Conference Unit Named To Handle Relief May Be 'Tail That Wags Dog'

HOT SPRINGS, Va., May 25 .-The United Nations Food Conference, which convened here last week with its gaze fixed on distant goals of plenty, was confronted today by an urgent Soviet demand for more food now-food for the Red Army and the populations it is liberating.

Russia will need food after the war, too, Chairman A. D. Krutikov of the Soviet delegation told a press conference yesterday. In fact, he said the need for food relief will be urgent "during the entire period of restoration of the Soviet agricul-

In Washington Lease-Lend Administrator Edward R. Stittinius, jr. would not comment, but other officials said Russia's food needs were thoroughly understood there.

In his report to Congress March 11. Mr. Stettinius said, "Food shipments to Russia in January and February were 35 per cent greater than in the previous two months and five times what they were in January and February, 1942."

He added in a statement on March 29 that Russia and Great Britain were receiving about equal proportions of lease-lend food. Mr. Krutikov pointed out that the question of lease-lend food was not a problem for the Hot Springs conference, but concerned the governments of the United States and Russia.

The Soviet delegation's press conference, its first since the food parley opened, followed issuance of a British memorandum Sunday stressing the priority of immediate food relief needs over longer-range plans and a statement of the French delegation appealing for early action to help impoverished France.

The Anglo-Franco-Russian emphasis on immediate needs was reflected in the setting up of a subcommittee to study the problem of bridging the gap between wartime food programs and the longer-range objective of

Sporatic Artillery Fire And Scouting Reported Along Some Sectors

By the Associated Press. MOSCOW, May 25.-Although sporadic artillery fire and scout-ground and air forces were hacking away at transport and communication facilities, but it was obvious that the opposing armies were getting large quantities of supplies through to strategic sectors in preparation for the summer campaign.

The Red Army held stubbornly to newly won lines west of the Donets River near Lisichansk and northeast of Novorossisk in the Kuban, but there have been no major changes along the long front in a number of days.

Renewed reconnaissance indicated that the commanders on both sides had ordered constant scouting against the possibility of a surprise

Huge. Fires Set Off Among Parked, Planes Concentrated There

By the Associated Press.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA, May 25. - Heavyweights of the Allied aerial force teamed up yesterday in a major blow at the strong Japanese base at Rabaul, New Britain.

Towering fires were kindled among parked aircraft by the 16 tons or more of explosives and incendiaries dropped by successive flights of Flying Fortresses and Liberators. Returning pilots said the glare of the flames still could be seen 30 minutes later when they were 100 miles

Rabaul, located on Blanche Bay at the northern tip of New Britain, has been described as the most powerful Japanese stronghold, next to the key naval base at Truk, in that sector of the Southwest Pacific.

Concentration of Planes. Reconnaissance planes had spotted what was described by a spokesman at Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters as a large concentration of enemy medium bombers and fighters at Rabaul Flying Fortresses struck first, shortly after midnight. They remained over the target area 45 minutes. Twenty minutes after the B-17s had departed, the Liberators reached the target area and bombed t for a half hour.

Three airdromes-Vunakanau, Lakunai and Rapopo-and the Sulohur Creek seaplane base all were nit. The communique mentioned no Allied losses in the Rabaul raid.

Gasmata, the other principal Japanese base on New Britain, was bombed for the 13th day in a row. Mitchells dropped bombs in the dispersal areas, but results were not

Boston medium bombers made a dawn attack on Lae, New Guinea, causing large explosions and fires. A gunner on one of the planes was killed and another crew member was injured by an anti-aircraft shell which exploded in the ship. Two Liberators bombed Finschhafen and two nearby villages in a daylight attack and a single Catalina followed up with a night raid on the same objectives.

The Office of Defense Transportation has restricted all wholesale and retail deliveries in the Northeastern gasoline shortage area.

Retail delivery of 15 commodities-including soft drinks, alcoholic beverages, ice cream, magazines and radios-was entirely prohibited The ODT ordered the following changes in local delivery services, with a few exceptions: First, the number of retail and wholesale deliveries which may be made in one week from one point of origin to one point of destination is limited according to the commodity delivered. Second, all Sunday deliveries except of ice and fresh milk and cream are forbidden. Third, the delivery routes of each company must be immediately rearranged so that they neither duplicate nor overlap. Embargo Established. The list of commodities embargoed was certified to the ODT by the War Production Board. ODT's action was taken in an amendment. No. 3. to General Order 17. The amendment will become effective at 12:01 a.m.

Thursday, May 27. Exemptions permitted under order 17 will also apply to the amendment. These include deliveries to farms and ships and deliveries of newspapers, certain mine products and explosives medicines, telegrams and United States mail.

These exemptions apply only to frequency of deliveries, however, and not to the 40 per cent mileage cut announced by ODT Saturday.

The number of deliveries specified in the amendment is the maximum that will be permitted for each commodity, regardless of the type of carrier involved the ODT emphasized. Thus, if a private carrier had used up all the deliveries permitted for one week, he would not be permitted to hire another carrier to make additional deliveries.

In many cases, the ODT said, certificates of war necessity will not provide for sufficient gasoline to make the maximum number of deliveries permitted. In no case will allotments of gasoline be increased merely to make it possible for a truck owner to make as many deliveries as specifled by the order.

Milk Deliveries Limited. Limits on retail milk deliveries will apply to horse-drawn vehicles, as well as trucks, under the plant. In announcing the delivery restrictions the ODT pointed out that the gasoline shortage in the East is expected to become increasingly serious during the next 60 days. Effect of the widespread disruption of the West-East petroleum movement, caused by the Midwest floods, is just now being felt in the transportation of gasoline to the shortage area, the ODT pointed out.

When the effects are fully felt additional transportation restrictions may be necessary for the duration of the emergency, ODT warned. Table of Distributions.

Trade Pact Advocates Map Strong Fight on Senate 'Veto' Plan

Hill Predicts Defeat Of Proposal; Debate Continues Thursday

By the Associated Press. Efforts by a Senate bloc to give Congress a chance to nullify reciprocal trade agreements after the war collided today with apparently strong opposition from administration quarters.

Opening of the battle of congressional second-guessing privileges left Senator Hill, Democrat, of Alabama, the majority whip, professing confidence that an amendment providing for a review of the pacts six months after peace is declared would be

The controversy, to be renewed Thursday, drew protests from three Republicans and a Democrat against administration insistence on twoyear extension of the pacts without the proposed amendment.

Revision of the legislation, approved 11 to 10 by the Senate Finance Committee after House passage, would allow Congress to terminate any of the agreements by joint resolution. A two-thirds vote would be required, however, in the event of a presidential veto.

George States Views. Chairman George of the Senate committee, who voiced the only opposition to the amendment in yeserday's opening round, declared its doption might "emasculate or cripple the whole act."

Our Allies, he told the Senate, would regard the restriction as "a present refusal to commit the United states to economic collaboration and "co-operation in the postwar period" New French Setup and would "serve notice of intent to drop the program at a time of greatest chaos.'

Senator Maloney, Democrat, of Connecticut acknowledged that "our indicated intentions are of immediate importance" to the war effort,

"There can be only one reason for an insistence on the extension without restriction of the Trade Agreements Act. That reason must be a lack of confidence in the intelligent and unselfishness of the Congress of the United States."

Senator Vandenberg, Republican, of Michigan declared that "we may find some of these commitments highly irksome and embarrassing.'

"Fantastic," Says Vandenberg. Senator Vandenberg said the administration was using "fantastic" arguments in its drive for renewal of the trade agreement authority without restrictions.

"The idea that we must go ahead with this program without limitations and without regard to the These were: ending of the war: the idea that we must rubber-stamp this particular and specific formula right now in regime should be composed mainly order to guarantee the world's hope of colonial governors. for peace and to prove our good in the things for which we fight is an utterly fantastic bit of frantic, serf-serving propaganda unworthy of the cause in which it is pathetically invoked," he said. Senator Davis, Republican, of Pennsylvania, said that the amendment would serve "to make clear the fact that Congress is empowered to act should a condition arise in the postwar world which makes it imperative that it do so to preserve and protect our people.'

Diplomatic Quarters In London Expect De Gaulle to Dominate

LONDON, May 25.-Diplomatic quarters here said last night that the establishment of a provisional French government in North Africa appeared to be a "mere formality" and expressed belief that Gen. It is expected that he and Gen. Giraud will be "co-presidents" of the proposed regime and that Gen. Giraud will be occupied mainly with the formation of a single French military machine composed of troops already under his command in North Africa, plus Gen. de Gaulle's forces.

Gen. de Gaulle's duties will be argely administrative and will include the establishing of a closer contact with the underground organizations in France. This phase of the French situation will be vastly enlarged as soon as the union is

Lt. Kennon, a former sports edi-tor of the Newport News (Va.) Times-Herald and later a member of the staff of the Richmond News Leader, was a native of Cherrydale. He attended high school in Newport News and was graduated from the University of Maryland.

An incident with his draft board prior to his entrance into the Army in November, 1941, won for Lt. Kennon an award by the Virginia Press Association for feature writing. He had registered at Newport News, and when he transferred to Richmond, notified the board of his change of address. On a visit to Newport News he checked up with his board to find out if it had received his change of address, only to find a record of his having been sent to the Army.

DEFORE the might of American war production can be D felt, it must be moved across many seas . . . to far-off battlefields where it will spell the difference between victory and defeat.

The American Merchant Marine is performing this heroic task-brilliantly. Compare its accomplishments in this war with its wonderful record in the last one. Six times as much freight, for the Army alone. Distances as great as 14,000 miles, instead of the maximum of 3500 last time. Ports that are frequently small, poorly equipped, on hostile shores...compared to the safe, well-organized harbors of World War I.

All this despite ferocious opposition . . . despite the acute need for more ships, more men. How is it possible? Because of efficient supervision by the Maritime Commission and the War Shipping Administration. Because of experienced direction by the shore staffs. Because of the greatly improved ships. And because of the courage, the skill and the will of the men who man them.

This is our Merchant Marine at war...getting the supplies where they are needed—when they are needed... writing a glorious record in the annals of man's fight for freedom.

House Puts Off Test On Anti-Strike Bill Until Next Week

May Sees Possibility Of Clearing Measure Without Fight

Abandoning plans to force a vote this week on the Connally-Smith anti-strike bill, House managers of the controversial measure announced today they would demand action early next week, either with or without administration aid.

Earlier plans to seek a vote this week were dropped, said Chairman May of the Military Affairs Committee, because of a possibility of getting tlearance for the bill next week without a fight over procedure.

Approved in Committee. The Military Affairs Committee approved the measure more than a week ago by a 21-0 vote, and while the Rules Committee already has approved procedure for sending it to the floor, the House leadership failed to put it on this week's program. It was explained that action at this time, with the soft coal truce still in effect, might put the House in the position of antagonizing labor while peace negotiations are in progress. However, any member of the Rules

Committee may call up the bill at any time and at least two members.

Representative Smith, Democrat, of Virginia and Representative Colmer, Democrat, of Mississippi, are reported ready to call it up on short "I believe there will be no difficulty getting the bill up next week,' Mr. May said. "There is a likelihood it will be put on the program and it will be passed overwhelmingly when we get around to it." Primary Purpose.

"Certainly," he added, "no one can oppose legislation intended solely to keep the wheels of industry moving to turn out materials needed to defeat the enemy. All the bill does is prohibit strikes in Government-operated plants and provide orderly procedure under which they may be called in other plants. It is intended primarily to keep production

Backers of the bill said they were willing to accept amendments to eliminate some of the objections of organized labor, including a provision preventing the War Labor Board from issuing closed shop or maintenance of union membership

Food Increases for Heavy Workers

Memorandum Declares Stamp Program May Have to Be Revised

HOT SPRINGS, Va., May 25 .-The United States delegation to the United Nations Food Conference held out the possibility today of Government-sponsored increases in food for workers who need more than their ration cards allow them

The delegation submitted a memorandum that said this country may have to revive its food stamp program and some similar measures of distribution to accomplish this idea. Some of these activities may have to be revived and strengthened as the war goes on in order that available supplies of food may be distributed to people who need them nost," the memorandum said.

Agriculture Department experts nere as conference advisers said hought had been given to the evival of Government distribution neasures as a supplement to conumer rationing.

Not So Visionary

It is not difficult to understand the point of view which regards the proposals presented to the food conference at Hot Springs by the United Kingdom delegation as chimerical, especially when studied against the background of our own somewhat dismal experience in dealing with the food problem, and the farm problem, here at home. One may with good reason question the practical application of an idea for establishment of some international food-control and distribution machinery to deal with food problems on a global scale, when we have been told that a third of our own people, in times of relative "prosperity" and peace, are ill fed.

But there will be no disagreement with the desirability of the general objectives laid before the food conferees by the British delegation, or with the thought that unless we begin now to think of these things and to discuss them frankly, we shall come to the end of the war unprepared to deal with the chaos of peace. This first food conference is merely one of many which must be held to set in motion the controlled forces which must work together in shaping the postwar world. Richard Law, who laid the United Kingdom declaration of principles before the conferees, regards any agreements reached at Hot Springs as a "valuable introduction" to considerations of the "economic problems to which the United Nations will have to devote | raised the cost of living to a degree their urgent attention in the near | almost intolerable for even the mid-One may hope that this conception of the Hot Springs conference as a "valuable introduction" will be accepted generally, and that no proposals or agreements on principle, made or reached by the delegates, will be ridiculed or lightly regarded because they may seem so

Judge Marvin Jones, president of the conference, indicates the proper perspective in his comment that a program, such as outlined by the United Kingdoms delegation, would take "years to work out." It is not to be regarded as anything more tangible than a general meeting place from which to begin. And when we consider the vast cost, in lives, in money and in wasted resources, represented in a global war of destruction, it does not seem an idle waste of time to begin talking now about the utilization of a fraction of this cost in working toward that goal of "freedom from want" throughout the world which is one of the surest guarantees against future wars.

Salvage Miracle

The highest of commendations should go to the men of the Navy and those from civilian life who have joined hands to send back to sea all but five of the mineteen warships which were pounded with Japanese aerial bombs and torpedoes in the assault on Pearl Harbor. Nor will these remaining five be a total loss. The battleship Oklahoma, which capsized, has been righted, and the target ship Utah, which also turned turtle, will be salvaged in similar fashion. The future of these battered hulls remains uncertain, but naval officers say that the Oklahoma, at least, will leave Pearl Harbor under her own power.

The remaining ships are the battleship Arizona, which broke in two when her magazine exploded, and the destroyers Cassin and Downs. both damaged beyond feasibility of repair. Yet they have not been a total loss, many of their guns, machinery, etc., having been salvaged and put to other uses.

As for the others-those which have been patched up and sent out of the harbor-they are, or will be, better warships than on that fateful Sunday when the Rising Sun bombers and torpedo planes made their bid to knock out the Pacific Fleet before the people of the United States could know that war had, started. That the Japanese enjoyed a measure of success is not denied now-a far greater measure than one would have thought from reading the Navy Department's announcement after the attack that certain unnamed ships had been "damaged but were capable of repair within a few weeks to a few months."

It has been almost a year and a half since Japan struck, and five of the nineteen ships that were hit are not yet ready for service, and may never go back to sea. But fourteen of the vessels which bore the brunt | have done. ginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland and increase had been granted. But the bear.

Tennessee, have steamed out of Pearl Harbor. Thanks to the energy and the genius of the salvage crews and the officers directing them, these more potent weapons of naval warfare either have rejoined, or soon will rejoin, the fleet.

This is an achievement that gives a lift to the spirit. It is good to know that these proud ships, victims of as treacherous assault as civilized man has ever known, will live to play their parts in settling the score with the Japanese, who might have been in command of the Pacific today had they been ready to follow up the blow which paralyzed Pearl Harbor on the morning of December 7, 1941.

Compulsory Cadet Service The Board of Education's approval in principle of compulsory cadet training for three years is a step in the right direction, but the law evidently leaves considerable discretion to the high school principals and to the parents. The principal "may" accept a request from a parent that a student be excused from cadet service, but it is not clear that the parent must accept the principal's ruling. And as uniforms are bought from commercial houses by the parents, it is plain that the school authorities are without real authority to force them to purchase such equipment or that the drills can be made compulsory under the present

A relatively small percentage of the boys are enrolled in the cadet corps. The price of uniforms may be a factor which discourages such enrollment. These prices have risen sharply in the past few years, calling for an outlay that many parents may feel they cannot afford. And if this condition is a real handicap to compulsory service in the cadets, it should be removed by making available, at a small charge or at no charge at all, adequate uniforms for drill. The Board of Education is pursuing the matter by asking the Quartermaster Corps of the Army to rule on a request for provision of uniforms at cost. But it seems improbable that, unless there is specific statutory authority, the Army could enter into such an arrangement.

The matter is important enough for some study by Congress, to determine what can be done now to make the high school cadet corps the effective medium it could be for preinduction military training. It is to be hoped that the matter will be discussed during the coming Senate nearings on the pending District appropriation bill. The fine start made on the physical fitness program in the public schools, in danger now because of the difficulty in securing qualified instructors, should be augmented by effective strengthening of the cadet corps.

Gasoline History

The American people are learning to appreciate their dependence upon what the Century Dictionary calls "the lightest volatile liquid product commonly obtained from the distillation of petroleum." Thousands of individuals who can remember when it was regarded as a "waste" of the oil industry now realize that, in effect, it is the power which moves most of the wheels of day-to-day life in the United States. Millions of gallons of it, which were pumped into the Atlantic Ocean in the period before the invention of the gasoline motor, now at last are regretted as they well should be, along with timber and coal and other natural resources which the Nation ought to

Meanwhile, a good-sized book could be written about how something that nobody wanted became something that everybody wants. The Americana says: "In the early years of the petroleum industry there was no market for this product. * • • At that time the kerosene fraction in the crude was the most desirable. • • • When a demand was created at length for gasoline for gas making and internal combustion engines, a standard brand could be obtained, water white and 76 degrees gravity. Still later a gravity of 60 degrees met the purpose. With improvement in refining and development of new processes, arising largely out of World War demands and the increasing use of motor vehicles, the ideas formerly held as to what constituted gasoline suitable for motor fuel underwent revision. Gravity and color now have minor value in the determination of the merits." Gasoline engines, it seems, were invented by Stuart Perry of New York between 1844 and 1846. "They included both the air and water cooled types and used turpentine gases as fuel." A gasoline traction engine allegedly was built by Charles W. Hart and Charles H. Parr at Madison, Wisconsin, in 1895-6. According to Joseph Nathan Kane in "Famous First Facts," the first automobile operated by a combination of gasoline and electricity was placed in service about 1910. "It was equipped with the Owen magnetic drive and a generator in a combined unit." At about the same date, an improved "speed buggy" was constructed by the General Electric Company of Schenectady for Colonel E. H. R. Green, son of the famous Hetty Green and himself celebrated as an enthusiastic friend of mechanical progress and as President Roosevelt's

To begin with, they are constrained by the limited size of their forces. In 1941, they found themselves able to keep up a series of successive attacks along the whole Russian front. In 1942, they had forces only for an offensive in the south. This year it is likely that their forces will be still smaller, and in consequence they must seek a still more limited oblective.

So considered, the northern front presents definite attractions. Since their primary purpose is to cut off and destroy a considerable part of the Russian Army, the Germans might seek to achieve this by attacking both sides of the Russian salient between Lake Ilmen and Smolensk, making their major effort on their left in the Leningrad-Novgorod sector, so that their left flank would be protected by the Gulf of Finland until it had passed Leningrad.

Incidentally, a part of this operation would be directed toward the capture of Leningrad itself, which would contribute more to German prestige than any other prize in Russia except Moscow. After Stalingrad and Tunisia, the Germans are badly in need of a military success which they can hold up to the world as showing Moreover, the capture of Leningrad would tend to hold Finland in the war by maintaining Germany's lines of communication with that country. It would forestall a Russian offensive using Leningrad as a base, which might clear the south shore of the Gulf of Finland and cut Finland off from Germany altogether. The Germans have shown themselves extraordinarily touchy about Finland's attitude, which indicates that they are most anxious not to have their position in Northern Europe weakened.

It would appear that an offensive against Leningrad and the Smolensk salient—that is to say, an offensive in North Russia, fulfills all these characteristics, and that the German High Command hardly could find elsewhere an operation from which they could hope to gain so much for so comparatively modest an expenditure of force. They are no longer in the position which they once enjoyed of being able to use practically unlimited force against a single enemy without worrying about what is going to happen elsewhere. They must now budget their resources and seek for bargains. And while attacking the Red Army is hardly to be described as a bargain from any point of view, the Germans, being compelled by necessity to make such an attack, may well consider that the northern sector is the most attractive place in which to try their luck.

Why does Washington appear so consistently working at cross purposes—to wallow in a sea of conflicting policies, statements and directives?

Conceding that it is the traditional American spirit for every group to blame every other group, G. B. Arthur, businessman and former WPB official, says that most of the confusion can be traced to men from peacetime Government agencies and from classrooms.

"At first we thought it was a hummingbird, but after we discovered that we could come up to this thing and fairly touch it without frightening it we decided that it could not be a bird. "It hums exactly as hummingbirds do and is green on its body, rather soft and like plush, and has a touch of red, just as the hummingbird has. "This creature or whatever it is spends most of its time on the phlox plants, going from one little flower to another, up and down, and in this it also resembles a hummingbird. "We have not had any of the latter this year, but usually have several of them in June and July. They are always a delight. I wondered if this new creature could be some type of hummingbird we have never seen.

> "Most sincerely, M. L." * * * *

Our correspondent's "creature" is the sphinx moth.

In our own garden it is called the "phlox bug," because of its plain preference for the flowerlets of that plant. It is often possible to capture these insects in one's hand.

They seem to be entirely fearless, permitting an observer to stand right over them, with hand just a few inches away. The rather round body looks almost as if covered with soft green feathers. The red is the exact color of that on the ruby-throated hummingbird.

* * * * At a little distance it is possible to confuse the two, owing to the coloration and the habit of going up and down a flower spike, but close at hand there is no resemblance. This form of the sphinx moth is about as close as a moth ever comes to resembling a bird. At one time a specimen came for several weeks on Sunday alone. Hence it was called, at least in one garden, the "Sunday bug." It is but one of the many strange forms which may be found in a small yard, provided one searches for them regularly. Even the insects which visit vegetables and flowers are interesting bits of life.

despite the damage they may do. In all our spraying with poisonous liquids and powders, we should keep firm hold of the essential fact that the things we are trying to kill are very interesting,

They have life, the same as we do, and no doubt in their odd ways might even have some sense of the universal struggle for life, liberty and happiness. That they happen to trespass on things | fishes than He does of us.

"BETHESDA, Md. dear to higher forms of life is their misfortune. At the same time, though, things seem > to work out to their good fortune, too, because the more vegetables and flowers human being put into the ground, and spend hours caring for, the more life material there is for the insects to work on and to develop on in their various cycles.

Thus the problem of the insects is not just single, an increase of the various forms, as sometimes we tend to think it, but also is a double problem, in which mankind has a hand by providing them extra food.

* * * * Experts have been telling us for many years that the next great battle of the world will be between insects and man World Wars I and II have intervened, but still their prediction probably has as much truth in it as ever.

The demands of humanity for food mean more and more grain and other foodstuffs raised, and the more raised, the more insects they will support. Even if the united resources and determination of all mankind were tuned to curbing and controlling the insects and rusts and fungi inimical to man and his food crops, it is doubtful whether we could ever wipe them out.

They have ways of propagating themselves which are involved, seemingly, for a purpose. Some forms of insects can lie over in the ground for years, as the famous 17-year locust, for instance.

Some forms can remain hard and dry for several years, to spring into abundant life when water finally touches them. There is a brine shrimp, for instance, which is a true crustacean (not an insect), whose eggs can remain dry for at least six years, without losing their life principle.

Insects can do much better than this. It is but one of the many ways they have of outwitting man.

So when we curse the "bugs" in our Victory gardens, or just plain flower gardens, we should at the same time remember how wily and therefore intelligent the insects are.

Every one of them is worth looking at; some of them are worth intensive study. Even the plant lice, or aphids, which come in several colors (the principal one is green), often outwit the gardener by going around to the back of the leaf. where they find shelter from the careless sprayer.

One of the first lessons of the gardener is learning to be careful to spray the undersides of all leaves.

Once this is learned, the insects cannot get away; but before delivering the blow, take time out, even in a busy season, to study the victim; it is impossible to know, at this stage in our progress, whether God, in the end, will not think more of the animals, birds, insects and Economic Internationalism Discussed in Relation to Peace.

To the Editor of The Star:

In the editorial from the Winnipeg Free Press which was reprinted in The Star, it is written that economic nationalism is the greatest barrier to permanent world peace and it is suggested that international trade be developed to the greatest possible extent for the welfare of the people of all the countries when the world is once at peace. I agree with the editorial as far as it goes, but it seems to me that it doesn't go quite far enough because it makes no mention of political nationalism as being one of the most fundamental of all the causes of war. Nor does it explain just how it would be possible to prevent the return of economic nationalism if the nations of the world would be allowed to continue to maintain complete political sovereignty as heretofore, answering only to themselves for their actions whenever they could get away with it. To a certain extent, in the editorial from the Edinburgh Scotsman reprinted immediately below that of the Canadian newspaper, this problem is considered. for the Edinburgh editorial defends Britain's desire to hold her colonial empire after the war on the ground that the nations and colonies of the British Commonwealth are, and ought to be, politically and economically interdependent rather than completely sovereign.

Here we have the paradox of a Canadian newspaper advocating economic internationalism and (I assume) political nationalism for the world, while an Edinburgh newspaper advocates economic and political internationalism so long as it is limited to the British Commonwealth of Nations. But when we consider that the British Empire is, in effect, one great sprawled-out nation, we see that the Winnipeg editorial is more liberal than the one from Scotland, even though it makes no provision for world government, which alone can guarantee an end to imperialistic exploitation and international anarchy-the two great causes of war.

This does not necessarily mean, however, that world government will in itself bring an end to economic exploitation, for it might well be that the world will remain capitalistic after it has been politically united, as did Great Britain. Nevertheless, it seems to me that bold steps must be taken now, if possible, toward the establishment of a world government. Although it is possible to have poverty and civil war with government, if economic systems do not conform to the needs of peoples, it is not possible to have universal security and freedom and peace without it. This is one of the most apparent facts of the 20th century. CLEMENT DROZ.

Guarantees Needed for Free Press

Specific Wording in Constitution Could Halt Federal 'Grab'

By DAVID LAWRENCE.

The unmistakable trend toward totalitarianism which the New Deal has manifested in recent years has developed widespread fears that the freedom of the press and the other precious freedoms related thereto may be in peril. Totalitarianism is supposed to be beneficial to the people when it is exercised by a well -intentioned administrat i o n that deems itself capable of determining what is David Lawrence.

or is not good for the citizens gen-Thus the Supreme Court, a major-Ity of whose justices have been appointed under the New Deal, now has affirmed the principle that any Governmental agency which confers any license or permits the use of any Governmental facility can control the means of expression in peacetime as well as in war. The radio has been swept from under the protection of the Bill of Rights by a recent decision of the court.

The answer to such decisions is not to try to remove the justices. That was tried by President Roosevelt in 1937 and strongly disapproved by Congress, though a good many rubber-stamped members and many outside of Congress were ready to go along with the theory that when you don't like the umpire all you need to do is to contrive some way to remove him from the power to decide.

Decision Repeal Possible. There is a lawful way to repeal

Supreme Court decisions. It is to amend the Constitution so as to make explicit the guarantees which previously had been believed to be implicit in the Bill of Rights. Not only is radio but the press and every other medium of expression in danger of Federal control today by reason of the support given by a New Deal majority on the Supreme Court to the idea of administrative absolutism. The new doctrine is that any broadly phrased language In a statute is a legislative standard and that even the right of review of administrative agencies in the courts should be drastically curtailed. What means of protection is there for the media of public expression? What language in the Constitution ean protect both the press and the radio and any new means of communication, such as television, so that the excuse of limited facilities shall not be used to interfere with the free exercise by radio broadcasting stations of the licenses given them without intimidation by anybody in Government? What phrases can be written into the Constitution to protect the newspapers of the United States against the misuse of the commerce clause of the Constitution to attempt to control the press associations of America which gather and disseminate news?

Suggested Amendment.

One suggestion for a constitutional change would amend the first article of the Bill of Rights, namely the First Amendment of the Constitution, so that this section would be added:

"The grant, sale or lease of any facilities by the United States to the press, to radio broadcasting, to television, or to any other medium Preacher Lauds Officer of public expression shall not vest Who Arrested Him agency or in the several States the power to limit, restrict or regulate England, for failing to immobilize as a regular churchgoer." the contents of any printed publica- his car, the Rev. The court took the lic expression except as any of these media may offend against the common law governing fraud, obscenity, or libel or as they may disclose military information in time of war in contravention of the laws passed by Congress

It will be argued that the present laws and the wording of the free speech amendment are adequate guarantees and this logically would be true if the American people wereimmune from the effects of decisions of capricious-minded judges who have lost their sense of objectivity under the New Deal. But so long as there are judges chosen from the official clique of administrative absolutists, the Nation cannot be sure that it has in the judiciary an independent branch of the Government which will safeguard the free speech and free press clauses of the Constitution. The decision in the case of radio broadcasting issued recently shows particularly a trend toward governmental control of that means of communication which, taken together with the prosecution of the member newspapers of the Associated Press, reveals a prejudice and a political policy against which the people cannot be protected by the judiciary's whims. It can be protected against them only by a change in the Constitution itself. (Reproduction Rights Reserved.)

GOP, With Eyes on Election Next Year, Also May Sidestep Labor Curb Issue

By GOULD LINCOLN. The way of labor legislation in Congress is still hard. Six weeks ago the House passed by substantial vote and sent to the Senate the Hobbs bill to prevent racketeering by members of labor unions. It was referred April 12 to a subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary C ommittee. The subcommittee has still to take the measure up for consideration. Part of the time the chairman of the subcommittee, Senator O'Mahoney, has been ill.

More recently the Senate passed the Connally bill, authorizing the President to take over war plants in which strikes or lockouts occurred, providing by law for the War Labor Board. which was created under executive order, and giving the board power to subpoena witnesses.

On May 6, the bill was referred to the House Military Affairs Committee. That committee substituted a bill of its own, much more far-reaching, and reported it favorably to the House May 11. Two days later, May 13, the House Committee on Rules voted a special rule for the measure's consideration.

Showdown Nears. The leadership of the House, presumably following the wishes of the Administration, has been able to hold up consideration of the rule and the anti-strike bill. Yesterday, the proponents of the bill met with Speaker Rayburn and Majority Leader McCormack in the Speaker's office. After some discussion, it was agreed that the rule and the bill should be taken up a week from to-

It had been announced last week that the measure would not come before the House during the present week, and many of the members who wished to be present had made agreements to leave Washington. The proponents of the bill, therefore made no protest against this further postponement. It looks now, however, as though the issue would come to a showdown in the House on June 2.

The rule is an "open rule," permitting the free offering of amendments. It calls also for general debate not to exceed three hours, and then for the consideration of the bill for amendment under the five-minute rule.

The strategy of administration opponents of this legislation has been delay-so that it could win over votes, through the exertion of pressure of various kinds. Also, with time, it was believed that the Congress might cool off from its high temperature the strike in the coal mines had induced.

This is the old strategy which has been used again, and again by an administration opposed to all restrictive labor legislation. It may be effective again. Anti-New Deal Democrats who are supporting the anti-strike bill fear that the Republicans in the House will fall away. The truth of the matter is that a national political campaign, in which not only the election of a President and Vice President will take place, but also all members of the House and a third of the members of the Senate, is just about a year away.

It looks now as though the Republicans, because of the power of the labor vote, will side-step this issue if they can. If the Republicans in large numbers fail to vote or vote against the rule and the bill, it is unlikely it can pass. This is the situation that gives the supporters of antistrike legislation cold shivers.

Would Embarrass President. Admittedly, during the heat of the coal strike and immediately thereafter, the anti-strike bill, as amended, could have passed the House by a considerable vote. The Senate might easily have accepted the House substitute, or part of it, and the measure would then have been sent to the President for his approval. With the country feeling pretty sore over the coal strike and the threat of its renewal, and with other strikes in war plants, a struck a popular note. What the administration hopes now is that the crisis has passed; that with the Republicans playing up to the labor vote the bill will not be passed and the President will be spared the dilemma growing out of either having to veto, sign or permit the bill to become law without his signature. Whatever he did would make him enemies.

presidential veto would not have

If the House GOP members go along with this strategy of the administration, it may do them little good. It is entirely unlikely that the labor vote in large percentage can be won away from the New Dealers by any such play on the part of the Republicans.

The labor vote will go through for the President and his supporters next year-unless like other voters, the individual labor voters have become sore with the conduct of Government and with conditions existing in the country, or they do not like the way the war is progressing.

Bill Provides Secret Vote. In the House version of the Connally bill, it is made unlawful for an employer to declare a lockout in a plant nolding a Government contract, or for the employes of such a plant to strike for a period of 30 days after a dispute between the two has brought about a deadlock. Further, no strike may be ordered until a secret ballot of all the employes has been taken, under the direction of the United States Conciliation Service. The House bill provides also for registration of unions and full financial reports.

The Hobbs anti-racketeering bill grew out of a Supreme Court decision more than a year ago, which held that the Federal antiracketeering pill did not cover members of the Teamsters' Union who held up trucks entering New York City and insisted on the payment of money to them before deliveries could be made. The Connally bill grew out of the coal strike engineered by John L.

Lewis. It was thought that by referring the Hobbs bill to the Senate Judiciary Committee, and not to the Senate Labor Committee, which has been the death of other labor bills passed by the House in recent years, action could be had rather promptly on the measure. The hope has not yet been

'I'd Rather Be Right'

Opponents of Second Front Mainly Interested In Military Non-Co-operation With Russians

By SAMUEL GRAFTON. When there was a great agitation scurantism, or double-talk. There such decisions must be left entirely up to militarv experts. What do we know about such things? they asked with mock numility. Today, when the second front seems likely to become a reality, the same group declares loudly Samuel Grafton. that the plain people must begin at once to take over the control of military strategy.

They don't like the experts any more, now that the experts seem to a menace. favor a second front. All of a sudden, for their money, the experts know from nothing.

hrough their Congress.

(This switching of arguments is what I have been calling "Obscurantism." I put the word here within quotes because some customers have objected that it is a hard word to understand. This piece can be read without it; just skip all the quotes.) Policy Is Fixed.

We see now that this group is not really interested in the question of whether the experts ought to override the public, or whether the public ought to override the experts. It is interested in a certain military policy of non-co-operation with Russia, and in pursuit of that policy it leaps lightly, like the goat, from one argument to another. And when, last fall, it was argued that we ought to take the offensive at once and deliver the knockout in a paragraph without parentheses, punch against Hitler, this same Congressional bloc wagged its group it is the good word and the right finger wisely, and asked, but what word and the word we are all going about all the shipping we would need for such an operation? We were told, over and over again, how many ships it takes to carry a soldier,

Now, in this late spring, the same group argues that we ought to trans-Congress, though the new strategy would obviously require many more vessels than the old

All of a sudden, apparently, soldiers have learned to swim to the scene of their work.

(And the "ship" argument, like den

the "experts" argument, is ob-

for a second front last autumn, that is a shipping problem when you little group of Congressmen who do want a shipping problem, and there not want a second front argued that is no shipping problem when you don't want a shipping problem. The shipping argument is used, not to illuminate, but to obscure, which is why "obscurantism" is the only word that fits.) When, last fall, it was argued that we ought to throw a quantity of hot lead right in Der Fuehrer's face. the objection was made that it was too early for such an enterprise, that Hitler was too strong, and that we had better wait until we had accumulated more equipment and men. Now, when American hot lead is about to fly against the best target in the world, precisely the same bloc argues that there is no point in such an endeavor, because it is

> Hitler has become too weak to be Too Early or Too Late.

Besides, it adds, we have too many men and too much equipment on the scene, and we ought to move both somewhere else now too late to bother about it:

So, you see, that is how it goes; it is always too early or it is too late, or we don't have enough stuff, or we have too much, and no matter what we do, it turns out, strangely and mysteriously, that the conditions are never just right for getting rid of Hitler.

We are always too weak, or else we are too strong, and this curious scheme of argument reflects isolation's similar arguments of prewar days, when it contended that we couldn't fight Hitler, because he was too powerful, and that he was no threat to us because he was too feeble

And that, my friends, is obscurantism, and I think maybe I'll say so because, after all is said and done, to have to learn.

This Changing World

Allies Believe Round-the-Clock Raids on Reich Will Weaken Power of Nazi Thrust at Russia

By CONSTANTINE BROWN.

How much of the Nazi air force has been withdrawn from the eastern front to fight off the increasing vehemence of the Allied air attacks on Germany and Nazi - held Western European territories cannot yet be ascertained. There is no question, however, that

and the British bombers have been meeting ris- Constantine Brown. ing opposition in the last few

It is not known whether the Nazi high command has diverted some forces from the Russian front or whether a portion of their aircraft production intended to form the reserves in the east has been diverted to the west.

In either case, the Allied high command feels that the day and night raids not only affect German morale and production but also are helping to soften the blow which the Nazis intend to administer to the Red armies in the next few weeks.

That the Germans firmly are determined to attack the Russians with every ounce of strength they possess is now admitted in all military quarters.

Professionals in Saddle.

The new Nazi campaign against Russia will no longer be a "hunch operation." Hitler is now only nominally the commander in chief of the Wehrmacht. The strategy and practical application of the strategy is in the hands of professional splicers such as Gen. Jodel, said to be the smartest man on the German general staff

The Nazi field marshals and generals have been planning the third Russian campaign since February. According to the best available information, the German high command has concentrated on the Russian front not less than 200 divisions (about 3,000,000 men) and an air force of at least 5,000 planes. Supplies of all types have been rushed to the main centers in Poland and the Ukraine and to the Northern Leningrad and Moscow fronts for several months.

Center Like Beehive.

Their main center of supplies at Rowno in the Ukraine has been like a beehive for an even longer time. The Nazi military moves are veiled by less secrecy than the Russian moves. The Allies actually know more about the movements of German troops on the eastern border than they know about the Red armies. This is due either to an excellent intelligence service or the fact that the Germans do not think it worth while to conceal their operations too much. Such was the case when the Nazi forces were rolling over Western Europe. Once the operation was decided on by the general staff, the Germans did not bother to conceal it from their enemies.

What our eastern associates have at their disposal to counter the impending blow is little known here. It is assumed that the Red armies are still strong and there is no reason to believe differently when we take into account the enormous reservoir of manpower they possessed. Even if their losses in the 1942 campaign were as heavy as the Nazis claim, they still can muster a powerful force to fill the places of those put out of combat.

The supplies sent from this country to Russia have been regarded as satisfactory even by the Russians themselves, who in the past have complained that our effort did not correspond to our

The Red armies have been recerving lease-lend goods over several routes and there is no question that the bulk of the planes, tanks, ammunition and particularly food, has reached them according to schedule

U. S. S. R. Holds Tongue.

The Allied high command is not particularly anxious to discover the secrets of our associates, although a better knowledge of their production capacity would facilitate the estimate of chances of holding the Nazis. It is difficult, it is said, to obtain even an estimate of what the Russian high command itself thinks about the prospects of the Nazi attack.

We are told that the Soviet general staff is not particularly worried about the forthcoming operations. In the light of past performances of the Red armies and the high quality of their generalship, there is no particular reason to show more concern than the Russians themselves.

Nevertheless, it is admitted that the key to the war in Europe is in the hands of the Russians. If the Nazis are stopped short of their objectives—as we all expect -we may look to much trouble in Germany. It is highly improbable that the German people will be able to stand another winter of war on the eastern front. But should something go wrong with our associates in the East, there is no saying what surprises may be in store for us this year.

McLemore-Goes Sun Baking In Sea Drawers

By HENRY McLEMORE. LONDON.-The English are very, very keen on what they call "sun baking." The sun-baking season is in full swing now and thousands and

Henry McLemore. freshening

I was trapped into taking a sun bake recently and have not yet fully recovered from the effects. I did my "baking" atop the roof of an apartment building and there were times in my misery when I could have sworn that I saw Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd mushing by, shivering beneath his furs, talking to penguins, gnawing on pemmican and jotting down notes for his Antarctic memoirs.

Had No Sea Drawers.

The English friend who invited me to join him in a spot of sun first asked me if I had brought any sea drawers with me. "Any what?" I asked back, not at all sure of my ears. "Sea drawers," he repeated. I told him I hadn't. I told him that while the ship I had crossed on had provided us with all sorts of life preservers (Mae Wests) and protection against the sea in case we were torpedoed, no one had thought to include a pair of sea drawers. Finally, I discovered what he was talking about. He meant, he said, a bathing dress and when I said American men never wore bathing dresses, but left that to the ladies he was astounded.

"You American men must wear something when swimming," he

"Sure, we wear bathing trunks or pants," I said.

"That's what I mean," he said. "Sea drawers are what you call

He told me to get a pair of sea drawers and meet him at his apartment the next afternoon and we would bake a lot of health into ourselves. So I got some, which was one of the worst mistakes I ever made in my life, and went to his apartment. It seemed a strange day for sun baking. There was a touch of winter in the air and a mist that gave promise of turning into rain. But as it turned out, that made no difference. The English refuse to allow the sun to upset their plans. If the sun shines, that's fine. But if it doesn't, they'll jolly well bake anyhow The roof was seven or eight stories in the air and exposed to all the elements. "We will stretch out right here," my friend said, choosing a cozy spot of asphalt roofing that had the same surface as a kitchen grater. The weather began closing in now and became about the sort that makes them put up the first storm warnings around Cape Hatteras, so I crawled under my

"That won't do," my friend said, breathing in a deep draught of the health-giving mists. "One must stay outside to gain the benefits." I could even feel my freckles shivering and I longed for a bottle of plain old-fashioned automobile anti-freeze. I tried to stick it out but when I felt a strange warmness creeping over me I recalled that that was the first sign of freezing and I staggered downstairs on nearfrozen legs. My friend stayed on and late in the afternoon he was rewarded by a 15 or 20 second shaft of sun that broke through the clouds. He came downstairs all invigorated and wondering aloud if there were any danger of his being blistered.

"We must do this more often." he said. "We stay cooped up in offices until it's a miracle we don't wither away. I feel like a new man." I didn't tell him so, but I did too. I felt like a chip off the Aurora Borealis. If any one wants to buy a pair of sea drawers cheap, I am the man to see. They are yours for a song and a hot water bottle. ## THANKS

To Our Patrons:

On behalf of the management and employees of the Capital Transit Company, I desire to express appreciation for the wholehearted co-operation of the bus-riding public when the cut in bus service, made necessary by the critical shortage of gasoline, was ordered by the Office of Defense Transportation. It was a display of American teamwork that will insure a reasonable service to the public over a longer period of time.

We transported the public with a minimum loss of time because all of us togetherthe public and the employees-appreciated the responsibility which fell on our organization in carrying on its wartime job. It will take a few days to readjust riding habits, but you can be sure that everything possible will be done by the management and the employees of the Capital Transit Company to see that the best possible service is rendered under these present emergency restrictions. The success of yesterday's service proved that the Washington public has a sympathetic understanding of our problems and that we can depend on every one of our patrons to see us through this period and other emergency periods that might arise.

Every employee extends his sincere thanks to every rider for his co-operation in having his fare ready when boarding a street car or bus, moving to the rear promptly and exiting through the center doors. Should any further change in service during this period be necessary, or should we be able to render our former service, we will notify the public promptly. In the meantime, the teamwork and the American spirit of the public and our employees is contributing to that tremendous force that will most surely spell defeat for the Axis.

Sincerely,

E. D. Merrill President

CAPITAL TRANSIT COMPANY

P.S.—For the convenience of the public the personnel of our Information Department at MIchigan 6363, extension 572 (open from 7 a.m. to 12 midnight), has been augmented to answer questions concerning service.

In peace time telephone users make many Long Distance calls in the several days preceding a national holiday-before Memorial Day, for example-planning weekend trips or inviting out-of-town folks to visit them.

But let's not do it this year. War calls will be crowding Long Distance lines before and on Memorial Day just as at other times. Every one loves an anniversary. If t is his own, and somewhere near the paper, wood or copper brackets. a person's eves invariably become dimmed with sentiment and anticipation. In the case of golden, diamond or platinum commemorations, that is something else again—especially in the field of entertainers. After eons of focusing in a fog of cigarette smoke and on scenes of impossible hurly-rly their eyes have grown merely dimmed. ## "I never thought the time would come..."

I never thought the time would come when it would be appropriate for me to say:

"Please don't ride on a Southern Railway train this summer—unless you conscientiously believe that your trip is necessary."

But that time has come .... an inescapable by-product of our Nation's fight for Victory!

You see, the Southern serves the Southand the South is serving the Nation as the location of many important war industries going at top speed and more than half of all the larger training camps and military establishments in the country.

This means simply that our passenger facilities this summer will undoubtedly be strained to the limit.

Many of our passenger cars and locomotives will be assigned to troop movements.

Our regular trains and our stations are bound to be literally jammed with men and women in uniform, traveling under orders and on furlough, and civilians traveling in connection with war work.

13th & E

We're going to do our level best to handle this heavy load, including those civilians who conscientiously believe that they must travel.

But, until our trains and stations are no longer over-crowded by essential travel, we hope that you will patriotically forego all unnecessary travel over our lines.

I never thought the time would come...but it's here .... and I know that we can rely on your cooperation and understanding.

"The path of the OPA is bound to continue to be rocky and difficult as long as it retains in responsible positions within its organization persons, or a group of persons, who maintain an ignorant prejudice against business and who utilize wartime emergency powers as a vehicle to establish their concepts of what should be the condition and methods of business as developed in

Mr. Constantine was particularly critical of the OPA maximum price regulation governing women's rayon hosiery and its "disregard of suggestions from the industry.

"Everywhere we have encountered opportunities to serve, except in our dealings with OPA," he declared. There one encounters all too often an atmosphere of misunderstanding, suspicion and even what appears as malice toward the business community. One might describe one's experiences on the last score as 'adventures with malice in OPA-land."

Mr. Constantine explained that a simple, yet adequate and workable hosiery price regulation to substitute for the one now in effect could be side of a square table and have representatives of the manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers of the product occupy the other sides and jointly trade experience, fact and requirement.

The list was irregularly lower during the greater part of the proceedings but some short covering toward the last, on the theory the recent dwindling of selling might be a signal for a resumption of the upswing, inspired the stiffening of trends. Dealings, sluggish until the final

Gray, in an address prepared for delivery before the annual convention of the National Association of Purchasing Agents, said industrial coal users should "seize every opportunity to build stockpiles in essential war industries to 90 to 120 days' supply and for other industrial users to 60 to 90 days' supply." missioner John Russell Young and Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter on April 12 at a meeting of the Public Order Committee of the Washington Board of Trade. This commit-tee had answered an "urgent" call by the District OCD for trucks by soliciting local business firms. As a result of their campaign, they were night. able to get 41 trucks, 27 of which were later found adaptable to the mounting of pumps.

Donated for Duration.

The trucks were donated to the Fire Department for the duration of the war. The contracts giving the District legal title to them are still in "rough form" a month and a half after the trucks were turned over to the city, according to Mr. Lumpkins. Otto E. Fearn, superintendent of Fire Department machinery, stated that his shop had all the necessary equipment with which to install the pumps and awaited only the "go" signal from the Commissioners office and Chief Porter. The pumps, which are used in fire fighting, will be installed in four workshops in the District-City Refuse, Sewerage, Highway Department and the Fire Department-Mr. Lumpkins said. He estimated that each shop will be able to turn out one mounted pump a week.

18 More Trucks Sought. Meanwhile, the Public Order Committee is continuing its efforts to get 18 more trucks to replace those of the first lot found unfit, according to Mrs. Marie C. Rogers, Board of Trade secretary.

Centralized Plan Urged to Handle Ambulance Calls

Committee Favors Fire Alarm Office As Clearing House

A new centralized ambulance control system, to provide swift service to the injured anywhere in Washlngton, probably will be set up, with control headquarters at fire alarm headquarters.

This was indicated today when preliminary plans for such a system were developed by a special committee appointed for the purpose, and predictions were made by Commissioner Guy Mason that it would be put into effect.

The plan would provide for coordinated operation of at least the 27 ambulances of the Fire and Police Departments, Emergency and Casualty Hospitals.

Beef Shortage Faces Buyers In D. C. Area

Lamb Also Lacking, While Veal Supply Is Uncertain

With five sets of red coupons for meats valid this week, housewives probably will run into difficulties again buying the cuts for which they thriftily have been saving points, it appeared today.

As has occurred before when four or five rows of red coupons are good at the same time, there is a shortage of beef and lamb. 'The veal supply is spotty. Pork cuts and hams are more plentiful. Dealers said there appeared to be no way to account for the recurrent shortage of beef and lamb products except that "it is just one of those things.

"A couple of months ago," one wholesaler said, "there was plenty of beef around, but we couldn't lay our hands on pork or ham. Now the situation is reversed.

In any event, merchants believed, there would be enough meat in town to go around this week end-providing they can find enough gasoline to distribute it. The housewife may have to settle for a pork roast or a ham instead of a sirloin steak, but her family will eat.

By GEORGE KENNEDY. Back from Guadalcanal, "the greatest grandstand ever provided to witness naval warfare," Maj. Harry O. Smith, jr., seated in his father's home at 110 Taylor street,

Lamb Also Lacking, While Veal Supply Is Uncertain

With five sets of red coupons for meats valid this week, housewives probably will run into difficulties again buying the cuts for which they thriftily have been saving points, it appeared today.

As has occurred before when four or five rows of red coupons are good at the same time, there is a shortage of beef and lamb. The veal supply s spotty. Pork cuts and hams are nore plentiful. Dealers said there appeared to be no way to account for the recurrent shortage of beef and lamb products except that "it is just one of those things. "A couple of months ago," one

What's more, there is a much better chance this week than there was a week ago that she will be able to put some potatoes on the table again. This staple food product, which has been almost unobtainable except through black market sources for many weeks, was coming into the Washington area more abundantly as shipments were reported from

Canning Project Ready to Open July 1 Here

Funds Are Sought To Save Vegetables Of Victory Gardens

The District's first community canning project for Victory gardeners today was all set to be placed in operation July 1.

Under the program disclosed yesterday when the Commissioners sent a supplemental budget estimate to Congress, surplus yields from Washington Victory gardens may be brought to the Central Kitchen Building, 1640 Wisconsin avenue N.W., for canning.

The housewife will supply the vegetables and glass jars, and the District will take on the job of cooking and canning. To defray expenses of the project, a small percentage of produce preserved will be retained by the city for use in District institutions. Harry M. Gardner, who has been operating the city's penny milk program, has been placed in charge of the program. Mr. Gardner started the free school lunch project for the District in 1934. Facilities of the central kitchen, where school lunches are now pre-pared, will be used, including six 100-gallon pressure steam kettles, Officials believe the cookers will be sufficient to take care of demands of gardeners. Mr. Gardner reports that space and facilities also will be available for housewives to clean and prepare vegetables prior to canning. The Agriculture Department has promised to furnish several experts on canning to assist Mr. Gardner's staff of 12 assistants With District schools closing next month, and Congress authorizing the funds, the project will be ready to start July 1.

Mr. Gardner said today he anticipates a brisk business in canning as most housewives seem to have lost the art of preserving.

"These, mind you, were boys and men seeking voluntary enlistment because they wanted to fight for their country, not men being inducted against their will." he continued. "They represent a cross section of American youth. It is not a picture of which we can be proud, but it should be a warning to us and stimulate us to see that such conditions do not continue." He added, "compulsory physical training and education in health matters must be given a prominent place in our system of education If America is to maintain its place in world leadership."

The Naval Academy, the speaker continued, "does not and should not pretend to be a liberal arts college, and it would be a sad day for America if our entire educational system should be patterned upon it." He was equally emphatic, however, that the "strict discipline, un-

Senate Group Studies | Contractor Turns Back Bill to Boost Aid To Dependents

Lodge Asks 15 Per Cent Increase, Citing Grant To Federal Workers

A bill to increase by 15 per cent the Government's contribution to the relatives of servicemen to meet rising living costs was in the hands of the Senate Military Affairs Com-

Sponsored by Senator Lodge, Republican, of Massachusetts, the bill would raise the Government's contribution to a serviceman's wife from $28 to $32.20 a month and to a serviceman's wife and one child from $40 to $46.

Senator Lodge told the Senate yesterday that the increase was justified not only by rising living costs but also because the rate of induction of men with dependents will increase in the near future.

Several Methods Considered. It was understood that several methods of increasing aid to servicemen's dependents have been under consideration. One would be a lump sum payment to dependents at the time of a man's induction instead of waiting until he has earned a month's pay in the service. Increases in certain categories have also been under discussion.

Senator Lodge pointed out that Congress already had recognized the rise in living costs by increasing the pay of Federal employes.

He also contended that "indications multiply that the number of dependents of servicemen who are receiving various forms of public assistance is growing."

Statistics Cited. He said he had been advised that in Massachusetts, in the period from September, 1941, to June, 1942, there were 33 aid-to-dependent-children cases attributable to fathers in the services. A survey of relief cases in May, 1942, listed 78 families with members in the service.

"On the other hand," he said, "in March of 1943, a report covering 90 per cent of the State listed 1,481 cases of servicemen's dependants receiving it (relief) was as follows: 616, old-age assistance; 446, aid ot dependant children; 419, general re-

Urging that prompt action be taken to avoid unnecessary suffering, Senator Lodge said that "Congress has established a principle that, of all men, the serviceman should be the least troubled by family distress at the very moment that he is risking his own life for his

He said Congress had the duty of exercising "common ordinary foresight in meeting a situation which is sure to arise in the near future when the number of servicemen's dependents is greatly increased."

Safe, Sane Way To Lose

A girl who is about 20 pounds overweight and is in her late 20s wishes to know how she can reduce at least 15 pounds in two weeks. With the bathing season at hand she wishes to be slimmer and will not buy a bathing suit until she has

I suspect this girl in her late 20s has a job and uses considerable energy doing it and possibly more energy on volunteer war work. Under no circumstances should she reduce quickly. No matter what the age there is only one safe and sane way of reducing and that is gradually, through watching one's diet and exercising daily without fail. The only exception to this rule is when a woman is under the supervision of a doctor who insists upon rapid reduction of weight for the treatment of an ailment. When this is prescribed the patient is usually instructed to give up all work for the period of treatment.

Reduction of weight through strenuous dieting, without exercising, is a rash decision. It devitalizes one and invites illness. One should eat balanced menus, in limited portions, and exercise for a period every day to reduce. It is quite possible that an overweight can drop 4 pounds the first week without feeling devitalized—in fact, she might feel the better for doing so! But if she lost 4 pounds every week for five weeks and was still active during the day she would certainly be flirting with poor health. Two pounds the first week, 3 pounds each week following, is the is less than 15 pounds overweight

A cottage cheese ring makes a delicious and cool-looking mold for fruit or vegetable salad. Stiffen well-seasoned cottage cheese with a little gelatin or press the cheese into a buttered mold and let stand in a cold place.

Shopping Around By Dorothy Murray

You Can Fix It . . .

If the rung of one of your dining room or kitchen chairs has come loose, don't despair, for you can mend it yourself. Just invest in a card of 10 clamps that are easy to use and will not pull off. This is a new method of repairing many articles where round or square rungs connect with wood, and the equipment is so inexpensive that you might keep a card on hand, just in case.

Ease the Tension . . .

Having trouble with swollen doors, windows or dresser drawers? A new product made to stop them from sticking is available in stick form and the lubricant won't show on the surface. It is weather-proof, won't dry up or wash off, and may even be used on reluctant automobile doors and zippers.

No Tiny Fingerprints . . .

People with small children would be wise to invest in light switch plate shields, because for some reason youngsters love to play around the switches and their hands are likely to soil paint or wallpaper around them. The shields are made of a transparent material that makes them an excellent protection against dirt, yet doesn't detract from the appearance of the wall. They can be secured to fit all types of switches and are inexpensive.

Gift for a Bride . . .

Consider a handsome pewter hot sauce boat as a gift for the June bride. The design is exceptionally lovely and it is equipped with a smart dark wooden handle that won't hold heat. An equally attractive pewter tray for smart serving is included.

Quaint Container . . .

For something unusual on your cocktail table, be sure to see a candy or cigarette container made of pottery to resemble a felled tree. The leg is finished in a soft shade of green and perched saucily on the top are two brown frogs. One frog seems to be uttering a lusty croak, and the other gives the impression of listening with rapt attention.

'Just in Case' . . .

It would be an excellent idea to keep a small leather tool kit in the glove compartment of your automobile. One never knows these days just when something will go wrong with the car that a slight adjustment will remedy. Included in the kit is a file, hammer, chisel, screwdriver and pliers.

With Correct Leg Action

By Josephine Lowman Today I am offering hints for those who want to learn to swim. Here's how to learn the leg action used in swimming the crawl, today's most popular stroke.

The leg action is an up-anddown thrash which comes from the hips and extends to the toes. This s done scissors fashion, one leg going down as the other comes up. While the kick comes from the hips, and not the knees, yet the knees and ankles should be relaxed. At first you may have to think of your knees as stiff in order to avoid kicking from them, but later on you can achieve a leg action which comes from the hips and yet leaves the ankles and knees relaxed.

The toes should be pointed in pigeon-toe fashion. The feet should not break the water's surface except in speed swimming when they create quite a splash. The feet should be from 8 to 12 inches apart, depending on your build and the

The number of leg drives which you execute to each complete arm movement may be 6 8 10 cm 10. movement may be 6, 8, 10 or 12. The average swimmer will find the six beat most satisfactory. However, do not worry about the speed of your leg action in this stage of practice. Do try to make it rhythmic. An irregular kick spoils your stroke and

Perfect your leg action before trying to add the arm stroke to it. For practice hang onto the edge of the pool, or float with the face submerged and try your kick. Things to remember:

Be careful at first or you will kick from the knees instead of the hips. If you use the pigeon-toed position and hold the knees and ankles stiff you will find that this tires you and does not give you adequate driving power. Try to make your kick regular.

Wartime Menu Includes Tasty Cheese Dish

By Edith M. Barber

Cheese dishes have advanced from the luncheon to the dinner menu these days. In many households one of these appears once a week. While red stamps must be used for cheese, half a pound demands only four points, and can be put to good use to take the place of meat. It is possible to use a little less than half a pound which makes about two cups of grated cheese in a souffle or a fondue or some other casserole dish, and to have a little leftover to use some other time during the week as a flavor for a sauce. We have discarded our old American habit of serving cheese with pie for the duration. It was always American cheese that we chose for this purpose, and this is the type that we use | tering bodice, slim midriff and beaumost often in cookery both because tifully draped skirt. ## Swim the Crawl Heedless Child

Make It Point to See That He Obeys Both Promptly and Willingly

By Angelo Patri

Some mothers have trouble with heedless, disobedient little ones. They speak to the child and he pays no attention but goes steadily ahead with what he is doing. They give him an order and he never stops to hear it. By and by the mother loses all patience and goes after him shouting and threatening. Only when she gets hold on him and forces him to do her bidding, does he attend to it.

Children deal with their parents and those others in authority over them according to the experiences they have with them. If you watch, you will discover that Sonny obeys his father promptly, although he disregards his mother. He scouts grandpa's threats but meekly follows grandmother's beckoning finger. Attend to that one point and don't bother that day or days with the scattered toys, the dirty hands, the sand on the porch and the like. Just teach him to come when he is called, and give him practice in that action.

Make it a job even if you have to let other jobs go by. It is important to have a little child know he is to come when he is called. It may be necessary that he do so in time of danger. Begin by teaching him to come when you call in the house. Reward him with a word of praise, a smile, sometimes have something good to give him, like a cookiesomething that is a treat and not a routine matter. That makes his first experiences pleasant and is a

It is important in teaching this lesson that you show the child you had a reason for calling him. You don't call him for the sake of using your voice. You have something to give him; you have something for him to do, you have need of him if it is only to show him something pretty. Do not call him and have nothing to show for a cause. That will teach him that coming at call is not worth while. Make it worth while.

When he grows older and plays outdoors be careful about calling him only when it is necessary. Let him know that you are going to call him at a certain time and remember to do so. If he does not come promptly, do not call again, but go for him and bring him in and tell him that he must come at once. If he does not, he will lose time off his free period. And make good on that. He must learn you have a reason, that is something for his good, that you will insist that he appear promptly.

Freedom From Want Can Repay Country's Toll, Meeting Hears

The people of Yugoslavia in their fight against the German invaders look to the United States with hope and gratitude, Mme. Constantine Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslavian Ambassador, declared last night at a meeting of the United War Chest.

Mme. Fotitch expressed her "sincere thanks" to the American public for its contribution to her country's war effort.

The fierce fight of guerrilla bands in the mountains of Yugoslavia against the Nazis was attributed by Mme. Fotitch to "their willingness to die, if necessary, for freedom.'

She also paid tribute to Gen. Draja Mikhailovitch, who in the early days of the German invasion of the country organized and directed the guerillas in their fight against the Nazis.

Want Is Great Problem. The greatest need of the Yugoslav people is to attain complete freedom from want, George Radin, Yugoslav lease-lend representative, told the audience.

"We have lost many lives in this struggle, but if we obtain freedom from want, it will have been worth it." he declared. Mr. Radin expressed confidence that his country's internal problems would be worked out if all factions in the land would unite in common He described Yugoslavia as a land with rich natural resources, and said that his people needed the "technical skill and experience" of the United States to develop these resources. Miss Alice Dodge, secretary of the Officer Tells of Camps. Maj. L. D. Ilich of the Yugoslavian Army attended the meeting. The major, who was captured by the Nazis early in the war, and interned, escaped from an Italian prison camp

Germans "The Russian prisoners are the most cruelly treated by the Germans," he said. Next to the Russians, the Serbs and Poles are the most mistreated people in the German prison camps, Maj. ORCHARD ORIOLE'S NEST (Isterus spurius)

Orchard orioles are busily engaged in securing material for their nurseries in May. To locate one of these nests when it is new calls for knowledge of the habits of these friends of ours or instruction as to where to look for them.

The beautiful little architect is slightly over seven inches long. Her head and back is green, her wings are almost black and her breast and under parts a dull greenish vellow. As far as is known, all the assistance she receives in her building is generous encouragement from her mate. Though she is a cousin to the handsome Baltimore oriole, the nests are quite unlike each other by sight, though there are the same indications of clever workmanship. The orchard oriole never uses twine unless it be by accident. Rather, she employes almost exclusively green grass stalks and blades. When the nest is first made, it is, of course, impossible to find among the living green leaves of the apple or pear tree in which it is hidden. It is when the building material begins to turn yellow that the nest is seen.

The nest is a cleverly woven bassinet. The long slender grass blades are skilfully woven into a more shallow pouch than the lattice-windowed one of the Baltimore orioles. The sides of the nest are sometimes so thin one can see the eggs from below. What seems rather strange is that, when the babies come along, they are in a cradle that may be readily seen because, by this time, it is quite yellow among the green leaves of the tree

Some have thought that because this bird has been named the Orchard Oriole, it does not build in any other location. However, this is not true. Nests have been found in almost any kind of tree and not far from human habitation, if the favorite site is not available.

Orchard orioles lay from 4 to 6 pale bluish white eggs. About the large end there are spots and scrawls of brown and purple.

This tree friend of ours prefers to do most of his insect hunting in the trees. That is why these birds are so rarely seen on the ground. They peep into the blossoms where insect foes may be found laying their eggs that will later hatch into fruit detroyers. They hunt over the leaves and bark where caterpillars and other pests of trees are located. And though they may help themselves to though they may help thember they they never do so, preferring ti that is not so handy. Their choice food is found in the heart of the flower, where so many insects come to find nectar and pollen.

By EDYTH THOMAS WALLACE.

Not This

Children whose parents try to teach them self-reliance, and use restraint only when necessary, respond in a very different way than do children who are constantly restrained.

Take My Word for It

By FRANK COLBY. Communique

Loma Linda: Isn't COMMU-NIQUE a French word? If so, why the "com-mu-ni-kay" heard on the radio? Should it not be 'com-mu-neek"?-Mrs. R. C.

Answer: Yes, communique is a French word, but the "-ique" is not one syllable as in antique, physique, unique. In French, when the final "e" is marked with the acute accent (accent aigu), a little straight mark that slants to the right, the vowel is pronounced "ay" to rhyme with day. Otherwise, final "e" is silent. The "e" of communique bears the accent mark. but not the "e" of such words as antique, unique. The correct English pronunciation is:
