Straight Deal, 15 to 1 Wins English Derby

Paget Horse Noses Out Two Aga Khan Entries

NEWMARKET, England, June 19.—Straight Deal, a 15-to-1 shot owned by Dorothy Paget, one of Britain's most prominent horsewomen, won the historic Derby today by sweeping from fifth place in the last half mile.

The Aga Khan's Umiddad was second and his Nasrullah was third. Persian Gulf finished fourth and the favorite, Kingsway, owned by A. E. Saunders, was fifth.

The race was worth approximately $18,000 to the winner and was run in a strange setting, stripped of all its pre-war finery

Unofficially, the time was 2 min utes 30% seconds, which is nearly three seconds faster than yesterday's Oaks over the same course. The race is 1 mile and 885 yards

It was the fourth straight year that the race had been shifted from Epsom Downs to Newmarket because of the war.

Straight Deal was the first Derby winner for Miss Paget who has spent lavishly on blood stock for several years without any luck in the biggest races.

The successful jockey was Tommy Carey, one of Britain's leading riders. He never had won the Derby before, however.

The neck-and-neck finish had the crowd of more than 15,000 screaming as Carey got Straight Deal home

Surprise Parley Delays Union Policy Meeting

By J. A. FOX.

Leaders of the United Mine Workers and the bituminous operators got together this afternoon in a last-ditch effort to avert a Nation-wide tie-up in the coal fields, as reports from nearly a dozen States showed approximately 50,000 men idle in the creeping paralysis of the industry that already is threaten-

Enemy Plans Undergoing Some Changes, Navy Chieftain Believes

By the Associated Press.

Navy Secretary Knox went out of his way today to dispel any ideas the public may have that the U-boat is licked simply because Atlantic sinkings have fallen off sharply. In fact, he virtually forecast a new Axis submarine offensive in the Atlantic.

Progress in the Allied anti-submarine campaign is "very satisfactory," he told a press conference structure of the bituminous industry yesterday but hastened to add that "realistically we know they are going to do something."

"I would say," the Secretary declared, "that the lull in fighting out 'there now must indicate some change in the plans of the Germans.

The Secretary thus reflected the views of qualified authorities here who have privately voiced apprehension over increasingly optimistice reports on the progress of antisubmarine warfare. These reports have been chiefly based on factual information about decreases in the number of Allied ships sunk and inactivity on the part of submarines in the North Atlantic.

Mr. Knox said he believed German plans were simply undergoing is belief that the Germans are relying on the submarine to attempt to break down any invasion thrust against Europe. This might lead to a decision on their part to conserve their strength until the crucial mo-

Mr. Davis discussed in the majority opinion not only the travel pay issue, but also the UMW demand for a general wage increase of $2 a day which the board denied on May 25. He said there was no doubt that miners in the past had suffered great hardship owing to low wages. But he declared their present economic position was good, with averexcept two of the crew, after an ex- age weekly earnings in March amounting to $42.97, compared with

A $2 increase, he said, would mean miners since January 1, 1941—the date used in the board's Little Steel formula which allows a 15 per cent increase above the level of that time to compensate for increased living

"It is obviously impossible." Mr. Davis continued, "for the War Labor Board to approve any such increase for the mine workers under the national wage stabilization policy. "Any such departure from the general rule would destroy the whole wage stabilization program. It would defeat its own ends. The resulting increases in costs of production could only have the effect to further increase all prices, including particularly farm and food prices, to levels which would nullify the wage increases. It would expose the mine workers themselves to a renewed danger that their payroll dollars would be reduced to small change before they get to the grocery store. Public Member Wayne L. Lower Chamber Slashes Agency's Funds 20 Pct., Bars Price Subsidies

Congress was in open rebellion gainst the OPA today, following a series of moves in the House yesterday to trim the agency's budget by 20 per cent and restrict its price-fixing functions. While the lower chamber was

This is necessary. bloc demanded a vote "at the very earliest possible date" on proposals which range from a restriction of the amount of subsidies to a prohibition of any Government funds for price decreases—a measure which would be like that passed the House.

The offensive against OPA came suddenly in the House yesterday during consideration of a $2,898,941. 504 war agency appropriation bill and caught administration leaders almost entirely unprepared. Republicans, joined by recalcitrant Democrats, seized the opportunity to blast the agency headed by Prentiss M.

production schedule must be maintained if that timetable is to be met. Tunisia means more, not less, production.

Declaring that the press and public opinion is given to overemphasizing every victory, Mr. Patterson said, "The policy of the War Department has been not to exaggerate successes, yet sometimes the headlines are disturbing."

Increased Efforts Needed. "Failure to appreciate the gravity of our situation and the need for continued increased efforts to meet our continually increasing needs is evidenced by the coal strike, the Akron strikes, and other stoppages in war and related industries, and by the tendency of certain manufacturers to divert too much time. thought and energy to the design and development of competitive civilian non-essentials," Mr. Patter-troops." He said there was one encouraging factor in the whole Army production figure-"more than 7,000 airplanes were manufactured in May" for the Army and Navy. That represents, he said, a 40 per cent increase in airplane construction compared with

January. "However," he continued, "with the exception of aircraft and radio equipment for the ground forces deliveries of every single group of Army supply items were either below May schedules or below April

Must Adjust Schedules.

To take advantage of technological advances and maintain superiority in quality of weapons, he said production changes must frequently be made. "Each time this happens." Mr.

Patterson said, "some production line is halted. Furthermore, production schedules must be adjusted to meet changing strategic requirements. "When a production line is cut back to allow for a change or substitution in a model in order to meet military necessities, the materials that were being consumed by that production line are swiftly diverted to another production line." he continued. "There has been a definitely limited amount of critical materials allocated to the Army for the prosecution of the war. These allocations frigerator cars half way between the are less than our requirements. "The Army production schedule ealls for the conversion of these materials into items of munitions at a steadily increasing rate throughout 1943. The amount of critical materials which must be made into munitions each month during 1943 exceeds the amount which had to be worked the preceding month. A cutback in the production of any individual item of munitions does not change this picture in the slightest degree. "The total number of man-hours and the total tons of material which must be consumed by the Army supply program must increase every month for the balance of the year or our timetable of military operations will not be met. In war, once the initiative is won it must be maintained and pushed at an increased tempo or it will shift to the Can't Be Made Up Later.

Mr. Patterson pointed out that we are already operating near the peak of our total productive capacity, and failures to meet production one month cannot be readily made up in succeeding months. The record for the first quarter of 1943 and for April was just barely on schedule, and with regard to many critical items, seriously behind schedule, so that every effort is needed during the balance of the year to bring up these critical items in order to meet the time table.

OPA Official Warns Of Women Posing As Rent Inspectors

Montgomery Residents Told Office Employs Only Men Aides

A warning that women claiming to be OPA rent inspectors have been reported entering homes in Montgomery County without authority to inspect the premises was issued today by James W. Woogerd, area rent director for Montgomery, Prince Georges and Charles Counties.

Declaring that four such cases have been reported in Bethesda and Chevy Chase in the last month, Mr. Woogerd urged homeowners not to admit any one claiming to be a rent inspector unless he or she bears proper identification. Mr. Woogerd said the impostors may be connected with some racket.

There are only three rent inspectors on my staff," Mr. Woogerd said, and they are men. They are Ralph Clements, Robert A. Ulia and Robert E. Heater. Each of the three has a letter of identification from this office."

About four months ago bogus men rent inspectors were reported entering houses in both Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, ostensibly to inspect the premises. No definite descriptions of the bogus women inspectors could be obtained, Mr. Woogerd explained. The following joint statement was issued by Mr. Woogerd and State's Attorney Joseph B. Simpson, jr., who has instructed police to be on the lookout for such cases:

"Complaints have been received that women are representing themselves as OPA rent inspectors in Montgomery County. There are no women authorized to so represent themselves. The OPA has no women rent inspectors in this defense-rental area. These women are acting without authority at law and may be connected with some racket. If apprehended, they will be prosecuted by proper authorities.

'The police and the area rent director will appreciate the public reporting any woman who represents herself as an OPA rent inspector All duly authorized inspectors at this time are men and carry identification which the public is entitled to see and should insist on seeing."

Recurring Problem Army in Mid-July Of Split Authority

Warns Food Program Faces Failure Uniess

Put Under One Office By the Associated Press.

War Food Administrator Chester C. Davis today found himself in a position somewhat similar to that occupied by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard before he ost full control over the war food program.

Mr. Davis is at odds with the White House—that is, economic advisers of President Roosevelt-over policies affecting food, particularly price policies.

Reports circulated here that Mr. Davis would resign unless the situation is changed soon. The opinion prevailed, however, that changes to Mr. Davis' way of thinking would be made. Such a course was hinted in an appearance of Director James F. Byrnes of the Office of War Mobilization before a meeting of the House Agriculture Committee yesterday to request postponement of action on a congressional demand for appointment of a food czar.

Sharp differences over farm price policies between Secretary Wickard. on the one hand, and Mr. Byrnes, then economic stabilization director, and Price Administrator Prentiss Brown, on the other, marked relapreceding Mr. Davis' appointment to he food post last March.

CINCINNATI, June 19.-Frederick C. Crawford, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, told publishers of the Nation's smaller newspapers today that loss of freedom of the press would mean the "end of our free competitive system which, in 150 years, has raised the masses * * * from poverty and degredation."

New Asia Command Set Up by Britain To Conduct Jap War

Marshal Wavell Named As Viceroy of India in Place of Linlithgow

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 19.-Great Britain today appointed Field Marshal Sir Archibald P. Wavell as Viceroy of India and announced the forthcoming formation of a new East Asia command to direct the final death blow against Japan.

The London press promptly hailed the Wavell appointment and predieted he would take the earliest opportunity to emphasize that the British government intends to give India self-rule as soon after the war

The proposal to set up the new military command implied Britain's promise to add her full might to that of the United States in the war against Japan when the European fight has come to a successful conclusion, a promise first voiced by Prime Minister Churchill.

Marshal Wavell, now in Britain, will return to India to begin his duties when Lord Linlithgow's term expires in October. Gen. Auchinleck takes over at once as Indian military commander, a position he held in 1940-41 before being shifted to the Middle East.

School Board Head Pledges Continued Traffic Safety Aid

Mrs. Doyle Emphasizes Need for Children To Watch Red Lights

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, presipromised today that the board "will continue to do its part in reducing traffic casualties through education. In a statement to the Traffic Safety Committee of the Junior Board of Commerce, which is sponsoring Pedestrian Safety Week, Mrs. Doyle said:

"In my opinion, there must be an even greater emphasis on teaching the hazards of crossing streets against the red light. Under the present conditions with fewer cars on the streets, the fact that the red lights remain on as long as they did in the days of heavier, traffic has a tendency to cause carelessness, both among children and grown-ups."

Mrs. Doyle recalled that the Washington schools intensively teach the students the right way to cross the streets, the danger of playing in the streets, and the necessity of obeying all traffic laws."

Acting Supt. of Schools Robert L Haycock, recalling that the public schools close next week, warned that parents should impress their children with the fact that more acci-

Latest Nazi Attacks Cost Them Over 2,000 Men In Central Front Sector

MOSCOW, June 19.-Continued Nazi counter attacks aimed at recapturing strong points northwest of Mtsensk in the Orel sector of the Russian front were viewed by military observers today as increasingly significant.

The Germans have made repeated attacks during the past week, throwing fresh reserves and heavier equipment into the attempt to take positions recently lost to Red Army These observers point out that the fighting, although local, has been stronger than any other reported along the front in days, and do not believe the Germans would be making the special effort to retake the lost ground unless it holds unusual value for them.

Both sides were reported to have concentrated large reserves and supplies in the Orel area, which is the hinge of the Central and Southern fronts and is considered a possible point for a strong offensive for either.

Coal Case Decision

In directing John L. Lewis to look to the courts for settlement of his portal-to-portal pay demands if an agreement cannot be reached through collective bargaining, the War Labor Board has arrived at a decision which conforms closely to the real equities involved in this dispute.

As pointed out in these columns on June 3, the Lewis demand, in the absence of a satisfactory negotiated settlement, readily lends itself to ajudication under the wage-hour law. In the first place, it is essentially a legal question. Secondly, when Mr. Lewis first advanced this demand, he based his claim on a ruling by the Fifth Circuit Court that certain iron mine workers were entitled to compensation for portalto-portal travel time under the law. If that be true of iron miners, Mr. Lewis said, it also is true of coal miners. In effect, he took the position that he was under a judicial mandate to insist upon portal-toportal pay for the members of his United Mine Workers.

It soon became evident, however, that Mr. Lewis had little desire to follow the procedures prescribed by the act. Apparently he wanted to use the Fifth Circuit decision as a talking point, but for reasons best known to himself he was not anxious to submit the merits of his claim to a court of law. Hence, there can be no assurance that either Mr. Lewis or the individual miners will be law which he says supports his claim and that he will also refuse to recognize the authority of the War Labor Board, which he has so consistently ignored. If he adheres to the course he has followed in the past, he will endeavor to use his economic strength to enforce his demands in defiance of both law and Government, and that, in turn, would present a direct challenge which the administration would have to meet.

How such a challenge should be met is a very serious question. If Mr. Lewis does not formally call a strike, but merely acquiesces in a work stoppage by the miners, the Connally-Smith bill, which still reposes unsigned on the President's desk, would be of doubtful immediate value. Its prohibition against the use of union funds to pay strike benefits eventually might force the miners back to work, assuming they did not find other employment, but the Nation's need of coal is too urgent to permit of such a protracted contest if any other solution can be

The best hope, obviously, is to head off a strike by persuading the miners, as good Americans, to accept the deeision, and there is no doubt that every effort will be exerted to this end. Yet these efforts might fail, and in that event there would be no alternative but to face the necessity of a showdown between the Government and some 500,000 misguided American citizens. It is an appalling prospect, but if Mr. Lewis is determined to force the issue the Government will have to take up the challenge and see it through.

Miss Mabel Boardman

The need to conserve her energies and her health evidently guided Miss Mabel T. Boardman in her decision to resign the chairmanship of the District Red Cross volunteer special services, which have become so widespread on so many home fronts in Washington. She still will have a great deal to do, in the local as well as the National Red Cross organization. But her relinquishment of some of her Red Cross duties—not interests-is an opportunity for passing comment on the extraordinary contribution that this remarkable woman has made in the development of this greatest of all our volunteer civilian organizations.

She is a charter member of the District Chapter, organized in her father's home some thirty-eight years ago. There have been long periods in its subsequent history associates described it recently, was the District Chapter. She organized the volunteer special services of the American Red Cross on a national scale. The Party Takes Over Recent press reports from Europe indicate current developments in Italy which, should they continue, may play an important part in Italy's ability to withstand invasion. A general housecleaning seems to be taking place within the Fascist regime, with the most ruthless and fanatical spirits in the party seeking to take control over everything and everybody, including Mussolini himself. It remains to be seen whether this eleventh-hour shift will galvanize the nation's flagging energy and morale to renewed efforts against the blows dealt by the Allies. The movement of Fascist renovation began some months ago, when Mussolini recalled to heightened authority old "stalwarts" of Fascism's early days, single-minded zealots who stuck at nothing but got results. In the lush days which followed Fascism's triumph, many of these uncompromising characters were sidetracked or honorably retired in favor of more personable and more amenable leaders. Unlike Hitler, Mussolini is not a genuine fanatic. He is more the historic Italian type of condottiere, the clever adventurer who, when he has "arrived," tends to subordinate the "cause" which brought him there to personal aggrandizement and enjoyment. Mussolini's favoritism and nepotism are notorious, while the Fascist regime has never compared with that of the Nazis in efficiency and discipline. Indeed, as time went on, Fascist laxness, blundering and corruption have become more and more evident. Much of the popular discontent in Italy today is due, less to ideological opposition to Fascism than to disgust and anger at its vices and shortcom-

Mussolini undoubtedly realized that something drastic had to be done if an ultimate collapse of both Fascism and the Italian State was to be averted. So the old guard was called in and instructed to start a purge of the party and the administration in the tough-minded spirit of the old club-and-castor-oil days. This old guard is typified by Carlo Scorza, hard - boiled as they make disposed to accept the findings of them, who was given the key post of the WLB, and we must face the party secretary, the same job which possibility that the mine leader will | Joseph Stalin long held in the Rusrefuse to seek satisfaction under the sian Communist hierarchy. Mussolini presumably intended that the purge should be conducted according to his directions, but the ailing Duce's grip is not what it once was, and the external peril grows more acute. So Scorza and his fellow zealots seem to be proceeding with scant regard for any one. Scorza is the dynamic in a body known as the Fascist Directorate, which is issuing a series of drastic orders concerning the home front, seemingly on its own initiative. Those orders, hitting at black markets, furthering total mobilization, and cracking down on official laxities, are signed, not by Il Duce, but by Scorza as party secretary "in the name of the Fascist Directorate."

Indeed, Scorza is extending his activities to the diplomatic field. Early this week a communique from party headquarters announced that the party secretary interrupted "his other work" to receive the ambassadors to the Quirinal of Spain and Japan. Both audiences were fairly long and dealt with "affairs of mutual interest" to the governments concerned. Normally, ambassadors would confer with the Italian Foreign Minister. Never before have they dealt directly and officially with a party leader as such. This startling precedent strengthens rumors that the Fascist Directorate is in process of exercising "temporary" powers of dictatorial scope, with the Duce effectively relegated to the background. Such a development would be a logical result of Italy's desperate plight. The Fascist stalwarts know that, for them, defeat spells extinction. So they will doubtless fight to the last, with all the ruthless energy that is in them. How far they can rally their war-weary and disillusioned people remains to be seen.

The Bourbons

Spanish monarchist activity is reported from England and from Switzerland, and there is a chance that, in the changes likely to occur in Spain when the Allies finally win the war, the "pretender" or "heir apparent," Don Juan, may reach the throne. Such a development would have significance in Latin America, and the United States therefore reasonably might be interested in it.

The house of Bourbon admittedly does have a following in the New World as well as in the Old. Its claim upon public consideration is very ancient, dating back in an unbroken line to the ninth century, when the founder of the family, Adhemar or Aimar, was invested with the barony when Miss Boardman, as one of her later called the Bourbonnais in Central France. Matilda de Bourbon strengthened the clan by her marriage to Guy of Dampierre in 1196. Other important alliances were those of daughters of the tribe with John individual, is responsible for the fine of Burgundy and Robert of Clermont, son of Saint Louis. From those the American Red Cross and the worthies descended the royal Bour-District Chapter. large part of that invaluable part of wedded Jeanne d'Albret, became the war effort so beneficially carried King of Navarre in 1554, and his son, as Henry IV, became King of France in 1589. The sequence of French sovereigns of the Bourbon strain included Louis XIII, Louis XIV, Louis XV, Louis XVI, Louis XVIII, Charles X and Louis Philippe. Compared with contemporary monarchs of other countries, they were reasonably good rulers. They kept the crown until the revolution in 1793 and regained it after Napoleon in 1814. Not even when the last of them to wear ermine was ousted in 1848 did they surrender their "rights." Meanwhile, the Spanish branch of the house alternately prospered and declined. Philip, Duke of Anjou, a grandson of Louis XIV, was chosen King of Spain as Philip V in 1700, His descendants and successors were Ferdinand VI, Charles III, Charles IV, Ferdinand VII, Isabella II, Alphonso XII and Alphonso XIII. Through Charles III the kingdom of Naples also was brought under Bourbon sway, and through Philip, the youngest son of Philip V, the duchy of Parma similarly was "acquired."

Of course, some of the very most eminent members of the family never attained to regal status. The celebrated Constable Bourbon, allegedly shot by Benvenuto Cellini as he mounted a scaling ladder during the siege of Rome in 1527, still is a subject of romantic remembrance as one of the great heroes of his age. Such a character cannot be disposed of with

Whether or not the gibe attributed to Talleyrand-that the Bourbons "have learned nothing and forgotten nothing"—is justified may be a matter of debate. The fact is that the Bourbon family still continues a part of the history of mankind. Its present reappearance is not an unnatural event.

Realistic Approach to Peace

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts has suggested a "fruitful" approach to peace for this country. His plan differs from others which have been advanced because it frankly and realistically declares that the United States should be prepared to state its own needs when peace is made. He places emphasis on what the United States is to get out of this war. The emphasis in other peace proposals has been upon what this country is to contribute to the rest of the world.

In one respect, however, the Lodge approach to peace is on all fours with other plans. He puts permanent security against war-the adoption of a workable plan to assure peacefirst on the list of this country's needs. Without some instrumentality to maintain peace, once the war ends, there can be no assurance that any of the needs of any of the United Nations will be filled.

The Massachusetts Senator, quoting from the experts who have looked into the situation, showed in detail that essential minerals are fast being used up in this waramong them lead, copper, iron and petroleum. The Nation, he said, will have to import these and other necessary materials after the war. The country will not be self-sufficient, as many have believed in the past. It will be necessary, therefore, that steps be taken to assure the United States proper supplies-which will no longer be available within its own territorial limits. Further, among the needs listed by Senator Lodge, are means of using the huge merchant marine which is now built and building, the proper participation of this country in the great field of commercial aviation which is expected after the war, and the use of all kinds of international communication services. Frankly, Senator Lodge does not have too much faith in what he calls the "cosmic" or "transcendental" approach to peace. It has its place. But in a realistic world in which our allies, Great Britain and Russia, both know what they hope to get out of this war, it would be folly for the United States not to be prepared to say at the proper time what it will require in a material way. During and after the last war, it was repeated many times that the United States wanted nothing out of the war-except to make the world safe for democracy and the maintenance of peace. The United States got nothing out of the last war. Not even a long-maintained peace. To the idealists, Senator Lodge's demands for a realistic approach to peace may come as a shock. And, indeed, should the United States proclaim today what it intended to demand at the peace table, the effect might easily be to encourage other nations to make even larger demands than they intend to make and to focus attention on conflicting aims at a time when the whole effort should be the winning of the war. However, it should not be amiss for the United States to give due consideration to its needs when peace is made and to be prepared to make such demands as may be necessary.

It was the contention of Senator Lodge that a more definite and realistic program-or the proposal of such a program-would go further toward uniting the American people than a more idealistic and altruistic program, in which this country is visualized as an international Santa Claus. It may be that he is right. Certainly there is far less agreement in this country that Uncle Sam is to assume a Santa Claus role once the war is over than there is beyond American borders.

Axis Worried About Mediterranean Moves

Major Eliot Discusses Possible Attack on Rhodes, At Mouth of Aegean Sea

By Maj. George Fielding Eliot. Enemy news sources have been very much agitated during the last few days about signs of activity in the Eastern Mediterranean. The closing of the Turko-Syrian frontier by the British, the silence of radio stations in Syria and Palestine, the reported arrival in the Middle East of troops from the Belgian Congo, Gen. Sikorski's statement about the battle readiness of the Polish Army in Iraq, all are instances suggesting that something is about to happen in this part of the world.

It is possible that the Axis is getting nervous about Rhodes. Rhodes is a good-sized island, the principal one of the Dodecanese group. It lies at the mouth of the Aegean Sea, commanding all access to that sea from Egypt and the Levant. It has been in Italian hands since 1912, and there have been reports recently that German troops and air forces have been added to its garrison.

If an Allied attack against Rhodes were really in contemplation, it probably would be based on Cyprus. Cyprus is a much larger island, which the British have converted into a well-armed military base with a number of good airfields. It lies about 250 miles east of Rhodes and is in easy communication with the ports of Syria, Palestine and Egypt, from which it is supplied.

The distance from Cyprus to Rhodes is too great for efficient fighter operations, so that it would seem that cover for a landing on Rhodes might have to be supplied by carrier-based planes.

However, attention may be invited to the Island of Castelrosso, also nominally a part of the Italian Dodecanese. This island lies in an isolated position near the Turkish coast about 75 miles east of Rhodes, and therefore about 175 miles from Cyprus. It bears the same relationship in principle to an attack from Cyprus against Rhodes that Pantelleria bears to an attack from Africa against Sicily-that is to say, it would make a useful advance base. It is a small Island, about 31/2 miles long by 11/2 miles wide, and so far as is known, possesses no airfield. Its exposed position should make its capture a comparatively easy matter; there have been recent reports that the Italians already are evacuating it because of lack of water. Castelrosso has a good. well-sheltered roadstead, and it should be possible to improvise airfields, either on Castelrosso itself or on one of the small low-lying islets immediately adjacent.

Rhodes itself might prove a hard nut to crack. It is far larger than Pantelleria, having a total area of about 540 square miles. It is 45 miles long and its greatest width is a little over 20 miles. The interior is mountainous, rising to 4,500 feet. In part it is heavily wooded. The climate is good and the island produces fruits, vegetables and grain in considerable quantities. Unlike most of the Aegean islands, Rhodes would be very hard to starve out.

The town of Rhodes, which is built around the principal harbor of the island, is seriously exposed to air and naval bombardment. The harbor itself would be extremely difficult to defend, being located at the northeastern extremity of the island and exposed to attack from three sides.

But in the mountainous and wooded interior, air support would count for a good deal-less and heavy fighting might well be necessary to complete the conquest of Rhodes if its garrison were to make a really stout-hearted defense.

If Rhodes were to fall in Allied hands. it would form an admirable advance base from which the reduction of other Aegean islands might be undertaken. It also would be useful in attack on Crete. Whether or not a successful defense of Rhodes could be made might depend very largely upon whether the German Luftwaffe is able to detach a considerable part of its strength to the Aegean Sea. There are many island air bases now in Axis possession which would give the Luftwaffe considerable facilities for air operations in that area. In addition to these, the fact should be noted that Rhodes is only 225 miles from the nearest point on the mainland of Greece. However, it is doubtful whether the Luftwaffe is now prepared to undertake any new responsibilities of major caliber, especially in an area so distant from its home bases. Perhaps an attack on Rhodes might at least serve the purpose of testing out the willingness of the German high command to take such chances.

What Inflation Means

From the Toronto Star. What would inflation mean? People use the term freely, but do not always consider its implications. Inflation is a price toboggan in reverse. Prices keep going up and up and up, each new increase bringing on further increases. In Germany, after the Great War, this process continued until millions of marks would buy practically nothing. In Canada it increased until, in midsummer of 1920, the cost of living was twice what it had been at the war's beginning. Experience has shown that when rapid inflation is taking place, most wages do not catch up with prices. Instead of being better off, the wage earner is worse off. And the farmer finds that the prices he receives for what he has to sell do not compensate him for the prices he must pay for what he has to buy. That is why Canada has tied wages to prices and has imposed restrictions not only on what a man has to pay but also on what he

Training Pays Dividends

From the Clay Center (Kans.) Dispatch. Within four days and nights, so reports read, 305 Axis airplanes have been destroyed with the loss of five Allied planes. We might be wrong, but that report spells this brought to us: Allied flyers are now reaping the benefits of the long periods of intensive training given them -at least a year or more. Those wonderful Axis flyers, who were so efficient at the beginning of the war, have mostly paid the price and present-day Axis airmen have not had the months of intensive training so badly needed. As a result Allied airmen now have the necessary training and are capable; Axis dividends.

The Baltimore oriole is one of the most difficult birds to locate among leaves, because his colors, while bright, form an almost perfect camouflage.

When he first comes in May, he is easy to see, because the leaves are not so thick, but by this time of the year he is well hidden. Also, he is usually very high

This means that the eyes will have to

of the nest, but this does not mean that they do not sing elsewhere. Some observers claim that they sing only near the nest. This, we believe, is not true. The Baltimore oriole is an active, merry sort of bird. His loud, clear whistle, easily heard for several blocks, is a true indication of his character.

The female builds the intricate nest and hatches out the eggs, and does most of the feeding. While she is doing all this, her lord and master perches close by, singing for her edification. Or does he? Maybe the singing is just a part of his delight in the spring. At any rate, he sings at other points in the terrain, too. He is not chary at all about his melody. This melody, by the way, is simple, and not much varied. Once you have learned the oriole song, you will always be able to recognize it. He does not have 20 or 40 songs, as the song sparrow has.

The nest is grayish brown, well made from plant fibers. It could not well be any other color.

"THIRTEENTH STREET. This nest is one of the most famous in all birdland, so it is well worth searching for, though no one should take one

> First suspension strings are tied to the branch. These are the warp. Through the warp are woven milkweed stalks, fibers of various other plants, pieces of bark, horsehair, if it can be found, and bits of cord, if available. It is said that these nests will remain in trees for as long as four years. The only one we have examined personally stayed aloft only about four weeks. It was built, and deserted by the builder as soon as completed. We never knew whether she had foresight or not, but the fact remained that in a few weeks a storm blew the whole branch down, nest and all. Sometimes bright golden oriole feathers are used to line the affair. The wisdom which makes this fine nest possible might even be able to see well ahead of happenings. Who knows?

The intelligence of these birds is very high. Experimenters repeatedly have tried to lure female orioles into taking bright-colored yarns for her nest, but in very few instances has she ever succumbed. She sticks to the more somber shades, unlike some other birds, which foolishly make their nests conspicuous by using bright-colored yarns, bits of cloth and other materials of a flashy nature. Some observers, however, declare that the bird will use bright colors. So there you are! Here, as elsewhere in human observations, there is always disagreement. What is certain is that the nest is very plain from a distance and difficult to see in most cases. The fact that it is at the very tip of a branch makes it difficult to locate, because most often one is not looking for a nest in exactly that position. Few birds build their nests at the end of a bough, because few birds seem to possess the engineering brains of the lady oriole. She knows stresses and strains, and is able to weave her threads in such a manner that they do the work intended of them. The chances are that no more harm comes to the oriole's swinging nest than to the more firm nests of other species. She may lose a nest now and then through a thunderstorm, but it is protected from prowling enemies by its If an oriole seems to prefer a certain tree, and its singing is heard coming from it, it is pretty certain that the birds are nesting there. Then the thing to do is to get out a pair of opera glasses or binoculars and search the bough ends for the nest. Often this will be high, sometimes it will be quite low, but always at the very tip end of a long branch. Orioles eat many insects, from boll-weevils and caterpillars to plant and bark lice. Ants, grasshhoppers, wasps and spiders go into the hoppers of their bills. Any Victory gardener who has a pair of orioles around should be well content, and should make certain that no poisonous sprays are used Elms are favorite trees, but the birds to kill insects which, if eaten, will in turn kill the song birds. Strikes May Be Issue in Campaign

Labor Leaders Fail, Apparently, to Note Public Reaction

By DAVID LAWRENCE.

Labor union leaders are still under the illusion that their political strength, plus that of the party in power, gives them a majority. What they do not realize is that a new majority is being developed which is rapidly turning against the Capitalwhich has labor unions. The issue will become concrete in the next campaign if President Roosevelt should veto the labor dispute bill. This

David Lawrence. measure is a mild piece of restriction and merely states that the Government has a right to enforce discipline in plants taken over and operated by the Government itself. Likewise, it gives authority to the War Labor Board to adjudicate labor disputes.

Union labor leaders are importuning the President to veto the bill. The President's political foes on Capitol Hill are saying they hope he does. They believe it will mean the end of his fourth-term hopes. The issue would then turn on whether the President meant to require equality of sacrifice or whether he intended the war effort to be sabotaged at will by strikes.

On such an issue, political observers in Congress say the country will definitely vote against temporizing with special groups or labor unions. Certainly there is every indication that if the 10,000,000 persons who are in the armed services are permitted to vote, a substantial majority will cast their ballots against anybody who by legislative or official inaction seems to permit strikes or work stoppages.

Protests From Soldiers.

What the labor union leaders do not realize is that the letters coming back from the Army camps both in this country and overseas are full of the most violent and intemperate expressions concerning the leaders of the strikes. There is no doubt about it-the men in the foxholes feel they are being betrayed by the strike leaders back home. And if the troops get a chance to vote next year their ballots may well furnish the balance of power that will swing the elections. There is much puzzlement here concerning the strategy of the union leaders. Both William Green of the AFL and Philip Murray of the CIO are sufficiently familiar with the way adverse public relations are created to exercise caution. Yet the public statements filed with the President asking him to veto the proposed law are so full of inconsistencies as to make one wonder how these two big organizations could prepare so careless a case to present to the court of public opin-

In the first place, the statements criticize the proposed law because they say it provides a cooling-off period, which means that strikes are encouraged. But if the law would permit strikes, then why all the fuss about it from a labor viewpoint? Also, the union leaders are saying that if the bill becomes law they cannot sit on the Labor Board because the measure contains a provision barring any one from sitting on the tribunal who has a direct interest in the controversy. Do the labor leaders who now publicly threaten to withdraw from the War Labor Board if the bill becomes law mean they will only sit on a board in which the judges are directly interested in the dispute? Is that concept of justice in the matter of governmental boards defensible?

Effect of Elmer Davis' Statement Is to Reduce People's Confidence in News From Washington

By GOULD LINCOLN.

Elmer Davis, head of the OWI, considers Washington news coverage less adequate than the coverage of news anywhere else in the world today. It looks as if Mr. Davis was taking in a great deal of territory. Furthermore, it looks as if Mr. Davis did not approveof the way news is written in become the great news center of the world. Whatever his purpose in telling the Newspaper Guild in Boston his low opinion of Washington newspaper reporting, the effect of such a statement is to break down the confidence of the American people in the news reports going out of Washington. Coming from the chief propaganda officer of the Government. this is quite a mouthful. Mr. Davis was particularly critical of the amount of space given the bickerings and cutright battles which have taken place among Washington bureaucrats. The Washington news writers, he complained, have failed to write adequately of the great accomplishments of the administration, of labor and of industry in converting this country to an allout war footing. He spoke rather bitterly. The newspaper men, Mr. Davis said, have not kept pace in this conversion from peactime to wartime efficiency. They are looking at news from the point of view of 1938, he contended. They have not been able to "retool" to cover "an immensely complicated story quite outside their familiar field." "Some of them," the OWI chief said, "still seem to feel that a battle between a couple of administrators is bigger news than a battle between American and Japanese navies Entitled to Opinion.

This, of course is the opinion of Mr. Davis and he is entitled to However, if any newspaper reporter in Washington has put a row between a couple of bureaucrats ahead of reports of a naval battle between American and Japanese fleets-or between a single Japanese vessel and a single American vessel-I have never heard of it, nor does there seem to be evidence of such a fact in the newspapers themselves.

Mr. Davis proclaimed himself a friend of a free press. He commented on the freedom the press "enjoys" in this country—even during wartimes. The freedom of the press is guaranteed by the Constitution. It is, therefore, a right. Mr. Davis probably would be the last man to admit the course of the administration has been to limit this freedom. Yet what the administration has been doing is to try to limit the freedom of news gathering. Without freedom to gather the news, in whatever way seems most effective, newspapers are deprived, in a measure, of the freedom to

Here in Washington, in the executive agencies, news and statements of public officials must clear through the OWI. This has been brought about, according to Mr. Davis, so that conflicting reports on the same subject shall not go out from several Government agencies, thus confusing the public. The newspapers which criticized the frequent conflicting statements put out by the various agencies should, Mr. Davis held, be pleased now that these steps have been taken to prevent conflicting statements. But apparently they are not.

As a matter of fact, newspapers and reporters prefer to get the news themselves rather than to have it passed out to them by Government officials. They prefer to be able to interview the officials of the Government immediately concerned. They do not like to have the news "channeled" to them through a Government agency—the OWI in this case.

Could Channel Activity. There is, of course, another way to avoid conflicting statements by Government agencies. One would be to place control of one activity entirely under one agency-as, for example, the food problem-instead of having it under many.

This idea of "channeling" the news to the reporters and to the newspapers is not new. The administration set about to do just that at the recent Hot Springs United Nations Food Conference -denying newspaper reporters at the start easy access to the delegates themselves. There was such an uproar that this policy was abandoned to a great extent before the conference got under

The hostility of the administration to the newspapers has been demonstrated on numerous occasions. Many newspapers have been extremely critical and hostile to the administration. No administration likes to be criticized. No administration likes to have its mistakes shown up to the public. Many administrations have been forced by newspapers in the past to correct mistakes in judgment and administration. Certainly the newspapers of today have been active agents in showing both where mistakes lay and in bringing about their correction.

550 Cover Washington.

An examination of the big daily newspapers of the country will show that many hundreds of columns have been devoted to stories of the great achievements of Government, industry and labor to fit this country for war. Series of stories have been carried, written by special correspondents who have visited the great war plants, Army camps and shipyards.

There are 550 members of the press galleries at the Capitol. This army of newspaper reporters covers Washington. The Associated Press alone has a staff of 81 reporters here. The New York Times' staff in Washington numbers 22. Local newspapers have large numbers of reporters.

The press services and the individual daily newspapers send to Washington the pick of their reportorial staffs. Mr. Davis' comment on Washington news coverage, therefore, seems all the more unfortunate. Mr. Davis seems to have become more of a propagandist than a newspaperman. He lays open to suspicion the objectivity of news reports which emanate from the

'U. S. Foreign Policy' Is Book That History Made Necessary for Nation's Guidance

rence, a happen-

It was inevitable that some one should do this job, sooner or later. It has happened to be Walter Lippmann. I am sure Mr. Lippmann will not mind, and will fully understand what I mean when I say that that is a kind of accident. What this book says is so much "in the air." and was so close to crystallization, that any of 100 men might, and ought to, have written it.

It is, in fact, a book made necessary by history, and Mr. Lippmann's high distinction is that he has become the instrument of that necessity. That is a higher distinction than if he had composed a wildly original plan of foreign policy, dreaming it up out of his own head.

Willkie Said It.

The burden of the book, not to make any further mystery of it, is that the United States must become a member of an alliance, of which the other parties must be Britain Russia and China. Well, Wendell Willkie has said that, too. The important thing is that while Mr. Willkie came to it as the result of a wonderful, warm emotional response to the world's outcry for a future. Mr. Lippmann has come to it on the basis of a cold, meticulous examination of the facts.

But the book's low temperature is exactly what gives it its curiously alid historicity. Mr. Lippmann has ooked upon the hot debate of the last four years (or 40) between isolationists and interventionists, and he has blinked, and he has said in a low voice that this has not been a debate over foreign policy at all. It has been a debate brought about by the absence of a foreign policy. We have had commitments, such as those toward Latin America and the Philippines, without feeling it necessary to have weapons. We have also wanted to keep war far away, without feeling it necessary to set up alliances which could prevent any possible mobilization against our-Bridge Between Two.

We have not been close traders in foreign affairs at all, but, in a sense, playboys, spendthrifts, rounders, high tippers and irresponsibles. We have hoped it would come out even, without counting.

Mr. Lippmann, as you see, is quite practical and utterly detached. He operates in the middle ground, between isolationists and interventionists. He thus becomes the bridge between them. He does so at the right historical moment, starting out in Wheeler's mood and turning up at Willkie's door

That is why I say this is not merely a contribution to the debate, but a new stage in the debate. It is the stage of synthesis, after the factions have each made their own particular offerings. Gen. Yamashita, the conqueror of Singapore, is reported to have been appointed commander in chief of the Japanese Kwantung army is Constantine Brown. known to follow its own policies and on several occasions has attempted to provoke a war between the U.S.S.R. and Japan. The appointment of the man who is considered in Japan as the best strategist of the imperial army is not interpreted in Washington as a definite indication that we may expect a conflict at the Manchurian-Siberian border in the near future, although the Nazis are pressing their Eastern allies to attack Russia now. Japan, it is believed by competent observers here, is not sufficiently sure of herself to attempt to fight a war on two fronts. Vessels Are Captured.

In recent weeks, however, the relations between Tokio and Moscow have been more strained than in the last few years. This diplomatic misunderstanding is due to the fact that, in spite of the existence of a number of treaties and pacts governing Japanese-Russian relations, the Japanese Navy's North Pacific patrol has captured a number of vessels flying the Soviet flag plying between the West Coast of the United States and Siberian ports.

The Japanese apparently had agreed early in 1941 not to interfere with shipments of certain lease-lend goods sent from this country to Russia over the Pacific route. The quid pro quo of this agreement is not clearly known here, but it is assumed it was based on certain reciprocal concessions including an exchange of goods between the two countries.

Virginia Tribble Bride Yesterday Of J. H. Stitt

Couple to Reside In Washington After Trip

White flowers decorated the Metropolitan Baptist Church for the marriage of Miss Virginia Louise Tribble, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Seaborn Douglas Tribble of this city to Mr. J. Howard Stitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Chalmers Stitt of Mount Union. Pa., which took place last evening at 6 o'clock. The Rev. John Compton Ball officiated at the ceremony, and Mrs. Blanche Phillips, soloist, and Mrs. Gertrude Mockbee, organist presented the nuptial music.

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Cecil Tribble, the bride wore a gown of ivory satin with an ivory veil held by a headdress of orange blossoms. She carried a white Testament with white orchids. Miss Wilda Mathis of this city was the bride's maid of honor. Her gown was of yellow marquisette and she carried a nosegay of spring flowers. Miss Rosa Ball and Miss Alma Pierson who wore orchid marquisette gowns and carried nose-week. As a man that has lost my family and drifted away from hem, maybe never to return, I would like very much if you would pass it on to some one so they will be made to realize what it means to drink. Mr. Billington, today if I could have my family back and know that when this war is over I could come home and enjoy life as I could have, if I had only taken your advice and guit drink ing, then I would be the happiest man on earth. I spent last week in (a certain city) on my furlough and Mrs. ---- brought the boy and came up to see me. Then and then alone did I realize what I had done. A Lesson for the Week Greatest Weapon of War

Still Waits Full Trial

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

Queen Elizabeth, in her recent broadcast, pleaded powerfully for a spiritual basis for the war effort. She sees, more clearly than most persons, that the struggle will have been in vain, and but a prelude to further wars, if it is only a thing of hate and force. Looking beyond the day of unconditional surrender, the noble Queen perceives that only the help of the living God, and the character-quality of the victorious people, can give us the new world that is an expression of the Kingdom of Heaven. of Ephesus came this treatise upon A surprising number of persons the practical aspects of a life lived with whom I have talked recently in fellowship with the Divine. We are concerned

But the essential line-up Therein he parts company with is as indicated.

Day by day many of us read the war news as if it were a great gladiatorial spectacle, staged for our entertainment. Its reality and significance have not yet penetrated our spirits. Our minds are beclouded as to the vitality and vastness of the central issue. We hardly reckon versary of the founding of Albright with God's stake in the conflict. Nor Memorial Church. Thus we are engaged in a life and death struggle. The mind and mood of the people are really the ultimate weapon. We talk vaguely of "secret weapons" to be devised and used. But there is no secret about this most powerful of weapons. When people's hearts are stirred to new and intense conviction and consecration; when all as one perceive the greatness of the spiritual issue at stake; then we shall have an irresistible force concentrated upon victory. Day by day it should be the concern of every patriot to do his part toward reaching what are really the goals of God.

There will have to be Christian conversion, as well as United Nations conquest, before we have a new world fit to live in. Christianity will Several months ago the New York Times published an article bitterly advocating hatred for all Germans and their allies. It aroused Nationwide comment, and stirred multitudes to a fresh awareness of the Christian teaching of love. We may hate the evil which the Axis has done, and the diabolical aims for which they stand, but the human beings, embruted though they have become by following wicked leaders, are yet to be eventually loved as

The Week in Religion Pope's Address to Italian

Workers Raises Some Issues

The consensus in informed Roman Catholic circles here is that the speech broadcast by Pope Pius XII to 25,000 Italian workers this week was intended primarily as a warning to labor against revolutionary tactics in seeking postwar social objectives, but a question was raised whether the Holy Father intended also to condemn underground movements now working to break the Axis grip. While Communism was seen to be clearly indicated in the Pope's

July 4 Program To Be Staged at Sylvan Theater

Time Set so as Not To Conflict With Water Gate Concert

Washington's July 4 celebration will be held at the Sylvan Theater, with military parades of peacetime years missing, the Board of Trade decided at a meeting yesterday. The sponsoring committee, headed by Granville Gude, president of the board, will meet again at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday in the board's conference room for ports from committees arranging the annual event. The Sylvan Theater exercise will start at 6 or 6:30 p.m., to be concluded in time to permit spectators to attend the Symphony Orchestra concert at the Water Gate.

War is restricting the scope of the holiday celebration. To save gasoline used by some 50 motorcycle policemen who escorted men participating in the 10-mile marathon last July 4 through city streets, the marathon will be held this year in Rock Creek Park and shortened to 5 miles. The race begins at Marine Band to Play.

Tentative plans for the Sylvan Theater program include a band concert by the Marine Band, group singing of patriotic songs, reading of the Declaration of Independence and an address.

Military and patriotic organizations will be invited to participate in a massing of the colors ceremony preceding the exercise. This feature will provide the only military flavor to the holiday pro-

Former Georgetown Head To Give Spiritual Counsel

The Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., former president of Georgetown University, has been appointed spiritual counselor to the theologians at Woodstock College, Woodstock, Md. Since his retirement from Georgetown last December after a term of seven years, he has been engaged in parish work at St. Aloysius Church here.

Woodstock is the theologian seminary affiliated with Georgetown University and the change brings Father O'Leary into closer contact with the university on whose faculty he served for 25 years. His transfer orders were received vesterday from the provincial headquarters of the New York-Maryland province of the Jesuit order.

Other Jesuit changes as announced include the following: At Gonzaga High School-Father Louis E. McKay, Father Ernest B. Clements and Father David T. Fitzgerald teach religion and classics. Circus Goes On As Food Poison Victims Return

24 Remain in Hospitals of 150 Stricken

While Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus went ahead this afternoon with all its acts reported showing, some of the performers among 150 circus people stricken with food poisoning last night were unable to appear. Understudies substituted for them where necessary.

Among those still under medical treatment was Baby Thelma Williams, the fat woman. She and eight others were at Gallinger Hospital, though their condition was reported satisfactory Casualty Hospital still had 15 patients. This hospital treated more than 100 and kept most of them overnight. Ninety had been released by afternoon.

Performers awaiting release at Casualty said most of those poisoned were stricken before the show started at 8:15 o'clock. Many became violently ill around 7 o'clock, while others did not feel the effects until as late as 9:30, after they had gone into the big top.

July 4 Program To Be Staged at Sylvan Theater

Time Set so as Not To Conflict With Water Gate Concert

Washington's July 4 celebration will be held at the Sylvan Theater, with military parades of peacetime years missing, the Board of Trade decided at a meeting yesterday. The sponsoring committee, headed by Granville Gude, president of the board, will meet again at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday in the board's conference room for reports from committees arranging the annual event. The Sylvan Theater exercise will start at 6 or 6:30 p.m., to be concluded in time to permit spectators to attend the Symphony Orchestra concert at the Water Gate. War is restricting the scope of the holiday celebration. To save gasoline used by some 50 motorcycle policemen who escorted men participating in the 10-mile marathon last July 4 through city streets, the marathon will be held this year

Show Expects to Present All Features This Afternoon

This afternoon's performance of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus was scheduled to go on with all its features intact, despite the food poisoning with which an estimated 150 of the circus folk, some of them star performers, were strick-

More than 100 spent the night in hospitals, but most of them were reported released by noon today and others were expected to be dismissed during the day. None was reported in serious condition.

Ninety-one of the victims were taken to Casualty Hospital in improvised ambulances, including station wagons, circus trucks, buses and patrol wagons. Twelve were sent to Gallinger Hospital. Most of them had recovered this morning.

Performers awaiting release at Casualty said most of those poisoned were stricken before the show started at 8:15 o'clock. Many became violently ill around 7 o'clock, while others did not feel the effects until as late as 9:30, after they had gone into the big top.

Some Acts Eliminated.

It was necessary to eliminate several of the final acts, including the Wallendas, stars of the high wire, and two closing spectacles, the patients recalled, because key members of these casts were unable to go on. Although some performers became sick while under the big top, none of these, fortunately, was in the more hazardous exhibitions, the

Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, assistant coroner, was riding past Casualty when he noticed a crowd there. He made an investigation. Informed this morning that no casualties had resulted from the wholesale poisoning, Dr. Murphy said he was happy the incident passed off with a minimum of suffering. "Food poisoning usually is accidental, it is one of those things that happens in life," he remarked.

Ferguson Says FHA Handled 14,518 Requests in May

Applications for mortgage insurance on 14,518 proposed privately financed family dwelling units to be built for occupancy by war workers were filed with field offices of the Federal Housing Administration last month, Commissioner Abner H. Ferguson reported today.

This compared with applications involving 16.918 units which were filed during April.

In the first five months of this year the FHA issued commitments to insure war housing loans totaling $248,431,094, which will finance approximately 60,000 dwelling units. The applications for insurance on new war housing submitted by private lending institutions last month involved mortgages of $62,697,700. compared with $70,704,605 in April. Upward of 85 per cent of all privately financed war housing is now covered by mortgage insurance written by the FHA under Title VI of the National Housing Act, which protects lending institutions against Building Permits Drop loss on their war housing loans. U. S. Payments Urged In Lieu of Taxes

The Federal Real Estate President Roosevelt that the Government make lump-sum payments instead of taxes to local governments for acquired lands used for war purposes.

The FREB has recognized that something should be done to counterbalance the heavy withdrawals from tax dupli cates caused by extensive Federal acquisitions for war.

The board, a nine-man interagency committee, was estab-lished by the President some time ago to study, among other things, the effect on community finances of the withdrawals from tax rolls. Its report, transmitted by the President last week to Congress, recommended that four major land-acquiring agencies—the War and Navy Departments, the Maritime Commission and the War Shipping Board—be authorized by Congress as a temporary measure to make "in-lieu" con tributions on land acquired since September 8, 1939, when the defense emergency was de-

Four Able to Get About Speak on Program Over WMAL

Ten students were graduated yesterday in exercises none was able to Capt. Lanphier Called

It was the commencement exercises of the District Visiting Instruction Corps, held over station WMAL. and hundreds of crippled students heard the ceremonies from wheel chairs and beds in their own homes.

The 10 graduates, in various classes, who are crippled or ill, have gotten their instruction from biweekly visits by District teachers. Four of the young students, who are able to get about, broadcast to their schoolmates about what they have been doing this year in school and to help the war effort.

On one of my many trips to go up to the front lines at night to visit the 31st Infantry. I found my way to the advance headquarters, located in a sandbagged dugout on one of the side streets of Pilar. The commander was a major in the Army Reserve, who told me he had been a Houston (Tex.) school teacher before he was called to active duty some months before the war started.

Dilweg Practices What He Preaches, It Appears

PHILADELPHIA, June 19.—It happened a month ago, but probably the Government Printing Office had something a trifle more important to set in type, so we've just received from the office of Representative LaVern R. Dilweg of Wisconsin a reprint of his speech demanding 110 to 125 per cent physical fitness (superman?) for everybody, labeling baseball an essential industry, etc.

It was delivered in the House, of course, but while the speech fails to intrigue us some of the interruptions by his colleagues definitely do. We thought you'd like to take a belated peek into action in the House on May 18 as reported by the Congressional Record.

Mr. Dilweg had orated no more than five paragraphs when Mr. Fish of Martin, Barton & Co., leaped to his feet and said: "Mr. Speaker will

After considerable speaking, Mr. Dilweg apparently had exhausted the subject, so a Mr. Vorys of Ohio arose and said, with a burst of originality: "Mr. Speaker, will the yield?" And—guess what—Mr. Dilweg yielded.

Mr. Vorys-I should like to congratulate the gentleman on a very thoughtful and comprehensive and informative statement on the sports situation in wartime. Let me add for the benefit of my colleagues that no one can do this more properly than the gentleman who has just addressed us. He is a famous athlete in his own right. He practices what he preaches, in that he has preserved to his older years the fine physical fitness which characterized him in his youth. and Bob Johnson nine. Outfielders Case and Johnson Pitcher Dutch Leonard and Catcher Jake Early have been selected by Manager Ossie Bluege to represent the Nats in the annual All-Star game here July 13. Johnson and Leonard have played in previous All-Star games, while Case was a member of the American League squad three years ago but did not see action. To be named to the American League squad, chosen by the loop's managers, would be a new experience for Early.

Since replacing Alex Kampouris as the Nats' third baseman, Ellis Clary has hit safely in four straight games, collecting six safeties in 15 attempts. Stan Spence and Johnson are locked for the runs-batted-in lead among the Nats. Each has sent 31 mates scurrying across the plate. Vernon is pressing them with 29 runs batted in.

Early has been having a rough time of it for a week. First he was plagued by a tempestuous tummy, then was hit in the groin by a foul tip and later nicked by a pitched ball. On a run-down here last night Jake slid head first back into second base and was kayoed when Shortstop Irvin Hall tagged him on the head.

Of Mortgage Bankers

CHICAGO, June 19.-Herold G Woodruff of Detroit was neminated for president of the Mortgage Bankers' Association of America, at a meeting of the group's Executive Committee yesterday. Nomination is tantamount to election, which will take place at the association's 30th annual busines meeting here next fall. A national wartime conference on mortgage problems will be held in conjunction with the business session.

Governors to Discuss Postwar Plant Use

Sharp Split Seen Over U. S.-Owned Factories

By the Associated Press. COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 19.-The peacetime use of the Government's multiple war plants probably will evoke debate at the 35th annual Governor's Conference, Frank Bane, conference secretary, said today.

goals are interstate co-operation in prosecution of the war and sound postwar economic readjustments. "What is going to happen to Government-owned plants after the war probably will be considered at length," Mr. Bane said, "There is likely to be a great difference of opinion, especially among our guest participants. He referred to a panel discussion Tuesday on postwar reconstruction. Guests will include Paul Hoffman, president of Studebaker Corp.; Walter S. Gifford, president of American Telephone & Telegraph Co.: James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the Congress of Industrial organizations; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor: Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and Charles E. Merriam, Chicago University professor emeritus.

The case was remanded to District Court by the Court of Appeals for hearings on motions. The motions were made before Justice Mc-Guire in District Court yesterday through Wheeler's attorneys, Arthur G. Lambert and Warren E. Magee, who had been named by the Court of Appeals to represent Wheeler.

The newly uncovered evidence allegediv was to the effect that legedly was to the effect that Wheeler had not signed a confession at the same time it was testified Hart had signed it in the presence of complaining witnesses. At the time of his original trial, Wheeler steadfastly denied in court that he had committed any of the robberies and afterward indicated to his attorneys that he had signed the "confession" because of being fearful of being roughly handled by police if he refused to sign it.

Justice McGuire denied a motion to dismiss indictments against Wheeler, but granted the motion for a new trial, made by Wheeler's at-great stretches of space without any air. It is in those airless regions that scientists say that absolute zero, or something close to it, exists.

The rocket would need to be insulated, to keep it from losing heat. If that were done, the inside temperature might be fit for people to live in.

It is a question as to how much heat the sun's rays would give the rocket. Since a rocket is a solid object, the sun would tend to heat it, but it would be be hard to tell to what extent without an actual test. Passing through space, with no air to hold it back, the rocket probably would travel very fast. Could a pilot steer it in a region where there was no gravity? Perhaps he could do so by setting off explosive charges fixed on the sides, thus making right or left turks. To be able to steer the rocket would be of greatest importance. If ond trick declarer led a diamond to the pilot had no control of direction, his own hand, intending, of course, to he might miss the planet which he set up a spade suit. The spade ace wanted to reach. Then he might keep going on and on forever.

It has been said that "forever" is a long time. Of course our pilot would at length run out of food, or else would die of old age. His rocket, Certainly, this was a sound enough however, might keep going for ages Another problem of a rocket trip

Wife Slayer Given 6 to 18 Month Term For Manslaughter

Vince Giovinazzo Claimed Temporary Insanity; Other Sentences Imposed

Vince Giovinazzo, 58, who on June 9 was found guilty of manslaughter in connection with the fatal shooting of his wife, Mrs. Mary Glovinazzo, in June, 1942, was sentenced to serve from 6 to 18 months by Justice Jesse C. Adkins in District Court yesterday.

Mrs. Giovinazzo was shot four times, it was charged, at Twelfth and D streets N.E., in the morning just after she had returned from church. At that time, Mr. Giovinazzo said, he had asked her if he could return to the home where she lived in the 300 block of Twelfth street N.E. The defendant testified his wife refused and that afterward everything "went black." The case was prosecuted by Assistant District Attorney John C. Conliff, jr.

Claimed Temporary Insanity. The defense claimed that Mr. Giovinazzo, a tailor, had suffered Crumit and Sanderson from asthma and that at the time of the shooting he was temporarily insane.

In another District Court sentence yesterday, Justice F. Dickinson Letts sentenced Fred Smith, 34, colored, of the 1200 block of Fairmont street N.W. to serve 5 to 21 years on a charge of second degree murder. He was accused of shooting and killing Wilson B. Cloud, 28, colored, last February during an argument over alleged liquor and gambling debts. The shooting took place in a house in the 200 block of C street S.W. Smith was prosecuted by Assistant United States Attorney C. R. Heflin.

Manslaughter Defendant Sentenced Chester Jenkins, 24, colored, of the 1300 block of Sixth street N.W., was sentenced by Justice Matthew F. McGuire to serve from one to three years on a charge of manslaughter in connection with fatal shooting of Paul Thomas Void, 23, colored, in a building in the 400 block of K street N.W. Jenkins had pleaded guilty to the charge. Wyatt Ferguson, 19, colored, was entenced by Justice McGuire to serve from one to three years for violations of the Selective Training and Service Act. He was accused a registration certificate to make it appear it was his own. Justice McGuire ordered Fergu-

son's sentence to run consecutively

Sanroma Lifts Tempo Of Gershwin Program

Soloist's Playing of 'Concerto' Inspires Conductor and Orchestra at Water Gate

By ALICE EVERSMAN.

The first week of the "Sunset Symphonies" at the Water Gate ended triumphantly last night with a capacity audience for the all-Gershwin p.m. program. The concerts have now settled down to their routine and the weather showed its best side to contribute to a delightful evening. sic of this American composer who, from a box-office angle at least, can outshine the classisists in drawing power and who proves that national appreciation of native genius does not dim with repeated hearings. The program was much the same as all of those devoted to Gershwin's music must be. Alexander Smallens, in his second conductorial assignment of the season, was slow in getting into the spirit of the music and it was not until Jesus Maria Sanroma, pianist-soloist of the evening, played the Gershwin "Concerto in F Major" that the tempo picked up.

The "Cuban Overture," in spite of its attractive rhythm, was lack-ing in fire, something of which Mr. Smallens is seldom guilty. The march, "Strike Up the Band," bearng the same title as the musical comedy from which it is taken, played itself, more or less, as opening number of the program and "The Man I Love" from the same work was not more distinctive.

Mr. Sanroma's superb performance of the "Concerto" changed the whole atmosphere. Both conductor and orchestra were inspired by the soloist's artistry and followed his leadership in a beautifully detailed and stirring reading. It was by far the most illuminating interpretation

The artist's Latin American temperament showed in a finer appreciation of the snappy rhythms and which is another way of telling long for Howard Hughes to release sharp accents and his musical sense in splendidly modeled phrases.
