LONDON, Aug. 28.-King Boris II of Bulgaria died today at 4:42 p.m. (10:42 a.m., EWT) and his 6-year-old son Simeon succeeded to the throne as King Simeon II, the German radio announced.

Boris' death-at the age of 49whether by illness or assassination -raised the critical question whether the Nazis would be able to tighten their slipping control of the reluctantly aligned Axis satellite, or whether, as in the last war, the Balkan nation would be the first to open Germany's back door to the

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 28.-At least 13 miners were killed and 12 others were burned tonight in a gas explosion deep within the Sayreton No. 2 coal mine of Republic Steel Corp., near here.

Norman E. Thompson, Republic general mine superintendent, said he believed the other 110 men on the night shift at the slope had been brought out, unhurt. Search of the mine was continuing, however.

Mr. Thompson said the 13 dead and most of those burned were at a single working face, and that the other portions of the mine were not

The ultimatum, brought back from Berlin by German Minister Werner Best, was said to have insiege, military tribunals empowered to inflict the death penalty on saboteurs, a ban on strikes, a general curfew, complete Nazi control of the Danish press, and imposition of a heavy fine on the city of Odense, where the wave of rebellion origi-

Defense Counsel Louis Lebowitz of Mount Rainier placed the boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel B. Day, on the stand, but their testimony was of little help to the youth. Although the State's attorney had suggested the second hearing, he objected vigorously to the defense attorney's question as "leading." The prosecutor's final motion came as a surprise to the few onlookers.

The youth's conviction had aroused much interest in the press. His halting speech in interviews led to reports that his pay had been withheld to pay a debt of his father, a tenant on the Bussard farm. The Civil Liberties Division of the Justice Department became interested in the possibilities of "peonage" within 20 miles of the Nation's Capitol. After the hearing, department officials said they still had the case "under consideration," but that no decision had been made on it.

OPA Limits Deliveries Of Coal to Homes In 12 Eastern States

By the Associated Press.

The Office of Price Administration last night clamped restrictions on the delivery of anthracite to householders in the District, Maryland, Virginia and 10 other Northeastern States between September 1 and December 1 to prevent some consumers from getting the entire retail supply while others live in heatless homes Affecting only hard coal, the priority order limits deliveries to consumers having less than half their season's supply in the bin.

The order, effective from September 1, was issued by authority of the War Production Board, which specified that no coupon rationing system should be started "until specifically requested." Agriculture is one of the great state sciences in Russia, and Russian scientists have a long and brilliant agricultural record. Prof. Trofim Lysenko evolved the theory of vernalization, subjecting seeds to warm indoor temperatures before planting, and is using this to get more crops in Siberia. Prof. Lysenko started the potato eye method of potato seeding and a half million Russian children were set Russia had four months to effect at that job alone in the winter of veloped a wheat which produces two crops a year. But it is a success only in warm southern areas. He is working now to develop frost resistance.

As in her military success, Russia's basis for the present agricultural program started long before prosecutions but not necessarily this war. Ten years ago Stalin's government started a wheat program which, by the time war broke out, had 18,000,000 acres in production in Siberia, in areas scattered from the Arctic to the Indian border. They were the nuclei which the Russians enlarged when the Ukraine was lost.

They made it possible for Russia to plant an extra 5,000,000 acres of wheat in Siberia in 1942 and another 16,000,000 this year.

OPA Plans to Reduce Gasoline Allotments To 'B' and 'C' Autoists up the issuance of gasoline allotments by local rationing boards to holders of B and C books has been mapped by the Office of Price Ad-

OPA representatives will be sent to virtually every local board in the country to "advise and consult" with board members on issuing supplemental rations. Their principal job, it was understood, will be to reduce drastically the total amount of gasoline that is being allocated to motorists.

Excessive liberality on the part of many boards, an OPA official admitted yesterday, is primarily responsible for the fact that allocations of supplies in the East and Middle West are being overdrawn. Black market activities, this official said, present a serious threat to the success of the rationing program, but actually represent a mere "drop in the bucket" in the overall supply

May Lift Pleasure Ban. Disclosure of the drive against over-issuance of rations was regarded as a further indication that OPA officials have definitely decided to remove pleasure-driving restrictions either Wednesday, as previously planned, or shortly after Labor Day. It was recalled that a similar campaign against over issuance, less intense than the one planned for next month, was instituted by OPA directly after the pleasure-driving ban ended last

"Pleasure driving restrictions, another OPA spokesman said, Liquor Price Boost 'aren't the best way of saving gasoline. We can conserve more effectively by making certain that drivers aren't getting more gasoline than they really need for essential purposes. It was made clear that the OPA does not intend to interfere with operations of the local board, but instead wants to give them help in carrying out the tightening-up

Answer to Challenge. The new campaign is expected to be OPA's answer to repeated demands by the Petroleum Administration that consumption in excess of allocations be ended. OPA officials hope that by reducing overissuance of gasoline rations they can more than make up the additional drain on the supply that would result from the end of the pleasure-driving ban.

The granting of too many coupons by local boards ties in directly with the black market, it was pointed out. Drivers who are given excessive rations are inclined to pass them on to friends in violation of the regulations. Occasionally, the coupons may be sold either to other drivers or to filling

OPA enforcement officials, meanwhile, are intensifying their efforts to keep black markets from wrecking the rationing program. They say their activities against black marketeers are greater now than ever before, but that this does not necessarily imply the offenses are

More Prosecutions Now. "We're more experienced now in combating this evil than we were in the early days," one spokesman said. "As a result there are more more black markets.'

The major share of the black market coupons is that which has been stolen from the boards. The illicit coupons are sold either to the drivers themselves or to filling stations. If the individual motorist purchases the coupons he may pay anywhere from 10 to 25 cents for each coupon. A gasoline dealer who buys the books in quantity may charge his customers from 5 to 10 cents a gallon more for the gasoline he sells them without tak-ng coupons. One of the most alarming features of the racket, said an OPA official, is the extent to which youngsters of from 15 to 17 years are becoming involved.

SPECIAL THIS WEEK Italian Railway Lines Almost Paralyzed By Bomb Damage

14 to 300 ...

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Aug. 28.-The steady Allied air scourging of Southern Italy's railways has virtually paralyzed train traffic from the Naples area to the toe and heel of the peninsula, airforce officers declared today, with fresh wreckage strewn yesterday near Naples and by Flying Fortresses at Sulmona, 100 miles east of Rome. Some trains are moving, but with great difficulty and many delays since main line tracks have been knocked out in countless places, switching stations and other rail buildings demolished, and yards filled with gaping craters, Allied headquarters said.

Wrecked locomotives and passenger and freight cars and in some cases remains of entire trains block the tracks at many points, especially at Benevento, junction near Naples where damaged freight cars bar the way to the yards.

Freight Yards Blasted.

Other points hard hit by relentless American day bombing and British night hammering include Naples, Villa Literna, Sapri, Taranto and Foggia.

Supply of Penicillin For Civilians Limited

THE ATTENDED TO STATE OF THE PARTY OF THE PA

BOSTON, Aug. 28.-Dr. Chester S. Keefer of Evans Memorial Hospital. in charge of the civilian supply of penicillin, said today that the public might not expect the new bacteriakilling drug to be used for their benefit in any great quantity before the end of the year, at least.

Dr. Keefer, acting in behalf of the Committee of Medical Research, explained that the War Production Board allocated all penicillin and regarded its development as a significant part of the war effort. The introduction of penicillin to the medical profession, Dr. Keefer said, was so recent that much remained to be learned about its use, and that because it was in the experimental stage, civilian use would be for investigatory purposes only.

Because of its limited supply, many requests by civilians would inevitably have to be refused, Dr. Keefer added.

Sergt. Warmer Gets DSC for Downing Seven Nazi Planes

By the Associated Press. ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Aug. 28.—Staff Sergt, Benjamin F. Warmer has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for the unprecedented feat of shooting down seven Axis planes on a single Flying Fortress mission over Gerbini, Sicily, on

(Staff Sergt. Warmer, son of Superior Court Judge Benjamin F. Warmer, of San Bernardino, Calif., was a member of the uniformed force of the Secret Service assigned to the Treasury Department in Washington for three months in 1940.) The D. S. C. was pinned on the six-foot, six-inch, 275-pound gunner by Lt. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, commander of the Northwest African Air Force, at an advanced fortress base Thursday, which was both Sergt Warmer's 29th birthday and his seventh wedding anniversary. Sergt. Warmer's feat is an alltime Fortress record and was set in a record raid in which Flying Fortresses knocked down 42 out of 100 enemy fighters which attacked them.

Maj. James H. Doolittle also attended the ceremony, but Sergt. Warmer's mates were absent. They were off on a bombing mission.

Gen. Spaatz made the presentation with words of praise for the marksmanship of the gangling California University graduate, who was paid $25 for making a parachute jump at a county fair and later became a real member of the Caterpillar Club when he was compelled to bail out of a Fortress which ran out of gas in pitch darkness over Algeria.

The citation hailed Sergt. Warmer "for extraordinary heroism while participating in aerial combat over Gerbini airdrome. "He shot down an ME-109 in flames as a formation of 30 fighters attacked his element. A few minutes later he destroyed two more ME-109s, forcing the pilots to bail out. Again two more attacked. One of these exploded by fighter. Then, as five more ME-109s attacked, he destroyed his seventh. "The extraordinary heroism and super-marksmanship reflect great credit upon Sergt. Warmer and the Air Corps of the United States

A sum of $41,145 is asked for a mental hygiene division with a staff of 14 including a director a psychiatrist and a psychologist who would work through Gallinger Hospital the school system and department clinics.

Recommendations Cited. Dr. Ruhland said such a service had been recommended, not only by the Federal Public Health Service, but also in the Kepec's report on child care of several years ago Medical Society and the Council of Social Agencies. He declared such a service would save money for the Distribt by reducing the number of mental cases hospitalized and by permitting the earlier discharge of hospital patients.

Dr. Ruhland predicted that if in one year only nine cases were saved from hospital commitment, the District would save more money than the cost of the proposed bureau. He emphasized that the District now is paying $3,250,000 a year for the care of 4,700 District cases at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. The amount sought for the Health Department itself (exclusive of hospitals) is $1,760,303, an increase of $566,597 over this year. Dr. Ruhland stressed his desire to bring the District's per capita Health Depart-

More Food Inspectors Needed.

Ten additional inspectors, an assistant director, four clerks and four junior inspectors are asked for enlargement of the food inspection service, to strengthen the department's attack on insanitation. Again the Public Health Service report was quoted for support.

An expansion of the campaign on rats also is planned under a request for 16 more laborers and two foremen and a new truck for the rodent control division.

Also in connection with recent efforts to improve insanitary spots in the District, Dr. Ruhland seeks a special fund of $20,000 with which to provide water and sewer connections for dwellings of the poor There are 40 cases, with the cost of connections estimated at about $500 each. Owners might be prosecuted and fined for failing to make the connections themselves, but this would not cure the insanitary conditions, he argued. Employment of high school graduates as trainee technicians for the Health Department laboratory is proposed as a means of meeting the lack of experts. Funds are sought for employing four at $1,440 a year. 10 More Workers Sought.

For the venereal disease service 10 additional employes are requested, and the director would be placed on full time instead of half time. For the tuberculosis control program

Twelve more junior clinic aides are to be sought for 1946.

Among increases sought for the Hospital Permit Bureau are funds for four medical social workers. In support of this proposal, Dr. Ruhland asserted that the bureau in the calendar year 1942 had saved the District $400,000 over and above

For Gallinger Municipal Hospital and the Tuberculosis Hospital for Convalescents at Fourteenth and Upshur streets N.W., the department requests $1,975,082, an increase of more than $400,000. All of the increase except about $26 .-000 is for overtime pay, salary pro-motions, reallocations and the transfer to District charges of services now paid by Federal grants The latter include the rapid treatment center for venereal disease for which new buildings are provided at Gallinger.

An item of $6,000 is requested for photo flurographic unit for Gallinger so that each patient admitted may be given a chest test for tuberculosis. By such case finding work, it was argued, student nurses and physicians would be less likely to contract the disease.

The sum requested for medical charities remains unchanged, except that Dr. Ruhland proposes no contribution for Columbia Hospital since no arrangements are made for care of District Government patients there.

The Associated Press report from San Francisco yesterday, however, disclosed that the Flying Fortress squadron of which Corpl. Logan has been a member has flown from 60 to 100 combat missions.

Midway, Wake and Solomons. Oldest Flying Fortress squadron in the Army Air Forces in point of service in this war, the squadron was at Hickham Field, Hawaii, as a reconnaissance group when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor. It has been in action since—at Midway, Wake, the Marshall and Gilbert Islands and the Solomons.

It participated in the first American bombing raid on Japanese-held Wake Island in June of 1942, and was the first squadron to use 2.000pound bombs on Japanese installations in the Solomons.

Though Fortresses of the squadron have been damaged many times, there have been no injuries to personnel. After one raid on Makin, in the Gilbert Islands, the plane of Maj. McLyle Zumwalt, 25--old leader of the squadron from Richmond. Tex., limped its way back to the home base on two left motors and flying at 400 feet.

Capitol Park Hotel Will Close Tuesday For Full Renovation

Capitol Park Hotel, a landmark on the Union Station Plaza, will close its doors to civilian guests Tuesday, preparatory to undergoing a thor-ough face-lifting for a new role in the service of the Nation's armed forces. After renovations, it will be reopened to accommodate servicemen and their wives and babies.

The change will send some longterm tenants house and apartment hunting, it was said at the hotel, including Wall Doxey, former Senator from Mississippi and sergeant at arms of the Senate; Perry B. House, RFC attorney, and the National Association of Post Office Clerks, which, through its president, John Barrett. maintained several rooms at the hotel for the convenience of visiting members.

The hotel contains 142 rooms and 100 baths but a spokesman for the Recreation Services, Inc., which will have control of the building. said detailed arrangements have not been completed. U. S. Chamber Selects 27 to Study Problem Of Postwar Surpluses

What to do with the huge specialpurpose war plants and the big stocks of war goods when the war is over-or even before-became yesterday the particular problem of a committee of businessmen.

The United States Chamber of Commerce announced creation of a 27-member committee representing varied lines of industry, designated as the Special Committee on Utilization of War Plants and Surplus Property and headed by Albert C. Mattei, a vice president of the chamber and president of the Honolulu Oil Corp., San Francisco. In an initial gathering here on September 9 and 10, the committee will make a preliminary survey of the scope and extent of the problem.

Meanwhile, Senator Kilgore, Democrat, of West Virginia, contended that the Nation must be on guard lest war-spurred development of various synthetics and substitutes for natural resources could be taken over by monopolies which, he said, could "wreck our postwar economy."

Hearings Are Planned. As chairman of a Senate Military Affairs Subcommittee studying technological mobilization, he announced that open hearings will begin in mid-September on patents, industrial research and prospective monopolies, with one phase of the inquiry centering on the peacetime future of synthetics.

The chamber posed the postwar goods and plant problem this way: "Even before military operations reach their greatest intensity, the war agencies are finding that they have excess stocks of some kinds of war material and supplies. The accumulation of such stocks is inevitable in a highly mechanized war. New weapons, redesigned facil-Ities and necessary changes in the fighting men's equipment make obsolete munitions and supplies previously in use.

"As the war goes on and comes to a close, the problem of the disposition of surplus property will become increasingly important. "There will be the problem, a the end of the war, of the proper

An American soldier who had given himself up as fatally wounded after lying unattended for nearly eight hours in an African poppyfield: was rescued and taken prisoner by a German patrol, and regained consciousness beside a dead Nazi is under treatment today at Walter Reed Hospital.

"I thought my days were ended." Pyt. Armand P. Silvestri of Southbridge, Mass., recalled today. "One bullet had hit me in the wrist and two others were in my right chest. I couldn't breathe. Our own forces had retired and the fire of our own artillery had begun to replace the bursting German 88-mm. shells which had originally swept the field.

"I was conscious, but I couldn't do anything, although I was able to bandage my wounds after a fashion and take my sulfanilamide tablets. I remained where I had fallen for seven or eight hours without water under the glaring sun. Just at dusk, I looked up and there was a German patrol. Walking ahead of it, a prisoner, was one of the men from my own company-Red Sams."

Reminders on Rationing

governs the rationing of sugar and shoes.

Blue Stamps, War Ration Book No. 2-To be used for canned fruits, canned vegetables, fruit juices, soups, frozen foods, catsup, etc. Stamps lettered R, S and T are valid now and will remain good through September 20.

Those marked U, V and W will ecome good next Wednesday (September 1) and then will remain valid through October 20. Red Stamps, War Ration Book No. 2 -To be used for all meats, including canned meats, and for butter margarine, lard, cheese, canned fish, fats and oils and canned milk. Coupons lettered T, U, V and W are good now, but will expire at midnight Tuesday. Coupons lettered X, also good now, will remain valid until October 2.

Coupons lettered Y became valid today (Sunday, August 29) and will not expire until October 2. Stamps marked Z also will be good until October 2 after they ecome valid next Sunday.

Servicemen of the United States or Allied nations may obtain special food ration certificates if going on leaves of 72 hours or longer. A "furlough ration unit" -certificates good for 8 points of canned goods, 8 points of meats or fats, and ¼ pound of sugar—will be issued the serviceman for each three days of his leave or fraction thereof.

War Ration Book No. 3-Members of the armed services who are eligible to use ration stamps should mail their applications for the new ration books to the OPA Mailing Center, Chicago, Ill., by next Tuesday (August 31). They may obtain the forms from their commanding officer.

These books have been mailed to all civilians in the District who completed their applications properly and returned them by last

Civilians who have not received their new book in the mail should apply to their local ration boards. Those who mailed their application to the OPA on or before last June 10, but still have not received their book, should take with them to the ration board the identification stub they detached from that application. Brown stamps in the new books will be used for meats, etc., beginning September 12. One set of new stamps will become valid each Sunday after that date. Sugar-Stamp No. 14 is good for 5 pounds and will remain valid through October 31. Stamps Nos. 15 and 16 in Ration Book No. 1 may be used to obtain sugar for home canning purposes. Each of these stamps will be good for 5 pounds through October 31. Families needing more than 10 pounds of sugar per person for home canning purposes must make application to their ration boards for all over this amount. In any event, not more than 15 additional pounds will be allotted to a family. Fuel Oil-Period No. 1 coupons for next season's ration may be used now or at any time before next

Be sure to note whether the value printed on the face of each coupon is stated in gallons or units. The period No. 1 coupons are good for 10 gallons per unit.

Coupon No. 5 from last season's allotment is still valid and may be used anytime through September 30. Each unit represents 10

Gasoline—All old-type B and C coupons (those in books numbered 527, 527A, 528 and 528A) will be invalid after next Wednesday. Motorists who still have some of these coupons should exchange them through their local ration board for the new-type B's and C's. The swap will be on a coupon for coupon basis and must be completed tomorrow or Tuesday.

Ration boards in the District open at 9 a.m. all weekdays and close at 4:30 p.m., except on Saturdays, when the closing hour is Motorists may handle the exchange of coupons by mail, but the District OPA warns that this method should not be used where delay in obtaining the new coupons will work a hardship.

Whether made in person or by mail, all requests for the exchange must be accompanied by the motorist's latest tire inspection certificates. Coupons should not be detached from books.

Holders of A books are cautioned may be exported by registered shoe to retain the back cover of their book since it will be needed in applying for the new "A" ration stamps, issuance of which will begin soon.

Pleasure driving is now forbidden to holders of all types of gasoline rations.

No. 6 "A" coupons are now valid and will be good for 3 gallons each through November 21. "B" and "C" coupons, good for 21/2 gallons each, expire according to date indicated on the individual books. "TT" rations are issued at 1740 Massachusetts avenue N.W. after approval is obtained from local Offices of Defense Transportation on the basis of certificates of war necessity. New Automobiles-Any one gainfully employed or doing voluntary work for the war effort or the public welfare is eligible to obtain a rationing certificate for the purchase of cars with a list price of over $1,500, or convertibles, regardless of price. The applicant must show need for a car to get to or do his work and must show that his present car, if any, is not adequate

Eligibility for automobiles with a list price of less than $1,500. except convertibles is confined to persons who can show the need for a car in any of the essential occupations (such as war workers, physicians, ministers, etc.) who do not now have the use of an adequate car.

New 1942 model passenger cars with a list price of more than $2,500 and 1941 model cars driven less than 1,000 miles are available without rationing certificates to any one who has need for a car in a gainful occupation, or who needs a car for volunteer work in connection with the war effort or the public welfare. Both dealer and buyer are required to send to the OPA inventory unit here a statement certifying to eligibility of the buyer and giving the description of the car sold.

Tires-All classes of drivers may now have tires recapped without obtaining certificates from their Certificates must be obtained from the rationing board for the purchase of any type of tire. Certificates are issued only after presentation of applications on which a tire inspector has certified the need for replacements.

Tire eligibility requirements have been changed to restrict the issuance of certificates for tires where the applican's vehicle is already equipped with four serviceable tires. Local boards are to deny applications for a fifth tire unless the official tire inspection station has indicated on the report that the fifth tire cannot even be used as an emergency spare tire (through the use of a boot, inner lining, etc.).

Tire Inspection Deadlines - Next Tuesday is the deadline for holders of C gasoline ration books Sen tember 30 is the deadline for holders of A books, and October 31 for those with B rations.

Inner Tubes-Used passenger car and truck inner tubes have been removed from rationing restrictions. New inner tubes, however, are still rationed

Shoes-Stamp No. 18 in Book No. 1 is redeemable for one pair of shoes through October 31.

Footwear not covered by rationing includes house slippers constructed exclusively for indoor or house wear, ballet slippers, evening slippers with uppers of gold or silver leather or imitation leather, baseball, track and football shoes, men's and women's knee high riding boots, infants' shoes of size 4 or smaller, overshoes, waterproof or snow and water repellent footwear, burial slippers and footwear having no rubber in the soles and in which leather is used only as hinges, tabs, heel inserts or other nonskid or soundproofing features covering not more than 25 per cent of the bottom of the sole.

The following types also are exempt from rationing if shipped from the factory before April 16: Ski and skate shoes, locker sandals, bathing slippers, shoes with a fabric upper and a rubber sole, and certain types of "play" shoes. A special procedure has been established offering relief to consumers who buy shoes they find are defective. Persons living in the United States, but who expect to be away

For Solomons Operations

Capt. Frank H. Dean, U. S. N., 51, has been commended by the Secretary of the Navy for courageous and efficient leadership as commander of a Navy transport during various operations in the Solomon Island area. Between August, 1942, and February of this year Capt. Dean's ship participated in three important missions without suffering any casualties or damage.

Capt. Dean's wife, Mrs. Edythe W. Dean, lives at 6342 Thirty-second street N.W. in this city. "The Department has been informed of your outstanding devotion to duty as commanding officer of a United States Navy transport in the initial occupation of Tulagi Island, Solomon Islands, on August 7 and 8, 1942, and during two important missions in that area on November 12, 1942, and February 17, 1943," said the letter of commendation. "While carrying out these operations in enemy submarines and subjected to Japanese bombing and torpedo plane attacks. Despite these hazardous and adverse conditions, you suc-ceeded in transporting troops, supplies, and equipment for decisive offensive action by our forces, and in bringing your ship through on each occasion without casualty or damage."

Victory Garden Float Is Winner in Parade Of Lincoln Civic Group

With bugles, drums and floats, young children, some barely able to walk, paraded by the judges at the Briggs-Montgomery School yesterday in the sixth annual summer recreation day sponsored by the Lincoln Civic Association.

The floats ranged from the prizewinning Victory garden display of the Montgomery Playground to one with boys and girls "selling" War bonds and stamps. Greatest applause in marching went to a group of girls from the Francis Playground who executed various formations, ending in a V.

The first prize trophy for floats, presented by The Evening Star, went to the Montgomery Playground, while second prize, presented by the Times-Herald, was awarded to Francis Playground. In marching, the first prize trophy of the Washington Post was given to Francis.

The Washington Daily News prize for the best handicraft work also was carried off by Francis. The exhibit, held in the Briggs-Montgomery School, included hooked rugs, mats, model boats and belts.

The parade formed at the Francis Recreation Center and marched past the reviewing stand. Later the various units came back to present a program of singing and dancing. Rudolph Hunter was marshal.

Serving as judges were Charles Stofberg, aide to Commissioner John Russell Young; Mrs. B. C. Knorl Southeast Settlement House: Board of Public Welfare.

Those taking part in the program were the Morgan Playground. Snow's Court Playground, Knights of St. John's Junior Drum Corps, Rose Park Playground and Francis and Montgomery Playground. Dr. E. F. Harris, president of the Lincoln Civic Association and the Federation of Civic Associations, announced the names of the prize win-before going into the service. Lt. Hoffman was born in the District in 1919. He attended Eastern High School and later worked for the Public Health Department. He enlisted in the Canadian Air Force in 1941 and transferred to the United States Air Force in 1942. He is now stationed in Florida.

War Plant Head Fights Extradition of Worker

By the Associated Press. DETROIT, Aug. 28.-Joseph Delgarn, 45, fighting extradition to Columbus, Ohio, as an escaped inmate of the county workhouse there, found an ally today in the president of the war plant where he is employed as a laborer.

Testifying at Delgarn's arraignment on a fugitive warrant in Recorder's Court, L. E. Gregory, president of the Detroit Magnesium and Aluminum Casting Co., said that although he was unaware of the escape when he hired Delgarn he would join in the fight against ex-

Mr. Gregory described Delgarn as a "good worker," and added, "I wish I had many more like him." Mr. Gregory said he would seek denial of extradition at least for the duration and if necessary would carry the case to Gov. Harry F. Kelly. Judge Arthur Gordon placed Delgarn under $500 bond and adjourned the case until September 3.

decision had not been issued, by the expedient of issuing an order to end the strike.

The National Labor Relations Board has held 13 elections wherein employes were asked to vote "yes" or "no" on the question of whether they wanted to permit an interruption of work. In all cases the vote has been overwhelmingly "yes," out in no case has a strike followed.

Strike Not Real Issue. While that might indicate that the ballot is a strike preventive. the officials said it shows only that a strike was not the real issue at all in most cases. The strike notices, they added, were filed for pressure and promotion purposes. The first strike ballot conducted by the NLRB, at the Allis-Chalmers plant, Springfield, Ill., was demanded by District 50 of the United Mine Workers, union officials acknowledged, to show the board, not management, that District 50 had a majority and that a collective bargaining election should be granted at once. The NLRB refused however, to reconsider its denial of the collective bargaining election. The dispute has been certified to the WLB, which said yesterday that a hearing has been set for September 11 here and representatives of the company, of District 50 and the United Farm Equipment and Metal Workers, CIO, have been notified

Strikes Still Occurring. Meanwhile, the strikes which the act was intended to prevent are still occurring. For the most part they are spontaneous affairs, managed by local leaders or groups seeking quick settlement of some grievance or demand. No strike notice is filed in these cases, for several reasons. The local leaders may be unable, or unwilling to delay a walk-out for 30 days. Too, there is no criminal proceeding provided under the antistrike Act for failure to file strike notice.

The only recourse the act gives to management or the Government in such cases is a civil suit for damages. Criminal penalties are not operative until after the plant is in Government control.

Thirty-day strike notices filed so far total 180. Of these, 75 have been withdrawn, largely through persuasion of the NLRB, the WLB and the Labor Department. Of the 180, AFL unions filed 111 and CIO unions filed 37. The rest were filed by independents, including 14 by District 50. The union which filed the largest number of notices-27-is the AFL Teamsters.

Nine Elections Held. Nine of the 13 elections have been conducted on the 30th day after the strike notice is filed, and allows the NLRB no discretion on this point. Sometimes unions delay withdrawing notices until the 29th were withdrawn on the 30th day, a couple of hours before balloting was to begin. The expense of printing election notices and ballots and the manpower expended were a

(Not mediumship, Clairvoyance or mind-reading)

Fears, worries and nervousness are fatal to your happiness. Does fear make your life miserable? Are you nervous and moody? Do you feel lost, discouraged and confused?

There is a very real reason for these symptoms, but there is no need to go on in hopeless turmoil. Present day knowledge of the human mind and emotions make toleration of these states unnecessary.

The service offered is a private, confidential consultation. You will receive an analysis of your troubles, and definite help in overcoming them. The cost is moderate. Make your appointment now.

A free explanatory book'et will be sent upon request.

Adults, Not Juveniles, Are Delinquents; Board of Education Threefold Plan

By JESSE C. SUTER.

Adult, Not Juvenile, Delinquency May Be the Problem Exploring the so-called, and much discussed, juvenile delinquency problem in search for a solution, inclines one to reach the conclusion that the real problem is adult and not juvenile delinquency. A systematic and conscientious effort is now under way to get at the bottom of the problem and by careful analysis discover the required solutions.

In an illuminating article by Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, in the current number of the Chevy Chase Citizen there is told of the plans and the work under way by the school board to attack the problem in a practical and effective manner. The Board of Education is handling the matter as wartime and immediate postwar problems.

The plan is threefold, the first step being a study by school officials of the problem in the junior high schools. The second is the formation in school areas of community councils composed of school people, parents and leaders in the community. The third is the appointment of a city-wide committee advisory to the Board of Education on the problems of the war child.

The Advisory Committee is composed of representatives of the religious faiths, of the home, the social agencies, recreation leaders, officials of the Health Department, Juvenile Court, Police Department and the Board of Education. The president of the board is the chairman of the committee.

Studies under the first step made by the school officials have supplied some interesting information. Teachers in junior high schools were asked to check what, in their opinion, were the greatest causes of juvenile delinquency. Consolidated answers in the white junior high schools gave the three greatest causes of juvenile delinquency in this order: 1. Lack of discipline in the home. 2. Broken homes. 3. Insufficient effort at home.

The answers in the colored junior high schools were: 1. Lack of discipline in the home. 2. Broken homes. 3. Bad environment. With "overcrowded living conditions" as a close fourth.

These reports showed that juvenile delinquency manifested itself in the form of truancy, disrespect and disorderly conduct in

The measures suggested by the teachers to reduce the delinquency placed particular emphasis throughout the system on: 1. More wholesome supervised recreation. 2. Parents should be made more conscious of their responsibilities. 3. Stronger discipline in the home. 4. Stronger discipline in the school. 5. Closer co-operation between home and school. 6. Closer parental supervision of the child in the home.

Mrs. Doyle, in her discussion, says: "Many parents feel that strict discipline hurts children, warps them through curbing their childish instincts, and therefore shield their children from all things disagreeable, including hard work. There is no unkindness to children greater than turning them out into the world as individuals who do only the things they want to do and who have not been made to stick to a job until it is finished.

"The discipline of our armed forces and the magnificent response of our young men show us that they can and will do hard, dangerous, heroic tasks without flinching. They will return to their homes disciplined and ready to take their places in civilian life. It is necessary that they not find at home a slightly younger generation that, through lack of parental supervision, through greater spending power, through a general letdown in self-discipline, are not their equals in meeting the problems of the postwar period.'

"As was stated in the beginning," concludes Mrs. Doyle, "the threefold plan of the Board of Education will play an important part in the training of young people in this wartime to be useful citizens, but the first responsibility for children lies in the home. Homes where mothers and fathers together see that their children are disciplined, that they attend church, that they have clean living conditions and wholesome food, that they have proper recreation, are now, as always, the strength of our country.'

Evidence from other sources supports the findings in the studies made by school officials under the first step of the plan. As a concrete case, one thoroughly-informed citizen on this problem writes to this observer: "I confess that the liquor problem appears in most of 'case studies' to confuse and thwart our efforts. Our children who are delinquent come from the homes of drunken parents, insufficient support, poor (wretched) housing conditions, etc."

This problem, while probably increased somewhat under the peculiar wartime conditions, is by no means something new in the District of Columbia. Damage to school and private property, robbery and other acts laid to juvenile offenders have long been the subject of deep concern by the Police Department, the Juvenile Court and the school officials,

One downtown business office has been annoyed frequently by the entrance of a group of youngsters who would upset things generally and carry on all sorts of the worst forms of hoodloomism. The police would be called and the boys would scamper away.

When the policemen were asked why they did not grab some of those boys and take them to their parents, they declared it would do no good as the parents would show no interest in correcting them. Then, they were asked why not take them into court. Here the policeman explained that an arrest would mean that he would have to loaf around the Juvenile Court for a long time on his "time off" and then the chances were that nothing would be done with the culprit for his bad conduct. In such a situation the policeman confessed that he had a feeling that the court really regarded the officer as an offender for arresting the

The president of the Board of Education seems to get down to bedrock in her appraisal of the problem. Her analysis, as well as that of the others, indicates very clearly that the problem is not one of juvenile delinquency, but that it is the adult parents who are the real delinquents.

The injunction is laid down in the wisdom of the Book of Proverbs: "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it." (Proverb, xxii.6.) The presumption, of course, is that the training was to be by the parent with the co-operation of the clergy and the teachers.

Some wise philosopher has said that the proper training of the child should begin with the grandparents. Therefore, the dilenquence of parents of today, it is said, indicates that the education and training of the grandparents have been sadly neglected.

There is an increased importance in solving this problem now and for all time when it is remembered that these boys and girls are the grandparents of the future. Unless their feet are firmly placed en the proper foundation and they are started in the right direction, the difficulties with the juveniles of the future will be multiplied many times beyond those of today.

The home and school association movement, which antedated the P.-T. A. activities, possessed advantages for close co-operation between the homes and the schools. These groups devoted their energies more to teamwork in fostering mutual understanding between home and school than to "enrichment of the curriculum" and structural changes in the schools. The male parents as well as the female parents were active participants in this work, and the result was most wholesome. It is said that the present conditions show a need for a revival of that line of work,

London Sees Signs That 'Big 3' Chiefs

LONDON, Aug. 28.-A series of fragile but related signs arose tonight to suggest that prospects had taken a brighter turn for a meeting of President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin or their high representatives.

The signs suggested, too, that such a meeting would mean substantial satisfaction of Russia's insistence on a new front in Western Europe The possibility of the meeting of the heads of the three largest Allies has leaped to the forefront of all British discussion with the publication of reports that Stalin already had agreed to meet Allied leaders and circulations of rumors via Rome that he was making plans to go to the Caucasus soon to meet British and American political as well as military representatives.

The alteration in the atmosphere was unmistakable. And with this change of atmosphere several reports and speculations fitted in smoothly

The anticipated return to London of former Soviet Ambassador Ivan M. Maisky, although ostensibly only to clear up his affairs before assuming the post in Moscow as vice foreign commissar, has led to speculation which was not noticeably discouraged that Vyacheslav Molotov, commissar for foreign affairs might follow him here. The belief has greatly increased that British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden is going to Moscow for a meeting which would bring Stalin face to face with a man only a little short of the level occupied by Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill in the direction of affairs of the western

The Evening News, in fact, said it understood that Mr. Eden would begin planning the three-power meeting even before Mr. Churchill returns home.

Coins Weighing 100 Pounds Taken From Grocery

Police last night kept a close watch on slot machines throughout the city in hopes of apprehending a muscular thief who broke into a grocery store owned by Abraham Schuman at 401 K street N.W. and carried off almost a hundred pounds of coins adding up to a total value of $615. The best police minds agreed the culprit either was a reformed weightlifter or had a helper or so. The money was divided into silver dollars and smaller change. The loss included five silver dollars, $350 in quarters, weighing 17 pounds; $80 in dimes, $80 in nickels and $100 in pennies. Police decided the helper, if any, probably had to carry the pennies, weighing 57 pounds.

Ersatz Tire Found 'Very Satisfactory' In 500-Mile Test

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 28. - The first public demonstration of the new butadiene synthetic rubber automobile tire was declared "very satisfactory" by experts today after a gruelling 17-hour test on the historic bricks of the Indianapolis motor speedway.

The tire, made of wood pulp waste products and tested in a 500-mile, 35-mile-an-hour tour of the famous race course, was said to have shown little noticeable wear.

Although air expansion was slightly higher than that shown by a natural rubber tire under similar conditions, the test proved that the synthetic tire can be driven with safety at reasonable speeds, Don Waugh, test supervisor, said. The tire showed an expansion of 28 to 32 pounds, Mr. Waugh said, while a natural rubber tire normally expands from 28 to approximately 31 pounds.

The demonstration, conducted under the auspices of the Chicago Tribune, began at 2 a.m. and ended at 7 p.m. During that time the car was driven continuously at a speed of 35 miles per hour with only four Tribune auto editor, alternated at the wheel of the test car.

Virginia Commission To Hold Milk Price Hearing Thursday

A hearing on a request by the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association for an increase in the price of milk will be held by the Virginia Milk Commission at 10:30 a.m. Thursday in the Alexandria Council rooms, E. C. C. Woods, secretary of the commission, announced last night.

Bruce B. Derrick, secretary of the association, said requests for a similar hearing have been made to the Agriculture Department, but a date for this hearing has not been set.

Mr. Derrick said the association is requesting an increase to the producer of 70 cents a hundredweight. or 1.5 cents a quart. This represents a 16 per cent increase over the present price of $4.35 per hundredweight, or 9.4 cents a quart for 4 per cent milk, including premiums.

Mr. Woods said producers and distributors will be given an opportunity at the hearing to present details showing their costs of production. He said consumers also will be allowed to present evidence in support of the present milk prices.

Rise Declared Necessary. Mr. Derrick said the increasing costs of milk production, together with the drought which has affected milk production in the Washington milk shed, have made an "immediate" raise in prices "absolutely necessary.'

Since January, 1941, he said, the local cost of dairy feed has increased 73 per cent, while farm wages have risen 75 per cent and the overall cost of producing milk is up 61 per cent. During the same period, he pointed out, the local fluid milk price to producers has increased only 24 per cent, and the blend of all milk and cream sold by distributors has increased only 36 per cent.

"Rising costs, together with the drought, are causing a sharp reduction in milk production in this area," Mr. Derrick asserted. "Production this month is 8.6 per cent under that of last August," he said, while fluid sales this month are 20 per cent above last year's.

The declining production and rising consumption is causing the Distriet to depend on other cities for an alarming proportion of its milk supply," Mr. Derrick said.

Estimate of Needs. Mr. Derrick said that according to present estimates Washington will will mean that 180,000 must be found from other areas if the demand is supplied, he added.

to secure relief.

By ELENA DE SAYN. An evening of music at the Aztec Gardens of the Pan-American Union has proved for many years an attraction, well warranted by the fine quality of the programs. Last night's concert, dedicated to eight Latin American composers representative of Brazil, Argentine, Haiti, Cuba. Mexico, Puerto Rico, Panama and Venezuela, brought forth once more interesting selections from these countries. They were expertly presented by the Marine Band under the direction of Capt. William F.

Special mention deserves Angel del Busto's "Caribbean Dance" from 'Suite in D Minor" in which the clarinet section achieved distinction by its flawless execution, Alberto Galimany's "Danza la Guacamaya," the trumpet making a fine display of the melody, and F. A. Partichela's "Jarabe Tapatio," played by Charles Owen on the xylophone, accompanied by the band. Mr. Owen's rhythmical precision was only surpassed by the bell-like clarity and swiftness of his technique. The number was encored

The soloist was Gloria de Estevez, vocalist, native of Cuba, well known school, the attorney has maintained in the United States because of her many broadcasts. Senorita de Estevez was heard in two groups of songs which she performed to her own accompaniment on the guitar. Her deep and sonorous voice made the most of De Karlo's "Vaivan de Palmeras," Esperon's "Ay, Jalisco, No Te Rajes," Velasquez' "Besame Mucho," Margarita Lecuana's "Babalu," Guizar's "Guadalajara," Lara's "Noche de Ronda," Roig's 'Quiereme Mucho" and Ernesto Lecuona's "Por Corrientes Va Una

The well chosen program contained five more selections: Nascimento's "Marcha dos Aviadores Brazileitors." Williams "Primera Obertura de Concierto," Heraux's 'Meringues of Haiti," Hahn's "Ballet Music" from "La Fete chez Therese" and the "Jericho Rhapsody" by the United States composer, Morton This only American composition on the program was played as a final number, preceding the national anthem, which concluded

While the drawing room of the first act was sumptuously appointed, the garden scene that followed was equally effective in its simplicity. The costuming of the chorus and principals was rich and pleasing to the eye in its blending of color. The chorus, 100 strong, was by far the best vocally and dramatically that has been heard in opera performances in this city, the voices being pure and sympathetic, excellently trained in the music of the opera, and the singers carried out their part of the story with individual touches that kept the action interesting at all times.

Several outstanding voices were heard in the shorter roles of the opera, including that of Ruth Logan as Annina, Gertrude Johnson as Flora and Lindslav Mordecai as Gaston. The cast was completed with William Robertson as Baron The ballet, trained by Adrities given it during the party at

Lunch Rule Dispute Closing War Plant Settled Temporarily

By the Associated Press. DETROIT, Aug. 28.-A dispute over lunch time regulations, capped by a work stoppage involving 9,000 employes of the Murray Corp. of America was settled temporarily tonight with the plant to reopen Mon-

Robert E. Lomasney, State labor conciliator, announced that both company and employe representatives had agreed to negotiate the

The employes were ordered to stop work earlier today by Lloyd T. Jones, president of Murry Local No. 2, United Automobile Workers (CIO) Mr. Jones said he gave the order in protest against company discipline of 200 employes who were late in returning from lunch.

The company, producing aircraft and other war material for the Army, charged that Mr. Jones and chief shop stewards of the local had instructed employes not to comply with working hours agreed on by the company and the union and approved by the National War Labor

Rule Protested.

Mr. Jones asserted that, after an agreement providing for a ninehour day with a 15-minute paid lunch period for all employes, the company had posted a notice that employes who were 1 minute or more late on either arriving at work or on coming back to work from lunch would be docked the equivalent of one-half hour's pay.

He said he had protested the rule without avail and then ordered the men to return to eight-hour shifts with half-hour lunch periods on their own time. A number of workers, he said, followed these orders and were denied readmittance to the plant when they refused to sign a sheet admitting tardiness.

At this, Mr. Jones said, he ordered all the men to stop work. His order was complied with, he said.

Company Statement.

The company statement said: "Written instructions from the union leaders advised employes to observe lunch periods, starting and quitting times, at variance with those agreed on by the company and union and approved by the

When company representatives attempted to identify employes overstaying the prescribed lunch period. they refused to re-enter the plant and induced the remainder of the employes to walk out in sympathy.

Shortage of Turkeys For Civilian Tables Is Predicted Again

Some persons may go without turkey at Thanksgiving and Christmas this year, despite War Food month that military purchases of the birds for men overseas would Administration assurances last leave enough for civilians it developed yesterday.

The Agriculture Department, in its poultry and egg report, estimated that civilian supplies of turkey will be smaller than last year's and that "with more purchasing power this year than last the consumer demand will exceed supplies to an even greater degree.'

Turkey production for this year comises to be about the same as in 1942 the department said.

All turkey sales have been halted except to Government agencies, which are buying a total of 10.000,-000 pounds for shipment to overseas military forces.

Farm marketings of chickens have increased greatly in recent weeks, the department said, relieving the tight supply situation that had prevailed in many poultry markets for several months.

WFA, meantime, placed controls over the onion crop in California, Washington, Oregon, Utah, Nevada, Idaho, Colorado, Minnesota, North Dakota, Michigan, Indiana and New York, in which 90 per cent of late onions are produced. Beginning Tuesday dealers will be required to obtain permits before making shipments of dry onions in excess of 100 pounds except for nearby

That control, WFA said, will permit the Government to procure onions to meet war needs at the same time that civilian supplies are marketed. "With the prospective onion crop short in relation to the large demand, such control is considered necessary to assure that war requirements for both fresh and dehydrated onions will be met," the agency said.

WFA also announced yesterday discontinuance of Commodity Credit Corp. payments on imported coffee. Part of the excess ocean and transhipment costs within this country has been paid in order to maintain domestic ceiling prices on coffee, but the need no longer exists, WFA said.

Discontinuance has been made possible because of a reduction in war risk and marine insurance resulting from improved shipping conditions, it was pointed out.

15 of Escaped German Prisoners Recaptured

KINGSTON, Ont., Aug. 28.—Three more of the 19 German prisoners who escaped from Fort Henry Thursday night were captured today. leaving only four of the group still at large. Twelve were taken in the Kingston area yesterday.

Two of those found today were captured in a barn only half a mile from Fort Henry. Another was captured at Brewers Mills, 16 miles northeast of here.

Police and more than 1,000 Canadian and United States soldiers continued to search the summer resort district north and east of here for the remaining prisoners. The 19 escaped by digging a tunnel under the walls of Fort Henry to the crest of a hill overlooking the St. Lawrence River.

Bill Stern had a horrible time of it broadcasting the Redskins-All-Stars football game the other night. At one point he had the All-Stars leading, 20-14, which would have been all right with the Redskins and a few minutes later he was telling his audience what a great belt the spectators were getting out of "this baseball game."

Five of Six Safeties Made by Nationals Are Extra-Basers

By BURTON HAWKINS.

Johnny Niggeling discovered the method of winning with the Nats last night at Griffith Stadium. The ancient knuckle-ball specialist, recently obtained in a four-player deal with the St. Louis Browns, restricted the floundering Philadelphia Athletics to three hits and captured a 1-0 decision before 9.700 customers.

A victim of Washington's power paralysis in his first start with the Nats earlier in the week, when he dropped a 2-1, six-hit engagement to the Browns, Niggeling was handed a run by his mates in the first inning and he performed a noble job of converting that lonesome score into triumph.

As late as the ninth inning, with two out, the Athletics were threatening to destroy the 38-year-old Niggeling's mound masterpiece, but a nifty bit of defensive infield play throttled a daring bid for an extra base and choked Philadelphia's chances to score.

Welaj Too Ambitious. Niggeling had retired 15 A.'s in order when Jimmy Ripple nicked him for a single to center with two out in the ninth. Johnny Welaj was inserted to run for Ripple, and that, it developed, was all right with the

Bobby Estalella, struck out by Niggeling on three previous occasions, beat out a slow roller to Shortstep Gerald Priddy but Welaj, in a sudden burst of misplaced ambition, attempted to reach third on Mickey Vernon whipped the ball cross the infield to Third Baseman Sherry Robertson and Welaj found it waiting for him.

Thus the Athletics choked their chances of improving on a rancid record that displays 22 defeats in their last 23 games.

Back in the first inning the Nats fashioned what developed to be the vital run. With one out Vernon lashed a double down the left field line and after Jake Powell flied out Stan Spence responded to the applause of the fans, in appreciation of his recent terrific hitting, by belting a triple high off the right field fence, scoring Vernon. Spence was (See BASEBALL, Page B-2.)

Hope of Terranova Go To Spur Costantino, Wilson Tomorrow

Promoter Joe Turner tomorrow unveils what should be the best fight here this summer when he sends Lulu Costantino, East Side New Yorker who likes nothing better than to meet the best, against Pittsburgh Jackie Wilson, former NBA feather champ, whose educated right hand and all-around boxing ability has earned him a real following in the Capital and else-

They are two of the keenest feathers in the game today and are very well matched. Their fight appears close to a tossup, with Costantino getting what little edge there may be in the odds. And to make these boys fight all the harder is the very good chance of the winner getting a match against Phil Terranova, the new NBA world champion among the 126-pounders.

Promoter Turner yesterday received a wire from Bobby Gleason, Terranova's manager, offering him a date next month against the winner of tomorrow's fight. Gleason will be here to discuss the matter and Joe reports himself ready to make a very substantial offer.

Each Fighter Has Punch. Washington fight fans have turned out strongly for featherweights in the past and the year's box office record should be broken tomorrow night if advance sale is any indication. George King, ticketselling maestro, reports it the best

Costantino arrived here Friday and yesterday went through his first sparring session in Washington Lulu showed himself a good two-handed hitter and an able boxer

Gives South America First Real Chance For Big Crown

By GRANTLAND RICE. NEW YORK, Aug. 28 (NANA) .-In many ways the tennis map covers more sporting terrain than any other sport. The Davis Cup and national championships have been won by the United States. Great Britain, France, Australia and New Zealand, where Germany had an outstanding star in Von Cramm. Now Ecuador offers a South American challenger in the nimble person of Francisco Segura who will be extremely hard to surround and cut down when the United States tennis championship opens at Forest Hills. This will be South America's first big chance to enter the long parade that has come from a large portion of the scrapping planet.

The strongest bids that have come from South America so far were the Argentina polo team and more than one soccer outfit that has scrambled to the top. Argentina's polo crop in other years always was good, but Ecuador now remains the only South American country with a national championship in sight. Wilding a Dramatic Figure.

While other nations have had many tennis stars the United States still leads the list-Larned, McLoughlin, Williams, Tilden, Johnston, Richards, Vines and Budge heading a formidable list. The Aussies have had Brookes, Wilding, Crawford and a strong young colony, checked by the war.

France is a strong all-time entry with Lacoste, Cochet and Borotranot overlooking Suzanne Lenglen. Von Cramm was Germany's top man while Kumagae and Shimidzu were the two Jap threats.

England in later years hasn't had much tennis luck, although Wim-bledon in a way has been the tennis

Spain had Michael Alonzo. Russia and Italy haven't been too hot, while the Scandinavian nations have gone out more for track and field. Tony Wilding, one of the greatest of all international stars, came to a dramatic finish. Paired with Norman Brookes, the Aussie team won the Davis Cup final in mid-August, 1914, just a few days after the German Army had entered Belgium. That August day was 29 years ago. Brookes and Wilding left to join the Australian forces immediately after the final match. Before sailing Wilding told his friends that he knew he never would be back again Columbus' Chet Wieczorek by 6 as he felt that quick and certain death was to be his part. Wilding was killed in action only a few months later. There has been no finer sportsman Tilden Stands Alone.

It is agreed generally that Bill

Tilden was the greatest tennis player of them all-at his peak. Tilden came to the front in 1920 when he and Bill Johnston brought Tilden almost was unbeatable for the next five years. Big Bill has been a star for more than 20 years, the most colorful figure that ever came to any court. He had speed and power with an amazing amount of generalship and for some 25 years was in more big matches than any other two men. When the 1943 title whirl opens at Forest Hills, Segura from Ecuador will be the one to beat.

The United States will offer Ensign Fred Schroeder, the champion; Lt. Joe Hunt, Bob Falken-berg, Sidney Wood, Bitsy Grant and Seymour Greenberg among her leading defenders, but they will need something extra to handle the hard, two-handed hitter from Ecuador, who has been rough medicine over here for the last year. The entry from Ecuador also is a stout-hearted competitor with his full share of self-confidence, which is no paltry asset. One of the younger United States stars may bring him down at Forest Hills when the next show opens, but rabbit waiting for the snare.

stranded as Robertson lined to Jo-Jo White in center.

That was all the margin Niggeling needed. He was in trouble in the second inning when Dick Siebert reached first with one out on Priddy's fumble and stole second after Irvin Hall had fanned, but Club, participated in the national Siebert was left as George Myatt tossed out Hal Wagner.

Not until the fourth inning did the Athletics get a hit off Niggeling. White opened with a sharp aspired to master competition, but single to right and after Ripple lined to Powell, White stole second placing. and contined to third when Catcher Jake Early threw wild into center field. Niggeling calmly proceeded to fan Estalella for the second time and purposely passed the dangerous Siebert, who stole second. Spence gathered in Hall's fly to stymie that scoring gesture.

That was the last time the A's reached base until Ripple presented them their second hit with two out in the ninth. Niggeling wasn't handicapping himself by issuing bases on balls. Siebert was the only Mackman to reach base in that manner, and Niggeling put him there intentionally.

Meanwhile the Nats were hitting Knuckle-baller Roger Wolff hard but not frequently. They collected six hits off him, three triples, two doubles and a single, but after the the last week to hold his average at first inning the chubby Wolff was a rugged character with men on base.

Powell's Triple Wasted. In the third inning Powell rammed a triple to left center with two out but was left as Spence grounded With two out in the fifth George Case, who stole his 43d base of the season in the eighth inning, doubled to left but was stranded as Vernon flied to Estalella. Bee Mac, Princequillo Score in Saratoga Finale Features

By SID FEDER. sociated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.-The fair ex went to the head of the 2-yearold racing parade in the East today as Bee Mac, a chunky little filly with a lot of run, beat off all the boys to take the prized Hopeful Stakes.

Topping off the transplanted Saratoga meeting at Belmont — a meeting which brought 30,388 to today's get-away program and rolled up a wagering total of $44.058,212 for its 30-day run—the dancing daughter of War Admiral not only became the first lady winner of the Hopeful in 29 years, but by her triumph she moved up to the top spot for the Eastern juvenile championship of the year.
The crowd today tossed $2,384,468 into the mutuels for the biggest oneday play of the meeting.

Bee Mac Picks Up $33,000. A gift from Col. Ed Bradley to Beatrice MacGuire of New York a year ago, Bee Mac picked up a $33,300 pay check, thereby boosting her earnings to $44,530. And the way she did it, practically running off and hiding from 11 rivals, she far overshadowed the driving victory of Princequillo in the mile-and-three-quarter Saratoga Cup. The Irish-bred 3-year-old with the Belgian daddy and French mammy, and owned by the South Carolina Boone Hall Stable partnership of Prince Dmitri Djordjadze and Argentine horseman Horation Luro, posted a new track record of 2:56% for the long pull in grabbing an $18,200 bankroll and returning $3.30

Young, had a fight of it for only five-sixteenths of a mile as Arnold Hager's Que Hora battled for the lead. Then the Hanger hope chucked it and War Admiral's baby went away from there. She was clocked in 1:18% for the 61/2 furlongs over a

Princequillo Leads All Way. Favorite in the betting, she paid $4.60 for $2 as she led Boy Knight, from the barn of Crispin Oglebay, the Ohio steamship magnate, and By Jimminy, to the wire in that order. By Jimminy, Bee Mac's entry mate, also was bred by Bradley, but was sold to Alfred P. Parker of New York a week ago for a price variously estimated at $15,000 to $20,000. In the cup, Princequillo led all the way, but had to battle it out the last three-sixteenths of a mile with the fast-closing Bolingbroke, owned by Townsend B. Martin. Third, and last, in the field was John A. Bell, Cornish Hills, thoroughbred chest-nut gelding owned by Mr. and Mrs. Haggin Perry of Cobham and ridden by Mrs. Perry, won his third successive championship of the season when he was judged the top hunter of the 16th annual Bath County Horse Show held here today. Cornish Hills, which won the event last year, had 151/2 points. Second place went to Mathematician, owned by Meander Farm at Locust Dale, with 91/2 points. Big Boy, owned by the Springsbury Farm at Berryville, with 13 points, won as champion hunter. Reserve went to Mosby, owned by Independent Livery, Warm Springs, which had seven points. Big Boy gained four blues and a red and was ridden by Joe Ferguson in each event with the exception of the women's hunter class. Meander Farm's Substitution turned in an outstanding performance for a 3-year-old and in the three classes entered won two blues and a red.

Shortage of Coaches Not as Severe as Was Expected

Football practice for District public high schools begins this week with calls issued to six squads, Coolidge, Tech. Wilson, Central and Western on Thursday. The teams have less than a month to get ready, with the first internigh series games scheduled the week end of Septem-

There are four new coaches in the eight schools this year. Joe Carlo succeeds Carl Heintel at Wilson, Dick Mentzer follows Willard Bristor at Eastern, S. W. (Duke) Jacobs takes over in place of John Clary at Tech and Zuzu Stewart is at Anacostia in place of Joey Kaufman. All the men replaced have gone into the services with the exception of Bristor, who is being transferred to another school. Carlo is a former American U. player, Mentzer comes from Penn State, Jacobs played at the University of Maryland and Stewart at George Washington.

shortage of instructors. District schools are in a good spot to try night football again this year. There are numerous dates available at Griffith Stadium for the first time, and the financial return probably would make it worth while. Night games also would serve as a spirit and morale builder and would give more football games to the general public here than now are available with all universities except Maryland dropping the sport.

Wants Boys Conditioned. A suggestion was made last spring that, during the war at least, the physical education and military departments be combined. War Detheir backing to this, and Secretary Stimson was quoted to the effect that the Army needs boys in good physical condition rather than with a smattering of military drill knowldrill quicker and better than can be done in the high schools. Shortage of instructors right now is not as acute as was feared it would be, although many will go if fathers are drafted. With the present staff and the few additions being made, the five periods a week of physical education instruction car be continued with a bit of extra work on the part of each man There are few qualified men available, however, to fill all vacancies if

Middies in Dark Over H Strength of Their Gridiron Foes

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Aug. 28.-The war has played havoc with the sports program of many an educational institution,, and the problem which these changes have posed for Navy's athletic officials to solve is the potential strength of the Tars' 1943 gridiron opponents. Eight of the Middies' foes are colleges and universities boasting V-5 and V-12 Navy units, while the ninth and last game is with Army.

Navy is adhering to the three-year rule of varsity competition, as is the Army, but a glimpse at some of Navy's opponents gives some idea. of the class of football which may be expected.

playing on the baseball team last spring when the Tar Heel Navy unit defeated the Academy 14 to 2. Cornell, Penn State and Georgia Tech remain unknown opponents, but rumors here are that Duke will have the service of at least three linemen who formerly played for Georgia. What other material the Blue Devils have is a big question for Navy, anyway, Notre Dame Is Strong. Notre Dame, too, is known to have a strong squad this year, but the names of individual players, and their records, remain Navy (V-12)

Bert Stiff, a fullback at Pennsylvania for three years, gave Navy plenty of trouble, and the Tar-coaches could, understandably, have breathed sighs of relief when he raduated last spring.

But what happens? Stiff turns up at Columbia in that school's Navy unit, and the odds now are that he will be pacing the field again against the Middies. Pennsylvania's coach, George Munger, however, seems not to be worrying over his football prospects. Look what he's starting practice Panther who played center; Charles Williams, Kansas right tackle; Joseph Michaels, formerly of Drexel, tailback; Joseph McGlone, Temple wingback, and Art Vincent, fullback who came from V. P. I.

But Navy, with 14 lettermen and some able newcomers, will have power to meet its opponents and should be well fixed on both attack and defense.

However, Academy athletic officials know their squad is facing nine tough opponents this year and chances are they would rest easier if they knew exactly what their

Columbia Institute Is Expecting Large Fall Enrollment

The number of registrations received so far indicates the largest fall enrollment the Columbia Tech ing, toboggan runs and dogsled Institute has had in its 32-year history, Paul J. Leverone, principal, announced vesterday.

The classes of the engineering department and radio department will begin the week of September 20. The drafting, blueprint reading and estimating and commercial art government corporations and office courses may be started at any time. All persons interested in attending the institute should register as soon as possible, Mr. Leverone said. In addition to the school's standard four-year evening courses in the engineering department also offers 12 9-month unit evening courses in specialized branches. These include airplane design, airplane stress analysis, air-condition-manship and combustion engines. Drafting Department Extended. The institute's drafting depart-ment has been extended by the addition of a new composite day drafting course. Evening and day courses in mechanical, aircraft, architectural, electrical, machine, landscape, patent office, topographic, lettering and sheet metal design, basic electrical, surveying, landscape architecture, television

gineering, public speaking, sales-and electronics, machine design, en-

pattern are also offered. The institute's commercial art department has been considerably extended this year. Courses are offered in general commercial art, illustration, cartooning, architectural and landscape rendering and interior decoration design.

Over 200 students registered in the institute's new courses in radio code, radio communications and radio repair service during the past semester. To meet expected increase of enrollment during the oming September semester, the school has outfitted several addiional radio shops and has arranged for additional radio instructors.

To Stress Practicality. The radio repair and service course is designed to give the student a thorough training in the practical work and to equip him to hold a position. The same procedure is followed with the radio code and the radio communications courses. The radio communications course trains the graduate to pass the Federal Communications Commission's examinations for secondclass radiotelephone or radiotelegraph operator, restricted operator destined to play a major role in the and amateur operator. Then, too, grape jelly, ing should be done early in the Some gardeners advocate a certain reward any gardener can want. jam and sauce are too well known to need description. The vines may be put to good uses to cover a trellis or arbor, to serve as a screen to hide unsightly views, or as a green background for the flower border.

Grape vines do not need an extensive space. In the small yard they may be trained over a trellis or arbor to provide shade, or they may be trained on wires stretched between posts. When trained on wires, approximately 10 feet of space in length is needed for each vine. but, of course, they occupy hardly more than 4 feet in width. A single vigorous vine may be allowed to ramble over a large trellis, although most gardeners prefer to restrict them by severe pruning This seems to increase the size of the bunches and to stimulate fruit-

Since there is very little reason for denying ourselves the enjoyment of this fruit crop we should make plans now for the planting of one or more vines. An early order for spring delivery should be the first step. The second step is the preparation of the soil. While grapes do not require any special soil they do repay the care given in preparing the planting hole. A generous quantity of compost or well-rotted manure should be dug deeply into the soil to supply plant food; to enable the roots to have ample area from which to draw food and moisture and to increase the water holding capacity of the soil. If the soil is highly acid it will pay to add lime to be mixed thoroughly with the soil. Bone meal is also good for this purpose as it furnishes both lime and phosphate.

In ordering grapevines there is temptation to order the largest size offered-2-year-old extra large -but this is not recommended A 1-year-old size will make fully as rapid growth and bear as quickly as the larger size.

There are many varieties of grapes to choose from and they are all tempting. In this area most gardeners prefer to order an early variety such as Moore's Early or Fredonia. The later maturing variety. Concord, is standard throughout the eastern half of the United States. The late varieties are not so successful and are not recommended. Ontario and Portland are two desirable varieties of white grapes. Delaware and Brighton are red-skinned varieties that are fairly not proved as dependable here as it has farther north.

While one vine is all that is necessary for fruit and shade, most gardeners prefer to order two or three so as to prolong the fruiting season as much as possible. However, as mentioned above, the very late varieties are not recommended although if the fruit is bagged and protected satisfactory results may be obtained. It is only the late varieties that may be stored for winter use. In a cool, moist situation they will keep for several

While grapes have their share of pests, most of them are neither difficult nor costly to control. The Japanese beetles feed on the foliage and will strip the leaves from a vine unless protected. Ordinary hydrated line dusted on the foliage is an effective repellent, although a mixture of aluminum sulphate and hydrated lime is longer lasting. Occasionally, trouble with a fruit rot is experienced, but one or two dustings or sprayings with Bor-

Grapes are one of the most productive fruits for the small garden, requiring but little space. They may be trained over an arbor or trellis, or upon wires stretched between posts. The fruit is commonly used fresh, but many housewives like it for juice, sauce and for the making of jelly and jam. Certainly we should not overlook this fruit when planning next spring's planting program.

Many trees and shrubs seem to be infested with the tent caterpillar. Ordinarily gardeners cut off the infested branches and burn them, but where that would disfigure a tree or shrub one can, with a good duster, blow lead arsenate into the nest and kill the pests. Spraying is seldom completely successful as the web stops the spray from reaching the foliage upon which the worms feed.

Adjustment in Tax amount of summer pruning, largely Accruals Leaves

By HAROLD B. ROGERS. Net income of Potomac Electric Power Co. in July was $457.416.66, an increase of $134,490.63 over July 1942, it was shown in the monthly

This gain, however, it was explained in a special letter from President A. G. Neal, transmitting the report, was "due wholly to an adjustment in July, 1943, of accruals for Federal income taxes for the first seven months of 1943.

"The first of each year," wrote Mr Neal, "we estimate the amount of the year's Federal income taxes and allocate to each month its proportionate share thereof.' Mr. Neal pointed to the rate reduction of approximately $312,000, made retroactive to March 1, 1943 increase in cost of coal purchased estimated to involve $318,000 for the last six months of 1943, and the proposed plan of the office of War Utilities of the War Production Board that use of electricity be conserved by users for the purpose of fuel and transporation, to be inaugurated in September, 1943, involving an estimated loss of revenue for the last three months of 1943 of $225,000. Tax Needs Reduced.

"Such losses in revenue and increased fuel costs naturally materially affect the amount of Federal income taxes to be paid by the company, hence large reduction of accruals for such purposes placed on the books in July, 1943."

SEC Extends Time

This tax item was shown to have fallen off from $417,369.48 in July, 1942, to $250,691.08 in July, 1943, a drop of 39.94 per cent. Taxes during the first seven months of the year however, were shown to be on the increase, rising from $2,579,740.26 in the 1942 period to $2,665,480.55 in the comparable 1943 period.

Net income for the company rose from $2,166,204.11 in the first seven months of 1942 to $2,486,405.75 in the 1943 period, a gain of 14.78 per cent. Operating revenue rose from $1,-827,657.22 in July, 1942, to $1,922,-335.09 in July, 1943, a gain of 5.18 per cent, while operating revenue deductions including taxes decreased during the same period from $1,370,-350.97 to $1.313,334.86, a decline of 4.16 per cent. Net operating revenue jumped $609,000.23 in July, 1943.

Blair House Being Prepared for Winter

Foreign Minister From Chile To Be First of State Visitors

By Katharine Brooks.

Blair House is being prepared for visitors. Not that the house is not always in perfect order and ready for visitors, but as September approaches and plans are being made for distinguished foreigners to arrive, winter hanglings go up and rugs go down.

The next official from another country to occupy the historic mansion will be the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Chile, Senor Joaquin Fernandez, who is expected to arrive Thursday, September 16 and to stay in the Capital for about eight days.

Senor Fernandez will not have a large party but will be accompanied by the Advisor to the Foreign Office, Senor Felix Nieto del Rio. And of course there will be the usual number of secretaries, the personnel of the group not yet decided.

The Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull, will be host at dinner in honor of the visitors and there will be the customary dinner and probably a reception at the Embassy when the Ambassador and Senora de Michels will Senor Fernandez has had an interesting career and has served his government not only in the Foreign Office but as Minister of Interior and has held the political posts of Governor of the provinces of Valparaiso and of Santiago as well as serving as Mayor of Santiago City. He has been Chilean Minister to Uruguay and was Chilean delegate to the conference on production and commerce held in Montevideo as well as the conference of the Emergency Committee for National Politics of the Continent. Senor Nieto del Rio also is a career diplomat having served as Chilean Ambassador to Brazil before assuming his present duties as advisor to the Foreign Office.

Blair House, purchased by the Government for use of distinguished foreign visitors, has been retained as nearly as possible in the way in which the late Maj. and Mrs. Gist Blair had it during

The rooms do not denote any one period as the late Maj. Blair was the third generation of his family to live there. For this reason each room has characteristics of those several periods. Much of the furnishings are mahogany and Chippendale and the draperies are damask. Blue is used in the two drawing rooms, red in the dining room and in the small office at the right of the front door a soft greenish blue predominates in the hangings. The rugs in the various rooms harmonize with the draperies and are effective backgrounds for the furniture.

Blair House some weeks later will be the famous leader of the Union of South Africa, Gen. Jan Christian Smuts. While no official announcement can be made as to his trip until his arrival in London in October, he is expected by officials here to come about the middle of that month. He, too, will be entertained at the usual parties arranged by officials of this Government and by his own popular Minister, Mr. Ralph William Close, and the brides throughout the autumn season is being forecast by the many engagements being formally announced daily. On the roster of betrothals being made known today are those of attractive young women who have chosen fall for their weddings.

Residential and service circles are focusing their attention on the announcement made by Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Fowler of West Barrington, R. I., of the engagement of their daughter, Ensign Elizabeth Fowler, U. S. N. R., to Lt. Cutler Goodrich Collins, U. S. N. R., son of Mrs. Katharine Abbey Collins of this city. The bridegroom-elect's father, Capt. Marshall Collins, U. S. N. (retired), now is on active duty in the South Pacific.

Miss Fowler attended Pembroke College in Brown University and Colorado College and was employed by the Liberty Mutual Insurance Co. in Boston before enlisting in the Naval Reserve in October. She now is stationed in Washington.

Lt. Collins attended St. George's School and Yale University and was with the Eastern Airlines before being called to active duty in June of 1941. At present he also is stationed in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Thompson announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Beverly Vivian Thompson, to Mr. Donald W. Sawyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Homer H. Sawyer of Rochester, N. Y.

Miss Thompson, formerly from Minneapolis, is a graduate of the Minneapolis, Business College. She is connected with the War Production Board. Mr. Sawyer was graduated from the University of Rochester and is a member of Gamma Pi Chapter of Sigma Chi Fraternity. At present he is with the Geological Survey.

By the Way in Capital

By Beth Blaine.

For 12 years Mrs. James Salts- | man has been director of the volunteer aides who daily (really hourly) conduct throngs of sight-seers through the Washington Cathedral and its famous gardens. It was Mrs. Saltsman who organized that original group of aides, under the direction of Mr. E. N. Lewis, then editor of the Cathedral Age. Now the original nucleus has grown to an average of between 35 and 40 volunteer guides. Their work comes under the department headed by Canon Curtis Draper.

Before these volunteers are given their caps and gowns and their right to conduct these tours they must first complete a twoweek training course under Mrs. Saltsman's direction. Pads and pencils in hand, they go through the Cathedral, taking notes on the facts and story of the Cathedral, with its seven completed chapels, its masterpieces of stone and wood carving, wrought iron and stained glass, rivaling those of the Old World Like everything else, these tours have taken on a new wartime aspect, for scarcely a tour begins without an average of almost 50 per cent service men and women. So enthusiastic have been our boys and girls in the service about these tours that all through July and August special evening tours were arranged for their enjoyment. These evening tours include an organ recital on the Great Organ from 7 to 9 p.m. And volunteer aides conduct the tours just as they do by day. A great many of these service people never have been through a cathedral before. Many have seen the old cathedrals of Europe in happier days and find that our own Washington Cathedral has almost as much of interest to offer. They like especially the three new central apse windows, acclaimed among the best stained glass in the United States. They all want to see the tombs of Admiral Dewey and Woodrow Wilson. Some want to linger on after the tours just to pray in the solitude of the Cathedral. Others come before dusk to get a glimpse of the bishop's garden.

They are a remarkable group of women these aides. Some of them were original charter members 12 years ago, and still are faithful to their jobs. Mrs. Robert Kirkpatrick Noble, Mrs. Morris Marlow, Mrs. Catherine Strong, Mrs. Anna Burchard and Mrs. James Henderson, wife of the chaplain at the boys' school of the Cathedral, St. Albans, all were charter members. Other more recent aides have added the special July and August Tuesday night tours to their regular duties-Miss Madge Cooke, Miss Addie Brown, Mrs. Mary Gaylor and Mrs. Pierre Wilson. During July Mrs. Saltsman was in charge of the evening tours and, while she is on vacation, Mrs. Wilson has had charge of them for the month of August.

To say that these tours have been a success, that they have brought peace and hope to war weary men and women, and the promise of something more beautiful and better to come, you have only to see the faces of the people who have looked upon the beauty that is the Cathedral and listened to the music that is so much a part of that beauty.

of praise for her fellow workers. Their splendid co-operation, she will say, is her inspiration and is what gives her such complete satisfaction in carrying on. The club has four vice presidents, all active in doing their share. They are Mrs. George C. Marshall, wife of the Chief of Staff; Mrs. Robert P. Patterson, wife of the Undersecretary of War; Mrs. Ralph O. Bard, wife of the Undersecretary of the Navy, and Mrs. Luther Seldon. jr., whose husband, Rear Admiral Sheldon, is assistant to the chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery.

Mrs. Robert Lavender, wife of Capt. Lavender, U. S. N., holds the important office as treasurer of the club with Mrs. Oliver Spaulding, wife of Brig. Gen. Spaulding, as assistant treasurer.

The secretary of the organization is Mrs. John E. Hull, wife of Brig. Gen. Hull. To prepare herself to be of the best use possible, Mrs. Hull at the beginning of the war took a course in stenography and typing, now so valuable in her present work. Mrs. Loper Lowe, wife of Capt. Lowe, is an efficient assistant secretary.

In addition to the officers there are executive members of the board representing the Army, Navy and Marine Corps. For the Army on the board are Mrs. Henry H. Arnold, wife of Lt. Gen. Arnold; Mrs. Walter Baker, whose husband is Brig. Gen. Baker; Mrs. William H. Harrison, wife of Maj. Gen. Harrison, and Mrs. H. D. Clothing Drive For War Victims Stresses Need

Mme. Loudon, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador, will take a leading part in the forthcoming call for clothing to be sent to sufferers in the war zone. Mme. Loudon is at Nonquit, Mass., with her children and the Ambassador will join her this week to remain over Labor Day and return with them shortly after. Mme. Loudon is chairman of the Committee for the Queen Wil-

Similar calls will be made by the three other war relief agencies which form the War Relief Center, United China, Greek and Russian War Relief. The center has had headquarters at 1218 Connecticut avenue, but Wednesday will open its new home at 1528 Connecticut avenue, just above Dupont Circle. The formal opening of the new center will be held later in September when Mme. Loudon, Mrs. J. Nations fighting forces in the Southwest Pacific.

Mrs. Robert C. Kilmartin, wife of Col. Kilmartin, and Mrs. Alexander Vandegrift, wife of Lt. Gen. Vandegrift, representing the Marine Corps on the board.

Mrs. Samuel H. Karrick is the popular chairman of the House Committee.

Saturday and Sunday are the days when the most volunteers are needed at the club. On these days for the past two years, Mrs. William H. Harrison has never failed to be at her regular assignment at the reception desk. Mrs. Arthur MacArthur is another who has never missed her regular detail. Every Sunday morning about 6 o'clock she arrives to be of assistance in the canteen.

None of the services of the club are free, but the costs are so negligible that the enlisted men themselves are agreeably surprised.

One of the most appreciated services offered the men this summer has been the use of a laundry-a laundry with the simplest of equipment; three tubs, a drier, a board, an iron and the proverbial scrubbrush used by sailors. This small overcrowded room has been the basis for more gratitude than any other service. A 5-cent cake of soap is the only fee. The dining room is for the exclusive use of men in the active service. Not just snacks, but substantial meals are served there. The only men not in uniform ever seen there are the recruits who listen avidly to the service slang and sometimes laugh heartily at jokes totally over their heads. The viewpoint of the men just home from battle front is sometimes brought forth so forcibly as to startle a volunteer. Four thousand men were housed at the club in July and 9,000 meals served. As a Community War Fund agency the club has had its budget underwritten for 1943. The members of the board have pledged themselves to make the coming campaign a success.

Other volunteer organizations have been generous in the service offered the club. The American Women's Voluntary Services have given their expert advice on the canning program now underway at Holton Arms. The Red Cross volunteers have given many hours of volunteer-service. The waitresses in the canteen are JANGOS and the whole atmosphere of the place is reflected in their cheery red, white and blue uniforms. The Office of Civilian defense files have furnished volunteers when a specialized service such as a draftsman or speed typist was needed.

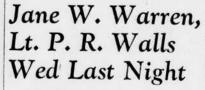

Every volunteer at the club agrees that she gets twice as much out of her experience as she puts into it, in a realization of the earnestness of the enlisted

Striking Church Wedding Held Last Evening

The Eldbrooke Methodist Church was the scene of an attractively arranged wedding last evening when Miss Harriett Elizabeth Van Deventer, daugher of Mrs. Christine Young Van Deventer, became the bride of Lt. Charles Worst McCaslin, jr., A. U. S.

Pink and white gladioluses with palms and ferns were used in the church and the Rev. E. A. Lambert officiated in candlelight. Preceding the ceremony Mr. Albert I. Fuller gave an organ recital and Mrs. Clara Young Brown sang a solo.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her uncle, Mr. Vernal R. Brown. She wore a gown of ivory satin trimmed in seed pearls and her veil was finger-tip length. She carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and bouvardia.

Mrs. Lester Smith was the matron of honor wearing a pink satin and tulle gown with a veil of pink tulle. She carried lavendar gladioluses arranged in fan shape.

Balmaccaan. Advice to the Clotheslorn

Recently, the large number of telephone calls and letters from readers have led us to believe that you would find useful a column in which we can regularly answer questions pertaining to clothes problems. This feature will run every Sunday. We ask that you address any questions you may have on clothes or clothes conservation to Mrs. Hayes, and watch this column for the answer.

"The end of the month I am going to attend a wedding in Richmond. I plan to wear a black marquisette dress with a little flower hat, but don't know what wrap to take with me. I have a black reefer, but it seems too plain for the occasion. I also have a silver fox jacket, and wondered if the silver fox wouldn't be more appropriate. Would you mind letting me know? Mrs. E. G.

Answer-Silver fox is, I think, a bit too warm to wear for any occasion the end of August, and it has always been my feeling that common sense is a good measure of good fashion. Much more comfortable-and, therefore, much more appropriate, would be your black reefer. To dress up the reefer (if you feel the need) you might prevail on your husband to buy you a corsage. There are some perfectly beautiful War Stamp corsages these days that are as pretty as they're patriotic. Or, on the other hand, you might have a lovely jeweled pin which you might wear on your lapel; if you have a pair of clips, wear one on each lapel and double your chic. * * * *

"I realize that according to the rules of etiquette the mother of a bride should never wear black. However, as I do not go to many places of entertainment, I do not feel like purchasing a gown just for this one occasion. I would prefer something that would be nice for the wedding, but that I could wear throughout the coming winter season. I had in mind a black velvet suitdress, possibly trimmed with ermine tails or colored beadwork. Would this be at all suitable, especially if I wear colored accessories?

Answer-Why do you hesitate to wear black to your daughter's wedding? Naturally, you wouldn't choose unrelieved black crepe which might look like mourning, but black velvet is a different story. Black velvet with its rich luster is always flattering, and would be especially lovely combined with ermine tails or colored beads. Add to it the corsage you'll be wearing-and you'll certainly vie with your daughter for beauty honors. There used to be an idea that black was to be worn only for mourning, but nowadays women wear whatever they feel is most becoming. If black is what is most becoming—and useful—then choose black, relying on accessories to strike a bright note.

"I am interested in buying a sports coat for fall and winter, but do not want one of the furlined coats the stores are advertising so much this year. However, I do want a good warm one. and would like to get away from the usual black and brown. I am about 5 feet 1 inch tall and onthe plump side. What color and type coat would you suggest?"

Mrs. G. P.

Answer-What you-and everybody else-want this year is an all-purpose, all-enduring coat, one that will take you anywhere any hour of the day. A Chesterfield is such a coat and they're smart as ever this year. For one of your height, the fly-front style with its long unbroken line would be a happy choice. The new officer's coat-feminine version of the overcoat your favorite lieutenant wears—is very good this year. Very new is the box coat which fastens under your chin and hangs straight; with little or no fur, it would be very becoming to you. Those are the three big coats of the year-outside of the fur-lined variety which you say you don't want. Of course, the classic shetland "boy" coat By Evelyn Hayes, is always good and would also answer your problem. All of these coats have in common the virtue of being able to swing with equal aplomb over a suit as well as your prettiest date dress. As to color, it's hard to know what to tell you without knowing your wardrobe. Neutral tweeds, of course, go with most anything. If the tweed has colored flecks or stripes which you could repeat in accessories, so much the better. Or you might prefer a monotone gray or beige; both are smart go-with-anything neutrals. If you feel you want a color, you might try gold, a lovely burnished shade that unexpectedly goes with everything. (Now think it over-doesn't it?) Green is another versatile color. As you see, your coat doesn't have to be brown or black to be practical.

"I have recently purchased an all-wool blue-gray striped suit. It is very smart in cut and looks well with my coloring. I would like a few good suggestions on what accessories go well with this type suit. Please keep in mind No. 18 coupon, plus the fact that I must use the hat and bag with other ensembles. Thank you for Deep wine red is a lovely color contrast to blue-gray. You might choose a hat, blouse (or scarf worn ascot style) and bag in wine color and your gloves in white to match the stripe. If you can buy wine shoes on your 18 coupon, fine; if you can't find any, dark brown would be just as smart, and either shoe goes well with other colors. Wine is a remarkably good mixer in a wardrobethat is, unless you have a lot of red; at the sign of red-stop! on the wine. Have you thought of that lovely new bright gingery brown? It would be very smart with your new suit, perhaps touched off by pale yellow gloves and a yellow blouse; brown shoes again. If black shoes would go to repeat the name of one to whom we have been introduced. Certain people do, perhaps, because it seems to them polite, or because it helps to fix the name in their minds.

This in part, answers the following letter: "Upon being introduced to a lieutenant in the Army, does one say 'How do you do. Lt. Jones.' or just 'How do you do?' I was always taught that it was polite to mention the other person's name. Also, is it improper for a lady to offer her form, and is it necessary, or could it be overdone, to write a thank-you note to a friend of my son who personally acted as my guide when I went to visit my son at camp? (My son was on extra duty and couldn't spend much time with me.)"

In further answer, the lieutenant should, of course, be introduced to YOU not you to the lieutenant-or to any man. Whether you offer your hand or not depends upon your own impulse.

A lady may perfectly well offer her hand to any man who has been introduced to her, but it is somewhat less usual to do this in greeting a man in uniform, especially out-of-doors where he may not remove his hat. As far as the thank-you note is concerned, this under the circumstance you describe, is not at all necessary, but if you would like to show appreciation of his courtesy, I think a carton of cigarettes would be the most welcome kind of thank-you note!

Dear Mrs. Post: A year ago when my mother died, my fiance's mother took me into their house. It was just when John was called into the service, and I have lived with his family ever

My uncle is giving me away and my sister will be my only attendant, in case this inanswer. Answer: Your uncle and aunt should send your wedding invitations and ordinarily they should, of course, give the reception. But in your personal situation—as you describe it—I can see no serious objection to doing what is obviously practical, and having the reception in the house where you have been making your home.

Dear Mrs. Post: My son has been married overseas, and is somewhere in England. His bride is an English girl. Please tell me what, under the circumstances, I might send them for a wedding present.

Answer: Money would be best. Your bank will cable it for you.

Dear Mrs. Post: "My son is at Fort X . . . 2,000 miles from home, too far to have time for his recent furlough, which he therefore spent with a big family living near the fort. He wrote me that they were all so wonderful to him it was the next best to coming home. I thought of writing his hostess a letter to thank them, but on second thought wondered if this writing 'thank you' for him could belittle a grown man.'

though a man must of course write his own "thank you" letters-and in this case probably did-it is an easily understandable impulse on your part to throw a bridge, as it were, to these friends of his by telling them what he said about being made to feel at home. Setting rules against writing to strangers quite aside, and judging instead by his description of this family to you,

Wears On vacation at Hot Springs. Mrs. Walter White looked very pretty last Sunday on her way to church. Her dark eyes and striking, prematurely gray hair made her soutache-trimmed green suit very effective and her flower bedecked tiny hat was the perfect finishing touch. Mrs. Brooks Walter, from Arlington, Va., whose husband is a major in the Army, appeared at dinner in one of the few short evening dresses seen at Hot Springs. Hers was of black marquisette. She wears her hair in a high pompadour with a low roll turned under in the back page boy effect. She tucks three huge roses in her hair when she wears her short dinner dress. Senora de Chavez, wife of the Minister-Counselor of Peru, a most attractive, vivacious person, lunched at the Casino wearing a smart print dress. At dinner later her charming cousin was very chic in dull black and gleaming jewels.

Cleverness is its own reward. so Mrs. Sydney K. Bradley deserves all the compliments she receives on her earrings which she designed herself. She admits she graces a 4-year-old Germaine Monteil black dinner suit with bright red feather earrings secured by rhinestone clips. They almost cover her ears. She is the envy of all her friends for her artistic ability as well as her smart appearance.

Service uniforms were designed to make all women look alike, but it is amazing how some of the girls have the ability to wear a uniform with the same flair which once upon a time set off a smart ensemble. Miss Nona Baldwin, a lovely, slim blond, turns all eyes in her WAVE uniform. Mrs. Virginia Whipple, whose home is in Vermont, stationed in Washington with the Coast Guard, has that perfect carriage, straight shoulders and red gold hair which sets her white uniform off to advantage. The airlines also are clever in their uniform design. TWA has adopted a neat gray-blue gabardine which all their girls love. The silver wings on the pocket is the only identification of uniform. With the removal of the wings the uniform looks like any welftailored town suit. Miss Lorraine Murphy, who has been working the "graveyard shift," can leave her office for breakfast or a shopping trip and feel perfectly well dressed for town.

Miss Camilla Motijcik, who has studied fashion design, creates the most interesting clothes for PRIDE IN OUR PRODUCT and a stress on quality have been fundamental criteria of BIGGS for 53 years. We are glad then to be able to tell you that, although a great part of our facilities are devoted to the war effort, our authentic reproductions are still of the same high quality. Their hand craftsmanship has always required the experienced skill of older cabinetmakers. The younger men whose abilities are adapted to war work are devoting their efforts to this cause, while the older craftsmen will, as always, make our Authentic Reproductions.

MEN TO LEARN AUTO MECHANICS

It's essential work, it's interesting, it pays well. And, as an automobile mechanic, you're in a field of work that's sure to be busier than ever, after the war. EARN

WHILE LEARNING Your pay starts the day you report-increases as rapidly as you become more skillful. Our Oldsmobile factory-planned training prepares you for the best-paying jobs in this well-paid field. It includes full instruction on Hydra-Matic Drive, the type of drive that will almost surely be standard equipment on many postwar cars. It lets you specialize, if you choose, on engine tune-up, en-gine overhaul, electrical service, wheel alignment and brakes, body and sheet metal work, or general chassis repairing. If you are mechanically inclined, we'll teach you how to make your skill most valuable to yourself as well as to your country at this time when auto mechanics are so essential. Only those eligible under the War Manpower Economic Stabiliza-tion Plan need apply.

DAIRY FARM. MONTGOMERY COUNTY, MD., STOCKED AND EQUIPPED. STOCKED AND EQUIPPED.

Containing 260 acres excellent soil, mostly under cultivation and in pasture, improved with a fine Colonial home approximately 150 years old, completely restored; bedrooms, 2½ baths on the second floor;
servants' quarters with bath, oil heat with air conditioning; also modern 8room house for farm manager, also 4room tenant house, 50-cow modern dairy barn, shipping to Washinston, 2 rilos, bark barn, caff barn and other necessary farm buildings; fine stream, also 5 spring streams; new fencins; all growing crops, 80 tons of hay, 30 tons of straw, ensilage corn included.

The stock consists of 47 mills 80 tons of hay, 30 tons of straw, enslinge corn included.

The stock consists of 47 milk cows, both Holstein and Jersey, purebred, resistered and accredited for banes and t.b., ranging in age from 2½ to 8 years old, the majority being between 3 and 6 years old; 6 heifers, 2 bulls—a fine herd—worth approximately $12,000.

The equipment consists of a Farmall 'M' tractor on rubber. International combine binder, hay rake, loader and mowerplows, drill, all tractor-drawn; 2-thit milking machine, 1939 Chevrolet truck and other necessary farm machinery and equipment, most of which is not over 2 years oil, except the truck.

This place is located about 10 miles from Washinston, D. C., in a fine neighborhood, and is an ideal country home and farm for a businessman.

Taking into consideration the monthly income of approximately $1,200—from the dairy alone—the value of the stock and equipment, the splendid condition of the main house and all farm bouldings, this farm is a real bargain at the price of $85,000, which the owner is asking. Who Shall Try War Guilty?

By Richard G. Massock,

The Sunday Star

Germany Enters 5th War Year With Many Parallels to 1918

By Carl C. Cranmer,

Hitler started out to win in a hurry enters its fifth year next Wednesday, with the decisive battle being fought to break the nerve of the German people.

In 106 more days it will have lasted as long as the First World War. It already is history's most catastrophic conflict in bloodshed, destruction and disruption of civilization.

The milestone is reached with the Allies still outside the mainland of Europe and with Germany enjoying many apparent military advantages over her position at this stage in 1918. Yet the signs multiply that again she is heading for collapse-perhaps with her armies yet strong. The Reich's downward spiral in the past year has been amazing.

Yet the time is critical for the Allies. They cannot consider the war won. Mistakes, miscalculations or fallings out among themselves might ruin their present prospects. The biggest question mark is the degree of co-operation which can be worked out between Russia and her chief Western Allies, Britain and the United States.

The guns were already blazing along the Polish border and the first wagonloads of this war's mountains of dead and wounded were winding back from the front when Adolf Hitler rose to address the Reichstag at 10 o'clock on Friday morning, September 1, 1939.

Complacency Is Gone. The smug, uniformed Nazi hierarchy, overstuffed with bloodless victories, complacently gave ear. They already had heard the announcement of his determination to "meet force with force." "I am putting on the uniform and I shall take it off only in victory or death," he cried in his impassioned address. "There will never again be a November, 1918, in German history." But there is no overstuffed complacency in bloody, battered Germany today. The plush has all been worn off. Hitler's uniform, if it is the same one, must be frayed and greasy.

Reports received through neutral capitals make it clear that "Hamburg bombings," the collapse of the companion Fascist regime of Mussolini in Italy, terrific losses in Russia, defeat in North Africa and Sicily, the slump in the U-boat campaign and the steady attrition of years of warfare have worn on German nerves and caused many to lose faith in victory.

The Swedish correspondent of the Stockholm Aftonbladet boldly telegraphed to his paper on August 1 that the bomb war was beginning to have effects on the population similar to the Allied blockade in 1918, and "nobody knows how long the population will be able to endure it."

The RAF alone dropped 36,700 long tons of bombs on Germany during the in that air force's palmiest days, the last three months of 1940.

Decisive Battle at Home. The Germans themselves frequently admit, in their appeals to the German people, that the decisive battle is being fought on their home front.

But there are no signs of collapse in the army. The army fought stubbornly. skillfully and well, though outnumpered. in Sicily. It fights tenaciously in Russia with a fierceness that costs the Red Army dearly.

This high efficiency of the army plus the knowledge that it still holds all Western Europe and a battleline in Russia offensive, and from then on the picture which is from 250 to 900 miles peyond | has changed completely.

NEW YORK .- The war which Adolf | the prewar German border, props up the home front.

> But once American, Brutsn and Allied armies establish a front on the mainland of Western Europe and it is seen that the army is being driven back in spite of everything, German faith may reach the point where it will crack.

> There are several striking parallels between the situation and that of July 28, 1918, the beginning of the fifth year of

On August 8, 1918, just after the beginning of the fifth year of that war, the Kaiser's armies had their "black day." That was when Marshal Foch began the great Allied offensive in Piccardy and piled offensive on offensive until he broke the German back.

August 4 "Black Day."

August 4, 1943, when the Russians took Orel and prepared the way for the recapture of Kharkov on August 23, already has been compared to August 8, 1918, but the really "black day" for the Nazis may come when British, American and Allied troops invade Europe from the sea.

On September 30, 1918, two months after the beginning of the fifth year, the Kaiser's Balkan front began to disintegrate. Bulgaria signed an armistice on Austria-Hungary followed suit a month later, asking for peace on October 30, and signing an armistice on November 4. Turkey did likewise on October 31, and 11 days later Germany herself gave up.

The collapse of Mussolini's rule makes it clear that Italy, Germany's chief ally in Europe, already is on the ropes ready for the knockout.

Now, as in 1918, Germany's other allies are wavering. Bulgaria, Rumania, Hungary and Finland all are reported warweary, anxious to switch from the Axis horse at the first opportunity. All have, significantly, felt strong enough to withstand German demands for more help.

August 8, 1918, caused Ludendorff, German chief of staff, to declare "the war must be ended," and the collapse of Bulgaria caused an appeal for an armistice to be sent to President Woodrow Wilson on October 3.

Strange Sounds From Berlin. The resignation of Mussolini has been followed by strange sounds from Berlin. On August 15 the Berlin correspondent of the Stockholm Tidningen cabled his paper that when the day of defeat draws near "Germany will have to choose between peace as an equal partner of the Soviet Union or get dictated peace terms from the Western powers which will be worse than in 1918. What do you think the Germans will choose? You can be sure the people will decide on peace with the Soviet Union."

Now it's "try Hitler for his war crimes" and the Czechoslovaks, no doubt, would like to pass sentence on him amid the ruins of their town, Lidice, tragically destroyed by the Nazis.

At any rate, leaders of the United Nations are determined this time that the war criminals—Hitler, Mussolini. Tojo and their gangs-do not die of old age without suffering a just punishment. But how is that punishment to be assessed and carried out?

A United Nations commission for the investigation of war crimes is accumulating evidence in London and compiling a list of the wanted persons of Germany, Italy and Japan. The United States commissioner, Herbert C. Pell, former Minister to Portugal and Hungary, is going to London to study the file. President Roosevelt has announced the Allied intention to punish "agents of the Axis powers who have perpetrated atrocious crimes against their innocent

Many Problems Arise. Here are some of the problems: Where will the trials take place? President Roosevelt said the culprits "shall have to stand in courts of law in politics, the nobility and the military the very countries in which they are caste. now oppressing and answer for their

Many countries will want Hitler-Russia, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, France, Norway, Belgium, Greece, the Netherlands. Ethiopia or Albania may ask for Mussolini. China and the Philippines are likely to want Tojo for what the Japanese have done there, although we may prefer to try the Japanese in this country.

When are they to be tried?

After the end to hostilities, but whether that means soon after the armistice or after the peace treaties are signed is pending question.

That is another question which cannot yet be answered. In fact, one of Bracken has had, of course, a tremendous advantage over Elmer Davis, his opposite number in this country; an advantage that is in some respects inherent in the British form of government. If the Germans got rid of Hitler and overthrew Naziism for a "military democracy," a government led by officers and high functionaries, and agreed to return to Russia all the territories she possessed in 1914, there could be no reason why the Russians should continue to

On and above this number there is a vague estimate of an additional 20,000,000 persons in the occupied areas who have been killed or died of mined to exterminate Hitler and the

Should the Germans be willing to overthrow their present regime and agree to withdraw to their 1914 borders there seems to be no reason to believe that Stalin, who has not signed the Casablanca protocol and has never indorsed the "unconditional surrender" policy of his Allies, would hesitate to obtain the most advantageous peace he can possibly obtain for his country.

How the views of the Russian government have changed in the last 12 months in regard to the Germans is interesting. Samples of posters used by Soviet propaganda in 1941 and 1942 told the Russian people that there is no good German except a dead German. They urged war of extermination of the German race and the dismemberment of the Reich. Nazis, bourgeois and Socialists were put in the same basket; they were all earmarked for extermination.

The propaganda pamphlets of 1943 are different. Taking their cue from Stalin himself, they now tell the Russians that the Germans are good people who have always been friendly toward the Russians except in cases when misguided leaders turned them against their neighbors.

Economically Interdependent.

It is emphasized that German Army officers helped organize the Russian armies and some the armament factories in the days before the advent of the Nazi monster Hitler. The fact that the Germans and the Russians are economically interdependent also is brought out with a good deal of emphasis. Moreover, it is pointed out that Germany has never attempted to prevent Russia from obtaining an outlet to the warm seas.

Much is being made of the descendant of Prince Otto Bismarck, the iron chancellor of the Reich, who is now heading the Free Germany Committee and breadcasts several times a week to the German Army officers. He invites them in the name of the Russian government to overthrow Hitler and organize themselves into a military democracy in order to end the war and come to terms with

There is little appeal from Moscow to the rank and file of the German Army inciting the men to mutiny as was the case in 1918. On the contrary, they are told that the German armies, led by their rightful leaders, must remain a powerful organization to work for the organization of new Europe. There is no communistic ideology in any of the Russian or Free Germany Committee broadcasts. The accent is now on discipline, law and order, after Hitler and his cohorts have been eliminated from the German scene.

The political and diplomatic activities of Moscow are now confined to telling us war while the Allies have suffered inconsequential losses; that we formally promised her a second front in Western Europe this year and they want us to keep our pledge. The Russian armies are advancing toward the Dnieper in a grand style.

Proper Moment to Strike.

Consequently, it is the proper moment to strike at the Germans. The Russians told us a few months ago at the food conference at Hot Springs, Va., that she could not afford another winter campaign unless we were prepared to feed her entire population and not the army alone. This is obviously impossible. Moscow is leaving us to draw the necessary conclusions from the failure of the Allies to synchronize their strategy to

Associated Press Writer. Some day there will be no more petroleum.

But how soon? And what then? These two questions gain increasing attention in Washington.

The world can't "continue to rip and roar through an endless golden age of gasoline," says Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, one of those who advocate doing something now about the Nation's dwindling oil.

He recently told a Senate committee that America's proved oil reserves are about 20 billion barrels. At the present rate of consumption this would last 14 or 15 years. Now those are known, proved reserves -undoubtedly there's more oil still actually under these United States.

But new discoveries are falling off. Some still are being made, of course, but not as fast as oil is being used, and the new finds aren't as big as they used to be. The slower rate of discovery is disturb-scientific than it used to be. Oil exploration and development will become increasingly costly, oilmen declare, as present fields become exhausted. Costs Will Rise.

ing because oil prospecting is far more

William B. Heroy, director of reserves for the Petroleum Administration for War, declares:

"The public and the industry should realize that the bonanza days of oil discovery, for the most part, belong to his-In any case, it appears that costs will go up, forcing the Nation to turn to other sources of motor fuel. Today all other sources are in such early stage of development or are so remote and difficult to reach that they can't compete on a cost basis with gasoline derived from petroleum. These other sources are oil shales, tar sands, synthetic gasoline from coal or lignite (low-grade coal) and alcohol.

Alcohol, as a substitute for gasoline, is not only more expensive to produce at present, but lacks certain qualities for use in present-day combustion engines The drift seems to be toward finding new ways of making the old standbygasoline. Senator O'Mahoney, Democrat, Wyoming, has introduced a bill in Congress to authorize construction and operation of demonstration (pilot) plants on a commercial scale to produce gasoline from oil shale and coal.

Several years ago the Government

experimented with distilling oil shale and found that it probably could not compete with production of gasoline from crude oil until the price of a barrel of crude reached $5. It is now about $1.

The big shale deposits are in the Rocky Mountain States and would take much heavy equipment to exploit. Nevertheless, locked in this shale are some 92,000,000,000 (billions) estimated barrels of crude oil-a reserve for 65 years at this country's present rate of consumption. "We should not have waited until a war was upon us to begin seriously the development of synthetic fuels," says

Secretary Ickes, "but since we did that very thing, I submit that now it is high time to get started on an adequate scale." Ickes says this country can count on about three trillion tons of coal within its borders. This is enough, he says, to provide a billion and a half gallons of synthetic gasoline yearly for a thousand years-and still leave enough coal for all present-day purposes. The Bureau of Mines has produced synthetic gasoline from coal on a laboratory scale, and Ickes says it has proved that most American coal and lignites needed now, he says, is to expand experiments to a commercial scale. There are two processes of getting gasoline from coal.

The first, called the Bergius or direct hydrogenation process, uses very high pressure and heat to change coal over into crude oil which then is distilled into gasoline and other petroleum products. Of the two, this process yields more and better gasoline, but requires much heavy machinery.

The second method, called the Fischer-Tropsch process, uses steam to combine with coal into a water-gas which is then catalyzed into gasoline, diesel oil, liquifiable gases and paraffin. The Germans are using this indirect process extensively. It can be installed in relatively small units, and also wifl make gasoline out of natural gas. The Government says costs are low enough so it probably could compete with gasoline from crude oil with crude prices at $2 a barrel. Government experts say much research has to be done to determine the best types of coal and gas to work with. The world's biggest known deposit of crude oil lies diffused in the tar sands of Northern Canada. Various estimates place it at somewhere between 100 and 250 billion barrels. The Canadians have been working on it, but it lies in wilderness so far from transportation that the problem of cost is a big one. Might Return to Steam.

Unquestionably, as new ways of getting gasoline out of non-petroleum sources are developed, such marginal deposits will be tapped for the black gold that once oozed out on stagnant creeks and gushed from the ground in mighty geysers. There also is the possibility that new and different motors may be invented which might use other, simpler, perhaps vegetable-and therefore replaceable-fuels.

Charcoal generators are used for automobiles in countries where gasoline is nonexistent, but charcoal gas is a weak sister compared with gasoline.

With thermostatic controls now available, a return of the old steam-powered automobile is conceivable.

Meanwhile, reliance upon the internalcombustion engine more or less marries us to gasoline or a fuel very much like it.

Supply is going to be a growing problem until some one comes along and harnesses the sun's energy and figures out a means of storing it, or collars the can be used for this purpose. What is atom and hitches it to a driveshaft.

London's Westminster section. In 1929 Bracken was first elected to Parliament as a Conservative from North Paddington. His constituency was made up of middle-class and lower-class Londoners and he won his victory in a hotly contested election. He could then join his great friend and patron, Winston Churchill on the opposition back benches. The note he sounded when he spoke was that of Churchill-a warning to sleeping Britain. It is difficult to recall the fantastic reality of that time. When Hitler marched into Austria, Churchill, in a speech to the House, with Bracken at his side, appealed for a stronger tie with the League of Nations. "You will.

laugh at this," Churchill said, and the House laughed. The two men were together a great deal. Bracken accompanied Churchill to America on at least one visit and he has been here several times on his own. On each occasion he has made many American friends with the ready Irish charm and the quick speech that are his. When Churchill was made First Lord of the Admiralty in the cabinet of Neville Chamberlain during the months of the phony war, Bracken was his parliamentary private secretary. This meant that he carried his political burdens for him. When Chamberlain fell with the collapse of all his makeshift policies, and Churchill became Prime Minister, Bracken continued to serve him in Parliament. He was an invaluable aid in those trying and painful months when the Luftwaffe ranged over Britain, bombing and burning. His duties were not by any means confined to politics or Parliament. In a very real sense he was Churchill's chief lieutenant. A Cheerful Madhouse.

First under Chamberlain and later under Churchill, the Ministry of Information was sound and fury signifying very little. The first Minister of Information, Lord MacMillan, was repeatedly attacked in the press both for what he did and did not do. This phase was caricatured by Evelyn Waugh in a puckish novel called "Put Out More Flags," in which the ministry is described as a cheerful madhouse run by the inmates.

MacMillan was followed by the inept Alfred Duff Cooper, who fared but little better. Duff Cooper was finally sent out to preside over the liquidation of Singapore and it became necessary to find a new victim for the Ministry of Informa-

Before the culprits can be brought to trial, they must, of course, be caught. Germany, after World War I, refused to surrender those demanded by the land, which sheltered them. Holland refused to extradite Kaiser Wilhelm II, although his surrender for trial was

Finish the Playgrounds

The fact that Commissioner Mason has been successful in obtaining a third hearing before the Facilities Review Committee of the War Production Board on completion of ten playground projects for the District should mean more than a mere opportunity to reargue the need represented in these recreational areas. The committee's willingness to reopen the case would seem to indicate a receptive frame of mind.

The first hearing, in December of last year, resulted from stop orders issued from WPB at a time when the District was barely getting started on construction of twenty-four recreation projects, made possible by Lanham Act funds of about $700,000. The Facilities Review Committee contended that the equipment used in preparing the areas could better be used in something more directly concerned with the war effort. The committee did not say how or where, however, and much of the equipment and labor remained idle.

In January of this year Commissioner Mason was able to obtain a second hearing and the committee decided, a month later, that fourteen of the twenty-four recreational areas could be completed. These areas, about 97 per cent complete, were to replace comparable facilities lost through new Government construction, parking areas, storage and antiaircraft installations. The ten areas which remained uncompleted were to accommodate new dormitory projects, defense home construction, population increases and new

With a greatly increased population, the District is still behind in the provision of recreational facilities, having lost more than it has playgrounds requires no essential material. It is mainly drainage, grading, sodding and hard surfacing. Unless the Facilities Review Committee is in a position to show that equipment and labor used in such work are needed immediately and can be used somewhere else-which was not the case when the work was stopped-permission should be given to complete the work now. No one wants to hold up essential war work. But it never has been shown that completion of these areas would

City Growth

The importance of intelligent planning for the postwar period is indicated by the recent estimate of the Bureau of the Census that on March 1 last the population of Metropolitan Washington was 1,181,347. That means that the size of the Nation's Capital-not in geography but in the number of human beings involved-is doubling. By the end of the year, it is probable that several hundred thousand additional newcomers will have arrived, and there is every reason to believe that many of them intend to stay permanently. The prevailing "drift" is toward the District of Columbia, and it is likely to continue to run in that direction for a long time. A similar observation doubtless should be made with regard to Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles and perhaps Philadelphia. New York seems to be the only population center above the million mark currently decreasing-and the military visitors to Manhattan compensate for most if not all of that loss.

Many questions are raised by what the Census Bureau describes as "an extensive migration" to Norfolk, Portsmouth and Newport News, where increases of 42.2 per cent are reported, and Charleston, S. C.; Columbus, Ga.; Corpus Christi, Tex.; Galveston, Tex.; Mobile, Ala.; San Antonio, Tex.; San Diego, Calif., and Wichita, Kans., in each of which large gains have occurred. A clue to the nature of these developments is furnished by the fact that declines are recorded for Atlantic City, N. J.; Lancaster, Pa.: Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and Sloux City, Iowa. Emergency activity dating back to the start of the war in September, 1939, obviously is a magnet drawing together vast crowds of citizens who in normal times are scattered over the country on farms and in villages and little towns.

Problems of transportation, housing, clothing, feeding and civic administration, created by mass movements, generally come into being much more rapidly than solutions for them can be provided. But it does not help to imagine that the eventual restoration of peace in the world will result in the prompt return of all the "transients" to their former homes and conditions of life. The statesmanlike point of view in the circumstances is expressed by tion. First of the group is one penned intended effect.

the Diocese of Washington and a keen student of social issues, who recently said: "We must begin to realize that Washington is going to be twice as big a city as it was before Pearl Harbor."

Two Postwar Views

Two members of the Republican Postwar Advisory Council, soon to meet on Mackinac Island to write GOP policies, have declared their opposition to the formation of any world "supergovernment." They are Senator Taft of Ohio and Clarence Buddington Kelland, Republican national committeeman for Arizona and former director of publicity for that committee. This does not mean, however, that Senator Taft and Mr. Kelland are opposed to measures of international co-operation to maintain peace after the war. On the contrary, both expressed a hope that such measures may be successfully taken.

An underlying and basic idea put forward by both the Ohio Senator and the Arizona committeeman is that the United States must at all times be prepared to guard its own safety. Mr. Taft, addressing the American Bar Association, offered a seven-point program, including a proposal that "we must provide an Army, Navy and air force for our defense sufficiently strong to remove from the mind of any nation the idea that it can successfully attack us."

Mr. Kelland was as strong and even more specific in his development of the proposal that this country must, at least for a long time to come, be impregnable to attack and prepared to fight for peace, if necessary. "Our Nation must build and maintain a fleet the most powerful in the world. Not a two-ocean Navy, but a five-ocean Navy. It must provide itself with an air force so numerous and efficient as to stand alone. It must continue a standing Army of sufficient size and training.' He insisted that we must ring the United States with defenses-outlying bases-located in both the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans. In other words, that the United States must insist upon retaining many, if not all, of the bases which it has constructed and is now using in the prosecution of the present war.

After the last war the United States led the way toward a program of limited armaments-with the idea that ultimately almost complete disarmament might prevail. It scuttled a huge Navy program. It failed to provide for universal military training for its young men or to maintain a standing Army of sufficient size. And at the same time it remained outside of the one agency which might have done something to preserve peace—the League of Nations. This country cannot afford such a gamble in the future. The cost in blood and treasure, if the gamble fails, as did the last one, is too great. The American people and their Government, when the war has been won, must be watchful to see that insidious propaganda and the pleas of well-meaning, but impractical, persons do not again impair our defenses. The demand that expenses for armament be cut to the bone may be expected from a tax-ridden people. And the demand that this country again take the lead in a disarmament race will be heard from many quarters.

It is proper and feasible that the United States play its part in an international effort to maintain peace. But, pending real assurance of peace, it would be entirely improper and indefensible if this country again were to throw away its means of self-defense.

War Covers

Literally thousands of American families now are receiving from members serving overseas letters contained in what philatelists call "war covers." All of these envelopes are interesting because of the markings which they bear. Some of them undoubtedly will have considerable intrinsic value in years to come. None should be discarded for want of appreciation of their significance. The Reverend Mr. William H. Tower of Montclair, New Jersey, discusses the subject in a monograph recently published by Harry L. Lindquist. "So wide and varied is the possible range of war covers," he says, "that it would take a large album to hold even a small part of them. A single war may be productive of so many as to make it well-nigh impossible to form a truly representative showing for even that one. He who starts out to collect along this line must be prepared to have many gaps in his collection, but the interest of those he has will more than compensate for those he lacks." A letter of the Thirty Years' War, dated 1634 and addressed to "The Right Honorable my singular good Lord Thomas Lord Fairfax" is the earliest "item" in Mr. Tower's accumulation. The second is an associated cover, 1643, inscribed to Lord Fairfax as commander of the parliamentary forces in the North of England-a souvenir of the struggle between Cromwell and Charles I. Relating to the Seven Years' War, a communication from a soldier in the French Army of the Lower Rhine with headquarters at Halberstadt was written in 1757. Two years earlier Robert H. Morris, Governor of Pennsylvania, sent to Benjamin Franklin a request to secure forage and wagons for the use of General Braddock in his expedition against Fort Duquesne-a document which "Poor Richard" indorsed with a signature precious to any collector. Additional war covers described by Mr. Tower illustrate the development and progress of the American Revolu-

the Rev. Clyde Brown, missioner of by John Ross, commissary of the Pennsylvania militia, to Alexander Hamilton. Others are: A letter from the British general, Thomas Gage, to Samuel Ward, Governor of Rhode Island; a letter from the American general, Lord Stirling, to General Hanks, and a letter to Patrick Henry from S. Huntington, president of the Continental Congress.

Mr. Tower's collection embraces covers of the French Revolution, the Napoleonic Wars, the War of 1812, the War with Mexico, the War Between the States, the Crimean War. the Franco-Prussian War, the Spanish-American War, the Boxer Rebellion, the Russo-Japanese War, the Balkan Wars, the First World War and many other conflicts.

Not every person could bring together so fascinating an assembly of military mail, but any individual might gather at least a few pieces of durable importance. There are many reasons for saving soldiers' letters, not the least of which is that to which Mr. Tower and other philatelists are devoted.

Habeas Corpus Row

The Hawaiian habeas corpus controversy between a Federal judge and the Army has certain aspects that border on the ludicrous. But it also involves questions which are of very real concern in a free country. As matters stand today, Federal Judge Delbert Metzger has assessed a $5,000 fine against Lieutenant General Robert C. Richardson, jr., for ignoring a writ of habeas corpus calling upon him to produce two American citizens of German descent who are being held by the Army. General Richardson, as commanding general of the Army's Hawaiian Department, has countered by issuing a military order forbidding any further action on the case, fining any violator $5,000 and providing that a military court may try any judge violating the order. Thus, we have the spectacle of the judge defying the general, and the general defying the judge, with neither apparently able to do much about it.

There is more involved, however, than a clash of wills between the two men. The writ of habeas corpus is one of the fundamental safeguards of personal liberty, since its function is to guarantee an accused man his day in court. Even in time of war it should not be lightly suspended.

In this instance the two prisoners. American citizens, have been held incommunicado by the Army since the bombing of Pearl Harbor. It appears that no charges have been brought against them and no trial has been held during the nearly two years that they have been in custody. This, on its face, raises a suggestion that the Army's action is highhanded, to say the least, especially in view of the fact that compliance with the writ would do no more than assure a hearing to determine the legality of the detention of the prisoners. Presumably, if the Army could show good cause for their arrest, they would be returned to prison.

But there are two points to be considered in this respect. First, for military reasons, the Army might be unable to disclose in open court its grounds for holding the men. And second, even though the grounds are good, a civilian judge might decide to release the prisoners. This would put the Army in the position of being responsible for the defense of Hawaii. but unable to control the movements of individuals whom it regards as dangerous. In other words, this essentially is a question of whose judgment should prevail in a vital military outpost-that of the military or the civilian authorities. There is also a legal question as to whether the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus has not been rescinded, at least by implication. But on this score the weight of the evidence seems to be on the side of the Army.

It is always possible in a matter of this kind that a particular case may be a first step toward a wholesale invasion of civilian rights by the military. But that has not happened at this time, and in this connection it may be pertinent to recall that there was a great hue and cry when President Lincoln suspended the writ of habeas corpus during the Civil War. Yet the record does not show that this led to any substantial or lasting impairment of the constitutional rights of the citizens.

Penalties for Strikes

In calling for the outlawing of strikes in vital industries for the duration of the war, the American Bar Association merely echoes the sentiment of a very large majority of the people of this country.

These strikes, as the association has said, are "completely indefensible." But, in a measure, they are being tolerated, and the lawyers' organization is on sound ground in calling for governmental action which will result in effective corrective steps, including "the immediate prosecution" of those engaged in strikes. In this latter respect there have been indications of a reluctance to prosecute parties responsible for unlawful strikes. A prosecution is under way against some offenders in the recent coal strike, and this is commendable. But by and large, particularly in the case of the so-called quickie strikes, the disposition apparently has been to get the strikers back to work and then to forget about the penalties which, in certain circumstances, now are provided by law. Undoubtedly, there is an argument to be made in support of this attitude. But the important fact remains that penalties provided in the case of unlawful strikes, if not applied, will soon cease to have any part of their

Hull 'Victory' Suggests Changes of Policy

By Owen L. Scott.

The few New Dealers who remain in important positions in Washington are increasingly uncomfortable. They find that their ideas carry less and less weight at the White House. President Roosevelt appears to this group of New Deal officials to be completing a wide swing to the right. It is expected that after this swing there will be little room at the top for those with unorthodox ideas of either domestic or world reform.

In the latest of his moves the Chief Executive greatly has strengthened the hand of Cordell Hull as Secretary of State. Mr. Hull now is undisputed boss of the department that, more than any other, will shape the basis for meace. This means that grandiose ideas for change will not receive support from the agency that will be charged with formulating details of policy. The Secretary of State is anything but a New Dealer.

The new recognition that the White House is extending to Mr. Hull follows the official break between Mr. Roosevelt and Vice President Henry Wallace. Mr. Wallace expresses the New Deal view of the shape that the postwar world should take. The President now has taken from Mr. Wallace any official power that he may have had to interfere with Mr. Hull. It likewise is known that Mr. Hull criticized some of the public expressions that Sumner Welles had made. The Secretary of State felt that those expressions of the Undersecretary went too far in the direction of radicalism.

All of this means that in the field of foreign policy, President Roosevelt at this juncture is going along with Winston Churchill and Mr. Hull, men whose ideas are very conservative.

That is the most important of the recent indications of the President's attitude. There are a number of other indications that account for the acute discomfort of the New Deal group. These indications, too, tend to multiply rather than to diminish as time goes by.

President Favors Conservatives. Mr. Roosevelt placed Leo Crowley at the head of the new Office of Economic Warfare. Mr. Crowley rapidly is transforming what had been, under Vice President Wallace and Milo Perkins, a haven for New Dealers and an outlet for expression of New Deal ideas. OEW is being geared very closely to the line of policy laid down by Mr. Hull. At the same time, a businessman, Chester Bowles, is taking over actual operation of the Office of Price Administration and is bringing businessmen to Washington to fill key positions that had been filled by New Dealers.

A group of Treasury Department officials have been promoting some fancy ideas about taxation that irritated the conservatives in Congress. Mr. Roosevelt approved when Judge Fred Vinson, as head of the Office of Economic Stabilization, told the Treasury officials to forget their ideas and to get busy trying to work out tax plans that Congress would accept.

The President earlier had made little real effort to save the Farm Security Administration in which Mrs. Roosevelt was deeply interested. He did not save his National Resources Planning Board. He has done little more than make suggestions about social security law change. He has given to Justice James F. Byrnes, as head of the Office of War Mobilization, very broad powers over domestic policy. Justice Byrnes is a Southern conservative.

Officials who should know say that there are two objectives that the President is seeking by his present and most prolonged swing to the right.

Political Implications Suggested. The first of these objectives is to obtain assurance of a fourth nomination in 1944, if that appears desirable as nearly everybody here assumes that it will. The President is making a very obvious appeal to the Southern Democrats who are so powerful within the party and within Congress as well. Almost all of them are conservatives. They are men of long experience in national conventions and their support will assure that a 1944 nomination will not be the work of amateurs, as was that in 1940. The second of Mr. Roosevelt's objectives is to secure in Congress a base of votes that will assure this country's acceptance of the foreign policy and the peace policy that now is to be so vital. The President feels that any policy with which Cordell Hull agrees will carry great weight in Congress and with the country. The conservative group will be far more likely to go along with a Hullindorsed policy than with a policy that might carry New Deal indorsement.

It is notable that both in Great Britain and here the policy that is likely to govern when war stops almost surely will be a conservative policy. This means that probably there will be a minimum of interference with the property rights and lines of trade such as prevailed in the prewar period. Emphasis will be upon restoring as much as possible of the status quo with a minimum of revolutionary change. The line of this policy already is revealed in North Africa and

The New Deal group doubts that the world again can be put together on anything resembling its old lines. This group is inclining to the idea that once the war ends and vast problems of re-employment and demobilization are revealed, Mr. Roosevelt again can swing to the left with public backing. They think that their present discomfort then may pass as the President seeks ideas for meeting difficulties that they see ahead.

Old Sol Overdoing It From the Des Molnes Register.

This is heresy! According to research pathologists of the University of California, California sunshine is too bright! At last one of the superlatives of a land in which superlatives are commonplace has backfired. These researchers have discovered, to their dismay, that the strong California sunlight beating down on green tomatoes destroys the chlorophyll in the thin-walled surface cells of the fruit.

As a consequence of this destructive action of the sunlight, the mature fruit develops a discoloration known as "gray wall" which seriously impairs the marketability of the tomatoes.

When the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce learns of this, we confidently expect that Old Sol in the future will wear goggles while looking down on California truck gardens.

THE ODDS NOT OVERWHELMING

By the Very Rev. Lawrence J. Shehan, S. T. D. Pastor of St. Patrick's Church.

"By the grace of God I am what I am and His grace in me has not been fruitless." I Corinthians. xv.10. From the Epistle of Sun-day, August 29, XI after Pentecost.

What was it in Paul that rendered him such an effective instrument of the grace of God? If we study his personality, I believe we shall find two things in particular which must have rendered him acceptable as God's "chosen vessel": his deep unswerving conviction concerning the central truths of christianity and his unshakable determination to fulfill those truths in himself and to carry them to his fellowmen. For Paul knew no half-way measures. His soul could not rest until his inner convictions found their full expression in action.

One of the basic reasons for the apparent failure of christianity in the world today is the fact that so many who claim the name of Christians are wanting in those deep convictions which are essential to Christian faith. The whole trend of the modern world has been toward the undermining of those convictions. It has been unceasingly dinned into the ears of the present-day world that man is but a material animal, that spiritual truths and moral principles are but figments of his imagination, that the distinction between good and evil really does not exist. With all the elaborate apparatus and impressive argument of modern science the spiritual truths verifiable in every human life have been obscured and denied and explained away. Often subtly and sometimes with crude but telling boldness, the historic facts on which the Christan faith is founded have been attacked. The result has been that in many minds Christian faith, when not completely destroyed, has been weakened and blurred. And now we are asked why it is that the Christian faith and the grace of God have remained so comparatively fruitless in our

It has required the presence of moral evil, in its most obvious form of cruelty and injustice aimed at the destruction of nations and the enslavement of the human race, to bring many of us back to the realization of the distinction between good and evil, of the essential dignity of the human individual, of the existence of spiritual and moral principles on which rests the welfare of the human race. But who will say that this work has been completed? When the present crisis is past, let us hope that men still will remember the eternal truths and the indestructable value of the principles for which they now fight.

But before the Christian spirit can become fully operative it will be necessary to re-establish in the minds of men

the great historic truths upon which the Christian faith has been founded. To use the words of today's epistle, "I recall to your mind the gospel that I preached to you wherein also you stand . . that Christ died for our sins, that He rose again on the third day . . . that he appeared to Cephas . . . to the eleven . . . that He was seen by more than five hundred brethren at one time . . ." The truth of Christ's divinity, His divine authority and His right to be our spiritual leader—it is only through the conviction of these truths that the Christian spirit can live and operate as an effective force. Many of us who have held to the truth of the central facts and the essential principles of christianity have been deterred by the seemingly overwhelming odds with which we were confronted. When men were clamoring for material wealth and pleasure and power, when materialism was heaping up undreamedof wealth and promising unlimited gratification, how could we hope to bring home to men spiritual and moral principles that lay beyond the reach of the microscope, the X-ray and the scalpel? But now that it has been made so painfully evident to all that material things can minister only to man's body, but that man's happiness depends essentially on the things of the spirit-on justice and truth and charity-is there not reason for those who hold to the Christian faith to renew themselves in the firm determination to proclaim the Christian truth in all its spiritual beauty and moral strength?

Paul and his associates faced difficulties greater by far than those which confront us, with resources immeasurably more limited. With the conviction of a Paul and with his unshakeable determination, the grace of God in us too, will not remain without fruit.

The Senate amendment was to strike out all after the "enacting style," where now the expression used is "after the enacting clause," and to insert -defining "the counties of Philadelphia. Chester and Bucks in Pennsylvania, including the town of Germantown, and such part of the northern liberties of the city of Philadelphia as are not excepted by the Act of Cession proposed by the State Legislature." Two days later. on September 28, the House agreed to the Senate amendment, adding thereto: "And provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect the operation of the laws of Pennsyvania within the district ceded and accepted until Congress shall otherwise provide by law." This House action was also attested by John Beckley, clerk. Which seemed to have pretty well decided the question that the National Capital, which President Washington called "the Federal City." would be located in Pennsylvania. But the House amendment was never acted upon by the Senate. The first session of the First Congress adjourned the following day. Then as soon as the next session met-some one of influence had been at work-an act was passed authorizing the location of the seat of Government of the United States on the banks of the Potomac instead of the banks of the Susquehannah. These documents are on real rag paper watermarked with a fleur-de-lis, surmounted by a crown, and the manufacturer's name, C. Patch.

The "confidential bill" declaring "war between Great Britain and her dependencies and the United States and their territories" is an interesting exhibit in the House clerk's office. The Senate amended the measure by striking out the words "Great Britain and her dependencies" and inserting "the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the dependencies thereof." The title of the act was changed to conform with the text. The House concurred June 18 1812, and the attest was by Patrick Magruder, clerk, who had previously served one term in Congress, resigned to serve as clerk for eight years, was then librarian of Congress for eight years until his resignation. The heading of this measure was the same as is employed today. The paper is watermarked "C. Wilmott, 1809."

Many persons in the District and Maryland have often wondered at seeing stone markers engraven with the letters "L C." As a matter of fact there is such a stone in front of the residence of H. Newlin Megill, acting clerk of the House. In his office Mr. Megill has the original act establishing the Levy Courts in Washington County, whose area is marked by the "L C" stones. It was passed by the Senate April 15, 1812, the House disagreed on May 29, 1812, and you see on the streets haven't yet heard further action was postponed until December.

authorities, in addition "to any tripartite range with Soviet Russia," and again when it was stated that full reports of the decisions so far as they affect the war against Germany and Italy "will be furnished" to the Soviet government. After this communique had been released the President and the Prime Minister talked with newspapermen for 35 minutes. Throughout that discussion, so far as published reports show, there was but one cordial reference to Russia. And that came in a sentence in which Mr. Churchill spoke-not for quotation-of the superb exertions of the Russian ally.

Unofficial Explanation Made.

Standing alone, this might not seem to be of any particular significance. Emphasis was put on the point that "the military discussions of the chiefs of staff turned very largely upon the war against Japan," with whom Russia is at peace. And the fact that the Pacific phase of the war loomed prominently in the discussions was advanced, unofficially, as a possible explanation of the failure of Premier Stalin to attend the conference or to send a representative.

But the war with Japan also figured prominently in the discussions at the Casablanca meeting, and Russia was at peace with Japan at that time. Yet the tone of the Casablanca communique was vastly different from that issued a

Quebec. As to the scope of the Casablanca discussions, the communique said: "The entire field of the war was surveyed, theater by theater throughout the world. and all resources were marshaled for a more intense prosecution of the war by land, sea and air." Complete agreement was reached on the conduct of the campaigns of 1943 against "Germany, Italy and Japan." There was no suggestion, however, that Stalin had staved away because Russia was not at war with Japan. On the contrary, the communique said: "Premier Stalin was cordially invited to meet the President and Prime Minister, in which case the meeting would have been held very much farther to the East. He was unable to leave Russia at this time on account of the great offensive which he himself as commander in chief is directing." Russia's military position was more critical then than it is now, but the Casablanca communique contained no hint that

Contrast at Casablanca.

Stalin stayed away for fear of offending

And what about the Soviet military effort? This is what the Casablanca communique had to say on that point: "The President and Prime Minister realize up to the full the enormous weight of the war which Russia is successfully bearing along her whole front, and their prime object has been to draw as much weight as possible off the Russian armies by engaging the enemy as heavily as possible at the best selected points." It would be difficult to find any sharper contrast than that between this language and the chilly phrases of the Quebec statement.

Finally, at Casablanca it was announced that Premier Stalin "has been" fully informed of the military proposals. At Quebec the statement was that full reports "will be" furnished the Soviet government.

It is worth while, perhaps, to repeat that any attempt to read too much significance into what is said on one occasion, or left unsaid on another, can lead to conclusions which may be very far afield from the true facts. But, granting this, it is not reasonable to suppose that the striking change of tone from Casablanca to Quebec is entirely lacking in significance.

Important communiques like these are drafted with great care, and it is most unlikely that the choice of language at Quebec was made without careful reference to what had been said seven months earlier at Casablanca. And if this be so-if the Quebec statement was a considered utterance made in the light of what had gone before—there is ample basis for legitimate wonder as to what has brought about this change.

It is at this point, however, that one runs into a blank wall. Because the facts are not available, speculation becomes dangerous, and it is best to be content with the hope that the reasons for our change of tone toward Russia, whatever they may be, will not lead to any more serious consquences.

Theory and Practice From the Kingston Whig-Standard.

A doctor in London, Ontario, says that rationing will prove a boon to Canadians and should be continued after the war. As far as health is concerned, the good doctor may be right, but we shudder to think of what would happen to the government trying to put his theory into practice.

End of Fourth Year of War Finds Badly Battered Axis Armies Now on Defensive

In the Pacific, the Japs held Kiska and Attu in the Aleutians. In the Southwest Pacific, they held most of the * Solomons. Now as the fifth year is about to start, the Germans, who were smashed at Stalingrad, have been pushed farther back toward their own borders than at any time since they started their drive against Russia. They have lost their hold on Maikop-in fact, have been driven out of the Caucasus save for one small force still holding out on the Kuban Peninsula and now in jeopardy as the Red armies drive the Nazis back toward the Dnieper River. Moscow is no longer in danger. Leningrad has been restored to full communication with the

All of North Africa has been lost, Sicily is in Allied hands and the fall of Italy apparently waits only on the start of an invasion. Mussolini is the first of the trio of tyrants to go.

Industry Heavily Pounded.

Germany's industry has been given the most terrific pounding of history as the Allies have taken command of the air over Europe. Hamburg is a dead city. Berlin is in a fair way to become the same, as the population in panic has taken to the woods to escape the relentless death which is raining down from the skies.

A great part of Germany's hydroelectric power has been wiped out by the bombing of the Eder and Moehne dams which caused untold destruction throughout the Ruhr Valley as raging floods from the unleashed impounded waters of the dams swept everything before them. Essen, Duesseldorf, Dortmund, Gelsenkirchen, Muenich, Ludwigshaven, in fact, almost the complete list of Germany's manufacturing centers have been blasted to the point that her war production has been fatally reduced.

Revolt is growing in the seething occupied countries. Denmark, smallest of them all, is now torn with sabotage and resistance. In Yugoslavia it is reported that the Italian troops are selling their guns and ammunition to the Chetniks. Everywhere the patriots have been warned by Gen. Eisenhower to stand ready to strike when the word comes that the zero hour has arrived. Sweden, not in the war, but serving as a path over which supplies and men poured into occupiel Norway, has suddenly banned further such traffic. Rumania, Hungary and Bulgaria, whose King, Boris, was reported yesterday to have died, have refused Nazi demands for more assistance against Russia, and the benevolent neutrality of the Turks shows signs of even stronger leanings toward the Allies.

Japs' Power Reduced.

In the Pacific, the Japs have been driven out of the Aleutians. They have lost New Georgia Island, key to the rest of the Solomons, and Kolombangara and Bougainville are now in jeopardy as is Rabaul on New Britain. Salamaua, one of the last remaining strong points on New Guinea still held by the Japs, is faced with capture at almost any moment. But most of all the Japs have lost by far the greater part of the destroyer and cruiser strength they had at the time of Pearl Harbor and have paid for their aerial fighting in a ratio which seems now to run consistently at 10 to 1 or better against them. As a striking power, the Japs are badly weakened, while American naval strength has grown to the point that Secretary of the Navy Knox revealed that it is almost twice what it was a year ago.

That is the record which Hitler must review before he can close the books for the year. Only overconfidence and slackened effort by the Allies on the fighting fronts, the production fronts and the civilian fronts can afford Hitler any opportunity in the future to dip into the black ink while posting facts in his ledger of war.

European Front

Berlin, far inland from the Ruhr Valley in which Goering had promised no Allied bomb would fall, last week received the worst bombing of any capital in all the warring countries.

Monday night RAF squadrons dropped 1.800 long tons of bombs, including the huge 2-ton block-busters and thousands of incendiaries which left the German capital obscured by clouds of smoke rushing three miles into the air from four square miles of completely smashed buildings largely located in the center of the city. It is probable that about 700 planes were in the raid, of which 58

Returning flyers declared that they passed through 20 belts of searchlights before reaching their objective and while nearing their target were opposed by great swarms of desperately-attacking German fighter planes.

Tuesday and Wednesday night Mosquito bombers returned to the attack and hit a number of undescribed objectives, but in the course of their raids they met no fighter opposition.

A recapitulation of the effect of the Monday raid indicated that as many as 500,000 persons had been rendered homeless, that 12,000 may have been killed and upward of 50,000 injured. Gas works, power plants, rail yards, subways and other essentials were said to have been damaged and the exodus to the forests was reported to be gaining speed rapidly with few remaining now who were not essential to the capital's activities. In fact, it was stated that the government offices were being removed rapidly from the city.

Indications that the effect of the raids en Germany has been disasterous to pointed out, also, that a double-line railroad running from Moscow down to Kharkov will make it much easier in the future to shift and jab at the enemy until a weak spot in the 500-mile line is found for a heavy blow.

Reports of the week's fighting indicated heavy losses of men and equipment with both sides claiming to have effected the greater damage against the

As the week drew to a close, it was hinted that the objective of the present Russian campaign, the first Red summer offensive of the war, has been pointed toward Kiev, Ukranian capital, which is situated on the Dnieper River about 250 miles back from the present front.

Friday night Red troops breaking through south of Bryansk captured Svesk thus coming within 20 miles of the Bryansk-Kiev Railroad.

Pacific Front

On the Pacific front, in addition to the news from Ottawa that a plan for complete defeat of the Japs had been worked out and that Lord Mountbatten was to lead the campaign from India into Burma and onward, there were two important developments, the end of all Jap resistance on New Georgia and the threat to Salamaua, the capture of which is at Another island in the Aleutians, Segula, 20 miles east of Kiska, was occupied by the Allied troops now based on Kiska, but again, no Japs were found.

Amid the speculation over the almost comic reoccupation of Kiska, which occurred without a single Jap being reported discovered, a recapitulation of the situation would seem to indicate that the invasion of the Aleutians has rebounded against the Japs to their great

Because of the threat to Alaska contained in the presence of the enemy in the Aleutians, it was vital that powerful bases be developed between Kiska and the mainland. It is a question whether this work would have been carried on to its present magnitude if there were no danger that the Japs would press on Heavy Jap Naval Losses.

Another survey points out that since Pearl Harbor, the Allies have sunk 45 Jap cruisers, 92 destroyers and 10 other vessels which were in one class or the other. At the time of Pearl Harbor Japan was presumed to have 46 cruisers built and 10 building and 125 destroyers built and 11 building. Undoubtedly Japanese resources in these two types of ships should be assumed to be greater than the Pearl Harbor figures, but her heavy losses are considered to have reduced her ability to maintain the long lines of supply from Kiska to Burma and at the same time properly protect home waters.

In the actual fighting down on New Guinea, Allied troops have approached the edge of the air field at Salamaua and its fall is imminent. The town itself is under artillery fire. More than 100 bombers blasted Hansa Bay, 200 miles up the coast. At this main supply base one 6,000-ton ship was sunk and 45 barges were destroyed.

In the Solomons area, American troops are consolidating their position on Vella Lavella Island despite Japanese attacks which have cost the enemy nearly a

On New Georgia Island, the last remaining Japanese forces which were pinned down at Bairoko Harbor on Kula Gulf ceased fighting, fleeing at night across the gulf to Kolombangara.

There was considerable increase in air activity in the Chinese theater with the Japs attacking Chinese bases in the Chungking area, About 60 planes were involved in the raid but no serious damage was reported.

More successful were Allied raids on the Japs. A delayed dispatch revealed that Hankow was raided by American flyers on August 21 and 39 intercepting Zeros were shot down and 11 others probably destroyed. Thirty fires were left burning among the warehouses of Japan's Chicago in China. Returning Tuesday to rip the enemy air fields at Hankow and Wuchang, Liberators shot down 19 more Zeros with the loss of only two of the American craft.

Nazi Hopes

dovetail with the Russians' first successful summer offensive. The conclusion being reached here is that if the Nazis are willing to give up the rich territories they have conquered in Russia and accept the line west of the Vistula River as their border with Russia, there is little we can do to prevent a Russian-German peace this year.

The position of the Germans is even clearer than that of the Russians. The German general staff is fully aware that unless peace is made with the Russians as soon as possible Germany stands a perfect chance of being crushed and dismembered next year.

The German field marshals know that we are sending large forces across the Atlantic. On the basis of their observations they figure that some time in 1944 there will be such a powerful army in England that a cross-Channel offensive is inevitable. They also know that the American high command is anxious to finish off the European war as soon as possible and is willing to risk heavy losses to break through the Nazis' defense walls in Western Europe. They know that this would have occurred in 1943 had not political considerations diverted the bulk of the American forces to a North African and Mediterranean campaign, which is not in the least pleasing to the Russians. The Germans are aware that we have such an overwhelming air superiority that their carefully planned fortifications will only delay the advance of our forces. Their existence has prevented us from undertaking an invasion of Europe this year with a smaller force. But next spring and summer the situation will be completely changed.

Only Hope in Russia.

The Germans also know that the day they are caught between the Russian and the American-British armies it is farewell to Germany. The country is bound to be broken down into its component parts. The Allies intend to create small German-speaking federations. Prussia will be greatly reduced.

This, Berlin now believes, will be the new pattern for Germany if she loses the war. The German general staff no longer has any illusions that it can win the war But it believes that it can avoid a defeat by making some arrangement with Russia before it is too late.

None of the junkers and barons heading the Wehrmacht has any love for Hitler, Goebbels and the rest of the Nazi gang. The Nazi leaders have served the purpose of German junkerdom. They have managed to re-create a German military force. They failed in their strategy. They can now disappear so long as the Reich and its armed forces can survive.

Confronted with the problem of giving up something they have conquered in the East or facing total destruction of the Reich, there is no question as to what their decision is going to be. The German generals are not seriously concerned over the "unconditional surrender" slogan coined by Mr. Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill at Casa-But they know that the European associates of the United States, Holland. Czechoslovakia, Poland and France are determined to reduce Germany to impotence and that it can be obtained chiefly by pulverizing the Reich and taking for themselves important slices of the em-

The German high command is more concerned with the influence of the smaller nations than the Casablanca slogans of Britand and the United States. The Germans know that if Russia continues to be their active enemy over a period of not more than 12 months, the Reich is finished.

Soon we will know the results of the remarkable diplomatic developments which are now taking place. In the meantime, the Allied strategists who have just finished their conferences at Quebec have taken all possible precautions to avoid being caught unprepared either in case the Russians continued to fight on our side or decided that they have had enough of the war and can gain more for their country by making

America's War Leaders

By Bernard Godwin.

GEN. GEORGE C. MARSHALL. Chief of Staff, United States Army.

This is the second of a series of sketches and commentaries about leading figures in our armed forces by the eminent artist, Bernard Godwin, which will appear on successive Sundays in The Sunday Star.

It is not yet 8 a.m. and you are walking down the corridor to the office of the Chief of Staff of the United States Army. General Marshall has agreed to sit for this portrait if it will not interfere with any of his multitudinous duties. Early as you are, the general is before you. He rises from his desk where he has been working and turns to greet you.

He is tall as he stands up, and thin, yet his body appears well-knit and mus-Most tall thin men look lanky and loose-jointed. But this man is a metallic type. He is hard, firm and flexible. When he bends you think of a steel rod bending in smooth curve, and becoming erect as smoothly. His eyes continue this metallic impression-bluegray, steady and piercing.

As he begins to talk you are wondering whether his voice also will be sharp and incisive. But here is a surprise, for he speaks in a pleasant, well-modulated tone. He comes right to the point. "I don't care very much about being painted," he says, "but I shall be very happy to oblige and co-operate in every

One after another, subordinates enter with questions, matters for decision, details in a steady stream. To each question there is a ready answer, for each problem a rapid decision.

And all this time you are sketching him in charcoal. He sits erect but relaxed. He doesn't seem to tire as so many people do who sit for portraits, nor does he squirm or twitch. He has extraordinary muscular control, a perfect model for an artist.

You are again conscious of those blue-gray eyes peering so startlingly from his brown weather-beaten face. As the charcoal transfers his features to paper, you feel the calm, clear thinking behind the large forehead. The crayon draws the mouth, with its full upper lip and ribbon-like lower lip-there's strength, decision and generosity there. The features are definite and so is the personality. The head sits well on broad shoulders and the torso tapers toward the waist. Once again the motions of the body remind you of flexible metal. As he talks, he moves his hands to receive papers, to emphasize a point. The light catches a star sapphire on his little finger. You watch his hands. The fingers are long and slender, tapering; the knuckles are high and the veins prominent on the back of the hand. There are no jerky, nervous motions.

The time is almost up. Although the general has not wasted a minute, there are more important tasks to follow, tasks that cannot be done while some one does a portrait. He spends a few minutes talking to you and you are leaving. It is still early in the morning. You take away an impression of great executive ability, of unhurried but rapid orders and decisions of unfailing courtesy and unhesitating firmness. You know he is already back at work, bending purposefully over his desk. He is the chief of staff. He knows the importance of his position. And makes no mistake about it, he intends to do a good job.

Germany Loots Europe

For magnitude and ruthlessness the German looting of occupied Europe surpasses the plundering connected with all previous conquests in history, the Board of Economic Warfare reports on the basis of a partial listing of the Nazis spoils. Not only the wealth, accumulated over centuries, has been carried back to Germany, but the industries, natural resources and labor power of the occupied countries has been under absolute German domination.

Careful estimates indicate that by the end of 1941 the plunder of Europe by the Germans amounted to at least 90 billion marks, or 36 billion dollars. Since that time the process has been accelerated, and the pillage amounts to many billions of dollars a year.

From Poland the Germans took property worth almost three billion dollars. Over $1,500,000,000 worth of military equipment came from Czechoslovakia, where the looting extended to stocks of laundry in the military hospitals and the iron hinges of barrack doors and

50,000 Czechs Murdered

According to reports reaching Czechoslovakian circles in London and checked up by the Czechoslovakian government, the actual number of Check patriots executed, murdered or tortured to death

This estimate, said Dr. Hubert Ripka, Czechoslovak Minister of State, includes all persons murdered in Bohemia and Moravia since German occupation in March, 1939, until May 15, 1943. The losses in human life are much greater than had been estimated previously. The Germans themselves admit the execution of 3,500 Czechs.

The number of Czechs who are jailed in concentration camps is estimated at

About half a million Czechoslovakian workers have been deported to Germany for forced labor

Ripka said that his figures did not include thousands of Czech Jews killed, imprisoned or deported.

International University

A conference of Allied educators and the association of university teachers held at Oxford July 21 indorsed a suggestion by Stefan Glaser, Polish Minister to Belgium and Luxembourg, for the creation of an international university institute. The conference agreed to start it in a small way and expand it as circumstances permit. (ONA.)

Short of Men

By B. T. Richardson.

OTTAWA.-Manpower shortages have. become the dominant features of the Canadian home front, and in no field is it more critical than in the supply of men to train for the air force. The question is now widely discussed in Canada whether or not some training schools will have to be shut down in the commonwealth air training system.

One of the most popular branches of military service with Canadians, the Royal Canadian Air Force formerly had long lists of waiting applicants. But those lists have been used up. Whether the air training plan, designed to handle training not only of Canadians alone, but also of cadets from Britain, Australia and other dominions, is beyond Canada's capacity to maintain with a full flow of new recruits, is an open question.

Exact size of the air training system is a secret. The original capacity was 19,-000 pilots, observers and air gunners a year. But that was in 1939, and the system was stepped up to 26,000 aircrew. Then it was stepped up again, but no further information was released on air, training capacity. In the fourth year of war for Canada, the manpower pool is becoming exhausted, and the supply of men for air force training is becoming dependent almost entirely on youths coming of age.

154 Training Schools.

The commonwealth air training plan is a joint enterprise of Canadian, Australian, New Zealand and British government. It operates 154 air training schools in Canada. Several months ago, the number of trained graduates posted to active theaters of war was placed at 50,000 aircrew, a figure not including a substantial increase in Canadian air defense at home. As Air Minister C. G. Power estimated the importance of the system at that time, he said the out-turn of pilots, observers, air gunners. and other categories for air duty was sufficient to man 15,000 combat planes, More than 60 per cent of the graduates have been Canadians. The system requires about 150,000 staff to keep it going, and in addition to aircrew trained and posted to combat service, the number of ground crew trained has exceeded 75.000

First source tapped by the air force in its search for more aircrew material has been its own ground staffs. Between 700 and 1,000 ground crew are being remustered each month for air training. This is made possible mainly by taking in women to replace men on ground jobs. At present, a heavy recruiting drive for women for the Royal Canadian Air Force is under way and, because of employment of women in war industries and other essential work, the numbers of women enlisting for air force have been disappointing. Even in womanpower, Canada seems to be coming to the end.

The bare limit of potential airmen in Canada is represented in the generation that comes of age each year. This amounts to 105,000 boys reachnig the age of 19 years each year, and when education and physical qualities are considered, the number likely to qualify for aircrew is probably only 30,000. But RCAF has organized the Canadian air cadet movement, which now has 300 squadrons with total enrollment of 25,-000. These are boys from 15 to 18 years of age. They not only receive preliminary training by syllabus, but are also sent to elementary air training schools.

"I can tell Capt. Cunningham-Reid," Bracken said, "that I have better contacts than he but they are not among the fashionables. He comes here, tells a lot of tittle-tattle and charges the British story is not being told in America. "Doesn't he remember what the Amer-

Doesn't he remember their stories? Of course, I forget that Capt. Cunningham-Reid was not in Britain during the blitz. He was beach-combing in Hawaii, so, of course, he wouldn't know." Bracken went on in an even more savage vein until he was stopped by the Speaker of the House. Cunningham-

Reid left England during the height of the air attacks to go to Honolulu to interest Doris Duke Cromwell, according to his own statement, in a plan for bringing hundreds of British children to safety in America. He has repeatedly been attacked on this score. In any gathering Bracken is an impressive figure. He gives the impression of being massive, although actually he is not a big man. His thatch of red hair looks startlingly like a wig. Over the luncheon table or at a dinner party he is likely to dominate the conversation. talking effortlessly and well about almost any subject under the sun. He is fond, as an Irishman, of lambasting the shortcomings of the British. Like Churchill, he can turn marvelous invective against Hitler and the Huns.

No Time for Sleep.

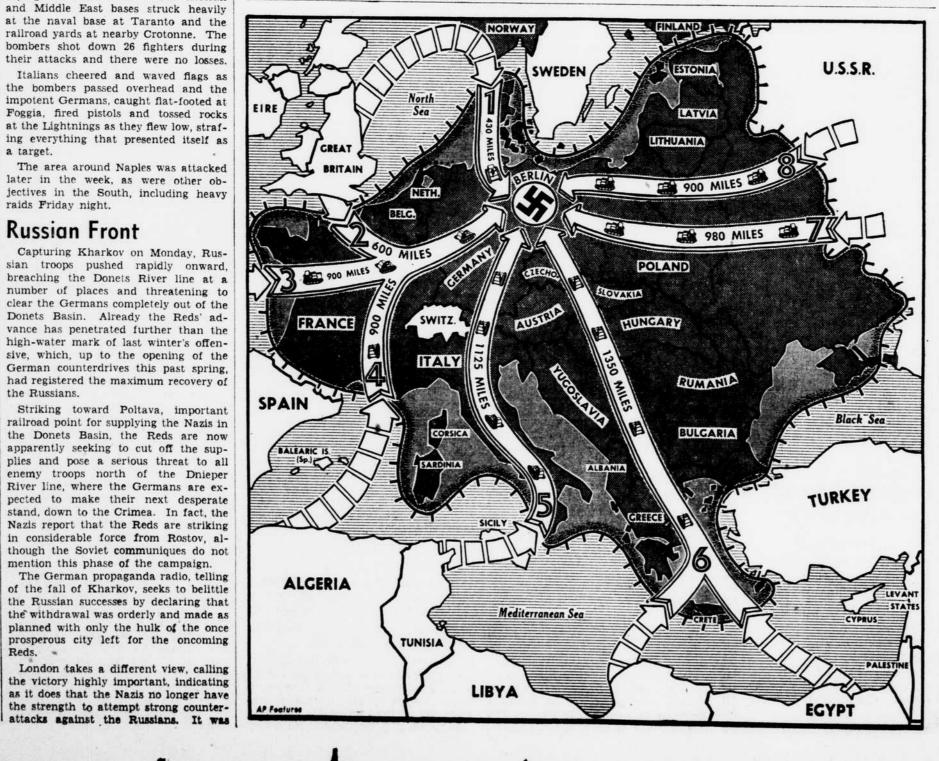

Scarcely a day goes by that he does not spend from half an hour to five or six hours with the Prime Minister. He has had to try to adjust his own life to the Prime Minister's nocturnal habits. At 4 o'clock one morning he remarked a little plaintively that he was sleepy.

"Sleep!" said Churchill with fine indignation. "This is war. There is no time for sleep."

The MOI in London includes many more functions than our OWI here. It has the task of censorship. It directs the far-flung activities of the British Broadcasting Corp. Nominally, at least, it directs the Political Warfare Executive, although actually the Foreign Office runs the propaganda war aimed at enemy and occupied countries.

Several thousand employes are answerable to Bracken. Not a little of his authority he has delegated to capable subordinates. But the real power, particularly as it touches high policy and the press, is still focused in his jaunty person, and he is not likely to let it go so long as he keeps the office.

Famous Early Homes Near the White House

By John Clagett Proctor.

There are many cities throughout the United States much older than the Nation's Capital to which the seat of Government was not moved until 1800. Indeed, the residence act, providing for what soon afterward became the District of Columbia, was not approved by President Washington until July 16, 1790, and the corner stone of the territory selected was not laid until April 15, 1791, or 43 days after the approval of the amendatory act of March 3, 1791. Prior to this, to the east of Rock Creek were only farms, forests and streams, and only a few houses of any importance, the oldest of which was probably David Burnes' cottage.

This modest building stood near the mouth of Tiber Creek, about where it emptied into the Potomac, the water then being 10 feet deep within 20 rods of the dwelling, which is said to have been erected about 179 years ago. The cottage remained standing until May 23, 1894, as we find by an item appearing in The Star of the following day which says:

"Davy Burnes' cottage is no more. It was torn down yesterday by order of those engaged in laying out the Columbia Athletic Club's new grounds. In spite of its apparently dilapidated condition, the structure required the most forcible handling to demolish. Down to the lowest brick in the foundation strong and united efforts of the workmen were required to level it. It was allowed to stand until the last moment. in the hope that it would not interfere Eighteenth streets and Constitution ington on the 10th of March, 1824. the Prince Hohenlohe had already made with the various fields, but the necessity for its demolition became imperative.

Historic Relic

Among the relics of the Columbia Historical Society is the mantelpiece of David Burnes' humble home salvaged from the dining room by the late James F. Hood, and presented by him to the society in 1915.

David Burnes died on May 8, 1800, and when the Wightt-Queen-Brooks tract of land was being cut up to form Brookland his body and that of his wife and son were found buried at a spot where Monroe street crosses Twelfth street N.E. In 1888, the three bodies were reinterred in Rock Creek Cemetery.

"Here in the stillness of the city of the dead," as has been said, "and overshadowed by two large cedars and hedged in with japonica bushes, repose the bodies of David Burnes, his wife and son. The graves are even with the ground and stones of regular and symmetrical shape cover the graves. These stones are a little more than 7 feet in length and 31/2 in width and with a thickness of nearly 3 inches. A slightly raised molding and scroll work hewn in the inscriptions, the lettering being in the old style workmanship, and notwithstanding the fact that the stones have been exposed to the elements for a century, the wording is very clear and not difficult to decipher."

"The Cottage"

As to the cottage it is said that, "To this little two-room cottage came diplomats and Congressmen to pay court to beautiful Marcia Burnes. Old David ceived them all and v instinct that is often given to simple natures, was soon able to distinguish between those who came on account of the wealth and those who came for love of the happy-hearted girl herself. Every visiting foreigner of importance was also brought to David Burnes' home. And in one of the little attic rooms old Tom Moore once slept.'

In addition to David Burnes' son John, who died in 1792, there was a daughter born to Mr. and Mrs. Burnes whose name was Marcia, the same as before referred to, and she was as beautiful as any fairy credence to such matters. But the Cartale could make her. So attractive, indeed, they say, that she won the heart of John P. Van Ness, a member of Congress from the State of New York, to whom she was married on May 9, 1802. It was apparently a very happy marriage. but the humble cottage no longer suited Gen. and Mr. Van Ness and after resid- writer, tells of Mrs. Mattingly's marvelous ing elsewhere in the city for some years cure, which is highly interesting, even if they moved, in 1816, into their new home located in what became known as his doubts. Just to the north of the Van Ness mansion, at the corner of Seventeenth and C streets, was another old building, erected by Thomas Carbery, Mayor of Washington from 1822 to 1824.

Mayor Carbery was born in St. Marys County, Md., June 26, 1791, and was the eighth child of a family of 11 children. He bought the Seventeenth street property in 1818 and soon began the erection there of a brick residence, which was probably completed in 1819. It was while living there with his widowed sister, Mrs. Ann Mattingly, that he became Mayor of the city. He died at his country seat, now included in the Walter Reed Hospital grounds, May 23, 1863.

known his intentions with regard to all sick persons out of Europe who desired his prayers. He would pray for such on the 10th day of every month at 9 o'clock in the morning, and he called upon all who wished to enjoy the benefit of his intercession to fulfill certain conditions. Faith in Prayer

"They must have faith in the efficacy of prayers; they must repent anew and deeply of their sins; they must form an immovable purpose to lead an exemplary life; they must perform a novena, or nine days' devotion, in honor of the holy name of Jesus; they must confess, do penance, and receive the sacrament; and, finally, on the appointed day, the 10th of any month, at 9 a.m., they must unite in prayers with the prince, far away on the other side of the ocean.

With all these conditions Mrs. Ann Mattingly complied. The priest of her church, 200 of her friends and fellow Catholics, as well as some other sick persons, shared in the novena, and the archbishop of the province 'graciously promised to join in prayer with them on the appointed day, 10th of March instant.' The novena was begun on the first day of March, 1824, so that it might

"As there is a difference of six hours between the time at Washington and at the place in Germany where the prince lived, the priest appointed the hour of 3 in the morning for the last solemn act of supplication, and so notified all the families and persons concerned. At 9 on the evening before Mrs. Mattingly, who apparently had not many hours to live, confessed and received absolution. At 2 in the morning the priest who was in the special charge of the novena said mass in the church and carried thence the sacrament to the afflicted lady's was then so low and so incessantly torapprehensive she would die before she had communed. The sacrament, however, was administered, and it cost the lady a painful effort of six minutes to swallow it.

"The solemn ceremony being ended, the priest wrapped up the sacred vessels came down to breakfast; she ate heartily and implements, gave the usual blessing and remained up all day, receiving the to the kneeling family (five in number, all of whom swear to these and the following statements) and was making his last adoration of the host before leaving when he heard a deep sigh issuing from the direction of the bed. age of 75 years and died March 9, 1855. In the 300 block of Seventeenth street formerly stood a house erected in 1827 by John Quincy Adams when Secretary of State under President Monroe. It was one of the first pebble-dash houses in the city, and was occupied in the '40s by Capt. John Peabody, who previously had resided on G street between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, in the same neighborhood.

At the southwest corner of Seventeenth and F streets still stands a building, somewhat enlarged since it was first erected, along in the 30s, by Gen. Nathan Towson, a paymaster general of the Army. Later it became the headquarters of Gen. Winfield Scott, and afterward it served the same purpose for Gen. U. S. Grant. The Red Cross occupied the building from 1892 to 1897.

And then, right around the corner at Eighteenth street and New York avenue, is the famous Octagon House, occupied in 1814 by the French Minister, M. Serurier, and for awhile it was also occupied by President Madison, and here the treaty of Ghent was signed. The building was built by John Tayloe in 1800 from designs by Dr. William Thornton.

One of the first business enterprises in Washington was started in this part of the city, when about 1809 a glass factory was put in operation, approximately on the site of the National Academy of Sciences Building, Constitution avenue between Twenty-first and Twenty-second streets.

The brittle, heel-clicking Prussian military caste, fortunately, has no counterpart in this Nation. It is axiomatic that we have never been a country of aggression for the sake of aggressing, of haughty war lords and monocled Junkers. Yet the men threatening Europe today and pressing back the Jap hordes in the jungles of the Central Solomons are living proof that the deadliest fighting machines may well stem from the more democratic, peace-loving countries. Nonetheless, it is interesting to note that the United States does have its military families, its ancestral lines that have struck a trenchant blow for liberty from Revolutionary and Civil War days

Names long honored in the pages of American history crop up in the headlines of the day, tying up the past with the present. Not long ago Lt. Col. John B. Sherman, grandnephew of Gen. William T. Sherman, was serving as aidede-camp to the commander of the Washington Brigade. He became acquainted, in the course of his duties, with Lt. Col. Thomas Jefferson Davis, then aide-decamp to the Chief of Staff.

down to the present conflict.

While not related to the Confederate president. Davis was a product of the deep South and the son of a Southern soldier. Then a major, he twitted young Sherman, a captain at that time, mercilessly about the latter's "bandit uncle" and demanded payment for two pigs he claimed Gen. Sherman's soldiers had stolen from his father's farm back in

Capt. Sherman absorbed the ribbing for a while. Then one day he appeared at the office of the Cnief of Staff with a squealing pig under each arm. He handed them to the startled Davis and demanded a receipt for settlement of the long-standing debt. About this time the pigs scrambled wildly to the floor and fled with loud "oinks" down the solemn corridors of the old War and Navy building, with officers and clerks in hot pur-

Take, as a typical instance, the case of Lt. Col. Harry Bertsch, in command of a battalion in the 82nd Division, a battalion that participated in the recent spectacular air-borne landings in Sicily. geon before his resignation in the latter part of the 19th century. Capt. Tripler. in turn, was the son of Gen. Charles Stuart Tripler, Surgeon General of the Army during the Civil War, and his wife was the daughter of Gen. Hunt of the Revolutionary War era.

Gen. Thomas Jonathan (Stonewall) Jackson can regard his descendants with satisfaction. His grandson is Col. Thomas Jackson Christian, formerly stationed at Jefferson Barracks in St. Louis, and a great-grandson is Capt. T. J. J. Christian, jr., a graduate of West Point, now in the armed forces.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur is the son of the late Lt. Gen. Arthur MacArthur, who put down the Filipino insurrection and was a noted military leader of his time. Another son, the late Arthur MacArthur, jr., was a captain in the Navy. His son, Douglas MacArthur, II, of the Diplomatic Corps, is now interned in Baden-Baden, Germany,

Another interesting genealogical tree in the military orchard is that of Maj. Gen. B. F. Cheatham, retired, son of Lt. Gen. B. F. Cheatham of the Confederate Army. A second son was the late Rear Admiral Joseph J. Cheatham. Maj: Gen. Cheatham was quartermaster general of the Army many years ago when Rear Admiral Cheatham was Paymaster General of the Navy, inspiring much wisecracking about the two Cheathams in control of the Army-Navy pursestrings.

Lt. Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, jr., of the Alaskan Defense Command, is the son of a lieutenant general of the Confederacy and has a son at West Point. Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, now in charge of the First Service Command in Boston and former director of military intelligence, is the son of Lt. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, a hero of the Civil War and later Army commander during the Spanish-American War.

Topflight Naval Leaders

Ancestral naval careers are among the proudest traditions of the men whose homes are the seven seas, and the list starts with the topflight naval leaders. Admiral William Frederick (Bull) Halsey, jr., in charge of the fleet in the South Pacific, is the son of the late Capt. William Frederick William Halsey of the Navy. Admiral Halsey's son is Lt. (j. g.) William F. Halsey III of the Supply Corps, now on duty in the South Pacific.

Admiral Royal Eason Ingersoll, commanding chief of the Atlantic Fleet, is the famous son of a famous father, the late Rear Admiral Royal Rodney Ingersoll, who served in the Civil, Spanish-American and First World Wars. Lt. Royal R. Ingersoll, son of the present admiral, was killed in action last summer in the heroic battle of Midway Island. Rear Admiral Ingersoll was the son of Rebecca A. Deniston and Harmon Wadsworth Ingersoll and a descendant of John Ingersoll, who came to Salem, Mass., in 1629.

Lt. Gen. Thomas Holcomb. commandant of the United States Marine Corps, is a descendant of Commodore Joshua Barney, a hero of the American Revolution and of the War of 1812. Capt. Franklin P. Holcomb of the Marine Corps, is the son of the present Marine commandant

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet, has a son, Lt. Chester W. Nimitz, jr., who recently was awarded the Silver Star medal for submarine action in the Pacific. Vice Admiral Joseph Kneffer Taussig, whose grandfather emigrated to St. Louis from Germany, commanded the first division of destroyers sent abroad during the last World War and is now on duty in Washington. His father was Rear Admiral Edward David Taussig, who took possession of Wake Island in the name of the United States. Vice Admiral Taussig's brother, Charles A. Taussig, was the youngest commissioned Marine officer during the Spanish-American War; another brother, Paul Edward Taussig, died while a second classman at the Naval Academy.

Rear Admiral Taussig was on duty near Arica, Peru (now a Chilean port) during the great quake and tidal wave there in 1868 and was commended for rescue work. By a coincidence, his son, Vice Admiral Taussig, received the Order of Merit of Chile for his heroic work in connection with an earthquake at that South American country.

Thirteen Medals

Lt. Joseph Kneffer Taussig, jr., 23 years old, was awarded the Order of the Purple Heart a short while ago for wounds suffered in the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor; the order was pinned on him at Newport by his father, the vice admiral. Two days later, Vice Admiral Taussig received the same order for similar wounds received 43 years before. in the Boxer Rebellion of China. Lt. Taussig also was given the Navy Cross at Newport ceremonies, but he will have many more to get before reaching the 13-medal total achieved by his father.

Rear Admiral Hugo Wilson Osterhaus is the son of Rear Admiral Hugo Osterhaus, one-time St. Louisan, who died in 1927. The present rear admiral has a son in the Navy, Lt. (j. g.) Hugo W.

Maj. Robert L. Denig and Second Lt. James L. Denig of the Marines are the sons of Brig. Gen. Robert L. Denig, director of public relations in the Marine Corps, and the grandsons of Commodore Robert G. Denig of the Marines, who fought in the Civil War and Spanish-American War.

There are, of course, numerous other outstanding naval and Army families whose roots can be traced back through the years. Their stories do not end here. Their sons and their son's sons may carry on the tradition, so long as there is need for a democracy's might to defend the freedom of man. (Published by Special Arrangement With the St. Louis Post Dispatch.)

September, 1939, and a powerful German Army once more was on the march, ss the fires of war spread in Europe.

In Richmond, Calif., workers in a chemical plant were talking over the turn of events during the lunch hour, and blaming Hitler. There was but one dissident in the little group. Associates knew him as Julius-or Julian-Rozinek, a middle-aged Hungarian, who had been but a short time at the plant, but long enough to stir curiosity about his background. Clearly, he was a man of education, of thorough technical training, but he held only a minor position as a draftsman, and seemingly was well satisfled with his lot. Others in the plant often wondered why, but he sought no confidences and gave none. The critieism of Hitler irked Rozinek. Suddenly, he backed off and faced his companions,

"Hitler is not only my Fuehrer, but my God," he shouted angrily, then turned away.

This chance remark was brought to the attention of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, started an inquiry that snowballed as it progressed—led across the Atlantic, and was climaxed this past week by arrests in Detroit and New York that cracked a Nazi spy ring, equipped with a blueprint for the destruction of American war plants and shipping. Four women, one a descendant of the old French nobility, and two men are held. They are the first persons accused under the wartime espionage act, and conviction can bring death. Suspected accomplices walk uneasily.

Intricate Plotting.

A bizarre pattern of plot and counterplot was woven as FBI agents pierced their way through a fantastic maze, in the four years elapsing between Rozinek's nassionate outburst and the arrest of the six accused espionage agents. Their accomplishments are not entirely clear yet, and will not be until the prosecution progresses and some gaps can be filled in. But one thing is certain: Before there was a suggestion that this Nation would become embroiled in another world conflict, the German war lords were anticipating such a contingency, and preparing accordingly. Fortunately, it might be added, Director J. Edgar Hoover and the FBI were doing likewise. In this instance, the planning of the Nazis went awry because a woman turned on them. It was some one with a well-developed hunch who brought Rozinek's heated avowar to the notice of the FBI. Agents decided to have a look. The results were interesting. Rozinek, it developed, was a former captain in the German army, whose real name was Guyula Rozinek. He had come to this country in 1938 with his wife, who went under the name of Sari De Hajek, and had acquired a reputation in Europe as a writer and lecturer, and in the theater, after early training that included studies, on exchange scholarships, at Oxford and Vas-

Scholarly Attainments.

The American school according to her press notices, gave her a bachelor of arts degree in 1929. In the University of Budapest, she won a master's degree with a thesis on the folk songs of the American Negro. She also took a degree in social work in Budapest, directed the Royal Hungarian Opera and also was play director in the Hungarian National Theater. Twice-perhaps three timesin 1938-9, she made extensive lecture tours in this country, under the auspices of the Hungarian government, with various aspects of life in the homeland as her subject. Women's clubs, learned societies and educational institutions were her field. She strengthened associations that had started in her school days. Her travels gave her every opportunity to see what America was doing -or not doing-in the way of strengthening the national defense. And Sari De Hajek still was in her early 20s, many years her husband's junior.

Despite his wife's prominence, Rozinek carefully avoided the limelight. For a while he was employed in a New York tours agency, and explained his presence in this country by saying that he hoped to organize an export and import business. He had manufactured steel flanges in Hungary, he said, but his firm was forced to dissolve when it ran into difficulties because of his partner's racial background.

Soon after the FBI began to take an States Navy member, who was being the daughter of German parents. She interest in Rozinek, he was discharged by the chemical firm when caught snooping around the office of an important West Coast oil company. He next appeared on the log of the FBI when he attempted unsuccessfully to negotiate in Pittsburgh for the purchase of 3,000 tons of nitration toluol, or toluene, the base of TNT, to be shipped to Germany. Rozinek could have been arrested then for violation of the Neutrality Act, but he was given more rope, for by this time it was clear where his interests lay. Then

The latter agreed, and immediately was launched on an intensive course in espionage methods that took her even to Berlin. She was instructed in secret communication work, the use of invisible inks and microphotography, the gathering of vital information. She was to pose in the United States as a lecturer, and her principal duties were to gather data on airplane factories, military camps and naval bases, the composition and sailing dates of convoys. Her pay was to be $500 monthly, and just before taking a Clipper from Lisbon, the budding spy was handed $2,500 by a German naval attache Her last-n arations were aided by Rozinek, who had lately appeared on the scene, and orders called for her to go to Detroit.

Detroit Headquarters.

Miss Buchanan-Dineen arrived in New York on October 27, 1941, and almost at once Federal agents intercepted a cable she was supposed to have sent to known spy headquarters in Lisbon. A few days later another communication for Lisbon left Detroit, and shortly afterward there was a third communication for the same destination, again sent from New York. At about the same time the underground reported that a mysterious "Miss Smith" was busy in suspected Nazi circles in Detroit. It was only a matter of hours to identify "Miss Smith" as Grace Buchanan-Dineen, and when a note from "Miss Smith" was found in the effects of one Bertrand Stuart Hoffman, a merchant marine cook and former United

She was also furnished with the names of the German-sympathizer contacts she was to make in this country. It was the latter in which the Federal agents were most interested, and now they began to knit together loose threads that were to weave the net for the spy ring. For the first time, too-perhaps-the investiga-Eventually, Miss De Hajek suggested that tors got an idea of how closely associated were the various subversive elements that were being uncovered over ways let it be known that she was ardently pro-German, according to FBI reports. When Rozinek got in trouble in San Francisco, she sent the $500 required for his bond. So the FBI watched and waited. With interest, it was learned that Mrs. Behrens was named by Nazi spy leaders as one of the "contacts" Miss Buchanan-Dineen was to make in Detroit. Had Wide Acquaintance. Mrs. Behrens had a wide acquaintance, and reputedly served Miss Buchanan-Dineen well, even to the extent of agreeing to help her financially. As the result of this contact, the Canadian woman met the cook, Hoffman, also Canadian-born, but claiming American citizenship on the grounds that his father was a native of Pennsylvania. Hoffman, 27, had served in the Naval Reserve between 1939 and 1942, when he was given a disability discharge. from a German background, Hoffman is described as an ardent disciple of Naziism, and sometime after he was dropped by the Navy, he enrolled in the Merchant Marine. According to the FBI, he frequently expressed willingness to gather and transmit information on America's war effort through Miss Buchanan-Dineen, and told her of a plan to jump ship whenever he got to Europe and attempt to join the German Army. He is also said to have devised a code through which he could keep Mrs. Behrens informed as to the movement of ships on which he might sail, and had also worked out a basis for calculating the number of troops in a convoy according to the number of cooks each boat carried-information he presumably expected to obtain. According to this "table," Hoffman was said to estimate that a ship would have one cook for every 200 or 250 men. The cook, it was said, was a familiar figure around the restaurant of Max Stephan, the Detroiter who recently was saved from the gallows by presidential intervention a few hours before he was to die for aiding Hans Peter Krug, the Nazi flyer, who had escaped from a Canadian prison

Dr. Thomas is said to have provided Miss Buchanan-Dineen with materials for compounding the secret inks used for the letters that went back to Germany, and on occasions, he reputedly passed on to her information he obtained from patients.

The doctor was quoted by the FBI as saying on one occasion that even though he were apprehended as a spy, he would "go to his doom" feeling that what he had done was proper, because he thought the Nazi cause would prevail, and that the world thereby would be made a better place for his children to live.

Commander Tells First Story of Fall of the Westerplatte

The Westerplatte in flames after the Nazis rolled in huge lorries, containing 10 tons of gasoline and dynamite, to force the defenders out of their positions. -Wide World Phote.

By Lynn Heinzerling.

LONDON.-The unhappy remnants of that tough and gallant little Polish garrison which, without any hope of salvation, held the Westerplatte at Danzig against impossible odds through seven flaming days have told part of the hellish story at last, four years later. From a prison camp deep in Germany, which holds the thin-faced, bony commander of the garrison, Maj. Henryk Sucharski, and the surviving members of his little band, has come a guarded but nonetheless dramatic account of the Nazi attack. Written by Maj. Sucharski for the prison camp paper, it tells how the 202 lightly armed Poles defied the big guns of the German warship, the Schleswig-Holstein, and the persistent assaults of 5,000 Nazi troops.

"The fine evening of August 31 did not differ from all the preceding ones," Maj. Sucharski wrote. "The patrols on duty that night just reported that all was unusually quiet and silent in the port.

"The alarm which aroused us at 4:40 a.m. when the window panes of the barracks shook with artillery fire was quite a surprise. It was the Schleswig-Holstein firing at us with her heavy guns. It became obvious that the war had begun."

He reported, from afar, how the famous Polish Westerplatte garrison held out for seven flaming days under the pounding of Nazi shore and naval guns, surrendering the peninsula only when its value was completely gone. But only now has he received, from a German prison camp, the story of what actually went on in that inferno, four years ago this week. As the anniversary nears, he uses the words of the Polish commander himself to tell the story.)

The next day, the Westerplatte garrison proved his words.

Notable Portraits By American Artist Of Last Century

By Leila Mechlin.

One of the happy experiences of a lifetime for the lover of art is to come across, unexpectedly, a work which instantly declares its exceptional distinction through merit. Such an experience awaits the sensitive and perceptive visitor to the National Gallery of Art in the portrait of Capt. Warren Delano by Charles Loring Elliott, which, some months ago, was given the gal-lery by the Warren Delano estate, through Frederic A. Delano of this

The subject happens to have been the grandfather of Mr. Delano and the great grandfather of the President of the United States, but its merit as a work of art rests upon the skill with which it was painted, the painter's insight and genius, rather than the high standing of his descendants. At a glance, the eye of the observer is caught and his attention held in amazed admiration

Brilliant Success

This is, in the present instance, perhaps, the more astounding, inasmuch as, by and large, Elliott cannot be said to have been a great painter, and although he attained a fair reputation during his professional career, he was not ranked with the great men who preceded him, such as Stuart, Peale and Copley. Yet, here in this portrait, he achieved a brilliant success which should assure him utmost esteem and perpetual remembrance. Such things happen sometimes, but not often-Whistler to the contrary. Auburn, N. Y., in 1812, the son of an architect who did not encourage him in his desire to take up a painter's career, but did, eventually, give him a letter of introduction to Trumbull, then painting in New dissuade him, suggesting architecture as an alternate, but young Elliott was not to be turned from his determination, and first went to copying casts from the antique in the New York Academy, and then became a pupil of Quidor, who had studied with Jarvis, and was well taught. Having gained a measure of facility, Elliott returned to Central New York and became an itinerant portrait painter, at which he is said to have done well financially. In 1845, he returned to New York and took his place among the group that established the National Academy of Design, made many friends and secured important patrons. His death occurred in 1868. The portrait of Capt. Delano was painted in 1852, when he was, no doubt, at the zenith of his power.

Their effort was to produce portraits that were good likenesses and as well painted as lay within their power. The compensation received was largely their own sense of achievement, the price paid being exceedingly small. Occasionally, as in the case of the Delano portrait, they, through their sincerity of effort and the grace of God, brought forth a masterpiece.

It may seem far fetched, but in directness of statement and convincing personality, the portrait of Capt. Delano impresses the observer, on first glance, as does that of M. Bertin by Ingres, in the Louvre. -a man of character and great vitality.

The majority of those in the current collection are in excellent condition, the painting sharp and clear, the colors fresh and bright as jewels, the figures and landscapes charming. Although some of the miniatures depict scenes from the Shah Namah and historic personages and incidents, we derive the impression that they are glimpses of real life in India and Persia in the 16th and 17th centuries. To those who see beyond the actual objects to the periods when they were produced, the pottery and textiles are no less interesting than the miniatures. The pottery is from two to six centuries older than the miniatures. Most of it is Persian, other examples are from Mesopotamia (Syria). Persia, Syria, Egypt and Spain (under the Moors) were the countries which produced the finest pottery during the medieval period. In studying their history one learns that Mohammed and his followers were conquerors of those countries, which were vastly superior in civilization. But, unlike the contemporary Germans, who destroy and rob subjugated nations and reduce the populations to slavery, the Mohammedans of more than a thousand years ago gave to the countries they conquered the best government they had known since Roman times and the greatest prosperity. They encouraged the production of pottery, textiles, wood and metal work and other arts which were flourish-

Ride On, Stranger By Kylie Tennant. (Mac-

Kylie Tennant, the gifted Australian novelist, belongs to the very small group of fiction writers who. at present, are doing creative work. She is thinking, not just repeating cliches, and her novels have the appropriate quality, though in varying degrees. Her work on Australia's itinerant workers, "The Battlers," was a sure and finished expression of a mature attitude toward life, an attitude of robust humor which bespoke an ability to look on the phenomena of existence with courage and without the need of sentimentality. In her next book, "Time Enough Later," she attempted to portray the psychology of the woman who, by innate gifts and not by mere necessity, is a human being first and a sex creature only secondarily. The book was not completely successful, for Miss Tennant did not exert herself much; she threw her idea into humorous form and half her time worked at the humor rather than the idea. But in her present book she returns to the theme and gives it a more thorough and serious treatment. The result is a much better novel, though she still is below the level she set for herself in "The Bat-Woman as a human being is cer-

She is interested in woman as human, not in woman becoming human. Her heroine is a human figure in the sense that male characters in novels are generally human; she loves, but she does not live to love. You have only to try to think of another heroine in modern fiction of whom that can be said to realize how rare the concept is with authors in this supposedly enlightened era. This is the present week's blue- left to their own choice. His book print of the future. In many ways, is a vivid and moving document. it coincides with the blueprints of previous weeks. It holds that there Burma Surgeon should be a world organization after the war, and that the aim of this organization should be to see that everybody on the planet is nicely taken care of. It also holds that there is to be no more political sin. Politics is to become pure, idealistic and devoid of any interest but the public's good. That is the requisite condition for the achievement of certain specific aims which Mr. Viton goes on to define, and other blueprinters before him also have declared in favor of goodness in the future as against badness--which is nice. The aims themselves, however, are somewhat startling.

In the first place, says Mr. Viton, there must be no more colonies. Great Britain, France and Holland must relinquish their empires. In the cases of the latter two nations. he feels that the relinquishment will be largely automatic; the empires will just fall away. Great Britain, however, will want to keep her territories, and Mr. Viton makes the suggestion that, if she is obstinate. our country should present a demand. In her dependent condition, Britain would have to yield. He also suggests that she has been expecting such a move, and so far has congratulated herself on the fact that we have overlooked anything so obvious.

The great areas of the globe which would thus be freed of imperialism would not all be turned over to free use by their inhabitants, under Mr. Viton's plan, but would be graded by the international organization in order to determine their destinies. Mostly, they would be mandates, but under an improved mandatory system which would eliminate exploitation of any thing or anybody. There would be different grades of mandated territory, according to the state of the inhabitants, and a date would be set by which each territory would be expected to advance to a new grade or, eventually, to freedom. Democratic government would be compulsory in every country which was admitted to the world organization. Just what this would do to Russia is a little hard to say, and Mr. Viton does not raise the question, though he gives a full chapter to urging our fullest collaboration with the Communist state now and in the future. The great field of activity for the United States in this new world will be Asia, says Mr. Viton, for only ourselves among western nations have the confidence of Asiatics. China must be given political freedom, in his view, and an interesting speculation might be devoted to the reaction of the Chinese people, who have been fighting totalitarianism longer than any other nation, when they hear this benevolent verdict. It will be our duty, however, to see that industrialization and education are promoted throughout the country, and this we can do by setting up a postwar Chinese Lend-Lease and sending technicians. India also must have freedom, and we should join with Russia, Great Britain and (perhaps) China in drawing up a plan which will assure the Indians of self-government at an early date. Japan will have to be disarmed and made to give up her war-gained territories. and set to learning democracy at home. While we do all this in Asia, we must also take a hand in setting up mandates throughout the Near East and Africa. Our share of the financing will not be modest Mr. Viton's pages bristle with figures-40 billion here, 80 billion there and so on-which will be required of us. He also speaks of the flotation of gigantic loans and the arrangement of numerous credits. A detail, of course, a mere detail to the materialistic Americans.

Well, as said, it is the blueprint of this week. There can be no doubt that the author means the very best for everybody in the world, now and for several gen-

They Shall Not Have Me By Jean Helion. (Dutton.) Escape From the Balkans

By Michael Padev. (Bobbs-Merrill.)

Here are two books by men who have escaped from Nazi prison camps. Both are vivid and close to the interest of the ordinary reader They belong to a class which is large and, of course, constantly growing, but they are good examples of it. The story of the individual pitting himself against the organization is always a heartening one.

Jean Helion was a French soldier who was captured when the Nazis broke through the Maginot Line. He was taken to Germany and put to forced labor, first on a prison farm and then on a ship. He endured practically all the hardships which have come to be associated with German treatment of adversarieshunger, slave driving, filth and physical brutality. He escaped by the superiority of his mind and de-termination. With infinite subtlety, he managed to collect money and clothes and eventually false papers. Then, in agonizing suspense, he simply walked through his guards, all the way from Germany to the unoccupied zone of France. He tells this story with the kind of detail which makes a reader live it

This chapter heading to Ann Leighton's "While We Are Absent" expresses in a heartening and reassuring way the spirit and determination of all women to carry on while their men are away. Mrs. Leighton considers her problems, common to many young wives and mothers today. Women will receive fresh courage and incentive from reading "While We Are Absent."

Financial Cost Big Item in Music Scheme

By ALICE EVERSMAN. It is definitely recognized by now that music should belong and be made accessible to all classes of people. There has been made every effort to acquaint the uneducated with the better music, to explain the manner of acquiring appreciation and to urge the personal study of music and the attendance at concerts as a cultural necessity toward a better spiritual and idealistic manner of living. Yet with all talk about how every one, from the lowest to the highest in the social scale, should be given a chance to incorporate it into their scheme of living, there is mentioned rarely one important item. This is money.

With only a few exceptions, the enjoyment of music means spending money. The ABC of music study cannot be thought of independent of its cost. Instruments must be bought, teachers paid and music acquired at the very outset. This continues in increasing proportions as study progresses. A musical career costs a fortune in managers' fees, advertising, coaching, clothes This is from the students or aspiring professionals' angle. For the layman, prices of varying amounts must be paid for every concert he listens to. He cannot hear a great artist in person or a symphonic program, other than those on the radio, without paying for it amply. Music schools, conservatories, orchestras or chamber music groups can be kept alive in most cases only by contributions from the generous minded. Composers are dependent on the selling of their works for a living. There is never a moment from the time a work is conceived in a composer's mind until it is heard by the public through the medium of an artist or ensemble, that money is not con-

In the main, this is as it should be. The making of music is a profession and the listening to it is at the discretion of the individual. But is the profession of music always accorded the respect and the recognition of financial obligation by the outsiders. Can the spiritual and cultural value of music be dissemi-nated far and wide when its cost must be considered.

It would seem that in the future when the musical life of all countries will be flourishing again that this condition should be given some consideration. Either music must be made accessible with little money barrier to its enjoyment or it must be accepted generally and officially as a profession for the benefits of which the public will be willing to pay any reasonable price. The former can be realized probably only through governmental help and the never to expect to hear music with out paying for it.

All that has been said about how vital music is to every community and individual has born fruit in a more widespread knowledge and liking of the art. But the cost has been kept in the background. Soon the time will come when a further step must be taken to widen the sphere of enjoyment by regulation of the financial outlay.

Living near the Army post outside of Honolulu, Laura Jo attended Hulehua High School, where only about 30 per cent of her classmates were white. The remainder were Koreans, Chinese, Japanese and Hawaiians. She describes the stu-dents as "smart" and adds, "You had to work hard to equal them." Unlike our American pupils, who have the custom of "dressing up" on the last day of school, the children of Hawaii go barefoot and in over-

For Summer Sport That's Different, Try Water Baseball

By D. H. ELSOM. If you are looking for some new fun this summer, try water baseball. We have a diamond laid out in the water at the sandy-bottomed beach at the lake, and every afternoon we have some exciting games.

Our diamond is laid out so that home plate is nearest to shore. The catcher and the batter stand in water about knee-deep. From there out it gets gradually deeper, so that walk? A back fence? A paper clip? the pitcher is standing in water up to his waist, and all you can see of the second baseman is his head and shoulders. The outfielders are swimming around in water which is over their heads.

We play the game according to regular baseball rules. The bases are floating boards which are anchored in place with a stone and a piece of rope. We use a regular bat, and a water-tight rubber ball which floats, and is easy to see because it is white. You can imagine that the game is rather amusing, played on such a diamond. When the batter knocks out a long hit, he starts out running toward first base, but, of course, he can't run very fast through the water, although he puts out a great deal of energy. From first base to second, and between second and third, the water is too deep to permit running, so the runner must become a "swimmer." When he gets to third base, however, the water is shallower, and he can start running again.

Under these conditions a home run is rather slow work. But the batter doesn't have all the hard The poor fielders who are thrashing about in deep water chasing fly balls have troubles all their own. And did you every try to throw a ball when you were in water over your head? Well, try water baseball-it's great Joys and Grief In Building Our Virginia Home By LORETTA ANDERSON, 15, Pairfax High School.

Some years ago the members of my family decided to build a house in Virginia on some land they had recently bought. We ordered the material for the house from a building concern which had to be shipped to the town where we planned to construct. After the material had arrived workmen were hired and the new house began to rise Every one in the family used to come and spend enjoyable hours watching the Loretta Anderson.

house taking form. At first it was rather queer looking, but as time went on it began to look more and more like a respectable home should. Finally came the day when it was all complete except putting shingles over the raw looking tar paper, and inside finish. Then the bombshell hit! To every one's consternation we found that the schools were to open in less than a week, and we thought a good two weeks hence. After some debate it was decided that the best plan was to move into the house just as it was, and finish it while living there. What an adventure, thought the younger members, to live in an unfinished house. It turned out to be one, all right, but not one we bargained for. Tuesday morning dawned bright and clear, though hot. All that morning was devoted to packing and numerous other things that are essential when it comes to moving. About noon the van came and another hour or two was spent in watching the men carry the furniture to the van. At last everything was in readiness, the van was raring to go, the house was locked up and every one was in the car, piled high with blankets and such things. We drove away, keenly looking forward to our new home.

We went by a different route than the van, so we soon lost track of it. Arriving before the moving truck, we settled down to wait for it. And what a long wait we did have! It seemed that it had become lost and no one could direct them to where we were to live. Halfheartedly, a search in the car was made, but to no avail. By this time everybody was extremely worried for All contributions must bear the fear of an accident. Back to Her Children

An incidental objective of her trip to England will be a visit to Peacehaven, the children's home she has maintained for 13 years, where 30 orphaned children of stage families live and are educated. Present plans call for endowing the home, and Gracie already has ticketed her share in "Stage Door Canteen" in England, about $50,000, as a nest egg. She plans to raise more at a charity concert in London.

"I started with one child we took," Gracie recalls "and then they began paying me such ridiculous sums of money for my work that I had to look around to find something to do with it all. Then some other children turned up, and others, so I founded the home. It's a funny thing, with all the children who have gone out from it during those 13 years we've had it, not one has gone on the stage. Perhaps their parents shouldn't have, in the first place," she giggled.

Meanwhile Gracie has made up her mind about a new direction in her professional career before the cameras. "I'm fortyish, I am," she says,

"and that's middle age. I don't want to spend the rest of my life leanin' on pianos and shoutin' songs. Let the young girls have a chance. I want to get over onto the acting

Upon Analysis, Perhaps"Typing" Is Desirable

By Sheilah Graham. HOLLYWOOD

"I don't want to be typed. Every actor and actress in the business has used this phrase one or more times during their work in pictures. I have usually agreed with them, but now I'm wondering. Perhaps it is better for the thespian who has been established in a certain type of role to repeat it, with variations in the manner of, say, Claudette Colbert, who has more or less played the same role in pictures -a modern, gay or dramatic girl-for most of her time in Hollywood. Usually when she strays from the modern sphere, the result is bad—as in Cecil B. de Mille's "Cleopatra."

Joan Fontaine has established herself on the screen as the "negative" type of actress. Things happen to her, she does not happen to them. She has proved herself to be at her best when keeping her face and body still for the camera. As Tessa "The Constant Nymph" Joan dashed about like crazy in an effort to prove she was a young, gangling girl of around 14. It was dizzy work watching Joan scamper up mountains and up the stairs and down the stairs and all over the place. In my opinion, Joan's good work in this picture was toward the end of it when she was ill and unable to jump around. Alfred Hitchcock, who directed Joan in her two best pictures - "Rebecca" and "Suspicion"—has always insisted to this reporter that the way to get a good performance from Joan is to make her underplay every emotion

Humphrey Bogart, who usually plays a tough "dese-and-dose" character on the screen, is smarter than most of his fellow thespians. Crime Soothes The Treasury Collectors

NEW YORK.

Crime does pay—for the people who prove it doesn't. Take your favorite radio mystery program—the one with the screams in the night, the stab in the back. the poison pool, the six assorted murders, and the mocking villain who is always tracked to earth a scant two minutes before the commercial.

The villain may get it in the neck -but he gets in the pocketbook. too. And the radio detective who delivers those sermons on the meager profits in crime is likely to think it over in a Park avenue penthouse.

Les Damon could tell you about that. His sophisticated sibilants as the unperturbed "Thin Man" who fattens on the dirty deeds of the underworld net him $20,000 a year. Damon doubles in washboard weepers that flood the daytime air, and his total take, says his press agent, is $50,000 a year. Damon is proof enough that the art of crime detection, practiced in 17 network shows a week has become big business. But other robber chasers are said to do almost as well. Jay Jostyn, as "Mr. District Attorney," always gets his man and from $25,000 to $40,000 a year for that and other achievements. Disproof in Pay Checks.

Raymond Edward Johnson, the voice behind the squeaking door in the "Inner Sanctum," is believed to be in the same class—as are Claudia Morgan, the Mrs. Thin Man, and Santos Ortega, whose deep voice as Nero Wolfe descends right to the pits of crime. Ted De Corsia, who specializes in both dumb cops (as Sergt, Velie in "Ellery Queen") and villains, is another whose pay check disproves all they teach in reform

It takes time to prove that crime doesn't pay—and so the manufac-turers of pills for pale people and other peppers-up of the body basic hand over huge sums to the major networks for the opportunity. Radio time for a half-hour chill program runs up to $13,000. For 25 minutes on 115 stations, the powers behind "Crime Doctor" provide a $12,000 medication for CBS every week. Costs depend on the number of stations involved, but networks can usually count on at least $5,000 every time a radio dick goes on the Proof by Checkups.

The majority of "whodunits" prove highly successful in luring palpitating listeners to the loud speakers. The Co-operative Analysis of Broadcasting, which telephones listeners in key cities to find out who is listening to what, says that two-thirds as many people who tune in to the top air shows like Bob Hope and Fibber McGee are on hand when "Mr. District Attorney" goes a-hunting. In an average listening month,

"Ellery Queen," the "Thin Man" and "Mr. and Mrs. North" nab the evildoers through 15 of every 100 radio sets where they can be heard. The most popular shows are lucky to break 30.

How to guard your Weight and Energy during feed rationing From all information we have been able to gather, America will probably eat more starchy, fattening foods this year than ever before. That's why, now, more than ever, you must guard your weight to avoid putting on pounds of ugly fat. And here's probably the easiest way to do this you ever read about. Simply mix 34 glass* of Welch's Grape Juice with 1/4 glass* of water. Drink before meals and at bedtime, and this remarkable action follows. First, you have less desire to eat starchy. fattening foods. Thus, you cut caloric intake without having to suffer a hungry moment. Second, the natural dextrose in Welch's is quickly consumed. probe tactfully for the causes behind an attack of hysterics, loan an evening coat to a wide-eyed youngster invited to her first Annapolis dance, and plan a picnic for 40.

Recently, a white-haired resident burst into Miss Oliver's office to say she'd misplaced her false teeth and couldn't go to work. Barton's housemother cheerfully helped her turn her room upside down till the teeth were located behind a bureau.

Girls coming in wearily from the four-to-midnight shift find her sitting in the lounge to ask how the job went today, and have a companionable lemonade as they listen to a late news broadcast. Women trooping off to work in the morning find her helping the desk clerk sort the mail. To combat loneliness, she and her assistant whip up Saturdaynight dances, with a truckload of partners from near-by Army camps.

pear-old got word that her brother had been killed in Africa, Miss Oliver took the stunned youngster out rowing on the Tidal Basin. For hours they rowed silently, until the girl was tired enough to sleep.

Skittish young residents who breeze in from a date at 3 a.m. several nights in a row soon learn that Pat Oliver can be as firm as she is understanding. "You can't do a good wartime job on four hours' sleep," she'll point out quietly. To help check absenteeism, she works closely with personnel heads of government agencies where her charges work. She chats with an offender, s the underlying cause, helps the girl talk it out of her system. Result: the number of residents who've quit jobs can be counted on one hand. - HILDEGARDE DOLSON

Now It's True!

Amid the bombs in Warsaw four years ago, a little newsboy had a fevered dream . . .

by Helen Moscicki

You pick up your newspaper. It is one of those days, perhaps, when the headlines say: "Berlin Bombed." You glance at it, think to yourself: "Berlin again, eh? Well, we are making good progress today..." And you pass on to other news.

I can read some news as casually as that, too. But not that particular news. Nor could you if you had known, as I did, the little newsboy...

It was four years ago, in Warsaw. Hundreds of enemy planes filled the skies. Exploding bombs rained upon the city, spreading a furnace of flame that reached the heavens. The air trembled and shook; buildings and homes rocked and crumbled. The smoke spread like a gray mist through the streets, blotting out gaping holes.

D_{AY} after day the siege went on, the bombing by air and land. It went into the second week. And the desperate, heroic resistance still continued.

Each morning the people scanned the transparent blue sky, searching for clouds to shield their town, if only for a brief moment, from the devastating enemy fire. But not a cloud could be seen. . .

Each morning they looked up to the sky, too, for the help they expected. But no help came. . .

The little newsboy, like the rest of Warsaw, stuck to his post. High above the roar of the bombers, the din of exploding shells, the cries of the wounded and dying, his gallant little voice rang out. It was no longer the gay, lilting voice we had known in happier days. It was shrill and piercing now. He seemed to be trying to drown out the infernal noise of war as he ran to and fro in the burning square, disregarding the hell of flames and death which met him at each step.

The acrid fumes filled his little lungs, choking him as he called out the headlines with all his strength. And the people would run out, snatching papers to search for a ray of hope, their eyes alight, waiting for a miracle. . .

BUT the miracle did not come. Gradually the hopeful light in the eyes of the boy's customers died out, leaving their faces gaunt and gray, but hardening in a desperate resolve to stand it all and not give up.

Days and nights became endless nightmares of horror, each more terrifying than the last. Hours slowly dragged on ... a constantly increasing rain of fire falling from the skies. There was no water. No food. Nothing but terror showering down upon crumbling homes and crumbling hopes. But Warsaw still stood proudly amid her smoking ruins.

Each hour the news which the boy had to dispense grew worse. Tragic faces grew more tragic as they looked at his head-lines. His newsbag had become like Pandora's box, filled with creeping black things of terror. Town after town in smoking ruins . . . fortresses bombed to dust . . . radio stations silent. . .

Still he had no better news to give. He had to keep running about with his papers. But his eyes, once so gay and laughing, now shone feverishly; his face became pale and drawn; he clenched his small fists with hatred for those who were destroying his square . . . his city . . . his Poland. Gone were his humorous little comments on the news. His voice grew husky and fainter. He was afraid to hear the things he had to say.

If only a miracle could happen...

And then, one day, the shrill and strangely strong voice of the little newsboy rang out again:

"Special edition! Special edition! Our pilots bomb Berlin!

"Great victory! Our army has thrown the enemy out of the land!"

THE people stopped in the streets, not daring to believe their ears. But the boy kept shouting, his eyes burning, his voice rising to a wild pitch of enthusiasm. The frantic crowd pressed around him, besieging him with feverish questions.

"Where does this news come from? What is this special edition? Is it true?"

The child remained silent a moment, gazing at all those anxious faces. Then with eyes bright with unearthly light, with voice once more strong and clear, he spoke.

"It is my special edition. But it is true, because it must be and it will be!"

He was found the next day, his papers clasped in his arms, in his square in the heart of Warsaw. A bomb had found its mark.

That was four years ago. He did not live long enough to see our pilots bomb Berlin. But we have lived to see that day. And soon we shall see the fulfillment of the rest of his special edition — the driving out of the enemy from the land.

"It must be, and it will be."

AIA MURDER TRIAL HISTORY'S GREATEST

At the bar: Axis criminals, the Hitlers and their underlings! We have warned the neutrals not to shelter them; already the stage is being set for the courtroom scene. Here two great Americans tell how to make sure justice is done

by Herbert Hoover and Hugh Gibson

United Nations would look with disfavor upon any attempt to afford asylum to fleeing Axis criminals, it is none too soon to consider the principles upon which we are going to deal with the enemy after victory. There are two problems: how shall we deal with the war criminals themselves? How shall we deal with the enemy peoples so that they may not organize to attack us again?

These criminals are not only the Hitlers, the Mussolinis and the Tojos — big and little — but the long lists of those guilty of acts of assassination, brutality, cruelty and torture.

The fate of Mussolini is still shrouded in secrecy as we write this. But regardless of what may happen to him before this article is printed, his resignation emphasizes the importance of deciding now on the procedure to be followed in bringing the war criminals to justice. If we leave the question of their fate until the end of the war there is danger that they will escape the consequences of their crimes, as they did the last time.

A year ago the writers said: "There is a large question of the personal responsibility of heads of state and their associates for violation of treaties and agreements (entered into with free will) in pursuit of militaristic and imperialistic designs which result in the killing of millions of human beings.

Dignified Parce

"The leaders of the nations who brought this situation upon the world must be made to realize the enormity of their acts. There can be no moral distinction between such men and common criminals conspiring to murder. Too long has it been assumed that there is something sacred about the heads of state who project or provoke war and wholesale murder."

In 1918 there was a great deal of talk of hanging the Kaiser and punishing all those guilty of war crimes, but the Kaiser settled down to end his days peaceably in Holland. The Allies agreed to allow the many other Germans accused of crimes to be tried by German courts. The results were hardly surprising. The German courts went through some solemn formalities and were unable to find evidences of guilt. It was a highly dignified farce.

We cannot permit anything of this sort to be repeated. It is just as demoralizing in world affairs to let systematic cruelty and crime go unpunished as it would be in domestic affairs to grant complete immunity to bank robbers and murderers

A positive distinction must be made between imposing legal punishment for crime and the problem of what to do with enemy peoples. There should be no question of indiscriminate and wholesale punishment of whole nations, for that merely lays the foundation for future conflicts.

The Leaders and the People

Moral indignation at cruelty and wrong is a proper basis of moral action. But war hate is a form of hysteria that makes no distinction between peoples and their leaders who should be punished. Hate propaganda prolongs war by creating desperation in the whole enemy peoples. One of the Nazis' greatest holds on the German people has been their belief that they can expect no mercy from us. They were told that to avoid extermination, they had only one choice — to fight to the last.

We shall be soft-headed rather than softhearted if we fail to accelerate our efforts to establish clearly who the war criminals are and what they have done, with a view to their being given fair and expeditious trial and dealt with in the light of the evidence. The essence of what we are fighting for is to establish justice and we must ourselves abide within these processes.

However quickly we work after military victory, there is likely to be wholesale blood-letting in occupied countries and in Germany itself. The universal experience with military defeat is revolution in which the leaders meet angry and frustrated peoples. Groups will come to the surface with their own sufferings to right and their own vengeances to impose. It would be preferable if all these war criminals could be arrested and tried by proper courts, but such hope may be denied by events.

Despite the warnings to neutral nations by the Allies, many Axis criminals undoubtedly will try to escape to these countries, and in some cases they may succeed in crossing the frontiers. Here rises a definite problem. International law does not recognize the right of asylum for men who commit criminal acts. It does recognize the right of asylum to political refugees. On this ground Holland declined to extradite the German emperor following the last war.

Criminals, Not Emigrés

As A result of Mussolini's downfall these questions are now being extensively discussed. As this is written there is still some doubt as to how many neutrals will accept our interpretation of international law. If we allow this question to drag too long, there may be very little that can be done about it. We should devote attention now to reaching international understanding as to the distinction to be made between the old idea of a political refugee whose greatest fault was disagreement with those in power, and the Hitlers and Tojos! A muddled conception of international law and humanity must not be used as a shield to protect people from punishment for their crimes. It is only by a tremendous stretch of the imagination that many of these misdeeds can be described as political. The ruthless seizure of private property, the machine-gunning of refugees, the shooting of hostages, the execution of prisoners of war, the extermination of the Jews, the excesses against the civil population of Hong Kong, Nanking and the like, are fiendish crimes. Furthermore, they were deliberately and systematically organized, which aggravates them by premeditation. And the criminals include not only the hired hands who

WARNING! "It seems only fair that they [the Axis invaders] should have this warning that the time will come when they shall have to stand in courts of law . . . and answer for their acts." - President Roosevelt (From a press statement, August 27, 1942)

and all that the Axis stands for will be on trial

The two distinguished authors of this article are widely experienced in European reconstruction. A former President and a former ambassador, they have already collaborated on one book: "Problems of a Lasting Peace"...

committed such crimes but the men who commanded the crimes to be carried out and those in authority who refused to intervene to stop the acts.

So far we have taken one preliminary step by notifying the neutrals that we expect them to co-operate in making the Axis gangsters available for trial on the same basis as unofficial people committing the same crimes. If the neutrals should fail to co-operate, the Axis criminals could then be tried in absentia, and when convicted, the neutral governments should be summoned to hand them over. The neutral governments might well be represented at the trials to satisfy themselves of their fairness.

If such a course were followed, it is difficult to see on what ground any civilized country could protect such criminals simply because they happen to have been vested with some official authority when they committed the crimes.

It has been advocated that each of the United Nations be entrusted with the trial of any individual in whom it has a special, legitimate interest. To us this proposal seems open to grave objections. There will immediately arise a suspicion that the intention is not so much to mete out justice as to obtain revenge.

The United Nations should agree upon a panel of judges of the highest possible type to sit in such cases, the judges to be assigned to individual trials by a steering committee. This would invest the tribunal with the dignity of sitting on behalf of the whole civilized world. Prosecutors who are to appear before the courts on behalf of the United Nations should also be designated before the end of the war.

But we emphasize again that in formulating our plans on this subject, one thing should be clear both in our minds and in our propaganda—that we are intent not upon revenge, not upon punishment, but on iustice.

An even greater question should also be settled in advance. That is how to deal with enemy peoples at large. We want them to realize that aggression does not pay. Yet we have to live with these nations if we are to have lasting peace.

Lesson No. One

THE first lesson is sound defeat. Defeat itself is the greatest humiliation that can come to a nation. Moreover defeat will bring revolution, with all its internal violences; and revolution also is punishment.

But if we are not to have the periodic rise of aggressive, military action in these nations, impelled by humiliation, hate and pride, we have to do something more than give them a spanking.

Germany, Japan and Italy all have a longestablished warrior caste. This caste likes war. it lives by war, it eulogizes war, and it wants to dominate and exploit other nations. Through class traditions, through sons succeeding fathers as officers, through general staffs whose business it is to plan further wars, the military caste in each of these countries is a menace to the world. These warrior castes must be broken up. One of the failures of Versailles was that Germany was allowed to keep an army of 100,000 men and a small navy. Even the privates in these organizations were potential officers. Their generals and their staffs sat plotting war again.

There is only one answer to that: complete disarmament of the defeated nations. The cry that there must be an army to preserve internal order can be answered by a constabulary in which no man who ever held an officer's commission may serve. And if its arms are limited to those necessary to deal with unarmed citizens, they will have little with which to practice.

There are those who think to re-educate the German, Japanese and Italian youth by forcing United Nations teachers into control of their schools. There are obvious difficulties — ideologies cannot be imposed either by foreign teachers or machine guns. Change must come from within the hearts of the peoples themselves.

We can — and must — insist upon the enemy states freely electing a representative government, so as to have a responsible government with which to deal. But we cannot, for instance, impose our concept of a Bill of Rights upon other peoples, because the very right of peoples to self-government carries also the inherent right to determine their own way of life.

We must focus our minds on lasting peace, not on spread of our ideology.

Give Them Hope

THERE are those who propose to dismember defeated peoples into a multitude of states. That simply will not work, for the yearnings of racial solidarity are forces that will ultimately defeat any such idea. The history of periodically dismembered Germany is of intrigue and wars for unification that have disturbed the whole world. If we were defeated and our states separated, would we not conspire until we were united again?

Our experience is that indemnities such as Versailles imposed cannot be collected over a long term of years. There must be a terminal toward which the defeated peoples can look forward or they will constantly conspire.

The defeated countries after this victory can pay some indemnities, but if we are not to create anew the cesspools of world infection we must not attempt to hold them in bondage. That is not only vengeance — it is a delusion.

One of the greatest difficulties the world will have to meet when victory comes is the inevitable and universal emotional state. The hideous brutalities of the Axis powers will leave an ineradicable hate in millions of this generation. We cannot expect a growth of brotherhood in those who have suffered. Famine and poverty will have enveloped the whole world because of the Axis. Hate, revenge will be the natural emotions of all the peoples of the United Nations.

Unless the forces of fear, hate and revenge between peoples and nations can be turned aside, the world will again enter upon the ceaseless treadmill of war. By statesmanship at the end of this war, that hate, fear and revenge may ultimately decrease and die.

Peace Instead of Hatred

THE enemy must be made to realize war does not pay. But if we want lasting peace, we must realize that nations cannot be held in chains. In the end there can be no trustworthy security except by giving the decent elements in a people a chance to co-operate in the work of peace.

And let us not cultivate hate by government propaganda or by private cries. There will be enough of this emotion to deal with without stimulation, for such stimulated hate will poison our own souls and make vision, true justice and lasting peace impossible.

These are questions that call for immediate thought and early action. If we act wisely and in unison we may achieve the just punishment of criminals, teach the lesson that aggression cannot succeed, and finally demonstrate that we, the victorious nations, stand for justice, and are strong enough to enforce it.

The End

"I'd like to decorate you for being the most gallant man I know" whose blue defied the cold, half light of the wartime bulb in the ceiling.

"Dan!" His big hands, brown as roasted coffee, got tangled up in the proofs and he grinned down at her. "They haven't begun to ration good looks anyway. You're still Veronica Lake without that blonde blinker, Lindi."

LINDI took a small, nervous step back. But her voice was warm. "You - you look like a hero, Dan." Her eyes narrowed appraisingly, admiringly. "Private Dan Morgan. United States Marines! Hero of Guadalcanal! Decorated for bravery! Oh Dan, to think we used to go to the movies together and -

"And the usher used to tell me to keep my long legs out of the aisle."

"He'd probably let you sit smack in the middle of it now, fire rules or no fire rules." They both laughed.

"That was before Ken beat my time."

"He never did! I mean - That is, you never - you were just being nice - " The dimness of the hall kept the mounting color out of the laughing protest. "Just taking a fellow employee for a buggy ride."

An awkward little pause obtruded itself. "How's Ken?" Dan inquired. Perhaps it was the little silence that made his question seem so loud.

"He's fine. He's running a punch press. Parts for jeeps." Did the last three words edge up defiantly?

The big marine didn't seem to notice. "That's swell," he said.

The galley proofs, caught between twisting fingers, made little rustling noises. "He he tried to enlist. In practically everything."

Dan nodded. "Ken's got guts. A swell guy, too. When did he quit Beemer?"

"After Pearl Harbor " Lindi's sm: stirred beneath the stiff ugly green of the smock. She went back. "It was his ear. It it was pierced. Something about the drum."

"Tough," Dan said. He looked down at her and his big brown hands worried the seam of his smart blue coat.

The galley proofs fluttered unnoticed out of Lindi's hands. From beyond the composing room came the rumble of the old Gordon presses. The corridor was narrow, and there was a chill in it, a chill that Dan felt suddenly as Lindi's eyes came up, welled with stars of moisture that no wartime lighting could dim.

"Tough?" The small red lips went around the word as if considering it from every angle. Then, as if the passage of the sound released some tightly compressed, rust spring, tangled, half-bitter, half-bewildered phrases pleaded for understanding. "Tough? Dan, do you know what it means to - to love a man in - 4-F, when every other girl you know is in love with a soldier, or a sailor, or a marine? You don't, do you? You couldn't. Oh Dan! Do you know what it means to have people feeling sorry for you, taking sly little digs at somebody you know is swell?"

"I guess - "

"You can't!" Lindi assured him vehemently. "You worked here before you went to war. But did you ever think of it as nothing but a - a sort of small village, a little world where your life is part of everybody else's life? I know I shouldn't talk this way, Dan. But I can't help it. It's been welling up in me for months. I'm desperate.

IT ISN'T just the things people say, even in a kidding way. It's the things you know they're thinking. Ken making big money while all the other boys that worked at Beemer's are out there dying, and being heroes like you! Ken riding around on a C card when other people are walking! Do they stop to think that Ken is suffering too? Do they stop to think that the plant where he works is nearly nineteen miles from the city?"

She stopped abruptly, small hands clenched into tight, pathetic fists.

Dan's hands went out haltingly, diffidently. They tightened gently on her slim, upthrust shoulders. "You love him a lot, don't you, Lindi?"

"Yes."

"Of course." He spoke almost absently.

"I'm sorry, Dan. I mean I have no right to bother you with my troubles. You're the biggest man in this little world of ours today, Dan. Bigger than H. P. Beemer! In an hour the whole organization will be sitting down to a plant dinner to welcome you back - and I'll be only a proofreader sitting at one of the tables." She took a deep breath. "But you were always so nice. Like a big brother, even though you pretended you were in love with me, I just couldn't help letting down my hair."

Private Morgan met her small wan smile steadily. "It's still lovely stuff to let down," ne assured ner.

Then the door leading to the Beemer offices banged open, and H. P. Beemer's shining, pear-shaped bald head and ruddy smile jerked them both back to the chill of the hall and the noise of the presses.

"Hey, Dan! Did you drop in a fox-hole or something? The newspaper boys are in my office. They want a firsthand story about want a picture or two of us shaking hands." The hearty boom of the president of Beemer Press, Inc., edged up with pride and self importance. Lindi watched Dan go with shoulders which ached from the quick parting pressure of his scattered galley proofs. There were six other girls at the round table where Lindi sat; three girls from the bindery, two stenographers and Miss Bang, > were there. Only once did she face them as realities. That was when Nora Prather, one of the bindery girls, slid her eyes across the table and said too sweetly, "Your boy friend ought to be here, Lindi."

> Nora had a boy friend in South Africa. Lindi ignored the thrust. "Ken works from four until eleven," she said evenly.

SOMEBODY giggled. Lindi made her hands keep still, kept her eyes on the front of the room, where Dan sat at a long table flanked by H. P. Beemer, Al Stevens, the sales manager, and gentle old Pop Higgins, the superintendent of the press room. There was a big linen sign stretched across the wall in the back of the table. It read:

"We Welcome Our Own

There was music too. Lindi hardly heard it. When the coffee came, it steamed unnoticed up toward her small set chin. Even the burst of applause which followed the rising of President Beemer only meant something when her eyes encountered Miss Bang's pursed lips and disapproving stare. She brought her hands together listlessly.

"The Beemer Press is proud of the part its employees are playing in this great struggle for survival," Mr. Beemer was saying with throaty pride. He wore a white carnation in his buttonhole. He had a smile for the burst of applause. "This war cannot be won by taking shortcuts, by taking it easy, by letting the other fellow do the suffering." Applause. Lindi stared straight ahead. She was conscious of Nora Prather's accusing stare. She wondered how many other pairs of eyes searched her out.

"... But we are not gathered here," Mr. Beemer was saying, "to talk of those who prize their own safety and comfort above their country's welfare, but to honor one whose exploits reflect credit not only on himself but upon the entire Beemer organiza-

In the tumult which followed Lindi only saw Dan sitting there, smiling self-consciously. His eyes fought their way to her and the smile changed. It was like a pat on the back, Lindi thought. She straightened

... Our own Dan Morgan ... Guadalcanal ... Japs ... medals ... " The talk went on and on. It came to Lindi like copy headings.

Then Dan was on his feet.

The whole room seemed to come suddenly into focus. Dan was shaking his big brown hands above his dark, curly head like a prizefighter. Everybody stood up, and H. P. Beemer led his employees in three great, echoing cheers.

Then Dan was speaking: "I think this would be a darn good time for me to hit H. P. for a raise to go into effect after the war is over," he said, and the gang roared their approval. When the noise finally died away he went on: "Honestly, I think Mr. Beemer has been too kind to me. He kept on calling me a hero. I was just lucky, that's all. As a matter of fact, every guy in that island that handled a gun was a hero. I just happened to get the mdeal,

"But just the same I'd like to speak to you a little about heroes. I know I am no orator, but when a guy gets out from behind a press all of a sudden an' finds himself in a dirty hole in the ground with a lot of bugs, ants and insects he never ran into before, with the sweat oozing out of every pore, he sort of gets a different way of looking at things. He gets to thinking, even when he's got a half load of malaria aboard an' he knows the night out there is filled with deadly little yellow fanatics hiding in trees and crawling on their bellies trying to get a shot at his jackpot with a twentyfive caliber slug."

Dan stared down at them solemnly. His old gang stared back, eager, friendly.

"You take when I left the Beemer Press to join the Marines," he told them slowly. "I felt I was a pretty tough sort of an hombre. But I found out what a lot of other guys found out. I found out that a guy don't have to be ashamed of being afraid."

He's trying to make me feel better, Lindi whispered to herself. And he's so wrong. Ken isn't a coward. He he ... Oh Dan!

"I was scared plenty," Dan was saying now. "I kept on being scared, until I got so busy that I forgot what was going on in my throat and my heart and my stomach." He paused again. "That's all guts is, an' don't let anybody tell you any different."

H. P. Beemer applauded. The twist of his bald head suggested that he was proud that his organization bred modesty as well as heroism. The crowd came in strong.

Dan turged and stared down at his late employer. "I'd like to tell you a little story, Mr. Beemer. You an' Al Stevens an' Pop Higgins an' all the swell old gang - the Beemer gang. I got to thinking about it when that general pinned me with a medal."

"Hear! Hear!" Mr. Beemer shouted. "Spill it, Dan!" someone roared.

"It happened three years ago last Christmas time." Dan faced his audience, brown palms flat on the dinnerlittered table, eyes steady, earnest. "A couple of us in the press room worked late on a catalogue job. After we got through we stopped in at a joint on Adams Street for a beer and a sandwich.

"There were three or four tough cookies in this joint, and one of them starts making some cracks I didn't like. But I went on eating my sandwich. The guy figures I'm yellow. So he starts to push me around. Then I clipped him. In a minute his three pals are all over me, like ants. With everything. Including beer bottles and an ice pick that was laying on the bar. In ten minutes I would have been 4-F in the draft. I did go down, as cold as one of Old Pop's cigar butts.

But the guy that was with me didn't let them finish the job. He wasn't a very big guy, and he wasn't too strong. But he had all the guts in the world. He went into that gang with everything he had, which was mostly courage. And when I came up out of the fog, there he was with the blood streaming down from his face, with his coat ripped off his back an' his necktie twisted up around his mouth, telling the cops that the guys had beat it through the back door an' an' to forget the whole thing. He was that kind of a guy.'

Lindi's brows gathered in a startled, puzzled frown. Old Pop Higgins' hairy fist beat the banquet table with ecstatic approval. The crowd yoo-hooed its appreciation. Dan held up his hand. "I thought about it that night when they pinned a medal on me for being lucky," Dan said simply. "I got to thinking that I wouldn't be standing up before a general if it hadn't been for that guy. I figured that he ought to be standing there beside me because - because he was fighting the war the hard way."

"The lad has the gift of gab," Old Pop whispered to the sales manager.

'The hard way," Dan repeated softly. "Because he tried to enlist too. An' they wouldn't take him. An' I knew why. An' I knew he was the kind of guy that wouldn't go around parading his alibi. An' I thought a lot of swell people who don't know the facts probably figured the guy was sitting back, raking in the war dough, while his pals were out there fighting.'

"Dear God!" Lindi breathed softly. "You all know the guy I'm talking about," Dan said. "He isn't here now. He's out doing the best job he can for the war, while I do all the talking and get all the medals. His name is Ken Ferris." . . .

The asphalt was like shiny black satin. The taxi slithered over it with a comforting hiss.

"It was nice of you to break away and take me home this way," Lindi said. Her head was twisted to watch the silver drops beating against the taxi window. Her voice dropped to a whisper hardly audible above the hiss of the tires. "You're a real hero, Dan."

A brown paw covered the hand in her lap. "Listen, Lindi! If it was that story - I mean I was glad. Ken's a real hero, taking all that ragging, and too proud to explain."

THE light from a neon sign caught the white oval of Lindi's face.

"I know how you feel about me, Dan, even though I pretended I didn't. And I know what really happened to Ken's ear. The principle back of it was the same, even though, not knowing them, you had to make up your own details. Ken was hurt by a hay fork when he tried to save another boy from falling down a chute in a grain elevator. Not, as you know, that he ever used that as an alibi - he wasn't the kind of guy to think of an alibi. Maybe that's why I — love him so much.'

"Lindi, I -

"Please, Dan!" The glare from a street lamp picked up the stars in her eyes. "I'm no general. I can't give you a medal. But I'd like to decorate you for - for being the most gallant man I know." Her slim arms went up around his neck and she kissed him.

"Hundred and fifty feet," the diving officer read out aloud. The depth gauge still soared upwards.

Sudden darkness filled the hull of U-93. When the emergency lamps went on, the youngest mate, not older than Piet's boy who had fallen in France, approached him. "Herr Obermaat," he whispered, "the six men in the bat-

"Junge," he replied, "don't think about it. That's the way it is in war." He saw the needle settling at 240 feet. There were a few light shocks while the boat slid over the ground. Then it lay still. A deadly silence descended on the crew. Since the end of r downward journey had temporarily relieved their tension, all shivered under the impact of a biting cold. Some thirty men, five officers and Gerlich stood around. The others, except those in the battery room, were locked up in the engine room. Randers, though his lower jaw was shaking, still showed his customary arrogance. The officers looked at him for guidance, while Gerlich shifted nervously from one leg to the other. There had never been much comradeship between officers and men on U-93; but now, lying beyond all human worlds and freed from the interdependence of war, this small community became openly a miniature Third Reich at forty fathoms below the sea, distinct from the one in Germany only in size and number.

Gerlich was the first to speak. "Herr Kapitanleutnant," he said shrilly, "what provisions are there for an escape?" "How many oxygen lungs are available?" Randers turned to Piet Henner. "Fifty-seven, sir." With a tinge of satisfaction hardly comprehensible to himself, he added: "All locked up aft."

"Too bad," said Gerlich, and unbuttoned his jacket, showing a yet deflated oxygen lung tied to his waist. "But U-22 will soon be cruising over the Banks. It will pick me up, and the Fuehrer shall hear about your heroism!"

"RIDING a sub with an escape belt all ready since Wilhelmshaven!" the youngest mate exclaimed gaily, and then an uproarious outburst of hilarity vibrated through the hull. Randers stiffened up; his hand moved to his hip pocket. Gerlich's mouse-like face froze into a grin, and while the men re-formed in groups - the officers, torpedo mates and two others around the Captain, the rest around Piet - he fumbled for one of the compressed air containers.

Piet moved a step forward. "Laddy, you will stay where you are," he said, and put his hands heavily on Gerlich's shoulders. The group echoed approval. "Attention!" Randers shouted. It was the magic word of obedience. The men stood still, put hands at the seam of their trousers. Even Piet relaxed his grip, and Gerlich slipped away.

"I will not stand for any breach of loyalty," Randers snarled. "We will die as good soldiers of the Fuehrer, or else - !" He grabbed his automatic. Piet looked at him straight, "Enough of that." he said. "You dog!" Randers aimed, but one of the sailors held his arm, wrenched the gun from him and threw it to Piet. "So that's it! Mutiny!" Randers' face was distorted with hatred, "You traitors, now that you are the stronger!" "You're mistaken, Captain," Piet replied; "it is just that we are finally by ourselves. What we do now can make no difference to the fate of Germany, but at least we will die free men!" A shot from the officers group rang through the room. Piet staggered and fell. Somebody picked up his weapon, which had dropped to the floor, and earsplitting firing broke loose.

AGAIN scenes from the past, pictures of his wife and his young sons passed through Piet's mind. They mingled with a vision of the future, gigantic armies heaving over him, while on the faraway horizon a free land opened wide.

Gerlich's whitish face, and Randers', haggard and still distorted, emerged from the tumult, and then went down for good . . .

The air, which they had not had time replenish before the plane had discovered them, weighed heavily on the breasts of the survivors. Piet did not notice it. Nor did he hear when the young mate turned to him and said, "An enemy patrol boat is signaling! They must have detected the shooting."

Piet was smiling. In a few minutes the depth charge would bring an end to the war for all of them, but for whatever time was still allotted to him and his friends, they would be

Brenda — Will You Step Out With Me Tonight?

I know I've been an awful grouch not taking you any place lately. But after standing all day at my new job, my feet darn near killed me with callouses and burning. Now I've reformed — or rather my feet have — thanks to the Ice-Mint you advised. Never tried anything that seemed to draw the pain and fire right out so fast — and the way it helps soften callouses is nobody's business! Been able to get some extra overtime money — so what do you say, let's go dancing tonight. You can step on my Ice-Mint feet all you want.

Part of Magician Hurwitz's million-kid audience

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC

WATCH CLOSELY! His tricks are double-barreled — he makes a specialty of curing problem children by turning them into prestidigitators

RECORD CROWDS attend his shows, stick around all day to practice tricks. The kids' war-working parents are strong for the program

And it is! Watch this conjurer lure the kids into playgrounds...

AGIC may be an ancient art, but in New York City a brilliant young playground director, Dr. Abraham Hurwitz, is finding exciting new uses for it. Like a modern Wizard of Oz he's touring the city, teaching magic to youngsters, putting on shows, and helping them form magicians' club. The object is to lure kids safely into playgrounds while their parents are away at work. Dr. Hurwitz has drawn over a million kids to his free shows.

He has a card file of 4,000 magic tricks related to schoolwork.

"Young magicians have to brush up on physics, chemistry, penmanship, speech or arithmetic in order to master these stunts," Hurwitz chuckles. "I taught a magic-bubble act to one boy who'd flunked chemistry. To make the formula for the bubbles he had to do chemical research, and he got so fascinated that now he's studying to be a chemical engineer!"

Giving Them Confidence

HE OFTEN cures kids of shyness by teaching them tricks that make them neighborhood wizards.

A West Coast playground director was so excited by Hurwitz's success that he asked his help in shaping up a similar program. And from all over the country Hurwitz gets calls from doctors, psychiatrists, playground directors and civil associations for similar advice.

Sometimes Hurwitz's pupils get so expert they baffle him. He showed one freckle-faced boy how to make a red platter turn blue. Next time he visited the playground the boy produced the platter, calmly turned it red, white and blue. Hurwitz is still trying to figure that one out.

Old Friends are Best

"The same advice I gave your Dad . . .

More than sixty years in service

YOU may not see them for weeks, months, years, but when the emergency arises there they are . . . willing, solicitous, trustworthy.

Many of you can remember your old family doctor and his little black bag with Listerine Antiseptic tucked in the corner. You felt better the minute he entered the house.

You can remember, too, the first time you were hurt and facing the danger of infection -a cut finger, a skinned toe, a cold coming on-how Mother brought Listerine Antiseptic out of the medicine cabinet to help you through your trouble. You felt good about that, too.

Aside from keeping abreast of the advances in medicine and bacteriology, doctors haven't changed greatly, nor has Listerine Antiseptic. In any home, their friendly presence lends, as always, a feeling of protection and confidence.

Make a friend of Listerine Antiseptic. It is a trustworthy first-aid in countless little emergencies when your doctor, deluged with really serious cases, may be delayed in coming.

After the Nurse had Discussed it frankly...

How one new convert first saw the light... She discovered that the basic principle of TAMPAX had long been known to doctors

Why hasn't someone told me these things before?" she asked our nurse-consultant. Well, maybe she is the kind of woman who must have someone else offer to explain a new idea before she herself will believe in it. Or maybe up to now she never had learned some very simple anatomy.
Anyway, she is glad to understand
Tampax at last!

Years ago doctors were familiar with the Tampax principle of internal absorption. Dancers and actre knew about it, for they couldn't "give up" on the difficult days; the show had to go on! But Tampax makes the same thing available for the sanitary protection of women in general—war workers, housewives, business girls and students. Millions are using Tampax now and thanking their lucky stars for it, too! Tampax was perfected by a doctor and is carefully made of long-fiber surgical cotton, and stitched firmly together. It is compressed into a neat little one-time-use applicator. You need never touch the Tampax with your hands, so insertion is easy and dainty. No belts, pins, pads or odor. And no embarrassing disposal question. Tampax produces no bulges or lines in snug-ntting clotning

Tampax comes in 3 absorbencies: Regular, Super, Junior. Introductory box for 20¢. Large Economy Package lasts for 4 months, average. Sold at drug stores, notion counters. Ask for Tampax today. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

GIRL Servicemen elected back East that night. her to stardom, and

MR. LARAMIE'S

VERY day is Leap Year for Movie Actress Dale Evans. The green-eyed, brownhaired Texan holds the world's record for proposing to men. One hundred-forty Army camps know her 108 pounds of charm. At every camp she's come right out and said: "Won't You Marry Me, Mr. Laramie?

trained her, too!

This habit of perpetual proposal began in 1940, when Dale was floundering in a Chicago night-club floor show. Her trouble was a private jinx: "Everything I don't know, people always ask me to do." What she didn't know, and needed to, was how to put over smart songs before sophisticated people. When Ray Bolger, star of the show, stopped her backstage the third night, Dale braced herself.

Bolger opened, "The boss is going to fire you."

"Don't I know!" mourned Dale. "Haven't you some specialty number you could try?'

Dale, like all the world's amateurs, replied, "I have one little thing — I wrote it myself."

Bolger winced, but agreed to read it. Dale brought him a song in which the singer, throughout 12 whole verses, begged a bashful guy to perk up and wed her. It was the Leap Year special, "Won't You Marry Me, Mr. Laramie?"

Bolger a Stooge

RAY groaned: "We can only try. I'll play your bashful stooge. Now, when you sing, really beg . . . here, stroke my cheek!"

The nightclubbers liked the specialty. They "saw" Dale for the first time. It wasn't long before a Paramount scout gave her a ticket to Hollywood.

Her first day, she was invited to lunch by a Paramount executive. Ar. Biggie crumpled his napkin — "we'll go over to a soundstage. I'll test you for the dancing lead with Fred Astaire in 'Holiday Inn." There it was again, Dale's what-I-don't-know-they-alwaysask-me jinx! Never having danced (professionally) in her life, the youngster, dispirited, flew

Another good break in Chicago sent her out, in September, 1941, to Twentieth Century-Fox, this time with a solid year's contract - no options. Also, virtually no work. The studio forgot her. She studied dancing - at the studio's expense. No one has considered her for a dancing role since. Finally she went to the Hollywood Victory Committee: "I can't stand this. There's a war on. Get me leave from the studio. I'll play camps, anywhere, to be doing something useful."

"What," they asked, "can you

Dale gulped, reached back in her memory: "I have a — a specialty."

Pvt. Bashful

SHE was glum that night. What would she do without Ray Bolger? Then inspiration hit her. At each camp she picked out the biggest, most bashful-looking soldier, invited him to the platform - and close up, she sang all 12 verses of "Won't You Marry Me, Mr. Laramie?"

Wildfire demand stretched Dale's tour. The entire entertainment world began hearing how camp roofs were raised by whistles and cheers when "Mr. Laramie's Girl" appeared. Before the tour was over, she had been given the singing spot on the Edgar Bergen-Charlie Mc-Carthy radio show. When she reached Hollywood, Republic Pictures gave her the singing lead in "Swing Your Partner." That clicked and they offered her a long-term contract. Dale signed. She was handed script pages for her first day's work in "The West-Side Kid" - straight emotional drama. She looked at the producer. "No songs?" she asked. The producer smiled. "No more songs for you. You're a star now — an actress!"

Dale moaned: "Oh Lord, they've found one more thing I can't do act!" Then she thought of those 140 sailors and marines she had entertained. "Why," she asked herself, "should I be afraid of one camera!" That leaves Dale unique. Not only did the armed forces elect her to stardom, they practically trained - LUPTON A. WILKINSON

CURLING CUES

When you get that permanent, remember that there's a war!

by Sylvia Blythe

PERMANENTS:
Your Uncle
Sam has leaned over backward to favor the industry that supplies this

curly aid to morale. Result: you can have your machine-curls made to order . . . pick any method you choose.

There is no shortage of supplies, say industry spokesmen. Beauty-shop inventories are equipped for the next half-year. The real shortage, which is acute, is in operators.

That's because many men operators have laid down their curling tools to pick up rifles ... because large numbers of men and women have swapped beautyshop smocks for war-workers' denim. What adds to the acuteness of the beautyshop problem is a big boom in its business: a 40-per cent increase over '42.

So, expect to get your permanent under somewhat trying conditions ... in less time ... with much less attention to your little whims. But get it when you need to. You can!

DO YOUR PART: Plan for your permanent in advance; make your appointment three or four weeks ahead of time. If these well-laid plans go agley, notify your shop. To hold up an operator to whom every minute counts is being wickedly unfair. Bring your own bobbie pins. Don't previously shampoo your hair, in the fond belief that you're saving time for the operator. Chances are, she'll duck you into the basin, anyway. If she doesn't, you're running the risk of getting yourself a frizzy mop instead of a fancy set of curls. Most permanent-waving failures can be sleuthed down to improperly shampooed hair - to stubborn soap curd that won't allow the waving solution to penetrate.

You can help yourself to a better permanent by skipping, for a few weeks before your permanent, those rinses, dyes or bleaches which come under the head of foreign substances and don't aid and abet nice curls. You can help by dating up your shop for a permanent to be scheduled when you hope to feel in fine feather . . . certainly NOT for a time when you expect to be all dosed up with medication. You can more nearly guarantee yourself a good permanent by gritting your teeth and allowing the operator to whack off all dead or abused ends of hair, than by cleaving to them for dear life. A new set of curls can be put in over what's left of a vanishing set by skillful employment of a woollike stuff, used to cover the ends of the hair. But your best bet for a bouncing crop of curls is a brand new set, put in virgin hair.

METHOD? That will depend upon your own little fancy. It can be a permanent, steamed in, via the familiar machine or machineless method. Or it can be one of the newer cold waves, which - because this method dispenses with machine appliances, rubber scalp shields, metal clips and rods - has become very important. It depends in general, upon a forming lotion to soften the cortex of the hair, plus a fixing lotion to "fix" the curl in shape. Best results by either method depend much upon the skill of the operator.

Upped costs: that's to be expected, because of rise in price for both labor and supplies. To prepare you for the shock, a permanent that you used to be able to get for $5.00 may now possibly cost you $10.00.

post-permanent care: Fussing with hair . . . dousing it in hot water too soon cuts down life-expectancy of a permanent. Don't set your curls with water. Don't dampen them. Use an oil dressing; it's kinder to curls. Don't go temperamental and change your hair style too suddenly after a permanent.

"I give up! I guess I'll just have to have the others do it your way!"

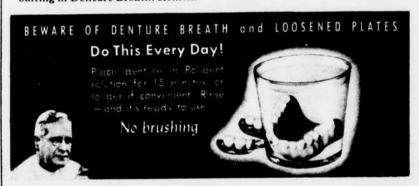

FALSE TEETH WEARERS

WHY RISK THESE TWO DANGERS BY BRUSHING PLATES OR BRIDGES WITH MAKESHIFT CLEANERS?

Brushing your plates with tooth pastes, tooth powders or soap, may scratch the denture material which is 60 times softer than natural teeth. These scratches cause odorous stains, film, and food particles to collect faster and cling tighter . . . resulting in Denture Breath. Remember, you may not know you have it, but others do! Besides, brushing with makeshift cleaners often wears down the delicate fitting ridges designed to hold your plate in place. With worn-down ridges, of course, your plate loosens.

PLAY SAFE-SOAK YOUR PLATE CLEAN IN POLIDENT

The safe, modern way to clean dental plates, partial plates and all removable bridges is to soak them clean in Polident every day. Polident is approved by many leading dentists and the leading makers of modiss Elsie Mason is a pert an' sprightly gal, about 22 or 23, I guess. But she ain't goin' to join the Waves. Or maybe she is.

ELSIE'S SAILOR

"Wally," she says, havin' breakfast, "I'm a wreck! One o' my mother's old school chums has a son that's a sailor. He comes to visit us yesterday an' asks me to do the town with him.

"You got an aspirin?" she goes on. "Boy! Have those sailors got energy! It was about four o'clock in the afternoon when we started, an' he was hummin' 'Stormy Weather' as we left the house. The next twelve hours after that is just a blur. We went to the amusement park an' rode roller coasters till my stomach turned flips.

"Then we went for a ten-mile canoe ride, ate eight hot dogs an' drank four chocolate sodas. Then we go to two movies, one a double feature. Next we eat a bale o' Chinese food an' go to a dance.

"Three o'clock this mornin' they close th' place an' we come home. That big sap keeps me up another hour tellin' me how much th' Navy likes th' Waves an' that they date with sailors, but won't hardly speak to a marine — an' all the time he's holdin' my hand in his big paw.

"I'm patriotic an' I would look snappy in a Wave outfit. But I'm a workin' woman — I got to be at th' shop at 8:30 an' I haven't had enough sleep to make a nap for a cat. My feet ache an' I can't touch a place on me that isn't bruised from that roller coaster. The Navy's too much for me."

"How long is this sailor goin' to be visitin' you folks?" I ask Elsie.

"Gee," she answers, forgettin' herself a little maybe, "I hope he can stay till over Sunday..."

RIGHT OFF THE COR!

Late-season corn may be tough. Fix it like this . . .

by Esther Foley

THIS year of what the farmers call bunched maturity," much corn will be past the best cornon-the-cob stage before it can be gathered and brought to market. No corn should be boiled or steamed to serve on the cob unless it is both young and sweet. Young, tender corn has plump kernels ready to burst with milky fluid. The tight skin has a translucent quality, and the fragrance is sugar-sweet.

But when the kernels are firmly set in the cob, when the skin has a hard bright shine, when the fragrance is more of starch than sugar, corn should not be served on the cob. Then it should be used in one of the many dishes traditional to the American table.

Scrape Them Off

IF THE kernels of the more mature corn ears are really tough or thickskinned, scrape rather than cut the kernels off the cob. To scrape them easily, cut each row of kernels lengthwise down the center. Then cut off the round tip, stand the cob on a flat dish, grasp the knob end and press down the rows with a dull silver knife. The center of the kernels will be forced out, the tough skins will be left on the cob.

If the corn is reasonably tender, just cut off the kernels with a sharp knife, being careful not to cut off any of the cob. The cob can be scraped down with the edge of a silver knife to get off any skipped bits of goodness. Four medium-sized cobs will give 3/4 cup of scraped corn and 1 cup cut corn.

ma Green Corn Fritters

ars of corn, n 1/2 cup fine cracker crumbs 1 egg

1/2 teaspoon baking powder 1/2 teaspoon salt

Scrape or cut corn from ears. Add remaining ingredients, and then add milk if needed to make a drop batter. Drop by spoonfuls into a well greased skillet and fry over low heat until brown; turn and brown other side. Seven to 10 minutes is necessary to cook the corn well. Approximate yield: 4 portions, or 8 cakes. Serve as a vegetable with meat, or in place of pancakes.

The sweetness of the cob itself can add depth of flavor to the bland goodness of stewed fresh corn.

Virginia Stewed Green Corn

Scrape or cut corn from 4 uncooked ears. Break cobs into 3 or 4 pieces, cover with cold water, bring to boiling point and simmer 20 minutes. Add 1 cup of this water to scraped corn and cook rapidly 10 minutes or until tender. The water will be almost gone. Add a little milk, seasoning and a bit of butter. Bring again to simmering point, and serve at once. Yield: 4 portions.

Succotash, a family favorite, needs perking up with onion if the corn lacks sweetness.

4 ears of corn 1 pound lima beans, freshly cooked

1 scallion, finely chopped

2 tablespoons butter

1/2 cup milk or light cream (optional)

salt and pepper

Husk ears and cook in boiling water 10 to 12 minutes. While still warm, scrape or cut kernels from the cob. Sauté onion in butter 1 minute, then add corn and cooked lima beans. Stir well and then add milk and season to taste. Heat and serve. Approximate yield: 4 portions.

If the day grows hot, and a hot corn casserole seems out of keeping, turn the vegetable to a main-dish salad, served with a cool, seasoned boiled dressing. Accompany this with fresh sliced tomatoes, and store buns toasted and lightly but-

Drain cooked sweet corn. Wash green pepper, cut in half and remove seeds and membrane; cook in boiling water for 5 minutes. Cool, drain and chop. Add to sweet corn. Add enough salad dressing to moisten, and a taste of onion juice. Serve on lettuce with garnish of cucumber. Approximate yield: 6 portions.

There's a good reason for the Oriental water pipe—to clean smoke by filtering it. There's the same good reason for Fleetwoods extra length. By straining and filtering each puff through extra length of unsmoked tobacco, Fleetwood gives you the goodness of fragrant tobacco smoke—while it saves you from more of the nicotine, throat irritants and tars that stain fingers and teeth—provided you smoke a Fleetwood no farther than you would smoke a shorter, old-size cigarette.

The end of any cigarette is a cleansing, cooling filter for the smoke. The longer the end, the cleaner the smoke. Light your Fleetwood. Smoke your usual amount. Then discard the 1-o-n-g-e-r end (the strainer) that made every puff a cleaner, finer smoke!

In the picture at left American warships speak in a voice the Japanese on Kiska found too much to face. More than 5,500,000 pounds of bombs were dropped on the installations there within a year in addition to heavy shelling by surface craft. In the South Pacific, the natives of an unnamed island literally spread the mat of welcome for Maj. Gen. F. G. Price of the Marine Corps and his outfit. The native chief is accepting a bowl of kava (an Australasian liquor) from a servant as Gen. Price and his staff look on.

A sumptuous feast, in the manner of the Hawaiian luau, with potatoes and vegetables cooked in the ground under a cover of stones and other savory foods cooked in leaves, was spread beneath the palms for the marines. Gen. Price sits at the head of the banquet spread. Note the roast pig.

spotlight from Orson. One of them is Joseph Cotten, who is seen above going

Mary Rowland, Mary Battle, Linda Brent and Elenor Counts.

Linda Brent lifts the lid for another out-popping from the mystic trunk. This time it's full of Cotten, magically transplanted there after Welles had trussed him up somewhere else in all that rope.

The inevitable rabbit is produced from the startled soldier's pants by Prof. Welles, whose every gesture as master of hocus pocus deepens the eerie atmosphere of legerdemain and prestidigitation.

Popping into the Wonder Show here is Rita Hayworth—from a trunk in which her presence defies all logic after Welles had roped her securely somewhere else. At another point in the performance Rita suffers no pain or permanent damage from being "sawed in two."

Stars in the audience add to the lure of the show for service men. Here a sailor and soldier seize their big chance for autographs from Greer Garson—and get them. Civilians can see the show, too—at a price.

Vanished rings from the audience reappear in the strangest places. Here a soldier finds his on the garter of one of Welles' lovely assistants. Looking on in his conjurer's robe, Welles a moment before had "ground up" the ring with mortar and pestle.

Heroes of the Washington Area

LT. ALLAN ROTHENBERG.

For heroic and skillful attack on Japanese cruisers as commander of a big Catalina flying boat, designed primarily for patrol and reconnaissance, Lt. Rothenberg was awarded the Navy Cross and the Silver Star. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Pincus Rothenberg, 27 10 Cortland place N.W., the 25-year-old Navy flyer is well known in Washington as a former baseball player and manager of the football team at George Washington University, which he left in his senior year to enter flight training in 1940.

Lt. Rothenberg won the Navy Cross for "extraordinary heroism" in the Solomon Islands on October 16 and 20, 1942, after having been decorated with the Silver Star for "conspicuous gallantry" in a torpedo attack on enemy forces in the battle of Midway in June of that year. In awarding him the Navy Cross, Admiral William F. Halsey's citation thus described the flyer's achievements in the Solomons:

"Skillfully locating a hostile cruiser off Santa Cruz Island in the misty darkness of early morning, Lt. Rothenberg, on his first attack, swept too close to the vessel for a release which would arm his torpedo. Coming back in a determined second run, he defied a tremendous hail of antiaircraft fire to score a direct hit on the enemy ship. Later, off Guadalcanal, he located and attacked two other Japanese cruisers through a deadly screen of brusting shells, leaving one badly damaged and lying dead in the water."

This is one of a series of portraits of decorated war heroes of the Washington area, drawn by Newman Sudduth of The Star's art staff.

A towering steel lookout post on Guadalcanal. It was somewhat of a steeplejack's job to build this tower hidden from Jap raiders amid the island's tall palms. This is one of the many "improvements" on Guadalcanal. The Yanks used trees at first Guadalcanal natives help Marines build more telephone lines on the island. They are tending the reels which pay out the copper wire as it is drawn over the crossarms of new poles. U.S. Marine Corps and Navy Photos.

This new communications line on Guadalcanal crosses plains, rivers and jungles. A "cat" is being used to help in stretching wire over the new poles. Ninety per cent of the poles used are mahogany, which would make them worth a bout $180 each in the American market.

He was just an old flame and she thought they were all washed up. But when she saw him in uniform it was love all over again, and now he's her new boy friend once removed.

Dorothy and her mother are so anxious to make a good impression on the new boy friend. This is the first time he's come to take Dorothy dancing. When he asked, before they started out, if he might wash his hands they said, "Why, certainly." But a terrible thought has come to them. A view of the bathroom (right) shows why.

Picture Pattern of the Week

"Picture of the Week" at the National Gallery of Art is "Bianca Maria Sforza," by Ambrogio de' Predis of the Milanese School (Widener collection). It will be the subject of a brief talk to be given at the gallery twice daily this week, Monday through Saturday, at 12:40 and 1:40 p.m., and next Sunday at 2:15 and 5:15 p.m.

This button-front coat dress with its crisp, white collar can be the one allimportant dress of your fall wardrobe. It's a dress to live in—you can work in it, shop in it, wear it for dancing, meet the boys at the canteen in it. Cut entirely according to the new fabric-conservation orders, it has all the neatness you could want. You'll like it as much as Hollywood's Evelyn Keyes who wears it in the picture. Pattern No. 1837 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Size 14, with three-quarter sleeves, requires 3% yards of 39-inch material .

Chambers has been in the undertaking business for more than 36 years. He has always been a strong advocate of low prices. Nothing cheap, BUT . . . MORE FOR YOUR MONEY. When the OPA issued orders to keep prices down, it greatly pleased Chambers . . . for now Chambers can buy, or rather Chambers has bought, carloads of fine caskets direct from the factory at low prices. Typical of Chambers, he continues to supply fine funerals at moderate prices . . . quality considered, you can't buy a funeral such as Chambers supplies anywhere for less money. Chambers says: "I'll supply fine funerals at a price as low or lower than any under-
