There had been widespread speculation in Washington that Mr. Welles, despite his rift with Mr. Hull, might go on missions to South America or Moscow as President Roosevelt's personal representative.

There were authoritative reports today, however, that Mr. Welles definitely was out of the diplomatic picture, and the likelihood of a future assignment was slim indeed. Armour Is Now Here. Mr. Armour is in Washington

Mountbatten to Hold Conferences Today With Army Officials

The eastern end of a British-American-Chinese squeeze play against Japan-product of the Quebec war strategy conference is being outlined here at meetings between Lord Louis Mountbatten, new Allied supreme commander in Southeast Asia, and American military chiefs. It has been made clear that a real offensive in the Asiatic area lies in the far distance. The itinerary of Britain's Com-mando chief will take him through a round of staff conferences with army officials today, and, after a trip to London, eventually to Chungking to plot the western phase of the war in Asia. A four-fold objective appeared to dominate the developing pattern for the Allied effort in Asia: Reopen the Burma Road, unshackle Southern Asiatic seaports from enemy control, ultimately to dominate the China Sea and greatly augment Allied air power in China itself.

Confers With Navy Officials. With the whole program obviously, two German minesweepers had sunk involving amphibious operations. Lord Louis conferred yesterday with Navy officials. Secretary of the Navy Knox remarked that the choice of Lord Louis was an indication of "grewing attention and interest" to the Southeastern Asia theater and "to future operations there." combat theater command which has been given to him.

Lord Louis arrived yesterday afternoon by plane from Canada to talk with Army and Navy officials. The main objective of his operations will be to increase the present trickle of supplies to China to a flood, indicating a general Burma campaign, though attacks also may be made in Malaya.

Long Campaign Expected.

There is no optimistic feeling in the Allied high command that any Burma campaign can be cleaned up quickly. On the contrary, the con-sensus is that it will be long and difficult, and while operations prob-ably will begin late this fall, the objective may not be achieved within a year or longer.

"I feel very honored to have been appointed to the Southeast Asia command," Admiral Mountbatten said after he arrived here.

"As you know, it is an Allied command and I am particularly proud that there will be United States forces and British forces fighting side by side with our Chinese allies until we have finally thrown out the Japs and the final victory is won."

Weiss was the fourth grocer this month to avoid trial by forfeiting $250. The forfeitures were allowed by Judge Nathan Margold on the recommendations of John Laskey, chief local OPA attorney. Mr. Las-key stated that the forfeiters were allowed because of "extenuating circumstances" in each case.

Weiss was charged with selling 71/2 pounds of ham at $3.68, which is 28 cents above the ceiling price for ham. The sale was to Mary Mastin, 313 Sixteenth street S.E.

FRIDAY August 27, 1943

Nearing Universal Service In his National Radio Forum speech

Wednesday evening, Chairman Paul V. McNutt of the War Manpower Commission made this significant statement:

Again, let me say we are fighting a total war-a war in which a man must accept the assignment given to him—the spot where he can best serve the war effort. That spot may be a copper mine, in agriculture, in an aircraft factory or in the Army. We are all in the same boat.

The statement is significant because it embodied the whole principle of a National Service Act, concerning which the administration leaders in Washington have carefully withheld indorsement.

They have withheld this indorsement in the hope that the objectives of such an act-applying the principle of the selective draft for civilian as well as military service—can be reached by the so-called voluntary methods of the War Manpower Commission. But we have not been able to reach them by such methods.

In this same speech, one of the clearest and most convincing presentations of the manpower problem yet made, Mr. McNutt described the situation which faces us now: Plants. factories and shipyards are falling behind production schedules; acute labor shortages are found in the entire West Coast region, the ore regions of the Great Lakes, the timber regions of the Northwest. Plants are actually shutting down, in some localities, because the men are not available to run them.

And what are we going to do about it? Try again, with more stringent restrictions against transfers from one job to another, to freeze labor in present employment; try again, with the threat of military service as the alternative, to force people from less or nonessential employment into essential jobs. And to do all this through directives from Washington, based on the sometimes nebulous authority of executive order, instead of by specific legislation. It may work. But there is little in our experience to date to justify the hope that it will work.

Congress is coming back to Washington next month with many of its members determined to stop the draft of fathers, destined to put nearly half a million of them in the armed services between now and the first of the year. Legislation arbitrarily banning inductions, such as proposed by Chairman May of the House Military Affairs Committee, is in its way more dangerous even than the serious manpower shortage in war industries. Such legislation would compound, rather than simplify, the problem. For the civilian problem is not to be solved by cutting off the supply of manpower for the armed services. The real problem is properly to utilize existing manpower where it is most needed. If this cannot be done through the new regulations of the Manpower Commission, then the solution must be sought through legislation.

The military authorities will have to justify their needs for more men, of course. But before they are penalized by arbitrary legislation against the draft of fathers, there should be definite demonstration that everything that can be done has been done to utilize available civilian manpower. Short of a National Service Act, everything that can be done has not yet been done.

Portal Pay Ruling

The announcement that the War Labor Board has rejected the compromise of the portal-to-portal pay issue which had been worked out by John L. Lewis and the Illinois Coal Operators Association probably means that this thorny problem eventually will go to the courts for settlement, where it should have gone in the first instance.

Until WLB Chairman Davis completes the writing of his formal opinion, the precise reasons for the board's decision remain unknown. But it has been announced that the public and industry members of the board, with the labor members dissenting, concluded that the compromise arrangement did not constitute a "genuine settlement" of claims on behalf of the miners arising under the Fair Labor Standards Act. In other words, the board felt that this was a hidden pay raise, not a bona fide compromise of a legal claim.

No doubt Mr. Davis will set forth supporting reasons for this conclusion in his opinion. Meanwhile, it might be mentioned that the com- adviser to Il Duce. tors were willing to settle with Mr. Lewis out of court if they could send the bill to the consuming public. But if there was an obligation to pay the miners anything, it rested on a violation of law by the operators. and it is difficult to understand why the penalty for that should be passed on to the public.

The French Committee

The limited recognition which the governments of the United States, Britain and Canada have extended to the French Committee of National Liberation apparently has the effect of placing the committee on a probationary status for an indefinite period of time. Certainly it falls far short of the degree of recognition which has been accorded other governments in exile.

It is to be supposed that this move will help to regularize our dealings with the French Committee. Heretofore we have been in the paradoxical position of having to deal with the committee as the de facto representative of certain French interests, while refusing to recognize it as the representative of any interest. The limited recognition now extended should tend, at least, to cure this condition.

There is small likelihood, however, that either the French Committee or its partisans in this country will be satisfied with the new arrangement.

This Government's announcement was captioned: "Statement by the President." It noted with "sympathy" the desire of the committee to be regarded as the body qualified to insure the administration and defense of French interests. But it was specified that "this statement does not constitute recognition of the government of France or of the French Empire." The committee was recognized "as functioning within specific limitations during the war," subject to the eventual selection by the people of France of their own government. The principal limitations in the position of this Government are that the committee's operations shall continue subject to the veto of the Allied military commanders, and that all detailed questions of relationship which may arise in the future are to be settled on their merits in the light of then existing circumstances. In other words, except for a certain formal acknowledgment of its existence, the French Committee receives little that it has not already had.

The explanation of this reserve on the part of our Government lies in its distrust or dislike of General de Gaulle and certain of his followers. In recent weeks the De Gaulle and Giraud forces have been brought together within the framework of the National Committee, and there are those who believe that the period of conflict between them is at an end. But the background of their relations, and of the relations of the De Gaullist faction with the Allied governments, is not especially reassuring. This Government has felt that De Gaulle, in the past, was not willing to subordinate his political aspirations to the winning of the war. And it has not been sympathetic with the view that the satisfaction of these aspirations would be an important contribution to military success. Its present position apparently is that it will grant only an absolute minimum of recognition to the French Committee until the latter demonstrates that it is worthy of a greater degree of recognition.

Whether this is wise statesmanship, all things considered, remains to be seen. Russia has recognized the committee as the "representative of the state interests of the French Republic and as the leader of all French patriots fighting against the Hitlerite tyranny." This seems to amount to a recognition of the committee as the government of France and may be expected to place an additional strain upon the relations between Russia and the United States and Britain. Thus, while there may be gains, there are also losses in the policy which this Government has adopted. Nor is there any assurance that the scales are going to be tipped in our favor in the end.

Muti

When the history of the Fascist movement in Italy finally is written, the role played in it by Ettore Muti will be shown to have been considerable. Mussolini, of course, was its "only" leader, and everything that could be done to glorify him was done as a policy. His name and his figure were the symbols of the rampant nationalism of the Italian race during more than twenty years.

It was Muti and other secondary individuals like him, however, who made Fascismo a force to be reckoned with in those two decades. The career of the late air ace and party secretary is worthy of brief review if only because to some comparative degree it was a model for his compatriot contemporaries.

Born May 22, 1902, Muti was only fifteen when he volunteered for the Arditi Battalion. His record in the First World War was admirable. But when he joined Gabriele d'Annunzio in the taking of Fiume in defiance of France and Great Britain in 1918, he launched out upon an adventure which naturally led to further provocative procedures.

The Fascist doctrine was his opportunity. He used it to gain political strength in his native Ravenna between 1919 and 1921, shared in the march on Rome in 1922, became commander of various Black Shirt legions, gradually achieved an authende popularity as a nyer as well as an Generalissimo Franco in the Spanish Civil War. At the start of Italy's conquest of Albania, he attacked Valona and Durazzo. Fighting in the air over Greece, he was supposed to have been lost, but he managed to Muti became secretary general of the Fascist organization in 1939 and held the position about twelve months. The notion that he was Il Duce's "triggerman" may not have been accurate, but there is no question about his activity as a party tyrant. His word was law in the territory in which he operated. Now he is dead, allegedly shot by police officers who had arrested him on a charge of graft and from whom he had attempted to escape. The best that can be said of him is that he was courageous.

The Man and the Job

The need for creation of a separate Allied Southeast Asia command under a supreme commander probably became evident to the Allied chiefs of staff as soon as the outlines of global strategy began to take some definite form. Over two months ago decision to establish such a command was announced in London, coincident with appointment of Field Marshal Sir Archibald Wavell to be Viceroy of India, with General Sir Claude Auchinleck succeeding him as military commander in chief in India.

The time intervening since the London announcement of June 19 no doubt has been spent in the search for the right man for the supreme command, in perfecting the political and other arrangements for complete divorce of responsibility for conduct of operations against Japan from the civil and military government of India proper, and in preliminary considerations concerning the necessary participation of Chinese troops in combined operations in this new theater.

The choice of Lord Louis Mountbatten for the supreme command, ratified by the Allied chiefs of staff at Quebec, elicits favorable response everywhere. Lord Louis, though one of the youngest, already has become one of the most colorful and popular military figures of the war. He has won a reputation for getting things done and has attained a professional distinction that offsets any suspicion that his connections, rather than his ability, influenced his choice.

Commenting on the announcement of the proposed Southeast Asia command last June, he Sar suggested editorially th t when the choice of a supreme commander became known, "his special qualifications may be an indication of the nature of the campaign contemplated after the monsoon" (which ends in October). Lord Louis, as acting vice admiral and chief of combined operations, is qualified by experience and training for the type of military movements which may be expected to predominate in a drive by land, sea and air to rid Burma of the Japanese. His direction of the British commandos, later enlarged to include combined operations, has made him something of an authority on amphibious warfare and he is credited in this respect for some of the tactics used successfully in the invasion of Sicily.

It is natural for popular interest to center on the personality of the new supreme commander. But the military significance of the Quebec announcement is that while Allied strategy remains unchanged, with defeat of the Germans as the first objective, Allied power has reached the point which makes it possible to begin the combined warfare against the Japanese even before the knockout blows against Germany have materialized. Thus far we have been fighting a holding war against Japan. so successful in itself that it has placed the Japs on the defensive before our own offensive has been unleashed. Establishment of the Southeast India command now suggests the shape of things to come, and within a future far less remote than seemed possible a few months

Retired

The other day the Mount Pulaski (Ill.) fire truck was sold for private use. It was an aged vehicle, being foaled long ago in Detroit or thereabouts in the days of cranks, not self-starters, but it had two priceless assets often lacking in cars of today -gasoline in the tank and tires on

At first there was some talk of the SPCA (Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Automobiles) attempting to void the sale. Surely so historic a vehicle deserved retirement in some pleasant garage, there to dream in peace of its past valiant service to the community, of the thousands upon thousands of dizzy roaring miles it traveled, saving lives and property, quivering in every fiber and gasket of its frame and panting for more. Would not such a noble steed, worn from years of toil, pine away under the indignity of civilian hauling under a heavy load and pushed to the T-card limit? One turn of the crank decided the question; with a snort of sheer surprise, the engine woke up from an eighteen-year sleep, trembling with eagerness to go places and learn what the big new world was like. Mount Pulaski, it seems, shares not the dubious fame of Hamburg or Berlin. Since 1925 there has not been a fire there big enough to call for use of the unhistoric old mechanized employe.

For what it is worth, the suggestion is offered to Brooklyn that while

Peace and World Order Are Allied War Aims

By Maj. George Fielding Eliot.

Sometimes it helps to sit down quietly for a little while and do a little plain thinking of the brass tacks variety.

We Americans, in association with our Allies, are fighting a war against powerful enemies, a war which is costing us a bitter toll of lives, to say nothing of money, goods and precious time. What are we fighting for?

Why are millions of American men overseas, attacking the Germans and the Japanese? Why are we so determined to push this war through to the point of unconditional surrender? What does it all mean-to each of us, as American citizens and as human beings?

Instantly and instinctively, each of us answers that question in his heart-we are fighting for victory and peace, and the day when the boys come home in triumph, and families are reunited, and we can begin to build again, each in his own way, for his own future and the future of his dear ones.

But just what do we mean by victory and peace?

Victory, of course, in the military sense, means overthrow of those who have threatened us all, our national safety, our way of life, our freedom to live and work and pursue happiness-and who have outraged our sense of justice and decency and humanity by their brutal use of force to achieve their ends. We cannot feel safe while these nations have weapons in their hands, and the means to use them against us or our Allies. They have placed themselves outside the scope of any negotiated peace; we cannot deal with them at any intermediate point short of their becoming completely helpless to injure us. No peace that involves taking German or Japanese word for anything whatever can have any value. Our enemies must be utterly defeated and disarmed. But this is not all for which we fight. If each of us were to examine his heart and his conscience in this matter. I think that in the vast majority, Americans would find they already realize that there must be something more. Having beaten our foes by the exertion of the last ounce of effort of which we are capable, we shall need some assurance that we shall not have to exert such effort again, or make the attendant sacrifices. We shall need that assurance as the cornerstone upon which we shall begin to build anew. Without that cornerstone, no building for the future, whether national or individual, will seem of much use.

This time, the Vigilance Committee of the world, called together to destroy the outlaws who have threatened us all. must not disband when its work is done, as it did last time. Rather must it go on to the formation of an orderly society for the world community, one which can keep the peace of that community in the only way that the peace of any community has ever been kept since the world began—by the controlled timely use of force in the hands of the law-abiding majority. There is abundant evidence that in America, in Britain and the British Dominions, in Russia and France and China, men and women are beginning to think in these terms, perhaps vaguely as yet, but with a rising tide of passionate resolve that their children shall not be the cannon fodder of another world war. And that evidence the enemy sees and interprets as well as we do.

Remember, that if we fight for victory and peace, the enemy fights for entirely different objectives. Neither in Berlin nor in Tokio is there now any small lingering hope of military victory this time. As for peace, neither the warlords of Germany nor the warlords of Japan can bear the thought of such a peace as that for which we fight. Such a peace is the negation of all their dreams of conquest.

Under such a peace, they could never rearm; they could never hope to start all over again later. The day of which they are dreaming even now—when our vigilance shall have relaxed and when political division shall again have weakened us-would never come. Under such a peace, the criminal nation would have no more chance for a successful career of crime than the criminal individual has in a properly organized society today. They abhor the very thought of such a peace, these warlords of the

That is why they go on fighting. That is why they call on their peoples for fresh sacrifices, though they know that these sacrifices can but delay the inevitable end. They hope that by making it cost us dearly, we shall weaken and leave them some remnants of power, we shall stop somewhere short of unconditional surrender, we shall consent to a negotiated peace with some sort of false-front government. They hope that, meanwhile, with the passage of time and the strain of sacrifice, they can find some way to divide us, one nation from another, and to divide us internally as well by appealing to the forces of reaction, hyper-nationalism and distrust.

It is this for which our enemies fight now-to make impossible the peace, the true and lasting peace, that is the only worthwhile fruit of victory to the free peoples of the world. They think we do not understand; but it is they who do not understand. To their bitter cost, they are now about to learn that they have to deal, no with a few statesmen and generals, but with millions of free men and women in whose hearts vague hopes are crystallizing into stern resolve that those hopes shall be realized-who are determined that this time their dead shall not have died in vain. Freedom We Cherish

From the Topeka Capital.

The Atlantic Charter does not proclaim nor does our Bill of Rights guarantee this freedom, yet we have retained it intact because, in our most pessimistic moments. we have faith that nobody bred in democracy will choose anything else. It is freedom to listen to the other fellow's arguments.

"CLIFTON STREET.

"Dear Sir: "It is quite a pleasant pastime to study the habits of the butterflies at this time of the year, and lovers of nature are urged to delight themselves in this man-

"Several days ago the writer became interested in watching a large, shimmering, purplish-black butterfly, perhaps properly named, Basilarchia astyanax, crossing Fourteenth and Irving streets.

"The traffic was very heavy and the butterfly was flying altogether too low for his safety. As he made his way timidly and carefully across the street amid the clanging street cars, buses, trucks, automobiles and pedestrians, it seemed as if the life of the butterfly might be taken any minute, and a profound sigh of relief escaped me when at last the beautiful, iridescent butterfly finally balanced himself on an awning of a store located on the opposite side of the street. For a moment the butterfly rested, and then it disappeared behind the eaves of the building.

* * * * "Last Sunday afternoon I was walking down Thirteenth street when suddenly a pair of large yellow butterflies dancing in the street attracted my attention.

"The wings of these butterflies were edged in black and bore large dark spots. "It occurred to me that these might be the tiger swallow-tail butterflies, properly known as Panilio turunus

"These butterflies were truly lovely bits of flying sunshine, and they were putting on a most graceful butterfly dance right in the middle of the street, not more than 5 feet from the ground.

"Two automobiles were rapidly approaching and it was inevitable that the butterflies would be killed if they did not rise a few feet higher or fly across the street. "One of the butterfly dancers sensed his immediate danger and flew to safety, but his mate swooned to the ground and lay there as if lifeless. "Instantly the other car passed over the prone body of the butterfly, but he was not crushed, so I immediately rushed into the street and picked up the but-

"To my amazement, it managed to give fitful, tremulous shimmer which was encouraging, and I sprinkled him with water, thinking perhaps this might revive him a bit.

"In the meantime, the butterfly was placed on a coleus leaf, the colors of which matched his own, and he seemed to feel quite at home. "The butterfly rested for a little while, but presently flew to the top of the porch where he lighted on a morning glory vine. "It was the writer's wish that the butterfly remain on the coleus leaf for further observation, as he sustained a severe shock, which later may prove fatal. "Sincerely, L. W. W." Letters to the Editor

The ways of butterflies in traffic are quite amazing. Perhaps few persons have failed to note them, at some time or other. They are so commonplace in summer that they are accepted as part of the general scheme of things. It is only when they seem to get out of place, as in traffic, that they excite general attention. They seem so fragile, yet are tough, as our correspondent discovered. Nature has given them ways of their own to survive in an increasingly severe world.

Perhaps most observers tend to think of these insects as having no brains at all. They fly here and there, and around about, without once seeming to know what they are doing.

But they are guided by instinct, a mighty good thing, if you are a butterfly.

This has been a fine summer for insects of all kinds. The almost tropical heat, long continued, brought out many dormant species, and made the old standbys flourish.

The curious person has been able to find and see many oddities of nature which are not on tap every season. The bird population has been more stable. Yet there are, on almost any day, differences among them, too. One correspondent points to an unusul quietness among the birds on a certain

* * * * In our own yard, the other evening, about 6 o'clock, we witnessed an unusual gathering of songsters. It was the crab grass seed which did it. However much home owners dislike the crab grass, the birds find nothing wrong with it.

In fact, they love it. On this particular evening, four turtle doves, a flicker, two young starlings, two dozen English sparrows, a robin, and several cardinals were walking around in the yard. The doves were eating seed at a lively rate, moving like little gray ships through a very dry sea.

There has been but one rain in two months, and we are not supposed to use the hose, so the grass, instead of being green, is a peculiar cross between yellow and gray.

The crab grass rather likes dryness, as do the locust tree seedlings. These are coming up all around the yard. The doves kept close together, and the sparrows were in a group farther out. What the robin found to eat, we do not know, but he was there for a long time. It will be interesting to see if the doves come back. These are among the finest of all the songbirds, far too fine to shoot, it seems to us. The fact that they so much resemble the extinct passenger pigeons ought to give them a peculiarly secure position in our bird life, but the sad truth is that it seems to work just the other way.

Washington and "Think"

Suggested for Miss Thompson.

To the Editor of The Star: The president of a large business machine company has had placed about his establishment for the guidance of his employes the admonition: "Think." Dorothy Thompson's use last week of the phrase "clerical conservative" smacks highly of Jacobinism and its use is singularly distasteful to those holding the clergy in esteem. Following Miss Thompson's lead, the phrase was tossed freely about over the radio this week

If the admonition "Think" has proven of benefit to the merely mundane, it should be immeasurably so to the ideologically introspective. Miss Thompson ranks highly among columnists engaged in confusion's confounding. Mere residence abroad does not change one overnight into a Sybil wondrous wise or a seeress knowing all. The lady journalist of the last generation, abroad on her own, must have been a lonely creature indeed and about as much en rapport with high goings on as a newly arrived typist here in the Capital, say from Keokuk, with the diplomatic set. Miss Thompson profitably might place by her bedside-where it is said she composesa banner bearing the word "Think" and on her pillow the now historical query,

"Are you Joan of Arc or Clemenceau?" both visually convenient. With the wonderful libraries and newspapers hereabouts, and with Washington being the very center of events of world import, it would seem that this would be the logical place for the analyzing-not New York, which of necessity must depend on the footwork and the brainwork of the local writers.

Axis Peoples Reassured On Surrender

By DAVID LAWRENCE. President Roosevelt has just made, from the standpoint of psychological warfare, the most useful statement that has come out of the for reasons that were associated with the fact that he had ready a routine report to Congress on lease-lend finances, did not issue his statement as a part of the announcements released at the Quebec conference. It seems even more appropriate to emphasize the American attitude of aid to liberated peoples as a part of the completed record of American help to other nations

Mr. Roosevelt's letter of transmittal to Congress was brief but the words should be distributed by leaflet throughout Occupied Europe and especially over Italy and the Balkans to counteract the last-ditch resistance propaganda coming out of Berlin and so assiduously being spread among the Axis satellite countries.

Need Not Fear Surrender. "Except for the responsible Fascist leaders," wrote the President.

"the people of the Axis need not fear unconditional surrender to the United Nations. The people of Axiscontrolled areas may be assured that when they agree to unconditional surrender they will not be trading Axis despotism for ruin under the United Nations. The goal of the United Nations is to permit liberated peoples to create a free political life of their own choosing and to attain economic security. These are two of the great objectives of the Atlantic Charter."

Then came the promise of food and material aid to peoples irrespective of what their governments were before the unconditional surrender.

"I have said," continued the President, "that we shall bring food for the starving and medicine for the sick in the areas liberated by the United Nations. We have done so, under lease-lend, in North Africa. We are doing so in Sicily. We shall continue to do so in other areas, as they are liberated, to prevent economic breakdown and aid the liberated peoples to produce and to help themselves. We shall provide these necessary civilian supplies in support of our military operations and as a matter of simple human-

Billions to Soviet.

What does the record show thus iar? That we have given under the lease-lend operation about $14,000,-000,000 to foreign countries. Of this amount, $2,500,000,000 has gone to Russia and more than $1,000,000,000 of this has gone to the Soviets in the last six months, which is nearly two-thirds of the amount we have sent to the United Kingdom from Army Aids Soft Drink January 1 to July 1 of this year.

Nearly 60 per cent of what we Flow as Morale Builder nave exported to Russia under lease-lend has been under the head of munitions, such as airplanes. tanks, and guns. Much of what we have sent everywhere abroad has been food. The President, moreover, made a rather sweeping statement in his message to Congress concerning repayment. He said:

"The Congress in passing and extending the Lease-Lend Act made it plain that the United States wants no new war debts to jeoparddize the coming peace. Victory and a secure peace are the only coin in deliveries to Army and Navy posts which we can be repaid."

Promise Too Early For Some. It is to be hoped that Congress shares this generous interpretation, for while the statute says the President may accept in payment any "benefit" which he deems satisfactory, Mr. Roosevelt's words could mean that whatever was loaned and whatever was leased need not be repaid or returned to us.

No such understanding was explicitly written into the law, but it Have you bought any War savings will produce regrettable misunderstandings later on unless Congress makes clear that it does share the willingness of the President to give away 14 billion dollars or more in BRAKES RELINED the common cause as a contribution to ultimate victory, though there CLIFT'S Brake Service will be many who will suggest that it is a little early to determine 3002 K St. N.W. whether we have been given payment or have been assured payment in the coin of victory-a lasting

On the Record-

By DOROTHY THOMPSON. I interrupt a series on American policy to comment upon a highly significant move in Germany—the appointment of Heinrich Himmler as Minister of Interior.

Himmler supplants Dr. Wilhelm Frick in the ministry which controls the police forces of the Reich. Actually, Himmler has controlled these forces throughout the Nazi regime. But Frick, a bureaucrat, regarded as relatively mild and moderate, was retained in his position as a facade for Himmler. Frick also had in hand the apparatus that, being bureaucratic, with remnants of the previous system retained in it, tended to operate with only veiled terror, inside Germany itself.

Himmler's career has been in the organization of the S.S., the elite guards, who have been the special armed force of Hitler, and the Nazi party. His business has not been to run the interior administration of Germany, but to protect the party. When the war began, Himmler became openly the head of the police for the occupied countries, where there was no attempt to conceal the fact the Germans were operating with naked terror.

Represented Nazi Concept. In this position be came into repeated conflicts with the army, especially in the places where the terror was most outrageous, as in Poland. The army had the remnants of some code. Himmler represented the Nazi concept, including the ruthless extermination of even suspected opposition. and the decimination of peoples.

The S.S. has thus been the living embodiment of Nazi ideology-Nordic supremacy, master race, cruelty as a mark of superiority, etc. Actually a physically selected corps, they have been trained to consider themselves biologically the cream of the Germanic race, superior to all other peoples and also to all other Germans.

They protected their own lives on this principle—that their blood must be spared for the future of Germany-which was another thing that brought them into conflict with the army. Of all Nazis, Himmler is most unpopular with the German people. This is the reason why his terror, except against Jews, was Germany while naked abroad.

Now if Hitler puts Himmler openly in power, with control over the entire internal administration, concentrating his activities at home, instead of in the occupied countries-that is because Hitler has something on his hands.

Follows Many Setbacks. This appointment occurs when the Germans have lost Kharkov and will have to evacuate the entire Donetz Valley. It occurs after the night of the worst air raid on Berlin, after terrible bombings of other German cities. It occurs after the fall of Sicily and at the close of the Quebec conference in which new, grandiose military moves have been planned. It occurs a month after the fall of Mussolini in Italy. Simultaneously we learn Copenhagen has been occupied by 50,-000 German troops, and martial law established for unruly Denmark.

The conclusions that one can draw are: The military defeats that Germany has suffered and new ones in the making, have forced Hitler to reconsider his position, not only in the occupied countries, but in Germany itself. Bad as the situation is for the Nazis in the occuppied countries, these can be entrusted to the army, which will fight for Germany as long as she is fighting and suppress national risings.

But in Germany itself, the army is not trustworthy and neither is the bureaucracy. The Italian Army has not been able to quiet the Italian people, but has openly expressed its sympathy for them. Hitler thinks the time has come when naked terror alone will hold his people in line. In this, of course, he is expressing his ancient fear of the people, repeated over and over in the famous "knife-thrust in the back" legend, that they, and not the armies, were responsible for losing the last war. The German nation, from now on, is to be treated as though it were itself an occupied country. For, in a showdown, Hitler always believes in the efficiency of ter-

Bureaucracy Is Strained.

But the appointment of Himmler indicates not only fear of the German people, but other dilemmas. The bombings and mass evacuation must have strained the bureaucratic machinery to the breaking point. A bureaucrat like Frick cannot control it. It needs an improviser, like Himmler. A disorganized apparatus offers the chance of disintegration at the top. Every opposition seizes opportunities as ·they arise. Among the top leaders, international policy plays its role. When Roosevelt and Churchill appealed to Italy, Grandi, Ciano and Badoglio saw their chance. When Moscow appealed to Germany, there were certainly similar figures in Germany who saw their chance. It is significant that the Nazi radio, commenting on the Litvinoff affair, said, "The Allies are all united against National Social-This was a departure They have hitherto said, "against

The top Nazis are fighting for their heads, not only against enemies abroad, but against real or fancied enemies inside Germany. If this is pressed home with the most calculated political policies, we can win the war this year. (Released, 1943, by the Bell Syndicate,

The Great Game of Politics-

This, it was piously argued, would enable us to concentrate on winning the war. Administration publicists and propagandists promptly indorsed this not very origi-i nal suggestion. but it naturally received its most and important of the Administration politicians. It is easy to understand why Nothing possibly could suit their book better. If Mr. Byrnes' noble notion should be adopted, the fourth-term nomination and election would be a walkover. If politics should be "relegated to the rear" or kept under cover for the next 12 months or so, there would really be no fight, no campaign and the election would become a farce. No one knows this better than the astute and likable Mr. Byrnes, who despite his high character and ability, nevertheless, is primarily a politician, for many years steeped in how much Mr. Byrnes' appeal means to his own side was given in the recent unsought intrusion of Mr. to acquaint the country with the Roosevelt's Postmaster General and chairman of the Democratic National Committee into the New York situation.

Though he had nothing whatever to do with the New York affair, Mr. It would give him a monopoly of Walker appeared at Albany last week and rallied in conference Michael Kennedy, leader of Tammany Hall; Edward Flynn, leader of the Bronx; Frank Kelly, leader of Brooklyn, and others in an effort to see that the man the Democrats nominated for Lieutenant Governor was one who could be depended on not to make it more difficult for the President to control the New York delegation in the convention next year.

This Changing World—

By CONSTANTINE BROWN. The decision of the Allies to start major operations soon against Burma may turn out to be the worst news Tokio has received in the war. The new Allied commander - in chief in that area, Lord Louis Mountbatten, is the only offcer in the world, with the exception of the King of England, who holds Heretofore the greatest difficulty in the path of Field Marshal Archibald Wavell, who until recently was in charge of the eastern Asiatic front, was the lack of an adequate naval force in the Bay of Bengal.

There is an almost impassable jungle between India and Burma, which makes the defense of Burma easy for the Japanese.

While admitting the jungle should not be an unsurmountable obstacle for the Allies, all the strategists who have studied the situation on the spot agree that amphibious operations such as landings on Rangoon or in the Gulf of Martaban would yield quicker results than "step by step" jungle warfare.

Until the Axis defeat in North Africa and later in Sicily, the Allies were not able to amass a sufficiently large naval force to permit amphibious operations. The Japanese maintained in the Gulf of Bengal and vicinity a sufficiently strong naval and air force to defeat any British landing attempt.

Additional ground forces are being sent to the new command of Lord

Mountbatten and an early vigorous attempt to land forces in Southern Burma can be expected.

The Allied chiefs of staff are fully aware that the operations in Burma must be made with a strong force. Any attempt to dislodge the Japanese with a few divisions and a handful of planes would be doomed.

Extensive use of Indian troops is considered unwise by those who have followed recent political developments in that area. The Japanese have given the Burmese their independence. A Burmese army is in the making. The Indian divisions which have fought brilliantly in the campaign against the Axis forces from Egypt to Tunisia might be less enthusiastic to fight the "free" Burma territory.

There are, of course, a large number of British troops in India but they are not available for action against the Japanese since a strong European army is necessary to police India. Hence, it is expected that additional Anglo-American forces will have to be dispatched to Lord Mountbatten before he can start his major operation.

Amphibious Drive Likely. If sufficient divisions are sent it is probable that the attack on Burma will take the shape of amphibious operations from Ceylon or Madras, and in the North, British-American troops which have been trained for jungle warfare would create a diversion toward the northern approaches of the Burma road. The Chinese are anxious to join in the campaign and, although they are poorly equipped, they will be able to contribute substantially to the operations of Lord Mountbatten, There is every reason to believe the Japanese will be confronted this year with an attack on three fronts-from the Chinese in the North and from the British and Americans in Western and Southern Burma. There are no indications as to how the Japs intend to parry these blows. There are said to be about 200,000 Japanese troops in the Burma area. The Burmese army now being formed cannot be regarded as a great menace as

The Japanese Navy has been kept in cotton in the home waters. Hitherto it has been difficult for the American Navy to challenge it because it refused to give battle. There have been thousands of such pictures printed showing peasants lining the streets, clapping their hands, cheering, laughing, dancing with joy, and pelting the soldiers with flowers and gifts. I almost have been led to believe they don't do any other work but stand around the streets waiting for a conquering horde to come roaring in from the suburbs.

Sheer Joy in Welcoming. From a fairly close study of these propaganda pictures I feel the people in North Africa get more sheer enjoyment out of welcoming invading armies than any other group.

I remember the Axis pictures of the German and Italian arrival in that section and they reminded me of Mardi Gras in New Orleans. Gay throngs filled the streets and laughing children stretched out hands to receive gifts of sweets from the men who, only a few hours before, had been dropping bombs and artillery shells on and about their homes.

When the Allies overcame the Afrika Korps and stormed into Tunia and Bizerte, the populace was right, there, ready with a whacking good reception. More dancing. More pelting of tanks with flowers. More laughing and shouting and 24-karat

The reception given our troops was even better than the one given the Axis, probably because the people had had the practice and knew which way to turn their heads to get the merriest side of their faces into the Happy Over Lambasting. The Sicilians have been a mighty close second. They were right there with the fruit and flowers, with every tooth showing, when the Alied troops came in. The Sicilians were so happy about the lambasting they took from the Allies by air and sea that I am bold enough to rea conversation that took place in the home of an average Sicilian family just before our troops marched victoriously in. Papa Sicilian: "Hot dog. Are they beating our brains out!" Mama Sicilian: "Isn't it grand, papa, to think that everything we have lies in ruins, and that the dear darling enemy will soon be at our Baby Sicilian: "Oh, goody, goody, now I'll get a tootsie wootsie roll." Papa Sicilian: "Hurrah, let's all get dressed in our best clothes and go down to meet those good, kind people who are about to conquer our homeland."

They All Love a Parade.

There is a tremendous roar of combs and mortar shells. Mama Sicilian (picking herself off the floor): "Thank goodness for that explosion. That means the enemy can't be far away. And you know, papa, how we all love a parade." Papa Sicilian: "Where is grandma? She won't want to miss this holiday." Mama Sicilian: "She's in her foxhole where she has been for the past three days. Her house is gone, and her farm is ruined. But she'll be as tickled as all the rest of us when she hears the good news that our country has fallen." Papa, mama, and baby leave the house, help the old lady out of the foxhole, and all troop merrily into town. There, after throwing kisses at the first tanks that rumble in they have their pictures made by the official Allied photographers. The picture will show them giggling and simpering over having lost their home and the war.

The camera doesn't lie. No, know it doesn't, but I'm beginning to have my doubts. (Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Silver Spring's Event Sunday to Usher in Horse Show Series

By LARRY LAWRENCE.

Silver Spring horse show Sunday will usher in a series of events, followed by Virginia. District and Maryland showmen, which will keep them busy each week end through September. The Warrenton horse and pony show on Labor Day, the Maryland nunter show on September 10 and 11, the Pikesville (Md.) show on September 18 and the Washington bridle trails contest on September 19 will provide a full schedule.

Beginning at 2 o'clock at the North End grounds, the Silver Spring show will offer a program of 12 events for hunters and jumpers as well as a gaited saddle class. and tricolors and trophies will be awarded both hunter and jumper champions.

Trodden to Judge Jumpers. A novel contest in the jumper division will be the pair class, in which partners will be selected by drawing from a hat. Each horse will perform individually, and the total aggregate faults will be the score of the pair. Tom Trodden will fault the jumpers.

Shortage of fuel is, of course, the reason for the decline of sports fishing. Until the ban is lifted on pleasure driving and use of gas in boats the decline will continue.

With commercial fishing primarily It is manpower shortage. Despite high prices fish bring, there have been wholesale desertions from the fishermen's ranks to better-paid war

There have been strikes; too, by fishermen in some localities. They demand assurance that the present high prices will continue at least

Many older fishermen could and would be glad to take over for the duration if some stabilized plan was adopted by the co-ordinator of fisheries, but as in many other wartime industries individual effort is useless, even when it is possible. So little has been done to make use of the old-timers in the game. How serious is the problem is revealed by the figures issued by the Department of Interior. These show that the decrease in the catch last year was considerably more expected. There is every right to believe that the decrease will be even greater this year. The one sure way, as we see it to increase production is to make some provision for fuel for use by individuals willing to fish commercially.

The 1943 Nats Will Remember Two Games

The Nats have had several bitter doses of defeat dealt them this year but when the campaign is ended it's likely they'll be remembering two of them that stand out like ketchup on a fresh table cloth. The Nats had Spence on second with none out. He moved to third as Bob Johnson grounded out and Mickey Vernon was purposely passed to set the stage for a possible doubleplay. When Atley Donald also walked Gerald Priddy to cram the bases, Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees hastily summoned Tommy Bryne to the mound. With one out and the bases loaded, all that was required of Jake Early to get the winning run home was a moderately long fly ball, a slow infield grounder, a decent bunt or, more desirable, a hit. But in that crisis, Early worked Bryne to a 3-2 count and then was content to watch a third strike whisk over the plate. That let the Yankees off the hook, for Red Marion batted for Myatt and

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.-There still were 35,000 lumps in 35,000 throats around the village today-all because a dozen old men walked out on a ball field. These weren't just any 12 old gaffers, mind you. Nor was it just any old baseball clambake at the Polo Grounds yesterday. It was an 800,000,000 baseball show, put on by the Journal-American to sell War bonds. And the more than 35,000 who showed up had Uncle Sam's cash registers really ringing for the war effort. It was quite a party, too, what with Broadway and baseball, Hollywood and the Hall of Fame, andespecially-Babe and the "boys." But Babe and the "boys" stole the a chance to present the Yankees show-stole it from the top "name" comedians, dance bands, movie actors and singers in show business who did their stuff during the fourhour fuss. And they stole it, too, from the Giant-Yankee-Dodger allstars, who turned in a 5-2 win over Rae Scarborough replaced Canthe Army's New Cumberland (Pa.) York game. Banks to Open 4 to 6:30 P.M. On Thursdays

Program Supersedes Varied Hours in 51 Institutions Here

To accommodate the public, all banks in the District will be open from 4 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. each Thursday, beginning September 30, in addition to their regular hours, A.S. Offutt, president of the District of Columbia Bankers' Association, an-

The new program, developed as a result of several months' study, will supersede present banking hours. Regular banking hours of all banks are from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., excepting Saturday, when the closing hour is noon. But the late afternoon hours, designated especially to accommodate Government workers on pay days, had varied.

The new program for the 21 banks and 30 branches in the city has the approval of the area office of the War Manpower Commission and the Office of the Controller of the Cur-

Service which the average salaried person requires will be rendered, Mr. Offutt announced. This will include the cashing of checks, receipt of deposits, opening of savings departments, facilities for the purchase of War bonds and possibly safe deposit facilities and other services. "A careful survey has been made."

Mr. Offutt said in a formal statement, "disclosing that quite a number of Government and private employes were unable to care for their banking without taking time off from their duties. In this analysis. it was discovered that out of 277,000 Government employes, only 5,500 left their offices as late as 6 p.m. This, therefore, proved that by maintaining banking hours until 6:30 p.m. it would give even the latest person departing from his office at least 30 minutes to reach the nearest bank.

"Other persons are urged to avail themselves of the service offered during the regular banking hours of from 9:30 a.m. until 2 p.m. In view of the fact that lobbies are not congested in a period from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., customers are reminded that they can obtain better service and avoid delay by banking early."

Late Shopping Day. The new late afternoon banking hours will be on the same day when downtown stores are open during the evenings

The former eye, ear, nose and throat building, which was renovated with funds from the Federal Works Agency for use as part of the venereal treatment center, was opened about a month ago. It now has 46 beds.

The District Health Department describes the work of the center as part of a venereal disease control drive in the District. A number of the women who have been taken to the section already were examined at the Women's Bureau and found to be infected, the department said. Dr. Bocock said that the hospital had secured the services of Dr. Sydney Olansky from the United States Public Health Service. His salary will be paid by the USPHS. He said Dr. Olansky has been prominent for some time in the treatment of venereal diseases. When the rapid treatment center is completed, Dr. Bocock said, it will have about 105 beds. He said the hospital was designed chiefly to treat acute communicable cases and will administer a five-day treatment disease non-communicable. The two units will be connected by a corridor, Dr. Bocock said. The staff for the center will include about 35 persons, with a head physician, assisted by staff physicians, 10 nurses, laboratory technicians, clerks

Only 5,907 District motorists sought the exchange during the first three days of this week, though all ration boards remained open until 9 p.m. each day, the OPA said. Approximately 1,800 of the exchanges were reported Wednesday, and surveys yesterday and today failed to reveal any large crowds at the ration boards. The small number of coupons handled so far, means that many old-type B and C tickets-those in ration books Nos. 527, 527-A, 528 and 528-A-are stll in the hands of motorists, an OPA spokesman said. Ration boards in the District will close at 4:30 p.m. today and at noon tomorrow. While motorists may exchange their old-type B and C coupons by mailing them to their neighborhood Ration Board, the District OPA has warned that the mail exchange will be slow.

Whether exchanging coupons by mail or in person, every motorist must present his latest tire inspection certificate along with the coupons. Coupons should not be detached from the ration books.

2 Houses Face Condemnation In Water Row

Board to Institute Proceedings Where Nuisance Is Charged

Assistant Engineer Commissioner Joseph D. Arthur, jr., announced today the Board for Condemnation of Insanitary Buildings would initiate condemnation proceedings against the two old frame dwellings in the 2500 block of F street N.W., where water service was shut off July 22 for failure to pay water bills totaling nearly $120.

Humphrey Beckett, Water Department superintendent, today re ceived a report from Water Registrar Ralph L. Hebbard concerning the long dispute over the water bill for the two places, showing how the charges had mounted. Mr. Beckett said he was satisfied the registrar's account was correct. He added, however, that the registrar's office had been "too lenient."

Calls Prima Facie Case. Col. Arthur, condemnation board chairman, said the premises at 2518 and 2520 F street had been inspected and that the board had concluded there was a prima facie case that the dwellings must be either materially improved or else removed.

He agreed with Deputy Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger that there was no health nuisance which could be attributed to shutting off the water supply. Tenants were reported to be obtaining water from a nearby source and to be using toilet facilities of neighbors. Outhouses were said to have been padlocked. "Due Course" Order.

Col. Arthur said an order in the condemnation proceedings would be issued in "due course," calling upon the owner of record to show cause why the properties should not be condemned. He explained that the owner may either contest the finding, make repairs listed by the board or accept an order for the closing of the dwellings for human occupancy or for their removal,

The Hebbard report showed the dwellings prior to June 30, 1940, had been on a flat-rate basis for water, each premise being billed $8.85 a year. On March 28, 1940, a meter was installed on a service pipe supplying both buildings, and from July . 1940, the consumers were billed jointly on a meter basis.

By the Way—

A good many months before Pearl Harbor Mrs. Willis Howard completed her Red Cross training and began her volunteer war work. When war was declared she already had completed the motor mechanics course, the first aid course, the advanced first aid, instructor in first aid, the staff assistance course and the bomb and gas defense training. as well as having many hours of other volunteer work to her credit. In January, following Pearl Harbor, she was appointed chairman of the Blood Donor Transportation for the District Chapter of the Motor Corps. She carried on with that (doing a splendid job, too) until September, 1942 when the Mobile Blood Donor Unit was started, and now she is chairman of that.

It seems almost unbelievable that this very important part of the war effort can have grown so enormously in two short yearssince those early January days when there were two or three or four blood donors a day (transported by the Motor Corps girls in private cars to the Blood Donor Center) until now when there are groups of several hundred donors every day.

The Blood Donor Center is equipped to handle 500 donors a day, of which the Red Cross Motor Corps transports at least two-thirds. There are two trucks and two station cars, contributed by the DAR's, the North East Business Men's Association, the employes of the Washington Gas Light Company, the District Red Cross Motor Corps, and the Beth Sholom Congregational and Talmud Torah Synagogue. The trucks carry the gear and two blood custodians, the station cars carry the staff doctors, five There is one Motor Corps driver to each car.

Before these mobile blood units are sent out to the outlying towns and cities, arrangements are, made in advance with the local Red Cross Chapters for accommodations for the equipment and donors-the latter to average between 150 and 160 per day. In most cases the unit is set up in a school, church, or USO Center, wherever there happens to be a large airy room with good lighting and running water and space for the canteen which provides nourishment for the donors.

Sometimes the mobile unit stays a whole week as it has in Richmond, Petersburg, Charlottesville and Waynesboro, Va.

Mrs. Howard is eight times a blood donor herself. Servicemen Send Chapter Knitters rom servicemen grateful for articles they have received from the Production Unit of the District Chapbeen received during the last few days, according to Otto S. Lund,

The letters have proved to be a real stimulant to the volunteer workers who have been knitting garments for men in the armed forces throughout the hot summer months. The women know that some of the garments now are being worn by sailors manning ships on the cold North Atlantic patrol and by others stationed in Iceland or in the fogbound Aleutians, but the letters help to make the picture vivid.

In a typical note, one serviceman told his story. "I have just received a warm, heavy scarf to keep the cold spray from going down my neck, and I'm telling you it really does the trick," he wrote. "I can now really appreciate the patience and hard work put forth to gone days on the plantations of knit this warm scarf."

A sailor had watched his mother knitting before he left home, but he evidently hadn't given the matter much thought. He, too, however, adds his word of praise now. "Yes," he wrote, "my mother also knits sweaters for the Red Cross but I never r zed how much I would appreciate one until I received this sweater from you. I have many times been thankful to wear my warm wool sweater on an aerial watch, 12 to 4 a.m.

"It takes our girls back home many hours to knit these sweaters, but to us men in the Navy we think these girls' efforts are well worth

In reporting receipt of such letters, Red Cross officials took occasion to point out that more volunteers are needed constantly to keep the supply of woolen garments adequate. Skilled knitters are needed especially it was said.

Volunteers are invited to call Republic 8300, branch 264, or to call in person at the District Fed Cross Chapter headquarters, 1730 E street

If the oak furniture can be whittled down to the size of the dining room, where would you suggest I turn for a carpenter. My handy man is overseas. I had thought of enrolling in a class, or maybe the Goodwill Industries might put me in touch with some carpenter. My idea is to combine the closed china closet and server drawer into a sort of Welsh dresser. Could you make a console table out of the strip you cut off the dining table on the other two dining table legs-possibly cut down a bit? Then place the other two dining chairs at either side of it. This will introduce the same elements of design into your living room and as the two rooms run together it will help somewhat in your plan. I think the California finish would be very nice. Paint the maple and the oak alike and try to repeat the same color you use on the seats and backs of the oak chairs in the upholstery on the maple pieces. This will tie them together even better. You will find this grayish finish will reduce the size of the furniture almost as much as cutting it down. Cut off and simplify where you can but do not try to combine carefully can purchase. When the food is not chewed sufficiently and thus mixed well with the saliva—the digestive juice of the mouth—it arrives in the stomach in an unprepared state and damage to the stomach wall, ulcer, may result.

By chewing food well, moistening and softening it with the saliva, the saliva also gets a better chance to start digestion and turn starch into sugar before it reaches the stomach.

Also the other digestive juices in stomach, liver and pancreas can more thoroughly digest the food.

By LILLIAN COX ATHEY. SULPHUR-BREASTED TOUCAN

(Ramphastos toco). Bills of birds often give a clue to the way the owner obtains a living. Some bills, like those of woodpeckers, are for drilling; the woodcock's for probing, and the hawks and owls for tearing flesh. These signs fail as far as the toucan is concerned. It would seem this great bill of his is a liability rather than Inspection of this huge affair reveals the fact it is as long as the

to be very heavy, though in fact it is extremely light. It is paper thin and filled with light, cellular, bony tissue. The bill is a colorful member. The crissum is crimson, the bill proper a bright orange, and there is a black area at the base of the upper mandible. The tongue is unusual, too, consisting of a narrow flat plate of from 4 to 6 inches with notched margins. At first it was believed the toucan had to toss his food into the air, letting it fall with force into the waiting "cavern" below. However all he does is to "open wide" and let his food roll down his throat. Fruit is the main diet when the bird is on his own. In captivity, anything is acceptable. Toucans have brilliant plumage

Against the glossy black or green feathers of the body, the bright splashes of orange, red, white and blue show up effectively.

Toucans have a funny little quirk of jerking their tail, laying it flat upon the back. This is made possible because the tail bones are articulated by a regular ball-andsocket joining. The great bill is tucked under the short feathers of the shoulders and wings. This preparation for a nap is apparently to make the sleeper as inconspicuous as possible. There is a strain of humor in these birds. Flying together through the forest, they delight in teasing and threatening behavior they awaken these neighbors. They never harm them, though no doubt their bills do appear quite menacing.

Little has been established about the courtship and domestic affairs of these birds. They deposit their stone which fell in front of my handsome pure-white eggs in a hol- studio and found it to be 1% inches low tree, Whether father assists in long. That was a large the brooding is not known. Toucans limit themselves to the

New World. They are fairly well distributed over the wooded dis-Northern Argentina. They are never seen in the Antilles, or on the western slope of South America south of the Gulf of Guyaquil or in any part of the Patagonian region. The species is very abundant in the great forests of Aamazonia. There are five genera and 63 species. R. Toco is the most widely distributed and best known. His range is from Southern Mexico to Northern Argentina. His costume is black. Decorations of yellow are on the rump, throat and foreneck. This color is edged with red. However, tousans are never mistaken for any other bird and they are nearly always in flocks. They post a sentinel in a tree when they go in search of fruit.

Uncle Ray's Corner

Last time we were speaking of cumulo-nimbus clouds. Such clouds send down hail as well as rain. Inside this kind of cloud there are strong currents of air. The currents are "winds" which travel in many directions. Some rush sidewise, others upward or downward. An upward wind in the cloud may make a speed of from 75 to 100 miles an hour.

The upward winds bring about hail. Raindrops on the way to the ground are caught and tossed high

If the cloud is 2 miles thick, the temperature is very different at the top than at the bottom. Let us say that the base of a certain cloud has a temperature of 55 degrees above zero Fahrenheit.

An upward air current may take rain from that cloud up for a dis-tance of 2 miles. At that height the temperature is below the freezing

After rising into very cold air the the raindrops are frozen. They are now solid bits of ice and start falling to the ground in the form of small pieces of hail.

It may be that the wisds in a cumulo-nimbus cloud will not let the frozen raindrops fall clear to the ground. The bits of ice may be caught by another upward blast of air. Once more thay are carried to the top of the cloud.

When the hail is going upward it gets water from the cloud, and the water is frozen when a height of 2 miles is reached. This adds a "layer" to each hailstone, making it larger.

Again and again that sort of the sleepy-head owls and other birds thing may happen. A frozen rainof prey. With terribly loud cries drop may make half a dozen trips or more, downward and upward, through the cloud. Sooner or later it does come to the ground, but by this time it may be the size of a hen's egg or even larger.

Three years ago I measured a hailno means a world record. Dallas. Tex., does not enjoy a great deal of snow in winter, but in 1926 it got plenty of ice. On May 8 in tricts from Southern Mexico to that year it suffered one of the worst hailstorms in history. Many automobiles parked in the streets looked as if they had been riddled by machine guns when the storm was over. (For Nature section of your scrap

"Well, they are not birds; they are in the trees why should not birds make their homes in the ground?' continued Grandfather Frog. This was too much for Peter. Why shouldn't they? There wasn't any reason why they shouldn't. "Then it is true that Rattles makes his home in a hole in the ground!" cried

"Of course it is true," replied Grandfather Frog gruffly. "There isn't any reason in the world why it shouldn't be true. Rattles is a bird of sense.'

"Where is it?" asked Peter eagerly. "That is none of my business, nor is it any business of yours," declared Grandfather Frog. "I never have asked Rattles where it is and if I knew I wouldn't tell you. I never pry into other people's secrets and if you will take my advice you won't either, Peter Rabbit. It is a bad TABLE POSTURE habit. No good comes of it. Now run away and attend to your own affairs, I want to take a nap.'

Peter knew that he had learned all he could from Grandfather Frog. so he thanked him and started off. But as he hopped along, lippertylipperty-lip, he was more curious than ever about the home of Rattles the Kingfisher and he quite forgot Grandfather Frog's advice to mind his own business. He made up his mind that he would find the home of Rattles. Released by Associated Newspapers, Inc.

Will our homes be cold this winter?

You'll find answers to those questions written by the man who runs the mines for the government, Harold L. Ickes, in the inside story of the whole coal trouble, "Crisis in Coal," published in Collier's, the national weekly out today.

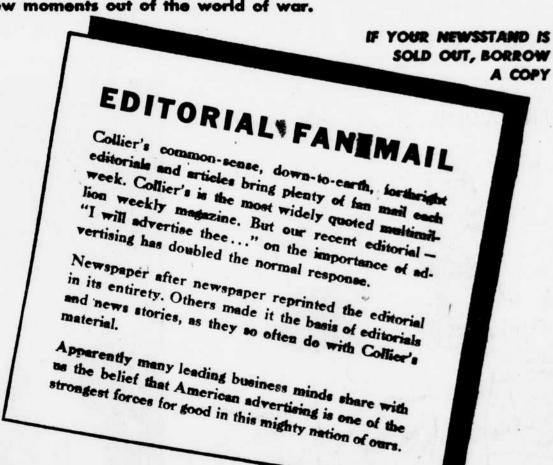

Read it and you'll get the complete picture of the coal situation as seen by the one man who has all the facts on all sides of the question.

Yes, and read "Three Seconds to Fight" by Captain Newell O. Roberts, in the same issue. You'll get the real tip-off on how Captain Roberts and his Air Forces pals actually use their P-38's to send flaming German Messerschmitts spinning into the sea. Far from a civilian's idea of modern sky fighting.

Important reading! Right! But the kind of reading Collier's works to bring its multimillion readers every week. Why? Because it is our unswerving belief that an informed public will be a victorious public in winning today's war, yes, and in winning tomorrow's peace.

And when it comes to digging up new human interest stories, Coffer's is just as much on the job. Example: "One Wing and a Player," by William A. Jones and Harmon W. Nichols, in this issue, the story of a one-armed ball player, Pete Gray, sensation of the Southern League. And science! Just read John Moreland's "Flu is Through," and James Thomas Flexner's "Riding for a Fall" - why one victim can get up and walk after a six-story fall and another is killed just falling off a curb. And fiction? Every issue proves Collier's knows where to find the kind that'll really take us for a few moments out of the world of war.
