Knowledge of French Aids Maj. Woodworth In Air Force Tasks

By THOMAS R. HENRY, Star Staff Correspondent.

STRATEGIC AIR FORCE BASE, North Africa (By mail).—Maj. Lynn F. Woodworth, assistant principal of Central High School now attached to the Northwest African Air Force here, has fitted into an unsual role in North Africa.

The erstwhile Washington educator was one of the few American officers who knew this paradoxical French-Arab country at the time of the invasion and now is quartered in the same hotel where he spent a summer vacation a few years ago. Then it was a luxurious French hostelry, far off the regular tourist routes. Today its luxurious furnishings and draperies removed and GI cooks replacing the expert chefs in its kitchen, it is more like an Army barracks. But to Maj. Wood-worth it is still his "home in

D. C. Anthracite Quota Is Expected to Be About 240,000 Tons

Ickes Fixes Regional Distribution Proportionate To 1942 Summer Orders

Washington will be allocated approximately 240,000 tons of anthracite under the temporary order of Fuel Administrator Ickes fixing distribution of hard coal proportionate to the orders during the summer months last year, it was estimated today by a prominent coal dealer. The normal consumption of anthracite here, it was said, ranges between 550,000 and 600,000 tons. Bituminous coal is not affected by the order which was made, it was announced, to insure every community its fair share of anthracite. A permanent anthracite program, the announcement said, is now being worked out. Under the temporary program, each community will be limited to the amount of hard coal, in four izes, as was delivered during the pase period April-August, 1942, or ive-twelfths of the coal shipped rom April, 1942, to March, 1943, whichever amount is larger.

Committees Set Up. The temporary program, effective oday, includes the setting up of a national and six regional anthracite distribution committees, which have not yet been named. "There is a grave responsibility upon the retail dealers to see that the coal is fairly distributed among the ultimate consumers," Mr. Ickes said. "I strongly urge that dealers, insofar as practicable, deliver to each domestic user, no more than two-thirds of his annual supply prior to October 1, so that each consumer will have an opportunity to get his fair share of the available

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 22.-Joseph E. Davies, former Ambassador to Russia, said last night the Soviet Union "saved our civilization" and to carp at her is to play Hitler's game.

"If there is to be peace in the world," Mr. Davies said in a speech at the 35th Annual Governors' Conference, "it must be based on agreement between Great Britain, Russia, China, the United States and the other United Nations.

"That agreement is no better than the confidence which each has in

"There are a few in our country who still bicker at Russia; who still carp at Russia, who still quarrel at the way in which they live and conduct their own government, which is exclusively their own business. To do this is to play Hitler's game.

Without Russia we cannot plan a secure peace. Russia like the British Empire, China and ourselves, is too big to be left out of a peace community. We should not forget the debt we owe the Soviet Union.

"It is, I believe, not an overstatement to assert that but for the resistance of the Red Army and the Sowiet Union, the Germans might Soviet Union, the Germans might have overrun Africa, might have made Tunisia impossible and might have made junction with the Japs in India and on the Persian Gulf. Cattle Producers Ask Right to Slaughter Surplus Stock

Criticize OPA Policies As Curbing Production In Time of Need

NEW YORK, June 22.-The Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association declared yesterday that restrictive regulations by the Office Conservation of Oil of Price Administration were building up a surplus of cattle which the organization estimated would reach 15,400,000 head by January 1.

In a statement issued through its counsel, former Judge Joe G. Montague of Fort Worth, Tex., the association asserted that if one half of this surplus were slaughtered, enough meat would be produced to provide a normal supply of beef for a year to the civilian population, the armed forces and "74,000,000 people in addition.

The association declared that announcement of the intention to impose price ceilings in August, 1942, "had so disturbed the confidence of the livestock producers that by the time the quota and ceilings had been imposed the effect of this lack of confidence in livestock producers was strongly in evidence in the lack of cattle ready for immediate slaughter in January and February,

Senate Compromise Seen in Wrangle Over Subsidies

Administration Aides Work to Prevent Issue From Reaching Floor

By the Associated Press.

Possibility of a compromise settlement of the congressional wrangle over subsidies shaped up in the Senate today as administration forces renewed cloakroom efforts to stave off a floor fight. Speculation was that any agreement proposed would limit the amount and number of subsidies the Government could pay out to force down food prices.

Such a proposal was offered by Senator Taft, Republican, of Ohio. but supporters of a projected $2,-000,000,000 price rollback program objected that Senator Taft's measure would authorize the Reconstruction Finance Corp. to spend only $250,000,000 on subsidies in the

While some Senators continued to elamor for prompt action on anti-subsidy legislation, administration lieutenants sought to keep the battle off the floor until some compromise could be effected.

Thus for the time, the chief open battleground remains the Senate Banking Committee room where members are seeking agreement on an amendment to a bill they reported three weeks ago which would prohibit all subsidies for food price reductions without congressional ap-

The amendment was inserted in a measure extending the life of the Commodity Credit Corp. for two more years and increasing its borrowing power by $1,000,000,000. Postponing until tomorrow a committee session originally scheduled for today, Acting Chairman Bankhead acknowledged that "I don't know whether we can agree or not.' If no decision is reached, he added, efforts to revise the anti-subsidy measure will be carried to the Senate

While Senator Taft and others maintained that Congress should permit sufficient subsidy payments to care for commitments already made in rolling back retail prices of meats, butter and coffee, Chairman George of the Senate Finance Committee said

"The principal of subsidies is either all right or all wrong. I think Senator George predicted that a general rollback of retail food prices would "run into billions of dollars" and could be used to make or break business through the granting or denying of subsidies.

300 U. S. Soldiers Die Of Disease in Jap Camps

More than 300 American soldiers have died from disease while confined in Japanese prison camps since the fall of Bataan and Corregidor, according to the War Department. 'High Command' to Unify Home Front

Kilgore Committee Says Civilian War Effort Is Sagging 'Dangerously'

Pointing to the factors causing "further deterioration of the domestic war effort," the Senate War Mobilization Committee today called for establishment of "a high command on the home front" to unify the Nation. During the last month, the comnittee declared, the home front has domestic economy. The three broad areas in which

'lack of policy and direction are critical," the committee said are production, manpower and economic stabilization. It recommended, in general, increasing war production efficiently and intensively and stabilizing the domestic economy. Poor Planning Assailed.

The committee, headed by Senator Kilgore, Domocrat of West Virginia, had this to say on its three major points of criticism: Production-"Side by side with shortages in some plants, idle inventories of raw materials are found in others . . . Civilian supplies hover between feast and famine." Manpower-"In no phase of the war effort has there been less planning and integration than in the field of manpower. Our approach to this urgent question has been a monotonous series of piecemeal and groping measures unrelated to strategic and production decisions." Economic stabilization-"Policy makers have substituted slogans for action, have appeased when they should have cracked heads, have adjudicated disputes when they should have planned to prevent them. We have proceeded in this field by groping, tentative steps, by hemming and

Radar's 'Eyes' Made Victory Possible in Fog-Bound Aleutians

Bolling Field Planes Gave Accidential Clue to Radio Detection of Aircraft

First units of Radar, miraculous new "eyes" of the Army and Navy, went into the Pacific Fleet almost exactly a year before Pearl Harbor. It is an American development based on radio discoveries by Dr. Albert Hoyt Taylor of the Naval Re-search Laboratory, largely per-fected by Robert M. Page, another NRL scientist, and vigorously promoted by Rear Admiral Harold G. Bowen.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER.

(Copyright, 1943, by the Associated Press.) One of the recent miracles of Radar almost certainly is the Aleutians campaign. Despite the complete absence of official information on the subject, modern warfare obviously would be virtually impossible along that fog-cursed island chain without the aid of this new weapon to explore the way and report the rocks which menace every movement of ships and planes.

The change in attitude of American officers toward the military potentialities of the Aleutians is one of the remarkable revolutions in military and naval thinking of the war in this country. Only two or three years ago the islands were considered to be almost useless because of their weather, which is probably worse than any other weather on

Now they are recognized as having great strategic value. Credit for the change in opinion must surely go ship would produce a similarly to Radar-the wizardry of which, we may assume, has been profitably employed in clearing the short

In the Atlantic, Radar has been found invaluable in convoy operations. It enables task force comto maintain constant checks on ships in their charge, despite darkness and bad weather. It keeps them fully informed, too, on the presence of surfaced enemy submarines for miles around

The use of Radar in convoy escorting closely approximates the original tactical purposes of the apparatus as outlined by Dr. Albert Hoyt Taylor of the Naval Research Laboratory and an associate, Leo C. Young, in a memorandum to the Navy Department in September,

They made the then revolutionary suggestion that with radio detection equipment, destroyers operating or parallel lines several miles apart could promptly discover the passage of an alien vessel between the lines. "irrespective of fog, darkness or

Conversely few naval men are scientists, regardless of their abilities as tacticians and strategists with recognized weapons. The suggestion by Dr. Taylor and Mr. Young apparently made little impression on the men who could have given a go-ahead, because for eight years their memorandum got no approval, support or results whatever. By-Product of Other Research.

Dr. Taylor and Mr. Young, however, had made not only the basic discovery necessary to the development of radio equipment, but also has envisioned its tactical uses. The discovery came about, as is so often true in scientific work, as a byproduct of another problem they were working on and-a fact which also is true of much research-it had more than one important use.

Dr. Taylor had been interested in tadio for many years. A graduate of Northwestern University and of Goettingen, Germany, where he attained his doctorate, he had taught at the University of Wisconsn, served as professor and head of the physics department at the University of North Dakota. From the latter school he went into the Navy in 1917 as a lieutenant (he later became a commander, and was made district communications superintendent at the Great Lakes station Mr. Young and another associate in radio work, Louis A. Gebhard entered the naval service about the same time and were assigned to Dr. Taylor's command at Great Lakes. Mr. Young had been a radio amateur and an expert railway telegrapher. Gebhard had made radio work his profession. After a period of employment by the old Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co. he had set up his own shop in Buffalo, N. Y.

Degrees From G. W. U. Dr. Taylor pays high tribute to their abilities. Both now are associate superintendents of the radio division which Dr. Taylor heads, having worked with him continuously since their first associations. Mr. Young is described by Dr. Taylor as "a man with a lot of native genius and intensive self-instruction." His praise for Dr. Gebhard is couched in similar terms. Dr. Gebhard, in fact, won three college degrees at George Washington University, two in science and one in

After the war, when the three men had left the Navy's uniformed ranks. they continued their work near Washington at the Naval Air Station, Anacostia-the research laboratory had not yet been started. Their general problem was improvement of interplane and plane-ground radio communications. Dr. Taylor was boss, and Mr. Young had the magnificent title of radio laboratorian. In 1921 their experiments took them into the field of radio broadcasting. Paralleling the pioneer Station KDKA at Pittsburgh, they accumulated quite an incidental reputation as purveyors of entertainment and oratory. progressed through experiments of Dr. Taylor, Mr. Young, Dr. Breit and Dr. Tuve, their results were reported in scientific journals of international circulation. It now is known that those reports prompted the British to undertake the work which led to their development of radio-locators-and presumably German scientists got their ideas about radio detection from the same articles. Whether the Japanese got their devices from the Germans or conducted their own development of a practical instrument for use in warfare is not known here.

On June 24, 1930, radio detection too another great step forward-and again it was incidental to other research. Up to that time the Navy's radio scientists had been interested primarily, so far as detection was concerned, in the tactical possibilities of discovering enemy ships at sea. The precise method of computation of amounts withheld is used, and it is assumed that the wage earner claims all of the personal exemption for withholding.

Sagging Home Front

The latest interim report of the Kilgore committee, surveying the rapid disintegration of the home front, advances at least one constructive suggestion which seems to go to the root of our trouble.

In the main, the report was concerned with a recital of the obvious flaws in the machinery set up by the President to adapt the domestic economy to the changes made necessary by the shift to war production. Mentioned specifically were the plague of recurring strikes, which the committee regards more as a symptom than a cause of home-front disorganization; gasoline and transportation shortages, insufficient production of essential crops, the growing menace of the black market and the never-ending struggle for control among the various administrative agencies, each of which has an official finger somewhere in the pie. This condition has grown out of the administration's marked reluctance to make clear-cut grants of power to executive agencies. The case of Chester Davis, head of the War Food Administration, is merely the latest in a long succession of food pricing and possibly rationing programs. It is said that without these powers he cannot do his job. power to various big and little on the Baltic was raised. "czars."

When the new Office of War Management was set up under the directhat at last the President had made a real delegation of his authority and that administrative machinery to straighten out internal disorders had been perfected. But it is not working out that way. As the Kilgore committee points out, Mr. Byrnes is approaching his problem from the point of view of a referee, although it had been supposed that he was given ample authority to step in and stop the squabbles before they get under way. There is now reason to doubt that Mr. Byrnes, as a practical matter, has power to do this, and if he has, he certainly is not using it. well expressed in the committee's report. "If the OWM follows in the weaknesses of its predecessors and confines itself to the adjudication of personal and agency disputes," the committee said, "it cannot but fail. Limited to adjudication, this office will become an office of war mobilization in name only. It will then provide the appearance of centralized direction, behind which the present disintegration of the domestic front will continue unchecked."

In other words, the committee is suggesting that some one has got to take over the administration's badly muddled domestic program and run it, if conditions are not to go from bad to worse. There will be but few to doubt that this is a timely and constructive proposal.

Civilian War Services

Civilian war services, as set up by the Office of Civilian Defense, are said to have enrolled some 3,500,000 volunteers all over the country who are helpful in carrying out the various programs of the departments and agencies in Washington which require civilian participation. Volunteers for processing the new Ration Book No. 3, for instance, are obtained through the OCD's civilian war services machinery. The so-called "block plan" for getting co-operation of citizens in various campaigns, and which is said to have demonstrated its value in some cities, is another civilian war services project. The more civilians who are given something definite to do in the war effort. the better the national morale. The OCD's civilian war services has given them a number of definite assign-

The House Appropriations Committee was sustained by the House in its recommendation for a sharp reduction in OCD expenditures. As the protection branch of OCD, concerned with civilian defense against air raid, fires and other emergencies, is obviously necessary, the cut in approbe met as well by other methods. There should be two sources of valuable information on this point. One would be the Treasury Department, Agriculture Department, Office of Price Administration and other such agencies concerned with civilian war programs. The other would be the mayors of American cities where OCD's civilian war services plan has been followed in enrollment and use of civilian volunteers.

The Senate Appropriations Committee undoubtedly will seek the views of those who are supposed to be the beneficiaries of civilian war services before dispensing with such services altogether. If three or four million civilians are doing a helpful volunteer job now, the $1,600,000 required to maintain the machinery through which they function does not seem to be an excessive expendi-

Third Year in Russia

This is a memorable anniversary. Just two years ago, at dawn of the longest day in the Northern Hemisphere, Hitler's hitherto invincible Wehrmacht struck with all its massive power at the Red Army, deployed behind a demarkation line drawn by the previous Russo-German agreement across partitioned Poland.

At the moment, military opinion throughout the world generally predicted another triumph for the German war machine. These views were seemingly confirmed by the early victories won by the Wehrmacht, even though the Russians put up traditionally stubborn resistance. Presently, however, the German drive began to slow down except in the Ukraine, where a local break-through was accomplished. The climax of the campaign came in the late autumn, when the Germans, though within sight of Moscow, failed in their supreme effort and were compelled to retreat. The Red Army, aided by an unusually severe and early winter, staged a counteroffensive which drove the Germans back to a prepared line far from their strategic goal.

On June 28, 1942, the German high command launched a second summer campaign, this time apparently aiming not at a general destruction of the Red armies, but at the cutting of examples. Mr. Davis is threatening | the vital Volga River artery and the to resign unless given authority over | Baku oil fields which fuel Russian agriculture as well as its war machine. As last winter waned and Soviet military intelligence learned of heavy massing of Axis combat units tion of James F. Byrnes, it appeared on the eastern front, opinion in both Russia and the world at large took for granted that the German high command would launch a supreme effort this summer either to destroy the Red Army or at least so to weaken it that its offensive power would be crippled in advance of possible Anglo-American attacks on Western Europe. An unusually mild winter was followed by an early spring. In Central and Northern Russia heavy spring rains kept the ground too soggy for mechanized warfare at its maximum effectiveness, but by late May the south was dry enough for the start of an offensive rolling What this means in terms of lowered | northward with the advancing seaefficiency and sagging morale was son. Moscow, London and Washington alike predicted that the zero hour was at hand.

Yet May ended and June is now two-thirds over, with no conclusive proof that the anticipated German drive is about to begin. The bulk of the Axis ground strength, together with at least one-half of the Luftwaffe, is known to be massed along the eastern front. The short Russian summer is here. The last two years have proved that every day counts for the Germans if their summer campaign is not to be bogged down by the autumn rains and the terrible winter not far behind. Yet precious time passes, and they do not strike. Indeed, intimations from Axis sources hint that there will be no major drive against the Red Army

Such is the strategic enigma of the eastern front. Has the German high command renounced an all-out offensive? Will it rely henceforth on defensive strategy, pinning its hopes on the strength of "Fortress Europe" and playing for a stalemate due to mutual exhaustion? Has the Red Army the resources and ability to stage a major offensive of its own, or will it likewise wait until an Allied invasion of Western Europe can take place? These are some of the tantalizing queries which intrigue an anxious world as the Russo-German war goes into its third year.

'Yellow Dog' Contracts

John L. Lewis was betrayed by his well-known penchant for high-flown oratory when he condemned as an "infamous yellow dog contract," the working agreement proposed by the War Labor Board to keep the Nation's coal mines operating. Actually, as Mr. Lewis no doubt well realizes. there is not the slightest similarity between the "yellow dog" contracts and the arrangement advocated by the board.

The WLB proposal was that the United Mine Workers' contract which expired in April be reinstated for a priations undoubtedly will be made at | two-year period with the recently the expense of civilian war services. approved liberalizing features in-If civilian war services are filling a cluding increased vacation pay and real need, this is no time to dispense equipment allowances, and a no- In such case a phone call to please in an appearance with the cheery word mentation, here in America. they do fulfill a need that could not | recalled the miners praised this con- | ful results.

tract highly when it was signed in 1941. The "yellow dog" contract is an outmoded device to which some employers resorted to prevent the unionization of their forces. The term of opprobrium was applied to those contracts in which workers agreed not to join unions during the course of their employment. The United Mine Workers ran head on into this setup in the long fight to unionize the West Virginia coal fields some twenty-five years ago, but labor generally had trouble with the provision as the result of a line of court decisions, including those of the Supreme Court of the United States.

In perhaps the most famous decision bearing on this issue—the Hitchman case, decided in December, 1917—the court, with Justice Pitney reading the opinion, restrained the United Mine Workers from seeking to organize miners who were working under a "yellow dog" agreement, holding they could not "lawfully" be induced to join the union while they remained on the job.

"This court repeatedly has held that the employer is as free to make non-membership in a union a condition of employment, as the working man is free to join the union, and that this is a part of the constitutional right of personal liberty and private property, not to be taken away even by legislation, unless through some proper exercise of the paramount police power." said the court, with Justices Brandeis, Holmes and Clarke dissenting.

The Hitchman decision was responsible for a spread of the "yellow dog' contract movement, and this in turn encouraged the formation in many industries of the so-called company unions, which finally were outlawed by the Wagner Act.

Sardinia

The late D. H. Lawrence wrote of Sardinia that it "has no history, no date, no race, no offering." But he was not pretending to be accurate in such an adventurous affirmation. Nor did he mean to be strictly truthful when he declared: "Neither Romans nor Phoenicians, Greeks nor Arabs ever subdued Sardinia." Americans who have visited the second largest island of the Mediterranean are conscious of a vast antiquity there-a sense of time as a living influence coming down the ages out of the distant East. Sardinia has something in common with the Basque territories of the Iberian Peninsula.

Mr. Lawrence insists: "There is an uncaptured Sardinia still. It lies within the net of this European civilization, but it isn't landed yet." Perhaps he has in mind the mounof the island, dressed as it notably is with tree-heath, broom, rock-roses and lentisks. Only along the coasts do the oranges, lemons, olives grow. Deer and boar and a black-fronted fox range the high hills, volcanic in the west. Nobody can be quite sure about when human beings first settled in the neighborhood of the natural harbors of Terranova and Cagliari. But there is reason to believe that the present inhabitantsnearly a million of them-are descended from "the so-called Mediterranean stock." Possibly there were two colonies at the start. In any case, there are two principal Sardinian dialects dating back for countless generations. Dwellers in the south communicate with northerners in Italian, but their own native media are much, much older.

Costume art is a guide of a sort to the cultural origins of the Sardinians. They know the magic of the stark and vibrant colors-red, white and black. Designs differ from village to village, yet in the aggregate a single creative impulse is manifest. The people of Sardinia resemble in that respect the lost communities of Crete and the mountain tribes of Macedonia, the Scots and the Welsh. Muirhead's Guide testifles for them that they are "honest and proud and cherish a strong clanspirit; their hospitality is cordial and generous; and they are devoted adherents of the Catholic Church." The island gets its name from Sandaliota-because of a fancied likeness in shape to a sandal. Prehistoric remains show the influence of Aegean work. There are many ruins in which flint implements and bronze jewelry are found. More interesting, however, are the three or four thousand "nuraghi"-conical towers of unmortared stone, "placed for the most part in strategical positions guarding fords, passes, etc., so that their function as defensive structures scarcely can be doubted.'

Carthage was in possession of Sardinia in the sixth century before Christ. Then came the Romans, later the Vandals, the Genoese, the Pisans, the Saracens as raiders, eventually the Spanish and the Austrians. Cicero, critical of the island's residents, complained about their "Sardonic smile." It is an open secret, as Mr. Lawrence observes, that they love freedom, have no particular respect for the House of Savoy and would welcome a chance to be independent. The war now moving in their direction conceivably might be their liberation.

The letters "BB" usually stand for a very fine size of shot, contact with which frequently results in sudden activity on the part of the recipient. Incidentally, they also stand for Bernard Baruch.

Proposal is made to house congressional pages in a specially provided new dormitory of their own.

Major Eliot Reviews War Against Soviets Begun Two Years Ago Today

By Maj. George Fielding Eliot.

This day is a date forever memorable in the history of the world. It was precisely two years ago, June 22, 1941, that the German armies launched their attack against Russia.

It was not so easy to see then, as it is now in retrospect, that this was the last desperate gamble of a conqueror already almost defeated. Hitler's Germany in June, 1941, had behind it an almost unbroken record of victory and men had not yet perceived the full significance of the one major defeat which Hitler had suffered in the Battle of Britain.

During the two years that have followed that treacherous and violent attack, the Russian people, who, by that act of the common enemy became our allies, have borne the major burden of the war against Germany. Their defense of their native soil has been of epic proportions in its heroism and its grandeur.

We have learned what even the general staffs of the world did not then know, that the Russian Army and the Russian Air Force are efficient and capably commanded fighting machines. We owe to them, in particular, the destruction of the evil legend of German invincibility, the paralyzing effects of which have not yet been wholly dissipated, even though the legend itself no longer exists. We learned that blitzkrieg is not irresistible, that the tank is not the master of the battlefield in the presence of well-handled and well-protected artillery, that the famous armored spearheads, which the Poles and the French had not known how to stop, can be blunted and even destroyed by armored counterattack against their

We learned those things, and hope was rekindled in many a breast where it had well-nigh been extinguished.

As the year 1941 drew to its close, we saw the German armies hurled back from the gates of Moscow; we saw Restov retaken, the first time that any major objective once in German hands had been recaptured by its rightful pos-

When the campaign of 1942 began it was already clear that the edge of the German sword had been blunted. The terrible Russian winter through which the German armies had just passed had taken a toll which could never be replaced. Once more the Germans advanced. They pressed deeply into the Caucasus; they penetrated the bend of the Don; they retook Rostov; they battered at the gates of Stalingrad. But they were never able to conquer the strategetic key positions without which all else was vain-the crossings of the Upper Don in the vicinity of Voronech. tainous, wild, uncultivated surface At the end of their enormously lengthy they were never able to produce a sufficient scale of offensive effort to overcome the heroic rsistance of the defenders of Stalingrad.

In this campaign the Russians showed themselves masters of a patient strategy which was able to bide its time to hold back its reserves, to wait for the moment of maximum enemy exhaustionand then to strike with irresistible force. When the Russian blows fell, they fell in stunning succession, and all the gains for which so much German blood had been spent that year vanished like mist before the morning sun. Pouring across the Don, the Russian armies isolated and destroyed the German siege army before Stalingrad; they forced a hasty and costly German withdrawal in the Caucasus; they retook Rostov, Kharkov and Kursk, and they came within a hair's breadth of encircling and destroying something like one-fourth of the total effectives of the Wehrmacht in the pocket between the Donetz River and the Sea of Azov. It was only by a last-minute counterattack, employing the major part of their strategic reserves, that the Germans escaped this last threatened disaster. And now? Now two-thirds of the German Army and half the German Air Force are held fast along the Russian front. Only by putting in a great part of their remaining forces can the Germans hope to accomplish anything at all in Russia; and if they do that, they are left practically defenseless against the growing weight of Anglo-American power which the Russian resistance has given the British and ourselves time to equip, train and concentrate for battle The German high command hesitates before the painful, indeed the desperate decisions which confront it-and well it may. Whatever those decisions may be, in them there is no hope of victory for Germany. The choice is only as to which course may stave off defeat a few days longer. The German people have no occasion to remember with gratitude or with pride the fateful day of June 22, 1941, when a leader who deemed himself the reincarnation of Napoleon set out to lead them in Napoleon's footsteps on the long and bloody road to Moscow. Differentials

"Almost blocking the narrow pass," writes C. L. Sulzberger about a trip along a Persian supply route, "is one busted truck with its entire differential laid out on the road beside which squats a group of silent Iranians staring dully." The little silent group of Iranians would go a long way before they'd find a more perplexing sight to stare at. What a mystery a beveled gear, not to mention several of them, must be to the unmechanical Persian! How inscrutable must be the function of a roller bearing! A lion's skull or even a man's for that matter, kicked up out of the sand, makes some sense; but not the scattered parts of a differential. It's an astonishing crystallization of man's ingenuity, when you stop to think of it. We suppose ten thousand clever fellows, first and last, have poured their ideas into this compact device for allowing one wheel to turn faster than another. We don't say that little groups of Americans haven't stared dully at the same assortment of greasy parts. But not for long. Some one who with them. The question is whether strike provision. And it might be page so-and-so should bring wonder- that it would cost 40 bucks to get the True, the leaders make up the prothing repaired.

THIS AND THAT

By Charles E. Tracewell.

"Q STREET.

'Dear Sir: "I now have the pigeon problem in a severe form. I had read from time to time in your column of people protesting about these big birds at their feeding stations, and I must say that I was inclined to think it much ado about nothing. But now that a flock of pigeons have fastened themselves on me. I find it is a horse of another color, and a color distinctly do not like.

"If there is anything you can suggest, for heaven's sake hurry up with it, as these 30 pigeons are nearly bankrupting me, besides driving away all my songbirds. They do not attack them, but are so many that they keep them out of the food by sheer numbers.

"I do not want to harm them, since I realize that they are just trying to get something to eat, a thing which all living creatures are trying to get, and, in the case of man, through his own foolishness and muddle-headedness, not succeeding at, in all too many cases.

"I have no spleen against pigeons. They are good enough, in their way, but they do not have any place at a bird feeding station, of that I am convinced. "If there is any simple way of discouraging them, please let me know, and earn the gratitude of "Sincerely yours, V. H. D."

One of the best ways to discourage unwanted pigeons is to throw cold water on them. This may be done either by the use of he hose or a pan or cup. The hose should be turned on, and then turned off at the nozzle. This is not supposed to be good for hose, but in this case it may be permissible. The nozzle should be far enough away so that the pigeons are not frightened away when the owner steps out into the vard. Then the nozzle should be twisted as quickly as possible, so that the full stream of the water is thrown in their The point seems to be to get the water in their direction, rather than to wet them. The wetting, if it can be achieved, will do them no harm. Pigeons do not relish water. We have never seen them bathe in a small bird bath. Occasionally one will see them splashing around in some of the larger fountains down town, but under ordinary circumstances in the home vard they never bathe.

This use of the hose requires much patience, and merely drives the birds away to a house top, unless persisted in all day long, and perhaps for several days. The pigeons are persistent. They will return again and again, in that pursuit of food about which our correspondent speaks so feelingly.

A cup or a tumbler filled with water. and dashed in the general direction of the unwanted birds, will do almost as well as a hose, but here again one has to be more persistent than the pigeons. | weather.

Water used in this way does not scare the songsters much. They will return almost immediately to the food. Songbirds like water, both to drink and to bathe in. They especially like it in hot summer weather. We may forget that, though the month may be humid, to human senses, often the birds find it difficult to get water.

For their purposes, water must be shallow. There is nothing your average bird likes better than a puddle. It is interesting, after a heavy afternoon thunderstorm, to watch the birds. They cannot do much with it while it is falling but immediately afterward they come down to see what they can find. Robins, of course, find much food, brought up in the form of worms.

Other species find insects washed up out of their secret lairs.

Mostly, however, the bird joy over a rainfall comes in the puddles, in depressions in grass or sidewalk or street. This is especially noticeable in the suburbs. where mechanical smoothness of paving is not noteworthy. This not only has an "artistic look," as some people say, but also is the birds' delight.

Everywhere, after a rain, the birds come down to take a drink and to bathe in the puddles. You might think, offhand, that they would be wet enough, already, having been out in it all the time, but not so, they want some real bathing, with special attention given to the feathers. This is nature's way of freeing them from lice. Ordinarily, the friend of birds does not think of them as covered with lice, and certainly they do not have as many of them in nature as in cages, but still these pests are always a threat to feathered things.

* * * *

If just a few pigeons would come to a bird feeding station, they would make an interesting addition to the species usually present, but mostly they come in flocks, and so become a nuisance. They are so large, and such hearty feeders, that they make it difficult for the smaller birds to get a toe-hold.

At our own feeder, there is one pigeon with a real personality. If she alone were present, without a dozen friends, she would be welcomed. She is much tamer than the others, and probably would allow one to come up close to her. She greatly resembles a dove

She is slimmer than most pigeons, and is not so greedy. A large dark blue one specializes in driving her away, but no sooner does he turn back to the grain and seed than she comes right back, too. Like all pigeons, she is hard to discourage.

Pigeons take their food where they can find it. They are marvelous foragers, bent on getting a living at any cost, and usually succeeding Have we tried the water treatment on them yet?

Well, er, not yet! It takes, as we have said, a great deal of patience, and that is a quality difficult to hold in hot

Letters to the Editor

Duration, Not Number, Of Strikes Has Decreased. To the Editor of The Star:

It will be noticed from the figures in my June 21 article relating to the President's disposition of the anti-strike bill that the number of man-days lost has actually decreased as compared with the 1927 to 1941 average. But this, as the statistics illustrate, reflects no decrease in the number of strikes, but merely in the duration thereof.

In time of war, however, when every second is vital and the pressure is on, strikers need not extend their walkouts through as many days in order to effect their designs. What took perhaps 10 days of striking in order to beat an employer into submission before the war may now be accomplished in a few hours' walkout.

Furthermore, there is nothing to the argument that the number of workers having increased, the increase in the strike rate is justified. It is true that new workers have been employed, but it is also true that many "old" workers have left for the armed services, and that, in any event, the net increase is not sufficient to explain away or to offset the increased strike rate. Educational Process Believed Responsible for German Psychology. To the Editor of The Star:

Dorothy Thompson's column is always worth reading, but the lady is not infallible in her judgment. Occasionally she generalizes too much from specific instances.

The most recent illustration is to be found in her Friday column on Germany and the Nazis. It is my sincere hope that few people will get the notion that anything is to be gained by making a distinction between the German leaders and the German youth, who make up most of the Nazi Army.

Berlin was my birthplace. My father was an officer in a Prussian regiment in 1871. Our family had many relatives on the other side in the First World War. Before we left for America, I had four years of training in the schools, plus the kindergarten. There is no personal or race grudge, because the family on both sides, would be classed as "pure Aryan," unless a sprinkling of French on one side and Austrian on the other would disqualify under Hitler.

May I say, and say seriously, that the teaching of the youth of Germany, since 1918, has been nothing more or less than a streamlined version of the educational program under the Kaiser? My boyish eyes were taught to view Poles and Russians as swine. The British, as I recall. had stolen all of the money., And Frenchmen, well, when I discovered that we would see many of them over in America, I visualized them as having The native-born American probably is Congressional and Administrative Co-operation Urged.

To the Editor of The Star:

Unless constructive action be taken with reference to wages, food prices and food distribution, popular morale will decrease, inflation surely will come, and strikes and social tensions of all kinds

The country is in an ugly mood, and while this is not all due to the food crisis, mishandling of food is one of the basic and most immediate factors.

Congress, the OPA and WFA all seem to have been wrong in part, and right in part. Congress will not object, for example, to all subsidies (and some are necessary) if food administration is unified, if the advice of practical men is taken on certain phases of the subject. and if it has a regular way of checking on what is going on.

As to the latter point, the writer believes that there should be 10 major departments to integrate most of our bureaus and agencies; and that a joint congressional committee should work with each of these departments. Congress generally might spend half of each week in legislation and half with the administrators and affected interests in the administrative departments. It then always would know what is going on and be able to advise and legislate intelli-

And legislation should be directed by a legislative cabinet of men corresponding in function to the administrators of the 10 suggested departments, and be subject to general executive leadership. QUINTIN M. SANGER.

Helping Allies As Basis of Peace.

To the Editor of The Star:

We have reached a point in this war where full co-operation of the United Nations is absolutely necessary to maintain world peace after the war and for at least the first 50 years following it. Lord Halifax is right. We must help Great Britain and Russia to maintain European peace. By so doing, we protect FREDERICK G. FROST.

Commendation for Critic

Of Paper Work for Teachers, To the Editor of The Star:

Showers of blessings upon Senator Holman. The quantity of clerical work required of teachers seems to mount upward-like the tide of taxation. If he can effect substantial relief, richly will he have deserved the thanks of the present, and of every succeeding generation of school mas and pas.

The indirect benefit to pupils would be incalculable. Power to Senator Holman!

New Strategy Speeds War On Japan

U. S. and Britain Apparently Join in Dual Victory Plan

By DAVID LAWRENCE. Little by little the facts about some of the decisions made at the Roosevelt-Churchill conferences here last month are coming out. At least the news indieates changes which must have been decided on by the President and the Prime Minister and which quite properly can come out now, since enough time has elapsed to permit the necessary rearrangements. They concern

David Lawrence. vitally our war against Japan. The facts that have come out are these:

1. Field Marshall Wavell has been made Viceroy of India and Gen. Auchinleck has been made military commander in the Indian area, but a separate East Asia command is being created and London dispatches significantly remark that an American is being considered for the post.

2. David Lloyd George in a public speech says that the Casablanca decisions now have been superseded by the Roosevelt-Churchill decisions at Washington and that Japan is no longer to be considered a number two enemy, but a number one enemy alongside of Germany. This is the first intimation of a program that looks toward the simultaneous defeat of both Japan and Germany instead of the "beat-Hitler-first" idea with its suggestion of a "partial demobilization" thereafter of British forces.

Hope for China. Apparently Great Britain and America, with an unexampled comradeship and with a unity of purpose that no amount of mutual criticism can shake, have through their chosen leaders decided on a strategy that satisfies them both. It is no secret that our high Army and Navy officers have felt Japan is a first-class military and naval power and must be dealt with effectively as circumstances demand and not as if the choice were solely in our hands.

It is no secret, too, that our military men have been distressed because the building of air bases and the carrying out of the ground operations necessary to recapture Burma and thus open up a supply line to China did not materialize before the monsoon season set in this month. Apparently the measures urged by America have been adopted in collaboration with our British allies and in due time China, with her immense manpower and air fields. will be properly mobilized and equipped to deliver death blows against Japan.

Evidently since America has been a critic, America is to be given a large responsibility in reopening the Burma road, but Americans are eager to try their hand. Once the road to China is opened and air bombing hits directly at Japan's mainland on a day-by-day basis, the American Navy will be in a position to strike hard from the mid-Pacific even as our forces of the South Pacific gain air bases coming north and the United States air bombers move southward from the Aleutians toward Japan-the whole thing making a four-sided pincers movement that spells the doom of not all be achieved right away, but it begins to appear that Britain's statesmen now see eye to eye with us on the importance of defeating Japan at the earliest possible moment without relaxing one bit our pressure against Hitler. The belief is that with a $70,000,000,000 Army appropriation bill and sums almost half that size for the Navy and with billions for shilbuilding, we should be able to lick Hitler and Hirohito at the same time.

Again it may be said that American impatience to get the war over within less than two years more-and with certain "breaks' in our favor perhaps even much sooner—is being translated into global policy. Japan and Germany both may be on the defensive before the summer is over despite the recurring rumors of attempts on their part to try some offensive operations so as to thwart our progress and gain time. California's Gov. Warren Being Measured for Place on Republican Presidential Ticket any time.

By GOULD LINCOLN. COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 22 .-In the Governors' parade here in Columbus, Earl Warren of Cali-

Gould Lincoln. big, fine looking man, 52 years old but vigorous, with a thick crop of gray hair. In the second place, any man who could put the kind of a crimp in the New Deal in California he did in 1942 is bound to receive consideration. He defeated the New Deal Gov. Olson by 340,000 votes. When you stop to consider that the Democratic registration in California last year was 2,000,000 to 1,000,000 for the Republicans, that was quite a feat.

But when you question Gov. Warren about his political aspirations his answer is strikingly like that made by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

Plans to Serve 4 Years. "I am not," he says, "a candidate for any other office than I already have." In other words, he plans to serve out his present four-year term as Governor. It ends in January, 1947. After that he may run again for Governor. He is less reticent about that. "Few die and none resign," was his comment, indicating that he might like to succeed himself in the Governor's chair.

In some quarters it has been suggested that a Republican ticket next year, with Mr. Dewey as candidate for President and Mr. Warren for Vice President, would go well. Asked if he had anything to say about such a plan, Gov. Warren denied emphatically that there was any reason for the rumor. He said he had never discussed the matter with Gov. Dewey, and the latter also denied there was any substance to the report.

Gov. Warren and Gov. Dewey are good friends, however. When the New York Governor was head of the USO, Gov. Warren was head of the California USO. And the New York Governor spoke of him in glowing terms, as a man and a leader of the Republican

But the Warren delegation beat them in the primary and went to the convention-later to vote for the Kansan for the nomination. Opposes Leniency to Japs. In his address to the Governors' Conference at its opening session, Gov. Warren spoke on civilian defense. He is no tuneful orator, but he speaks in a pleasant, firm voice that holds the attention. He aroused much interest when he assailed the policy of letting thousands of Japanese out of the relocation camps - Japs who had been moved away from the Pacific Coast on the demand of the Army authorities, as possible saboteurs.

He contended this was all wrong; that many of these Japanese were really reservists in the Japanese military forces and that all of them were potential enemies, whether or not they had been born in this country. "Social Agencies" Blamed. It had been done, he said, by "social agencies." And when Gov. Griswold of Nebraska suggested that the action had been taken at the instance of the FBI, or with the approval of that agency, Gov. Warren replied that the only part the FBI had played in the matter was passing on the finger prints of the Japs to determine whether any of them had criminal records.

The California Governor was not willing to discuss just what course this country should take in its foreign relations after the war had been won.

"I am not an isolationist," he said, "but I am not yet ready to say what should be done. No one knows what world conditions will be at the close of the war."

He did say, however, that he thought the Fulbright resolution, reported by the House Foreign Affairs Committee, was a move in the right direction. This resolution expresses the belief of Congress that the United States should take part in setting up some machinery to maintain

Must Help Police World.

The United Nations, he said, would have to police the world for some time, and the United States would have to play its full part. He added that without the United States such a job could not be done.

Returning to the case of the interned Japanese, Gov. Warren pointed out that California has a rugged, 1,000-mile coastline, which is patrolled by the Navy and the Army to protect it from the landing of any saboteurs from Japanese submarines. In his opinion it is the height of folly to free Japanese in this country, who might blow up an airplane factory in Columbus just as well as on the Pacific Coast, if they had the opportunity. Any number of Japanese born in this country have been sent back to Japan to become indoctrinated with Japanese ideas and then have returned to America. In a final effort to get him to say something about his political plans, it was suggested to Gov. Warren that he might be "drafted" for the presidential nomination. He merely smiled and replied: "I am not expecting a

Gen. de Gaulle 1s Given Notice by Eisenhower That He Cannot Take Over North African Army

By CONSTANTINE BROWN. The well-planned schemes of Gen. de Gaulle to take over the armed forces in North Africa have failed. Washington decided last week to intervene and put an end to a situation which threatened to disrupt the morale of the French armies because Gen. de Gaulle wanted to make them into a political tool of his own. Constantine Brown. Gen. Eisenhower, acting on instructions from Washington, which also were approved by Prime Minister Churchill, gave Gen, de Gaulle a formal notice that he could not obtain control over the army, even if he had Gen. Giraud "in Both Gen. de Gaulle and Gen. Giraud were courteously but firmly reminded by Gen. Eisenhower that, after all, America has an important temporary stake in North Africa where the bulk of the forces are American. Moreover, he was told that the French Army which we are by way of organizing with American war material cannot be transformed into a tool to serve personal aims of politically minded officers.

Creating Frankenstein. The United States, which occupied North Africa with the aid of the French forces themselves, has made a friendly gesture toward the French by suggesting that they organize a skeleton government of their own in that military area. This government. which we assisted in forming by attempting to get the De Gaulle and Giraud factions together, should have been an asset and not a hindrance to the war effort.

But after the arrival of Gen. de Gaulle in Algiers it became evident that instead of having a government to help things, we were creating a Frankenstein. Gen. Giraud, unaccustomed to political machinations, was sick over the whole situation. But since he had agreed to the formation of a cabinet with vast powers, he did not oppose its decisions. His position in the cabinet became weak because the men who were supposed to be his supporters had also become "politically minded" when they saw that Gen. de Gaulle's political skill was allowing him to "run away with the ball."

At the meeting held at Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters in Algiers, the leader of the Fighting French was reminded that the

PHILIP MORRIS proved less irritating to the smoker's nose and throat

No other cigarette can make the above statement.

It is based on repeated clinical tests with men and women smokers.

Here's what happened:

When smokers changed to Philip Morris, every case of irritation of nose or throat-due to smoking-either cleared up completely, or definitely improved.

These tests were conducted by distinguished doctors-who reported their findings in authoritative medical journals, to inform other doctors.

Change to PHILIP Morris, the cigarette proved less irritating to the nose and throat.

THE WORLD-FAMOUS FIRESTONE DeLuxe Champion TIRE IS NOW BEING MADE WITH

Firestone Butaprene

THE MARVELOUS New SYNTHETIC RUBBER

TUST as you'd expect, Firestone is FIRST to build the tire of J tomorrow for the car owners of America. It is only natural that Firestone should be the leader in working out new processes, in creating new compounds and in building better tires from Americanmade rubber, for Firestone has always been the pioneer in developing new materials, new methods and new machines that have resulted in tremendous advancements in tire design, construction and performance.

From Firestone have come such revolutionary improvements as the FIRST straight side tire, the FIRST rubber non-skid tread, the FIRST commercial demountable rim, the FIRST patented Gum-Dipping Process, the FIRST balloon tire, the FIRST Safti-Lock Cord Body, the FIRST Super-Speed Construction and the FIRST practical pneumatic tractor tire.

In 1933, Firestone built the FIRST synthetic rubber airplane tires for our armed forces. In 1934, Firestone built its FIRST synthetic rubber passenger car tires. In 1940, Firestone FIRST went into production on synthetic rubber passenger car tires and began the manufacture of its own synthetic rubber, called Butaprene, the same type that was later adopted by the Government. In 1942, Firestone became the FIRST company to produce synthetic rubber in a Government-owned plant and later became the FIRST to make synthetic rubber using butadiene made from grain alcohol. And today Firestone is making synthetic rubber tires for passenger cars, trucks, buses, airplanes, tractors, farm implements and all types of war vehicles.

All of these years of experience; all of the knowledge that made these FIRSTS possible have been called upon in producing the new Firestone DeLuxe Champion Tire made with Firestone Butaprene. It is now ready for the car owners of America as released by the Government. But do not think that the crisis is past. America's greatest rubber supply is still on the wheels of its 27,000,000 cars. So you must continue all of the rubber conservation measures that have been so effective. However, if you are eligible and require new tires, remember this - in mileage, in strength and in safety the new Firestone DeLuxe Champion Tire upholds the Firestone tradition of "Best in Rubber — Synthetic or Natural."

Ken Chase Is a Little Older, but He's No Wiser

NEW YORK, June 22.-Manager Mel Ott of the Giants, who has inherited perennially wild Ken Chase, now knows why the partially bald left-handed pitcher was permitted to escape from the American League. Chase gave him the complete answer in a twilight game yesterday at Chase packed into that one game all the reasons why the Nats tossed in the towel on him after the 1941 season and why the Red Sox gave up on him last week and shipped him to the Giants. He had a 2-hit shutout entering the sixth inning, but as darkness descended on the contest the Dodgers descended on Chase. They nicked him for the tying run in the sixth inning and sprayed six runs across the plate in Chase represents one of Griffith's more distinct disappointments. In the autumn of 1937, Griffith imported Chase to the Nats and saw him win four games impressively. Winner of three of four starts that fall, too, was Joe Krakauskas, also a wild, unpredictable southpaw.

Griffith rushed to the dictionary a worse pitcher than when he to discover adjectives descriptive started. $3,000 Yearly Pay for Two Members Draws Commissioners' Fire

It appears the District boxing commissioners may not receive that $3,000 annual salary provided for them in a bill prepared by a subcommittee of the House District Committee. The bill, carrying such a provision, was considered by the District Committee yesterday, but because of objections to the salary part, action on it was put off until later this week.

The Boxing Commission reportedly has a surplus of around $26,000 from the 10 per cent tax on admissions and from which $3,000 annually could be paid to the two commission members eligible. The third member of the commission also is a member of the Police Dea finalist in the current District partment and not eligible for addi-

But here it was! A General Tire from American-Made rubber.

Yes, sir, here was the actual proof of all the months . . . the long days and nights ... that General Tire's chemists and engineers have devoted to the licking of America's rubber problem.

The tread is General's famous Silent-

Scores of people have been in already to see our display of General Tires built with American-Made rubber and more are coming every day.

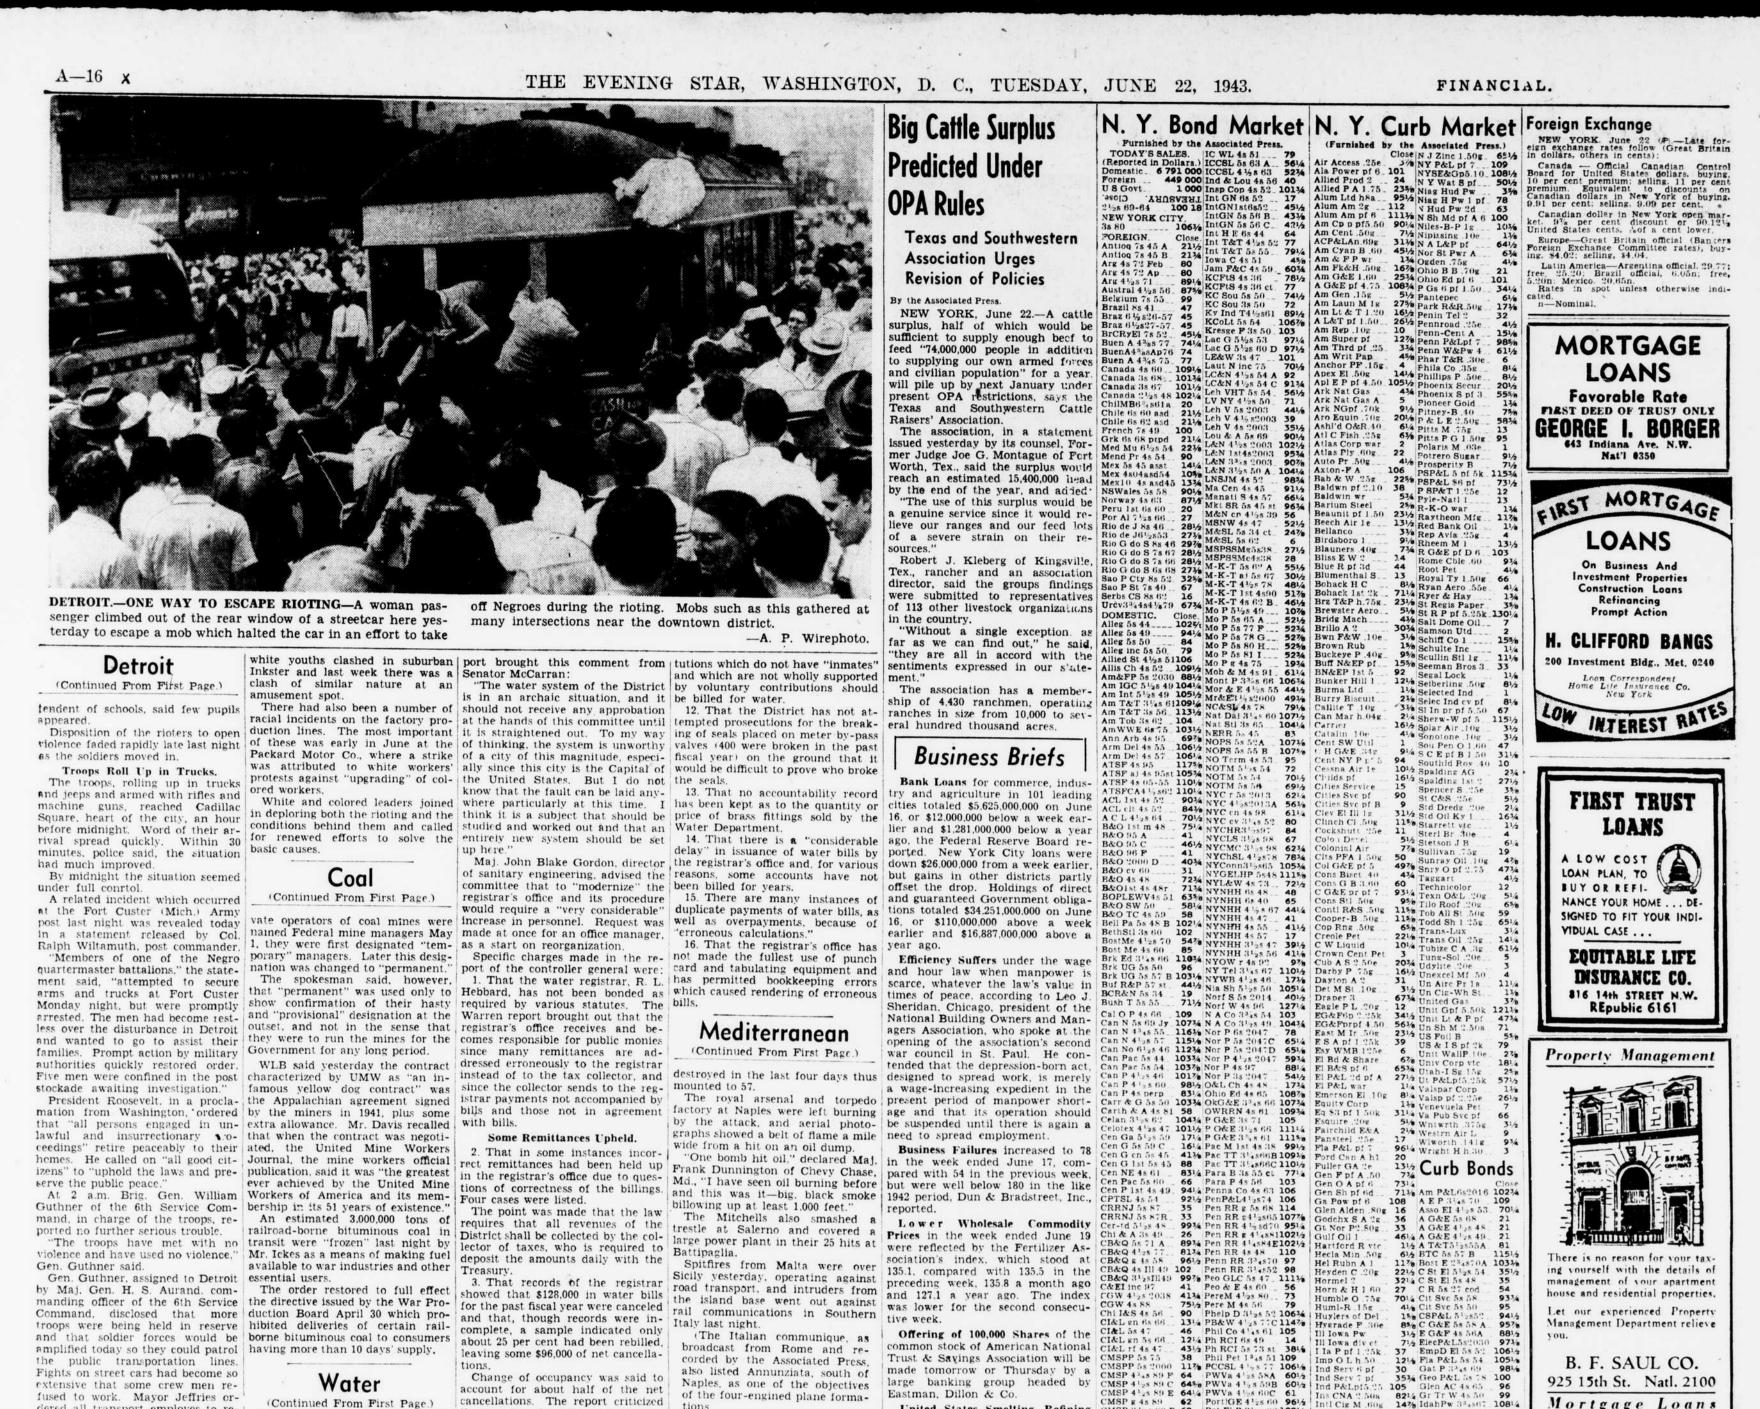

We're sure that you, too, will want to see first hand what American engineering ingenuity has accomplished. That is why we're inviting you to come in now ... or anytime soon ... and let us show you the General Tires that everybody will be able to buy someday.

New Treasury Rule Calls for Data on Form TFR-500

By EDWARD C. STONE.

Washington banks are doing all in their power to inform patrons and all other citizens of the new Treasury regulation which requires full reports on Form TFR-500 of all property held in foreign countries, including obligations such as securities issued by a foreign country or by any person therein

In co-operation with the Treasury, the banks have secured the various forms on which such reports are to be made. The banks will use the blanks in making out their own reports, which will deal largely with securities in their trust départments, and will also furnish the forms to interested customers.

Reports must be filed by citizens in this territory with the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond on or before August 31. Persons outside the United States must file their reports with the United States Consul in their districts on or before

The reports will cover property held at the close of business on May 31. Stock Prices Uneven At Close Despite Selective Gains

Short Covering Reported Factor in Stiffening Prices Late in Day By VICTOR EUBANK,

Associated Press Financial Writer. NEW YORK, June 22.—The stock market fiddled with selective and modest recoveries today, but the notes were too faint to touch off much of a come-back symphony. Slight improvement appeared at the start. Prices soon retreated. however, and by midday declines of fractions to a point or so predominated Rumors then began to seep into boardrooms regarding an imminent settlement of the coal labor crisis which had earlier depressed issues of companies threatened with fuel shortages. Prominent steels, rails and industrials slowly converted initial recessions into fractional advances. Short covering was said to have been partly responsible for the tors, Chrysler, American Telephone, Western Union, Westinghouse, Sears Roebuck, International Harvester United States (60a) and Oliver Farm. Among laggards the greater part of the time were Woolworth, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Allied Chemical, American Can, Loew's, Paramount, United States Gypsum, United States Rubber and J. I. Case.

RADAR ... Who first detected aircraft in flight by radio?

In 1932 . . . on a lonely farm . . .

a man sat in a truck equipped with a variety of radio measuring devices. There was music in the air, on that spring morning... pleasant music, broadcast from local radio stations for the entertainment of Washington housewives. High over the peaceful countryside, the dirigible Akron was quietly soaring... and a few people craned their necks to look at it.

But still it would have been a day of no special importance to the world, save for this one man . . . a radio engineer. He, too, was listening to the radio . . . listening for radio waves that he hoped would be reflected off the hig airship. And he was right. The signal came through! From within the dark interior of that truck, he detected by reflected radio waves the approach of the distant dirigible, and by the same means followed its course as it flew.

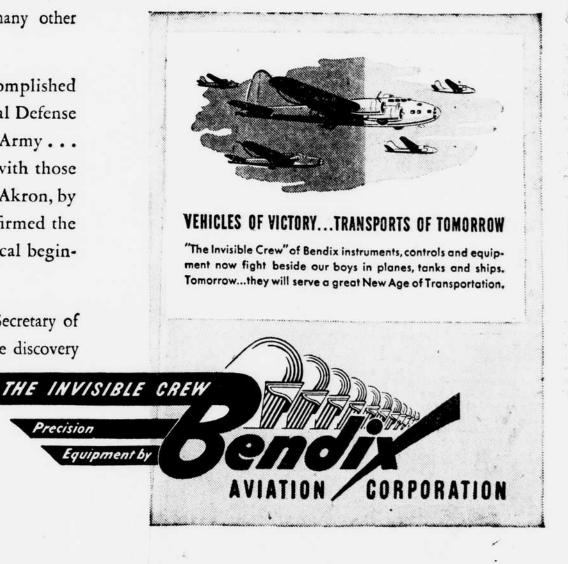

That day, eleven years ago, marked the practical beginning of Radar...the greatest secret weapon of the war...the means by which not only land-based stations but planes and ships detect and locate enemy targets. Shortly thereafter, the research and manufacturing organization then owned and managed by this man became a part of the Bendix Aviation Corporation, and the products evolved from his experiments joined the many other members of the Bendix "Invisible Crew."

The ultimate development of Radar in all its forms was accomplished by the cooperative efforts of American Industry, the National Defense Research Council and the technicians of the Navy and the Army... and by the further pooling of this country's developments with those of Great Britain. But as early as 1932, the giant dirigible Akron, by unwittingly reradiating the waves of broadcast stations, confirmed the theories of this Bendix engineer...and so marked the practical beginning of what we know today as Radar detection.

The Bendix Aviation Corporation has on file a letter from the Secretary of the Navy to this engineer acknowledging his contribution to the discovery of Radar reflection from moving aircraft.

Bendix also supplies for Radar applications the variety of instruments, controls and equipment called collectively, "The Invisible Crew." Bendix makes not only the radiant wave equipment of Radar, but the auxiliaries essential to its operation: hydraulic controls, gyroscopic stabilizers, torque amplifiers, remote indicating systems, direction instruments.

Trade Board Backs Welfare Powers Shift

Voices Disapproval Of Federal-Owned Liquor Stores Here

Approval of the House resolution which would transfer present administrative powers of the Board of Public Welfare to the Commissioners was voted yesterday by the Executive Committee of the Washington Board of Trade.

The resolution provides that the Welfare Board shall have power to visit, inspect and investigate any institution, and make recommendations to the Commissioners. The board, or a committee, would be required to visit each such institution at least once each month. All present powers of the board would be vested in the Commissioners.

In another action, the axecutive committee disapproved a bill introduced by Representative West, Democrat of Texas, providing that the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board establish and maintain Government liquor stores in the District. Indorse Baby Broker Bill.

Approval was given a recommendation of the charities and corrections committee, headed by J. Austin Latimer, that the Board of Trade indorse the baby broker bill reported yesterday by the House District Committee. Minor amendments will be urged by the Board of Trade when the measure reaches the Senate District Committee.

The Executive Committee also approved two recommendations made by the Public Schools Committee, of which George E. Keneipp is chairman. One urged that vocational schools be given the status of vocational high schools and diplomas be granted. A second resolution called on the Army and Navy to detail commissioned officers to act as instructors in carrying out an efficient physical education program in District high schools, thus giving replacement to staffs being depleted through calls into the

Army Bombers To Add Realism In Blackout Test

The Evening Star

No Warning Planned In Next Scheduled Defense Exercises

Army bombers probably will fly over Washington with giant searchlights attempting to spot them during a practice air raid in the military district of Washington soon, it was announced last night.

The test will be simultaneous with a test througout a large section of the East covered by the 1st and 3d Service Commands, as well as the Military District of Washington. The area includes Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusettes, Southern New Hampshire, the District and Eastern areas of Virginia, Maryland and Pennsyl-

Participation of Army planes here will depend on the weather, it was said by Maj. Gen. John T. Lewis, commanding general of the Military District of Washington. The test here is in compliance with a request of District Commissioner John Russell Young

Gen. Royce to Direct Test. The entire test will be under direction of Maj. Gen. Ralph Royce commander of the 1st Air Force who was designated for the task by Lt. Gen. Hugh A. Drum.

Periods of the blackout may be longer in some areas of the East than in others, Gen. Royce announced from New York. It is expected that for any area under test the over-all test period will not be less than one and one-half hours. "The public is requested," he said "to co-operate with all defense agencies in order to secure maxi-mum benefit of the test." Washingtonians were warned by Civilian Defense Director H. C. Whitehurst to be careful not to leave their premises at night with lights burning. Prospects that the blackout will come without warning will put both civilians and the civilian defense protection services "to a supreme test," Capt. Whitehurst said. Burning Lights Scored. One of the most frequent violations, he explained, has been lights burning in empty homes. The test will be the 23d for the District. In the case of stores or other places of business where night lights are used as a precautionary measure against burglary, if there i no watchman to extinguish such lights in even of an air-raid alarm, an outside switch accessible to wardens or police should be provided.

"We feel we have done all we can bowling facilities, free of charge, to in respect to public education," Capt. Whitehurst said. "We hope Washingtonians will take air raid preseriously enough to familiarize themselves thoroughly with the requirements. If they do I am not next test."

Gov. Darden Promises Study of Request for 25% Income Tax Cut

Consideration This Year By Legislative Council Is Pledged by Executive

Gov. Darden has promised to refer to his Legislative Advisory Committee for consideration this year a request from the Arlington County Civic Federation for a 25 per cent reduction in State income taxes, Albert A. Carretta, chairman of the federation's Legislative and Legal Action

Postwar Program Of Security Urged By Dr. Burns

Start Plans Now to Cushion Shock of Peace, She Warns

A postwar social security program that will insure the aged, the young, the sick and the temporarily unemployed against want was recommended by Dr. Eveline Burns of the National Resources Planning Board yesterday in a talk before the Woman's National Democratic Club.

Speaking on "Freedom from Want," Dr. Burns, who directed the research for the American security report, argued that now is the time to prepare against want after the war when millions of persons will be released from war jobs.

"The major part of our program is to make use of all our resources," she asserted, 'and the question now is what we intend to do fer the development of these natural resources in the postwar period. We proved what we could do in our tremendous water power development before the war which has helped us in the war effort and hastened the output of aluminum, making possible our airplane production," she pointed out.

Plans for conversion of war industries into production centers for peacetime needs should be formulated now, she continued, to assure the 20,000,000 persons in war work of employment in development of this year's graduating class of Le- are Mrs. Roger H. Gates, ways and

A plan to enable convalescent pa-tients at the Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, to enjoy fishing "in their own backyard" is now being worked on by the Washington chapter of the Izaak Walton League, while mem-bers of the auxiliary have already launched a series of benefits to purchase fishing tackle.

Although the Izaak Walton League of America is primarily a conservation organization, the Washington chapter is relaxing regulations during the war to permit convalescent servicemen the healthful enjoyment of outdo v fishing. Members of the chapter plan to stock the upper end of Rock Creek, which flows beside the Naval Hospital at Bethesda, with sunfish and trout.

Members of the auxiliary hope to obtain enough from benefits to purchase fishing tackle to supplement the gifts of rods to be presented by each member of the league. Proceeds from a recent dinner at the Fairfax Hotel already have been turned over to Servicemen's Club

AKRON, Ohio, June 22.—Discovery of a device expected to make flying measurably safer by stopping the interference of static with radio reception—thus of vital concern to Army and Navy aviation—was revealed the new research laboratory of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

demonstrated to newspapermen by P. W. Litchfield, chairman of the company's board, and a group of staff scientists at a preview of the laboratory before a three-day dedicatory program began.

The discovery, developed by Gilbert Anderson of Goodyear, is knokn as the "radio static neutralizer." It does not, thus far, eliminate entirely the more massive forms of static. such as those due to nearby thunderstorms or to heavy man-made disturbances, but it reduces static to the point where it no longer can drown out either telegraphic signals

After-War Uses Seen.

While it was designed primarily for war use, in the hope of making directional beams and code signals less likely to fail, the Goodyear scientists plan to adapt it also to government. household radios after the war. There were other discoveries exhibited at the preview: "Cycleweld," a substance which molds together parts of equipment without riveting or welding. This comes in two forms-a black liquid and a tape. The parts to be molded may be treated with either. They then are placed under heat and pressure. Ehaustive tests have shown cyclewelded parts to be even more firmly joined than if they had been bolted or welded in the usual way, the scientists said. The substance was originated in the Chrysler laboratories in Detroit but, at that company's request, Goodyear joined in perfecting research. Cycleweld now is in production, and, according to those who have developed it, threatens to revolutionize industrial welding of metal to metal, plastic to metal and some woods to either.

Tire Defects Located. The supersonic tire tester is another development. This is a device which detects the most subtle defects in a tire, such as a separation of vulcanized parts. The tester thus determines whether it's worth while to retread the tire.

The machine picks out separations by setting up sound waves of such high frequency they are inaudible. A board shows a green light until the revolved tire reveals a break and then a red light flashes on. This invention promises to be an important safety factor. It is still in the experimental stage, but will go into production later.

Another discovery exhibited was a substitute for rubber called "plioflex," which scientists here call better than leather for soles of shoes and better than rubber for heels. Plioflex can be vulcanized like rubber, and is regarded as superior to numerous plastics being tried as rubber substitutes.

Tested for Tires.

While plioflex has been tried on retreading two tires and for one whole tire, and the results were promising, the research men say it is too early to tell whether it will prove an effective substitute for rubber tires. They do predict it will come into general use for molded automotive parts and similar products, for shoes, jar rings and impregnated fabrics. Resinfoam is a new plastic which Dr. L. B. Sebrell, director of research, and his staff demonstrated. This is an insulation material against weather, heat, water or sound. It resembles packed snow and is even

It is being turned out in limited quantities for insulating Army warplane cabins against heat and cold. An impregnated type of the material is black and tougher.

Postwar uses are expected to ininsulating refrigerators, homes and many products. The radio static neutralizer, the most dramatic of the discoveries placed on exhibition for the first time, is expected to find immediate use, not only on bomber and fighter planes, but warships, tanks, command cars, jeeps and at field radio

Static, it was pointed out, has caused many a plane to lose direction and crash, and has interrupted many a vital war message. Sometimes the enemy manufactures that the neutralizer would improve radar, the radio device that locates enemy planes and ships, and should help also radio transmission of pictures and maps.

The visiting newspapermen saw the machine at work. A regular radio program was turned on. An announcer was talking. Artificial static was produced in sufficient power to smother the voice. Then the neutralizer went into action, the static dropped to a thin blur and the voice came back. The machine uses small electronic tubes in such a way that they discriminate between static and the desired signal and automatically control the amount of static energy which can pass through the radio. Recently, during a terrific thun-derstorm, with lightning striking

My big family wash is easy with so much

Here's Mrs. Southwell and three important members of that active family of hers. Sure makes a heap of washing, but Mrs. Southwell doesn't mind.

Mrs. Ruth Southwell says getting SO MUCH MORE SUDS and LONGER-LASTING SUDS from new Super Suds eases up all washing jobs

WITH this family to wash for, you can bet I was happy to find the soap that really gives HEAPS OF LONGER-LASTING SUDS. Workclothes get clean with less rubbing, and white wash gets whiter! The radio sure tells the truth about Super Suds having the 'SUDS with SUPER-DO'!"

MORE SUDS...HARDER-WORKING SUDS THAT LAST AND LAST! SUDS that have an extra punch to knock out stubborn dirt. They do this just by being so EXTRA THICK and RICH, and not by anything strong in 'em. That's why they get things so clean and white in such a wonderfully gentle, easy-on-clothes-and-hands way. Get new sudsier Super Suds today, and see for yourself!

"I'VE GOTTEN real vain about my hands. Since washing dishes with Super Suds, they look so smooth and white. It's a caution how THOSE HARD-WORKING SUDS cut grease, yet are so gentle. Super Suds seems to get things clean by having MORE SUDS, not by anything strong."

Make the "milk-bottle suds test" Shake up two teaspoons of your regular washday soap and a glass of water in a milk-bottle. Do the same with Super Suds in another milk-bottle. Even hard or cool water will do. See if you don't get MORE SUDS, LONGER-

One of the commonest complaints grown people make against children is summed up in the word Selfish. He, she, "is so selfish you can't live three years."

Listening through the story the basic fact soon becomes evident. The complainant is selfish and is complaining because his comfort, his peace of mind, perhaps his security in the household, is disturbed. "He rushes into the house, calls for something to eat, slams doors until the whole house shakes, although I have told him a hundred times that I want to sleep from twothirty until quarter of four." "She keeps wanting new hats, new shoes, movies, all the time and I tell her that we aren't made of

Very seldom do we combine two entirely different types of needlework as we have in this lovely pattern. The talented lady who can embroider and crochet will certainly want to make a runner or tablecloth for her home from this combination of filet-crochet and embroidered squares. As the picture suggests, pieces may be made in all filet-crochet or all embroidered squares, too. In size 30 crochet cotton, the filet motif measures 6 inches square.

Pattern envelope contains hot-iron transfers for 20 motifs; fileterochet diagram for easy-to-see dot-in square method; stitch illustrations and full directions.

They still hoped that by some miracle our planes would dive out of the sky and check the advancing Japs and give us a chance to reorganize at the last minute and start to win. Failing that, they hoped to get to Corregidor and hold there until help came. For most of them Mariveles was the end of the

On Corregidor, too, they held on to their hope to the last day. All they knew, when the end came, was that help had not reached them. They did not know, and would not have believed, that no help was going to be sent. Some one thought it couldn't be done. . . .

Sometime shortly after December 8, perhaps immediately, the decision was reached in Washington that the Philippines could not be reinforced, even with airplanes, and that MacArthur and his men would have to do the best they could with whatever they had on hand. Some time in January it was

Hurley chartered five ships and loaded them with .50-caliber ammunition, hand grenades, 3-inch antiaircraft shells, aspirin, bandages, quinine and sulfanilimide, and some canned goods. Two of the ships were lost near Darwin Harbor when the Japs staged their first big raid of the war there, catching us by surprise and inflicting heavy damage on a big convoy. The three others all got through to the Philippines. That meant that all three ships that started, made it. There may have been other ships too, because Secretary Stimson, on the basis of information given to him, announced after the fall of Bataan that for every ship that got through two ships were

Occasionally the Japs sent a warship into Philippine Awarded Navy Cross

MacArthur had about a dozen ships which had been engaged in inter-island trade before the war and which had survived the bombings. None of them was armed. The largest was the Legaspi, a modern 3.000-ton passenger and freight ship. The others ranged in size down to 70 and 80 foot motor launches, but most of them were fairly roomy with three or four decks.

MacArthur sent one of the ships out through Corregidor's mine fields one night late in January. It was the Don Esteban. Two weeks later, | special Dispatch to The Star. with the Philippine Army's three Q-boats guiding if, it came back into Manila Bay. It had been to Iloilo and it brought back sorely needed supplies; rice and a little fruit and some medicine. Then MacArthur sent the Legaspi and it got through. Then the Princesa made it.

When the first boats came back it was a tremendous uplift to the morale of the men in Corregidor and Bataan. The reports of what they brought were exaggerated. The arrival of one small ship was enough to cause rumors that our convoy at all right, but she's swapped it for last had arrived. Soldiers at the Army khaki. Bird squeezed himself into the fuselage of a P-40, which is strictly a one-man airplane, and the pilot pulled it off the Cabcaben runway one night and set it down in Cebu two hours later. Bird worked with Col. Thomas Cook at Cebu.

The supplies from Hurley's ships reached Cebu, but they never got to Corregidor. The Japs sent a warship into the Inland Sea and it sank all but about six of Mac-Arthur's small ships that they had missed on their previous raids, including one carrying President Quezon, too, but he slipped through their hands on a PT boat and got to Mindanao where he boarded an airplane for Australia. One or two of our small ships were captured intact by the Japs while their crews were ashore. Later, two submarines went to Cebu to try to take some of the supplies to Corregidor, but again it was too late. The Japs by that time had finished their campaigns in Java and Malaya and had come back to mop up the Philippines.

Anyway, the decision was made and Brig. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, former Secretary of War, was called to Washington. The President told Hurley h ehad a job for supplies and ammunition to the submarines, however, had previously performed several valuable missions in running into Corregion. Winning Contract By THE FOUR ACES.

A Double Error

A declarer can count himself lucky if, having made one bad play, he is given the opportunity to redeem himself and save his contract. In the following hand, however, South slipped twice, which was once too often.

Declarer was shocked at the "bad trump break," but he led a trump back to the nine spot and returned the heart queen, intending to pass it to West and thereby establish a heart trick for a club discard. East, however, was not asleep; he ruffed the heart queen-and now declarer was washed up. He had to overruffor permit East to lead a club through the king-but this was only temporary relief; he later had to lose three club tricks and his contract. Declarer's premature play of the diamond king had been bad enough, but he could have recovered from that one error if he had immediately returned the heart queen. East, as before, would ruff, and declarer would overruff. Now he would have to cash the diamond ace, then lead exactly two rounds of trumps, ending in dummy. The key play would now be to lead a low heart and pass the trick to West, discarding a club from the closed hand. West, on winning with a low heart, would be stuck. If he returned a diamond declarer would discard a second club from his own hand safe. Finally, if West led his high up about 20 years apart. heart, declarer would ruff, re-enter dummy with a trump and discard heart, the heart jack would be an immediate winner.

"Lost cities" have been found in low parts of Guatemala. Today we see the ruins of those cities in forests and jungles. Trees and shrubs have grown up over and around the remains of one old city known as "Quirigua." This city appears to have been the home of Maya Indians about 1,400 years ago or more. It may be that a great plague swept Quirigua, killing many of its people and making the priests fiee from their temples. At any rate, those who did not die in the city went away, and failed to return. Among the remains of Quirigua are more than a dozen large, high stones. These stones have figures and faces carved on their surfaces, also markings in the nature of writing. One stone has a height of 25 It is believed that the images on

All members of the genus are thy, law-abiding creatures. They prefer the tallest trees in their range, and they are slow climbers. During the day, they rest quietly, either on the broad branches of their home tree or in cavities in the trunk. shadows fall, they descend to the ground for their food. This is for first choice, the tender leaf buds or twigs. Seeds, roots and nuts are second The cuscus shuns water. However, the genus discovered in 1900 yesterday's column. The symbol (E) departs from this family trait to the extent that it will use water for washing its hands. But its face receives the same careful attention Tabby gives to hers. This last species inhabits an area well in the interior, at an altitude of 4,000 feet above sea level. Natives are fond of the meat of the cuscus. They claim it is tender and delicious. The only reason why these beautiful, harmless animals have not become extinct is because they occupy the loftiest trees of their range and it is thinly inhabited by the Malays and Papuans. Perhaps the most remarkable thing about this animal is its tenacity of life. It has been known to live several hours after its spine has been broken or a bullet has pierced its brain. Another interesting characteristic exhibited by the different species of the cuscus is their keen desire to associate with animals that display a higher I. Q. than they possess. Whether they enjoy the company of these animals is, of course, not known. It may be that they are trying to acquire, in their own way, some of the more progressive methods of escape from enemies. No report has been made that the new species discovered in 1900 is more advanced than its relatives.

Little Mrs. Peter happened to be on the farther side of the Old Brier Patch, so she knew nothing of Peter's trouble for some little time. Finally, she started for the side where he was. She was going to look for him, for she felt that it was high time for him to be home. Presently, as she hopped along one of the little paths in the Old Brier Patch, she heard a faint groan ahead of her. Mrs. Peter stopped and sat up with one hand on her heart and a look of fright and anxiety in her big eyes.

"What was that?" she whispered to herself. "It sounded like Peter's voice. With a bound, she sprang forward. Peter was in trouble and rolling from his eyes as he moaned

How could she go on living without Peter? But she didn't let Peter know how worried she was. No. indeed! He couldn't use those big strong hind legs of his. The best he could do was to drag them after him, pulling himself along a little at a time by means of his front feet. Lugosi Revives 'Dracula'

Old Chiller Looks Like Faint Echo Of Its Former Self at National: Miss Weidler Greeting Guest

By JAY CARMODY.

It may have been just a matter of time, or perhaps it was the hot weather. On the other hand some arch fiend may have brought a sprig of wolf-bane into the National Theater last night. Whatever the reason, it is this department's morbid duty to report that "Dracula," which opened there with Bela Lugosi in the title role, is a weak and senile echo of the melodrama which froze the blood of getting-rich-quick America in 1928.

One is free to conjecture that it was the fabulous conjecture that it was the fabulous popularity of "Angel Street" and "Arsenic and Old Lace." If so, it was a grievous miscalculation for compared to the unique qualities of these dramas, Bram Stoker's old chiller is a boring old fogey of a play unworthy of the attention of an uninspired summer stock company. Its creaks are those in the joints of age, more productive of sympathy than of terror.

Mr. Lugosi has been built into a pretty monstrous fellow by the movies in the decade and a half since he last played Dracula in the flesh. Clearly his reputation is in large part due to the mad machinations of Hollywood, an ingenuity in demonology which exists beyond the interest of science or the potency of wolf-bane. It seems Brenda had heard those stories of Sanders' rudeness. "But." Brenda fully with the role of Dr. Seward says, "when we met we started talking of a person we both hate, and make sturdy gestures as Jonathan we've been friends ever since!" If Brenda is responsible for the remarkable change in Mr. Sanders she deserves some kind of medal. George is now not only full of fun but positively frolicsome on the set nouncing his first entrance, and of his picture. He pulls the leg of his director with almost boyish zest going to the length of having special That can only mean there was badges bearing the director's name "Moguy for President," for members of the picture to wear. Fred MacMurray finally gets around to singing a solo with that really fine voice of his. I heard him singing a verse to Dorothy Lamour in "And the Angels Sing." Then it was Dotty's turn. Anyway, this little piece is about the amazing Mr. Tufts who, without any screen experience whatsoever, contrives to steal "So Proudly We Hail" from such cinematic veterans as Claudette Colbert, Paulette Goddard and Veronica Lake.
