President Declares Stiff Program of New Taxes Needed

Text of President's statement on page A-12.

By J. A. FOX. Pointing to total commitments of $344,000,000,000 since the war effort started three years ago. and forecasting a public debt of $206,000,000.000 by next July 1, President Roosevelt last night renewed his recommendations for more revenue, asserting that "a truly stiff program of additional taxes, saving, or both," is necessary to bolster the domestic economy against the perils of inflation. He estimated national income this year at $150,000,000,-

In a statement explaining modifications in the budget since the fiscal program for 1944 went to Congress in January, Mr. Roosevelt said that while expenditures in the "gigantic national effort for victory' totaled but $110,000,000,000 as of last June 30-far under appropriations -the monthly spending rate had risen to $7,700,000,000, and he laid down a revised blueprint calling for disbursements approximating $100,-000,000,000 this fiscal year.

At the same time, as the result of the vast war program, Mr. Roosevelt said there are indications "that we are approaching the capacity of production with our available manpower." He expressed the belief, however, that "a further in-

Responsibility Put on Rome.

The. Allied proclamation said: "Italians, you know that on July 25 we let up on the aerial bombardment of Italy. We hoped thereby to give Italy a breathing space wherein to unite for peace and freedom."

But the Germans, too, had used the time, it said. When Germans in Italy heard of Mussolini's fall they said to themselves that they were "caught like the Allies, this dispatch said, were rats in a trap," the broadcast continued, but now they had regained their insolent attitude toward Italians. It concluded:

Landon Says Wallace 'U. S. Fascist' Speech Was Blow at Unity

By GOULD LINCOLN.

Vice-President Wallace, in his Detroit speech naming anti-New Dealers "American Fascists," dealt national unity a tremendous blow, former Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas said in a nationwide broadcast from Kansas City, Mo. last night, under the auspices of the Republican National Committee. "At a time when this nation is engaged in a deadly struggle to preserve the ideals for which it has always stood, Vice-President Wallace declared civil war," the Republican standard bearer of 1936 said. "But he declared that war on • • • every American who might ever hope to do his own independent thinking to solve his own problems. "Mr. Wallace, with the approval of Candidate Roosevelt, gaily plowed the soil for a bitter political campaign.

Unity Dealt Blow, He Says. Mr. Landon continued with the assertion that the Vice-President and Mr. Roosevelt had dealt team work and national unity a "dismal blow." No President, he said, had ever had the unity that was President Roosevelt's in early 1933, or in December, 1941.

"Instead of pulling the country together as commander-in-chief to face the greatest military effort of our lives-Candidate Roosevelt is pushing us farther and farther apart on domestic issues," Mr. Landon said.

The former Governor said that we are winning the war, that the enemy is tiring fast and has no reserves What is needed, he said, is to keep up the driving pace which will not give the enemy a chance to catch his second wind.

"If our drive slackens," said Mr. Landon, "if we fumble-if our intensified efforts are diverted by domestic bitterness, the victory punch will be delayed. It is even possible it may slip from our grasp."

Bitter controversies, Mr. Landon said, are characteristic of this administration and are the results of "life-term ambition." He said that the administration has abandoned the original New Deal.

"In other words, the postwar plans of the palace guard bureaucrats," continued Mr. Landon, "are to relieve the businessman of all responsibility, and to relieve the elected representatives of the people in Congress of all responsibility.

"That is the Fascist theory of a problems of unemployment, poverty and mass machine production.'

German fighters offered some opposition to one section of American medium bombers and its escort of 250 Spitfires. Heavy antiaircraft fire was reported in the Squadrons of RAF, Dominion and Allied fighters provided escort. One medium bomber and two fighters failed to return.

July Record Month.

Matching Allied efforts elsewhere in the United Nations' greatest month of the war, the shattering aerial offensive from Britain attained new fury in July, with the great German port of Hamburg apparently marked for obliteration. A reconnaissance pilot flying over Hamburg at noon today, found great fires still burning from the last 2,300-ton attack 36 hours earlier. Smoke stretched for 50 miles south of the dock area, he said.

The RAF heavy bombers-probably about 400 strong and carrying nearly 1,000 tons of bombs-switched last night from Hamburg to the important machine tool center of Remscheid, just south of the Ruhr, blanketing- it with fire bombs and explosives.

U. S. 8th Air Force Has Record Month In Pounding Europe

By the Associated Press. UNITED STATES 8th AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS IN ENGLAND, July 31.—Playing a potent role in history's greatest air offensive, the American 8th Air Force had a record month of activity in July that dwarfed all previous operations.

The most frequent targets were fighter plane factories on which the Germans are banking heavily for defense. They also raided Norway for the first time to blast the important Nazi aluminum-nitrate plant at Heroya.

July was marked by the beginning of intensive medium bomber operations under the Air Support Command's rising tactical branch, whose basic function is complementing ground operations but currently is assisting in strategic bombing. Flying at a medium altitude (10,000 to 15,000 feet) with strong fighter escort, the medium bombers -the type is still a secret-made six raids on enemy air bases and factories in France, Holland and Belgium with negligible loss. Exact figures for the month were not available because daily communiques occasionally combined heavy and medium loss figures with RAF

About 100 Fortresses were lost in the month against 82 for the less active month of June. Over 200 enemy planes were destroyed. RAF-USAAF strategic collaboration was brought to a new pitch, with the Fortresses in two days dove-tailing into the RAF's non-stop campaign against Hamburg. The 8th Air Force has now begun dropping propaganda leaflets.

NEW YORK, July 31.-Archbishop Francis J. Spellman is coming home after a six-month's tour that took him to Axis and Allied Nations, and to neutral capitals with the nature of his mission still on the secret SK ?.

When he left the United States last "ebruary, the only explanation was that he was on an ecclesiastical mission. Political significance of the trip, if any, was dislaimed in Washington Catholic circles. Yet, because of his close personal friendship with Pope Pius XII and his knowledge of the Italian mind, from long associations in Rome, his visit. particularly with the Pope, was coupled with peace rumors.

Nazis Thought Ready For at Least Partial Defense of Italy

By DANIEL DELUCE.

Associated Press War Correspondent. ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, July 31 .- Italy to the Allies is like a loaf of breadhalf a loaf would be better than none.

If Allied arms and Italian war weariness have their way, occupation of the southern half of Italy. including Rome, is a predictable event. Of course, the Allies are strong enough to seize this "half a loaf" by sheer power if necessary.

There is no foretelling whether this power will be needed. If the flood of pacifistic feeling now sweeping Mussolini's ex-jingoistic empire continues, it will become the mightiest weapon in the Allied arsenal. Gen. Eisenhower told the Italian people:

"We are coming. We will rid you of the Germans and deliver you from the horrors of war.'

Germany Plans Defense. That is the plainest sort of state-ment of what the Allied commander in chief has in mind for the next few months.

From Switzerland and other neutral news centers of Europe are com-ing a series of reports in cating that Germany has committed the Wehrmacht to full scale defense of at least part of the Italian peninsula If the Italian government formally capitulates, then only the terms of the armistice can reveal what degree of co-operation will be obtained from the Italians against Germany. On the other hand, the King's regime may remain at war but the people themselves may so hamper the Germans by sabotage, strikes and espionage that the Fuehrer's heauquarters may decide to let the lower half of Italy go and concentrate on defense of the Po Valley.

The Germans probably will try to hold as much as they possibly can, straining their resources of manpower and equipment to the utmost.

Germans Terrorized.

The terror implanted in the Gerfortress of Europe is such that the war. Reich's leaders dare not imitate the Russian example by strategic retreat from the edge of the continent to more natural defenses in the interior unless overwhelmed by the force of circumstances.

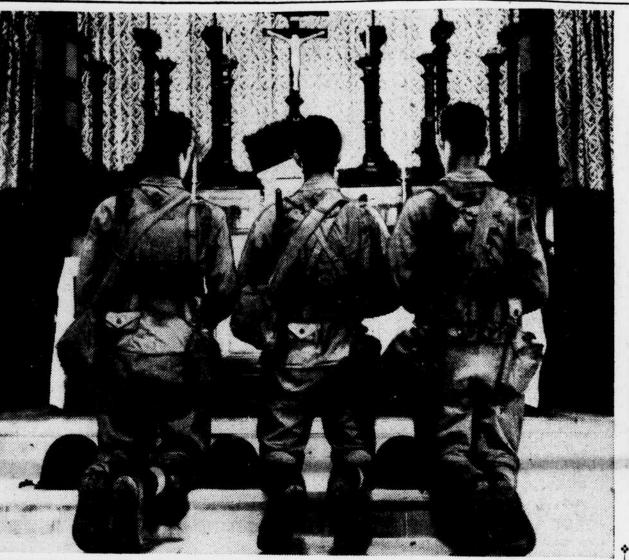

Southern Italy would be a sad loss to Hitler, but not fatal. The eventual Allied occupation of Northern Italy, however, would be for the Nazis a disaster of the first magnitude.

The Allied high command in the Mediterranean persistently has emphasized that the greatest stakes of any offensive are new air bases. Thus the payoff on any action in Italy would be expected to come in the form of advanced fields for a roaring air onslaught against the inner bastions of Hitler's domain.

Would Mean Austria.

You can measure for yourself or Neutral Turkey, amazingly free of parently is relatively quiet, but in entanglement in the four-year-old war despite friendship pacts with both Germany and England, is a factor which may loom increasingly important as the battle of Europe nears its climax.

Would Menace Oil. The Ankara Government has walked the tightrope of non-belligerancy so far, but there may come man public mind of a breach in the when Italy is knocked out of the many. Turkey is an ideal springboard for any Balkan campaign. It would lead not to mountains but to Bulgaria's plains and the rich oil lands of Rumania. Some Balkan experts argue that the day the Allied troops enter Rumania's oil capital of Ploesti is the day Germany is finished. A Black Sea campaign would have the further advantage of linking up with Russia's Red Army on a solid Eastern front but it requires Turkey's participation.

that if the Germans were gone, the popular cry for peace could be acknowledged, with Italians counting on Allied promise of fair treatment if they simply gave up. Marshal Badoglio was said to have hoped that the overturn of Fascism would create favorable conditions for peace without involving Allied troop occupation, but that with this hope apparently gone he sought to obtain both German and Allied agreement for a "neutralized Italy" under a military commission acceptable to both sides. Little chance of success was seen for this. One general opinion was that peace when it is made will be military-made between army commanders-without formal acknowledgment of any diplomatic understandings.

The popular demonstrations made it clear that Italy was undergoing a social revolution toward liberty and political expression, even though they were checked after two days by Marshal Badoglio's emergency, authoritarian measures. A censored dispatch to the Tribune de Geneve said that the Badoglio government had "just averted" complete anarchy in Italy.

Stimson Says Schools Should Stress Fitness Over Military Drill

By MARION WADE DOYLE. The War Department would not approve of curtailing the physical fitness program in District high schools to permit enforcement of the proposed compulsory military drill, according to Secretary of War Stimson

The Secretary's position became known yesterday with publication of a letter from him in the weekly educational magazine, School and Society. He had been asked by Dr. John W. Studebaker, commissioner of education, to give an opinion on the_comparative values of general physical training and military drill. The Secretary replied:

"The War Department does not recommend that military drill take the place of physical education in the schools and colleges during this war period."

Military drill can be given quickly and "under the most productive circumstances," he said, after the young recruit gets into the Army

Stresses Need of Fitness.

"A good physical condition, however," he wrote, "cannot be developed in so short a space of time, and the physical condition of a soldier is of prime importance to the War Department.

The letter was read with interest by school officials here because the District cadet and physical fitness programs are now being reviewed by the Board of Education for possible changes in the fall.

Two proposals now are before the board. One is from Acting Superintendent of Schools Chester W. Holmes and one from a board member, Dr. James A. Gannon. Dr. Holmes has suggested the board seek revision of the congressional legislation of 1907 to permit him to make military drill compulsory. Approval of legislation on compulsory drill has been given informally at the District Building and by some members of the House and Senate District Committees.

If military drill is made compulsory, Dr. Gannon has suggested it might be combined with the physical fitness program to safeguard the health of boys trying to study. march, train and work after school. A combined program would require curtailment of the present system of three periods a week of active exercise and two periods a week of health lectures

"Dear Mr. Studebaker: " "I have your letter asking whether the War Department recommends that military drill take the place of physical education in the curriculum of schools and colleges. I assume your question to apply only to the period of the present war and not to periods of peace.

Drill Easily Taught.

"The amount of military drill which can be given in schools and colleges can also be given after induction into the Army, in a relatively short time and under the most productive circumstances. A good physical condition, however, cannot be developed in so short a space of time, and the physical condition of a soldier is of prime importance to the War Department.

"The War Department does not want to appear to advise upon the make-up of a curriculum, nor to go beyond outlining some of the elements which the Army believes would be advantageous in its recruits. Of these, a good physical condition is extremely important and a knowledge of basic military drill relatively unimportant.

"The War Department therefore does not recommend that military drill take the place of physical education in the schools and colleges during this war period.

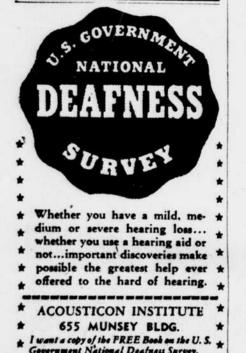

"The War Department has no objection to the publication of this statement, provided it is quoted in its entirety.

"Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War."

Two Washington youths were being held last night at Upper Marlboro by Prince Georges County police under $500 bond each on charges of larceny in the theft of $750 and a watch from the home of Mrs. Ruth Wallace, 1900 Fulton avenue. Bradbury Heights, Md. Police said they confessed the theft.

The youths were arrested at Glen Echo Park after police received a report they were displaying large sums of money. Bethesda police, who turned them over to Prince Georges authorities, said a search of their clothing revealed $721 hidden in their shoes, stockings and trousers. The watch was found later by police at the park.

D. C. Defense Pageant August 13 Expected To Aid Recruiting

District civilian defense authorities yesterday laid plans for the second major feature of the twoweek campaign to recruit 20.000 more volunteers for the city's protective services-a pageant at Griffith Stadium, Friday, August 13.

Encouraged by the success of the Civilian Defense parade Friday evening, District officials and citizens who collaborated in arranging that event are turning to the task of completing the drive for the enlistment of volunteer defense workers.

Theater Men Co-operate.

Officials said top-notch Washington theater operators were preparing details of the pageant and it will Sene Ford, production manager of Loew's Capitol Theater. It was said the pageant "would surpass in magnitude any civilian defense demonstration yet staged by a municipality."

Thousands of civilian defense workers will participate. Each pro- Infanfile Paralysis Here tective service group will be given a place to demonstrate its duties in the event of an enemy attack. Near the center-field bleachers there will be "an average local community" with a 40-foot high reproduction of the Capitol in the background. This Hollywood background is to be "destroyed" in a simulation of a bombing attack, as planes from Bolling Field sweep over the scene.

Admission will be free. Entertainment will be provided by stage. screen and radio stars giving a variety show, with music to be furnished by a number of "name" bands

Will Seek Volunteers.

During the pageant the ball park will be blacked out and air-raid signals will be sounded as the planes approach. Each "building" in the stage setting will be fired in turn, bombs will be exploded, antiaircraft batteries will go into action and thereafter firemen, auxiliary police. air-raid wardens, gas squads and rescue squads will swing into action. Not forgetting the purpose of the two-week program, civilian defense officials and workers will give spectators an opportunity to volunteer. Registration booths will be operated and enrollment blanks will be distributed among the audience. Details of the stadium show are to be completed at a meeting of civilian defense authorities at the District Building Friday.

Shows Decline Since 1941

Despite a statement by the Na tional Foundation for Infantile Paralysis that the disease is increasing throughout the Nation, District Health Department figures show it has declined steadily in this city since 1941.

Basil O'Connor, president of the foundation, has stated that the number of cases reported nationally this year is double that of last year. The figure exceeds a nine-year record for a similar period.

The Health Department reported yesterday that there have been two cases in Washington this year but no deaths. Last year only one case had been reported to date. Five cases were reported during 1942, but none was fatal.

The records show an amazing de cline since 1941 when 76 cases of infantile paralysis were reported in the city, nine resulting in the death of the victims.

By the Associated Press

BROKEN ARROW, Okla., July 31.-Two bandits who held a bank president and his wife prisoners throughout the night and calmly admitted the iceman to make a delivery while waiting on a time lock, robbed the Arkansas Valley State Bank of $12,000 today and locked six men in the vault.

Six hours later a pair of suspects were arrested near Ponca City, Okla., after one of the most extensive man hunts since frontier days. Bank robbery charges were filed against the men by United States District Attorney Whit Mauzy at Tulsa.

$4,000 Recovered.

Highway patrolmen who arrested the men said they recovered nearly $4,000 and took two guns from the prisoners, identified in the warrants as Paul Bibee, 31, and Chester Don Peeler, 33. Officers said both were

The bandits appeared at the home of K. M. Rowe, bank president, last midnight and forced their way in at gunpoint. Mr. Rowe scuffled with them and was struck in the head with a gun. They tied Mrs. Rowe to her bed and taped her mouth with adhesive. During the wait they calmly ransacked the refrigerator.

Two hours before the bank was due to open, they took Mr. Rowe there to be ready when the time lock released. Three other bank officials, A. M. Laws, vice president; W. E. Laws, cashier, and Roy F. Smith, assistant cashier, arrived for work and were herded to their desks under guard.

Iceman Makes Delivery.

The robbers permitted the iceman to enter the building, make his delivery and go on his way unmolested.

When the time lock opened, shortafter 8 p.m., the pair took all of the currency and locked the bankers and two customers, Dr. W. D. Owney and J. O. Pike, in the vault. They were released a few minutes later by a clerk.

The State highway patrol sent 25 crews into the Northern Oklahoma area for the ensuing manhunt.

Investigation in Jalisco revealed that Mexicans wishing to go to the United States to work on farms or railroad gangs are willing to pay for the chance to pose as American nationals. This enables them to avoid the delay of lining up for days out-side an office in Jalisco, where a committee selects those who are to go to the United States

It is believed in Jalisco that a similar situation exists in other states. Complaint is also heard that the "racket" is operating on the American side of the border and that foreigners who have never seen Mexico before are getting in as Mexican nationals.

Blue Network Sale Expected to Develop Era of Competition

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 31 .- A new era of competition among the b'g broadcasting chains is expected to develop es the aftermath of purchase by Eusinessman Edward J. Noble of the Elue Network in the first major change in radio ownership in nearly two decades Noble, chairman of the Life Savers Corp., bought the Blue for $8,000,000, and industry circles immediately forecast that a strong bid for postwar expansion would result.

By outbidding such 'reportedly prospective buyers as Henry Luce, publisher of Time and Life; Gardner Cowles, jr., publisher of the Des Moines Register and Tribune; the Mellon interests, Marshall Field, Paramount Pictures Corp. and the brokerage house of Dillon, Read & Co., Mr. Noble acquired a hookup of 159 stations.

Sharp Rivalry Expected.

Disregarding the size of the stations involved, his chief competitors will be Blue's original parent. the National Broadcasting Co., with its "Red" network of 139 stations Columbia Broadcasting System, with 132, and Mutual Broadcasting, with

New X-Ray Inspector Examines 17,000 Castings a Day

BALTIMORE, July 31 .- A revolutionary machine, which brings assembly-line speed to X-ray inspection of airplane castings, has been developed for a Midwestern war plant, Westinghouse engineers announced today.

The new mass production X-ray machine inspects as many as 17,000 castings in 24 hours without interrupting other work while exposures are being made. Previous methods required a special lead-lined room which had to be temporarily evacuated during exposures, resulting in loss of time and efficiency.

Now, thanks to the new unit, 'America's growing air forces will get better airplanes faster," said C. V. Aggers, manager of the X-ray Division of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. here. Key to the machine's speed is a moving conveyor 40 feet long and 3 feet wide that transports the castings through the X-ray inspection and provides the fastest method yet devised to spot flaws in large quantities of metal parts, Mr. Aggers said.

This unit produces an exposed film of six castings every 30 seconds or the equivalent of one casting

Both of these are currently collected but represent claims against the Federal Government which are deducted to arrive at net receipts.

The foregoing discussion has been based entirely on receipts of general to add to the above expenditures and special accounts. To calculate total receipts from the public it is necessary to include receipts of trust accounts and to exclude transfers terest payments by the Treasury to such as appropriations to trust accounts. On this basis total Federal receipts from the public were 25,274 million dollars in the fiscal year 1943, and are estimated at 41.898 million dollars for the fiscal year 1944.

Public Debt.

The direct public debt, excluding obligations of Government corporations, amounted to 137 billion dollars on June 30, 1943. Unless additional tax legislation is enacted. the debt will increase 69 billion dollars in fiscal year 1944, bringing the public debt to 206 billion dollars by June 30, 1944. Changes in the cash working balance may alter total debt a year hence.

The increase in the direct Fedwas attributable to the Revenue Act rowing from the public. repercussions on the economy. The amounts spent become incomes of corporations and individuals. If expenditures are financed either by taxing or by borrowing active funds, the volume of spendable funds in the hands of consumers will not increase. If, however, expenditures are financed by borrowing from banks or by borrowing idle funds. the spendable income in the hands of consumers will increase greatly.

Individuals are expected to receive incomes approaching $150,000,000,000 during fiscal year 1944, over twice the income payments to individuals in fiscal year 1940. Such a huge rise creates a tremendous increase in demand for goods and services.

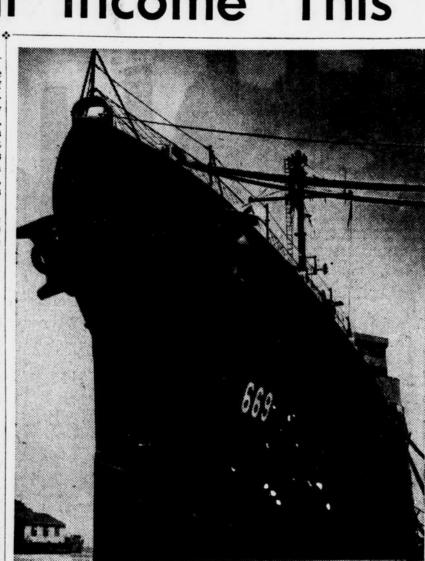

A considerable portion of this enlarged income and demand for goods results from full employment of many millions of workers who were formerly either unemployed or underemployed or were not seeking employment in the years before the defense and war effort. Such persons now have money to buy more necessities and even luxuries.

Near Capacity Production.

The Government directly or indirectly is employing more than onehalf of the total labor force either in military service or in war production. In view of this fact, sooner or later a drastic reduction in the supply of goods and in the services available for civilian consumption was bound to result. These facts did not make themselves felt during the earlier phases of the defense and war effort because our economy was running far below its capacity. Industrial production (measured by the Federal reserve index of production) increased by 68 per cent from fiscal 1940 to fiscal 1943. Thus we were able to increase war production and civilian production at the same time. In recent months the index of production has not increased substantially, which indicates that we are approaching the capacity of production with our available manpower

I do believe, however, that a further increase in production is possible if Government, management and labor constructively tackle the problems of the most effective use of our resources. This could be our objective, since we shall feel the full impact of the curtailment in less essential civilian supplies as our large cushion of inventories disappears We must recognize clearly that war expenditures are creating an increase in the demand for civilian goods while the supply of these very goods is decreasing. Many of us must reduce our accustomed standportion of our labor force and labor people believe, to taxes, rationing and other governmental controls. ### Schiaparelli Plans To Commercialize North African Crafts

Mme. Elsa Schiaparelli, noted French dress designer, hopes to go to North Africa soon to launch the production of new materials to be woven by the natives. She believes that in making the natives realize the commercial value of their crafts she also will be helping them.

"Nothing is decided," Mme. Schiaparelli said during an interview here Friday, "but I would like to produce something for the American market from North Africa." Her idea is "purely commercial," not furthered by the intention of starting a new fashion.

The stylist spoke with enthusiasm of the embroidery worked by the Atabs in silk as well as in gold and silver. They are also skilled in the use of dyes, especially blues and oranges, she said.

In the event that Mme. Schiaparelli should be able to carry out her plan in North Africa, she will be helped by Mme. Guillaume Georges-Picot, whose husband, former counselor of the French Embassy here, is now in charge of the civil cabinet under Gen. Henri Giraud.

A woman is never "quite smart without a hat" says this fashion deadmits "it is better for the hair not to wear them.'

Leg makeup she feels is here to stay as a summer fad, but due to the difference in leather and in styles of shoes she doubts its popularity during the winter.

Mme. Schiaparelli also told of the many hours she devotes to the canteen for French sailors in New York. Reich Called 'Too Healthy' The canteen is only three months old, but it has already made a great success, increasing enormously in size. She said the canteen had 950 guests last Sunday night.

Other eyewitness reports received here told this story: Altoona and other parts of the Hamburg harbor area were flattened and in the harbor itself there was such disorder that no control of any kind exists.

Even German authorities estimate 10.000 dead, explain the high casualties by saying the people "didn't expect such furious raids.

The alarm system failed last Sunday. One sailor went to a shelter, but when he emerged the entire house above it had been blown away.

LONDON, July 31.-Hans Fritsche, German political commentator, admitted tonight that "rumors" were circulating in Germany, but declared the "German nation is too healthy" to be really affected by them. At the start of his usual broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, Fitsche said: "The last week has brought a series of new developments which weighed heavily on us and our nation, while they were well received by our enemies. They were the replacement of Mussolini by Badoglio and the new heavy terror raids on

Bedtime Story ... WELL WORTH TELLING

Once upon a time a man had to get up to go to work . . . even as you and I. But wonder upon wonders, he wasn't as tired when he awoke as when he "hit the hay." He couldn't quite realize what had happened until his better-half whispered into his ear, "Don't you realize you are sleeping on our new headboard bed with a new spring and mattress?" "Ah," he ah'd, "that's a swell bedtime story . . . and make my shower lukewarm, please."

The Hecht Co. has another bedtime story to tell. It's one about variety. If you're looking for a divan for company to sit on, and you to sleep on . . . you'll find it here in a choice of styles. And perhaps you want to pretty up your bedroom with modern, headboard beds. They're here, too, in tasteful array with springs and mattresses that complete the outfit. You'll find folding beds and bunk beds that won't dwarf your small apartment or room. And that's not all, by a long shot. Sofa beds, studio divans and Hollywood beds that do double-duty as charming sofas during the day, and comfortable beds at night. Also woods or simulated leather headboard beds for your own bedroom and for the guest room. Separate springs and mattresses, just in case your old ones have seen better days.

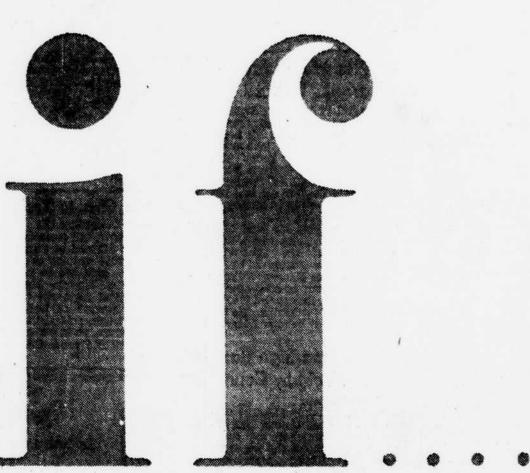

Yes, we're slumber specialists from 'way back . . . from the towering, canopied poster-bed days to the present-day streamlined studio divans and headboard beds. We know that a good night's sleep means a good day's work . . . so come to our wideawake, air-cooled Bedding Department and "rest assured" when it's time to douse the lights.

• Waste is unthinkable . . Extravagance is out . . and Lavish Splurging on Needed Commodities is in strict violation of our country's objectives.

• America's retailers are thus faced with a dual problem . . (first) to support the Government's economic program . . and (second) to give every customer an equal opportunity to secure the essentials for daily living.

• These problems can be simplified a million-fold if the consumers of America will exercise moderate restraint in their purchases . . . and give a thought to the "other fellow" and his needs . . a spirit of fairness which is typically American.

• As we approach the month of August, America's Retail Stores customarily prepare large supplies of WHITE GOODS ... because it has been traditional for American housewives to replenish their needs at this season of the year.

· Consequently, we have provided the best possible stocks of White Goods . . sheets, and towels and spreads and comforters and blankets . . and the countless essential commodities that are needed in every home . . . all at Regular Prices.

• Adequate stocks, you ask? Yes . . . adequate for every reasonable, normal, sensible, legitimate need of our consumers . . IF every American will buy only the things he needs.

Ilent

• Uncle Sam has not asked any of us to forego the necessities of civilian life. He wants us to have a clean sheet for the bed .. a good towel for the bath .. and a warm blanket to sleep under when the cold winds begin to blow.

• We have those things for you, . in ample quantities . . in the best assortments at our command . . and we have enough to assure adequate supplies for our customers . . IF everybody is satisfied with his share.

• We ask our patrons to take careful check of their household needs at this time . . and where it is necessary to replenish supplies, we stand ready to serve you . . with the White Goods you customarily purchase at this time of the year. You'll find them in good assortment . . and fairly priced . . in the Domestic Departments of The Hecht Co.

• But we'd like to repeat this vital thought .. Before you buy make sure you'll need the things you're buying . . so that everyone will get an equal share.

RICHMOND, July 31.-The liquor ration in Virginia will be cut in half, effective after midnight tonight.

It was impossible to shift the delivery dates, the board said, because the schedules with the carriers were based on ODT mileage regulations and were not flexible.

Gen. Gregory, here to inspect the Chicago quartermaster depot, said the Army inventory of food and clothing was unusually good because the Quartermaster Corps purchased more than 50 per cent of its yearly quotas the first half of the year.

He indicated there might soon be a reduction in the allocation of wool for the armed services which would release supplies for civilian needs sufficient to further postpone possible clothing rationing.

By the Associated Press.

CHUNGKING, Sunday, Aug. 1-China severed relations with the Vichy government of France today and took over the administration of that section of the Yunnan-French Indo-China Railway which lies in Chinese territory.

The action was announced in a special declaration by the Chinese government, which accused Vichy of committing a "series of acts unfriendly to China."

It said, however, that the Chinese government would "continue to afford due protection to French nationals resident in China in accordance to the general principles of international law."

The declaration cited among the "more serious" of Vichy's unfriendly acts to China an agreement enabling Japan to use Indo-China as a base of military operations against China; acquiescence in Japan occupation of French-leased territory in Kwangchowan in February, and agreement with the Nanking puppets for relinquishment of French extra-territorial rights and rendition of French concessions in China. A Foreign Office representative explained that China had taken over administration of the Chinese stretch of the Yunnan-Indo-China railway under regulations providing that "if China is at war with a foreign country this railway may not observe rules of neutrality; it will be at the entire disposal of China.

The Chinese action came as China, headed by Paul Boncour, France, were passing through India en route to Algiers to join the French National Committee.

Oakes Had Visions Of Island 'Kingdoms' In Bahaman Area

By the Associated Pres NASSAU, Bahamas, July 31 .- A vision of every millionaire becoming a little "king" on his own island died with Sir Harry Oakes the night a slayer beat and burned him to death. Sir Harry, American-born gold miner whose wealth has been estimated as high as $200,000,000, himself owned nearly one-third of New Providence Island on which Nassau, the Bahamian capital, is situated. He discussed his idea among friends and associates. With the end of the war and the coming of popular small aircraft, he envisioned a castle and small landing field on every island, scores of which are uninhabitated and purchasable for a song in this area. Small islands might be owned by one family, larger ones divided among several. The owners would have the seclusion they sought, yet would have an airplane available to transport them at short notice to Nassau or the mainland.

Sir Harry knew the urge felt by many to own an island. The idea is not new in this area, the most famous example being Betty Carstairs' retreat in the Berry Island group. The former English motorboat racer has lived for several years on an island of her own.

As soon as the equalization plan is firmly established in the area east of the Rockies it probably will be extended to the rest of the country. Officials envision uniform national rationing with one set of rules. They said that under the plan allowances will be made for the inadequacy of transporation in many sections of the West as compared with the East. This problem will be handled through instructions to local ration boards as to issuance of supplementary rations.

It will be stressed in official instructions and pronouncements that car mileage is being rationed not entirely because of the shortage of gasoline, but because of the combined shortage of gasoline, rubber and repair parts. A rapidly diminishing supply of repair parts, it was said, has officials worried in gia Leftwich, Shirley Young, Mae view of the difficulty in stretching Wills, Mae Kinney, Carolina Ben- scarce steel and copper to meet the Donna Courter and Mimi needs of the armed services.

That Man Marshall Simply Can't Be Stopped

SAN DIEGO. Calif., July 31.—George Preston Marshall's fertile mind is steaming with the idea of making the world his football footstool, when peace reigns again. "We'll take our club," says the Washington Redskins' boss, "to Paris, London, Buenos Aires, Rio de Janeiro, anywhere we can get a crowd to see American football as it should be played. I wish we could start this year," and Marshall heaves a heavy sigh. "Of course we can't play football when we can't be sure there won't be a war where we're going.

It isn't globaloney dreaming, either, to hear the Redskin prexy describe the way he sees the peacetime football picture. Enthusiastic as only Marshall can be when football is the subject, George's eyes light up and he goes into his dream. "Won't -- anywhere in the world again and play football to crowds that never hy seen the game as it is played by a championship club?" he asks.

Might Use All Stars

Perhaps he pictures the Redskins as the perpetual champions of the National Football League, which they might be, at that, as long as they have Sammy Baugh. Perhaps with the Marshall enthusiasm and go-getting, he can gather an allstar team from the entire league. His plans aren't complete but he American football a global game.

Marshall always has been a man of ideas and one who gets things done no matter what the obstacles. Take the little item of getting together a football team this year, in the face of all the troubles the man had to overcome. A month ago it seemed as if the Skins might be lucky to have 18 or 20 men. Now they have more than 30, almost enough for three complete teams.

CLEVELAND, July 31.-Gunder Haegg outdistanced three American competitors tonight to win a speedy 1-mile run at the Baldwin-Wallace track in 4:05.4, a 10th slower than his United States best of 4:05.3.

Haegg, whose time was slower than marks he and his countryman. Arne Andresson, established in Sweden, took the lead in the second quarter mile and kept it all the way to finish 5 yards ahead of Bill Hulse, speedy New York University freshman.

Hulse crossed the finish line a yard ahead of Gil Dodds in an even 4 minutes, 6 seconds, best outdoor time by an American runners.

Les Eisenhart, former Big Ten mile champion from Ohio State, was a poor fourth. Hulse's time was seven-tenths of a second faster than Glenn Cunningham's old record of 4:06.7, which fell to Haegg last week.

Eisenhart set the pace at the quar-ter, where he was timed in 59 seconds, and then Haegg, his long hair flopping with each stride, went ahead to stay. He was timed at the half in 2:02 and at the three-quarter mark in 3:03 but couldn't quite keep up the pace the fourth time around.

Records Show Wright, Aviles Well Matched For Big Bout Here

A week from tomorrow night Promoter Joe Turner comes back with a couple of featherweight fistic attractions at Griffith Stadium that promise to be among the high lights of the season.

Turner is bringing in Chalky Wright, veteran from Los Angeles who formerly was the featherweight champion, and Angel Aviles, the Mexican titleholder, for a 10-round headliner.

Turner is throwing in for good measure a special added 10-round feature between Danny Petro, the little southpaw kayo king from Southeast Washington, against Johnny Cockfield, a New York colored battler.

Wright Won Title Here.

Wright is no new face. It was in Washington that Chalky, former stablemate of Henry Armstrong, won the featherweight title (New York vession) from Joey Archibald. 9th-Inning Hit, 2-1 Later he came back, still as champion, to lambast Leo Rodak at Uline's.

Aviles is beng handled for his American campaign by Jack Laken. Until he is called up by the Mexican Army, Aviles plans an active drive to win the feather title, says Laken. Since his arrival last April he has given a good account of himself. Never the one to be choosey about opponents, Aviles lost to Willie hero of a pitching duel with lame-Pep in 10 rounds at Tampa after armed Whit Wyatt. He is putting Petro against a rugged featherweight in Cockfield, a boy who lost to Pep after 10 tough rounds and drew with Tony Costa, Terry Young and Pedro Hernandez.

brought out a neat point the other day. It was Carl's idea that too many good ballplayers were left in the minors too long, and often were facing baseball's middle age before they were given a big-league chance. We'll give you a leading example along this line. The name is Roaring Rip Sewell of the Pirates, now the leading pitcher in both leagues. Rip was born in Decatur, Ala., 35

vears ago. For the first eight years of his wanderings Sewell pitched for Nashville, Raleigh, Toronto, Beaumont, Detroit, Seattle, Toledo, Louisville and Buffalo. Rip was 30 years old before he reported to Pittsburgh, at an age of baseball servitude when most pitchers are supposed to be over the hill. Or at least facing in that general direction. In spite of this late start Alabama

Rip turned in 57 victories in four years for Pittsburgh up through 1942. A year ago, at the age of 34, Sewell won 17 games for the Pirates. Winning 17 games for the Pirates made it four in a row today over last season was no kindergarten work.

Hagen Is on Hot Spot As His Team Plays Ryder Linksmen

DETROIT, July 31 .- Walter Hagen never was much of a hand at losing, but unless he can guide his challenge squad to victory next week end the Haig will fall near the foot of the class in Ryder Cup golf competition.

In the international series with England before the war, Hagen led the Americans to four victories in six matches, but his teams have won only one of three in the war-orphaned domestic series that has raised $50,000 for war relief and promises to add another $30,000. Hagen's squad of pro talent tackles, Craig Wood's cup team over Detroit's rolling Plum Hollow course next week end, trying to square accounts for a resounding 10-to-5 defeat suffered a year ago. Play opens with 18-hole four-ball matches on Saturday, topped by 36-hole hand-to-hand singles battles on Sunday.

Haig Has Four Leftovers.

The Haig has four holdovers from his 1942 squad—Sam Byrd, Lighthorse Harry Cooper, Jim Thomson and Melvin (Chick) Harbert. Three newcomers are Bobby Cruickshank, Willie Goggin and O'Neil (Buck) Ross, the Greenwood, Miss., shotmaker who was runnerup in the meet

If Sergt. Clayton Heafner can arrange leave, he'll be the eighth Metz or Henry Picard.

Wood's cup team has seven holdovers in Harold (Jug) McSpaden, winner at Tam o' Shanter; Gene Sarazen, Jimmy Demaret, Byron Nelson, Lloyd Mangrum, Sergt. Vic Ghezzi and Wood himself. Seaman Sammy Snead, who was on the 1941 cup squad, may be the eighth, with Al Watrous and Frank Walsh as alternates.

Will Advance Big Sum.

In three previous matches, Detroiters have contributed $50,000 to the Red Cross and USO. John Fagan Does a Job. An outstanding salesman was John R. Fagan, treasurer of the Safeway Bowling League, whose members bought bonds to the tune of $10,250. Fagan picked up another $10,000 from the Meat Cutters Local No. 555 and $10,450 from other sources for a total of $30,650.

Dolly Puryear, who opposed Madge Lewis last Monday night in a 50-game match that set a women's duckpin endurance record, besides winning a number of prizes in the tournament tallied $6.700 in sales and Dave Burrows, active in the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, turned up with $5,175. The Frederick Generator team of Baltimore, which came over to bowl the Merry Sand Club quint in a tournament special, brought along $2,975 in bond money.

Two outstanding figures in the campaign were Roy Coffman and Charley Kopeland of Silver Spring. ### TDOORS With BILL ACKERMAN.

An extra 30 minutes of shooting daily is the single concession to wildfowlers for the 1943 hunting season. The regulations governing the shooting of migratory birds permits firing 30 minutes before sunrise and, accordingly, lengthens the season by approximately 30 hours, or just a little more than a day.

This additional time is of doubtful value and, like most other wildfowlers, we would have preferred to have had it at the end of the day. But this would have brought us back perilously close to the old "dusking" -the shooting that in the half-light of dusk was responsible for more cripples and lost birds than any other single phase of the game.

As last year, shooting must stop at sunset. Wildfowlers in this area had little to complain about last season, but they were more fortunate than fore, with the prospect of larger also will be better and any change makes little difference so far as hunters around here are concerned. It is hoped it will help in the less favored areas.

Physostegias By W. H. Youngman. Gardeners seeking summer-flowering perennials that are hardy and dependable should not overlook the physostegias. The physostegias are commonly known by their botanical name, although a plant as long cultivated as they have been has many common names. False-dragonhead is probably the best known although "Obedient Plant" and "Accomodation-flower" are more descriptive. The flowers remain in any position to which they may be turned, thus these two names are fitting. This characteristic should appeal particularly to those who specialize in flower arrangements. The physostegias prefer light shade to full sun and a moist, rather rich soil. Clumps in a favorable situation often persist for many years with little or no attention. However, they do best if lifted and thinned every few years. They spread underground stems and soon become too crowded for best growth. In this characteristic they resemble the chrysanthemum. They are vigorous growers and so the soil should be enriched to keep them at their best. The physostegias should be lifted in the spring and thinned out. The rapid growing clumps need food and moisture to make their best showing which is rather difficult in poor soils Too often our summers are hot and dry and they are stunted, but when well planted in a rich soil they make an excellent display. Some gardeners set the individual plants two feet apart, but many others prefer to have them closer, 8 to 12 inches apart.

Since the plants, with the excep-. tion of "Vivid," grow to a height of 4 feet or more they should be placed towards the back of the border. The white form does not need a background, but the pale pink and lilac tinted forms need something green behind them to make the most efflowers are growing nearby.

they escape from that pest. The physostegias are not new to American gardens, but too many may be divided into five periods:

Physostegias, those lovely perennials that flower in late summer, deserve wider attention from local gardeners. Effective in mass plantings, to bring a flash of color to beds and borders, they are equally useful in cut-flower arrangements. The hardy, rapid-growing plants do well in light shade or in sun. J. Mrs. Albert W. Atwood, chairman; Fred S. Walker and P. Y. K. Howat, members of the Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board, said matters dealt with in the proposed code included "reasonable standards of safety in employment, places of employment, in the use of devices and safeguards and in the use of practices, means, methods, operations and processes of employment." Mrs. Atwood said any one interested could obtain copies of the proposed code by calling the offices of the board, Room 4050, Municipal Center Building, and would be permitted to testify at the hearing.

The proposed code covers a wide range of subjects related to work in the construction industry and details of safety measures deemed pecessary and prescribes the responsibility of any employer of labor in furnishing and ordering measures and facilities required to insure the safety of employes.

For instance, the proposed code prescribes that life nets, catch platforms, safety belts or life lines must be provided for the protection of employes at stations more than 20 feet above the ground or other safe place, where the use of ladders or substantial work platforms is impracticable or for other reasons are not available.

Nazi Staff Plays Cagey Game To Prevent Complete Defeat

By Constantine Brown.

The Axis is broken. That "indestruc- | races" such as the Poles, Czechs, French tible chain of steel," as Mussolini and Hitler used to describe their alliance which was intended to go "twice around the world," exists no longer.

The United Nations will have to fight henceforth only two separate enemies. the Nazis and the Japanese, who have no connecting link either physical or ideological. From the military point of view the Italians have not been a worrisome enemy. Their presence on the side of the Germans has proved to be a burden to the Nazis. Italy was too poor a country to be able to produce the war materials she needed. The army could never fight anybody. When Il Duce decided to jump on little Greece because he figured that an army like his could easily defeat the small Greek Army, he was defeated. Since the Nazis would not help him his troops met disaster.

Mussolini's "victory" against the French when they lay prostrate at the feet of the Germans did not show off his men as valiant warriors either. A French regiment held out for several days in the mountain passes of the Maritime Alps against an Italian force four times their strength until it received orders from Vichy to lay down Its arms and withdraw.

Thus while Italy is not an asset to anybody from a military point of view, the occupation of that country-or possibly the co-operation of what is left of the Italian Army-with the Allies might facilitate our operations against the Reich.

Fought Well on Piave.

There has been only one instance when the Italians fought as well as any other army. That was in 1917 after the disaster at Caporetto, when reorganized Italian divisions, assisted only by a small Allied force, held back and eventually defeated a numerically superior German-Austrian force. They fought for their own homeland then. It is conceivable that should the Nazis now decide to annex the northern part of Italy between Venice and Turin to establish a front against an Allied invasion across the River Po and the Alps, the Italians may do as well as they did on the Piave River 26 years ago.

The Italians have proved such inefficient soldiers in the past because they fought for causes in which the rank and file of the people were not interested. The Italians are not imperial minded. Mussolini tried to make them so with alien property custodian, is a card bear- it ordered the restoration of 80 per cent of all German property.

U. S. Turns Seized Alien Assets Into Weapons of Economic War

It is possible that terms of the peace settlement will be generous in respect to enemy assets held by the United Nations. American individuals who have bought stock in subsidiaries of German cartels operating in this country may be tempted by lavish bids to resell to the original owners. This transaction occurred on so large a scale after World War I that an attorney of the Department of Justice recently made this caustic pronouncement: "The Allies won the war, but I. G. Farben won the peace."

One action of important effect was taken by the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice, before its investigations were halted for the duration by the Army and Navy. Under threat of criminal prosecution, various American corporations which were associates of German cartels signed consent decrees pledging themselves to breach all contracts with their alien partners. In addition, such American companies were forced to release to industry in general their backlog of monopolistic German patents, including the formula for synthetic rubber. The department plans to resume its antitrust activities the moment peace arrives.

The United States today is far better prepared for economic battle than it was 25 years ago. Its position as a creditor nation and the flight of European capital before 1939 placed billions of foreign wealth in easy reach. The good neighbor policy of the Roosevelt administration has lately borne fruit in Latin American co-operation such as could not have been anticipated even a few months ago.

No Delay This Time.

President Wilson was so tardy in setting up his Office of Alien Property Custodian that it did not get into operation until after the armistice. There was only a rudimentary exchange control instead of the present foreign funds control in the Treasury Department, which went to war six months before Pearl Harbor and unleashed a redoubtable arsenal of weapons against the Axis. New also is the Office of Economic Warfare, formerly the Board of Economic Warfare. which provides shock troops and commando units in "the war behind the war."

Above all, the German strategy of economic penetration has been studied closely for five years, and should no have few secrets for American experts. It was in 1938 that the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice launched a major campaign against American associates of foreign cartels. The mass of information unearthed was supplemented at hearings of the Senate Committee on Patents. Valuable contributions to the body of knowledge were added by the Temporary National Economic Committee and the Truman Com-

Before Pearl Harbor, German owners of the copyright offered the work for sale in the United States at $2,000 a set. The cost was beyond the purse of most individuals and of many libraries and professional associations. Having seized the copyright, Crowley was able to slash the price to $400, by utilizing the camera going to get a rest, but facsimile process. Hitler's American bank account is small item beside the $7,000,000,000 in cash, securities, patents, copyrights, plant equipment and other property of which custodial authorities have dispossessed nationals of enemy and occupied countries. But its fate casts a revealing glimpse into the gulf between practices of the first and second World Wars, and suggests a partial reply to the question as to whether the United States, in regard to alien assets, will repeat the costly blunders of 25 years ago. mittee. At that time the sacredness of private property, as a right in itself, was unquestioned. Government agencies regarded themselves as trustees, bound by capitalist morality to keep enemy assets unimpaired and administer them efficiently. All-out economic warfare was undreamed of. Today the idea of trusteeship has been flung from the window. The ruling purpose is that of setting all hostile resources under seizure at full-time work not for the advantage of the original owners but for promotion of the national war effort. In order to cancel profits, German patents and copyrights have been issued free of charge to American business. Enemy bank accounts have been enlisted wholesale for the purchase of War bonds.

speeches and glowing promises. He tried to make these peace and song-loving people into fierce warriors and succeeded as much as the owner of Ferdinand the Bull. The bull of the juvenile rhymes who had been trained and especially prepared to be the best in the arena decided when the time for fighting came to sit down and smell flowers. So did the Italian people.

For more than two decades Mussolini tried to instill in the Italians all the qualities of fighters they never had. He squandered every cent in Italy's treasury toward that end. But when the day came for Italy to enter the bloody battle arena its soldiers preferred to surrender and lead a peaceful life in some prison camp instead of fighting with the fierceness Mussolini attempted to instill into them. They were just not interested in Italy becoming a world power and reestablishing the old Roman Empire.

Not Overoptimistic.

But when stock is being taken of the results of the collapse of Italy, military | be acceptable to Premier Stalin. men are not indulging in overoptimism that the war is coming to an end in the near future.

There is no question that the downfall of Mussolini and Fascism will have some moral effect on the people of the Reich. But this effect is not being overestimated by the Allied general staff. The Germans despised the Italians because they were poor fighters. Nazi military and civil authorities running that country are said to have sent desperate reports to Berlin about the hopelessness of their task. They described their efforts to organize Italy on the German pattern of efficiency and complained bitterly not only about the venality of the Italian officials-this is well understood in Germany where the Nazi officials are not loath to make money on the side-but about their lack of initiative and the little enthusiasm they had for the war.

At this time there seems little likelihood that Germany will shortly follow the Italians. Although the Nazi troops are not what they were in the early stages of the war there still is a good deal of fight in them.

This has been illustrated in the Sicilian campaign. The 7th American Army commanded by Gen. George Patton, jr., was assigned to an area defended almost exclusively by Italians. The operations of this army were like a military march. There has been some fighting here and there, but on the whole the main task of Gen. Patton was to take care of the tens of thousands of Italians who arrived in droves all ready to be sent to a prison camp.

The 8th British Army under the command of Gen. Bernard Montgomery-the best the British have in the field-was assigned to the eastern coast where the Nazis sent two divisions. Montgomery was stalled for almost two weeks and suffered heavy losses because the Nazis would not give in. They fought to the last although out numbered and lacking the pir protection that had been used in their previous European campaigns.

Real Fight to Come.

If the battle for Sicily is to be taken as a yardstick of the Nazi resistance against the Allies, then we must assume that our main effort in Europe has not begun yet. although Italy has been knocked out of picture. But outside this situation which might complicate matters, the Germans more difficulty than the Italians disposed of Mussolini.

The German general staff is watching the situation carefully. It is not particularly concerned with an invasion of the Reich this year. The German generals know that at this time the Allies have enough forces to go into Italy and may even break into some of the Balkan countries such as Yugoslavia or Greece. But they believe that we have not had time yet to muster a sufficiently strong force to begin our major job-the cracking of the German defenses. What is worrying them now is Russia, where they are fighting for their life. Should they be able to stem the Russian offensive and cause the Red armies heavy losses, the German generals believe that they might be able to "talk" to the Russians on the basis of disposing of the Nazi regime and adopting a liberal form of government which might

These generals, who in the middle and late twenties assisted the reorganization of the Soviet armies and supervised the building of new factories for war materials in Russia, still believe their best bet for escaping the severe punishment promised them by American and the British leaders, is to convince the USSR to talk peace before the Allied armies force their way into the Reich. They hope to convince the Russian leader that the physical exhaustion of Russia and Germany will profit neither country in the end. And basing their arguments

In serving without Government pay, Crowley says it is his belief that more businessmen should participate actively in Government.

Although he derives additional income from the General Paper & Supply Co. of Madison, Wis., which he owns, associates nevertheless aver that he is not a wealthy man.

He formerly was president of a Madison bank, and has held many directorships, both industrial and mercantie. His governmental service, besides the three jobs he now holds, includes chairmanship of the State Banking Review Board, which reorganized Wisconsin banks after the banking holiday; development of a plan for agricultural credit extension which ultimately became the basis of the national Farm Credit Administration; director of the Farm Credit Administration's Northwest region, with headquarters at St. Paul.

Prefers FDIC Job.

The job he likes best of all is that of chairman of the FDIC. He organized it himself. It's his baby and he says he wants to stay with it as long as he is in Government. Under FDIC, the Government insures individual bank deposits up to $5,000 each. Chairman Crowley, in a recent report, stated that deposit insurance now is providing full protection for more than 56 million accounts.

Getting organized as alien property custodian in March of last year was more difficult. It was harder to build a staff, Crowley says, but he borrowed some of 1

The President's choice of Crowley to head OEW, in the reshuffle after the dispute between Commerce Secretary Jesse Jones and Vice President Henry Wallace. is generally attributed-quite aside from his other recognized abilities-to his knack of getting a job done with the least amount of confusion and conflict.

Settles Dispute.

Crowley's appointment last year as custodian of alien property was used by President Roosevelt to settle a dispute between the Treasury and the State Department. He has acted as peacemaker more than once, before that, between the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board. the Reconstruction Finance Corp. and the Controller of the Currency.

Born at Milton Junction, Wis., August 15, 1889, Crowley was educated in primary and secondary schools of Madison, Wis., and at the University of Wisconsin. He began work as a delivery boy in a grocery store. He never forgets his supreme disappointment one Christmas eve when he expected a special present from the grocer for working hard and far into the night, and the grocer repaid him only with the wish, "Merry Christmas."

Ten years later, after working his way through the university and graduating with a Phi Beta Kappa key, he became joint owner of the store.

In the succeeding years he has owned a wholesale paper company, a wholesale grocery house, an oil-distributing company, a chain of grocery stores and a bank.

Though he never has run for office, been known to repeat himself.

He's an impressive figure-5 feet 10. 190 pounds-his ruddy face crowned by snow-white hair, his rather somber eves accentuated by frosty brows.

His demeanor is as cool as his airconditioned office. His only mannerism is toying with whichever of his two pairs of spectacles he isn't wearing. A meticulous dresser, he wears expensive cravats, double-breasted suits which he has made by a Madison tailor, and hats which he buys three at a time.

He cats lightly, a raw apple for dessert, his coffee black, remembering, perhaps, 1938 when he got overweight and had to whisk off 30 pounds.

Nazi Troops Restless

Rebellions, brawls, desertions and suicides are becoming more and more frequent among the German occupation troops on the Belgian coast.

At Middelkerke, in a ballroom, where the Todt Engineering Organization was having a banquet (three pigs had been slaughtered for the occasion), an officer turned a huge portrait of Hitler to the wall. This was the signal for a general brawl in which 50 of the guests were more or less seriously wounded. At Nieuwpoort, Westende and Middelkerke the German police conducted a four-day search for deserters.

At Westende the local police discovered in an uninhabited villa the bodies of two German soldiers. A revolver was found near them on the floor.

At an inn between Middelkerke and Ostend two Germans committed suicide with a revolver and a third was found hanging from the rafters.

The body of a German sailor was pulled from Nieupoort Harbor.

Future Is Unpredictable.

Whether German, Italian and Japanese capital will eventually be restored depends on factors which cannot be predicted. If the Allies are victorious, it might be confiscated as a measure of indemnity. In case of a stalemate, it would probably be used in trading for the return of vast quantities of American cash, securities and plant equipment seized by the Germans in Occupied

Europe. Congress might again lapse into Spearhead agencies, such as OEW. APO and FFC, have reared a breed of ruthless, adroit and tough-fibered civilian warriors who are now veterans of many an encounter with the best champions of the Axis. A steel ring has been forged around the United States and to a large degree about the Western Hemisphere.

The front-line establishments and their chieftains are the Foreign Funds Control of the Treasury, Assistant Secretary John W. Brown, and the Office of the Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs, Nelson A. Rockefeller. Work Well Together.

There is no centralized command for the 10 divisions of the economic warfare army, but they are declared to work together efficiently enough on an informal basis. Communication among the various headquarters is constant, and information gained by one is swiftly passed on to the others.

The pioneer emergency establishment was the Treasury's Foreign Funds Control, which was set up on April 10, 1940. for the purpose of making futile any duress exercised by Germany upon nationals of subject countries who had assets in the United States. Operations for 14 months were simply protective. Payment orders on bank balances were blocked to safeguard the owners from Nazi extortion. The agency passed over to the aggressive on June 14, 1941, when German and Nazi assets were frozen. Identical measures with regard to Japan followed on July 26.

The next agency to be created was the Economic Defense Board, on January 30, 1941. Ten days after Pearl Harbor the name was changed to the Board of Economic Warfare. Up to April 13, 1942, its powers were strictly advisory. On that date the board was advanced to the firing line by an executive order conferring broad new powers. The German people did not need to have rammed down their throats the idea that the Reich must be a world power. This has existed in the minds of the people ever since the days of Frederick the Great and has continued through the centuries to date.

Our Swollen Population

There is an official answer now from the Census Bureau to the question so many people have been asking recently: "How big is Washington?" Preliminary estimates of the bureau on the civilian population for March 1 put the figure at 839,013. an increase of 180,995 since the last decennial census in 1940. This figure indicates that perhaps Washington has suffered its worst growing pains, for it reveals an increase of only 17,714 since May 1 of last year. If the new estimate, to be "revised at a later date on the basis of supplementary data which are not yet available." comes as any surprise, it is because the estimate is not a more generous one. Last September the Board of Trade calculated the population at 863,000, while the National Capital Park and Planning Commission placed it at 850,000 around the first of October.

Barring any radical increase in population before the end of the war, the next question is just how big the city will be in the postwar period. The answer is important to businessmen and to city and Federal planners, for it involves the prospects for postwar business and the probable need for schools, highway and other public works.

Experience after the last war was that of a steady increase in population, despite a drop in the number of Federal employes. In the report last union scales, and under the conditions which must be met by any other symphony orchestra management, it is going to cost him more than the half million dollars he said he was ready to spend. For Mr. Petrillo has made music expensive in this country. To furnish it free is a privilege that only a czar can afford.

The Cost of War

The cost of the war, in dollars and cents, with its staggering totals, is the high light of President Roosevelt's summation of the budget for the fiscal year 1944, which began July 1 and ends June 30, 1944. The goal is a hundred-billion-dollar expenditure, a figure so fantastic that 8.00 it may fail to impinge upon the consciousness of the man in the street. or anybody else for that matter.

In his original and supplementary budget estimates, transmitted to Congress, the President recommended a total appropriation of $108,156,593,899. More than 100 billion dollars was for war activities; $2.700,000,000 was for interest on the public debt and $4,745,000,000 for the other activities of government, the so-called civil functions. Congress has appropriated, up to date, about 105 billion dollars. It lopped some three billion off the estimates for war activities, but added two billion in "contract authorizations." The net result was a reduction of a billion. In view of the grand total, this reduction is almost infinitesimal. Emergency war agencies, however, were > cut 387 million. No reduction was made for the payment of interest on the debt and the reduction in the appropriations for the civil functions of Government was approximately 116 million. Here it may be mentioned, however, that this appropriation is about a billion less than it was for the fiscal year 1942, reflecting the drive to cut the nonwar expenditures of Government to the bone.

The over-all picture as presented by the President showed that the total war program, measured by appropriations, contract authorizations and Government corporation commitments, voted since July, 1940, amounts to $330 billion. Of this total, $232 billion was appropriated for the three-year period ending June 30, 1943. While $212 billion of the latter figure has been obligated, only $110 billion had actually been expended up to June 30.

It is this great spread between appropriations and obligations, on the one hand, and between obligations and cash expenditures on the other, that has caused a demand in Congress for a halt on further huge appropriation bills, such as were put through in the first half of this year. Tremendous unexpended balances, in the opinion of congressional critics, lead inevitably to extravagance and waste. The other side of the picture is painted by the President, who calls attention to the need of placing war contracts and planning production many months ahead of delivery and payment. The Government collected 22 billion dollars in the fiscal year ending June 30, nearly all from taxation. It is estimated that during the present fiscal year the receipts will reach 38 billion, due to increased taxes and to the new Current Tax Payment Act. The President recommends that still stiffer taxes be imposed, in order to cut more deeply into the war expenditures and to prevent inflationary movements. It is obvious that the Government must continue to borrow many billions of dollars in order to finance the war effort and itself. The public debt, excluding obligations of Government corporations, amounted to 137 billion dollars on June 30. It is estimated the debt will increase another 69 billion during the present fiscal year, unless additional tax legislation is enacted and the revenues are increased thereby. If no such action is taken, then the public debt on June 30, 1944, will reach 206 billion. The impact on American economy of governmental spending of approximately 100 billion dollars a year—the figure which the President hopes to reach-is enormous. It places a huge sum of money in the hands of business and of individuals. The Government is directly or indirectly employing more than one-half of the total labor force of the country, either in military service or in war production. At the same time there has been drastic reduction in the goods and services which the civil population may purchase. As the President points out, the cost of living cannot be stabilized unless price and wage controls are supported by a substantial absorption of purchasattitude from Moscow than from ing power-and that absorption missions and two panels was suspended. With the exception of the Shipbuilding Commission, where a ruling still is held up, all have had their powers restored by the board's determination. In substance, the board's decision is that the units may function in any case in which their members are not immediately concerned. For example, as it is pointed out, an American Federation of Labor or CIO member legitimately could sit on a case involving an affiliate of those organizations with which he had no direct connection. Correspondingly, an industry member identified with the National Association of Manufacturers or Chamber of Commerce of the United States would not be barred from participating in a case involving an employer simply because the latter was a member of either. To interpret the law otherwise would be "wholly inconsistent" with its purpose, the board says, noting in this connection that in the eighteen months of its existence, its actions have never been challenged in a single case on the ground of personal interest of the members. The broad principle on which the board stands is that in the Connally-Smith Act, "Congress intended to take the board as it was, to accept and confirm its tri-partite character.

to strengthen its already existing authority, to add to its powers." When it is recalled that the act gave the board statutory authority, that is a sound argument.

Where Does Stalin Stand?

The diplomatic sensation sprung in Moscow eleven days ago has been intensified by the overturn in Italy which occurred four days later. It was on Wednesday, July 21, that Pravda, the official organ of the Russian Communist party, gave a full-page spread to a manifesto by an organization styling itself the Free German National Committee, warning its compatriots that the war was lost for them, that prolonged resistance would spell the doom of Germany and that the only way to avert that fate was to rise in revolt, overthrow Hitler and set up a revolutionary regime. By such action, declared the manifesto, the German people would "win the right to decide their fate themselves. In this manner it will attain peace and once again place Germany on an equal footing with other nations." The manifesto was signed by a list of names ranging from obscure war

Domestic Planning Neglected

By Owen L. Scott.

THE SUNDAY STAR, WASHINGTON, D. C., AUGUST 1, 1943.

Important officials are beginning to predict in private that this country is making a fundamental mistake in its planning for what comes after the war. That planning is devoted almost entirely to the problems of finding a basis for a new world order and almost not at all to the problem of adjustment to peace at home

The point is made that everybody from President Roosevelt down is assuming that prosperity will be assured in the United Sates for many years to come as a result of the purchasing power being built up during the war. Acting on that assumption, almost all thought of domestic postwar problems is being cast aside along with the men who are capable of doing the planning.

Instead of devoting attention to the staggering domestic difficulties that could come with peace, officials are hard at work on solutions of world difficulties ranging all the way from stabilization of currencies to methods of promoting and financing public works in China, South America and Europe.

But the idea is beginning to take hold among some informed officials here that this Government may be putting the cart before the horse. They point out that the United States accounts for more than one-half of the economic activity of the world. They argue that it was the depression in this country after 1929 that led to the intensified nationalism in Europe and elsewhere, culminating in the present war.

Peril of Past Conditions.

Their point now is that danger exists of a return to the sort of economic situation inside this country that can upset any world arrangements that may grow from the war. It is their idea that if the President and Congress would give primary thought to the problem of assuring prosperity in this country once the war ends, the postwar arrangement would be easier of solution.

It is demobilization that stands out as the staggering problem.

Once the war ends there will be great pressure to demobilize the bulk of this country's armed forces that will by that time total more than 10,000,000 men. At the same time there will be equally great pressure to end war production in a hurry. In war industry there will be nearly 20,000,000 persons at work. The country will have an inventory of between $50,000.000,000 and $100,000,000 in military equipment and will not be in a mood to go on adding to that equipment on a large scale. To demobilize 25,000,000 or even 20,- 000,000 men from the armed services and workers from industry, and to do that in a hurry, will require most careful plan-

The general convention also must elect a presiding bishop-whose chair already is waiting in Washington Cathedral. Upon the character and personality of the man chosen to the highest office of the church the pace of progress at Mount St. Alban will depend. Should the general convention fail to act, the Cathedral in the Nation's Capital would remain what it was in Bishop Freeman's time and, to a lesser extent, in the conception of both of his forerunners-Right. Rev. Henry Yates Satterlee and Right Rev. Alfred Harding. That is, it would be "a house of prayer for all people" and "a witness to Christ" at the center of the Nation's life but not by formal stipulation the headquarters of the Protestant Episcopal communion. To understand the present problem, it is helpful to know that the movement in behalf of Washington Cathedral is older than the diocese of Washington. It began as a national enterprise under the leadership of the Right Rev. William Paret, bishop of Maryland, in 1891. The charter of the Cathedral Foundation was granted by Congress in 1893. Two years later, the diocese of Washington, consisting of the District of Columbia and the southern part of Maryland, was "set off" from the old diocese of Maryland. Bishop Satterlee was consecrated first bishop of the new jurisdiction in 1896. Shortly thereafter the Cathedral Close, a tract of 67 acres at the intersection of Massachusetts and Wisconsin avenues, was acquired. Bishop Satterlee, who "pioneered the Cathedral as a temple worthy of the living God," laid the foundation stone and died within a few months after that ceremony, February 22, 1908. He had survived to kneel in prayer in his own room with the walls hung with the preliminary drawings for the Cathedral made by George F. Bodley of London and his pupil, Henry Vaughan of Boston. The architects actually to be credited with the fabric as it stands today, however, are Frohman, Robb & Little, who were engaged in 1917.

God?

week of the Conference on Postwa Readjustment of Civilian and Military Personnel, sponsored by the former National Resources Planning Board, the exodus of Federal employes at the end of the last war is described as a "stampede." The word "stampede" seems a bit strong. Actually, Civil Service figures indicate that the number of Federal employes in Washington dropped only from 117,760 on November 11, 1918, to 102.117 on June 30, 1919. By July of the following year there were 90,559, a decrease of about 23 per cent in twenty-one months. Even if a similar "stampede" took place after this war. Washington still would have somewhere around 215,000 Government workers, considerably more than the 133,823 it had in June, 1940, before the war.

In any event, aside from academic fiddling with statistics, John Nolen, chief planner of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, believes that Washington will be a growing community for a long time after the war. He believes, too, that an expansion in service trades, now feeling the pinch of manpower shortages, will help take up the slack in Federal employment. Under any conditions, however, a slack will be welcome.

Music Comes High By waving his magic wand, President James C. Petrillo of the American Federation of Musicians seems to be able to stop or start almost anything he wants to stop or start in the field of music. But he has set many people to figuring over how he proposes to carry out his plan of providing some 570 free concerts by the Nation's leading orchestras for the smaller communities lacking opportunity to hear good music. If he can do it, fine! But when he talks about donating $250,000-"double that if found necessary"-for 570 concerts by the orchestras he listed, he is not talking the language of the orchestra manager who has to meet an orchestra pavroll.

The operating expenditure for the New York Philharmonic for a season of 129 concerts will run close to $600,000. The Boston Symphony, most expensive in the country, runs higher by perhaps $100,000. The Minneapolis Orchestra pays out more than $250,000 for about seventy-two concerts. In recent years our own National Symphony Orchestra's operating expenses were about $175,000 for seventy-eight concerts. So it goes. Operating costs for thirteen of the Nation's leading symphony orchestras-including all but four of those listed by Mr. Petrillo for his concert tours-for 1,124 concerts given in one recent season totaled $3.870,000, and their operating deficits after sale of tickets and all other forced savings or both. Although the Moscow authorities pointed out to resident foreign corespondents that the Soviet government was not committed to the program outlined in the manifesto of a committee which had not been officially recognized, the event has been generally interpreted abroad as bearing Soviet approval and probably Soviet inspiration. Pravda is unquestionably the mouthpiece of the Russian Communist party and its head, Joseph Stalin. It is unlikely that such a document would appear in Pravda without Mr. Stalin's approbation. Furthermore, the manifesto was republished in the Russian press generally, was broadcast repeatedly over the Russian radio and was dropped in leaflet form by Soviet Army flyers over the German lines on the eastern front. The conclusion seems inescapable that this official publicity buildup denotes a well-considered move in Russian foreign policy. Now this move was made suddenly, and, as far as known, with no previous notice to Soviet Russia's Allies and associates. This is what invests it with disquieting significance. Furthermore, it should be evaluated against a background of a consistently independent diplomatic attitude. Stalin has never formally associated himself with the "unconditional surrender" formula laid down last winter at Casablanca by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, has avoided joint conferences with them and has more than once evinced a standpoint similar to that in the recent manifesto, notably in a pronouncement on November 7 of last year, when Stalin stated that Russia was not aiming at the destruction of the German nation or even the German Army, but merely at the destruction of Hitler and the Nazi regime. From all this, the logical inference is that a revolutionary overturn in Germany might expect a more benevolent

London or Washington. The matter acquires heightened significance from what is happening in Italy. At a moment when the Axis is shattered and the satellite or occupied countries are seething with disaffection, multitudes of Germans must see in the possibility of a 'softer" peace on the terms described in Pravda and previously indicated by Stalin himself the best way out of an increasingly hopeless situation. Indeed, current advices from Sweden describe revolutionary stirrings in Berlin itself, significantly ning. Yet very little if any real planning is under way.

Little thought is being given to the problems that will develop in Detroit or San Diego or Mobile when war industries suddenly throw great numbers of men into the street. Neither is thought being given to the problem of communities that have mushroomed around great war plants or around cantonments. Some of these communities in the months just ahead will begin to get their first shock when ordnance plants are closed down and when men move overseas with no additional recruits to take their places in the camps. It is assumed that communities and individuals will work out their own adinstments and that civilian industry will quickly mushroom to a volume of activity that will assure prosperity for all.

Issues Developing.

Some informed Government officiels, however, are not so sure that it is to be as simple as that. They see labor, wage and farm price problems of the most intense sort. They predict a period in which there will be much internal disorganization and a sudden public preoccupation with domestic problems, unless there is careful planning for the adjustments to come.

It is in a period of this kind that the United States, as they see it, can decide again to forget about the rest of the world. But owing to the dominant position of this country, any troubles here are likely to be reflected quickly in other parts of the world where people already will be having their own local troubles There is beginning to be a real question whether victory in the war is to serve automatically to correct the economic conditions that had so much to do with generating the forces that led to the war in the first place.

President Roosevelt, as some of his ides see it, has made up his mind that the internal problems of this country an solve themselves if means can bfound for arranging the political affairs of the world on a more stable basis. These aides, however, incline to the view that world political stability must rest first of all upon economic stability in the United States, with everything built upon that foundation.

The growing concern is that this Govrnment is so wrapped up in world rerganization that it may be forgetting the domestic problems that lie ahead In forgetting those problems, it may be opening the way to a situation that will drive this country and other countries to a postwar nationalism that is stronger than ever. The reaction that followed the last war is being recalled. Much the same sort of boom and deflation with similar effect on foreign policy, could

Future of Italy, Freed of Mussolini, in Balance as Rioters Demand End of War

America's 86th Week of War 204th Week of World War II

By Howard P. Bailey.

A week of rumor, roundabout report, threat and speculation following the sudden removal of Benito Mussolini, the man who played at being a Napoleon or a Caesar, but fell somewhat short of the role, finds the position of Italy in the war still obscured, but with definite indications that the kingdom will shortly withdraw from the war and possibly even line up with the United Nations to drive the Nazis out of the northern provinces, which Hitler appears about to seize.

It was reported yesterday that all German civilians had been ordered by Berlin to leave Italy at once and in London the ministry waited tensely for a big break, perhaps an invasion of Italy itself. From the Allied high command in Africa came a warning by radio that the breathing space for a peace offer was over and that intense bombing of Italy will begin at once.

Completely unexpected, the announcement came a week ago that King Victor Emmanuel had removed Mussolini as Premier and put in his place Marshal Badoglio, bitter opponent of the Fascist leadership, who, until his retirement after a disagreement with +

President Roosevelt was equally emphatic and went still further to warn all neutral countries not to provide a refuge for Mussolini or any of the other individuals guilty of fomenting this war and its atrocities. Russia was even more specific in a similar warning, addressing it directly to Sweden and Turkey.

German Troops Pour In.

All week long the rumors about rioting and clashes between German and Italian troops have continued but most of the reports have been attributed to "travelers arriving in Madrid" or "travelers reaching Bern." There is reason to place a great deal of credence in some of the stories to the effect that uprisings have occurred in many cities, such as Milan, where Fascism was born, and that everywhere among the civilian population the demand for peace has grown in strength. Troops ordered to fire on demonstrators are said to have revolted and to have been placed under errest

As the week ended, there were reliable reports that German troops are pouring into the northern provinces of Italy prepared to take their stand on what is generally referred to as the Po River line. Italians are said to have clashed with the newly arrived Germans and there were other indications that the American and British flyers subjected that unhappy city to seven attacks, several of which were of the so-called saturation type and in one of which 2.300 tons of explosives and incendiaries were dropped.

By the time the seventh raid was over more than 10,000 tons of bombs had blasted the city. After the first raid, the following night-flights found no difficulty in locating their target, the glow of the flames being visible 200 miles away while the Flying Fortresses which took over by daylight laid their course toward great pillars of smoke which extended 5 miles in the air. At least three of the raids were in the

Heavy War Demand for Food Pushes AAA Into Background

By Ovid A. Martin, ssociated Press Writer

The war's demand for food and more food is pushing the once powerful Agricultural Adjustment Agency (AAA) into the background

Many postwar thinkers predict that it never will regain its former position. In its efforts to expand production of American agriculture to the limit, the War Food Administration (WFA) has, with the exception of a single nonfood crop-tobacco-tossed aside the tools which the AAA used for 10 years to guide and control farm output.

These tools were acreage allotments, crop benefit payments for complying with allotments and marketing quotas with stiff penalties for sales in excess of allotments.

These tools were invented in a time of crisis-but a different crisis from that confronting the country today.

They were brought into use to combat unmarketable surpluses and ruinously low prices of farm products. Their purpose was to adjust production to the effective market demand-that is, the quantity of a particular commodity which consumers would buy at prices deemed fair to both farmers and users. There is little dispute over the effects of the AAA programs from a financial angle. Farm prices improved. So did farm incomes. Surpluses-that is, supplies for which there were no ready markets-were reduced. Agriculture as an industry arose from the brink of bankruptcy.

Charged With Shortages.

Critics accused the AAA of promoting scarcity and food shortages. Some charged it sought to subject agriculture to the will and control of a strong Federal Government. Others declared the AAA deprived farmers of their economic freedom and independence of action. Involved in this criticism was a States rights issue. Prior to the AAA, farmers had looked to State and county governmental agencies for advice and guidance. Those agencies were the State extension services and county agricultural agents. The extension services generally were connected with the State agricultural colleges. The AAA quickly shoved these State agencies aside. Jealousies naturally developed. Now the situation is reversed. Farmers no longer are plagued by so-called surpluses. There is a ready market for everything they can produce. And prices are good. Producers don't need fast as they can be moved. From them, to lean on the AAA for benefit payments bombs could be rained on the only Axis or for programs designed to hold industrial areas now out of reach of acreages in line with a limited market. normal operational bomb trips from Eng-The AAA has been called a "cropland and Africa. curtailment" agency. They claimed it could be used as ing invasion possibilities. a mechanism to expand or contract production as the need might be. They likened it to a bellows. If larger production was needed, all the AAA need do, they said, was to increase planting ailotments. Well, as noted above, the War Food Administration-the agency controlling it does carry freight, that's something of the AAA-has dropped AAA acreage allotments and marketing quotas for all crops except tobacco. Carrying troops is its big business to-

Advocates of the AAA in and out of the Government argue that everything should be done to keep the AAA laws on the statute books and to maintain a nucleus of an AAA organization for a new postwar period of farm surpluses. In that period, they predict, farmers who now are ready to forget about the AAA will be pleading for its assistance. There are others who deny this, contending that American agriculture would be kept producing at top limit if sumcient food were made available to maintain all citizens on a good nutritional diet.

The trouble in the 30s grew out of the twin facts, they say, that there was a malproduction and under-consumptionagriculture produced too much cotton, wheat, tobacco and several other staple crops, but not enough milk, eggs, meat, poultry, fruits and vegetables.

See No Control Need.

The present war demand for food is cited as evidence that there is no need for crop control. Now that civilians have a record volume of spending power, they would buy about all the food that agriculture is able to produce if it were available. As a consequence, civilians have to be rationed on many important food items.

The view that the post-war world need not have crop control programs was taken by the recent United Nations food conference at Hot Springs, Va. A world properly fed, the conference declared, would necessitate a higher level of food production than ever before attained. The United States itself, the conference said, would be hard pressed to meet its own food needs.

The war is serving to bring about important adjustments and changes in the American agricultural patterns. Those changes are in the direction of more foods which actually have been produced in insufficient volume to meet nutritional needs. In other words, the Nation is producing more meat, milk, poultry, fruits and vegetables, and less cotton and tobacco.

A lot of people say there will be a need for AAA crop control programs in the post-war period only if consumer purchasing power is allowed to slump sharply and farmers return to old production patterns.

Nazis no longer consider Italy as a partner in the war. Italian submarines at Fiume, for instance, were said to have been placed under German guard and German crews are taking over. In Greece, too, according to one dispatch, German troops are disarming the Italians who are in the occupation garrisons.

Signs of unrest throughout the Balkans became quickly evident when the news that Mussolini had been summarily kicked out reached the people. Rumania already had refused a Hitler request for more troops to go to the Russian front. Now Hungary and Bulgaria are showing definite signs of weakening in their ties with Germany. Ankara reports that the fall of Italy may easily result in the Balkan nations seeking retirement from the war and the alliance with the Nazis which was entered into under duress in the beginning

Mussolini Whereabouts Unknown.

After the removal of Mussolini, events moved rapidly, the entire Fascist party being ordered disbanded and the Fascist militia absorbed into the army. Many Fascist leaders were placed under arrest but the whereabouts of Il Duce himself remains a mystery

In setting up a new ministry, Premier Badoglio, known as a bitter enemy of Naziism as well as Fascism, chose Baron Raffaele Guariglia, Ambassador to pro-Allied Turkey, as Foreign Minister. Immediately speculation was that the new foreign secretary would find it far easier through contacts in Turkey to make overtures for peace. In fact, Guariglia is said to have had one meeting with Turkish foreign officials.

That nothing short of unconditional surrender would be considered, however, was made clear. Gen. Eisenhower, the leader of the Allied forces in the Mediterranean, however, made the generous proposal that for an honorable peace. the Allied forces would free all Italian prisoners, provided that Allied prisoners held in Italy also be freed.

The big problem standing in the path of a peace agreement is the presence of German troops in Italy, and Gen. Eisenhower insisted that Italy cease all aid to the Nazis as a prerequisite to the entertaining of any peace requests.

Fresh trouble for the Axis came with reports that serious uprisings were occurring in Fiume and Trieste in Northeastern Italy where nearly 600,000 Croats and Slovenes reside. It was reported that the Yugoslavian 5th and 6th Irregular Brigades had invaded the Udine area.

Penned in Small Triangle.

The fighting in Sicily has gone on without letup but the defense of the island is largely in the hands of the German troops who are now cornered in a little triangle whose base runs from Catania on the east coast to San Stefano on the north coast, this line being known as the Mount Etna line. The American forces on the north have made some progress into the defenses at San Stefano, flanking the town and then ad- drawing near vancing almost to the gates of the city, which is being bitterly defended by the Nazis.

The Canadians in the center moved forward a considerable distance during the week, while the British 8th Army clung fast to its gains around Catania, though that bitterly defended city remains in Axis hands.

The raids for the week were costly in planes, a rough tabulation which cannot be accurate indicating somewhere between 150 and 175 bombers have been lost, but in the light of the accomplishment the loss was light

Sunday night, while Hamburg was undergoing its third attack, Essen, home of the giant Krupp armament works, was attacked in considerable force, the raid being the 57th of the war on that important city.

During the first part of the week Cologne was raided as were Warnemunde with its important aircraft factories. Wustrow with its seaplane base and Kiel. most important German naval base. The synthetic rubber plants in Hannover of which there are two were raided and Wilhelmshaven and Wessermunde were attacked. Travelling to within 80 miles of Berlin. the longest daylight raid over Germany, Flying Fortresses Wednesday plastered the aircraft factory at Oscherleben and another at Kassel, 200 miles southwest of Berlin, was also bombed.

All during the week, small flights and single planes kept up a steady jabbing at enemy airfields and at transportation facilities, especially locomotives, in France, Belgium and Holland. The week was the most damaging week of air warfare Germany has thus far undergone, and the unpleasant thought no doubt has arisen in many a nervous Nazi mind that each succeeding series of raids seems to be in greater force and longer duration than any predecessor. The thought is not a morale builder.

Russian Front

Relentlessly and steadily the Russian Army is grinding down German resistance around Orel and despite the arrival of fresh Nazi reserves, the pincers are slowly closing around the advance force which is still clinging to the city. From three sides the pressure has been maintained, but as the week drew to a close the southern jaw of the pincers moved forward four or five miles and now dominates the narrowing corridor of escape.

Inspired by the personal appearance of Premier Stalin, the Reds Sunday pushed to within six miles of the rail line to Bryansk over which German supplies must pass. More than 30 populated places were recaptured and the Germans suffered heavy casualties. At the lower end of the salient around Belgorod there was considerable skirmishing, but no movement in either direction.

Elsewhere on the long Russian front there was sporadic fighting but nothing approaching a serious offensive on either

Toward the end of the week fresh Nazi reserves were thrown into the battle, but the Reds drove steadily ahead. Fall of Orel apparently was

All American planes returned safetly after the 2,400-mile round trip flight from Midway. Considerable damage to all installations on the island occurred.

Down on New Georgia, where American forces have completely isolated the Japs on the Munda airfield, slow progress was made which finally brought the advancing troops within 1,900 yards, or slightly more than a mile, from the field. The defenders are in coral caves which have proven too strong for effective use of antitank guns and the reduction of the enemy's machine-gun nests is requiring time. Fourteen pillboxes were smashed on Thursday. Flame-throwers and tanks have been brought into action.

On New Guinea, Salamaua and Lae have taken a steady bombing from the air and ground forces have pushed Jap patrols back toward the last remaining harbors in Jap hands. Many Jap Ships Sunk.

Japanese shipping came in for a great deal of attention from planes and ships and another report on American submarine activity revealed the sinking of 10 Jap ships and the damaging of four others. Two of the ships sunk were large transports, the others, cargo vessels and tankers. Off Cape Gloucester on New Britain, one Jap destroyer was sunk and another and a cargo ship were left burning after an air attack.

Cruising 800 miles, one flight of Liberators bombed and sank a 250-foot Jap merchant ship off Tavoy Island, south of Thailand, and planes ranging over Burma and the waters adjacent shot up a flat-topped ship which may or may not have been a small carrier. P-40s, which have come in for a great deal of criticism from the Truman Committee, blasted troop centers and bridges in many parts of Burma during the week. Other flights of these planes, bombing enemy installations at Hankow, encountered numerous enemy fighters going and coming from their base in China, and in the fights which resulted shot down 14 and probably shot down 19 more of the enemy to the loss of one

Freight-Carrying Glider Held Of Little Value at Present

Feared Food Acreage Lost.

The reason assigned to their retention on tobacco is to prevent diversion of excessive acreages from food crops. Tobacco is bringing excellent prices and officials note the possibility of too much production at the expense of food crops if there were no restrictions.

In dropping AAA planting controls, WFA officials said that the formula for determining acreage allotments was too rigid to allow efficient utilization of the Nation's land resources.

All this does not mean, however, that the Federal Government will cease to The glider program is very much unexercise a strong influence on agriculder wraps these days. You ask the tural production. The Federal Government will continue to do the over-all planning for production. It will determine needs for various crops. Then it will set up prices which would tend to encourage plantings and production to match those needs.

For example, should the Government have to assemble after they land. has been continuous since President Wilson instituted its first phase in October, 1917. The organization was transferred in May, 1934, to the Department of Justice, where it survived in a state of suspended animation for nearly eight years. On April 21, 1942, its functions and files were transferred by executive order to the new setup under Crowley.

Ownership Hidden.

When the Foreign Funds Control undertook to freeze German properties in the summer of 1941 it found in many cases that it was necessary to pierce three layers of rigged ownership. Two had been for the purpose of cheating German governments and the third for deceiving the United States. The first wrapper was designed to evade high taxes under the Weimar Republic. The second was an answer to foreign exchange controls instituted in 1934 by Hjalmar Schacht under Nazi direction. The last was superimposed after 1936, when it became clear to German insiders that another World War impended.

Under the power to freeze, the agency set up a licensing system which clamped an iron hand on about 3.000 businesses. How were they identified? Lists were supplied by the Department of Justice and other establishments. The banks reported some that had been missed. Chiefly the Treasury relied on its own tax returns. Companies under license had to submit all letters and transactions to a Treasury supervisor stationed on the premises. No check was good unless countersigned by a Treasury agent. In some cases a ban on exports was used to drive a concern out of business. At first licenses were on a 30-day basis. With good behavior they were extended to 60 and 90 days, or even a vear.

Power to seize came with the War Powers Act of December 18, 1941. The first prey bagged was the $60,000,000 General Analine & Film Co., formerly the American I. G. Farben Co., which purported to have only Swiss connections. but which, according to the Department of Justice, was 97 per cent German owned. The executive staff and personnel were purged; new officers and directors were installed; and the plant was put to work on American war production.

In March, 1942, the company was turned over to the Alien Property Custodian, which is engaged in selling all of its stock to the greatest possible number of American investors. If the original owners ever wish to prosecute a claim, they will have to sue the United States Government, which takes responsibility for confiscating the shares,

Through its control of American subsidiaries of German cartels, the Foreign Funds Control has been able to force allied concerns in Latin America to liquidate, fire executives, directors and modities this year, including peanuts for | employes and drop German trade marks. In a case or two, it has even exerted similar pressure on associated companies in Switzerland.

To sum up, this country now has the staff, personnel and machinery for economic war on a global scale, both defensive and offensive. It will be in a position to go on fighting after the peace.

Historic Landmarks of the Soldiers' Home

By John Clagett Proctor.

The Soldiers' Home of this city, to the average Washingtonian who has resided here for somewhat more than half a century, means a place of great beauty wander back to the days of his youth and to this noted reservation and its historic landmarks?

Especially to those who resided in the northern part of town it produced an Capt. Anderson was later brevetted a irresistible urge in their youth, for here major general. were to be found shellbarks, walnuts, chestnuts and persimmons, in parts of the grounds sufficiently remote from the few guards who protected the property and kept the boys from damaging the trees and shrubbery.

Of course, the boys of that period never played hookey from school-or if so, they never later admitted it to their children-but upon many occasions they undoubtedly had considerable explaining to do to their parents as to just how their hands became discolored with walnut stains. Sometimes their stories were believed, and sometimes they were not, the result being a flogging. But regardless of the whipping administered, many outlived the punishment, and continued to joggle along in their youthful days, with the result that today many are highly respected citizens; proving the fact that stains on the hands are not so lasting as stains on one's character.

Ice Skating on Lakes

The lakes, which you may still see today within the western part of the grounds, just off Park road, then known as Whitney avenue, were a favorite place for skating in the wintertime when ice was sufficiently thick for this purpose. The skaters would build a fire close to the edge of the lakes to keep themselves warm when not cutting figure eights and performing other difficult feats on the ice, and if a boy were missing from the Prescott, or some other nearby school, when skating was at its best, he could usually be found up here or at Babcock's Lake in the Monument Grounds. Both were ideal places for the sport.

Ffty-five or sixty years or longer makes a difference in a neighborhood. Fields and commons then prevailed in this section of the city and only a few houses were to be seen. Butchers were the principal residents along Seventh street pike-now dignified with the name of Georgia avenue. The news came, I think, on Wednesday, that the advantage was on our side. I was then staying at the Soldiers' Home. The Rev. Mr. Brackenridge came into possession of the land by having married Eleanor White, daughter of James White, who was a large property holder in this vicinity, and whose grave is the oldest marked one in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Corcoran Cottage

The old Corcoran cottage is still standing a little to the southwest of the dairy buildings. It is assumed to have been built about the time Mr. Corcoran purchased the property, and at the time he sold it it was occupied by his niece, a Mrs. Thom. It is a frame building and was patterned after the Swiss style of architecture. During the Civil War it was occupied by the surgeon in charge of Harewood Hospital, the hospital building standing close by in the clearing immediately east of the dairy house. Secretary of War McCrary of President Hayes' cabinet occupied the cottage one summer with his family. It is now known as the farmhouse of the home. The Brackenridge graveyard lies a little to the west of the Corcoran cottage and here rests all that is mortal of Rev. John Brackenridge, his wife Eleanor and his daughter. Two tall headstones tell of their virtues, the taller of the two being inscribed: 'In memory of the Reverend John Brackenridge, who died May 2nd, 1844, aged seventy-five years. At a very early date in Washington history, Petworth belonged to John Tayloe, one of the city's wealthiest residents and the builder of the Octagon, still standing at the northeast corner of Eighteenth street and New York avenue. It was here that President Madison made his residence for a short time after the British burned Washington. Col. Tayloe was much interested in raising race horses, and used his Petworth farm for this purpose. As early as 1803, it is said, he received as much as $3,500 for one support of the desired institution, which of his winning horses, which was a was created by that act, and other prolarge sum for that period. # Summertime Beverages From Nature's 'Bar'

By Robert Shosteck.

Refreshing beverages from nature's own bar take on a practical interest during the hot summer months for the outof-doors enthusiast interested in something "different." There is lots of fun in gathering the aromatic and healthful roots and bark of any one of a dozen or more trees and shrubs, and in brewing a refreshing tea or lemonade. The species described here are all found in and near Washington, and are readily identified by leaf, berries or bark. The accompanying drawings should be studied closely so that you will have little trouble in recognizing your specimen.

The commonest and, perhaps, the bestknown beverage tree in this area is the sassafras. This species occurs in dry localities, along fences, roads and the edge of woods. It is usually found as a small tree or shrub. Older trees are recognized by the reddish-brown bark, broken into flat ridges. The alternate leaves are in three forms: Boat-shaped. mitten-shaped or three-lobed, like the illustration. All three shapes may be found on the same twig.

The bark of the sassafras is distilled commercially for its essential oil, and it is used in medicine, perfumery, candymaking, soup flavoring and tea. The roots may be gathered at any time of the year. Young plants 2 to 3 feet high may often be pulled out of the soil, and the roots cut off with a knife. Gather a pound or two, wash thoroughly, and cut up into thin slivers. Do not break off the root bark since this contains most of the essence. This bark may be used fresh, or dried and put away. Very little strength is lost through storage.

New Jersey tea is a shrub which attained great popularity during the Revolutionary War, when its leaves served as a substitute for the unobtainable Oriental tea. Near Washington it occurs open woods. The author first became acquainted with this species over a decade ago when he found it abundantly in the old Civil War trenches and emplacements south of Chain Bridge and east of Fort Ethan Allen. The leaves are 2 to 3 inches long, ovate, sawtooth-edged, and readily recognized by the three conspicuous veins. The aromatic white flowers, appearing in June, attract hordes of insects. The red root makes a fine dye.

The tea is prepared by infusing the dried leaves in the same manner as Oriental tea. Cream and sugar may be added.

Turning from trees and shrubs to flowers, one may be surprised to learn of the sweet-scented goldenrod, or Blue

Coffee Substitutes

This account of native beverage plants would be incomplete without a description of scme well-known coffee substitutes. Two of these which have been tried and accepted are chicory and Kentucky coffee bean. The former is a common weed about Washington, familiarly known as "blue sailors." Even though this plant grows at our doorstep, we have imported as much as seven million pounds in one year for use as coffee substitute or flavoring. An appetizing chicory brew is made by preparing roasted and ground roots in the same manner as coffee.

It is of interest to note that chicory beverage was a staple dish with the ancient Egyptians and that it has been used throughout Europe up to the present day. Its popularity is increasing here because of the restrictions in the use of coffee.

The Kentucky coffee tree is found as an occasional escape from cultivation. Many fine specimens grew in the Capitol Grounds and in other parks. About 15 rounded leaflets comprise the secondary leaf stalk. The reddish-brown pods are 5 to 8 inches long, about 112 inches wide, and contain six to nine hard beans. These were roasted and ground by our pioneer forebears and used in place of coffee. Only occasional use is made of them today. Under the towering canopy of birches one is likely to find the spicebush or wild allspice, a slender shrub 5 to 15 feet high. Several stems usually grow from the same clump of roots. The oval leaves are dark green and smooth edged, with very short stems. The scarlet berries are conspicuous through late summer and fall. The entire shrub is strongly aromatic, particularly when the leaves are crushed.

The twigs, bark and leaves are used in making tea. Its use as a tea and as a medicine was widespread in Colonial days, and it is still used in the South. In preparing it as a beverage one boils the leaves and twigs for about 15 minutes, adding sugar and cream to suit one's taste.

She arrived in Glasgow wearing a borrowed sailor suit, her 14 trunks at the bottom of the sea. Within a few hours funds from the American Red Cross had reequipped her for another sailing. When Miss Evelyn arrived in Montreal she made a movie short for the Red Cross and toured Canada in speaking engagements for the same cause. ### People's Counsel Need Stressed; Public Utilities Power Sustained

By JESSE C. SUTER.

Demand Increased for Appointment of People's Counsel

The absence of recommendations or applications for appointment of people's counsel has been given recently as a reason for the inaction of the President in filling the office. This statement has occasioned considerable surprise and comment among the civic groups. Even greater surprise is apparent over published statements that the President has requested an opinion from the Attorney General on whether to fill the vacant post. In this connection the President is credited as saying that the present Attorney General and several of his predecessors had been steadily against filling the

Civic leaders, and their constituents as well, continue to seek a logical explanation of this failure to fill an office created by the Public Utilities Organic Act, which places the same obligation upon the President to appoint a people's counsel as to appoint the members of the Public Utilities Commission itself. Here is the law on the subject:

"There shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, an additional counsel of the commission to be known as the people's counsel, who-

"(3) May investigate the service given by, the rates charged by, and the valuation of the properties of, the public utilities under the jurisdiction of the commission.

"(b) The term of office of the people's counsel shall be four years, and he shall receive a salary at the rate of $7,500 a year. No person shall be appointed as people's counsel who has not been a bona fide resident of the District of Columbia continuously for a period of at least five years immediately preceding the effective date of his appcintment, or who has not been engaged in the actual practice of law before the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia for a period of at least five years. . No person shall be eligible to the office of people's counsel who is, or who shall have been during a period of five years next preceding his appointment, directly or indirectly interested in any public utility operating, owning or having an interest in property in the District of Columbia, or in any stock, bond, mortgage, security or contract of any such public utility." (District Code, 1940 Edition,

Recent discussions of the delay in the filling of this office have resulted in increased activity on the part of civic groups to obtain early and favorable action by the appointing power. The Executive Board of the Federation of Citizens' Associations has authorized and directed the president of the Federation to advise the President that the appointment of the people's counsel is a matter of vital concern to the residents of the District and to urge an early appointment. The earnestness of the Federation is further evidenced by its contention that the people being deprived of such representation by official counsel, as provided in the law, creates a fatal defect in any proceedings in which the interests of the people of the District are

The most recent reaction to the reported lack of recommendations or applications for appointment of a people's counsel is that of the president of the District Bar Association He has requested members of the association to forward to the association's Committee on Judicial Nominations within five days their nominations for people's counsel and from the list of nominations submitted the committee, headed by Walter Bastian, will select three names to be submitted to the President for his consideration

Senator Harold H. Burton, Republican, of Ohio, active member of the Senate Committee on the District of Columbia, has given out a strong statement in support of the soundness of the provision of law for a people's counsel and also the distinct obligation on the President to make the appointment.

The Senator is quoted as saying that: "In theory the Public Utilities Commission represents the public, but actually it must act as a judicial body. The Commissioners cannot consistently act as judges and advocates both, and at a certain point they must act solely as judges." Continuing, he said: "This is where the District citizens lack the protection afforded consumers in any other cities. When the utilities commissions have to act solely as judges these other cities still have their advocates. Washington has none."

The voteless and unrepresented citizens of the District regard a people's counsel as urgently needed now. They fail to see a valid reason for delaying the appointment. They have not discovered any recommendation from the President to Congress to amend the law and abolish the office. Their contention is that any personal opinion of the President as to the office being unnecessary does not relieve him of complying with the clear mandate of the law. * * * *

Public Utilities Commission and Not Federal Control

Public utilities matters occupied a conspicuous place in the civic news during the past week. On Monday the Court of Appeals handed down an opinion reversing the District Court and sustaining the Public Utilities Commission in its order fixing the rates of the Washington Gas Light Co. under the sliding-scale agreement. This order gave the company a slight increase of rate, the only increase since the sliding scale was adopted. Heretofore the annual adjustments have resulted in lowered rates.

Special organization interest is shown in this appeal which was made by the Office of Price Administration on the theory that the Price Control Act gave that agency power as to rates superseding that of the Public Utilities Commission. The Appeals Court held the power of control to be in the commission.

Based on this decision the Potomac Electric Power Co. petitioned the District Court to dismiss the appeal from the order of the commission fixing the electric power rate reduction at $310,000 under the sliding scale. This appeal was made by a number of

The Federation of Citizens' Associations has petitioned the court for the privilege to intervene on behalf of the people in support of the order of the commission.

Expressions of dissatisfaction have been heard among civic leaders at the attempts of Federal agencies to force the Public Utilities Commission to do their bidding regardless of the law and the obligations of the members of the commission. Satisfaction is being expressed that the Court of Appeals decision leaves the commission in control as provided by law.

NEW YORK. Grace Moore has made triumphant tours in every country in the world. she has been decorated by kings, but the experience she's remembering these days was a ride with a stage-door Johnnie in a jeep.

He was a sergeant in a camp at Hastings, Nebr., and so proud of his Army buggy that he took a detour on the way to the auditorium to show the singer, radiant in white crepe and crystal beads, what a jeep can do when in a showing-off mood.

"By the time we arrived every bone in my body had taken a different position and was about to present arms." Miss Moore, sometimes reputed the Metropolitan's most temperamental singer, was in great spirits as she recalled the rough ride the other day.

THEATER OF WAR RELIEF—As the result of an Army morale building program, the five one-act plays created and performed by noncommissioned officers on June 14 gave the stage a new sensation. The production not only netted more than $100,-000 for the Soldiers and Sailors' Club, but have been summoned for a week's engagement starting tomorrow at the Martin Beck Theater in New York. The scenes above are from three of the plays, from left to right, a melodrama set inside an enemy sub, a barrack-room comedy and a comedy-drama about a platoon's reactions to their baptism of fire. -Wide World Photos.

Goldwyn's famous-writer coup was, in fact, a turning point in the motion picture's groping search for literary stability. Organization of these seven popular novelists under the Goldwyn banner was not chalked up as a success, but it did have a telling effect on the industry at large. The fame of Percy Grainger will go down in the music history of the century, not only as a great keyboard interpreter, but also as a composer. His compositions are in the repertoire of nearly all the pianists before the public today. His life is no less remarkable than his career; and yet, both are remarkable chiefly because in the midst of such tumultuous and war-torn times, they have been so natural and normal. And, because he realized the importance of the preservation of health and youth for the service of art.

Some people have laughed good humoredly at Percy Grainger's "eccentricities"-such as traveling from one city to another on foot, wearing shorts, with his concert dress in a knapsack, but this is sometimes the only way he can get enough fresh air and exercise in a busy concert season. Yes, he is a vegetarian, does not smoke or drink cocktails. As lithe and youthful as ever-best of all, after what is almost a record of such public appearances, his playing is as full of youthful vigor and inspiration as ever.

Gen. Giraud Tells of His Extraordinary Escape From Germany's Prison Fortress

By Paul Bringuier.

(Released by the Bell Syndicate.)

Gen. Henri Giraud was going to the theater this evening, to a gala affair for the benefit of the Red Cross. It was the first time he had consented to be present on such an occasion in Algiers since he had taken command there.

It was getting on toward 8 o'clock. At 7:30 the air-raid siren sounded through the mild March night, and almost immediately the antiaircraft batteries went into action

I was in the garden of the summer palace when I heard the siren. I stepped back under the shelter of a marble portice to seek cover from the bursting bombs, and as I did so, I heard a step. Half turning, I saw the general had stopped behind me.

"Bring my carriage," the voice at my side ordered the Spahi guard.

Suppressing a smile,I remonstrated, "But general, do you think that they will have the fete now?"

"Why not?" was the answer. "In any case they expect me at 8 o'clock, and it is now a quarter before the hour. Are you coming, Catroux?"

Gen. Catroux, who had been invited by Giraud to the summer palace, had just come up. The two men forthwith got into the blue Packard. I followed the two men in another car and we eventually reached the theater.

Explosiion followed explosion all around us. The building shook from their force. The actors, the musicians, the theater employes were all huddled in a basement shelter. He only looked as if he were wondering why the performance did not begin. And it did begin, two hours later, when the alert was over, and the people reassured as to their safety. Gen. Henri Giraud told me in detail during this intermission about his extraordinary adventures since the day when ...

At the time of the German offensive toward the west, on May 10, 1940, Gen. Giraud commanded the 7th Army, which made up the left, the active, offensivewing of the French Army. Giraud entered Bilgium, crossed it, and approaching the Dutch border perpared to attack the Germans in the swamps and tulip fields of the Low Country.

But on the 13th of May Huntziger's army gave away at Sedan. Its rout was followed by that of Corp's army.

On the 14th the confusion in that region was at a high pitch. The generals no longer had their men under any kind of control. Only one hope remained to them. They relied on a man who did not know the meaning of despair-Giraud. At dawn on the 15th he received an order to take command of the battered armies, and to reestablish the front between the Meuse and the Oise.

In the afternoon he arrived at the scene of battle and took command. For three days he fought, while all about him the army was collapsing. On the 18th he had not moved from his post at Wassigny, but the Germans were so near that this section had become an advance post.

and instinctively, without ever bringing the matter to a vote, the prisoners all regarded Giraud as the leader of their little community

Toward the end of the year the German authorities demanded that all the imprisoned officers sign a paper, pledging themselves not to make any attempt to escape or again to take up arms against the Axis.

Giraud assembled his comrades and pointed out to them in forceful language that their only possible course of action was to refuse to sign the paper.

Guards Are Vigilant.

From that moment forward, the vigilance of the guards increased, especially in the case of Giraud. He was almost never permitted to leave his cell, and was allowed only one short walk each

During the first days of his imprisonment the general, with the connivance of an invalid prisoner who was being repatriated, had managed to send a code to his wife in France. He was thus able to correspond freely with her and they concealed another meaning, thanks to the code.

Interminable months passed. In October, 1941, Mme. Giraud established contact between her husband and two officers who had set up in unoccupied France an organization to help imprisoned officers escape from Germany. These two men were Col. de G. and Commandant L. (Whenever, in this narrative, I do not give the names of the people to whom I refer, it must be understood that this is because I am speaking of people who are still in France under Nazi domination, or who have left their families there as hostages, or who are members of a secret organization which The advance guard of the enemy dug is continuing its underground work raud.

An active correspondence now developed between the general and the said. officers mentioned, and a plan for the general's escape was soon afoot. Two major problems presented themselves: The escape from the fortress and the flight from Germany. The only solution for the first one was to descend his clothing, in which he packed a razor, a rough sketch of the surrounding country and some food.

A little before 10 o'clock he went to the window. As he stood there the patrol came along. Today it was under the command of a sergeant whom the general knew well, and who was an enthusiastic amateur photographer. The sergeant saluted. Giraud asked him: "You don't have your camera today, sergeant? Too bad! You could have taken an interesting picture of me." The German laughed uncomprehendingly and went on. A moment longer, and then the general climbed out of the window, leaped down to the patrol road and hastened toward the spot he had chosen in the rampart.

Escaped Without Detection.

He fastened his rope to the battlement, then hung about his neck the parcel which he had prepared, and put on his thick gloves. He made the descent methodically, and in just 1 minute and 48 seconds he had reached the hill. There was no sign of any movement. The extraordinary hypothesis had become a reality; a man had climbed down the high wall in broad daylight, and no one had seen him.

He opened his parcel, took out his razor and shaved off his mustache, and donned the waterproof coat and the Tyrolean hat. Then he arose, walked out to the road, took his bearings, and calmly set out for the station at Schandau. He walked without haste, passing a word of greeting to the farmers whom he met on the way. Arriving at the meeting at half-past twelve, he sat down on the parapet of the bridge. At exactly 1 o'clock a young man appeared. The young man looked at Giraud, came closer to him, and as he passed him said: "Good morning Heinrich."

"Good morning, Francis," replied Gi-Immediately the young man stopped.

"I am at your command, general," he

The Gestapo agents moved toward the man seated half sidewise with his back to them, and chatting earnestly with the young officer. At the last moment Giraud raised his head and knitted his eyebrows, as if in annoyance at being interrupted while he was expounding on Rommel's brilliant victory. The little lieutenant, angry, tco, at the interruption, cast a threatening glance at the officers and waved them away. The plain clothes men hesitated a moment, glanced at the lieutenant's decorations. then finally bowed and took themselves off.

Thus, borne on the enchanted carpet of chance, Giraud finally approached France.

Goes Back to Germany.

The general arrived at Chalons. Some Frenchmen had already offered to help him get over into the unoccupied zone, when he suddenly learned that at the military frontier which cuts France in two like a knife in the heart, at the famous line of demarcation between the occupied and unoccupied zones, the Germans were systematically stopping and detaining every man who was over 6 feet tall. They had not given up hope of apprehending the fugitive in the starred great coat of a general. Giraud retraced his steps and went back to Germany. From there he made his way toward Switzerland. There was no longer any question of taking trains, or traveling by ordinary routes. He had to get over the frontier like an outlaw.

Accompanied by his faithful Alsatian guide, Francis, and also conducted over a part of the climb by a mountaineer friend. The general crossed over the mountains. Their guide left them at last in a cabin near the frontier, where for eight hours Giraud and Francis remained hidden, while German patrols passed to and fro constantly.

As nightfall approached two Nazi guards passed close by the cabin. One of them stopped to light his pipe, saying to his companion as he did so; "Come on, let's go and eat. We'll come back and take over the watch by and by."

From their hiding place the fugitives heard him. They knew then that for a few minutes the road at this point would be unguarded. They rushed out. Giraud, limping, gritting his teeth and, making a superhuman effort, summoned all his will power, which had never yet betrayed him. Two hours later they were in Switzerland, exhausted, but safe. The long adventure was ended.

According to the carefully laid plans

Facing him sat Otto Abetz. With him Abetz had brought a German general.

The conversation was entirely between Abetz and Giraud, the others sitting, there silently, as if frozen.

"Your escape is a scandalous and deplorable affair," said Abetz. "In the interests of future Franco-German collaboration you will have to return to Koenigstein. If you do so, we will set free. fifty thousand French prisoners, perhaps, even more."

What guarantee will you give me that. this promise be kept if I do return?" "The word of Germany," replied Abetz, -"I am afraid I have no confidence in Germany's word," was the answer. Abetz rose, his face livid with fury. "I do not believe that we have anything" more to say to each other. You are disregarding the interests of your country general."

He hesitated for a moment. Was he going to have Giraud arrested by his soldiers? The general looked at him? steadily, divining his thoughts. But Abetz did not quite dare to go that faring In the car which took them backstor Vichy, Darlan and Laval maintained stiff silence. At last the general spoke softly: bult fes "He is a boor, that German is. I shall m remember him." The general never returned to Vichye's but remained in Lyons with his familyand friends under close surveillance of Laval's secret police. Around Giraud various groups in France organized committees in which were found the most active participants in the secret resistance to the Nazis.

The Vichy police and the Gestapo watched Giraud closely. Every day itbecame more dangerous for him to see his friends. Toward the end of July he disappeared. The police tried in vain to find him. In reality he was in a quiet little house in Marseilles. Different men came there every night. Communication was established with London and Algiers

On the fourth of November Gen. Henri Giraud left his hiding place in Marseil les in an automobile, accompanied by Maj. Andre Beaufre, Naval Lt. Viret, an enthusiast from Marseilles, and a 20year-old midshipman, the general's a youngest son, Bernard Giraud.

Set Out on Foot.

The road was cut off by German reconnaissance parties. Night fell. When they were about 10 kilometers from Catelet, in the corner of a wood, the general and his officers abandoned the car and set out, with the aid of a compass, toward their objective.

Gen. Giraud, who had marched for hours, could go no farther. The old wound in his right leg was giving him trouble. He ordered two of his officers to leave him, and try to rejoin the French lines. He himself lay down to rest. His aid-de-camp, Lt. Tannery, remained with him.

When dawn came the two men arose and resumed their march. Shortly thereafter they were amazed to find an abandoned mounted French machine gun, which they commandeered forthwith.

At 6 o'clock they came upon a light German car which they put out of commission with two shots from a .25 gun. But an armored column of German soldiers appeared. The machine gun jammed. The general and Tannery fled into a farmhouse. German tanks surrounded them, enemy soldiers appeared from everywhere, and the resistance of Giraud and his aide-de-camp was quickly broken.

At 6 o'clock that morning, just 26 years after his first capture by the Germans. Gen. Giraud was again a prisoner in the hands of the Germans. Rommel, who had lost the first round, had just won the second. But the bout would not be played until three years later, in Tunisia.

Impassive and erect in his long khaki greatcoat, Giraud arrived at Rommel's headquarters. That same evening he was transferred by plane to Bonn, on the Rhine. The first night the jailers saw the French general sitting there sleepless, his arms crossed, and a faraway look in his eves.

No! He had already begun to think about his escape and subsequent revenge. The next morning he tried to establish contact with the natives of the countryside, and to find some one, an anti-Nazi perhaps, who might help him to escape.

At Koenigctein Catsle.

Two days later Giraud was taken to the castle at Koenigstein and imprisoned in the fortress, which the Nazis had decided to use as a prison for officers. A number of high-ranking Polish officers were there and by the time France had given up the struggle all the French generals-about 120 in number-were prisoners of the Germans at Koenigstein.

the walls and the rock. As a solution of the second-the escape from Germanythey considered in turn the chances the tomobile. Both were impractical. There was still the train. Giraud braided a rope from the cord used to tie the food packages his wife had sent him. It took him three months, working at night, to finish it. But it was not strong enough. Finally he received from France, concealed in a carefully prepared ham, a roll of copper wire about 150 feet long. Around this wire he braided his original rope.

Prepared for Flight. .

He began also to consider the question of securing some German money. By selling some of the food which his wife had sent to him he acquired 800 "marks

In February, 1942, Col. de G. and Commandant L. sent Giraud the complete plan for the venture. A guide from France, a young Alsatian, was to bring civilian clothing and a false passport into Germany, as near as possible to Koenigstein.

In the matter of leaving the citadel Giraud had to work alone. He had already made note of the only spot on the rampart from which escape was possible, which might escape the sentinel's eye. From this spot he would have to descend 42 meters-over 140 feet-down a thick, perpendicular wall. There were two daytime roll calls in the prison, at 8 o'clock both morning and evening. The general's cell looked out over a patrolled highway, and every quarter hour the patrol passed over this road. Giraud therefore had 15 minutes in which to escape from the citadel and 12 hours to flee before his absence would be noticed. His friends in France thought surely he would plan to escape by night. But Giraud answered calmly: "I shall leave Koenigstein at 10 o'clock on the morning of April 17."

Civilian Clothing Arranged.

They did not dispute Giraud's orders. however. Soon, on March 27. came an answer from France: "The guide will be waiting for you at 1 o'clock in the after-

He went into the lavatory, locked himself in there with his valise. and after a few moments emerged into the first-class compartment clad like a wealthy bourgeois, his eyes concealed behind gold-rimmed spectacles. In his pocket he had papers bearing the name of a German businessman who dealt in hides.

Escape Is Discovered.

At this hour in Koenigstein they discovered that the general had escaped. The alarm was given, a description of the fugitive broadcast, and the frontiers were watched carefully. The net was being tightened. A reward of 100,000 marks was offered to any one who brought about the arrest of the escaped prisoner. But the Nazis made mistakes. They described Giraud as a large man with a heavy mustache, a man who walked with a limp in his right leg.

Now the general could not change his figure. But he no longer had a mustache, and although it was true that he had begeneral would have by plane and by au- come accustomed to dragging his wounded leg a little, he could, by a terrible effort of will, force himself not to limp for a few moments at a time. The second reason for the failure of the Germans to capture Giraud lay in the false conclusions drawn by the German police, who reasoned that since he was coming from the Elbe Valley he would try to reach the Swiss frontier, which is very near. As a matter of fact, however, the general and his companion had boarded a train bound for Berlin. This entire adventure is almost unbe-

The peasant from Auvergne, with his white necktie and his black teeth, a cigarette hanging from his lips, his shrewd, cynical eyes half closed, spoke with ill-concealed fury:

Rejects Laval Proposal.

"What you have done is unpardonable, general. Your escape has irritated the Germans excessively. In order to make it possible for me to resume my negotiations with the Reich you will have to go back to Koenigstein."

That night they arrived at the place agreed upon for the departure, near the small village of Lavandou, on the rocks of Esterel, which drop down into theol sea. It was there that a submarine was " to come to pick up Gen. Giraud.

When they were about three-quarters of a mile off the shore, they began to flash the signals that had been agreed upon, with a flashlight, and after a momentother signals answered theirs. Soon alarge black mass appeared. It was the submarine. A voice called to them in English, and Beaufre answered giving the password, "O. K.!"

The boat drew up alongside the submarine. The general started to mount to the bridge of the submarine, but his, stiff leg was troubling him. He miscalculated the distance and would have fallen into the water if an English officer had not caught him. Two hours later the party arrived at Gibraltar.

At 9 o'clock on the evening of November 7 the London radio sent a triple message in French to North Africa:

"Listen, Yankee, Robert has arrived." "Listen, Lincoln, Robert has arrived."

"Listen, Franklin, Robert has arrived." This was the word agreed upon, the order to begin action in Algiers, Morocco and Tunisia.

At 2 a.m. the patriots of Giraud's organization took possession of Algiers and American troops landed along the entire African coast, from Agadir to Bone. # Virtues of Thrift and Self-Reliance Taught Worthwhile Need Filled By Children's Museum

By Margaret Hart,

Palatial mansions, once the scenes of lavish entertaining, are the answers to many necessities in war-crowded Washington. Housing Red Cross projects, voluntary defense organizations, as well as serving as headquarters for representatives of allied nations, former fashionable dwellings are beehives of serious activities.

Villa Rosa, 4215 Massachusetts avenue, once the home of Mrs. William Bailey Lamar and the late Judge Lamar and occupied in more recent years by several other prominent families, now resounds with many childish voices; for this spacious house, built and originally owned by former Representative and Mrs. Harry St. George Tucker, is the home of the Children's Museum. The museum is dedicated to the belief that the potentialities of a child cannot be guessed, must not terned after that of the Brooklyn Children's Museum, which was founded in 1899.

Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, wife of the Senator from Wisconsin, is one of the trustees of the Museum and has been one of its enthusiastic supporters. Others serving on the Board of Trustees are Mr. Leander Mc-Cormick-Goodhart, former Commercial Attache of the British Embassy; Mr. Huston Thompson, Dr. Alexander Wetmore, acting president of the District of Co-(Continued on Page D-7, Column 2.)

Eleanor Loudon, Patricia Franklin, Mrs. Richard Eaton, the volunteer instructor; Peter Eaton, Susan Marlow Paige and John Raymond. The museum has much to offer and the young students are faithful in their attendance.

LITTLE HANDS MAKE GARDENS FLOURISH. Dean Greger and his sister Gwendolyn, in the photograph at the right, are faithful workers in the plot assigned to them at the museum. Boys and girls between the ages of 6 and 15 years have planted their own seeds and are ever on the alert to bring doom to a weed or insect in their gardens. The children are permitted to take their crops home, one of the rewards for a task well done.

Central American Freedom Anniversaries Envoys Here to Mark Birth of Independence

By Katharine Brooks.

The first day of the spring season in Central America also is the independence day of those five republics. When those in the North American continent mark the beginning of the autumn our neighbors south of the Isthmus are looking toward spring and summer weather.

The start of the fight for freedom was made in San Salvador, the capital of El Salvador, by a priest, the Rev. Jose Matias Delgado, on November 5, 1811. Freedom of these five states which were part of the Kingdom of Guatemala under the domination of Spain was not accomplished until almost 11 years later. After the liberation from Spanish rule the states set up their own republics patterned after that of the United States. The heads of diplomatic missions from those republics joined move in and they may not be completely settled by the middle of September. The Ambassadors of Guatemala and El Salvador are enjoying vacations in their homelands, but probably will be back before the anniversary rolls around. The Honduras Ambassador and Senora de Caceres will follow their custom and will have a small group of guests lunch or dine with them informally on that day.

The new Nicaraguan Ambassador, Senor Don Alberto Sevilla Sacasa, presented his credentials Friday. He and Senora de Sevilla Sacasa probably will have some sort of celebration and by that time they may have become so well settled in Washington that the occasion will be their first large festivity.

be limited and should be encouraged to full development. If you visit the museum you will find scores of young boys and girls spending happy hours engaged in the study of creative art, science and many other subjects. You will be thankful that there are such places where children are given such warm encouragement and help. Especially is the museum invaluable when parents are met with the problem of what their children can do during vacation time.

A little more than a year ago a committee of leading men and women established the educational center. From the very first day of its opening the venture has been an overwhelming success. The Museum is pat-

News Notes Of Diplomats During Week

The Danish Minister and Mme de Kauffmann returned yesterday from several weeks visit in Santa Barbara, Calif., where they were guests of the former's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Axel de Kauffmann.

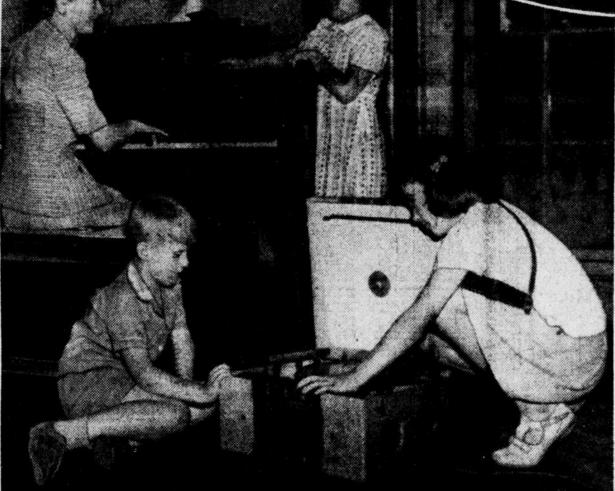

Mme. de Kauffmann will be here a short time before joining her daughters. Mlle, Tilda de Kauffmann and Mlle. Lisa de Kauffmann at North Haven, Me. where they are staying with their grandmother, Mrs. MacDougall, widow of Rear Admiral William Dougald MacDougall.

The Counselor of the Legation, M. Carl A. C. Brun, also is back after several weeks with Mme. Brun and their children who are at Cape Cod for the remainder of the summer. M. Brun probably will join them for a week and accompany them home at the end of the season.

M. Constantin Brun, uncle of the Counselor and for many years Minister though now honorary counselor of the Legation, is spending his first summer in Washington. For many years it was his custom to go to Bar Harbor for the hot weather but his only trip out of town was a short stay with the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles at Newport where they are spending a month or more.

The new Military Attache of the Swiss legation, Maj. Hans Notz, came to this country with the Swiss Minister, M. Charles Bruggmann, when the latter returned from a vacation in Berne, 10 days ago. Maj. Notz was accompanied by Mme. Notz and their two sons, Peter, nearly 18, and Beat, who is 14. They are staying at Wardman Park Hotel.

The able chairman of Gray Ladies at Gallinger Hospital is Mrs. Prentiss Willson, and very familiar she is with this particular hospital for she did medical social work there long before the war. When we asked her where she took her Gray Lady training she told us it was in the first class of Gray Ladies trained at Gallinger and that it was she herself who had arranged the class of which she was a member.

Ever since she was a very young woman Mrs. Willson has been interested in medical social service, so she's a natural for the war work she is doing now. As president of the Mother's Health Association she did such a good job that she has remained president of the same organization under its more recent and broader title, the Plan Parenthood Association of the District of Columbia (the title was changed to conform to the national organization). in celebrating the 100th anniversary back in 1921 when they gave a reception at the Pan-American Union. Since then the individual envoys of Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua have had their own, much smaller observances each year. The celebrating of independence in 1943 carries even more significance than in the years through the 1920s, for the freedom of so many peoples, taken from them, seems now a possibility again in the not too distant future.

The Costa Rican Ambassador and Senora de Escalante probably will have a joint celebration of the independence anniversary and the establishment of their new Embassy. The Costa Rican government has purchased the house at 2112 S street, which is the former home of the late Mrs. S. Stokes Halkett, prominent for many years in Capital resident society, who died in February.

When the Ambassador and his family will move from the apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street, where the Legation was established for some years before its recent elevation to an Embassy, is not known. There probably will be some changes made in the house before the diplomats ne Peruvian An nor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, gave one of the small and informal celebrations last week when he entertained his Embassy staff and their wives at luncheon Wednesday in observance of Peru's independence. The Ambassador, because his length of service at this Capital is longer than the head of any other diplomatic mission, is dean of the corps. He has taken this honor less seriously than many of his predecessors and has continued to entertain in his accustomed way, guests never being many at a time. He is one of the very popular members of the corps and has served his country here for 14 years, having presented his credentials July 24, 1930.

The Ambassador is a native of the District of Columbia, having been born in the Legation, then on Rhode Island avenue where St. Matthews' Cathedral now stands. His father, the late Senor Manuel de Freyre, then was Peruvian Minister at Washington and the Legation was not raised to an Embassy until some years later. The Ambassador is a grandson of the great Colombian patriot and liberator, Gen. Francisco Santander. The Ambassador was among those attending (Continued on Page D-2, Column 4.)

The next of our Latin-American neighbors to have a "4th of July" is Uruguay, their anniversary falling on August 25. The Ambassador and Senora de Blanco have made no plan for any celebration but like many of the others probably will be hosts to a small group of their countrymen at some time during the day or evening.

The 100th anniversary of this day was celebrated in 1930 by the Minister, Dr. J. Dr. and Senora de Varela and their daughter made a wide circle of friends in this Capital during their 14 years here. The Minister came in May, 1920 and after some time as dean of Ministers he retired from the diplomatic service. Their departure from the Corps here was widely regretted.

lumbia Audubon Society: Mrs. Clifford Folger, Mrs. Herbert Greger and Mr. Lawrence Vail Coleman, director of the American Association of Museums. Miss Matilda Young, efficient and inspiring director of the Museum, is happy in the fact that the children are responsible in a large measure for the smooth running of the center.

There is a Junior Board of Trustees, children who have distinguished themselves as leaders, and with sound ideas for the various programs of study offered. Karen Karsten, who instructs the class in minerals, is the only girl on the board. The other members are Stephen Stewart, Lowell Swortzell, Michael Berla, Dick and David van Fossen and Chum Hall.

The junior trustees are not the only children who assist at the Museum, for a younger group helps in keeping the grounds tidy. Still another group acts as guides for visitors.

The Children's Museum is open to all children without charge, but it is entirely dependent for support on contributions and memberships. There are now 600 children who hold membershin It is not compulsory, however, to do so in order to attend the classes at the Museum. Many of the adults who are members are childless, giving their support to the center to help some little child ing, soft rolls, curls, or Encouraging the children in thrift and self reliance the director suggests that they earn the money for their membership rather than seek financial help from their parents. One boy earned 50 cents by polishing silver for a neighbor. The other 50 cents needed for his dollar membership was made by delivering groceries. Some children have paid for the membership on the installment plan, paying as little > as 5 cents at a time. There are ever so many little ways in which the children are inspired. For example, in the cooking class when a good cake is turned out the baker is permitted to wear a chef's cap. This is the highest honor of this class.

Strangely enough the cooking and sewing classes are most popular with the boys. Miss Young found the answer to this when she inquired of one of the older boys why this was true. His answer was, "Well, we will have doing his share on his plot, his plot is turned over to another child willing to do the work. In the past few weeks baskets of vegetables have been taken home proudly by the little farmers for their parents to admire and enjoy. While the Museum is open at 11 o'clock in the morning and closes at 5 o'clock many of the children are on the steps of Villa Rosa before the opening hour. Children take their lunches with them and one enterprising boy, Donald Hand has opened a pop stand which has become quite popular with the students. All of the staff of the Museum are volunteers. No salaries are paid. Even the custodian and his wife's services have been paid for by some friend of the center. The regular volunteer staff for the summer months, in addition to its capable and understanding director, includes Miss Emily Pribble, Mrs. Anne Thurman.

Randolph Mengers, This is the study of the camera and the children take and develop their own films. They always are anxious to have films to develop and only a nominal charge is asked for this service. Villa Rosa has been loaned to the Children's Museum only for the duration. It is the hope of all concerned that the Museum will be able to purchase the

CALLER ETT The Suit's the Thing for Fall!

A good suit, like a good wife, is easy to live with. It becomes part of you, part of your life. It's simple and matter of fact when you want it to be, soft and charming when you are, and can be as gala as the most gala evening you have on your calendar. In other words, you never have to live up to a suit, yet a good suit will always live up to you.

Of course, not all suits are such good companions! Like some friends, some suits are good for only one mood. But they are not the suits for this busy year. The suit of the year is the suit that is simple, wearable, versatile-an all-day, every-day outfit that you can wear from dawn to dark with a change of accessories.

bine two colors for a dramatic

You'll find many of these good versatile suits this fall. They all have the new 1943 look-slim and pared-to-the-bone. However, suits are straight up and down rather than skin-tight. They're stripped of unnecessary fabric-as well as all the gee-gaws that detract from really good lines. Jackets are slim-looking, but not "skinny" relying on straight sleeves, smooth shoulders, smaller collars and revers for their lines. Narrow shawl collars often replace the classic notched lapel on the smartest new suits. The waistcoat front, strategically placed buttons, such as is shown in the suit to the right, and deft shirrings are other slim-making tricks that flatter the figure. Jackets are often short this year. and one of the newest is the short boxy cutaway. Longer jackets may be boxy, too, sometimes with fur tuxedos for a 1943 look.

A charming compromise on the severe theme is the bloused top, stark straight skirt which gives the smooth effect of a broader top flowing into a whittled waistline. With a set-in belt and slight peplum, this is a suit that is very kind to the figure.

Pockets carry more than your bus tokens this year. They carry fashion news, too, and they're part of the fun in fashion. Some pockets are just bows with the loops forming the pocket, while others, like the one in the picture, "sprout" cabbages (the material is whooshed into the shape of a cabbage). Beads, fur, contrasting fabric-all are used to pretty the pockets on suits.

"What about the skirts, are they really stark-straight?" you ask. Well, the average woman will find them most attractive and wearable, but if you tend to be "broad in the beam" (pardon our frankness), it would be a good idea for you to start right now whittling yourself into shape. olive green suit with touches of Chinese red peeking out from the tunic beneath. On the other hand, if subtlety is your fashion forte, you'd love such a suit as the one with a dark brown waistcoat jacket and skirt of elephant gray-very subtle, very smart.

Tweeds have stepped out of character this year. No more will novelists be able to picture a girl as the "type who wears tweeds" because there are many types of tweeds this year and many types of women will wear them. Actually, they've come in from the country and had themselves glamorized. Tweed suits sport jeweled buttons and satin blouses, so that you might find yourself wearing a tweed suit with pullover sweater and blouse for day-and changing to a sequinned sweater for dinner. Claire McCardell has done a winter version of her famous summer backless halter dress-this oné a rose tweed halter vest with trouser skirt which she shows with a high necked sweater, matching tweed jacket and soft felt fedora. On the other hand, Hattie Carnegie shows a tweed suit with brocade blouse-so that will give you a rough idea of the suburban-urban range of tweeds this season.

If you have a good backlog of regular suits in your wardrobe, you might want to buy a dinner suit. Designers have raided men's wardrobes for wonderful new evening chichi such as a short winter blue wool dinner jacket suit with satin lapels, or Carnegie's tuxedo dinner costume with beaded stripes down the sides of the skirt. They're very, very new, and, in these days, when so many of us travel to and from parties on buses, they're discreet enough not to make you conspicuous as you travel hither and thither. All in all, we'd say that the new suits are slim and sparing of fabric-without sparing one whit of flattery and that this year, of all years, when you'll expect a lot of the clothes you buy, your first and best buy will be a suit.

Washington Wears

"Getting away from it all" has certainly been hard to accomplish this wartime summer, but determined souls, who realize the value of a few hours of play and relaxation in the open air, brave the rigors of bus and street car to get out into the open on Sundays. And, as always, in and about Washington, smart and suitable costumes are the order of the day.

Like a flash of sunshine across blue water was pretty Louise Dilworth, sunning beside a sparkling pool in a ballet-skirted bathing suit of canary yellow, shirred about the bodice, below the crossed shoulder straps. Her cap exactly matched. . . . Barbara Iselin and her handsome mother chose duplicate suits of sharkskin-in wide, vertical stripes-Mrs. Iselin's in navy and white, and Barbara's pale blue and white. . . . Playing a fast and expert game of tennis was brunette Mary Churchill, in classic white pique, slimly fitted to a beltless waistline. . . . Also in white pique, but this time on the golf links, Louise Claytor made a refreshing summertime picture.

Jeanne Brown rides early in the morning these days, wearing beautifully cut tan jodhpurs, well polished boots, and a soft, white silk shirt open at the neck. Her long bob is caught up into a businesslike net. . . . Walking her dog, Patsy, through the park, Mrs. William B. Mason looked smart and cool the other day in a dusty blue shantung frock, low-heeled brown and white shoes, and a broad brimmed brown and white hat. . . . Col. Freddy Warburg plays tennis in shorts and a natty white sweat shirt neatly monogrammed in blue on the chest. Picnicking on their front lawn, out Virginia way, the Tom Joneses, and their beguiling little daughters entertained their friends. The two young Misses Jones did a sister act in pinafore frocks of ruffled red and white gingham, over crisp white blouses. Their socks were white, their shoes red ankle strap "Mary Janes," and the bows in their hair of red and white check.

... Another fashion plate among the very younger set was curly haired Linda Leavell, in strawberry appliqued white linen.

The pros and cons of short or long dinner costumes still rage in the fashion world. Both lengths have their adherents among the smartest women. Sponsoring the graceful, floorreaching skirt are such stylesetters as Mrs. Warren Pierson, whose gown is of electric blue crepe, and Mrs. Nathan Scott. who chooses powder blue, slim and trailing, set off with a superb diamond clip. . . . On the other side, we noted Mrs. John Morton and Mrs. William Stettinius, who looked chic and charming dining in the garden of the 1925 F Street Club the other evening in streetlength, but definitely formal frocks. Mrs. Morton's black crepe had black lace sleeves and a black tunic, and Mrs. Stettinius wore a black and white print. Both ladies perched tiny black skull caps, frothing with veiling, atop their curls. Speaking of prints, they have never been in higher favor than now. Lanier Mitchell's black afternoon dress is printed with tiny pink roses. . . . Mrs. Hoyer Millar, wife of the Courselor of the British Embassy, chooses pastel flowers on a white ground. ... Mrs. Noland Hussey's blackand-yellow print was much admired at a cocktail party given for Mrs. Hussey and her Army husband just before their departure for the West. . . . And Mrs. F. Moran McConihe, one of Washington's real beauties, looks cool as a cucumber in a slim frock of white, printed with tiny black flowers.

Lunching with friends in popular restaurant, we glimpsed the always lovely Evie Robert, is simple and severe brown linen, with a great cluster of pink roses tucked at the back of her golden hair. . . . At another table was chic and soignee Mrs. George Holmes, just back from San Francisco, looking urban and exceedingly smart all in black, with a huge black picture hat to complete the flattering effect.

At the openings of the fall fashion collections in New York recently, the press was given a glimpse into the fashion future under wartime restrictions. Among the outstanding creations was this one of Anthony Blotta's-

Complexion

By Patricia Lindsay It is wrong to consider facial blemishes as an ailment to be treated on the outside of the body only. All acnes are caused by a disturbed chemical functioning of the body-the conditioning might be caused by a food allergy, by a latent infection in the body such as at the root of a tooth, or by a nervous digestive tract. Underweight and overweight are also common causes. Any skin which is chronically blemished demands the attention of a physicianpossibly a skin physician.

But local treatment is necessary also. One must keep the skin meticulously clean, refrain from using cosmetic creams or lotions unless the skin is so dry it irritates, and one should resort to the use of medicated drying lotion or cream. There are several very effective formulas on the market. These prevent further local infection and dry up the tiny pimples and other eruptions which usually annoy one.

Of course the sun is one of the greatest sterilizers-it acts as a powerful germicide on the facial eruptions. That is why blemished skinned girls should take frequent sun baths-beginning with only 10 minutes a day and working up to an hour or two. Once their skin gets conditioned to the sun they will not need any suntan lotion or cream. But unless the sun baths are taken by degrees their faces will burn. Usually two or three months of direct sun treatment, with a watchful eye on diet and skin cleanliness, are sufficient to clear the skin. The next problem is to keep it clear.

"In M-y day," said grandmother, "Girls weren't l-i-k-e that." You should have seen her when she noticed a girl going down the street in slacks. When I think of what a girl has to do today . . . work, take care of her brother's affairs while he's in the service, keep the boy friends cheerful . . .

Ann called out: "Are you talking to yourself?" "I certainly am!" answered Betty. "I'm shouting that suits and clothes today are better than they ever were . . . especially when you shop at L. Frank Company . . .

"Look at this wonderful WOOL suit, fine SHETLAND wool . . . L. Frank Company have always been suit headquarters, and this is proof if you ever want it! It's the kind of suit you want to buy right away and be sure to have it to wear for all those hundreds of times you'll need it!" "You're convincing," said Ann, and I do believe every suit-minded girl should get it tomorrow!

Each year thousands of timid young women, who never have been told certain facts, enter marriage completely unin-formed. In this dilemma, what is the young wife to do? KID SISTERS: They're one of boyhood's problems.. Sometimes fun, sometimes just a pain! This one is being permitted to come along on the hike, after saying "please" at least a hundred times. For more about boys, see Page 2.

LAST GIRL

UNFORGETTABLE. "And the last girl I saw," the boys write home from New Guinea and Hawaii and New Zealand, "was a cute little number who waved good-by to us and threw kisses. Never saw her before in my life but I don't think any of us will ever forget her."

The girl the boys remember is Irma Spahr, a 27-year-old War Department typist and clerk, the only girl worker at the San Francisco Port of Embarkation.

Irma may not be decorating any barracks walls in Guadalcanal, but she's more vivid in the boys' minds than half a dozen full-length pictures of Rita Hayworth or Lana Turner.

WHISTLE GIRL. Being an American girl — and the boys being American soldiers — Irma has been whistled at more frequently than any other girl in the world. She has been serenaded by as few as 10 men at a time and as many as five or six hundred; she's had good-bys shouted to her by entire divisions; and she's been dated facetiously by departing soldiers who can't resist shouting, "I'll meet you at the corner of Market and Geary my first day back," as their ships start to pull out.

"After a year of it, I still gulp," she says.

She remembers one shipload of soldiers breaking into a rousing chorus of "Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition" as their craft sailed out of the harbor. Then, as the skyline of San Francisco became more hazy they joined in a quieter chorus of "Aloha." "Even the high-ranking officials standing on the pier had a hard time maintaining their military composure

FOR A STRONG AND UNITED AMERICA *

ENCHANTED WORLD

It's the world of boyhood. See what it means to the men of tomorrow...

by Herbert Hoover

There are two jobs for American boys today. One is being a boy. The other is growing up to be a man. Both jobs are important. Both are packed with excitement, great undertakings, high adventure.

Sometimes a boy's elders seriously interfere with his sheer joy in being a boy. They fill the department of growing up to be a man with grief and trouble. They create daily problems about everything: about health, about being made to eat food that is "good for you," washing around neck and ears, keeping neat, with special unreasonableness about rusty jackknives and prized collections of snakes and toads.

There is a constant checkup to make sure that a boy's every waking activity is a constructive joy, not destructive glee. There is moral and spiritual instruction. And there is going to school. There are many disciplines, directions, urgings and pleadings from elders that no boy understands until he has become a man himself.

But then he looks backward to the enchanted boy's world in which he once lived so splendidly. And he finds its memory one of his most precious personal possessions.

I was a boy in the days before our civilization became so perfect; before it was paved with cement and made of bricks. Boys were not so largely separated from Mother Earth and all her works. And that was before the machine age denied them their natural right as primitive, combative animals, to match their wits with bird and animal and insect.

IN THE course of my life, I have eaten presumably the best food in the world, served with the customary ceremony and ritual. But no royal gournet or no Ritz has ever provided me with game of such wondrous flavor as birds cooked over a small boy's campfire; pigeons from Iowa's woods and prairie chickens from her hedges, hunted down by our gang with homemade bows and arrows, and slingshots.

We cooked and ate fish of our own catching. Not with tackle assembled from the steel of Damascus, bamboos of Siam, tin of Penang, silver of Colorado or artificial flies of many colors. We got more fish with a self-made willow pole, a butcher-string line, and ten-for-a-dime hooks than I have ever got since. Our decoy was a section of angle worm, dug by us, and our good-luck incantation was to spit on the bait. We lived in a time when a fish used to bite instead of strike, and we knew it bit when the cork bobbed. We were masters of the art of trapping rabbits in cracker boxes half-opened by a figure 4.

On crisp winter nights we whizzed down gigantic snow-clad hills at deathdefying speeds — on sleds made by us. And on hot summer days we went swimming in a hole under willows, by the railroad bridge. There was nice healthy mud in that hole and it always attached itself to us. No spa has a more satisfactory mudbath to offer its clientele.

B<sub>UT</sub> my boyhood was not all adventure and high living. There was also school. There were also farm chores. There was also strict discipline, for mine was a Quaker family with strong views regarding the corruption of youth. It was a condition of the other freedoms that I read and be questioned on one chapter of the Bible each day. At times I felt injustice was done by the extra-long chapters. They were kindly folks. They believed in a boy's being a boy, but they were resolute on a boy's growing up to be an honest, self-respecting member of human society.

Since one of the saddest things in the world is that boys must grow up into the land of realities, I think there should be a special Bill of Rights for boys, as boys:

Like everyone else, a boy has a right to the pursuit of happiness. He has the right to the kind of play that will stretch his imagination, tax his ingenuity, sharpen his wits, challenge his prowess and keep his self-starter going.

He has the right to the satisfaction of that thirst to explore the world around him, every bit of which is new to him, and to explore the land of make-believe at will.

He has the right to affection and friendship. He has the right to the sense of security in belonging to some group. He is by nature gregarious, and the cultivation of that instinct will bring him many joys and helps in life.

He has the right to health protections that will make him an inch taller than his dad. He has the right to education and training that will fit him into a job he likes when he becomes a man.

These are the rights of boys and it's

SIDELINES

HOT HORN. Here, we think, is the success story of the war. As anybody who knows anything at all about soldiers can tell you, there is no G.I. less popular than the guy who wakes them up in the morning.

Bugler Clarence Zylman brooded about that. When he was shipped overseas, he still brooded. One morning, though, when he blew First Call, what do you think he got? Applause! His secret: he blew the Call in swing time, became the AEF's first boogie-woogie bugle boy. As a reward for virtue, Hepcat Zylman has been sent on a tour of camps. His job: teaching other buglers how to swing it.

LIGHTS ON. An odd bit of information from fighter pilots in North Africa: total blackouts as defense against air raids are the rule everywhere except on Gibraltar. There, the minute the alert sounds, lights go on. Reason is that near-by neutral Spain keeps its lights on, makes Gibraltar a perfect silhouette if it blacks out. When it's lighted, the fortress, from the air, is indistinguishable from the mainland. That's had one other effect: Spaniards, wanting no bombs to fall on them by mistake, have built a lighted arrow pointing toward Gibraltar.

that time," she says.

Irma not only sees the boys go over - she's also on hand when they come back.

"They're thinner and more quiet after months of real fighting," she adds, "but they're still American enough to whistle at a girl -awhole shipload of them - God love 'em!" - BARBARA BERCH up to us, as adults, to see that they have them. The glory of the nation rests in the character of her men. And character comes from boyhood. Thus every boy is a challenge to his elders. It is for them that we must win the war — it is for them that we must make a just and lasting peace. For the world of tomorrow, about which all of us are dreaming and planning, will be carried forward by the boys of today.

Simple Buying Guide

For Fresh Fruits and Vegetables. What to Choose to Get Good Nutrition

1. Green or yellow vegetables or fruits are high in vitamin A. First choices: carrots, spinach, peas, beans, squash, sweet potatoes, turnip greens, yellow corn.

3. Include one or more of these, raw or 'cooked, for additional vitamins and minerals. First choices: white potatoes, turnips, parsnips, beets, grapes, peaches, raw apples.

2. These are the best of the few good sources of vitamin C. First choice: oranges, then lemons, grapefruit, tomatoes, raw cabbage.

Two things come home to you when you study this guide.

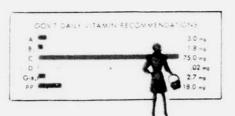

First-the fresh fruits and vegetables have a wealth of vitamins and minerals to offer you. So if you're eating more of them now - that's good !

Second-some are high in one vitamin, some in another. That's why you should serve from each group every day.

Remember, too, that all your vitamin C must come from the fruits and vegetables you buy or grow. In fact, the more you know about food, the more you will get from it. "The government says to eat something from each of these groups every day"

While all the vitamins are equally important, you need more of some than of others. And some are harder to get. VitaminC, for example, is found in few foods. Yet you need large amounts every day (your body cannot store it) to resist fatigue and infection, protect teeth and gums, and keep the vigor of youth.

The easiest way to get your full day's quota of vitamin C is to drink a 6 to 8

Convoys are taking large quantities of juice and concentrates to our armed forces and allies. So even though crops have been greatly increased in recent years, we must now make every orange count.

You can help. If you strain the juice, use a coarse sieve, and stir the healthful pulp through. Keep oranges in a cool, wellaired place. CLARENCE WOODBURY, writer of important magazine articles, is himself a veteran. He was a U.S. soldier in World War I ... a war correspondent in World War II

IN THE little town where I live we recently put up a handsome plaque on Main Street. It contains the names of all the local boys in the armed forces. We're mighty proud of them, of course, but every time we look at that roll of honor, a lot of us wonder what is going to happen when the boys come home. Shall we be able to fit them back into civilian life or will many of today's shining heroes become tomorrow's lost generation of dependents and misfits?

There's Joe, for example, the redheaded kid who used to mow lawns for 50 cents an hour. Now he's dropping bombs on Japs in the South Pacific. Will a hero like Joe have to go back to odd jobs when the war is over?

There's Henry, who had just entered college. He's an ensign in the Navy. Will he be satisfied to return to school as a freshman after bossing grown men on the high seas?

Will they become a "lost generation"? What about jobs for them? What about adjustments back to civil life? These are big problems: How is America preparing to cope with them?

by Clarence Woodbury

What are we going to do about them? Most of us remember the hectic years which followed the Armistice in 1918 - years of frustration and unhappiness for many ex-servicemen and their families. Are we going to be in for a similar period, only many times worse, at the end of this war?

We started thinking about war a good many months before Pearl Harbor, and it is well for us that we did. Now is the time for us to start focusing on our greatest postwar problem. While our main energies are bent on victory, it is not too early to start making sure that every ex-serviceman is given the opportunity to readjust economically, mentally and spiritually to a peacetime world.

In an effort to find out what already is being done about this great question, and what is contemplated after the war, I have consulted the heads of the many different Washington bureaus and agencies which are concerned with the soldier's future. I have interviewed experts on re-employment, rehabilitation and vocational training; talked with welfare directors, economic planners and high officers of the armed services. Outside of the government, I have queried industrialists and economists, educators and psychiatrists. On every hand, I found reason for the fighting man and his family to feel optimistic about the future. The veteran question is not being overlooked or neglected. A tremendous amount of serious thought and planning is being expended to ease the discharged service man's return to civilian life. Few people realize it, but we already are engaged in a gigantic program of veteran rehabilitation. Right now, with our armed forces not yet at their manpower peak, we are discharging men from the services at the rate of 1,000 a day. They are released for various reasons, including age, health and battle injuries. By the end of this year the number discharged since 1940 will total 1,100,000. For the most part, these veterans are being handled with great efficiency.

Private X Gets a Break

TAKE, for example, the typical case of Private X who developed stomach ulcers while serving in North Africa. Army doctors decided he was no longer fit for service and sent him back home for further hospitalization. Here upon recovery, he was handed a Certificate of Disability Discharge.

Immediately, powerful organizations went to bat for him. The Re-employment Division of the Selective Service System offered to get his old job back for him, or find him another one. The Veterans Administration and the Federal Security Agency invited him to take vocational training. The U.S. Employment Service offered to place him in Civil Service or private industry.

Before the war, Private X had been an $18-a-week grocery clerk, but now he had higher ambitions. After studying his military and civilian record, vocational-guidance experts suggested that he become an aviationinstrument maker. Uncle Sam trained him for the job and today he is earning $42 a week. Like thousands of other veterans, he can thank the present rehabilitation program for the best break of his life. O. D. Hollenbeck, chief of veterans' employment in the War Manpower Commission, told me that the field offices of the U.S. Employment Service alone put 220,000 veterans in jobs last year. If expanded, he said, the same machinery of job placement would serve to re-employ millions of ex-servicemen after the war.

But the pessimists point out that conditions won't be the same after the war. When the bulk of the boys come home, they say, war production will be over. Those who had jobs have been guaranteed, by law, that they can have them back, but in thousands of cases the jobs will no longer exist. Other men had no jobs. Still others were in business for themselves or in professions.

This is true, but viewers-with-alarm fail to consider the many advantageous factors. In the first place, over 10,000,000 fighting men will not all be released at once. If Germany is knocked out before Japan, it may be possible to demobilize several million men then and there. In such an event, industry can also get an early start at reconversion, which would ease the whole problem of reemployment. Another factor in favor of the job-seeking veteran: millions of women and elderly workers who are helping to keep the wheels turning will be only too glad to retire when peace comes.

From all current forecasts, we shall witness a period of greater prosperity than we have ever seen before. The American people will be starved for the consumer goods they have been denied during the war years - everything from rubber tires to pressure cookers. All kinds of worn-out equipment will have to be replaced - from locomotives to radio sets. A huge home-building program is visualized. Brand-new industries are in the offing.

Preview of Peacetime

AND it is not only our own markets we shall have to supply. With the ocean lanes open again, other countries will be clamoring for our raw materials and manufactured goods. Experts say we shall have to feed the world for a long time after the war, and also help rebuild it. It can be imagined how this will stimulate agriculture and the whole field of American business. All this will mean a demand for manpower and more manpower. Industry can be expected to gobble millions of veterans as fast as they lay aside their uniforms.

There's Don, married, who had a good job in a defense plant. But there won't be any more defense work when he comes home.

Doing It Right This Time

EACH one of those boys will represent a different kind of problem when the shooting's over, and they are only three of many servicemen from our town. Our town is only a tiny cross-section of America. When Hitler and Hirohito are licked the nation will have millions of Joes, Henrys and Dons to deal with.

For those who can't be absorbed at once, government-sponsored "made" work is in prospect. These plans may take the form of great public-works projects which can be started or stopped as labor conditions warrant. The Committee for Economic Development, composed of leading industrialists, is also working on a vast program of re-employment that promises thousands of new jobs.

TW-8-1-43

The veteran's chances of getting a job will also be enhanced by the fact that, in innumerable cases, he will be more desirable employee material than he was when he entered the service. Uncle Sam has converted men who never had a trade before into fine machinists. molders, welders, cooks, pharmacists. Others have learned about all there is to know about automobiles, radios, airplane engines. The list is endless.

New Skills - New Jobs

N A recent issue, THIS WEEK Magazine told how the hosts of meteorologists trained by the Army and Navy will turn to formerly undreamed-of projects - the air-conditioning of whole cities, the reclaiming of arid regions, the control of crop weather. In many other fields, the new techniques and skills developed in the armed forces will improve our way of life - and create new opportunities.

Not every serviceman will have a skill applicable to peacetime conditions, but a gigantic program of vocational training is envisioned - a program to provide practical schooling not only for those suffering from disabilities, but for every veteran who needs it.

Frederic G. Elton, Regional Supervisor of the Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation, told me that this contemplated program promises to be far more effective than similar projects in the past. The mistakes which followed the last war will be avoided. Vocational guidance has become a science.

Bills now before Congress contemplate outright grants to help returning students pay their way through school. Inside the services, The United States Armed Forces Institute is keeping a close record of courses taken and technical work accomplished by ex-students during their military career. These records will be forwarded to colleges and universities and returning students given actual credits for the work they have done while in the forces. Many a boy will find himself much further along when he returns to school than he was when he left.

How will the veteran support himself during the period while he is being trained for a job or seeking one? If demobilization is relatively rapid, many men may need financial assistance. Several plans are under consideration. Ewan Clague, Director of the Bureau of Employment Security, discussed several of them with me. Bonus bills already are before Congress. Other proposals look toward giving the ex-serviceman six months' pay when he is discharged or keeping him temporarily on the Army pay roll after he dons civvies. Still other plans suggest a form of unemployment insurance. In one way or another, the veteran is certain to get financial help if he needs it.

But putting our millions of veterans back to work, or training them, will be only a part of the gigantic task of rehabilitating them. If that he's here he feels like a fish out of water.

Mental experts say we can expect a great deal of this kind of restlessness after the peace bells ring, and it won't be confined to younger men who had not established themselves firmly in civilian life before the war. Thousands of older men will come home with changed ideas. There will be an unprecedented amount of flitting from job to job.

To understand this uneasiness, the psychiatrists say we must realize it will be rooted in fantasy. When the soldier returns he probably won't find home quite as delightful as he had fancied it while at the front. Moreover, people and conditions actually will have changed. Disillusionment is likely to be severe and, in revolt, he will strike out in search of a new world.

Cure For the Jitters

WHAT can we do about this approaching wave of postwar restlessness?

For one thing, men in the service should be kept informed of the changes taking place in their communities and among their former associates. That will lessen the shock of disillusionment. For another thing, friends, relatives and employers of veterans must make allowances. They must realize that, often as not, discontent will be a splendid thing - men will uncover new opportunities.

Which brings up another important question - initiative. How much of it will the average ex-serviceman have?

Before the war is over there probably will be millions of men in uniform who have undergone three, four, five years of military service. While in the Army or Navy they are taken care of. They are fed, clothed, hospitalized. Their dependents are provided for. Much of their thinking is even done for them.

Some gloom-mongers say that when the serviceman is thrust back into civilian life he will have lost the ability to shift for himself. They say he will seek someone to lean on become the prev of demagogues, the fodder of which crime waves are made.

I put these questions to Col. Roy P. Halloran, chief psychiatrist of the Surgeon General's staff. He saw no cause for alarm. The Army does not stultify individual enterprise, he said. On the contrary, it encourages the taking of responsibility in a thousand and one ways. Then, counter balancing any sense of dependence will be the many benefits gained from military service.

In the forces, men's physical health is built up. Consequently, their mental health is improved. They learn self-discipline, teamwork, how to get along with people. Through travel, new friendships, new experience, their horizons are being constantly widened. When the boys come home our whole national culture will be enriched. That may be looking at the future through

The Case of PRIVATE HARRISON

He's already back from the Army - and his story is typical of what will happen when peace comes

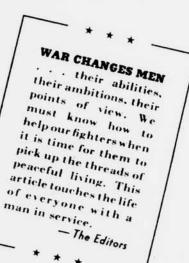

A VOLUNTEER, Harrison was recently discharged because of a hand injury. He had driven a taxi before the war. but wanted to get a better job, so ...

HE ASKED FOR TRAINING to refit him into civilian life. Government heads placed him in a trade school to learn to be a lathe hand. When he finishes . . .

Colleges and universities are planning special inducements to encourage students to resume interrupted courses, and educators do not think this will be as difficult as it was after World War I. Then, many a veteran returned to college to find that most of his old classmates had moved on. He felt "left behind" and, consequently dropped out of school. In this war, the great majority of college men are in the Army or Navy. They can go back together. Those who remained on the campus will be the minority.

Uncle Sam will also help the college man.

we are to avoid widespread discontent and unhappiness, we must also give consideration to their psychological readjustment.

Take, for instance, the case of Fred - a case which a Red Cross psychiatric social worker told me about. A few months ago, Fred lost two toes when a shell exploded near him in New Guinea. Before the war he had held a steady job as a bookkeeper and he went back to his old position. But he resigned after two weeks, took three other jobs and gave them all up. Fred doesn't know what he wants. He dreamed day and night of home, but now rose-tinted glasses, but after examining the various aspects of the approaching veteran problem I see no cause for pessimism. Many wise steps already have been taken and other great schemes are afoot.

When Joe, Henry and Don return to my town, and yours, we can expect a period of economic flurry, of job turnover. There will be some unrest, but there is no cause for downat-the-mouth talk about a "lost generation." Rather, we should hail our returning fighters as our most promising generation.

HE'LL GET A GOOD JOB paying $60-$70 a week. Uncle Sam is already mapping out a huge program to give similar training to the boys who beat the Axis

E HUMAN beings pride ourselves on keeping clean and tidy, but actually animals spend far more time bathing than we do. Out of the 2,000 or so species that we have at the Bronx Zoo, I can't think of one that ever stayed dirty out of preference.

But of course there are all kinds of baths - mud baths and dust baths as well as water baths. Wild swine use mud as a balm for their skin. Rhinos and elephants use it too, but also like a real water dunking. Birds take a dust bath - it keeps their feathers clean.

Big cats are like your own tabby - practically all of them hate water; if an emergency arises, a keeper can back off the toughest of customers with a hose. But lions and tigers have efficient washcloths just the same - their tongues.

As a rule, animals are capable of keeping themselves clean; our rare Haitian solenodon had a unique problem, though: he wasn't dirty but he had a natural fragrance that made him none too popular. So once a week a keeper scrubbed the long-nosed little fellow with - believe it or not - lilac-scented soap!

T IS surprising what a little sentiment will do for you in America. Long ago Carl with his shrewd, heavily-spectacled eyes, his ruthless mouth, his wisdom that had taken him high in the Party - had said:

"The people over in America are like that; but I surely do not need to tell you, Otto, who know them so well, even to their impossible and decadent slang. Still, bear it always in mind and you will find your work there much easier."

That is something to remember, Otto, now when at last they have you tagged and labeled, and are hot on your tail. " ... Wellbuilt with gray-blue eyes, large scar on left forearm. Wearing dark pin-stripe suit and gray fedora hat. This man is a dangerous enemy agent. Last seen traveling alone in stolen blue sedan, going west on highway . . .' Snap the thing off, Otto. Don't let it get on your nerves. But what are you going to do about it?

At least it would soon be dusk. That was good. The highway had little traffic. Also good. Presently a solitary figure appeared ahead. In uniform. Wait, Otto! Use your wits. "Hullo, soldier. Like a ride?"

"Thanks."

The car lunged forward along a bleak stretch of highway fringed by swampy woodlots. "Going far?" "Home, I hope."

"Where's home?"

The soldier told him.

Always know the geography of an enemy country, Otto. It's useful. "You've got a long way to go, soldier." "People are pretty decent when a guy is in uniform."

Make a note of that, Otto.

"You see, sir, I got a short leave suddenly, and I figured I just had to see my missus and kids. If it's of any interest to you, there they are." A small, cheap folder held the snapshot. "That's Private Bill Jenkins' family up to date."

A family man, Otto. With kids. You're in luck. That road ahead turning into the woodlot ought to do.

"Hey, what's the idea?"

"I hope you don't mind, soldier, but we've got to eat. I've enough for us both. I like to get off the highway and be quiet. Think I was kidnaping you?"

"Who - me?"

They both laughed.

"Cigarette?"

"Thanks."

"Let's have a squint at that picture again before the light goes. I'm a family man myself, soldier. Nice looking lot."

"Well, it's not really so good of my missus. She's a damsite prettier than that. Good of the kids, though. That's Ailsa - my eldest. Going to high school presently. The one next the baby is Mary. Some kid. You should hear her sing. First thing when I get home-"

Your gun now, Otto. No shooting; that might be heard. Just let him have the butt while he's engrossed in the picture. Now you become a soldier and he a civilian. He'll likely be there a long time when you prop him up slumped over the wheel. Don't forget the picture, Otto. That's worth its weight

"People are pretty decent when a guy is in uniform."

"So they should be. I got a boy at the war myself. What you say your name was?" "Jenkins, Private Bill Jenkins."

"Well now, look Bill -- my farm's just a mile along here, but if you'd like a bite to eat and a bed overnight, we'd be tickled to have you, and maybe we could fix you up for a ride in the morning."

Think that over, Otto. The police will be out on the highways watching, scouring the roads for you. You'll be inside - cozy, warm, safe in the simple friendliness of this farmhouse.

COME in, Bill. We've got a guest for the night, Mother. This is Bill Jenkins. Susan

"This way, Bill. It's awful nice having you - There, that's the room. And the bathroom's at the end of the hall. You'll find clean towels - '

You're in luck, Otto. Friendly voices downstairs. Friendly faces around a table piled with good food; then an after-meal repletion, the blue curl of smoke from Mr. Brown's pipe; Susan curled up on a couch knitting for Joe. Mrs. Brown sewing, listening, talking of Joe.

"Yes, sir, Joe's over there now, helping to lick the Huns. We're all trying to do our bit - especially Susan. Y'know, Mother, Susan can take Bill in on the truck when she drives to town in the morning."

"Well, I – '

What's on her mind, Otto? You never know about these women. They get ideas. She's got one now. She's not sure about you going with Susan. Is it a trace of accent?

"I carry it with me, always. I wouldn't lose it for anything."

You can see the woman is sold on you now, Otto. You're a family man. She'd do anything to help you get to those kids. That picture is better than a passport.

"Susan, you could take Bill along in the morning, couldn't you?"

"Of course. Bright and early, Bill."

"You'll want to tuck in pretty soon, I guess, son."

THE room upstairs smelt of clean linen, of sun-warmed wood. "I'll just turn the bed down for you, Bill."

"Thanks, Mrs. Brown."

Stand the little folder up on the dresser, Otto, with the kids' pictures, so the woman can see you do it.

"Good night, Bill. It's almost like having Joe back."

"Good night, Mrs. Brown."

Now you can sit on the side of the bed, Otto, and have your laugh. A repressed throaty rumble. The simple fools! Carl, you were right. This is America - with its milk of human kindness. On the wall a picture or two. The Doctor. Whistler's Mother. The President. Spit your hate at him, Otto. He in gold to you.

Nothing disarms people like a picture of children. Remember what Carl said. That picture is better than a passport. . .

Soon it was dark on the highway. Lights picked out a man in uniform trudging west with his small compact kit. Two cars passed him by, but an old Ford coming along wheezed to a stop. "Like a lift, son?"

"Thanks."

"Going far?" "Home, I hope."

A truck, eh? Susan drives a truck, Otto. "Supper ready, Mother?"

"I'll take Mr. Jenkins up to the spare room."

"Please, Mrs. - "

"Brown's the name."

"Please, Mrs. Brown, just call me Bill."

"You know, Mrs. Brown, my mother was a Norwegian."

"Oh! Those Norwegians certainly have been wonderful."

"I've got a picture of my own family here, Mrs. Brown. Like to see it?"

"Oh, yes."

"It's not really so good of my wife. She's a dam - she's much prettier than that. Good of the kids, though. That's Ailsa she's the eldest. She'll be going on to high is not so simple.

"TIME to get up, Bill." "Thanks, Mrs. Brown. I'll be right down!" He opened the window wider, and the sun came warmly in. Hens clucked across the farmyard. You're still safe, Otto. The soldier can't talk -- yet. But get downstairs fast.

"Hullo, Bill. Ready?"

"All set in a minute." "Father, here's Bill going."

"Well, son, we're glad to have had you. Good luck.'

THE truck rolled out to the highway. Here in the driver's cab he was alone with Susan. With Joe's wife, the wife of the boy who's over fighting the Huns. He had plans for Susan and the truck. It's a setup, Otto. An unsuspecting girl smiling up at you; those two waving a friendly good-by.

The highway invited speed. But it was a highway with a motor cop on it, coming head on, slowing. Susan slowed the truck, stopped. Let the girl handle this, Otto.

"Morning, Susan. Who's the boy friend?" He grinned. "Or I should maybe write Joe and warn him?'

I MESS THINGS UP

Draw before yesterday I take the family car an' drive same down to the bank to do some business. On account of having my gas-ration book in the pocket, I lock the doors.

In the bank I run into a fellow named Smith that has a proposition he wants to talk over with me. So we go to get into my car to drive over to the Wagon. Right there I discover somethin'. I have locked the keys inside. Me an' Smith laughs at my carelessness an' he says, "We'll go in my car."

About this time I discover I have not only locked the car, I have left the engine runnin'. The hood locks down automatic, so I can't get into it to disconnect no wires.

I rush to the phone to call the missus to have one o' the kids get the spare keys an' ride 'em down to me on a hicycle. No answer.

"Come on," yells Smith. "You are burnin' up a month's ration o' gas. Get in my car an' we'll drive back to your house!" Which we do, in a hurry.

But when I get home I find the missus has gone somewheres. She has probably got the spare keys in her purse. I begin phonin' the neighbors. Them that answers wastes my time tellin' me about their gardens an' their children's sayin's an' other triflin' details, addin' as an afterthought that it's been days since they saw my missus.

Down there in front of the bank my gas is burnin'; I am parked overtime — an' Tubby Gropper, the cop, has been called by a citizen that thinks leavin' a motor runnin' is wasteful if not sinful an' against the law. Tubby can't get in to turn it off. He is told in the bank that I was there but left "earlier in the morning." So he gives me a tag an' comes over to the Wagon to bawl me out.

Of course I ain't there. Finally one of the kids happens to come home an' remembers her mom maybe went to do some Red Cross work. By this time I need the whole disaster committee, complete with stretcher. When Tubby can't find me at the Wagon, he calls up the house an' bellers at me instead of doin' somethin' to restore peace in the community, which a policeman is supposed to do.

Another guy has called the ration board an' turned me in. The ration board goes into action by callin' me, before I can put in a call to the Red Cross. More delay.

Well, finally, I get the missus at a neighbor's, grab the spare keys, an' me an' Smith go rushin' down to the bank.

There's quite a crowd gathered. But it ain't an admirin' crowd. Orley Hicks, the mechanic, is there. The engine ain't runnin'.

"I stopped her," says Orley. "Just stuffed a piece of waste into the exhaust an' smothered 'er!"

I thank him a little weakly an' get in. I try to start the engine to get out of there with my misery. No soap. I try again. I flood her an' more gas goes tricklin' along the gutter.

I have lost the remainin' remnants of my self-respect an' control when Orley finally speaks up. "Wait a minute," he says. "I forgot to take that waste out o' the exhaust pipe!"

ORRESPONDENT BEN WYNN got the cablegram from his editor back in Chicago at six o'clock, Moscow time, just as Miss Slaboda, his secretary-interpreter, was getting up from her desk by the window and putting on her fur hat and mittens to go home.

Wynn read the cable by the door of his office room there in the Metropole Hotel. Then re-read it, frowning: URGENT 1500 WORD SUNDAY FEATURE AVERAGE RUSSIAN GIRL ATTITUDE LOVE SEX STOP

Natasha noticed his expression. "Anything I can help with, Mr. Wynn? I'm in no hurry."

"I don't know yet, Miss Slaboda. You might read this." He handed her the cable.

During his ten months in Moscow, Ben Wynn had come to rely a great deal on the judgment of this quiet, pretty girl of twentyfour who had once been an interpreter in the Russian Building at the World's Fair.

She had been quick to understand his honesty. his desire to write about Russian people as he found them, not as he had supposed them to be; she had quickly perceived, too, that Wynn, though his mind had been seasoned by observation of men all over the world. didn't understand women at all. Once, at a Collective Farm where they'd been shown around by a puckered-mouthed. prideful, old woman, he was preparing to write that even the very old in Russia liked collectivism. But Natasha had said, "The old woman never thinks about collectivism. Mr. Wynn. Her son used to be chairman of the farm before he was killed at Kiev. She's proud of the farm because she thinks of it as her baby's farm.

With most women, even Russian, being a mother means more than theories or ideas."

WHEN Miss Slaboda had finished with the cable she looked up inquiringly.

"What do you think?" Wynn asked.

"I think you'll find it difficult to get enough evidence for a feature story, Mr. Wynn."

She seemed so certain that he said, "I'll have the story on the wire by tomorrow noon. I've been wondering, Miss Slaboda, do you know an average Russian girl?"

She pulled slowly at the cuff on her mitten. "Yes, I believe so."

"Fine," he said. "I want you to get me a date, with an average Russian girl for dinner tonight."

She was silent a minute, and Wynn noticed a puzzled look in her eyes. Then she smiled. "I'm afraid that an average Russian girl would hesitate to tell you about her heart with another woman present. You see - I'll right onto Gorki Street. It's in the middle of the block."

He was immediately sorry, after she'd closed the door, that he had spoken sharply to her. She was fine, he told himself, very efficient and pleasant and oddly loyal, but she had no right to assume that he couldn't get along without her.

He stood idly looking out the window at the drifting flakes, then down at Sverdlov Square, silent under snow. Moscow was hurrying home from work - leaning against the wind, holding its hat. A trolley bus inched around the elbow of the Square and stopped beneath his balcony. People converged suddenly on the bus door in an inverted V, then the points of the V narrowed to a line that disappeared as the bus door snapped shut. A woman ran out, too late, and banged the door a few steps, and then stood there holding her newspaper peaked over her hat to protect it from the snow, as she looked far up the Square for another bus.

of eight and went inside, stamping snow off his boots. The restaurant was cold. Small tables lined the walls, and a small, round orchestra stand was in the back.

He saw Miss Slaboda, in her hat and coat, sitting alone at a wall table. He nodded, and hung his overcoat on a wall peg. She smiled up at him and he sat down, relieved that he hadn't offended her. She smiled again and said, "Everything's arranged, Mr. Wynn. She'll be here just as soon as she can get herself put together after work."

'That's fine. You're the perfect secretary, Miss Slaboda.'

He was pleased with himself that he could be easy with her again.

When he lighted a cigarette, he noticed her eves on the pack. He held it out to her. "Didn't know you smoked," he said.

"I don't ordinarily." She leaned forward to his match, touching the back of his hand with her finger tips.

sick and disillusioned. Her brother is buried somewhere on the steppes. Her mother is a defeated old woman who lets the world whirl on around her, unnoticed."

She paused and watched Wynn, intent on his notes; then she said, "She works every day in the war effort, and on nights when she's not so exhausted, she falls asleep after dinner. She writes love letters to lonely soldiers at the front - soldiers she's never met. who will never live to see her. . . "

The rush of cold air from the opened front door made Wynn turn around. Three soldiers came inside with three girls, shaking off snow, laughing. They trooped noisily to a table in the rear. Members of the orchestra filed through a side door with their instruments, clattered up on the small platform, and started tuning strings. Ben Wynn looked at his watch again. "She's late," he said.

"Would you forgive an average Russian girl for being late, Mr. Wynn?" Natasha said quietly. "She doesn't understand Americans very well and she's afraid of them. She'll be here. She won't lose her nerve - "

WYNN felt self conscious, and for some reason a little guilty. "She can be as late as she wants. Let's order a drink." He asked for vodka.

Wynn got up and went to his overcoat for more matches. When he sat down again Natasha had taken off her fur hat and slipped her coat back on to the chair. She sat there, a little pale, with her hands in her lap, her soft brown hair brushed up off her sweet face. She smiled and put her hand to the throat of her high-necked blouse, then back into her lap again.

Wynn said, "It's too cold in here without your coat." He thought, surprised, "She's very pretty - beautiful."

The waiter came with their glasses of vodka. He raised his glass, "Good luck." She raised her glass, too.

Loud laughter came from the soldiers' table. They both looked back and saw a husky soldier standing by the table with a girl's hat on the side of his shaven head. With his hands on his hips he pranced across the floor, making comical faces.

Then the string orchestra twanged a spirited Cossack tune, and the soldiers pulled the laughing girls up to dance.

WYNN was about to say that boys were alike everywhere, but instead he adjusted the lead in his pencil and looked back at the pad. "What you've told me so far is fine, Miss Slaboda. Anything else?"

She cleared her throat and said very slowly, "She longs for a home and children, and a good husband who'll laugh at her gently; and every night she prays for peace for her country and herself and for people everywhere." She hesitated, then said, "She will love a man, though he ignores her and doesn't know she's alive. She will be loyal to him above all else, if he loves her; if he doesn't, she'll pretend that he does. She's so jealous she'll lie and connive just to keep him from talking with another woman about love."

have to come along for the interview.

It was the triumphant way she said it that made Ben feel a sudden, unaccountable resentment that she thought he couldn't get along without her. He said sharply, "The three of us can have dinner together, and then I'll be on my own. I know a little Russian by now, enough to get by."

She walked toward the door, then said quietly, "All right, Mr. Wynn. Of course. I'll have her for you at eight o'clock at the Sturgeon Restaurant. It's a little place. Go past the Government Building and then turn STANDING there at his window in the Metropole Hotel Ben Wynn had the odd thought that he could be watching Chicago on any snowy night: Chicago crowding into buses, hurrying home to read the paper more fully, to talk across table, about what happened at the office, to listen to the radio, and finally to go to bed, hoping for a better tomorrow. It was an odd thought, because Russians and Americans were so different. . .

He found the little restaurant at a quarter

Ben glanced at his wristwatch, then took out a pad and pencil. "Will you please give me some background information on her, Miss Slaboda - why she's an average Russian girl and so on?"

She pulled deeply on her cigarette and then said. "Her grandfather was ridden down by the Tsar's cavalry when he asked for bread for his children. Her father fought for his country under an officer who carried a whip. Her father was taken prisoner by the Germans and Austrians at Tannenberg, and came back home after the war starved and

Then suddenly she was crying silently, with her head bowed. Wynn stared across at her unbelievingly, his heart beating too fast. He knew that he would never write this story - it would have to be written with more than words, after the war.

TREAT 'EM RIGHT! by Sylvia Blythe

Your feet ... you use them a lot nowadays. They deserve care ...

COT HEALTH: Want Coupon 18 to buy you a firmer foothold on health? Standing up to a job? Using feet as wheels for summer travel? Then, you'll need to brush up on the rules of foot health. Here goes, with those men who take your feet in hand - this time, the Podiatry Society of New York State -- conducting the class.

COUPON 18? Best investment, if you re going to do much standing or walking, is to spend your ticket for roomy oxfords, preferably of porous leather, as large as your feet will take. Now, that you're all steamed up about the Four Freedoms, give a thought to your feet. "Of the thousands of ailing feet I've treated," says one podiatrist, "I've never yet found one pair wearing big enough shoes." Best average heel height is 11/2".

The broader the heel base, the better. If you've been mounting yourself on pedestals, "condition yourself gradually to a modest build-up.

Shoe length should extend about one-half to one inch beyond your longest toe. The longest toe is not always the big fellow that you and the shoe salesman think it is. Sometimes it's the gangling, curled up beside the great toe.

Shoes should have a rigid shank must be broad enough so that there's no over-ride of foot. If one foot is longer than the other -- and this is not unusual - fit the more imposing member of the pair, and make comfortable accommodations for the twin by padding.

WATCH YOUR STEP: There are two dangers inherent in shoe-rationing. No. 1: Wearing shoes acquired from somebody else. Shoes that fit the friend from whom you've bartered an extra pair may fit her and yet be a rank misfit for you. No. 2: Making unrationed play shoes - which because they are designed for play are apt to be flimsily constructed suffice for the solid supports that you need on a job or for wear on the hard city pavements.

Stockings? Like shoes, they give you the most in footease when they are over-sized ... are long enough to tug forward . . . even have enough attenuated length to fold over your toes. If shoes are roomy enough, stockings may be lapped over toes with no threat to comfort. Changing to clean socks twice a day during hot weather is only humane treatment for tender, tired or burning feet.

FOOT CARE? Basic step is a daily toot bath that includes a soap-scrub. Mingling with dirt is the sad lot of feet. Added to that indignity is confinement which keeps feet damp, dark and warm ... makes feet a happy hunting ground for germs that can cause trouble. A germ on the loose that will bear watching is athlete's foot - an infection that is hard to eradicate but easy to prevent. Best prevention? Thoroughly dry feet after the bath ... sprinkle a prophylactic foot powder between toes, inside socks, in lining of shoes ... don't walk barefooted. Watch out for these symptoms: cracking or peeling between toes; possibly itchiness; or blisters; thickened, flaky or funny-looking nails.

YOUR PEDICURE? Two important health rules apply. No. 1: File nails straight across, the theory being that if corners stick out, they can't stick in. No. 2: Let mail cuticle alone. Cuticle on the ground floor is a push-over for infection, if access is made easy for germs by cutting. Corns and callouses? Stop cutting! Use pads or liquids to help remove these offenders. To eradicate the trouble by tracking down the cause, take your ailments to a foot specialist, and do what he says. Footwork? You can ease the inescapable weight load by walking with feet parallel . . . by propping them up when they're not in use ... by sitting with legs crossed at the ankles and feet resting on the floor.

America's newest thief - the Pen-and-Paper Pirate

WARNING: Uncle Sam is sending 6,000,000 checks to dependents of servicemen each month. If you're getting one, be wary! A veteran sleuth tells why VERYBODY knows that "a government check is good as gold." BUT — what about the person who cashes the check?

In Nashville, Tenn., a young man presented a genuine U.S. Treasury check for $50. The bank teller didn't know the young man. Scanning the three endorsements on the back, he asked for some identification. The youth fumbled for a Social Security card.

The name on the card matched the third endorsement, yet the teller was not convinced. "I'll have to have the cashier okay this," he said, watching the young man closely. And when the latter's nervousness mounted, the teller signaled a bank guard to watch him. Which was fortunate, for the moment the teller turned his back, the youth tried to bolt.

When Treasury Secret Service Agents questioned him, they learned that the check was a soldier's allotment mailed home to a sick wife. The lad had pilfered it from her unlocked mailbox, forged her name and another endorsement on the back for luck before adding his own signature.

One $50 check may not seem important - except to the sick wife who sorely needed the money. But we have about 9,000,000 men in our Army and Navy - and about 6,000,000 government checks to their dependents are in the mails each month -- between $300,000,000 and $400,000,000. And the Pen-andsequently we must rely on the aid of those who receive such checks and those who cash them. To the first group let me repeat the warning recently given in the Army magazine, "Yank," concerning allotment checks:

1. Be sure dependent's name and address are correct and legible on your allotment or allowance application.

2. Instruct dependent to make his or her name plainly visible on the mailbox at home. If the dependent lives with another family, his or her name should still be on the box it's much safer.

3. If the dependent moves, the changed address should be sent immediately to the local post office and to the Chief of Finance, Allowance and Allotment Branch, Adjutant General's Office, Washington.

4. Dependents should ask mail carriers to notify them by some prearranged signal when checks are delivered.

5. Dependents should be warned to cash checks quickly, preferably the day they are received.

6. The dependent must take every precaution not to lose the check. It might take the government a year to > investigate and determine that the check was lost and not stolen.

7. Checks should be cashed, if practicable, at the same place each month to simplify identification. 8. Checks should not be endorsed until they are cashed. If you endorse them at home and then lose them, that month's allotment may be gone!

With recipients applying these simple safeguards, opportunities for stealing checks will be reduced to a minimum. And if people who cash government checks will only be half as keen as that bank teller, the check pirates will be foiled. A good rule for OLONEL RABBIT goes to war. Mrs. Bunting goes along and is taking the family. Uncle Sam has ordered the rabbit out of the hat and to the production line - a "natural" for the rabbit.

Rabbit's new job is to help supplement the nation's diminishing meat supply. Pelts will pinch-hit in the fur and felt shortage. Thousands of pink-of-health rabbits go to the government laboratories to give of their blood twice monthly for use in serum manufacture.

Tastes Like Chicken

IT is hutch-raised domestic rabbit that is called to the colors. Cousins cottontail and the red-meated jack of the western plains are exempted from this draft. Their meat is dark with a gamey flavor entirely different from backyard beasties of white, fine-textured flesh. Hand-raised bunnies give meat sweet-eating as a chicken's breast. A meat that tastes like chicken, too, and may be cooked in all the ways that chicken is cooked. In food value, rabbit classes with poultry and other lean table meats as a protein muscle- and body-builder.

We take our rabbit-eating tip from the war zones of Europe where regiments of rabbits advance daily to the table. This year England has a quarter million producing does. Germany, it is estimated, has between 15 to 20 million. In Italy every householder is required to keep at least one doe for production of meat. On the Continent rabbit has long been considered an important meat source. Rabbits were domesticated in China about the time of Confucius. At least he listed rabbits in his writings among other animals worthy to be sacrificed to the gods. Here, even before the war, domestic rabbit-raising was becoming something of an industry, production totaling seven to nine million pounds of meat annually. This year the government hopes to see the figure increased to 12 million pounds - rabbit in every corner meat market.

Rabbits can be raised in every state, in every climate. But production heretofore has been centered on the West Coast where rabbit and chicken share menu honors. There a single rabbitry may keep thousands of animals to produce yeararound meat for markets and the hotel-restaurant trade. The city of Los Angeles alone consumed over two million dressed rabbits last year.

Six Pounds a Week

BACKYARD rabbitries are the present need. Three does, one buck, a few snug hutches' along one side of the garage and you can manufacture table meat to the tune of six pounds a week and at an initial cost of less than $100.

at little cost, from scrap lumber, used poultry wire, old crates. Housing requires small space as each breeder rabbit needs but eight square feet. There must be the holding pens to accommodate the young fry from the time they are weaned until needed for the skillet.

Virtually all breeds of domestic rabbits are satisfactory for producing meat for home use. Pedigreed stock isn't necessary, although breeders claim it pays in the long run since these rabbits produce larger litters and their babes put on the pounds faster than the offspring of "mutt" stock.

Feed Costs Little

THERE is no abracadabra to raising a rabbit. There are no peculiar odors either, if the pens are cleaned once a week. Rabbits will thrive on a ration including two or more whole grains, a plant protein supplement, a good quality legume hay, green feed or root crops and salt. It takes but 4½ pounds of feed to grow one pound of meat. Feed for mature rabbits costs but 1½ cents a day.

Victory gardens and backyard rabbitries belong together as the eye to the hook. Rabbits munch happily on garden waste — palatable weeds, pea vines, corn husks.

Results come fast. A good doe should average 24 young in a year.

It takes but three months from the time a doe is mated until her rabbits start traveling to the dinner plate. Breeding for meat has so improved the domestic rabbit that average specimens weigh around  $3\frac{3}{4}$ to  $4\frac{1}{4}$  pounds at eight weeks and will dress out to 2 to  $2\frac{1}{4}$  pounds, and at least 77 per cent of this is edible meat.

There is a pocket full of pin money in the sale of pelts as a byproduct. White pelts, as a rule are more popular than the dark shades. But regardless of size or color, all rabbit skins have commercial value. Better grades are dressed, dyed, sheared and made into fur garments. Skins with the long hair are used in the manufacture of felt hats.

Pass the Gravy!

"F<sub>IRST</sub> catch your rabbit," oldtime recipes directed. Wartime recipes read the same. Mother, now the family Nimrod, makes a quick trip to the rabbitry. It's fried rabbit for supper — pass the cream gravy.

Like young chicken, the fryingage rabhit is tasty, tender eating. But for variety's sake develop some of the output to heavier weights for fricasseeing and roasting. Mature does and bucks that have served their period of usefulness may be conditioned for the stew pot.

After dressing a rabbit, chill the meat thoroughly, then wash in cold water to which is added a small amount of vinegar. Pat dry with a clean towel. Cut in eight or 10 pieces, first disjointing the legs. Cut hind legs into two pieces and the body into four.

From there on treat your rabbit as you would a chicken. Some day do it this way: Rub each piece with an oiled hand. Rabbit has no fat and must be well greased or it will dry in the heat. Sprinkle on plenty of salt, a good dusting of pepper. Arrange the pieces in a baking pan; now into a medium oven to cook 20 to 30 minutes. High heat at the very last to turn the flesh golden. Add the liver now, well oiled, for 10 minutes' time. Crisp, golden, the rabbit comes to the table wearing a parsley wreath. Sink your teeth into the crisp tender flesh. Pick the last sweet shred from the bones.

Older rabbits require long, slow cooking in moist heat. They are excellent in fricassees, in stews with vegetables, in stews with vegetables, in casserole dishes. And don't forget the world's love — rabbit pie, with plenty of gravy under a flaky crust. Rabbit may be curried as chicken to serve with a great bowl of rice. Put rabbit into chop suey. Present it à la king. Substitute rabbit for chicken in a salad and it's a shrewd palate that can detect the trick. Again rabbit passes for chicken when ground or sliced for use in a sandwich.

It's Government Bidding

HELP regiment the rabbit — it's the government bidding, and volunteers by the thousands are rabbit hunting for stock. The rabbit raising campaign is being conducted through the extension services of state colleges. Boy Scout units and 4-H club members appear as eager as Alice to go adventuring with the rabbit. The Congressional Library in Washington has requested permission to transcribe into Braille all government rabbit bulletins so the blind may learn to assist in this newest food-for-victory program.

Hardware stores are offering materials for the hutch builders. Feed stores are stocking up on the newest rabbit delicacies. One of New York City's largest department stores, timing to the government's campaign, has opened a rabbit department to sell breeding stock, housing, everything in fact to set a rabbit up for fancy housekeeping.

"Domestic Rabbits in the Food for Freedom Program" is a leaflet covering every detail of rabbit production — choice of breeds, care, feeding, housing. It's yours without cost. Ir's War Work-Ir's Foot Work WARTIME DUTIES put you on your feet and keep you there . . . making you vulnerable to an attack of Athlete's Foot that may cost you precious hours of work!

The tiny plants—not germs—that are the cause of Athlete's Foot must feed on perspiration and dead skin in order to live. That's why you must be on guard when wartime walking increases the flow of perspiration between your toes—especially when the weather's hot and sultry.

The extra perspiration irritates and cracks the tender skin. Then the Athlete's Foot fungi attack the open flesh through the cracks and spread through the tissues. Inflammation of your toes, painful itching and flaking skin tell you you're another victim of Athlete's Foot.

Cracks mean trouble—soak those cracks TONIGHT!

DIRECTIONS

Apply Absorbine Jr. full strength, night and morning. For supplementary treatment, place cotton saturated with one part Absorbine Jr. and two parts water between the toes or over the affected part and lightly bandage.

Guard against reinfection! Boil socks at least 15 minutes to kill the fungi. Do not share towels or bath mats. Disinfect your shoes. In advanced cases, consult your doctor in addition to using Absorbine Jr. TONIGHT look at the skin between your toes. If cracks are present—even tiny breaks in the skin—drench the toes with Absorbine Jr. full strength—just as it comes from the bottle! Repeat daily, night and morning.

- Absorbine Jr. is an effective fungicide. It kills the Athlete's Foot fungi on contact.
- 2. It dissolves the perspiration products on which the Athlete's Foot fungi thrive.

3. It dries the skin between the toes.

- 4. It soothes and helps heal the broken tissues.
- 5. It eases itching and pain of Athlete's Foot.

Athlete's Foot can lay you up! Don't take chances! Always keep Absorbine Jr. handy it's the nationwide preference for relieving this painful skin infection. For sale at all drugstores, $1.25 a bottle.

PROOF that Athlete's Foot fungi DIE AT TOUCH of Absorbine Jr.

FUNGI GROWING FAST ... Photomicrograph of Athlete's Foot fungi. This parasitic plant life burrows under the tissues, irritates delicate nerve endings. No wonder Athlete's Foot causes pain!

FUNGI DEAD . . . Photomicrograph showing that Absorbine Jr. kills Athlete's Foot fungi as they are reached. No longer can they grow and cause you so much pain and misery.

SERGEANT MAURICE G. (PAT) CECCHINI

Combat flying as engineer-gunner on a Flying Fortress, for which he wears the Distinguished Flying Cross with Oakleaf Cluster, came naturally to the combat ways of Sergt. Maurice G. Cecchini. For before he entered the Army Air Forces in August, 1941, "Pat" Cecchini was well known in local sports circles as a shifty amateur boxer who won the Golden Gloves featherweight crown in 1936, and progressed to lightweight stature before he hung up his gloves. Serving with the 9th Army Air Force in the Middle East, from early in the fight as it helped drive Rommel back from Egypt, Sergt. Cecchini won the Distinguished Flying Cross for 200 hours of combat flying. He previously had been awarded the Air Medal for his first stretch of 100 hours of combat flying. Sergt. Cecchini, who is on "war leave" from his bank job here, makes his home at 1644 Gales street N.E. This is the third in a series of portraits of decorated war heroes of the Washington area, drawn by Newman Sudduth of The Star's art staff for the rotogravure section.

Allied troops march through a Sicilian town as the populace looks on calmly from the sidewalk-and from the little window balconies as much a part of every house as its walls.

Impounded in a temporary prison camp, some of these Italian prisoners rounded up in Sicily are seen leaving the camp to board Allied craft waiting offshore to transfer them to North Africa.

While wounded are hoisted aboard a transport off Sicily, other troops who have arrived on it are waiting their turn to join the invaders. Coast Guardsmen man the transport. Photos by A. P., A. P. from Army Signal Corps and Coast Guard.

How the Yanks Struck Sicily

Troops in a landing barge, bayonets bristling, move in for a practice battle landing. On the rugged shore mortar bursts of live ammunition give them the feel of heading into the real thing. That skyline might be Sicily's!

Streaming down both ramps of their LCI boat, infantrymen dash through the surf to the beach, rifles ready for instant action. There is no time lost in getting ashore from these craft, hundreds of which swarmed against Sicily.

Airborne troops played a vital part in spearheading the invasion. These are troops of a glider field artillery battalion entering their glider to take off for invasion maneuvers.

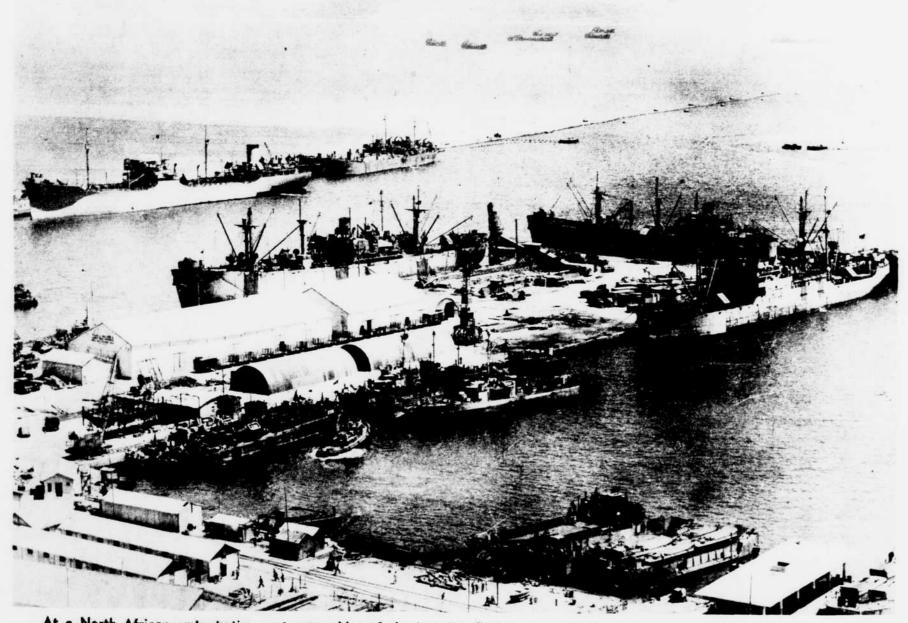

A sharp beach ridge is scaled by men hurrying to set up the outpost of a beachhead for their invasion force. The second man bears an automatic rifle.

Jeeps also ride in gliders—to speed the movement of airborne troops once they have landed on enemy ground. Here's how the glider "opens wide" to let the jeep out.

A plane takes off with its glider tow. In the glider soaring up at the end of the tow line are its full load of troops and equipment.

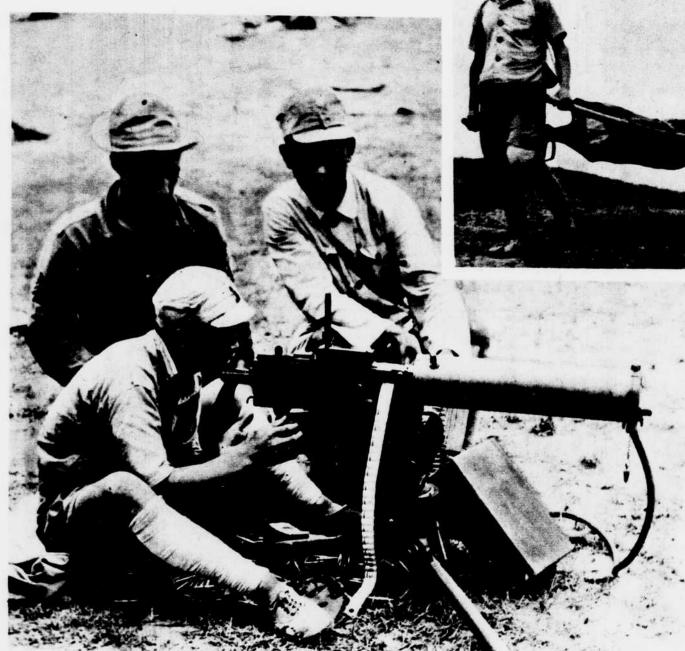

At a North African embarkation port some ships of the invasion fleet prepare for the vast movement upon Sicily. Each had its precise role to play. Seen here are a transport, freighters, gunboats and landing barges. Imagine 2,000 of all such craft!

Paratroopers keep in trim with one more pre-invasion jump. Note the different colored 'chutes, the white ones bearing equipment to be readily distinguishable by paratroops on the ground. -U. S. Army Signal Corps Photos.

With their burden of wounded, Chinese Army stretcher bear-

Constantly harrying the Japs on the Salween front, these Chinese soldiers move up across a rushing mountain stream. A line across the river helps them keep their feet. Branches on their backs help them merge into the foliage of the rough country.

WHILE China's forces in the field more than hold their own against the frustrated Jap, they are building behind the fighting front—in India—for today and for the tomorrow whose prospect brightens as Japan's military troubles increase. These pictures show both phases of China's fiahts—troops in action on the Salween front as they hold China's "back door" against the Japs, and others training with the most modern military equipment at the American Training Center for Chinese Expeditionary Forces, somewhere in India.

Chinese soldiers who followed Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, commanding United States forces in Southeastern Asio, out of Burma are being trained and hardened into a top fighting force at their training center in India. Americans of Stilwell's command are instructing them in the use of the newest American weapons. Here Sergt. Edward Kochanic of Salamanca, N. Y., instructs Chinese soldiers in the firing of a .30-calibre machine gun.

ers and hospital corpsmen move to the rear from the Salween front. Some of the wounded are able to make their own way with assistance.

Chinese soldiers on the firing end of a .75mm. pack howitzer, pride of the American Army. Their American instructors praise the ability with which these young Chinese master the use of both light and heavy weapons in their training.

Somewhere in India is this big American Training Center for Chinese Expeditionary Forges, which has been referred to as the "Fort Benning of China," after the United States Infantry school in Georgia. It was formerly a British camp for Italian prisoners of war.

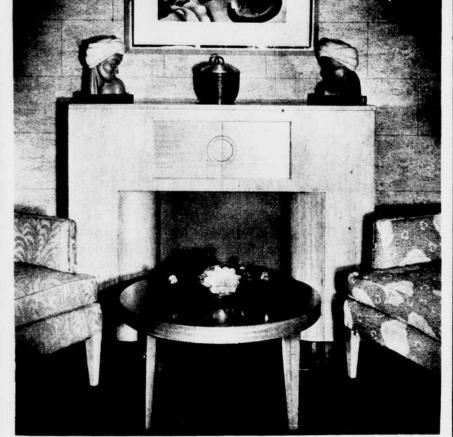

Engineers of the Chinese Expeditionary Forces—which as such probably are destined to help drive the Japs out of Burma and then out of China—build a bridge as part of their training in India. Capt. one of the little sardine boats which have been converted to whaling.

MORE and more courageous Californians are saving their meat coupons by eating whale steaks. The idea in catching on, especially around Eureka, where one of the last whaleries is located. The meat used for human food is the "tenderloin," or back-strap, which weighs up to 15 tons on the average whale taken. The meat is pork red, slightly coarse and oily-and tastier if soaked in vinegar before cooking. More than two million pounds of edible whale meat is expected to be brought in there this season.

Whale Steaks Are Juicy By-Product

A big finback whale is hauled up onto the dock from the water by winch and cable. The first step in the "butchering" is to strip the body of its heavy layer of blubber, from which is produced valuable whale oil. Then the tenderloin tonnage is stripped off and rushed to refrigeration for human consumption.

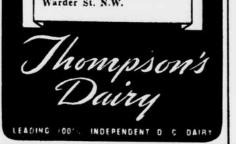

Whale steak dinner in a Eureka restaurant. The steaks are of generous cut and the guests seem pleased. For your private table you can buy whale steak at two pounds for 35 cents.

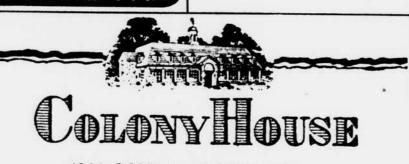

Looking into the whale's capacious mouth, you see the valuable baleen, or whalebone, along the roof of the mouth. Also of commercial value are the bones, liver, tails and flippers, in addition to the war-vital glycerine produced from the whale oil. -Wide World Photos
