The channel sky was filled all morning with large formations of aircraft as the Allies began their fifth successive day of around-the-clock assaults. Four large attacks apparently were carried out before a.m. Among the aircraft going over were American Marauders.

The Berlin broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, said the American bomber formations were attacked over Northern France by German fighters and that heavy losses were inflicted on the raiders. "At the present moment fierce air battles are taking place over the region of Wuertemberg-Baden," the broadcast added.

Dewey, Bricker and Warren Take Lead For Postwar Policy

By GOULD LINCOLN,

Star Staff Correspondent.

MACKINAC ISLAND, Mich.,
Sept. 6.—As the Republican Postwar Advisory Council convened here today to formulate policies, both foreign and domestic, there were growing indications that the party no longer is the sponsor of isolationism—a tendency spearheaded by New York's Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, who came out in an interview last night for a permanent military alliance with Great Britain and close relations with the other United Nations. While many council members insisted that overemphasis had been placed on the foreign policy program and that the average citizen was vitally interested in domestic problems, a number of outstanding Republican leaders, on the eve of the conference, issued statements favoring strong international cooperation after the war.

Most of them were not as out spoken as Gov. Dewey, but they were none the less insistent that some form of international co-operation must be devised to prevent future world wars.

Proposal Assailed by Taft.
Gov. Dewey stepped out at least as far as the position occupied by Wendell L. Willkie in the field of international co-operation. Mr Willkie, not a member of the coun-would have to act in concert with Great Britain in the future. The hope was expressed that other countries, including Russia and China, would also have part in the international agreements and organization for peace. Gov. Dewey explained that he did not mean that the United States should become either a junior or senior partner of Britain to help maintain the British Empire. What he meant, he said, was that it would be to the interest of the United States to enter into a defensive military alliance. "It would be to our interest," he said, "to have a military alliance with Great Britain after the war.

Under command of First Lt. N. J. De Rosa, jeeps were driven at 20-mile speed over platforms that bounced them high in the air, simulating jeep tactics in war zones.

Bold Stroke by 3 PT Boats, 15 Soldiers Takes Lipari Isles

Star Staff Correspondent.

SICILY (By Mail).-Three of the Navy's tiny PT boats and 15 Army enlisted men captured the Lipari Islands—including the celebrated red-glowing volcano of Stromboli, which long has served as a night landmark for pilots bombing Italian cities-in the early afternoon of August 17.

The expedition, led by Lt. E. A. Dubose of Fort Worth, Tex., was one of the boldest naval strokes of the Sicilian campaign. For a month this group of islands through which the PT boats darted at night from their raids on the Strait of Messina, had been places of mystery. They might be strongly defended. It was known that Lipari, argest of the group, was the site of an important Italian concentration camp and might be presumed to have a considerable enemy gar-

Konotop itself was in imminent units now engaged in an encirclement move made possible by the seizure of Korop, northwest of the northern Ukrainian city on the Desna River. Field Defense System Of Nazis Revealed by Red Army Victories By HENRY C. CASSIDY,

Associated Press War Correspondent. WITH THE RED ARMY ON THE STEPPE FRONT, Sept. 5 (Delayed). —An elaborate system of German field defenses—similar to those the Allies may encounter later in Western Europe—has been laid bare by the Red Army's offensive which has taken Kharkov, Taganrog, Belgorod, Orel and other important points. Generally speaking, the Nazi defenses consisted of three zones to a depth of 10 to 121/2 miles, with intermediary lines intended to absorb the shock of attacks.

Details of the intricate defense system were explained and shown to American and British correspondents today in a visit to this front. While no steel or concrete fortifications were in evidence, the defenses were cleverly constructed and appeared to be a tough nut to crack.

Col. Ivan Vorobiev, staff representative of Gen. Ivan Konevy's Steppe army which took Kharkov, told the correspondents the three zones were divided into a frontal region about 3½ miles deep, a secondary zone 3½ to 5 miles deep and a rear area extending for 2½ to 3 miles.

How Troops Are Distributed.

The frontal regional is subdivided into three stretches, each a little over a mile deep, the first containing infantry battalions and mortar batteries, the second regimental reserves, light artillery and heavy mortars, and the third divisional reserves and heavy artillery. The intermediary lines are used for delaying action, Col. Vorobiev said, while the Germans retreat to the secondary and rear zones. The attempt was repulsed with heavy Soviet losses, the radio said. The various defense zones, he explained, was carefully arranged to cover all approaches to prepared positions, which included barbed wire, trenches and minefields.

"The German defenses were prepared over a period of four to five months and present a very serious obstacle," Col. Vorobiev added. "To break through it is necessary to act danger of collapse with Russian by fire on the entire depth defense with co-ordinated action of artillery, aviation, tanks and infantry. A significant point in the Germans' army organization was the practice of discarding regimental and company formations after one of their divisions had been defeated and reassembling the unit in groups of 60 to 65 men and throwing them back into battle, the Russian officer said.

Such a step was taken with the German 39th Infantry Division, which was cut down during the battle of Kharkov from a normal strength of 10,000 or 11,000 men to 600-but still continued to operate. Three Reasons for Failure.

Col. Vorobiev said the German summer offensive failed for three reasons—first, because it lacked all elements of surprise; two, the attack on the Kursk salient was made along a narrow front, and three, the German air force acted only against the Russian front line without attacking rear areas.

On the other hand, he said, the sians captured a railway station and cause the Red Army was able to to "incite hatred of the persons of have been assigned a quota of $300,- had 5 traffic, 2 drownings and 6 district center in the Sumy region. use reserves on a wide front to enemies and to be excessively gruebreak through with the co-operation of all arms. Encircling maneuvers were described as the basis of the Russian attacks, but Col. Vorobiev said the Red Army also used a new technique of sending individual guns out in great numbers to fire point blank Film Players Return from open positions against their targets. The correspondents were shown a typical German strong point in a forest at Pomerky, 21/2 miles north of Kharkov, where the Nazis had a zigzag trench line 6 feet deep and 2 sians said they took several posi- feet wide with timber-supported dugouts, barber wire and mines. It was taken by a flank attack from the east. We also saw at Alexeievka a height dominating the countryside northwest of Kharkov where the Germans converted a canning factory on a hilltop into a fortress surrounded by trenches and battery positions, with mines and barbed wire in the valley below. The position was stormed by Red Army infantry after artillery had blasted the heights.

Large Copper Firms Enter Light Metals Field

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.-Movement into the field of light metals by concerns traditionally associated with copper and brass attracted attention in the metals industry in the last week.

In the lead business there were reports domestic users of foreign lead must make by September 16 their requests for October deliveries, and then only after exhausting possibilities of obtaining dometsic lead. On the manpower angle of the industry, encouragement was found in the announcement that about 2,750 soldier-miners had been released to produce copper, zinc and molybdenum. There was no breakdown as to the proportionate distri-

147 Violent Deaths Reported in Nation Since Friday Night

As America's second wartime Labor Day week end neared its end today the Nation counted only 147 violent deaths as contrasted to 350 for the three-day period last year and peacetime totals of 614 in 1941 and 514 in 1940.

Although it appeared the full holiday toll would fall below last year's total, it was expected that the present figure would be boosted late today when home-coming vacation-ists take to the highways.

The National Safety Council had predicted that this year's death toll might range from 300 to 500, explaining that the saving up of gas rations for a final summer trip before schools open and other fac-tors possibly would offset reduced traffic due to rationing, infantile paralysis epidemics and unfavor-

'Crack and Thump' Method Teaches Men To Spot Enemy Guns

WITH 5th AMERICAN ARMY. North Africa. (By Mail) (N.A.N.A) Fifth American Army combat teams, as they go through stiff paces at the Leadership and Battle Training Center in North Africa, are becoming experts in the "Crack and Thump" method, a new and effective way of locating enemy gun posi-

Although technical details must remain secret, it can be revealed that an infantry soldier may now determine, with startling accuracy, distances and directions of hidden enemy guns as they fire upon him. Lt. Col. H. Miller Ainsworth of Luling, Texas, explained the mysterious "Crack and Thump" method, a virtual death ray to the Nazis. Method is Explained.

"A bullet, as it flies through the air, makes an audible cracking sound," he said. "The fired weapon. whether rifle, machinegun or howitzer, meanwhile, makes a definite thumping sound. The soldier, from his battlefield position, must recognize the type of weapon instantaneously. He must have a knowledge of muzzle velocities and the rate which sound travels."

As far as censorship allows, Col. Ainsworth further related: "At a 300-yard range, or less, the bulletcrack sounds to the front of the soldier. At certain other distances, the cracking sounds almost overhead, and beyond this, the crack is to the rear. Combining the factors of muzzle velocity and sound travel, the enemy can be spotted.

"The 'Crack and Thump' method.' the colonel continued, "teaches many valuable war lessons. Locating firing positions is a lifesaver for our forces and it can mean sudden death to an enemy who thought he was hidden Live Ammunition Used. "Here at the 5th Army's Leadership and Battle Training Center, we teach with live ammunition. While bullets from undisclosed distances are fired toward the infantrymen they determine the location and type of the guns firing on them.

"They learn to think while under fire. When soldiers are busy with distances and directions, they are cool, and consequently keep casualties to a minimum.

An entire range is set aside at the Center for "Crack and Thump" training. It covers rocky, mountainousous terrain and allows for many hidden pockets for artillerymen to dig in and fire unobserved. While the infantrymen are receiving overhead fire from the unknown positions, they apply the principles of "Crack and Thump." After the problem is completed they come out with startlingly exact reports of the

It is pointed out in well informed quarters the forthcoming appointment of Gen. Marshall must not be interpreted to mean that the Allied forces are ready to start an invasion within the next few weeks. As in the case of the appointment of Gen. Eisenhower as commander of the invasion forces in North Africa and the Mediterranean, several months may elapse between the time Gen. Marshall takes over the command and the start of actual operations.

Gen. Eisenhower is said to be the most favored candidate as chief of staff. He has made a splendid record as commander in the Mediterranean; his planning has been brilliant and its execution equally so.

It is pointed out in some quarters, however, that from now on the position of chief of staff does not require such qualities as Gen. Eisenhower possesses. These could be utilized to a greater advantage in the southern theater of operations where much more severe fighting is likely in the next few months.

Nazis Move Civilians From French Coast As Anti-Invasion Step

By the Associated Press. LONDON, Sept. 6.—German military authorities, apparently fearful of an Allied invasion thrust into Southern France, were reported today to have cleared all civilians from a 50-mile strip of the French coastline between Narbonne and Montpelier and to be rushing the construction of additional fortifications in that area. The cleared area, extending back 10 miles from sea, is in a flat, sandy sector of the coast which would lend itself naturally to landing opera-

In addition to the measures being taken in this area, the Germans were said to have sent 5,000 to 10,000 engineers to Marseille and Toulon to strengthen fortifications in those ports. According to reports reaching Al-lied officials in London the Ger-mans recently have speeded up the work of improving roads throughout coastal areas in Southern France to facilitate quick troop movements.

It is estimated here that the German garrisons in France at present total about 500,000 men. In the Biarritz area, thousands of Frenchmen were said to have been impressed to sandbag coastal defenses and a number of heavy gun emplacements were reported under construction. Further east, the Italians have packed the coast from Mentone to Toulon with troops of the 4th Army. Artillery and machine-gun posts have been set up along the coast. Field Marshall Gen. Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt, 67-year-old German commander in chief in Western Europe, who led the Nazis into Poland and carried out the breakthrough at Sedan in France in 1940, has his headquarters at Montpelier, where he is said to be directing the anti-invasion prepara-

It is believed that an Allied landing in Southern France, however, would draw quick support from some 200,000 Frenchmen who already are armed and waiting for the word to

Chinese Schools Thrive In Jap-Occupied Areas

China is maintaining its own schools even in areas occupied by the Japanese. Of the 97 counties in Kwantung, 31 are nominally in Japanese hands, yet in these 31 counties the Chinese government supports 1,200 elementary schools teaching 500,000 children. Meantime, Japanese schools, set up for propaganda, are poorly at-tended. Chungking reports that while Chinese guerrillas of Kwantung keep the foe pinned to the towns, the children of the guerrillas learn to be good citizens of the republic.

At the start of the Munda offensive, the Japanese did try their night infiltrations to sandpaper the nerves of front line soldiers with yells, derisive shouts in English, and blasts of closein gunfire.

Churchill's Plane Now at Factory For Refitting

By the Associated Press.
TUCSON, Ariz., Sept. 6.—The Commando, Winston Churchill's far-traveled Liberator bomber, has arrived at the Tucson division of Consolidated Vultee aircraft to be refitted as a transport.

Now on its fourth set of engines the bomber carried the British Prime Minister to Russia, Turkey, Cairo, the conference at Casablanca and the recent parley at Quebec. Lined with fiber board, the plane contains eight seats, a crude lavatory, a small hot plate and two comfortable bunks located in a compartment above the bomb bay. Officials here said they expected the refitted plane would be returned to the Prime Minister's service.

1940 GOP Delegates Favor Gov. Dewey for 1944 Nomination

CHICAGO, Sept. 6 .- Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York today stood first, second and third on the list of potential Republican presidential candidates as disclosed in a pri-vately sponsored poll of delegates to the 1940 GOP National Convention.

The poll, conducted by James S. Kemper, insurance executive, put Gov. Dewey in first place with 35.52 per cent of the total vote despite repeated denials by Gov. Dewey that he has presidential ambitions for 1944. His closest rival for first choice of the delegates was Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio, who polled 21.38 per cent.

Wendell L. Willkie, 1940 candidate, stood third on the list of first choices with 17.59 per cent. Then came Gen. Douglas MacArthur with 7.93, Senator Taft of Ohio with 5.52 and former President Hoover, who was the first choice of 4.14 per cent of the delegates.

Gov. Dewey, however, was the second choice of 29.50 per cent of the delegates, while Gov. Bricker was chosen by 1916. Gen. Mac-Arthur stood third in this listing with 15.71 per cent, Senator Taft fourth with 9.96, Mr. Willkie fifth with 6.52 and Mr. Hoover last with

The third choice spot also went to Gov. Dewey with 18.62 per cent of the delegates voting for him. Senator Taft moved up to second place in this classification with 17.75 per cent of the delegates. Gov. Bricker was third with 17.32, former Gov. Harold Stassen of Minnesota fourth with 9.96, Senator Vandenberg of Michigan fifth with 7.79 and Gov. Earl Warren of California sixth with 7.36.

Mr. Willkie ranked the poorest candidate by 57.98 per cent of the delegates, with Mr. Hoover the second poorest by 11.70 per cent. The poll, Mr. Kamper said, covered all the 48 States.

To that end the United States must be prepared to undertake new obligations and responsibilities in the community of nations. We must co-operate with other nations to promote the wirer international exchange of goods and services, to broaden access to raw materials, to achieve monetary and economic stability, and thus discourage the growth of rampant nationalism and eventually an effort would be made its spawn, economic and military aggression. He said there was merit in the proposal of Gov. Bricker that a constitutional amendment for a single six-year term for President should be submitted to the people. Thinking of things like that keeps Jake lying awake nights, perspiring freely. Fortunately for Jake most of the newcomers take little interest in union matters, because they could toss his whole administration in the ash can if they felt moody.

As an example of how some of the unions have jumped in size from 1940 to now take a look at these estimated figures:

AFL boilermakers (ships and such), up from 33,000 to over 500,000; AFL laborers, 162,500 up to 412,500; AFL carpenters, 300,000 to 600,000: CIO United Auto Workers (aircraft, etc.), 412,000 to 1,100,000; CIO steelworkers, 530,000 to 900,000; CIO electrical, 200,000 to 600,000; Independent Machinists (formerly AFL) 190,000 to 600,000.

Because they generally do not plan to spend the rest of their lives running lathes, drill presses and thingamajigs, the gals are not greatly interested in strengthening the future position of their unions.

In fact, to a huge portion of newly unionized workers unions are just something you join before going to work in a factory. They need neither the job security, higher wages nor other advantages a union can claim in less prosperous times. Employers are so eager to get workers that unions have had their old talking grounds cut from under them.

A Needed Investment

A new slum-clearance program being drafted by the National Capital Housing Authority, with the support of Commissioner Young, should be ready by the time that Congress returns from the summer recess. Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee and a number of his colleagues have expressed great interest in the project. The legislation would provide for a tangible start on a "continuous" program of slum elimination without waiting for the end of the war to do what ought to be done now.

There are two main objectives in the plan now being prepared. One is to return to the principle, implicit in the original Alley Dwelling Authority Act, under which earnings and balances from the Authority's, invested capital in low-cost housing would be used by the Authority as a revolving fund. In June of 1942 Congress abolished this practice and provided that earnings and balances be turned into the Treasury, instead of being "plowed back," as it were. into slum-elimination work. Congress should, of course, receive a strict accounting of expenditures under this revolving fund. But the effect of its action in 1942 was to stop the Authority from going ahead with its slum-elimination program at a time when it was more important than ever that the work proceed.

The second objective is an appropropriation of $5,000,000 as a new fund for slum elimination. With this money the local authorities believe it possible to wipe out one of the worst and most densely populated alley areas in the District and to provide new housing for its occupantstwice as many as should be living in the area in question. In these days of stupendous war expenditures, that sum is a trifle. Yet its expenditure in this fashion is a fundamental necessity in the District, where the housing shortage has been most keenly felt by Negroes in the lowincome levels, for whom practically nothing now is being done.

The method outlined in this plan has been demonstrably successful in Washington. It represents a practical form of slum elimination for which no effective substitute has been found. It is in the nature of a public investment in the provision of lowrent, decent housing which yields returns in better public health, in reduction of the crime rate, in the destruction of cancerous areas which infect surrounding property values and in the reutilization of such areas for other purposes. It is an investment which also yields dollars and cents in rentals and other revenues from transfers of reconditioned property, which help finance a continuation of the program.

Postwar Cooling Period

The outline of a postwar program which Herbert Hoover has submitted to the Foreign Policy Association, particularly his suggestion for a cooling-off period before attempting to write a permanent peace, finds a great deal of support in experience and common sense.

Mr. Hoover was not talking about the problems that will present themselves for immediate solution after the war. The former President emphasized that such things as the establishment of order, the provision of food, total disarmament of the enemy, punishment of the Axis leaders and the restoration of dispossessed peoples must be attended to as quickly as possible. But he took a different view of the problem that will be presented in working out a permanent peace.

He advanced several reasons for deferring the final settlement. The war will end, Mr. Hoover said, with passions at white heat, in which atmosphere a just, and therefore lasting, peace would be virtually impossible of attainment. The victorious nations will find themselves impoverished, and their peoples will demand the things they believe will restore prosperity and security. This would reduce the peace conference to a scramble for individual advantage. Finally, Mr. Hoover said, there is apt to be a reaction toward isolationism in this country as the war-weary soldiers return to their homes. Time will be needed to enable the American people to obtain a better understanding of their opportunity and their responsibility.

In the light of experience, it is reasonable to assume that these contentions are valid. There are have us believe that the end of the | mitting other men to work in war | winter, and then some.

war will bring, almost automatically, a sort of millennium in which all people will be generous and tolerant, far-sighted and self-sacrificing. But that is an assumption which runs counter to the teachings of history. To predicate our postwar planning on any such assumption is to invite the bitterest of disappointments. Certainly there would be wisdom in postponing a final settlement until there has been opportunity to cool off and take stock of where the world stands after the war, and where it can reasonably expect to go.

To quote from Mr. Hoover's statement: "The Temple of Peace cannot be erected until its foundations are well laid. If we make a good peace it will largely preserve itself. If we make a bad one, like Versailles, we shall simply be laying the kindling for World War III. And no machinery for preserving peace will stop its taking fire.'

maile peace slowly.

Labor Day

Under the impact of the war the annual observance of Labor Day has ceased to be merely a trade union affair. The need for such an occasion no longer exists. Organized workers in 1882 wanted parades and mass meetings to demonstrate to the general public the solidarity to which they had attained. Now, however, collective bargaining is the law of the land, and there is no reason to agitate for what once were called "the rights of the downtrodden toilers."

Even if the Axis powers never had challenged the civilized nations of the world, the traditional celebration of the first Monday in September as a labor holiday probably would have ceased. People commonly care little about marching and listening to oratory. In the years immediately preceding Hitler they were content to use the opportunity for rest and recreation. Doubtless they will do the same after the war has been concluded. Meanwhile, the victory for freedom has not yet been won, and workers, both organized and unorganized, are conscious of their duty to continue production uninterruptedly. In harmony with President Roosevelt's message, they will strive to "save lives and suffering" by employing every available moment of time to constructive effect.

Not by accident did the leader of the American people refer to "all Americans," including "management" and farmers, as sharing in a determination that the prevailing struggle shall finish in the defeat of the "brutal Axis masters" to the end that "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness shall be the lot of man | Senate Agriculture Committee and when he wills it." Labor Day in 1943 is symbolic of the new vision of humanity. The goal to which it is directed cannot be gained without sacrifice, but when it has been achieved its benefits will be denied to no deserving individual.

Crisis in Manpower

Nothing could better illustrate the extent to which this Nation's war manpower problem has been mishandled than the "drastic" labor program for the West Coast area which has just been announced by Director James F. Byrnes of the Office of War Mobilization.

This move by Mr. Byrnes comes on the heels of dismal failure by the War Manpower Commission. The commission has clung to the theory that the manpower shortage could be dealt with on a "voluntary" basis. Compulsion is abhorrent to the commission, so it has sought to persuade men to go into essential work voluntarily. Of course, the commission has threatened to draft them for military duty or to deny them other employment unless they take the jobs the commission wants them to take, but this, it is said, is not compulsion. If the workers yield to this pressure and these threats, and go into war jobs, they have done so voluntarily so far as the commission is

This hypocritical approach has served to irritate a good many people without solving the manpower problem. And now conditions on the West Coast have become so acute that Mr. Byrnes steps in with another voluntary solution. Local committees are to be set up in West Coast communities to establish "urgency" ratings for war projects and available manpower is to be assigned in accordance with these ratings. Workers in high-priority plants will receive special draft consideration. As a companion measure, new contracts will be kept away from acute labor shortage areas and some production jobs already out under contract may be shifted to sections where more labor is available. All of this may be of some help. But it will not create any additional workers and it does not appear that there is anything in the new program to compel workers to take essential jobs if they do not want to do so. In other words, although we have reached a most critical stage of the war, the administration still is unprepared to get down to realities and face the fact that the home front is indistinguishable from the battle front. We will go on for a while longer, telling some men that they must put on a uniform and risk their those in this country who would lives on the battlefield, while per-plants or not, as they see fit. The obligation to bear arms is recognized and is made compulsory. The obligation to supply arms, for no valid reason, remains on a volunteer basis. And while the Government still shrinks from compulsion on the home front, the real truth is that by the Government's own admission the armed forces are not getting the weapons they need.

There is a curious irony in the fact that Mr. Byrnes should have announced his so-called drastic program for the West Coast on the same day that Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, came publicly to the conclusion that something may have to be done about "feather bed" practices on the

The purpose of feather bed rules is to compel the railroads to hire two men to do the work of one man. In time of war, especially, these rules In other words, to paraphrase an involve an open and scandalous waste old proverb, we would do well to of manpower, but nothing has been done about it for fear of offending the railroad unions. But at last, and in the face of what Mr. Eastman calls a crisis in railroad manpower, the Government is about to go to the extreme length of decreeing that men can no longer be paid for doing nothing. After all, we have been told time and again that this is total war, and things may get to a point where, we can no longer waste manpower in made work and imaginary jobs.

He Got Results

There have been few dull moments in the life of William M. Jeffers since he came to Washington as rubber czar a little less than a year ago. An old hand at the gentle art of "raising hell," to use one of his own expressions, Mr. Jeffers soon demonstrated that he was perfectly capable of holding his own in the official jungleland of this wartime Capital.

He arrived in Washington at a time when certain critical materials were scarce. And he found himself thrown into competition with other administrators who were in the habit of getting what they wanted for their own programs. But Mr. Jeffers had not risen from call boy to president of the Union Pacific Railroad by turning the other cheek. He could be pleasant and agreeable enough when things were going smoothly, but he also could be as tough as they come when occasion demanded, and this was soon to be demonstrated.

The records will show that Mr. Jeffers came to grips with some of the most aggressive men in Washington, and if he lost a decision to any of them it is not recorded in the books. He even "told off" the rector to go back to his railroad, it would be a mistake to remember him only as a two-fisted battler for what he believed to be right. It is more appropriate, and more constructive, to think of him as a man who has demonstrated that it is possible to get things done on schedule in Washington.

Mr. Jeffers was brought here to administer the rubber program mapped out in the Baruch report. At the time this was regarded as the most urgent of all war jobs. But Mr. Jeffers knew what had to be done, there was no division of responsibility, and he was given all the power that he needed by the President. Starting from this sound foundation, he simply "bulled" the rubber program through, and because the job was planned right and done right. the fear of a disastrous rubber short-

In this process Mr. Jeffers stepped on a good many toes. But this aspect of his year in Washington is also worthy of a little critical examination. When Mr. Jeffers was using the powers that the President had given him to get what he needed to do his job-something that many administrators have been afraid to do-there were loud outcries. It was said that if Mr. Jeffers got the critical materials that were needed to build synthetic rubber plants there would not be enough of these items left to make escort vessels and highoctane gas and military planes. But it has not worked out that way. If we are running behind schedule in any of these categories today, it is not due to any shortage of critical materials. And it is a good thing for the country that Mr. Jeffers was not the type of man to be overawed by these well-intentioned but misguided prophecies of disaster, for his rubber program is over the hump and the other programs have not fallen by the wayside. But if Mr. Jeffers had not stood his ground, and if he had not been supported when he needed support, there could easily have been another story.

A year or so from now, when there is plenty of rubber, there probably will be few to remember that a man named "Bill" Jeffers turned the trick. But that will not concern him greatly. There is reward enough for him in knowing that he came to Washington to get results, and that he got them.

Since it sounds so much nicer, it would not be surprising to have knocked-out boxers follow the German technique and tell reporters that they retired according to plan and cleverly detached themselves from the opposition.

Berlin may soon be an open city without any declaration by the Nazis -if wide open spaces in it are part of the definition.

Allies Keep Nazis In Italy Guessing By Maj. Geo. Fielding Eliot.

The invasion of Italy is the center of all attention, but there is nothing more to be said about that operation until its next phase can be known. The British have their beachheads, they have encountered-so far-only token resistance from the Italians, and no Germans. The world awaits the news of the whereabouts of the 7th American Army, perhaps also of the 5th and the French. But the word has not come, and until it does, guesswork is futile. Perhaps we may draw a hint from the renewed air attacks on the railway communications in the vicinity of Naples, but even that is capable of two interpretations: A landing in the Gulf of Naples, or a mere cutting of the rail lines which serve such Axis forces as may be preparing to resist the British down in Calabria.

We must very properly remain in the dark until the new blows fall. We may be sure they are coming, and we may be sure that the absolute dearth of official news is one of the cloaks used to prevent the enemy from obtaining knowledge of where they are coming. Even the air attacks may be intended deliberately to deceive the foe.

He is just as anxious to know what is about to happen as we are; more so, for until he does know he cannot make the best disposition of his limited forces to meet the Allied thrusts. Let us try for a moment to look at the problem from the point of view of a purely mythical Field Marshal Von X, who is, we will assume, the commander of the German troops in Italy.

We will say that Von X has at his disposal 12 German divisions in Northern Italy and 3 divisions in South Italy. The last three are the divisions which escaped from Sicily, and which have since been built up to something like their former strength by replacements of personnel and equipment. Von X has, let us say, 500 fighters and a few squadrons of bombers; he can call on some additional bombers from the general reserve, but not many, unless and until it is clear that the Allies are landing in great force. He is quite uncertain as to how far the Italians can be counted on; in any case there are not more than 20 or 30 Italian divisions available in the peninsula, and some of these are not up to strength.

Now comes the news of the British 8th Army's landings at the tip of the Calabrian "toe." What is Von X to do? If he rushes his three German divisions to the spot and starts a heavy fight in the Calabrian hills, no doubt he can hold Montgomery back for a time. But can he depend on the Italians to defend his rear against an American landing? The American 7th Army can come ashore almost anywhere along some 200 miles of coast—the stretch within fighter operating radius from Siclian bases. The Italians cannot possibly defend so long a front against a penetration whose point of incidence cannot be foreseen. Once the Americans are ashore north of Von X's three divisions, those divisions are trapped. So he cannot send them south until he is sure where the Americans are, and perhaps not then. Shall he call for reinforcements from the north? If they start at once and come southward with all the capacity of the Italian railway lines devoted to their movement, Von X could hardly count on the delivery in South Italy of more than a division a day-and it would do little good to build up a force of six or seven divisions, to be trapped just as surely as his original three divisions. though its envelopment and destruction might take a little longer.

In fact, Von X may well entertain a shrewd suspicion that his wily opponent, Gen. Eisenhower, whose mind he has learned to respect from bitter experience, would like nothing better than to destroy the German Army in Italy in such a piecemeal fashion. This suspicion may be confirmed in his mind by the smashing blows of the American long-range bombers at the railway bridges at Bolzano and Trento, on the main railway line which, via the Brenner Pass, connects Italy with Germany. That looks as if Gen. Eisenhower were trying to cut off the German troops in Italy from any hope of supply or reinforcement.

There seems only one possible decision for Von X-to withdraw his three German divisions northward, leaving local defense to the Italians and perhaps a very few small German detachments, and take up a position perhaps near Taranto or perhaps as far north as Foggia or Naples, where those divisions can act as a covering force for the main body of the German Army in Italy, and can take advantage of any favorable development in the situation for example, perhaps, a chance to strike a telling blow at the Americans while the British are still too far away to help them. But it is really impossible for Von X to make a worthwhile plan until he knows what his enemy is up to. So if you feel the suspense of these crucial hours hard to endure, you may soothe your nerves with the comforting realization that the German high command finds it even harder. The Japanese Can Quit

From the Montreal Star. For the first time since Japan launched her treacherous attack on Pearl Harbor and engulfed the whole of the Pacific in war, Japanese troops have abandoned a position without a fight. The evacuation of Kiska in the face of attack by a combined Canadian and American amphibious force may mean any one of a number of things related to the strategy of war in the Pacific. It does mean one thing, certainly: That the Japanese can admit defeat; that they are not prepared to fight it out to the last man everywhere as they did on Attu.

Democrats Win Election And Shoot at Editorial.

To the Editor of The Star: The editorial on the Democrat in the 2d California congressional district, headed "Democratic Victory," in today's (September 3) Star is deeply appreciated. I trust that every interested person will reread it. It illustrates the type of explanation which may well be used by the Republicans in the next two years. It emphasizes several points which will appear again and again. Your writer did well to bring out the following points:

1. The Democrats are united and carried a district which has been consistently Republican throughout the entire Roosevelt administration.

2. The Republican party in the district is so hopelessly disunited that even the most skillful political managers could not heal the breach. 3. That President Roosevelt has been remain.

To the Editor of The Star: The address delivered on September 1 by Pope Pius XII is animated by a fervent humanitarian spirit. By appealing to the desire for peace and for the development of genuine human brotherhood, a desire which exists in the hearts of all men of good will, the Pope arrests our attention and turns our thoughts to the possibility of a peace to be established on some other basis than the Roosevelt-Churchill formula of "unconditional surrender."

But what is this alternative basis for peace that is vaguely hinted at? One of the Pope's striking sentences is: 'Give all nations a justified hope of worthy peace which does not clash with their right to live or with their sense of honor." But how can nations like Poland, Czechoslovakia or Norway enjoy "a worthy peace which does not clash with their right to live" so long as the Hitler government or any other party of militant egotists is in power in Germany? Or how can there be any "worthy peace" which would be consistent with the immoral but real sense of military honor that still apparently constitutes the dominant force in the minds of the peoples as well as the leaders of Germany and Japan?

The danger which is immanent in the Pope's appeal is the suggestion that there can be some sort of workable compromise with the men and the ideas that have brought all these horrors upon the world. The Pope says "real strength need have no fear of generosity." Can the great democracies afford to be generous to systems of government based on immoral force or to the peoples that are the ministers of these tyrants, so long as they continue loyally to do the pleasure of the wicked and essentially stupid leaders who have been deified and worshiped with pagan license in Italy and Germany as well as in Japan?

The evil that is immanent in Fascism and Naziism as well as in the special Japanese megalomania must be honestly antagonized and destroyed, not made the occasion for untimely and inappropriate preachments about "generosity" toward predatory and ruthless enemies. As the ancient author of the Book of Ecclesiastes puts it: "To everything there is a season and a time to every purpose under the heaven; A time to kill and a time to heal, a time to break down and a time to build up; A time to love and a time to hate, a time of war and a time of peace."-Ecclesiastes, iii.1, 3, 8.

Every one knows that the moral beauty of sincere human harmony is intrinsically better than the violent and destructive emotions of war. But there are periods in history in which sincere human harmony is unattainable except through a most vigorous and singleminded crusade against the forces of evil. If those forces of evil seem to find their "outward and visible form" in the activities of whole nations, and in the institutions, the armies and the ideas of whole populations, the crusade cannot be arrested because the devoted swords of the champions of moral right and universal human welfare must, after all, take effect upon human stuff and pierce the hearts of mankind with many sor-CHARLES S. Social Value of Opera By Colored Singers Stressed. So the Editor of The Star:

The very successful presentation of "La Traviata" by Negro singers offers a challenge to the forward thinkers and planners for greater Washington. Cultural offerings on so high a plane should serve to eliminate some of the barriers that have hindered Negroes from attaining to higher realms in artistic production. There was a time when only Negro singers and Negro music of the lower popular level could gain a hearing even in New York City. Today we find the voices of a Marian Anderson and the artistry of a Duke Ellington in palaces as well as hovels.

Spurred on by performances such as that last week at the Water Gate, the people of Washington ought to afford indoor facilities and bi-racial co-operation to bring to all of us some of the other offerings trained Negro singers and dancers are prepared to give.

The writer heard Jules Bledsoe and Mme. Jarboro, two talented Negro artists, in the title role of the opera "Aida" in New York several years ago under the auspices of the Chicago Opera Co. These two natural parts for Negro singers were done so well as to merit the plaudits of all of the metropolitan

Now that Lillian Evanti and Joseph Liscomb, with many splendid supporting artists and the Symphony Orchestra, have paved the way, let us hope that we will have more of these thrilling occasions. Not only would this redound to the credit of music lovers but it would have social import of great value.

Jeffers Cited For Notable Services

By DAVID LAWRENCE. The voluntary resignation of William M. Jeffers, rubber director, has about it so many circumstances and aspects differing from the customary withdrawal of a man from an official position that it is worth celebrating. For Mr. Jetters a ccomplished what few business men nave ever done during a brief stay in the midst of the conflicts and confusions of officialdom. Mr. Jeffers didn't David Lawrence. want the job of rubber director or any other job in Washington. As president of the Union Pacific Railroad he had his hands full operating a trunk line in wartime. But the chairman of the Union Pacific's board of directors is Averill Harriman, a close friend of President Roosevelt now serving the Government at London, and the Harriman interests are powerful in the ownership of the Union Pacific.

So Mr. Jeffers was persuaded to come. He was indeed drafted. And It can be said of him today—that he came, he saw, and he conquered. Having no ax to grind, no political ambition to serve, no idiology to defend or oppose, and no interest in camouflaging some one else's mistakes or placating some incompetent officials' feelings, Mr. Jeffers charted his own course. He had a job to do and he showed all Washington and the country how to get it done.

Spoke Out Bluntly. In the first place, when summoned before a congressional committee for a hearing, he spoke bluntly and frankly and let it be known that he wouldn't be highpressured by politics or anything else into doing something he thought unsound. The whole country applauded his outspoken remarks.

Then Mr. Jeffers found himself at variance with some of the lesser Army and Navy officers who, conscientious about their appointed tasks, nevertheless were in his judgment interferring with his assignment to get our synthetic rubber plants built promptly. If the Army and Navy officers were right then some one had given Mr. Jeffers a wrong steer as to his authority and goals. He forced a showdown even though it made some unpalatable publicity and seemed to reveal a bit of friction inside the ranks of the administration. But in the end Mr. Jeffers' point was accepted-he was permitted to have a fixed percentage of materials and supplies with which to build the synthetic rubber plants - a percentage he agreed was adequate though not as much as he would have liked. He showed himself to be both practical and reasonable as well as assertive.

Decisions Made Quickly. After a few skirmishes, all Washington knew it was best to let Bill Jeffers alone to do his job as he had set out to do. But even those who had disagreed admitted that when one did business with the eral pension. Jeffers office it was easy to get a decision-an answer right away and not a run-around or a stall. But Mr. Jeffers did something else even more important than what has been disclosed thus far. The day he came to Washington last September he began to train a successor. He picked as his assistant Col. Bradley Dewey and made up his mind that as soon as his assistant knew enough to take over the job, he, Bill Jeffers, would go back to his railroad. He even fixed a date-July 1-and was able to accomplish July 1—and was able to accomplish it within a few weeks of his time limit. It can never be said of him that he cherished the slightest idea of warming a seat permanently in Washington or getting enmeshed in Washington or getting enmeshed in its intrigues of bureaucratic ramifications. There are many men who come here and make the same resolution but they don't know how to "fire" themselves—to get such good assistants that they themselves can retire from the scene. His Vigor Will Be Hissed.

Bill Jeffers describes himself sometimes as "just an easy-going Irishman" but he has a firmness, a vigor, an incisiveness and an executive capacity which, while it will be missed in Washington is already being utilized running that big trunkline artery to the Pacific Coast in the midst of a war which will see bigger and better percentages of our output moving across the continent and eventually into Japanese territory. And, incidentally, America's synthetic rubber problemcritical last autumn-is today licked. (Reproduction Rights Reserved.)

The administration repeatedly uses certain of its members in a way that we journalists consider unethical. In case after case privileged information has been granted to certain writers, including actual state papers which they alone have been given the opportunity of publishing at great economic benefit to themselves. Thus the administration many months ago turned over to two able journalists the material of what amounted to an official White Paper on the diplomatic prelude to the war, and more recently a special writer for a weekly magazine was given access to confidential diplomatic files on the North African situation. This is a means of publishing official material without taking official responsibility. It is also a means of rewarding the "useful" and punishing the critical-and even perhaps of turning the critical into the useful.

They are more than that-they emphasize the vital importance of agreement now, before the war is over, among the Allies on a workable program. Unless this is done it seems clear that chaos will ensue.

With great charity and force Mr. Hoover urges that there shall not be this time the usual armistice or the usual general peace conference, to which 40 nations will send 2,000 delegates eager to orate and greedy to grab.

Proposes Four Steps. Instead he proposes four steps -first, an agreement before the firing ceases of all the United Nations that a few leading nations be appointed trustees or joint managers of peace; second, that the terms of a simple provisional peace be agreed on now which the managers or trustees shall impose on belligerent Europe the moment firing ceasesand later on Asia; third, that there be a transition period from war to peace of a few years in which the world can cool off and have time for deliberate solution of the long-view problems of lasting peace; fourth, that after the foundations of a real peace have been laid some sort of world institution or league be created to replace the managers or trustees and preserve the peace.

Eleven very clear and cogent reasons to support his four steps are Writer Says Nazis Plan given by Mr. Hoover. To few of these can exception be taken. The other indisputable Hoover point is that out of five thousand years of war an illusion has been built up in the human mind that war can be ended and peace made by signing a piece of paper. To this end, they seek a conference with Mr. Stalin.

Russian co-operation is completely indispensable—but to gain that cooperation some very practical measures must be taken, concessions made and compromises effected. The problems ahead are multitudinous and vast. Victory comes first, of course, but victory is now inevitable and to delay agreement on a preliminary postwar program until the surrender comes is obviously perilous in the extreme.

Mr. Hoover offers a concrete, logical plan that will hold the world together while the right solutions of the great basic questions are sought. It would be fine if the President, instead of rejecting it because Mr. Hoover proposes it, should make it his own-or at least use it as a base

It would be fine, too, if the Republican policy planners who meet this week at Mackinac Island, should follow suit. Thus the whole business of foreign policy could be eliminated from the coming campaign. Thus public sentiment would be consolidated. Those in Washington connected with distribution of the war materials produced in this country say that none of the Russian requests has ever been refused or delayed beyond the physical obstacles which occasionally delayed delivery of war supplies or foodstuffs. None of the Russian requests has been questioned. This Government acted as an efficient mail order establishment. As soon as orders were placed they were rushed to the Soviet as quickly as possible.

As far as the actual military effort of this country is concerned we overlooked the possible advantage of defeating the Japanese first. When our ground, sea, and air forces became strong enough to allow us to take the offensive, they were rushed across the Atlantic rather than the Pacific where until a few months ago Gen. MacArthur had to operate on a shoestring.

Political Considerataion. The voices of some of the American strategists who wanted to crush Japan first were stifled. On several occasions political considerations took precedence over military logic.

The Soviet government may be correct when it maintains that the Mediterranean campaign is picayunish and of no use to them and say that forces now operating in Italy would have been more useful had they been sent into Western Europe.

This point of view is shared by many American military men, but it is not now possible to change our plans. The Russian general staff is fully aware that the large bodies of troops being sent across the Atlantic will be used for cross-channel operations as soon as our strength is suffi-

It is safe to speculate that last week's conversations between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill at the White House dealt principally with the Russian problem. The many rumors that a non-Nazi government may approach Russia with peace terms cannot be dismissed completely because the attacks of the official Soviet press are so unjust that they must arouse the suspicions of the American and British observers.

Both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill would like to meet Premier Stalin. They believe they could speak frankly and dissipate whatever doubts may be in the Russian leader's mind in regard to American-British

Well-informed sources say this American Government would not hesitate to give its associates all the necessary guarantees that it will not tolerate aggression in the future. They are confident that the American people, who are being bled white economically and are likely to lose many of their sons in the war, will approve any kind of guarantee against aggression, provided peace is based on fair play.

If the Soviet government wants new territories to strengthen its strategic frontiers. it need not worry. Strategic frontiers have not helped any of the aggrieved nations in the past and are not likely to help in the future.

In support of his contention that the first inhabitants of this country came from Asia by way of the Bering Strait-a position that provoked a scientific controversy-he made many trips to Alaska and Russia. She Finds Theater's Drama Chiefly in the Box Office

10年 1年 1 1

By JAY CARMODY. The drama of the theater is something that takes place on the inside for the average person. An exception—the one which probably proves the rule—is the girl in the box office. The customers are the players in the drama she sees day after day. As actors go, they are far from bad. In truth, the truth of gentle-faced Anna Mannix, they are a very entertaining lot and after 15 years, she still finds them interesting. Miss Mannix, who is celebrating her 15th anniversary in the box office of the Capitol Theater co- &-

> Miss Mannix recalls a number of interesting persons and experiences she has met over her 15 years in the Capitol's box office.

In the light of today's teeming activity and the swirl of billions of dollars over Washington, a recurring memory is that of the bank-closing days of 1933. Miss Mannix is still surprised that in its stunned stage Washington seemed to find the movies a perfect escape. Long lines of people formed in front of the theater all that inaugural week, unsure where their next money might be coming from, but sure of how they wanted to spend what they had. It was cold and raining, but the line never seemed to diminish. And, funny thing, Miss Mannix says today, as the money was taken in at the box office, it was sent directly backstage to pay off members of the stage show, $25 or so at a time. The headliners of the week, Amos and Andy, were paid that way along with the oth-

Handling it all the time as a cashier, Miss Mannix is money conscious when she thinks back over her experiences of those 15 years. Another money incident she likes to remember involves a foreign diplomat who brought a party to the theater one night. He handed

* * * * Miss Mannix has other ways than friendships and years to measure the length of her service at the Capitol. In her own mind, the longest measurement is that reflected in the fact that she has counted 18 managers coming and going in her time there. That is a lot of managers, but there have been none except Gene Ford now for several years, a comforting kind of stability after all those kaleidoscopic changes.

Miss Mannix's other memories of her 15 years are as varied as they are many. Among them, pleasantly or amusingly, are: The woman 87 years old who used to insist she was Shirley Temple's

It will be a genuine Japanese officer's automatic pistol that John Garfield will be using in one scene officer is shot down by the guns of a submarine as he attempts to bomb the ship.

The day the scene was made the set was being visited by Marine Pfc. Don Lewis, veteran Hollywood stunt man and one-time stand-in for Gary Cooper, just returned from a tour of duty that took him from Iceland to Guadalcanal and the Solomons

Lewis, home on his first furlough, took the gun from a Nip lieutenant, whom the American had the pleasure of personally slaving in one of his lesser fights. He gladly, and quite proudly, loaned the gun for Garfield to use in the scene. It is one prop no critic could ever find fault with.

A MOVING ROLE: A transit system isn't an inert mass of tracks and cars or buses. It's a living, moving mechanism of men and machines serving a community. Capital Transit's Community is a great, unique City . . . our Time the most unique and farreaching in history.

It's a dynamic role Capital Transit plays in the worldwide drama of wartime Washington. Like the icebergs our Atlantic convoys are currently sighting, there is much more than meets the eye. The hundreds of Street Cars, Buses and Operators surging with the flood tide of war workers twice daily is only the obvious part. Supporting them are other hundreds of Capital Transit employees -as important to the actors seen as the playright, director, scene shifters and technicians in any show.

But as Shakespeare said, "The play's the thing"-the men and women merely players. And the play these days is the total defeat of the Japs and Nazis . . . a play in which Capital Transit's army of 5,000 trained men and women are proudly contributing their very best.

Marshall's Sideline Raving Gives Fans Big Kick

George Marshall, that effervescent president of Redskin U., is deserting the concrete campus on Ninth street for more invigorating strolls along the sidelines of football fields, all of which means the fervid followers of Washington's professional eleven may receive a double feature for one admission this season.

It has been several seasons since Marshall deserted the comparative calm of a box seat to shake a menacing finger at officials, but the chief hit Bears, their traditional National the warpath yesterday at Baltimore's Municipal Stadium. The pent-up Football League enemies, in Baltirestraint of years vanished, perhaps to the regret of Coach Dutch Bergman and the officials but to the undisguised glee of the customers.

Change From Past Years

Marshall may harness his emotions and remain in his uper box seat at Griffith Stadium by the time the Redskins start playing for blue chips, but chances are if the pros' boss can become excited enough over an exhibition game to storm and snarl he may be warming up to more sizzling sessions with the horn-blowers.

In six previous seasons here Marshall's conduct has been commendable. He has squirmed upon viewing some of the scenery under him at Griffith Stadium, but never has he ventured down to the Redskins' bench to unleash his wrath.

Marshall didn't embarrass Coach Ray Flaherty with such antics, but Bergman may be subjected to more tortuous times. To the fans Marshall's maneuvering may seem to be trespassing on the territory of Capt. Bob Masterson, who is supposed to handle whatever squawks the Redskins prefer to deliver.

Marshall's one-man parade doesn't add to the comfort of Bergman, who Moore. apparently will have enough troubles this season without attempting to Redskins the decision for Ted keep an eye on the boss. Bergman could be excused for hoping George's

Homers by Robertson, Official Scores Roberts, Newsom's Debut Big Factors

Sunday was a big day for Washington's Nats. They not only spoiled the New York Yankees' bid to tie the major league record of winning 14 consecutive series, but gained the distincton of being the first club to sweep a double-header at Yankee Stadium this year. In addition, they regained second place.
An inside-the-park eighth-inning homer by Rookie Charley Robertshis first in the big leagues—gave Washington and Dutch Leonard a 3-to-2 victory over the Yanks in the first game. The Nats took the nightcap, 5 to 1, behind the four-hit pitching of Bobo Newsom and Milt Haefner, coupled with a three-run homer by Sherrard Robertson in the eighth. Newsom retired after the fifth because of a stomach disorder, but received credit for the win, his second against six defeats since be-of the 1912 Giants who won 14 consective series. It also shaved the Yanks' lead to 10 games. The pace-setting St. Louis Cardinals retained a 14½-game lead in the National League by exchanging shutouts with Cincinnati. Mort Cooper won his 19th game with a four-hit masterpiece in the opener, gaining a 1-to-0 verdict over Clyde Shoun by virtue of Whitey Kurowski's fourth-inning homer.

Buck Walters wielded the whiteafterpiece, giving up only six hits triumph of the season. The Brooklyn Dodgers climbed within half a game of the secondplace Reds by beating the Giants, 5 to 1, for their ninth straight triumph. Dixie Walker backed up Kirby Higbe's six-hit pitching by that broke a 1-1 tie.

Braves Bow to Phils Twice. The Phillies' ended their eightgame losing streak by taking a bouble-header from the Boston Braves, 2 to 1 and 5 to 1. Buster Adams' two-run homer won the opener for Kewpie Barrett. Jim Wasdell poled a three-run circuit clout in the nightcap to help Schoolboy Rowe chalk up his 13th win.

Tommy Bridges, veteran Detroit righthander, blanked the St. Louis Browns in eight of nine innings. Unfortunately from his standpoint, Chet Laabs clouted one of his curves for a three-run double in the fifth inning to give the Browns a 3-to-2 victory. by Eddie Stanky. Rip Sewell pitched the 12th inning in relief for the Pirates and held the Cubs in check. Experts agreed that the threeday classic which ended at Ocean Beach Park here yesterday was perhaps the dullest ever; the field, with getting "four for four." including a a few exceptions, mediocre at the triple in a four-run seventh inning best. Under the circumstances it was only natural that no records were broken. Of course, the war was to blame.

New Stars Turn Up.

On the other side, however, was the fact that the absence of such headliners as Bill Smith and Keo Nakama, Ohio State greats who dominated the championships last year, provided an opportunity for new faces to come to the fore.

These included a couple of 17year-old schoolboys, Paul Maloney. Buffalo A. C., one mile, and Joe Verdeur, Philadelphia YMCA, 220yard breaststroke.

Blazing Finish Looms In Golden Valley's Best Ball Golf

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 6. Three teams were hot on the trail leading to the Golden Valley Bestball Championship today as the golf marathon-longest tournament of the year-entered the final 36 holes. Byron Nelson and Jug McSpaden, who captured the lead from the field of seven other top twosomes the first day with an unduplicated 62-11. strokes below par-still were in front after 90 holes of play. But the tournament, following the tradition of the Inverness Round Robin competition, from which it was copied, swung into the last day with the title hanging in the balance.

Never Safe, Nelson Says. "We may be ahead," said Nelson pro at the Toledo Inverness course. but in the seven years of the Inverness matches, the championship always was decided on the final day. No margin ever is safe in bestball match play.'

With a total of 36 strokes under par. Nelson and McSpaden have captured three of their five matches at Golden Valley, winning 11 holes while dropping 4 to post a plus 7 rating. During the five rounds Nelson has a best ball of 58.

However, it remained for Pvt Chick Harbert, who is stationed at Lincoln, Nebr., to make the tournament's most spectacular shot. Yesterday he rammed in an 8-foot put for an eagle 3 on the 13th, then made the first hole-in-one of his career on the 164-yard 14th by arching a 5-iron shot into the cup without touching the green. Turnesas in Running Yesterday, Nelson and McSpaden, who is suffering from a bad spell of asthma, were beaten by Staff Sergt. Jim Turnesa and Mike Turnesa 3-up, averting a worse licking when Nelson picked off two successive birdies with short putts to win the 16th and 17 holes.

The steady Turnesa combination. which also is 36 under par for 90 holes, and Craig Wood and Jimmy Demaret, 35 under, remained definite contenders for the $1,200 War bond first prize. They had plus 2 counts apiece, five points behind

Bill Kaiser and Johnny Revolta, in fourth place after winning their last three matches, may prove to be the pivot point of the championship race, for they meet Wood-Demaret and the Turnesa brothers today. Nelson and McSpaden must face Harry Cooper and Harbert, then take on Willie Goggin and

Montgomery Group Favors Land-Fill Plan For Refuse Disposal

Inspects New York Sites Where Officialis Said Method Was Success

Tentative approval of the sanitary waste material when the Was. ton Suburban Sanitary Commission takes over the ash, trash and garbage collection in suburban Montgomery County was voiced yesterday by a group of county officials and business leaders on their return from an inspection tour of land-fill operations in New York City.

New York Sanitation Commission officials showed the delegation the entire process, from the collection at the home by refuse trucks, the sanitary fill work and land claimed by the fills, including the site of the World's Fair.

Members of the inspecting party appeared satisfied that the method could be used in the county with no danger of odors or vermin.

Residents Praise System. Members of the party talked to residents of the areas close to land fills, in some instances within 25 feet of the operation, but found no complaints. One of those interviewed told the group that the residents of his section felt the land fill had been a wonderful aid to the community. A brackish swamp section in which several children had been drowned and which formed a breeding ground for mosquitoes and flies had been reclaimed and a modern park and a large school house built on the reclaimed

In the party was Herbert N. Eaton, chairman of the Sanitation and Public Health Committee of the Montgomery County Civic Federation, who said he was completely in approval of the land-fill method and expected to report to the federation that he found no objections.

Others Favor Plan. Lee H. Robinson, president of the Silver Spring Board of Trade, and William F. Carlin of the same organization also expressed themselves as satisfied with the plan. L. B. Neuman, chairman of the Sanitation and Public Health Committee of the Allied Civic Groups of Silver Spring, and Dr. C. A. Weigel, former chairman of the committee, said they intended to present a favorable report. Sanitary land fills have been made in New York since 1937. The cost of this method of disposal is only about one-third of the cost of incineration, city officials said, and has proved so The sanitary land-fill method of refuse disposal consists of dumping in a rooming house on Sixteenth rious North Atlantic patrols. The ground may be used for park purposes within two or three years and for light building in five to seven years, it is said. An area of three-fourths of an acre to one and a half acres will be required each year for a population of 10,000 where the refuse is placed in layers having a compacted depth of 6 feet.

Predicting a continuing shortage of physicians, the report said the armed services' recruiting schedule calls for enrollment of 53,000 doctors by the end of 1943. This will leave 84,000 "affective" physicians to care for 120,800,000 civilian Americans, plus 15,000 public health doctors, 5,000 internes and 3,000 doctors resident in hospitals. Labor Day-before the war-meant the close of the summer season and the end of vacation time. Now there can be no set time for vacations, for respites from work are taken when it is possible to lessen the labor for a short time and very few can or will take the usual three months away from home as so large a number did in other years.

Officials and diplomats have joined the ranks of the hard workers and have had little or no vacations. However, in the past few weeks a few of them have been able to take a week or two away from their desks for much needed rests. Luxury Hotel Gives Restful Vacation to Soldiers in Alaska

The G. I., or Government issue vacation is "strictly a good deal," Corpl. Baumann reported.

Corpl. Baumann is only one of whole hotelful of guests, from privates to lieutenant colonels, who checked out of this hotel after a week of no reveille, no salutes, no guard mount

Rank Is Dropped.

Recognizing the fact that soldiers and officers stationed in Alaska and the Aleutians are serving in some of the most lonely and difficult posts in the world, with leaves rare and the duty tough, Lt. Gen. Simon B. Buckner conceived a plan which would be next-best to a leave in the

By arrangement with the Alaska Railroad, this hotel in the center of the Alaska range, 90 miles from the 20,300-foot Mount McKinley, America's highest peak, was taken over for soldier use. A staff of 30 soldiers, picked for previous hotel experience, was assigned to man it.

And right there, military aspect stopped. Soldiers on leave from the Aleutians, or from posts near the Arctic Circle-most of them given leave in recognition of good service -pay $1.75 a day for their rooms, officers pay $2.25-and all rank is dropped at the front door.

Spend Time Walking. For a week there are meals as fine as any hotel chef could provide, with wide choice of soups and meats and desserts, served on white tablecloths by obliging waiters, music with dinner and complete freedom to obey any whim that any tourist might have indulged in pre-

And some of the favorite whims surprised Corpl. Baumann. "You won't believe it," he says, as he waits for the passenger train that makes a once-a-week round trip up from the coast to Fairbanks, "but most of the guys spent their time walking." Corpl. Baumann, for his part, had had enough walking in the many months that he has been in Alaska. He is not a walker by nature. Back. in Baltimore, he used to assist his father in their grocery store and played the organ at Christ Evangelical and Reformed Church. The most walking he had done was when he used to visit relatives in Philadelphia and toured the city on foot nearly every night. He caught up on sleep, too. In camp he is used to turning out at 6 a.m. On his first morning here, slept until 8, lay in bed for another half hour and then got up.

"But each day it got a little later, he says, reminiscently. "The second day it was 9, and the next 10. By yesterday it was up to 1:30 in the afternoon.' It wasn't all sleeping and chess, though. On his second day, he and some others hiked to the top of a 5,000-foot mountain to get a look at Mount McKinley. It was hidden in fog, but he had seen it anyway from the train.

The next day the hotel "management" arranged a trip-by truckto Camp Savage, 14 miles away, for a look at the caribou herd which had recently come into the area for the calving season. Corpl. Baumann liked that trip.

Surprised Two Bears. The hotel guests saw moose, bear and mountain goats. Two of the guests, Pvt. Ralph Kruse of Denver and Pvt. Elmer Carlson of Boulder. Colo., wandering afield, surprised two grizzlies bathing in a stream, got chased, and outran the bears up a 70 per cent gravel slope and out of sight.

Four nights in the week there were up-to-date movies. On two nights there was bingo, at 5 cents a card, and Corpl. Baumann split one $6.80 with another winner.

He was drafted, on the seventh night, to play the piano in an amateur night program. He played "Sophisticated Lady" and "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" and for an encore gave them "Nola." Officers got drafted along with privates and cor-

'Driverless' Truck

SOMEWHERE IN THE MIDDLE EAST.—The officer driving the little staff car glanced at the 3-ton truck he says. That's what he got, and as he passed it, looked puzzled, and slowed down to let it rumble by him

Then he passed it a second time, signaling it to stop.

"How do you keep your vehicle running from the roof?" he asked a girl in the uniform of the British Auxiliary Territorial Service who was perched up there enjoying the breeze. "I've been watching you for some time now and can see no sign of a driver."

Before the girl could answer a small voice from the inside of the cab piped up: "That's only the second driver, sir." And the door opened to reveal a tiny woman, also in an ATS uniform.

Practice Good Posture for Health

By Patricia Lindsay

Labor Day has a new significance this year for most of us-for we find ourselves among the workers! Our days are long, our leisure hours are few. We have a lot of new beauty problems!

A recent survey showed that fatigue was the most common problem of working girls and women. They got tired too quickly. Further investigation revealed two facts: (1) Women do not eat enough breakfast; (2) girls and women who tired easily had very poor posture. So there in a nutshell is our little beauty lesson for today. Begin your day with a substantial breakfast. New Study Indicates Viruses May Not Be Microscopic Bacteria

By FRANK CAREY.

Associated Press Financial Writer. PITTSBURGH, Sept. 6 .- Science advanced a step last night in its quest to determine the nature of the elusive viruses that cause such diseases as infantile paralysis, influenza, the common cold, measles and yellow fever.

A report made to the American Chemical Society declared studies of a virus disease in plants had revealed new evidence that viruses may be chemical substances with the biological property of reproducing themselves within living cellsinstead of being submicroscopic bacteria as has long been suspected.

Chemists who heard the report on the eve of the Society's 106th meeting said the plant finding was potentially useful in further study of virus disease not only in humans but in animals as well. Viruses cause such illness as hoof and tonight. mouth disease, distemper, hog cholera and chicken tumors in animals Possibilities Poised.

One chemist said consideration of viruses as chemicals rather than as bacteria poised this possibility:

Identification of those chemicals in the human body conceivably would enable chemists to synthesize viruses from laboratory chem-Such synthesis, in turn, might pave the way to studies on the preparation of vaccines to fight the diseases.

The report on the plant virus was made to the Society by Dr. Max A. Lauffer of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, Princeton, N. J.

He offered evidence that the virus which causes tobacco mosaic, an infectious disease of plants, is identical with the giant protein molecule that can be extracted from a plant suffering from the That is, the virus that produces tobacco mosaic is of protein material itself. It's a chemical.

Extraction of a giant protein molecule from a diseased plant was first accomplished in 1935 by Dr. Wendell M. Stanley, also of Rockefeller Institute. At that time, Dr. Stanley reported that the virus, or infectious principle, was present in the protein molecule, but ever since he made his report, scientists have been trying vainly to establish whether the virus and the protein are one and the same.

Theory is Unproved. Some have suggested that certain viruses appearing in the human system have merely attached themselves to protein molecules and are not identical with them. This theory has been advanced in the case of the influenza virus, but it has not been proved.

In his experiment, Dr. Lauffer placed a solution of tobacco mosaic protein in a centrifuge, an instrument which whirls liquids at speeds up to 70,000 revolutions per minute.

He allowed about three-quarters of the protein matter to settle out and then he tested the solution containing the remaining one-quarter. He said he theorized that if the virus and protein were one and had not been settled out would be only one-fourth as powerful an infective agent as it was originally. Such proved to be the case.

Hosiery Salvage Program To End September 30

The hosiery salvage program will be discontinued September 30, W. R. Spicer, chairman of the District program, announced today, after a statement by Paul C. Cabot, chief of the Salvage Division of the War Production Board, that the Nationwide silk and nylon hosiery program would be discontinued at that

Mr. Spicer, general manager of Jelleff's, said a total of 35,694 pounds of hosiery has been col-lected in the District, placing the city ahead of 30 States in collections. Mr. Spicer thanked the Advisory Committee, representing department stores, and the Girl Scouts for their help in carrying out the program.

YELLOW BABOON (Papio cynocephalus)

A bad reputation even concerning monkey stirs in one a desire to look for good traits to offset the loudly proclaimed offensive ones. And, usually, there are redeeming qualities to be found. So with the yellow baboon, it is said he is devoted to his wife and children, a guardian of those under his care and willing to co-operate with those who take the trouble to understand Baboons are said to have savage dispositions. They are fearless and perfectly capable of defending themselves against aggressive foes. These Old World monkeys possess large bodies of great strength. They progress by walking or running on their large hands and long feet. As their eyes are pointed earthward, they must lift their heavy overhanging brows to ascertain what is going on about them.

All members of the species have powerful jaws armed with long, sharp teeth capable of inflicting severe wounds. When attacking the yellow baboon fixes his teeth in the flesh of his adversary and, with a hard pull, tears through the flesh before relaxing his grip. One of the habits of the baboon is to tent, as if yawning. The idea is to exhibit to the aggressor the formidable weapons that may be used against him. This display is supplemented by a loud whacking of the ground by the palms of the hands. As a rule, baboons travel in groups. When involved in any undertaking which they deem dangerous, a sen-

All the species have callosities, or fleshy pads, on the buttocks. These are brilliantly colored.

Baboons of this group range over Western Abyssinia and in the Soudan at elevations of from 2,000 to 5,000 feet. They also occur in the west coast of Africa. The natives hold these baboons sacred and do not molest them.

Labor Speedup

To demonstrate that the high cost of building materials could be largely neutralized by speedy labor, H. J. Thompson of Potchefstroom, South Africa, laid 13,000 bricks in four working days with the help of an apprentice and five native laborers.

Uncle Ray's Corner

Last Saturday we had questions from a reader who wanted to know about ancient Egyptian mummies. I gave some notes about the mummies, but the subject is interesting and I want to go on with it today. Thanks to a modern invention, it is possible to learn certain facts about mummies without unwrapping them. X-ray pictures show any metal or other solid objects under the cloth. The bones can be seen quite plainly in such pictures. It has proved possible to find an abscess opening about the root of a tooth of an ancient Egyptian!

Some parts of Egypt are covered by hot, dry sand. Early in the history of the country, it was found that the body of a person buried in such sand might not waste away for a hundred years or more.

From time to time, however, the richer persons were buried in tombs, along with food, tools and ornaments. In such cases, the bodies were exposed to air and did not last so long.

These facts help explain why the mummy custom was started. The Egyptians believed that a person had a life after death, and could use the things buried with him. If bodies could be made to last, it was supposed that the spirit would have a longer life after death. A great deal has been learned about the methods used by Egyptians when they prepared mummies. Often the bodies were soaked in salt water for a long time, and then were covered with resin. The cloth used to wrap the mummy Egyptian priests did the work. As much as 70 days was spent in
