q. What are the qualifications for joining the organization known as the Caterpillar Club?-H. C. B.

A. The Army Air Corps says that the Caterpillar Club is not a real organization. It is composed of flyers whose lifetime membership becomes automatic immediately following an emergency parachute jump.

Q. Is the backbone of a camel curved or straight?-F. B. Y.

A. The camel's backbone is not curved upward as is often supposed, but is straight. Q. What is the proper term for the holes in Swiss cheese?-R. C. V.

A. The holes are known as eyes. They are produced by the liberation of gases during fermentation. Q. Do all Eskimos live in snow houses?

A. Only about one-quarter of the Eskimo population are in the habit of using snow houses as the common winter dwelling. Many have never seen one, and they are wholly absent from Alaska.

Q. What bird is the champion feeder? -N. V. A.

A. The common house wren is probably the champion feeder. It lives principally on insects and the parent birds feed their young at the rate of about once every two minutes during daylight

Q. What was the nature of the device patented by Sister Kenny?-F. R. S.

A. Out of her experience in the First World War, Sister Kenny invented and patented a "transport stretcher" and a device to stabilize a wounded body in

Q. Who were the three brothers who served in Congress at the same time?-B. F. E.

A. They were Cadwallader C. Washburn of Wisconsin from 1855 to 1861 and from 1867 to 1871; Israel Washburn, jr., of Maine from 1851 to 1861 and Elihu Benjamin Washburn of Illinois from 1853 to 1869. Another brother, William Drew Washburn, was later a member from Minnesota.

Q. Why is President Roosevelt the 32d President when only 31 have held this office?-H. T. E.

A. This is due to the fact that Grover Cleveland was both the 22d and 24th President. His two terms of office were separated by that of Benjamin Harrison.

Q. Have there been any other Negro generals in the Army besides Gen. Davis?-M. C. N. A. Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis is the first and only Negro general in the United States Army. He was born in Washington, D. C., on June 1, 1877.

Q. Please give the origin of "Mother Carey's chickens."-J. D. D.

A. The origin remains obscure despite many ingenious guesses. Some authorities believe that Mother Carev is none other than the Virgin Mary, by way of "mater cara" or "madre cara," "mother dear," protector of sailors. In any event, her chickens or geese belong to the petrel family.

She gives it in what is known as her "Confession of Faith"-an article distributed throughout China. It is worth reading as a background to the fundamental problem that lies ahead of us-how we are to forge a new character among nations and how individuals are to learn that they primarily by their personal lives and example are responsible for the behavior of governments

Life Made Confused.

Mme. Chiang wrote in part: "I used to pray that God would do this or that. Now I pray that God will make His will known to me. Thus I entered into the third period where I wanted to do, not my will, but God's. Life is really simple and yet how confused we make it. In old Chinese art there is just one outstanding object, perhaps a flower on a scroll. Everything else is subordinate to this one beautiful thing. An integrated life is like that. What is that one flower? It is the will of God. But to know His will and to do it calls for absolute sincerity, absolute honesty with one's self and it means using one's mind to the best of one's ability. "God speaks to me in prayer Prayer is not self-hypnotism. It is more than meditation. The Buddhist priests spent days in mediating. In meditation the source of strength is one's self. Postwar Resources Planning Report Seen Ignored, Misrepresented, Cavalierly Dismissed

By DOROTHY THOMPSON.

It is not my purpose today to discuss the report of the National Resources Planning Board on "freedom from want" after the war. This

58-page document and the lengthy study on which it is based require attentive reading, and furnish ground for meticulous criticism, which will come in due

But the re- Derothy Thompson ception recorded the report, both by press and politicians, is a discouraging revelation of intellectual leadership. For the report has been ignored, misrepresented, or cavalierly dismissed.

The document is a summary of a much longer study available to all concerned with the postwar outlook. It represents the fruits of three years of work by disinterested economists and experts in various fields, and takes into account the experience of other countries in attempting to achieve a minimum of economic security for all citizens.

Its object, in a revolutionary world, is to help achieve a stable society with minimum dislocation of existing economic institutions. Such a society is the condition even for international postwar planning. It is useless to discuss the international political and economic relationships unless there is prospect of stability within our own borders. Every agreement could be overthrown by radical changes here.

Unlike Beveridge Report.

Unlike the British Beveridge report, which is a limited document, exclusively concerned with the extension and rationalization of existing social services, this report raises the primary question, upon the answer to which all other measures are dependent, namely, how to maintain full employment after the war. This is the basic problem which faces all industrialized societies. Failure to solve it is responsible for all the radical upsets of these times. and is, indeed, a direct cause of

When the New York Times, in report, dismisses it by suggesting that Naziism is a logical development of Bismarck's "welfare state," the Times is falling below its usual intellectual level. The security plan initiated by Bismarck and elaborated by the Weimar republic was founded on failure to solve the problem of cyclical unemployment. This unemployment, more than any other single factor, contributed to the rise of Hitler. Hitler, in power substituted for the traditional "welfare state," the party Winterhilfe, and a system of conscripted labor

Modifications of the system of social insurances introduced into Germany by the conservative Bismarck as a hedge against radical overturns have been adopted by every civilized nation, including, belatedly, our

There are measures of internal collective security necessitated by the industrial revolution, the division of labor, the growth and concentration of industry, and the resultant interdependence of nearly every citizen on all the others. No stable society can be built in this country, or anywhere else outside the purely rural communities of self-sustaining farmers and artisans. without some comprehensive system of mutual insurance, and without carefully conceived measures for minimizing booms and depressions. To present such a plan is the purpose of this report.

Function of Administration. How else can such a plan be prepared? The New York Herald Tribune states, "Congress has determined to write its own formula. This is as it should Congress is completely unequipped to prepare a plan. Congress will always be inclined to use such questions for politics. It has neither the personal disinterestedness, nor the staff, nor the freedom from direct popular pressures, nor the technical experts, nor the time for the preparation of such a report.

That is the function of an administration with foresight. And the function of Congress is to consider the report, discuss it, debate it, modify it, and pass judgment on it. There is no other way of governing intelligently in the modern world.

Judgment, however, has already been passed by radio and newspaper commentators who obviously have not done more than glance through the summary.

Part of the trouble, of course, is due to the way in which the administration handles its public relations. The document comes into the hands of those commentators who might be expected to give it careful attention, 24 hours after its general release. The political opponents of the administration immediately prejudice public opinion, and responsible writers keep still because they cannot talk about something they have not carefully studied.

But such a report, having made a day's headlines, cannot be dismissed from public discussion in a week's time.

That is what it amounts to and one would feel better about it if the and conciliating the professional labor leaders with whom he is politically linked. It is true that the political link with Mr. Lewis, who in 1936 contributed more than $600 -000 of union funds to the Roosevelt campaign, was broken in 1940, when he opposed the third term. But, the link with the others—with Mr. Philip Murray of the CIO, and Mr. William Green of the AFL, remains intact,

The plan was evolved by his predecessor, the late Theodore Roosevelt, and there is all the necessary authority in the President's expanded war powers. All that is needed is the will to use them. If he has that, then Mr. Lewis' bluff-if it is a bluff-will be called. If it is not a bluff, then the Government of the United States will have proved its strength and character; the labor leaders will have been taught a needed lesson and we then can get on with the war. The destruction of some of the ancient monuments in Northern and Southern Germany-a chief attraction for tourists in times of peace-together with the inevitable toll taken among the civilians has done more to make the German people war weary and dubious over eventual victory or even a stalemate than the reverses suffered by the Axis armies on the Russian front.

Hence, these advocates say, in future the bulk of American and British aviation production must be concentrated in the United Kingdom to enable the Allied flyers to start greater drubbing of the Reich than ever before.

The enthusiasm of the aviation-minded generals is not shared altogether by other American and British strategists, who maintain that aviation alone has not been responsible for any decisive victory in land war-

It is equally admitted that operations of the Allied forces in Tunisia, which are expected to end early this summer in our favor, could not be concluded successfully were it not for the fact that we have definite air superiority in that area. But it is also true that planes without a large and well-organized land force can not win major battles.

This is even more true when the question of softening the Reich is concerned. From every reliable report received so far the damage to military and inoustrial installations in Germany and occupied territories has not been impressive. Some of the vital war industries of the Reich are below the ground. Factories which were damaged a month ago are back in production.

During the height of the intensive war against Great Britain the production of British industries, according to official figures issued at that time, has never fallen below 25 per cent. The softening of the merale of the civilian population unquestionably is an important factor, but we have not yet reached a stage where it can be considered a determining element in winning the war

Because of the overwheiming importance of aviation in modern war, many "old-school" strategists believe that until the British and the American production reaches its maximum it might be fatal to put all our eggs in one basket. A round-the-clock air attack against the Nazis will require a tremendous number of

We cannot tell the Russians, for instance, that because we intend to open an aerial second front they must be content with duction. Gen. Douglas MacArthur in the South Pacific must soon develop another "offensivedefensive" operation, but for the time being he is handicapped by a shortage of planes. He has not cleared New Guinea of Japs because he does not have enough planes. To make secure our position in the Southeast Pacific he needs more planes and ships.

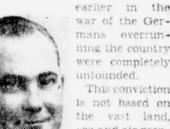

In spite of the speeding up of States and Great Britain it is doubtful whether we are now producing sufficient numbers of planes of all types to make an all-out offensive against Europe and at the same time supply the Russians, Pacific and North Afnumber of planes each commander needs.

Comes Here to Talk For G. I. Joes

McLemore-

By HENRY MCLEMORE

LONDON.-Five weeks of traveling about England have convinced me that an invasion is impossible and that any fears the English had earlier in the

This conviction is not based on the vast land. sea and air preparations the English have made against invasion, but on the firm belief

Henry McLemore, that no one but a person born here can travel in this country without getting completely lost and eventually having to appeal to the mercy of the residents to keep from starving to death

Even if the Germans battered down the defenses and succeeded landing in force, it would be only a matter of time until they were so bewildered by the twisting, winding roads, bypaths, mews, closes, no entry streets and the like that they would swap their machine guns. grenades and tanks for a road map. Such a map, of course, would only add to their confusion and bring utter discord into their ranks because the English road map shows everything else on earth but how to get from one place to another.

Good Enough for Fathers. The English road map was originally designed by a man who had had 15 years with a carnival, engraving poems on the heads of pins or on grains of rice. Tiring of this (or so the story goes) he decided to go in for engraving even smaller things. So he did a road map. Times have changed since then and so have the roads, corners and turns but the map is the same. If it was good enough for our fathers, say only the leftovers of our pro- | the British, it is good enough for us.

This column is being written somewhere on the side of a road somewhere in England. I am sitting in a jeep driven by Corpl. Joe Batching of Texas and as I write the corporal is using a super strong magnifying glass and is studying the map to see if he can find out where we are. The corporal is also using very strong words. You may wonder why we don't ask passing natives where we are. We have planes production in the United | done that and found it to be a most fatal mistake. All the English are very friendly toward Americans and are happy to furnish directions but the directions they give would make a homing pigeon lose its way.

"Take the first turning to your left," they say, but they don't exrican theaters of war with the plain they don't really mean the first turning or even the second one, being as they are such small turnings, but to take the third turning which is a big one. Or, they will say, "Just follow this road and keep straight on it and it will lead you directly there." That makes liars of them because no English road has ever been straight for more than 50 yards and when it isn't twisting like a snake with a stomachache, it is joining six or seven other roads at what is called a "roundabout." Roundabouts are aptly named. You can go round and round about them for hours without making any progress save in the wrong direction.

Unsung Heroes.

The real unsung heroes of this war are the men like Corpl. Batching, who is from a country where the roads are wide and straight and there is a marker every mile or so. They come to England and are handed jeeps and told to start delivering messages and materials to officers all over the landscape. They must master the art of driving on the right side of the road. They must drive through fogs and the deepest blackouts. Nothing must stay them on their errands. From such places as Upper Dorking on the Floy Floy to Lower Dorking on the Same Same, they must travel as fast as a jeep will go, which is

Fighter pilots, tail gunners, flamethrowers and others get the glory and the glamor, but G. I. Joes who drive jeeps are overlooked. Not one of them will ever get a medal or be mentioned in dispatches. When they return to the States after the war, their sweethearts, wives and friends will not look upon them as heroes and boast that they were jeep drivers no nearer the front lines than Midland England, but those of us who have ridden with them will always honor them for the dauntless souls they are.

Corpl. Batching has just informed me that by the use of the magnify. ing glass he has located our position and that we are ready to take off. He has promised that we will not be lost again for a full 5 minutes. Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Morgenthau Warns U. S. to Guard Against Postwar Inflation

Accumulated Demand for Goods Will Start Spiral, Treasury Chief Fears

By the Associated Press Secretary of the Treasury Mortion because of "a strong probability" of a rapid industrial revival after

A backlog of postwar purchasing power and accumulated demands he was editorial consultant for the said, will speed the conversion of New York State Planning Council war industries to peace-time production and the development of new industries

"What this involves for the American people is fairly clear." Mr. Morgenthau said in a statement. "It means that we must reorient our wartime ways of doing things, our wartime ways of buying and living, not all at once but gradually; it means we must be on our guard against postwar inflation in the same way that today we are on guard against wartime inflation.

"An intemperate buying spree immediately upon termination of the war might have the same effect as that at the close of the last war when the cost of living spiraled upward 29 per cent between November, 1918, and June, 1920. We must not permit war wearyness and the desire to return to 'normalcy' rob us of the very fruits of victory.

Secretary Morgenthau estimated that by the end of 1944 the national debt will amount to about $210,000 .-000,000, and will involve interest payments of $4,000,000,000 a year. Servicing such a debt, he said, will require that "a reasonably full employment with a high national income be preserved in the postwar period."

Johnson to Put Nats in Race, Griffith Feels

Relax brethren, the American League pennant is in the bag for the Nats At least Clark Griffith thinks the acquisition of Bob Johnson from the Philadelphia A's supplies the key piece in the jig-saw puzzle Ossie Bluege is putting together at neighboring College Park.

"He's all we need," beamed the mahatma of the majors. "He gives us the right-hand hitter we needed in our outfield to balance the team and if I do say it myself it's one of the best deals I ever put over. Why, in these times it's almost miraculous, although present conditions had a lot to do with it, too. But I've been working on this deal for the last six months and I tell you it's the best since we put the 1933 team together."

Griff handed over the papers of Bobby Estalella, alleged outfielder and Jimmy Pofahl, a so-so second sacker, to Connie Mack in exchange for Johnson's contract, and he thinks he did Mack a mighty big favor, too. It seems Johnson already had informed &-

Deal to Provide Needed Power, Griff Believes

Pitching Now Seems Only Real Problem For Pilot Bluege

Pitching appears to be Washingn's paramount problem in the eyes Manager Ossie Bluege and Prexy Clark Griffith as the Nationals start their second week of spring training at College Park and both have their fingers crossed in hopes of coming up with a fair wartime staff.

The trade that brought Bob Johnson here from Philadelphia gives the team one of the best teams in the circuit-the best, says Griff-and on paper the rest of the line-up shapes up fairly well. It has balance, four righthand hitters and an equal number of portsiders, not counting pitchers, against righthand pitching, and it may have a strong enough punch to blast its way well up into the first division. But the sights are set on more than a first division berth. The Nats want a flag.

"With this line-up." Griffith was saying today, "we have only the Yankees and Cleveland to worry about. St. Louis may have a look-in, but I think we'll outhit 'em and outfield 'em. We're gonna concentrate on beating the Yanks and Indians.

Griff Sees Scoring Strength. To point out the team's run-making potentialities Griff scribbled down a batting line-up like this: George Myatt or Ellis Clary, 2b.; George Case, rf.; Stan Spence, cf.; Bob Johnson, lf.; Mickey Vernon, 1b.; Gerald Priddy, 3b.; Johnny Sullivan, ss.; Jake Early or Angelo Giuliano, c. Clary and Giuliano would play against southpaw pitching. Myatt batted .278 on the pennant-

Although only feet 8 inches tall and weighing 165 pounds, he has a lot of courage and a fast-bending curve that should be a weighty asset under fire. This isn't a brilliant staff both Bluege and Griff readily admit, but it is material seasoned in double-A competition and not likely to rattle or come apart at the seams because of stage fright. Fortunately the Nats are well supplied with pitchers, from a numerical standpoint, and if the old theory of strength in numbers runs true the club may get by.

Hoya Basketers Look to NCAA Title Tourney

C. U. Nine Is Toiling; G. W. and American Debating Baseball

The spring sports season for Washington and nearby colleges opens on Thursday when the University of Maryland lacrosse team under Coach Al Heagy plays Drexel Tech at College Park.

Georgetown's basket ball team is hanging onto the winter season with its squad in New York readying for its start against New York U. on Wednesday in the NCAA tournament and the Hoyas hope to continue with basket ball until March 30, when the Eastern and Western winners meet for the NCAA title.

The Hoya baseball team has dropped practice until the middle of next week because of spring vacation, but Catholic U.'s team will continue workouts this week in preparation for its opening game early in April.

Whether to have baseball at George Washington and American U. still is being debated. American definitely will have a big tennis schedule, however, with Gus Kalijarvi handling the squad this year instead of "Doc" Bill Holton, who is on leave.

States proposed taxes on salt water fishing, so it is not surprising to learn that a bill to the same end now is being prepared in Maryland, for during the few short weeks the State's Assembly has been in session there has been more controversia; legislation proposed or introduced pertaining to fishes and fishing than the whole previous history of the

The amount of the tax is not important. The proposal calls for only $1.25 assessment, but it would bring the same results as like proposals have met in other States-downright opposition. The learned Maryland legislators apparently forget the millions dollars sport fishermen drop into the tills of Chesapeake Bay recorts each summer. They should know that the average angler willingly will pay $20 for a day's fun, but stick such a tax on him and he'll go elsewhere for his fishing. Max Chambers, secretary of the Chesapeake Bay Fishing Fair, says it would be interesting to know just who would back such a bill when Chesapeake Bay watermen and anglers en masse would oppose it.

He points out that the cost of dispensing such a license would be prohibitive and that little would be left of the $1.25 to use for building hatcheries for the propagation of salt-

Water fishes. Add to that the warden salaries that would be necessary to see that every one complied with the law and it is doubtful if the business could be kept on a paying basis. The war does bring odd reactions the minds of some citizens.

Georgia's Rose Bowl Champions Fast Going Coach Doubts He'll Have More Than 10 From Last Year's Squad By ROMNEY WHEELER, Associated Press Sports Writer

ATHENS, Ga., March 22.-If there's an eight-ball in the house, kindly pass it to James Wallace Butts, jr., of the University of Georgia. His Rose Bowl football champions are going, going, gone.

In fact, says Wally, any resemblance between spring football practice and what begins today at Georgia will be strictly coincidental. Of the combined freshman and varsity squads which finished the 1942 campaign, only 40 players remain—and 30 of these are enlisted reserves in one or another of the armed services. Butts says he expects most of

What makes Wally doubly mournful, however, is the prospective loss of Sinky's brilliant understudy, Charley Trippi, who paced Georgia to its Rose Bowl victory over UCLA last New Year Day. Trippi, a sophomore, played his first season of varsity football last fall. As an enlisted reserve, Butts expects him to be long gone from Athens by next October.

"I had thought of postponing spring practice," said Butts, "but I think we'll go ahead with whatever we have on hand. We've just ended one (scholastic) quarter and are beginning another. So many are going into the Army now that we hardly know who we've got from day

Here is how you can become a U.S. Army Aviation Cadet

1. If you are 18 to 26 years old, inclusive, and have not yet been called for induction under Selective Service, you may apply at once at the nearest Aviation Cadet Examining Board to take your physical and mental examinations. No school or college credits are required. If you pass the examinations and are found acceptable, you will be given a letter to the Armed Forces Induction Station requesting your assignment to the Army Air Forces upon induction. You may then volunteer for induction through your local Selective Service Board. After induction you will be assigned for preparatory training, upon completion of which you will receive your appointment as an Aviation Cadet and have an opportunity to become a Bombardier, Navigator or Pilot - one of the "Three Musketeers of the Air"!

2. If you have already been called for induction, you cannot apply direct for Aviation Cadet training. But upon induction, if you are assigned to the Army, you have the same opportunity open to every soldier, 18 to 26 years old, inclusive, to apply for Aviation Cadet training after you are in the ranks.

If you are 17 but not yet 18

3. If you are 17 but not yet 18, you can go now to your Aviation Cadet Examining Board and volunteer for enlistment in the Air Corps Enlisted Reserve. If you pass the physical and mental examinations and are accepted, after you become 18 you will be assigned for preparatory training, leading to appointment as an Aviation Cadet. Enlistment under the age of 18 requires parents' or guardians' consent.

You may apply at the nearest Aviation Cadet Examining Board or write to The Adjutant General, Washington, D. C.

The nearest Aviation Cadet Examining Board, where you can Greyhound Bus Terminal Bldg., 11th St. and New York Ave. N.W., Wash., D. C.

If This Address Is Not Convenient, Consult a United States Recruiting Station for the Address of the Aviation Cadet Examining Board Nearest You.

Building and Loan Assets Up $8,809,298 During Past Year

D. C. League Official Notes $2,483,309 Real Estate Loan Rise

By EDWARD C. STONE. Combined assets of the 25 institu tions comprising the District of Columbia Building and Lean League totaled $181.949,227 at the end of February, an increase of $8,809,298 over the corresponding date a year ago, F. Wilson Camp, league secretary, announced today

Comparisons with last year's balance sheet show interesting changes. Cash on hand rose from $5,625,347 a vear ago to $8,237,795 on February 28, while borrowed money and rediscounts dropped during the year from $5,567,910 to $1,425,450. At the same time the inclusion of War bond offerings in members portfolios caused this item to soar from $1.500.000 to more than $6,000,000.

Real estate loans gained slightly over last year, now standing at $164 .-969,338; up $2,483,309. New share money amounted to $13,771,449. bringing the funds due shareholders to $163,387,817, a new high

A noticeable drop in investment accounts closed out is noted. Last year new accounts were only slightly above those terminated. During February, however, the number of new shareholders exceeded close-outs by over 2 to 1.

Maryland Assembly Ready for Battle on Two Major Measures

Court Reorganization And Chesapeake Fishing Bills Are Still Sore Spots

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, March 22.-With much to do and only two weeks left in which to finish work, Maryland's legislators made ready today for jor matters out of the way

The issues were the bill to submit to the electorate a Court of Appeals reorganization plan, still a sore spot in the Senate side of the capitol, and the Chesapeake Bay fish net bill, considered certain to stir up additional acrimonious exchanges in the House

Last week the Senate gave final approval to a bill reducing the State income tax by one-third, getting one piece of important legislation out of the way, and Gov. O'Conor announced in a speech yesterday he would sign the measure "in a day

WHY ROMMEL RAN

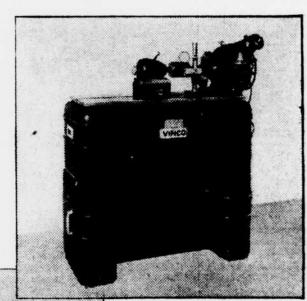

CRASHING GUNS at El Alamein !!! sappers grubbing for sudden death in the mine fields . . . bayonets running red in the morning mists...then tanks and more tanks . . . the new American tanks . . . more tanks than the Desert Fox ever dreamed there were in Egypt.

That tidal wave of M-3's was there in Egypt because of the gages here at home in America's war plants. Gages are little gadgets of shining steel that measure manufacturing accuracy down, oh! sometimes to within millionths of an inch. For sheer perfection of finish they belong in Cartier's window on Fifth Avenue. But in America's war plants, they're more precious than any gems Fifth Avenue ever saw because they step up precision manufacturing to a warwinning scale.

One reason for America's amazing record in our 1942 war production, and one reason that we can be "the arsenal of democracy" is the ever-increasing use of gages in American industry. A camshaft, for instance, may have scores, even hundreds of inspections, each one requiring a gage. Aircraft plants may have as high as 100,000 gages in constant use. In every detail of war production, gages are helping us make more . . . finer . . . faster!

For 25 years, Vinco has been selling millionth-of-an-inch precision to American industry. Every type of gage, ring, plug, spline, snap, thread and a score of others, has been developed to a higher precision. Many new types of inspection devices of unbelievable accuracy have been perfected. The Vinco Optical Master Inspection Dividing Head, for example, is guaranteed to an accuracy of 2/1,296,000th part of the circle!

Since Pearl Harbor this passion for precision has been enlisted in the service of freedom. Today, Vinco engineers are cooperating with the engineering staffs of most of the country's great war manufacturers. Today, Vinco gages are helping step up the production of engines for tanks, planes, PT Boats, invasion barges, flying instruments, recoil mechanisms, Garand rifle bullets, machine guns, artillery, range finders, bomb-sights . . . the whole long list reads like a page from the Army's and the Navy's ordnance records.

OPA, Treasury End Arguments In Pepco Case

Sliding-Scale Rate Battle Before PUC Nears Ending

By DON S. WARREN. The battle over rates of the Potomac Electric Power Co. under its sliding-scale plan neared an end today when counsel for the OPA and the Treasury closed their case after the majority of the Public Utilities Commission had ruled out certain Government exhibits.

After a morning session, marked by a flurry over admissibility of evidence, the case was adjourned to 2 p.m., but not much more testimony

As he did in the rate case of the Washington Gas Light Co., begun last fall, Harry R. Booth, OPA attorney, declared the Federal Government had not been given a "fair" hearing, because of adverse rulings by the PUC majority.

Hill Presents Arguments. He was supported by Thurman Hill, general counsel of the Treasury procurement division, who, in his argument, declared he had two sons coing into the armed services at $50 a month. He added there may be others present having sons offering their lives "in defense of democratic principles but also for the protection of the property of the power company within those democratic principles." Therefore, he said, the PUC may decide "to be a forward commission" and say to the company it must bear its own war taxes.

The immediate issue revolved around admissibility of three exhibits presented by a witness for Mr. Booth, David A. Kosh, a rate analyst. These undertook to show by what rate figures Federal taxes of the company would be reduced if the amount of the customer rate reduction for this year were stepped up far beyond the $315,000 suggested by a witness for the PUC.

Exhibits Ruled Out. James H. Flanagan, PUC chairman, after hearing arguments from all sides, ruled the Kosh exhibits out, saying, to Mr. Hill, that the PUC was a "forward" commission in the gas company case but that its "going forward" had been impeded by litigation

Chairman Flanagan added, pointedly, that issues raised in the Kosh exhibits and in other testimony and argument for the Government intervenors might well be pertinent to the broader investigation of the power company, its sliding scale, rate of return, war taxes, and other things, which is to follow conclusion

House Group Scans Budget On Libraries

Miss Clara W. Herbert Explains Estimates To Subcommittee

By JAMES E. CHINN. Wartime demands on the public library services were outlined to a House Appropriations Subcommittee today by Miss Clara W. Herbert,

She was called before the subcommittee which is reviewing the 1944 District budget to defend the library estimates which called for a total appropriation of $637 731 for operation of the library sy tem during the 12-month period beginning July 1. This represents a reduction of $111,-812 under the appropriation for the current fiscal year, which ends

The subcommittee was told that Washington's inflated population, coupled with technical information sought by various Government agencies working on win-the-war problems are making greater demands on the library services than ever before.

Even so, the budget provides only $50,000 for new stocks of books and periodicals, $7,000 less than the 1943 fiscal year appropriation and lowers the maintenance fund from $51,625 to $51,075. The item for personal services, however, is raised in the new budget from $475,358 to $499,096 A portion of this increase is allocated for employment of four additional employes to operate a "war reading room."

Before the library estimates reached Congress in January, they were cut at the Budget Bureau. Principal slashes were made in items to put the Chevy Chase and Woodridge branches on a 72-hour weekly operating basis and to establish a new branch at the Langston housing development for colored persons The 1944 estimates of the sewer Mr. Henderson said he believed refuse and electrical departments largely on land army groups for today by the subcommittee.

automobile no longer of any value except for its scrap metal. Salvage authorities are taking the stand that the manpower situation will become more critical as the armed services approach their 11,-000,000 goal this year, and that now is the time to build up tremendous stock piles of scrap.

A spokesman for the War Production Board's scrap metal and rubber unit said there was a rising fear of a manpower shortage in junk yards, although essential workers in yards processing war scrap have been given occupational deferments.

Surpluses in Two Areas.

He said there was "a definite need" of scrap iron and steel in the North and Central States and New England. It is in these areas that the country's largest steel mills are concentrated.

Only in the Southwest and on the West Coast are there any surpluses of scrap metal. These piles are now being tapped, with shipments going to "scarcity" areas. In some areas stock piles have dwindled to where there is only a our weeks' reserve. Last year's national scrap drives netted tonnage beyond expectations. but stocks are falling off. These programs must be intensified througout the country, WPB officials said today Local junk yards and scrap processing plants reported a drain of manpower, both to the Army and higher-paid jobs, a survey today Significantly, the Herson Auto

Wrecking Co., which will be called on to process many of the jalopies wanted in the new drive, reported that its manager, Nat Herson, 29, was examined for selective service this morning.

3-B Classification Refused.

Mr. Herson, who has been operating his father's business for nearly eight years, was refused a 3-B classification by a local draft board Commission on March 1 listed essential workers in junk yards as eligible for deferment. Mr. Herson is married. Mrs. Chester Gordon, secretary of the company, said she did not know how they were going to be able to stay in business with Mr. Herson in the Army. She estimated their force had been out in half in the past eight months, with men being drafted or leaving for better jobs. Phillip Smith, partner of Joseph Smith & Son, the city's largest scrap processor, said draft boards were ignoring the WMC order. He told of losing a crane operator to a Marlboro draft board several weeks The company requested an ago. occupational deferment also, but it was refused. commanders on a recent visit from the front who attended a literary evening at the Red Army Club in Moscow I spied a childish face which was conspicuous for its softness, its color and the shining light in its eyes. Each feature of the boy's face expressed eager interest. His thin neck protruded from a wide collar and he seemed to be afraid to move so as not to miss a single word. For he was now listening to real, live authors and that seemed to him a fantastic event, like something out of a dream A note was sent to me from the audience which read: "The boy you're looking at participated in many Partisan operations, took 10 prisoners and was twice decorated.

I became as curious about the boy as he was about the authors who were speaking and after the termination of the program we met. "How old are you?" I ask him.

"Fourteen," he answered rather "That's a lot." I said. "I wouldn't give you more than 12 years." Talk of Smolensk.

This remark was obviously unpleasant to the boy and he drew into his shell. Soon, however, I found the way into his heart. When the little warrior said he was a native of the Smolensk region I immediately recalled those beautiful wooded areas and my experiences there hunting grouse.

At my praise of his native woods and the mention of hunting, he smiled with childish charm. After this he told his story practically without any prompting.

"My father is in the Red Army," he said. "I haven't seen him since the beginning of the war and don't know whether he is alive. When the Germans appeared in our neighborhood I fled to the forest with a group of Partisans. Once I stole into our village and inquired about my mother. I was told that she had also joined the Partisans, so you see our entire family is fighting." I asked him if it were true that he had taken German prisoners and

Sunday Night DAR to Sponsor Defense Rally

Program Will Give Recognition to All Branches of Service

A national defense rally high lighted by addresses from three prominent speakers will be sponsored by the State National Defense Committee of the District Daughters of the American Revolution in Memorial Continental Hall Sunday

Scheduled to start at 8 p.m., it will take the place of a similar rally which has annually been held here as the opening event of the Continental Congress of the National DAR Society. The congress this year has been transferred to Cincinnati because of the crowded conditions here

The program has been designed to give recognition to the three branches of the armed forces as well as to a representative of the United Nations.

Dr. Loudon to Speak.

Dr. A. Loudon, Ambassador of the Netherlands, who will be one of the speakers, will discuss "War and Postwar Problems.'

The Navy will be represented by Lt. Comdr. Mildred H. McAfee, director of the WAVES, who will speak on "Women's Part in the United States Navy.

Maj. Gen. Eugene Reybold, U. S. A., chief of engineers, who has just returned from the front lines, will speak on the subject, "Our Army Goes to Africa."

The Marine Corps will be represented by Chaplain F. W. Faulk who will give the invocation opening the meeting

A musical program of patriotic numbers will be presented from 7:30 to 8 p.m. by Boatswain Ralph Mack. U. S. N., conducting the United States Navy School of Music Or-

Mrs. Arthur C. Houghton, State chairman of the National Defense Committee, will preside at the rally and introduce Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke, State regent of the District DAR; Mrs. William H. Pouch, president general of the national society, and Miss Lillian Chenoweth, vice president general.

Others to Participate.

Others to participate include Miss Elizabeth Mallot Barnes, national chairman of the Correct Use of the Flag Committee, who will lead the pledge of allegiance to the flag, and Mrs. Carlos Campbell, State chairman of the same committee, who will lead the American's creed

The American University Chorus. directed by James L. McLain, will offer several selections, closing with "Eternal Father, Strong to Save" after the benediction

Col. Edward J. Markham, director senting each of the senior high schools here acting as aides, will escort the guests to the platform, will act as pages and ushers.

The national defense rally will precede the opening of the annual State conference of the District DAR next Monday. Many of the national and State officers planning to attend the conference also will attend the rally, where special seats for them will be provided. In connection with the conference the National Defense Committee also plans to sponsor an exhibit of war projects in the war service room of Memorial Continental Hall. Twelve State committees will join in presenting the displays.

The exhibit will be open to the public from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday and from 7 to 8 p.m. Sunday. On the conference days, next Monday and Tuesday, it will be open all day.

Icelands' Minister Will Address 'Y' Education Council

The staff, to be named soon, will be small for the present, as most of the extensive work remains to be done after the war. Due to war restrictions on shipping and manufacture, activities of the commission necessarily will be of a preliminary nature. The United States commission and the 20 Latin-American commissions of native businessmen will co-operate under the Inter-American Development Commission established sometime ago by Nelson Rockefeller, coordinator of inter-American affairs, and Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State. The international body now has its offices in the Commerce Building, with the office of co-ordinator of inter-American affairs.

Mr. Machold, a native of Phila delphia, is a graduate of Yale University, and was in banking at Philadelphia before coming to Washington to be associated with Nelson Rockefeller. He is 38 years of age. He accompanied Mr. Joh ton on the South American trip.

Unanimous Strike Vate Is Declared at Mass Meeting

By the Associated Press.
BALTIMORE, March 22.—Baltimore Transit Co. employes affiliated with the AFL Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes awaited today a strike signal from their union' Executive Committee.

At a closed mass meeting last night an estimated 700 union men voted unanimously to strike, but left the decision as to the time for action to the committee.

There was no announcement as to when the committee would meet, but a spokesman said there was little likelihood of action before a morning assembly of union members who were unable to attend last night's session Rap Labor Boards.

Dear Miss Nowell: My kitchen floor is covered with inlaid linoleum. While I was ill, the housekeeper in attempting to clean the kitchen drain with lye stopped it up completely. The plumber who answered the emergency call opened the drain and drew off the lye into a bucket. Wherever he set the bucket on the kitchen floor there is a deep ring which I presume was made by the lye solution. It has been scrubbed and cleaned, but the marks still remain as they appear to have eaten into the surface of the linoleum. Then, too, the linoleum is dark where it is walked on but bright wear. Representative Ditter. Republican, of Pennsylvania declared yesterday that the Office of War Information "is running wild with its millions agency "go out of the field of producing radio programs, movies and magazines, and leave that to those who know how. The statement by Mr. Ditter, a member of the House Appropriations Committee which soon will consider the OWI budget, followed criticism by Representative Taber, Republican, of New York, another committee member, of OWI's publications, which he called fourthterm propaganda for President Roosevelt. Senator Taft, Republican, of Ohio, also has assailed what he called "commandeering" of radio stations by Elmer Davis, OWI director. Mr. Davis denied he commandeered any radio time or engaged in political propaganda.

a Woman Writes adolf Hitler!

Listen, Mr. Hitler:

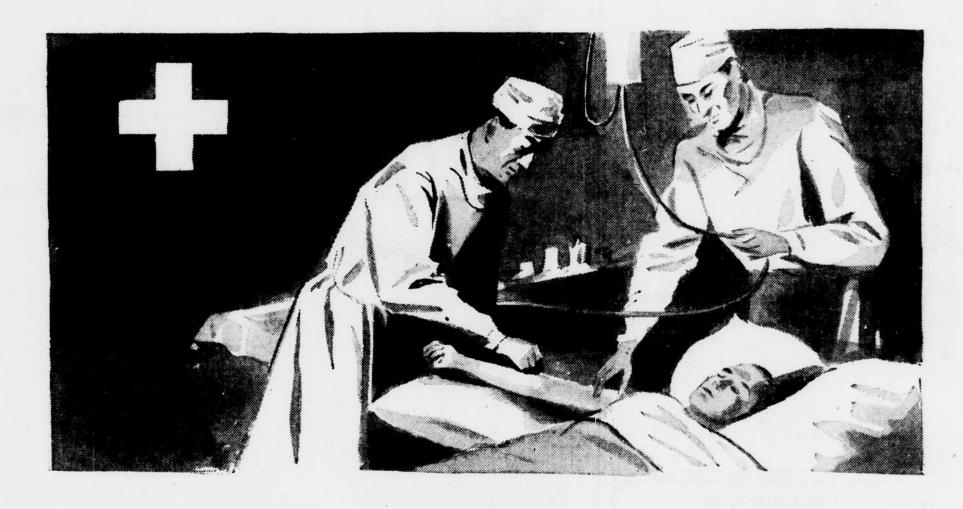

You don't think much of us women - and you're doing everything you can to turn us into slaves.

Because of that, I'm doing something that's going to set you back on your heels - and quick! Every day I save at least a tablespoon of waste kitchen grease. In Germany, your spying Gestapo forces women to do this, beating them up or sending them to concentration camps if they are caught not turning in waste fats.

In America, our government asks us to save our waste grease of our own free will. We get the cooking good out of it - sure Then we pour it into a can and rush it down to the meat dealer. What's more, he pays us for it. We're doing this because fat makes glycerine and glycerine makes gunpowder - to blow you . off the face of the earth!

Our Boys Need Your Help -the Red Cross Will Give It

Shoulder to shoulder with our fighting forces from training camp to the front lines, the Red Cross is their symbol of life and hope.

If they need money to get home before shoving off to some far-off fighting front—the Red Cross supplies it.

As they board a transport they welcome Red Cross Ditty Bags containing cigarettes, soap, razor, other comforts.

Red Cross Clubs are established wherever our boys may go -for morale and recreation-entertainment-and to understand and help them with their personal problems.

In the convalescent hospitals, dreary hours are made brighter by the cheerful understanding helpfulness of the Red Cross. The Arts and Skills Plan trains them for a job and a future in which they can hold their own.

Prisoners of War know they have not been forgotten when they receive that box from home. Warm clothing, American smokes, food. A message of hope made possible by the Red Cross organization.

And on the Home Front-the Red Cross record is outstanding. Training our people in first aid, home nursing, as nurses' aides, in motor corps work and as canteen workers. Women Clear Debris In Bomb-Devastated Plymouth, England

Two-thirds of 200,000 Population Return to Shell-Razed Devon City

(In this, the first of a series of articles about Britain's wartime cities, Helen Kirkpatrick, London correspondent of The Star and Chicago Daily News, gives a picture of much-bombed Plymouth, whose population was nearly halved in 1941, as it looks today.)

By HELEN KIRKPATRICK.

LONDON, March 22.-Plymouth the population of which droppe nearly 100,000 in 1941 after the Nazi blitz, has now three-quarters of it. prewar population living in the midst of devastation as bad as anything Britain has seen,

The recuperative powers of this city of 200,000, or perhaps the stamina of this tough Devonshire people, is nothing short of amazing No matter what section of the city is visited the scenery is the samerow on row of shells that were once homes, square after square which once formed Plymouth's shooping and civic center. It all looks-two years after its worst raids-as one imagines Guernica looked in the old days when the bombing of cities horrified the civilized world.

Shortage of labor and full-time occupation of all Plymouthians has made the cleanup of the devastation impossible up to now. But it is being tackled today-by the women of the city. Squads of women ranging in age from 16 to 40 are pulling down the tottering walls, separating bricks from wood and salvaging bits of metal. And, judging from the ones with whom I talked, they are enjoying the work enormously. Shopping Arcade.

One of the principal problems. when a town has lost the bulk of its shopping centers is what to do to replace them when no rebuilding is permitted. Plymouth has solved it uniquely. The old markets have now been converted into a shopping arcade. Former drugstores and dry goods and Woolworth counters are complete with vegetables, fish and meat for the attention of house-And from the viewpoint of the housewives, it is a sensible, time-saving arrangement. Complete lack of any domestic help calls for careful planning of the housewives' time. Children must be taken on marketmg and shopping expeditions. Plymout has nursery schools, but, like most other cities, not nearly enough. Sixteen of the city's schools were totally destroyed and 35 damaged more or less badly, out of a total of 60 pre-war buildings. The pre-war school population was 25,000. There are now 17,000 children back in town, most of them having been There still are about 5,000 in the country, but they are returning at the rate of 200 a month. Forty-two schools now are in full operation, many of them in makeshift build-

Advanced Social Service.

The city administration, particularly its social service, is most advanced. Supervised groups have been formed for Channel islanders for old persons-many of whom were bombed out-for wives and mothers, war prisoners and war widows. Boys' and girls' clubs are doing an impressive work among the teen-age, many of whom might be potential juvenile delinquents owing to the breakup of their homes and the disappearance of most opportunities for recreation.

One hundred and forty women who would normally be considered members of the leisure class, have volunteered to do housework for the aged, invalids and overworked mothers. Most of these volunteers owing to lack of domestic help. must run their own homes and care for their own children

Perhaps Plymouth's history played a part in the revamping of the education scheme. It was one of the first towns to put American history in all school curricula and to introduce courses in citizenship A panel representing all commer cial and cultural interests is now engaged in drawing up a postwar

It is an amazing city which still coast, it is the victim from time to time of hit-and-run raids. Should large-scale raids ever recommence Plymouth is prepared. Ninety feet under the Devon Hills there is a well-equipped, ventilated tunnel with beds for 1,000 persons. Workers and public utility personnel will be transported to the tunnel if Plymouth is once again the target for

Boy Scout Members Mobilized as OWI

President, in Order, Asks Lads to Carry Vital Information to Nation

Members of the Boy Scouts of America have been designated as official dispatch bearers for the Office of War Information through an order signed by President Roosevelt which "mobilizes 1,589,281 Scouts and leaders all over the country for important war services," Dr. Elbert K. Fretwell, chief Scout executive, Boy Scouts of America, announced last night.

The order, signed by President Roosevelt and addressed to the Boy Scouts of America, was quoted as follows:

"The fine work the Boy Scouts of America did in helping to win the last war leads me to ask Scouts and Scouters to take an important commission as Government dispatch bearers for the Office of War Information. As a dispatch bearer your tasks will be to carry to the people of your community vital information prepared by your Government. It is information which our civilians must have as we fight on to final victory. I know that the Nation can count on you to perform this service willingly and faith-

Dr. Fretwell said each Scout will carry an identification card certifying he is an authorized dispatch bearer for the QWI, the card to bear the signatures of President Roosevelt. Elmer Davis, director of the OWI, and Dr. Fretwell.

One of the first tasks to be requested by Mr. Davis will be a periodic poster distribution service in co-operation with the National Retailers War Campaign Committee, it was announced.

Pointing to the work of the Scouts in the present and first World War, Dr. Fretwell said the Scouts have distributed 1,600,000 posters for the Treasury Department, adding that one of the largest assignments they ever have undertaken was delivering price control circulars to 25,000,000 homes for the Office of Price Administration.

Besides the President's order mobilizing the entire membership for bearing dispatches, it places 542 Scout council offices, all strategically located, at the service of the Government, it was said.

Pass Pass West led the king of diamonds. South took his ace and led a trump to dummy's ten, ruffed a diamond in his hand and then went back to dummy's spade queen and trumped North's last diamond. After that he led a heart, and when he called for dummy's heart ace, North, who was already reaching for the queen, drew back his hand in surprise. He couldn't figure out why South should refuse a "marked" finesse through the player who had opened the bidding with one heart.

The reason became obvious, however, when the next heart lead was won by East! East led back the club seven, declarer played small and West took the jack. But now West couldn't make a lead that would let him make more than one more trick. If he led the club ace, it would set up South's king. If he led anything else, dummy would discard a club and South would trump. But observe what would have happened if declarer had taken the heart-finesse. East would win and return a club. West would take his that West could sit back and wait to get his inevitable two more club tricks. South's play, however, had insured his contract, no matter who had the heart king nor how the clubs were divided.

Uncle Ray's Corner

A 9-year-old boy asked me some questions about volcanoes and kept on with other questions. "Where does the hot lava come from?" he inquired. "What makes it come out of the earth? Is the earth hot inside? Did volcanoes send out lava and hot ashes ages ago?"

Lava is the outpouring of what may be called "liquid rock." A substance which scientists call "magma" is near the surface of the ground in many parts of the earth. From time to time it rises above the surface, and makes a flow of lava

The "civilized" age of man has been compared to a matchbox 2 inches high standing near 300joot buildings representing the periods of Archean and Lauren-

Lava may flow out of a volcano in a stream only a few yards wide. On the other hand it may come forth in a sheet more than a mile

When the lava cools, it becomes hard. A fast cooling is likely to provide "obsidian." a dark glass which is usually black but which may be brown. Slow cooling of lava produces several types of rock. Gas pressure of one kind or another is important in forcing lava to pour out of a volcano. Steam from the heating of water under the ground supplies the main gas pressure in most eruptions. Volcanoes are known to have been active vast ages ago. Sheets of volcanic rock of huge size have been discovered in many places.

There are other kinds of rock jack and exit with a heart. After These include limestone and sandstone. Crush a piece of sandstone which has not become too hard, and you can obtain sand.

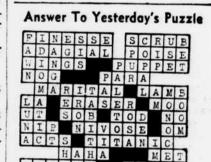

Much of the sandstone existing today was laid down long ago by rivers, layer after layer with the passing of the years. After many centuries, some rivers have dried up, leaving the sand layers which were to become sandstone.

That is one example of how "sedimentary rocks" were formed. Men of science have given close study to rocks all over the earth. The layers have been given names, and estimates of their age have been made. The oldest known rock layers are called the "Archean." It is estimated that they were laid down over a period hundreds of times as long as the period since the end of Mrs. Quack. But if they should suspect that he had been there that night they always would be watching for him to come back. So he took just as much care in leaving the Smiling Pool as he had in coming to it. When he felt that he could do so safely, he trotted swiftly across the Green Meadows in the direction of the Green Forest to see what he could find there. As for Mr. and Mrs. Quack, they slept peacefully side by side among the rushes of the Smiling Pool all the night. They were awake very early the next morning, for Mr. and Mrs.

night to each other in low voices.

Quack are very early risers. After breakfast they began to talk over what they should do. The Smiling Pool was such an open place that the very thought of staying there all day made them very nervous. But Mr. Quack couldn't fly because of the broken wing, broken, you remember, by a shot from a terrible gun, and to swim down the Laughing Brook to the Big River would, quite as likely as not, be to swim right into danger from those terrible guns. Jerry Muskrat overheard them talking.

"Take my advice and stay right here," said he. "No hunters with terrible guns ever come here. They never in the wide world will think don't stay you will be foolish.

"I guess Jerry is right," said Mr. Quack. "I don't see anything else -By Don Flowers to do. 5 Central American Legations Due to Be Raised to Embassies

Move Will Leave Only 2 In Lower Class; Their Elevation Is Likely

By LEON PEARSON. A diplomatic move is in the making to give greater importance to the smaller countries of Latin America by raising the legations of the five Central American countries to the status of embassies. This has not been officially announced by the State Department, but it is common knowledge among Latin American diplomats in Washington. The tipoff came when a dis- | S.E., 12:30 p.m. tomorrow. patch was published from Honduras stating that its relations with the United States were to be raised. It follows that the other four Central American countries, all of which are more important commercially than Honduras, will be raised as we!1

The tide is sweeping north. Today all South American countries are represented here with embassies, though for many years only Argentina, Brazil, Chile and Peru had that rank.
