WMC Now Preparing List of 'Critical' Jobs For Draft Boards

By MIRIAM OTTENBERG.

With the emphasis now on a man's job rather than his family ties, the War Manpower Commission is working out methods of insuring that single men with critical skills will not be drafted by local boards anxious to avoid calling fathers, it was learned today.

A list of critical occupations, it was understood, is being prepared. Boards will be advised to give "special consideration" to men whose jobs appear on this list, regardless of the fact they may have no

It will be the first such list to be issued. Boards already have a list of essential activities and a list of the jobs regarded as essential. Since 3-B was abolished as a preferred class for men with dependents who were also in essential activities, regardless of whether or not they were "keymen," no distinction has been made between fathers in essential and nonessential activities, outside of the nondeferrable list.

WMC now has a choice of expanding the nondeferrable list to take in more fathers-who would be drafted before fathers whose jobs do not appear on the nondeferrable list-or directing draft boards to give some consideration to fathers who get into essential activities.

Meanwhile, on the West Coast, a House Military Affairs Subcommit-tee, promising hearings on Capitol Hill on the father draft, asked for a full review of selective service quotas and procedures.

Chairman Costello of the subcommittee, which has been holding hearings on the West Coast on the draft's effect on war industries, issued a statement last night declaring that adjustments in selective service cuotas should be made when it is necessary to defer major numbers of agricultural or industrial workers so es to avert enhancing the difficulties of other activities of such areas.

The statement, issued jointly with Representative Harness, Republican, of Indiana, also declared:

"We recommend that there should be no draft of fathers until there has been a complete re-examination of all persons classified as 4-F, and that a better utilization of the availsole manpower between the ages of 33 and 45 be made,"

Advance in MineFields Speeded by Engineers Trained at Belvoir

By THOMAS R. HENRY,

Star Staff Correspondent. WITH ADVANCED AIR FORCE LIAISON, 7TH ARMY IN SIGILY, Aug. 1 (Delayed).-To engineers trained at Fort Belyoir, Va., goes the credit for preventing mine fields from delaying the advance of our troops through Western Sicily.

When they're not engaged in the perilous job of clearing mine fields, these men are building detours around blown bridges for heavy trucks. On the side, they knock out enemy tanks.

Officers say that without the work of these men the advance might have been delayed for weeks, since some of the worst mine fields of the war were encountered if Western Sicily.

The engineers make no effort to clear a whole field beyond a 25foot strip at first, since the sole responsibility is to speed the progress of the Army. Nazis Leave New Type.

Despite the peril of exploring with their fingers for mine connections, once the needle indicates the presence of metal, no serious damage has been done yet because of the skill of the men. Lately, they have been encountering the new type German mines in wooden boxes which create no magnetic disturbance and in the past week, the Germans have been leaving behind a lot of antipersonnel and anti-tank mines. We passed yesterday over a road which had been one of the worst mined in Sicily and had caused a number of casualties until the engineers arrived for their magnetic sweeping job.

Once that job is done, there's little danger to the troops following. Just to guarantee that, the commanding officer of the engineers' detachment must drive his car personally over the cleared track before declaring it safe-which is quite a sensation, according to Lt. Carl J. Sterner, former senior project planner with the Federal Public Housing Administration, who has often been the officer in charge.

Speedy Work on Roads. Next in importance is the job of speeding up the building of detours. The engineers often can make a road passable an hour after they start work. The large cases contain blood donations from 12 Americans; each bottle of blood plasma is in a separate carton, also made from pulpwood, and with it a pint of distilled water. The plasma and water are mixed to make fluid which is saving the lives of our American wounded soldiers. The Department of Justice subpoenaed records of the Metal Sponge Sales Corp. of Philadelphia, the Royal Silver Manufacturing Co. of Norfolk, Va.; the Bolta Co. of Lawrence, Mass.; Landers, Frary & Clark of New Britain, Conn., and Vischer Products Co. of Chicago.

Maxwell Scrimgeour told the House committee that the family had collected $205,846 in commissions for Navy contracts alone in three years and had another $86 -652 "in sight" from that source. He also estimated the family profits for the first six months of 1942 at $250,000.

Mr. Scrimgeour denied he had By th any "pull" at the Navy Department, but added that he knew plenty of people there and had paid civilian employes small sums for sending public copies of Navy requisitions for materials "in their spare time." Asked to explain "tremendous profits," he said: "This business jumped at us so fast that we haven't had time to do much about it."

There are two points to this forgiveness phase of the act. Mr. Surrey explained. "One is that 75 per cent of a year's tax was to be forgiven, and two, that the tax to be so forgiven was the lower of the two taxes for 1942 and 1943. The mechanics of carrying out these two principles can be summarized as

Grandson of Former Mississippi Senator Is Bombardier

Mr. and Mrs. Christopher H. (Kit) Williams, 3d, 3701 Massachusetts avenue N.W., have been notified that their son, First Lt. Christopher H. Williams 4th grandson of the late Senator John Sharpe Williams of Mississippi, was wounded seriously in the Asiatic area on July 27

Lt. Williams, who had been serving with the Army Air Forces as a bombardier on a B-24 Liberator based in China since February of this year, in one of his most recent letters to his parents, told how he had to bail out of his plane into mountainous country just beyond enemy lines when the bomber's motor failed. The Liberator was just two hours from the home base folowing a raid on Japanese-held slands in the China Sea.

"We bailed out of the plane surorisingly fast," he wrote, "for not naving had any sort of drill on the subject. We were then descending at the rate of 2,000 feet a minute. Actually, the jump is something I never want to do again. One boy made the statement that he truly looked His Maker in the face all the way down.

UP TO 40,200 FEET AND DOWN AGAIN-Lt. Col. W. R. Lovelace, acting chief of the Air Forces' Aero Medical Laboratories, Wright Field, has his parachute harness checked before taking off to make a record jump of 40,200 feet. The jump was made from a Flying Fortress "laboratory" plane used by Boeing's flight test department for high-altitude test work, and the experiment suggests-but does not define-the altitude performance of which the Fortress is capable. The descent from plane to ground took 23 minutes 51 seconds. Col. Lovelace made the jump to determine the effect of extreme high altitude on the human body and to record the effectiveness of existing emergency bail-out equipment.

People's Counsel

The President's reference to the Attorney General of the question whether he should appoint a People's Counsel is a pretty definite indication that the President does not choose to make the appointment unless he has to do it under the law. The opinion will be an interesting one, touching on a question which seems to lack recent precedent. It is obvious that the President agrees with those who do not believe the job of People's Counsel meets any real need. But if Congress wants the job filled, can the Executive balk at filling it? The current District appropriation bill merely provides money for "two commissioners, a people's counsel and other personal service" for the Public Utilities Commission. There may be nothing mandatory about that, although the mere fact that the salary item for People's Counsel was inserted after having been left out of appropriations for several years would in itself indicate that Congress intended that an appointment be made. The original legislation creating the job-a 1926 amendment to the rewritten Public Utilities Act -states that "there shall be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate an additional counsel for the Public Utilities Commission to be known as the People's Counsel." That shall, though ignored for several years, seems definite enough.

When the Public Uitlities Commission was reconstituted in 1926 with appointment of two commissioners to serve with the Engineer Commissioner, doing away with the previous practice under which the Board of District Commissioners sat as a Public Utilities Commission, the position of People's Counsel was regarded as a definite part of the new setup. Some of the arguments made then are heard now. And while the three men who filled the position made themselves gadflies before the commission in the public interest, they were on the whole disillusioned as to the real opportunities for effective service.

It would be advisable for the President to fill the job now, if for no other reason than that local citizens have requested it and Congress has agreed. But there should be discriminating observation by these citizens of the practical, as well as the theoretical, value of such special counsel. If a reappraisal in the light of new experience demonstrates that a good man can make a go of it, the job should, of course, be permanent. If it turns out again that a People's Counsel is more like a fifth wheel, it would be better to repeal the law than to render it inactive by ignor-

Production Slump

It has been nearly two months since Undersecretary of War Patterson first called attention to an alarming slump in war production. The Undersecretary was concerned with the failure to meet production figures during May. In June, however, the decline was still in evidence. and Lt. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, chief of the Army Service Forces, reported this week that on the basis of preliminary estimates the July record is going to be worse than that of either May or June. The seriousness of this state of affairs must be evident to all. If the trend continues, the result will be a prolonged war, with greater loss of life. It will mean an inability to fully exploit the successes now being won on the combat fronts-a failure to hit the enemy as hard as we can when he is least able to stand up under the blow. But it is not enough to call attention to the consequences of a production failure. If the slump is to be overcome there must also be some clear understanding of its causes, and this, as yet, is lacking. Mr. Patterson attributed the May decline to complacency and overconfidence. Since then other officials have blamed absenteeism, strikes, management failures, cutbacks and the high labor turnover resulting from the search for better-paying jobs. But all or most of these factors have been in the picture for a long time. And it is not likely that an equal enlargement of all of them is at the bottom of the summer slump. In these circumstances it would in a given plant, and if so. why? Is | published last December, it "proposes | of his own.

in particular plants? What are the figures for absenteeism, and the reasons for it? Until such facts as these are available it is going to be difficult, if not impossible, to regain the lost ground on the home front. Exhortations alone will not do the job.

He Craves Action

The man who was all dressed up with no place to go was an unhappy individual. But his plight is hardly to be compared with that of Vice President Wallace, who is thirsting for battle with no one to fight."

There was a time when it was possible for a man of action to find a worthy opponent right here in Washington, but the President put his foot down on that. So Mr. Wallace moved up to Detroit and spent a busy hour there lambasting the reactionaries, the isolationists and the "American Fascists." This was a dull sort of business, however, for if there were any reactionaries, isolationists or American Fascists in the audience they preferred to remain anonymous. Not a man arose to take up the Vice President's challenge, and Mr. Wallace, with the light of battle still shining in his eyes, took a train to Des Moines, Iowa.

Now it has been rumored that there are some reactionaries and isolationists in the Vice President's home State. Perhaps there is even an American Fascist or two, for certain it is that somebody-and he must have been a direct descendant of Machiavelli-persuaded the good people of Iowa to turn their backs on the New Deal in 1940 despite the fact that Mr. Wallace, a native son, was the second man on the ticket. But the Vice President, for whatever reason, was not gunning for isolationists, reactionaries or Fascists in Iowa. He was after the corporations, and if one may judge from the news reports the people of Des Moines will be picking up corporate fragments for weeks to come.

The corporations, according to Mr. Wallace, want to go back to a program of planned scarcity after the war, which would be a very bad thing for the country, The Vice President, having had a ringside seat at the killing of the little pigs and the ploughing under of the crops when he was Secretary of Agriculture, is determined to fight this to the bitter end. "We're going to have a glorious fight," he declared. "I welcome this fight and the sooner it comes and the hotter it gets the better. I don't think it will interfere with the war effort."

Mr. Wallace may be right in this last thought, for most of the corporations are too busily engaged with war production to do much fighting with the Vice President on the side. But even if they had nothing else to do the corporations would be a pretty poor sort of opponent. They can take it, but in these days they can hardly punch their way out of a paper bag.

Mr. Wallace need not let this discourage him, however. A man who is really looking for a fight generally can find one, and if he keeps on swinging the chances are that eventually he will land a verbal punch on somebody who will punch back. When that time comes it is to be hoped Mr. Wallace will not claim that the other fellow hit him

Planners and Antiplanners

Some persons undoubtedly are happy in a collectivist experiment. Others, it is equally evident, cannot be content under a system of regimentation, however beneficent its purpose. The latter are represented by Sir Ernest Benn and the Society of Individualists, which he has organized against planning for increased state control. Nation's Business for August contains an interesting exposition of the conflict currently developing in Great Britain, if not elsewhere in the world.

Sir Ernest's principal antagonist, obviously, is Sir William Beveridge, the author of the security proposals which bear his name. The issue between them is stated by Sir Ernest in the affirmation that totalitarianism is "the lowest form of human degradation." He has further expressed himself in these words:

Autocrats, dictators and bureaucrats start upon the basis that the individual man is a knave or a fool, that he does not know what is good for him and that governments must take him in hand. The other, better democratic, way assumes the individual man to be good, or at least to have more good than bad in him, and that such bad as there is will be kept in check by the natural competition of the good. It is high time we divided ourselves and marked out much more clearly the line between these two wholly different schools of thought. There is a big, powerful and ill-defined class which is attracted by the temporary convenience of making special arrangements for knaves and fools. This class forgets that those arrangements, made in the name of the state, must be applied to all, and must, therefore, result in multiplying the numbers of both knaves and fools and weakening the whole of the fabric Millions of our people now look for sustenance to a state which already owes them many thousands of millions and can give them nothing but what it can extract from the dependent people themselves. It is a position of grave danger. But the "planners" are not likely to be satisfied with Sir Ernest's discussion of their attitude. Sir William does not think of the generality of his neighbors in England as being either scallywags or imbeciles. On the contrary, his "blueprint for a better Britain" calls for both honesty | else," as explained in a postscript, and intelligence in application. production per man-hour declining a comprehensive scheme of social insurance to make certain that all citizens and their dependents have income sufficient for subsistence."

The Society of Individualists answers that it desires none of that sort of security. In its "creed," as printed with Sir Ernest's article, it reaffirms the value of personality as

When I am on my own, an individual responsible for myself, I must be useful to others, for in no other way can I exist; my usefulness will be tested by the willingness of others to make use of me. and similarly others must be useful to If I am planned, I have no need whatever to consider others; they are merely the state, the authorities, the allpervading "they"; I do not know them. I cannot make contact with them, they mean exactly nothing to me except chits, permits, doles, passes or rations.

If I live in a planned society, and the arge to move upward has not altogether disappeared, then the only move available to me is into the ranks of the planners, where I must proceed to arrange the affairs of others and force them down deeper into the passivity of a planned existence.

Probably it is much too early to attempt an accurate appraisal of these conflicting views. One thing, however, is sure: The debate already is "a good show."

The Mississippi Primary

Mississippi, one of three States which elect Governors next November, will have a conservative Democrat for its next chief executive. In the primary election on Tuesday for the party nomination former Governor Connor, regarded as strongly anti-New Deal, ran far ahead of his three competitors. Next to him ran former Speaker of the House Thomas L. Bailey, also a conservative Democrat. Lt. Gov. Dennis Murphree was third, and trailing was the out-andout New Dealer Lester C. Franklin, who had the backing of New Deal Senator Bilbo. A run-off primary, between Mr. Connor and Mr. Bailey will be held August 24.

This Mississippi primary took on unusual significance. It was watched both inside and outside of the State by political leaders attempting to assay the strength of anti-New Deal sentiment in a section of the country which has been traditionally Democratic. The rumors of a revolt in the South against the Roosevelt administration, aimed particularly at bureaucratic control of the people's activities, have been in the air for months. Here was an opportunity to test the extent of this sentiment at the polls.

A year ago Mississippi Democrats chose Senator Eastland, also an anti-New Dealer, to fill the seat once occupied by the late Senator Pat Harrison and occupied for a short time by former Senator Doxey. Should Mr. Connor win the Democratic nomination for Governorwhich is tantamount to election, the anti-New Dealers will be firmly in the saddle in the State. It will mean. in all probability, that the Mississippi delegation to the Democratic nattional convention next year will be dominated by anti-New Dealers. hostile to a fourth term for President Roosevelt.

It is true that Mr. Connor has gone along with President Roosevelt's foreign policy and his conduct of the war-except on the home front. But this does not necessarily mean he will favor the retention of the President in the White House for another four-year term. Mr. Connor, Governor in 1932, opposed the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt at that time. He favored the former Secretary of War, Newton D. Baker.

The Mississippi vote is supplementary to attacks on the New Deal administration earlier in the year by the Governors of Alabama and Louisiana, and to the action by the executive committee of the Democratic State Committee of South Carolina in opposition to contributions to the Democratic National Committee to be used in the elections next year if Mr. Roosevelt be renominated. New Dealers, anxious for the renomination of the President, have looked with some trepidation toward the South. What happened in the Missippi primary is not calculated to relieve these fears. They may not be able to prevent a fourth term nomination, but the delegates from Southern States to the nomination convention, if they oppose Mr. Roosevelt, will indicate a greatly divided sentiment in the Democratic party.

Lebensraum

In days of peace we used to sympathize tunefully with the apparently immortal Rufus Rastus Johnson Brown, who had so much difficulty in paying the rent. Today, Mr. Brown would be envied, because he must have had a lease. Of course, it is still true that "rent means dough." as the song has it, but he could get that at almost any defense plant, and his real asset would be that highly important bit of paper, the Like many other worthwhile objects, strenuous tactics may have to be employed to get it, backed up by a ruthless determination to win at any cost. Such was the case of a house-hunter in war-crowded Macon. Ga., who first tried to be decent but had no luck. Then, becoming desperate, he threw scruples to the wind and adopted a plan that would have earned the complete indorsement of Hitler or Mussolini. Selecting twenty friends, he sent them a circular letter, ordering them to find him a house by September, or else. The "or

German Withdrawal In Russia Suggested

The fall of Orel comes coincidentally with news of Russian offensive operations-on what scale is yet to be determined-in two other sectors of the long Russo-German front. One is in the Belgorod area, the other far to the southeast on the Mius River, north of Taganrog.

These events seem likely to be closely connected with each other. They suggest very strongly a Russian offensive plan of very wide scope and thorough planning. From the moment the Germans opened their offensive between Orel and Belgorod, it was plain-as repeatedly pointed out in these articles—that the German operation was one of limited objective. It was intended to obtain, if possible, the recapture of Kursk in order to relieve Russian pressure on Orel and upset future Russian plans for an offensive in the direction of Belgorod-Kharkov, with eventual resumption of the push to the Dnieper, which the Russians so nearly brought to spectacular success last winter.

It was likewise plain that, if the Germans failed to retake Kursk, the Russians would react against Orel, as has happened.

The fall of Orel now brings the whole German line from Velikie Luki through Bryansk to Kharkov into danger. Bryansk is especially exposed, and the Germans cannot afford to lose it unless they are preparing-as they may be-a general withdrawal on the Russian front. Assuming that they are not ready for such a withdrawal vet. they must concentrate forces for the defense of Bryansk.

The Russians, on the other hand, while keeping up pressure against Bryansk, may turn naturally to Belgorod as their next major objective. The threat to Bryansk acts as a diversion; the Russians appear to be in amply sufficient strength for both purposes.

But the old conditions prevail, the old attractions of the drive southwestward to the Dnieper are still there. Look at the map. The Germans have failed to retake Kursk, without which neither Orel to the north, nor Belgorod to the south can be secure. Now Orel has fallen, Bryansk is exposed. But Belgorod is even more exposed. Orel no longer threatens the flank of a Russian offensive toward Belgorod.

If Belgorod falls, Kharkov in its turn is exposed, with its communications laid bare to a Russian thrust from the northeast. And beyond Kharkov lie the vital crossings of the Dnieper, those rail and road crossings at Dnieper-Petrovsk and Saporozhe on which all the German armies in the bend of the Donets and on the Mius River are dependent.

With such a Russian advance, we return to the old critical situation of last winter, when the Germans saved their Donets armies only by throwing in, at the very last moment, a great part of their strategical reserves, including 15 armored divisions. These were the troops which, if they had been allowed to rest, recruit and train in peace during the winter, might have made the difference between defeat and victory in the German push for Kursk.

It is these considerations which make the prompt appearance of a Russian offensive toward Belgorod, at the very moment of the fall of Orel-coupled with what seems to be a holding attack down on the Mius-appear so significant. The attention of the Russian high command is irresistibly drawn to that deep southern salient along the Donets, and to the memories of their near-success there only a few months ago.

They must, of course, remember what balked them of that success-a German counterattack in great force. But where will the Germans find the reserves to do that again? If they withdraw troops from any other part of the Russian front, it is probable that the Russians will be prepared to take full advantage of the opportunity thus created. There are even suggestions of Russian pressure clear up in the Leningrad area. If the Germans are compelled again to employ what the Russians call the "high command reserves," which appear now to include some of their best hand-picked divisions, the freedom of action of the German leaders to meet any other emergency may this time be fatally compro-

It may be compromised in even greater degree than their freedom of action in the Mediterranean front, and later at Kursk, was compromised by the necessity of using so much of their main reserves last winter to stop the Russian thrust toward the bend of the Dnieper.

At a moment when Axis resistance on Sicily is collapsing, when Italy itself may be unable to continue the war, when an Allied invasion of the Balkans is possible, when great Allied forces stand ready in the British Isles, and when a new Russian offensive on some other part of the front is an ever-present possibility, the Germans must desire to husband their reserves, watch and wait.

It is precisely because the Russians may find the means of denying the Germans this priviledge that the new Russian moves at Belgorod and on the Mius River seem to promise so much if they develop along the suggested lines.

And it is because the problems thus presented to the German high command seem so difficult of solution under existing conditions, that one's mind keeps reverting to the possibility that the Germans may cut the Gordian knot of their accumulating troubles, at least for the time being, by a sudden and general withdrawal in considerable depth on the whole or a great part of the Russian

Plea for Saving Churches As Places Sacred to God.

To the Editor of The Star:

There are some people, including Catholics, who favor the bombardment of Rome as a necessary means toward the destruction of Fascism or in retaliation for the destruction of churches in Allied countries by the enemy. To me, the advocacy of such a sacrilegious deed is indicative of a Nazi-Fascist-Communist mind. The latter forces, because of their philosophies, are bent on the destruction of religion and everything symbolic of religion, culture and high civilization. But this is not true of us. The Allied nations are dedicated toward the preservation of the four freedoms, one of which is religion. As much as we deplore and condemn the ruination of churches and religious monuments by the enemies of religion. we nevertheless can expect such barbarity from them. But we have declared to the world that we are the liberators of religion (the foundation of democracy) as well as the other freedoms. We are fighting and sacrificing in order to save what the Axis powers want to destroy. If we are going to imitate the Axis, then wherein are we the better?

for this reason sacred to all good Christians. Any attempt to destroy the Eternal City (with good strategy it can be averted) would be profoundly deplored by all. We can't save religion by destroying churches.

Here there is no question of the value of or comparison between material structures and human life. We know that human life is, above all things, the most important. Nevertheless, in fighting this war, we can't forget that churches and cathedrals are consecrated to the worship of Almighty God. They are God's earthmansions which must be safeguarded at all costs; otherwise the destruction of them is apt to lead one to believe that this is an all-out war on religion

We earnestly hope that the Allied nations will show themselves different from the Axis by respecting the sacred places

Impressions of Labor Leaders At "Public Schools" in England.

Many harsh things have been said in ecent years about the English "public" school system, just as they have been said about the American private schools -today more numerous and much more expensive than their British prototypes Your readers may be interested in a

"We went to the public schools. We stipulated that we wanted to mix with the boys and not the masters. In certain instances we stayed overnight to enjoy the free-and-easy of a round-table conference. We went and joined in the boys' evening prayers. What did we find? We found an utter absence of snobbery. After all, the average normal boy is the same all England over.

"We found wholesome, vivid youth flourishing under the best conditions. We found no pampering. Indeed, there was a fine simplicity of living; most of the boys made their own beds and took their turn in the service of meals. We heard in various schools the loud cry of 'Boy!' I, at any rate, realized that being of service does not mean servitude. Those who cried for a boy had themselves been 'fags.' These public schools breed character. The motto of Winchester is common to all: 'Manners makyth man.'

"In the mass these boys have independence and poise. They think for themselves most vigorously. We were treated with deference, more so than we get at times from our constituents. We also realized—again in the mass that there was a spiritual background to the education plan. Who can forget Charterhouse Chapel and morning prayers? The unassuming part the boys themselves took in the inspiring worship, the friendliness, the invitation, over the memorial, to all men of good will, 'Pass, friend'? We passed, and found that two sorrowing but proud parents had sacrificed some of their priceless belongings to furnish a room of welcome to all who cared to enter. There was the portrait of their boy of 19 who died in the last war. The whole conception is an inspiration to the boys of today and tomorrow. ## Ship 'Gift' Clarification Needed Now

By DAVID LAWRENCE. Does President Roosevelt intend to make a present of 2,000,000 tons of American shipping to Great Britain? If not, then it is to be feared that the hopes of the British shipping interests have been unduly stimulated by the announcement made in the House of Commons by Prime Minister Churchill.

Mr. Churchill made a special point of explaining the new arrangement David Lawrence. whereby from 150 to 200 of our newly constructed merchant ships are to go under the British flag during the next several months. It is true the Prime Minister speaks of the ships being used in "wartime duty" and says that his discussions with President Roosevelt were confined "purely to the war to be discussed at a future date." Mr. Churchill adds that "there is no financial arrangement" but he refers to the President's attitude as a "generous arrangement."

period, leaving the arrangement

suitable to a peacetime settlement

But do the British people, and especially the shipping interests. know that the United States Maritime Commission in its public statement of July 27 referring to the same transaction stated no less than three times that "title will remain in the United States Government?'

Right of Gift Questioned. Technically, the Maritime Commission's statement is correct. Title today is in the United States Government, but has the President agreed with Mr. Churchill to let title pass after the war to the British government, which, in turn, will give the ships over to the British merchant marine to be used in competition with the American merchant marine?

Has the President the constitutional right to give away the property of the United States or to make an arrangement looking toward the giving away of any property after the war is ended. This question will be answered in the negative by members of Congress. It is important to bring this matter into the open now, lest our British friends be misled into thinking they have been awarded a gift of 2,000,000 tons of shipping. Mr. Churchill, it will be noted, has been under rather severe pressure lately to keep his eye on the post-war shipping problem as it affects England. Lord Rotherwick, chairman of the Clan Line Steamers Ltd. and Associated Companies, in an article published as recently as July 1 in a leading shipping journal in Great Britain, writes:

'The situation is fraught with great difficulty and is causing shipowners in this country considerable concern as the losses of British shipping have, as is well known, been considerable and comparatively little has been possible by way of replacement. On the other hand, the vestigated by Congress, and if there United States of America will end

The overthrow of the Fascist and Nazi regimes? If so, what sort of Government would we recognize? What hopes can we hold out to democratic governments? If Fascism is overthrown by a military coup, would that change our attitude?

Must Know Answers. Are we at one with Russia and Britain concerning the future of enemy peoples? Does the Atlantic Charter apply to them? In case of revolution and peace is Italy to retain any colonies? Would a liberal government purging Fascism obtain more favorable peace terms than a Fascist or military government? Now, I submit, that unless those conducting political war-

Then a political program is essential, designed to create sunporters who will fight our war inside enemy lands. To win supporters, one must offer something. The mere promise that their individual lives will be spared appeals only to the craven, trying to escape. It does not appeal to active, patriotic, responsible forces from whom we may desire concerted action.

For months I have been trying to get an answer to the same questions that have perturbed the script writers of the OWI and not only I, but many other editorial writers and commentators. If they have found the answers, I wish they would tell me. Kingsbury Smith, who covers the State Department for Mr. Hearst, and is usually reliable, claims that he does know our Government's plans for defeated Germany and Italy, and has set them forth in two issues of the American Mercury. But these "plans," have not been affirmed or denied by the State Depart-

If these plans are accurately reported, then OWI commentators were correct in saying that as far as the future of enemy peoples is concerned, the fall of Fascism makes no difference. For we intend in any case to occupy enemy countries, and administer them, first with military and later with civilian authorities, using for this purpose speciallytrained "Gauleiters," and "educators.

Working In Vacuum.

So the question is not what the broadcasters shouldn't have said. The question is what they should have said. Obviously, the broadcasters could not present their listeners with these unconfirmed "plans," which if circulated in enemy countries would inevitably strengthen the resistance of every element of the peoples against us, and behind any war leader, Fascist or not.

Had the questions which the broadcasters have been asking been answered, no one would have needed to try to reach the President or State Department on the night Mussolini abdicated. Like any good army, they would have followed a strategy planned long in advance, setting it into motion the moment Fascism fell.

Without a planned strategy, the script writers were thrown on their own wits, and that their wits gaile dthem is no wonder. They seized on Mr. Grafton, who was ready with his own opinion and invented an imaginary commentator to express an imaginary opinion. Only an imaginary commentator or unofficial person could have had an opinion, as matters stand.

For if there is a policy, it is locked in the bosoms of the President, the chiefs of the armed forces and Mr. Hull. The rest of us, including the OWI, are waging this war in a political vac-

That is not an exaggerated state-ment. It is a true one, fully sus-neath. And this alliance has been ceptible of proof. Twice the New Dealers have played that game and they are now preparing to do it again. In 1936, scattering almost unlimited largesse to both, they made an alliance between the farm lobbyists and the labor lobbyists. This was the farm-labor combination proclaimed by Prof. Tugwell and which was to relegate business to the rear and dominate the political scene. Though it was an unnatural union, it came pretty close to doing exactly that for a while. When to it was added the colored vote in from "Roosevelt haters." The situation on the eastern front is different. Although the Germans have been prepared by their propaganda organizations to expect some "strategic withdrawals" in Russia, it is hoped here that the fall of Orel and Belgorod will have a bad effect on the German home front. The German people have been educated to believe that the eastern front is the only one that matters. . Europe, they have been told, is a strong fortress. The Allies may succeed in nibbling at its fringes and register local successes here and there. But there is a sufficient German army, so the Goebbels propaganda machine has been saving. to make it impossible for the Allies actually to dent the European fortress.

German commentators and experts have presented facts and figures to their people showing that the Anglo-Saxons did not have a sufficient military machine for a large-scale invasion of Europe, and Goebbels has announced in the last few weeks that the Nazi high command actually would welcome an attempt of the American-British forces to tackle any of the fortified positions of Europe.

is seriously thinking about establishing a strong defensive line on the Dnieper-a long way from the Urals and the Volga. They say that such a line would require a much smaller force-not more than 150 divisions-and that the fortifications there are such that a force three times as large could not break through.

Competent Washington observers do not believe the loss of Orel in itself and Belgorod will deal a death blow to German morale. The all-important thing these observers would like to know is whether the Russians intend to push their advantage toward Bryansk and possible even farther west. From scanty reports received here, it appears that the Germans have managed to withdraw the bulk of their forces from the Orel-Belgorod area. If the Russians can press their advantage immediately without giving the Nazis time to reorganize, it is likely the German morale will suffer greatly. But if they are compelled to pause, Orel and Belgorod will become a major incident without any further serious repercussions on morale. While an Allied action in Western Europe this year is still believed to be out of the question, the night bombings by British aviation are likely to be renewed on an even larger scale than last week in the hope that they will be an important contributing factor to the destruction of the German will to resist.

I remember when I was 10 or 11 years old and moved to Bradenton. Fla., how I longed and ached to be tanned like my playmates. ## Railways and Unions Act to Restore Raise Chiefs of 15 nonoperating railroad unions and railroad management representatives met today in an effort to complete an agreement carrying an 8-cent hourly wage raise which the Government will approve.

An emergency board awarded that sum last May, but Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson set it aside. The union chiefs, in protest, have approved a strike ballot, but decided not to issue it pending the meeting with management.

The general belief in labor circles is that a strike vote would force the Government to take over the railroads as it has taken over the mines. The railroads, anxious to avert that, were reported ready to make an agreement and join the unions in persuading Government officials to

The railroad industry was described by union spokesmen as one of the hardest hit by the manpower shortage, and it is expected that point will be stressed by the principals if they sign an agreement. One union official said the carriers had 80,000 job vacancies.

Swarms of medium bombers, fighter-bombers and fighters continued to fill the sky over the dwindling brigehead, roving unopposed over roads and railroads, hurling steel into troop convoys and blasting the towns of Adrano, Francavilla and other key points of the German defense system

The Germans were putting up a particularly bitter defense in the area about Troina.

(Dispatches reaching Allied headquarters in North Africa three days ago said the Americans had taken Troina. Earlier, Prime Minister Churchill said were reported to have en-Troina, but apparently German counterattacks developed before the entry could be consolidated.)

One military observer who saw the opening stages of the battle of Troina described it as "a major military operation." He said the Germans were there in force defending the town with every kind of weapon, particularly mortars capahills and valleys around the town with deadly fire.

The reason for the desperation of the German defense lies in the strategic importance of Troina. ## Swedish Public Hails 3 United Air Officials Decision to Put End To German Transit

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 6.-The Swed- August 16. ish public demonstrated pleasure today at the decision by the government of King Gustaf V to bar Sweden's transit facilities to German troops and materiel. The average Swede never approved of the Nazi transit traffic between-Germany and Norway and Finland through Sweden. It was accepted by the government as an expedient measure when war threatened the unprepared nation in 1940. Now the Swedes are better pre- phia. pared in a military way than at any time in their history, with an army of 400,000 men and coastal and other defenses on 24-hour alert for any eventuality.

No reprisals have been indicated or threatened by the Nazis for the Stolen Bus Is Found decision, announced yesterday, to stop the transport of German war materiel across Sweden August 15 and to halt the movement of troops

(A German Foreign Office spokesman was quoted by the Berlin radio today as saying the cessation of traffic through Sweden resulted from an agreement between the two governments and that no tension existed between Berlin and Stock-The broadcast was recorded by the Associated Press.)

Heavy Burden Lifted.

For Sweden, the drastic step lifted a heavy burden from her neutrality policy; for Germany, it will force further use of the perilous North Sea route to Norway and it also added materially to the problem of supplying Nazi troops in Finland. New encouragement was provided the loyal population of Norway, who have already reported the morale of the German occupational forces ebbing dangerously. The growing possibility of an Allied invasion of Norway and the American Flying Fortress raids on German objectives there July 24 brought to a head Swedish public demands that the traffic be ended. A Foreign Office spokesman said the Nazi movements had proved a burden on both "the Swedish neutrality policy and relations with Anywhere from 600 to 1,000 German troops have been moving daily on Swedish railways. The amount of war supplies freighted through is a military secret, but such traffic may have been more important than the transfer of the soldiers.

Statement Issued.

The Swedish Foreign Office issued the following statement:

"Transport of war materials to and from Norway and Finland, respectively, will cease on August 15 while leave traffic from and to Norway, as well as the so-called horseshoe traffic between Trondheim and Narvik will cease altogether August

"The Foreign Office draws attention to the fact the agreement with Germany regarding the cessation of transit traffic naturally does not affect ordinary passenger traffic and goods traffic. Germans who obtain proper visas thus, as before, with regular Swedish trains and ordinary goods and mail will be carried through Sweden.

"Hospital trains with wounded and the ill will, even in the future, as cases arise, pass through Sweden in accordance with The Hague Con-

With no railways through the mountainous region linking Trondheim to Narvik, the Germans will need one-third more ships to supply Norway by sea, one Swede esti-

Rigid Observation.

Swedish officials emphasized that until the traffic was halted, the present agreement would be rigidly observed and that the Germans would not be permitted to send extra supplies or to reinforce or reduce the Norwegian garrisons via Sweden.

Speculation that Germany might cut off coal vital for Swedish industries was countered by the comment of a Swede who said such a possibility was balanced by the Germans' need for Swedish iron ore. There was some uncertainty, however, as to how long Germany would permit safe conduct for Swedish vessels moving oil and supplies from the Western Hemisphere.

The newspaper Dagens Nyheter, commenting editorially on the transit stoppage, said the people had been waiting "impatiently" a long time for the announcement and seldom has a government message been received with greater satisfaction and delight by the whole na-

"If the step has given Germany a clearer picture of what we think about conditions in Norway," it said. "that will be a great help."

Officials Ease Enforcement of Driving Curb

No Cases Filed in Days; Panel Takes Indefinite Recess

Enforcement of the pleasuredriving ban is being eased in the District, announcements from the local Office of Price Administration and a study of enforcement records indicated today.

No suspected violators of the ban have been reported by District OPA inspectors for nearly a week. The special trial panel of three attorneys, set up on June 24 to help local ration boards whittle down a heavy backlog of pleasure driving cases was recessed today for an indefinite period after hearing only nine cases at its session last night.

May Be Discontinued.

John L. Laskey, chief attorney for the District OPA, estimated that not more than 250 hearings still are docketed for hearings by the local C. P. Taff Sees Hope not more than 250 hearings still are ration boards. The special trial panel, which in 14 bi-weekly sesweeks and may be discontinued permanently, he indicated.

Mr. Laskey said motorists still are being cited for pleasure driving here, but admitted that enforcement has "lightened up a bit" in the last week or so. The District OPA's small staff of investigators has been occupied much of the time with enforcement of the new restaurant price rollback order and retail price ceilings on food, he of gasoline rationing violations by the panel last night at the Force School, and four of these lost one or more ration coupons.

B. S. SOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE | 16-86028-1 Above is the new short tax form 1040-ES, a work sheet, on which a Government expert has figured out the estimated income and Victory taxes due this year from a man earning $3,600 who has a wife and two children. In line 2 above the $560 deduction in the short form is used in place of the $500 flat personal exemption for a single person; the $1,340 deduction is used instead of the $1,200 exemption for married; the $390 for each dependent is used in place of the $350. In line 5 above the $624 is the exemption allowed on the Victory tax. In line 6 the estimated net Victory tax is estimated at 3 per cent instead of the regular Victory tax figure of 5 per cent, because on this short form in the case of a married man allowance is made for the postwar credit refund.

USES and States To Control Flow Of Food Workers

Region Plan Designed To Assure Processors For Critical Areas

By JAMES BIRCHFIELD. A plan to permit inter-State recruitment and transfer of food processing workers, while at the same time protecting labor supplies in local areas, was announced today by Leo R. Werts, director of region 4 of the War Manpower Commission, which includes Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina and the District. A survey of the State indicated meanwhile, that Maryland crop failures caused by the drought may amount to millions, with the Eastern Shore area bearing the brunt of losses in perishable market and canning crops. In the Frederick area, where canning operations are only about 25 per cent of normal. it was feared that canning may have to stop altogether soon.

Under terms of the plan, approved by the Governors of the four States, recruiting of food workers will be in the hands of the United States Employment Service, and all orders for these workers, both local and inter-State, will be channeled through USES offices in the various States.

At the same time, it was said, employers in New Jersey, Delaware and New York, who-usually recruit labor from Southern States, have been requested to transmit their needs to USES officials. They have been assured, it was said, that their needs will be given consideration after labor requirements in the region have been supplied.

Gov. Broughton of North Carolina, WMC officials said, has urged officials of other Southern States and those north of Maryland also to enter into the agreement. Provides Clearance Screen.

from engaging in unauthorized recruiting activities. Local needs within States will be safeguarded, it was said, by requesting employers who usually utilize labor from the designated areas to file with the USES orders for workers within a designated period. In addition, recruiting campaigns will be conducted to supply labor first for jobs within the State, and second for jobs without the State bor-

Measures will be taken to assure the return of workers to their States as soon as jobs for which they were recruited are completed, it was said, and in order to assure the return of workers, statements of availability will be issued only for such periods as will elapse between the time of recruitment and the beginning of the first employment in the home State for which the worker is thought to be neces-

The canners stated that much of the corn crop was beyond saving, even should there be some rains now. Canners at two plants reported they were waiting to see how much 'tapering off" would occur after the early crop goes through the processing machinery, while some Eastern Shore canneries are reported to have canceled their contracts because of inability to get vegetables. One of the men remarked that "if there is no rain, we might wind up next week." Grave concern, meanwhile, was expressed yesterday by agricultural leaders in Queen Anne County over the number of farmers who are selling their equipment and acreage. Twelve sales of stock and equipment, involving farms with total acreage of 3,060 acres, have been announced for this month.

The sales will include 374 milk cows, in addition to young cattle and draft animals, agricultural equipment and implements.

Agricultural leaders say that most of the farmers "are quitting because they do not see their way ahead." "The shortage of labor," said one farmer, "is terrific.

Constructive Comment And Action Urged in Talk to Junior Board

Child casualties are intolerable in a democracy that has not even heard the scream of falling bombs, Charles P. Taft, director of the Office of Community War Services members of the Washington Junior Board of Commerce at a luncheon meeting yesterday in the Annapolis

Juvenile delinquency has been going on since the time of Homer, Mr. Taft said, but many people are now discovering it for the first time and are blaring it out before the public eye as a new horror.

Mr. Taft thinks that it should be publicized, but at the same time, should be coupled with an understanding of the problem. He added that the problem has been discussed in much the same way through the Civil and First World Wars, and that much of the comment has hardly been constructive.

Sees Unjust Criticism Washington, being the heart of the Nation, is naturally the spotlighted community and although the juvenile delinquency is a big problem here, Mr. Taft believes that the Capital City has received a great deal of unjust criticism. Hecompared Washington to other warboom towns in the United States, all having identical problems.

The Washington Criminal Justice Association estimated that there had been a 33 per cent rise in juvenile delinquency since 1940, that juvenile complaints are reaching police at the rate of 450 per month, while 300 used to be considered higher than normal. Other sections, however, show comparable rises, for Los Angeles shows a 15 per cent rise in truancy while Ohio reformatory admissions are up 19 per cent. Nationally, the Children's Bureau show edthat juvenile court figures for girls are up 30 per cent for girls and 8 per cent for boys

Parents Need Guidance. Mr. Taft said that most children are acutely conscious of the problem themselves, that the gravest single responsibility lies with parents, and that in these times pardren. One way to curb juvenile delinquency is to use social agencies to educate parents; another is to guide children through the school. Besides these two factors, he said, another comes into the picture-recreation.

Washington, according to Mr. Taft, has recognized the importance of sufficient recreational facilities. The District Recreation Department, working with the Board tion, said a number of important of Education, has had 108 playgrounds in operation this summer 66 for white and 42 for colored children. It is running five day camps as well, four for white and one for colored.

Region Plan Designed To Assure Processors For Critical Areas

By JAMES BIRCHFIELD.

A plan to permit inter-State recruitment and transfer of food processing workers, while at the same time protecting labor supplies in local areas, was announced today by Leo R. Werts, director of region 4 of the War Manpower Commission, which includes Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina and the District.

Under terms of the plan, approved by the Governors of the four States, recruiting of food workers will be in the hands of the United States Employment Service, and all orders for these workers, both local and inter-State, will be channeled through USES offices in the various States. At the same time, it was said, employers in New Jersey, Delaware and New York, who usually recruit labor from Southern States, have been requested to transmit their needs to USES officials. They have been assured, it was said, that their needs will be given consideration after labor requirements in the region

By the Way— BETH BLAINE -

The servant problem of wartime Washington holds no terrors for Miss Jo (christened "Josie," which she does not like) Webb, chief USO hostess of the YMCA at 1736 G street. Miss Webb lives in an attractive apartment on Q street just off Massachusetts avenue-with four other war-working girls who manage to crowd into a busy schedule, paying jobs (all full time), a lot of war work (all volunteer) and the smoothest running little household you've ever seen.

"How do you do it." we gasped. Well, it seems, according to Miss Webb, the girls take turns at their household jobs. They divide them into cook, cleaning woman (although each cleans her own room always) and dishwasher. Then just so the jobs won't become monotonous, each girl serves in her respective position for only a week at a stretch. This varies the menus and the cook-

"I have children all over the country," said youthful Miss Webb and when we looked somewhat startled she explained that she had taught school in her home State of Texas and that many of her pupils still keep in touch with her. She came to the Nation's Capital seven years ago and took a job with the Treasury Department, in the Bureau of Engraving. She had been doing volunteer work for the USO for a year and a half now and she loves it. She started out as a sight-seeing guide-taking servicemen all around the town on buses and streetcars and on foot. Now she is directing the volunteer hostesses' schedule at the YMCA, acting as chief hostess herself. She is thrilled with the growing program which includes an extensive information desk, a gameroom, Saturday night dances, a regular Wednesday night song fest followed by dancing, summer picnics and a much-needed dormitory for the men on leavenot to mention a swimming pool, where 9,522 servicemen went swimming last month!

Win, Lose or Draw Griffs' Victory Hopes

NEW YORK, Aug. 6 (N.A.N.A.).—It seems clear there will be no wartime international heavyweight championship fight between those two Allied sergeants, Sergt. Joe Louis of the United States Army and Sergt. Freddie Mills of the RAF.

However, Sergt. Mills is looking ahead, and his American agent, Mr. Babe Culnan of Newark, N. J., has begun to polish up the calliope in

By way of practice, Mr. Culnan directs a blast in the key of two flats against Thomas George Paul Farr, well-known Welsh prizefighter who spends all his time these days, according to Mr. Culnan, going around traducing Sergt. Mills in all the counties of England, from Bucks and Berks to Salops and Wilts. Farr knocks Mills, so Mr. Culnan leaps to his feet to knock Farr.

"It's a case of pure jealousy," says Sergt. Mills' Newark spokesman.

It probably is unnecessary to point as well as for Sergt. Mills.

Farr Only Sour Critic

I do not know how good a fighter Sergt. Mills is. Practically every one but Thomas G. P. Farr speaks highly of him and his record indicates that he must have something, though a great many British heavyweights in the past have had something they would have been better off withoutviz, the cases of Bombardier Billy Wells, Joseph Cholmondeley Beckett and Phainting Phil Scott, not to speak of their British neighbor, Jack Doyle, the unspeakable Tipperary

Let us give Sergt. Mills the benefit No Need for Lawyers of the doubt. For all we know, he is a man completely devoid of Doyle-

He is also three years younger than Sergt. Louis, which may be quite an asset by the time the war is over. If they fight, Sergt. Louis will be wise to knock Sergt. Mills out. A mere decision on points, based on the American interpretation of the Code Queensberry, will carry no conviction with the British fight public, which has seen something of American scoring recently and does not care

He got the Soho salute, as well as the Bermondsey bazoo. This is a painful experience, as I know from having been booed myself here and there by an ungrateful electorate, though for different reasons.

After watching Col. Vidmer at work and hearing his decisions, great throngs of the British faithful paid visits to the tomb of the late Marquis of Queensberry to see if that nobleman was turning over in his grave. I have not got the final returns from the mausoleum as yet, but it seems definitely possible that there has been some spinning on the part of the late peer.

The trouble arises, they tell me, from Col. Vidmer's understandable practice of scoring bouts by American standards. He is as innocent of intentional wrongdoing as a summer day is long, or thereabout. However, his chances of being elected to Parliament are not worth a farthing

Sergt. Lewis always has carried a solution to these scoring quibbles in the knuckles of his right and left hands and if Sergt. Mills has the same gift for forestalling debate, there will be no need for lawyers at the party.

Soar With Red Sox Top Hurlers Ailing

BOSTON, Aug. 6.-The Nats' prospects of remaining the hottest club in the American League at least for a few days were enhanced when it was learned Boston's three top pitchers, Tex Hughson, Oscar Judd and Yank Terry, probably won't view action against Washington in the four-game series starting today. That trio of pitchers, responsible for 26 of Boston's 46 victories this season, represent a particular pain in the neck to the Nats. Of the six games in which the Red Sox have defeated the Nats, Hughson, Judd and Terry have accounted for five.

Leonard vs. Newsome Today

Extremely pleasant to the Nats will be Judd's absence due to a sore arm. On the two occasions Judd faced Washington this season, he permitted a total of eight hits and one run in 18 innings. Terry, a 3-2 conqueror of the Nats, also is nurs ing an ailing arm and Hughson, who has beaten the Nats, 7-0 and 3-2, is benched with a sore thumb

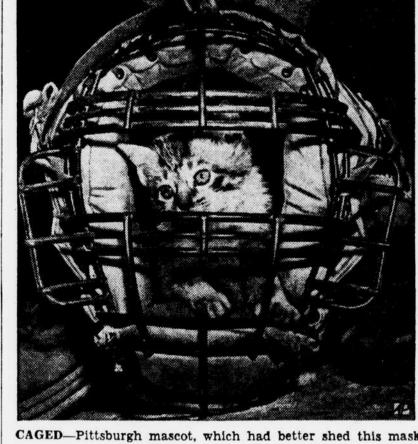

The Nats were to carry a seven game winning streak against Heber Newsome today, with Dutch Leonard as Manager Ossie Bluege's hope of extending that victory string. four-hit shutout victor over the Red Sox in his last appearance against them, Leonard was pursuing his eighth triumph.

Baugh Shines Despite Curb Skins' Coaches Order in Practice

By WALTER R. McCALLUM,

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Aug. 6.-Long awaited rough stuff was to start for the Redskins today as Coach Arthur (Dutch) Bergman lifted the lid on his ban on body contact and ordered the big bruisers of pro football to move into tackling dummy drills and light scrimmage.

"These fellows are supposed to know the fundamentals of tackling and blocking and theoretically should know the primer stuff of football," said Dutch, "but we find it does no harm to let 'em get a little rough with each other as early as possible.
"All that has gone on up to now has been getting them into shape for the rough work," he continued. 'A man in condition does not injure easily and the running and passing we've had the boys doing has been done to get them in shape. Coaches Protect Baugh.

It is no secret that when the rough stuff gets under way the coaches see to it that Sammy Baugh doesn't get too much of it. Sammy is the Redskins' offense. Take him away and the team not only loses much of its scoring punch, but also much of its deception. With Baugh out for any length of time because of a serious injury the Redskins might drop games they would win with him in there.

But Baugh himself doesn't ask or want any release from the rough stuff. "It's one of our hardest jobs to keep Sammy from roughing it up with those big fellows," said Bergman. "He wants to go in there, but we don't want him to get hurt.'

The two-a-day workouts have been confined to polishing the new and tricky plays Bergman is developing. but the ball handling must be imbeen blowing hot and cold all season, apparently are generating a full head of steam that may blow Pittsburgh out of second place in the National League, and possibly prove very annoying to the first-place St. Louis Cardinals. Behind a masterful six-hit pitch-

Reinforced Michigan Looms as Nation's Strongest Team

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN,

Associated Press Sports Writer CHICAGO, Aug. 6.-Football may be in the hands of pallbearers in some parts of the country for the duration, but in the Western Conference, where 700 players have reported for summer practices, the coffin corner still is a gridiron term.

Maj. John L. Griffith, Big Ten commissioner of athletics, said he is delighted with the general picture, declaring that the game's health is being watched by the best doctor in the world-"the American public, who insists it continue; school officials, who are supporting it more han ever because of its training values, and military leaders, who are chorusing, 'send us more of those

Maj. Griffith refuses to become alarmed over reports that 189 colleges in the Nation have abandoned football for the duration and he estimates that more than 80 per cent of the colleges which competed in 1941 will have teams operating this fall.

Few Stars Escape Big Ten. Enrollment of servicemen with gridiron experience has made this possible. In the Western Conference, some schools have seen their outstanding men dispatched to other campuses as marine and Navy students. But what keeps the gridiron future of 1943 stable in this section is the fact that few of the stars escaped from the realms of the Conference and will be competing for teams which only a year ago they were playing against. Already it is possible to name the nost important football alignment of 1943. It's the Wisconsin-Michigan tilt. Halfback Elroy Hirsch, Quarterback Jack Wink and Center Fred idle, the rise of the Rhinelanders Negus, who helped Wisconsin's best shared interest with Dolph Camilli's team in 30 years gain runnerup honors last fall, were shifted as service students to Michigan along with several promising freshmen. The Wolverines also nabbed Minnesota's thunderous fullback, Bill in the summer drills which the Big Ten inaugurated this year. With this talent abetting such holdover strongest football unit in the coun-freshmen who were 17 years old; was the Gophers' fine quarterback, Bill Garnaas, who stayed on as a V-12 student; and with 107 on hand at Northwestern, the Wildcats were assured of their greatest reserve strength in history

Alsab Quits Chicago For Narragansett

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Al Sabath, the Chicago attorney, said today that his decision to send Alsab, 1941 juvenile champion to Narragansett for his 1943 debut was not founded on reports of friction between the Sabath stable and the Washington Park track management.

"We are not mad at anybody," he said. "We just think that the schedule back East is more suitable for Alsab. His first race will be Monday in the Pawtucket Handicap at Narragansett. After that, he'll go in other stakes at that track and at the Saratoga meeting."

Alsab, which with 10 other horses in the Sabath stables were shipped East today, had been nominated for Saturday's $10,000 Chicago Handicap. He probably won't make his Chicago appearance until the $50,000 Washington Park Handicap on Labor Day.

(Hyla lichenata). Here is one of the largest tree frogs in the world. It was discovered in 1750 and described 100 years later. Its home is in the tall trees of Jamaica and it snores. One would think it strange with a combination of size and a loud voice that resembles a healthy snore of whale. such a creature would not have been able to hide from mankind for so Frogs living in hollow places in tall trees are not so easy to locate. Indeed, the only way to find them is to folllow the "snore" and identify the particular tree where the noise maker is domiciled. That is what Emmett Reid Dunn did back in 1929. To find out something about this unusual frog took much patience and understanding of the ways of Hylas in general.

The giant tree frog breeds in the wild pines, as do the other tree frog "Wild pines" are paraneighbors.

sitic plants growing on the trunks or limbs of nearly all of the trees in the Jamaica region where the giant was found. These plants have flattened leaves radiating from a small base. Some of them may hold as much as two quarts of water. The tree frogs may be found sitting in these leaves. The water becomes the nursery pool.

The tadpoles of the snorer are black. The legs have white warts scattered over them. They are lively large taddies that get about in their special "pine pool" without fear of

The adults are a grayish-green, the color of lichen. They would be difficult to find if they were on the tree trunk. The throat is a creamy white and the eyes are flecked with

Most mammals keep themselves warm by growing thick coats of hair or fur. Not so the whale! It has a bare skin. Nature, however, has given whales a way of keeping warm. Under the outer skin, or hide, there is a layer of fat known as "blubber." One whale may have a thick layer of blubber, and another may have a thin layer. It depends on the kind

Some of the smaller members of the whale family have blubbers only an inch or two thick. A large sperm whale may have a layer from 12 to 14 inches thick. A Greenland whale has the greatest amount of blubber. The layer sometimes is from 15 to 20 inches thick! One whale is likely to have from 12 to 20 tons of blubber. Oil comes from the blubber, and this oil has a good market value. It can be used in oil lamps, and in past times was important for that reason. It goes into several kinds of soap, and can be used in oiling machines. Twenty tons of blubber from Greeland while will provide from 13 to 15 tons of oil.

substance is not really bone, but it takes the place of teeth.

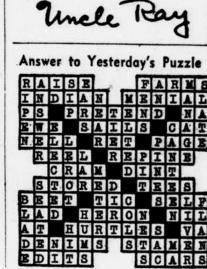

In the mouth of a Greenland whale are hundreds of strips or "blades" of whalebone. The average number is about 300 on each side. The blades may be as much as 15 feet long.

The strips of whalebone make a sieve, and the sieve is used to strain ocean water. Small fish and other little sea animals are caught as the water passes through.

Whalebone is placed in fans, corsets and many other articles. The Greenland whale has more whalethe mating call or the challenge of bone than any other whale, but sevone rival to another. Again, for all eral other kinds also have it in their Certain whales have teeth in-

Kool-Aid Fervor Hits Higher Note Makes 10 BIG In Deanna's Newest Film

One of the finest pieces of suspense ever contrived by the movies is that which centers in the career of Deanna Durbin. From picture to picture, the public is left to wonder how long the sweetness of America's sweetheart-even of the cynics-will be able to endure. She is grown up now, and married, and there is always the fear that sophistication will lay its spoiling hands upon her. Sometimes, there is an intimation that such will be the case in the advance .

HOLLYWOOD. Bette Davis' Hollywood Canteen might be in a tough spot for glamour if Hedy Lamar began shirking what she believes is her solemn duty. Hedy appears at the canteen every Friday night and remains from 8:30 until near midnight, dancing, talking with the service boys and autographing an average of 500 photos.
