If all the fund requests of all District departments and services for the next fiscal year are approved finally by Congresswhich is not regarded as likely —the total expenditures would run to $67,230,000, or about $10,-600,000 more than so far appropriated for the present year.

priations is not as great as appears on the surface since the District is accruing an extra obligation this year for the legislated wartime pay increases and overtime, which is to be covered by a deficiency bill. This would cut the proposed increase for next year down to about $6,600,000. Nevertheless, the proposed outlay would be the highest budget the District ever has had, if approved, and, in fact, the original requests are the highest ever proposed, officials said. This is due, to considerable degree, to the overtime and extra pay aside from the service demands of a still growing Capital. Public hearings on the new budget proposals are scheduled for Thursday and Friday, in the Board

Note: The Star is printing, in daily installments, Chief of Staff George C. Marshall's report to the Secretary of War on the period July 1, 1941—June 30, 1943, just made public. "It is a record," Gen. Marshall writes, "of what was done and why it was done and is submitted while America is at war to permit a better understanding of the great offensive operations now in progress."

Machine-Gun Exhibit One of Most Popular At Army Bond Show

An argument is brewing at the Army's War Bond Show.

Any time Chemical Warfare Service members want to claim that their tear gas chamber is more popular than the machine gun tent of the Ordnance Department, ordnance personnel will ask them over for conclusive proof that the machine guns are the No. 1 attraction at Washington Monument Grounds, where the Treasury-sponsored exhibition to promote the sale of War bonds has drawn more than 200,000 people since Thursday. A large turnout is expected today, with hours the same as on week-

Young and old, men and women, they tussle to keep their places in line before the 30 and 50 caliber weapons operated by compressed air while recorded battle sounds raise an unholy din in the tent.

One boy, who had eluded military police before the opening hour and haunted the ordnance tent, refusing to believe the guns could not be operated for another hour, said: "It's okay. I can wait. I don't have to be home for supper until

Hull to Answer Critics Of U.S. Foreign Policy In Broadcast Tonight

By BLAIR BOLLES. Secretary of State Hull will talk on "Our Foreign Policy in the Framework of Our National Interests" tonight in the first public speech he has made since July 23, 1942. The talk, scheduled to last half ar hour, will be broadcast at 9 o'clock by the National Broadcasting Co. The State Department yesterday called the address "very important.

Mr. Hull is expected to respond to critics who maintain that the department lacks a policy and to defend his own course in foreign relations. The department disclosed that the Secretary will give and postwar objectives in the United States' conduct of foreign affairs. The talk comes at a time when the department is in the midst of a new struggle, over authority, which is complicated by differences with the Treasury Department over foreign affairs matters where procurement of supplies abroad is concerned. But it is considered unlikely that Mr. Hull will refer in his talk to ruptures within his organization or to the resignation of Undersecretary Welles, who reportedly disagree in policy matters with the Secretary.

The Department's Office of Foreign Economic Co-ordination is ready to demand that Mr. Hull insist that Governor Herbert Lehman, director of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation Operations in the State Department, make himself and his organization amenable to the co-ordination office decisions. Mr. Hull has formally ordered Gov. Lenman to put his agency under the co-ordination office supervision.

Differ In Instructions. The co-ordination office is said by outsiders also to be at odds with Treasury representatives who impinge on foreign affairs matters in overseas dealings. Mr. Hull and the Office of Foreign Economic Co-ordination director. Dean Acheson, are said to view the presidential instruction of August 3 giving the of Indiana. Mr. Hull is reported ready to put the matter up to President Roosevelt, who chose Gov. Lehman for the relief job.

Only the White House can arbitrate a controversy between the State and Treasury Departments. The OFFEC is expanding so rapidly that some pressure is being made from within the department for the creation of two undersecretaryships-one to carry out the political function that was the Roger was bombed by a formation province of Mr. Welles and the other to manage the economic undertakings which are the affair of other formation of United States the Acheson agency. 23 for Theft of Chickens

Director J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation announced yesterday the arrest of 23 persons in Delaware and New Jersey in connection with the theft of live chickens. He estimated that losses to poultry dealers over an 18-month period might be as high as $500,000.

The arrests, climaxing a six-month investigation in which Dela-ware State police co-operated with the FBI, followed the return of sealed indictments by a Federal grand jury at Wilmington, Del. Mr. Hoover said about three-quarters of those arrested are truck drivers or helpers. Others include operators of eating establishments and filling stations, and persons who allegedly purchased stolen chickens.

Activities centered near Wilmington, Mr. Hoover said, but investigation also extended to Philadelphia and Elizabeth, N. J.

Strong Allied Attack Near Salamaua Base Drives Japs to Flight

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC. Sunday, Sept. 12.—American and Australian jungle fighters, covered by a heavy artillery barrage, drove the Japanese from ridge positions along the coast below Salamaua, New Guinea, into panicky flight yesterday, bringing close the fateful hour for an enemy army trapped there and at Lae

The Japanese at Salamaua, who broke so abruptly from defenses southeast of the Francisco River that they left behind artillery and hundreds of dead, can retreat north along a trail to Lae. But Lae's peril appears even greater with Australians throwing back Japanese counterattacks at a newly won river bridgehead only 2 miles from an airdrome on its northeastern outskirts and another Allied force surging down the Markham Valley from the northwest.

Airdrome Capture Seen. The breaking of the Japanese lines below Salamaua apparently augurs early capture of the large airdrome which is between the Francisco River and the town, built out on an isthmus in the Huon

The Allies are bidding for two other airdromes at Lae. Near the Malahang airdrome, Australians who crossed the rainswollen Busu River for the first time came under the fire of medium Japanese artillery yesterday.

Advanced guards of the Australians inflicted losses on the enemy which tried to dislodge the bridgehead yesterday.

A few soldiers of the encircled Lae-Salamaua army, which some estimates have placed as high as 20,000, may be able to run the and sea and air gantlet by sneaking from Lae in barges, but the greater portion appears doomed.

Troops Flown In. The other force moving on Lae from the Markham Valley is grow-

In addition to knocking out German reinforcement lines in a 60mile arc around Naples, the Allied air forces attacked Nazi land convoys moving northward toward the Naples-Salerno area, headquarters said. This would indicate the Germans may be withdrawing from areas farther south to escape being cut off and perhaps to hurl more weight against the 5th Army bridge-

Allied heavy and medium bombers also gave the 5th Army sturdy support in the grim battles raging in the Salerno-Naples zone.

Wallace's Suggestion Of Roosevelt's Role in Peace Hit by GOP

By GOULD LINCOLN, Star Staff Correspondent CHICAGO, Sept. 11.-Vice President Wallace's nomination of President Roosevelt to be permanent chairman of the peace conference, whenever it takes place, met with a cold reception from Republicans Werner W. Schroeder, Republican national committeeman for Illinois, said today:

"The Vice President's statement is the beginning of the fourth-term campaign. Mr. Wallace was trying to put over the idea that President Roosevelt is the indispensable man, whether the war is over at the time of the next election or not."

Mr. Schroeder pointed out that a presidential election takes place in November, 1944, and on its outcome will depend the extent of Mr. Roosevelt's participation in the peace conference, if it takes place after the election. Should there be a peace conference before the election, the President, of course, would represent the United States, either in person or through men of his selection. GOP Outlook Bright.

The Illinois committeeman said Republican chances in the State next year appeared particularly "The party has gained steadily downstate and in Cook County outside of Chicago and in some parts of Chicago itself," he said. Pointing out that Senator Brooks carried the State by 40,000 votes in 1940 and by 205,000 in 1942, he insisted that Mr. Roosevelt has lost ground in Illinois. Mr. Watson, who issued a statenent commending the council for that it had done immediately after ts policy program had been adopted, said his organization would continue a drive to educate the people of the country to the need of postwar collaboration on the part of the United States. He considers this essential. "We cannot just sit back and wait," he said. "The people must be fully informed of the importance of international co-operation, Furthermore, it is essential that the Republicans nominate members of the House and Senate who are friendly supporters of this foreign policy program. This is particularly true in regard to the members of the Senate, who eventually will have to pass on any treaty of adherence to a 'co-operative organization' to maintain peace and good relations between the nations, proposed by the advisory council."

Mr. Watson intimated that his association, through its committees throughout the States, would take an active part in the primary elections in which candidates for Congress are nominated, and in party conventions in other States.

The council has set up eight permanent subcommittees to study further the questions of postwar policy, both foreign and domestic These subcommittees, it is expected will make recommendations later for more detailed programs. Both domestic and foreign, on which the council will pass-and later the Republican national convention's Platform Committee, when it is in session next year.

The Foreign Relations Subcommittee is composed of the same members as the temporary committee which drafted the program adopted by the council, with Senator Vandenberg of Michigan as chairman. The problems of domestic postwar policy have been divided among seven subcommittees, instead of being left in the hands of a single committee, as they were at the Mackinac Island conference The Governors of States-who, on

250 Million Monthly Gain in War Output Urged by NMA Head

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.-American industry must increase monthly production by $250,000,000 over each preceding month for the remainder of 1943 to deliver war material "as promised," Frederick C. Crawford said tonight.

In a coast-to-coast radio broad-cast over the Mutual network, the president of the National Association of Manufacturers revealed hitherto guarded production figures, and called for a 45 per cent increase in aircraft production and 25 per cent in munitions, naval vessels, merchant ships "and all other categories of equipment."

"We have promised the general staff more than we have been giving them, $65,000,000,000 worth of war materials this year, twice as much as last year," Mr. Crawford

In an earlier broadcast over NBC, Mr. Crawford, president of Thompson Products of Cleveland, Ohio plane parts manufacturer, had gone beyond immediate production needs to "Post War Jobs: the Responsibility of Business." He said both workers and fighters want "a job at least as good or better than they had before the war.' He warned that failure of business to provide jobs would result in a "postwar WPA."

Mr. Crawford in his second talk listed four factors as hampering war Government the more planes, tanks production: "Too much individual inefficiency and failure to do the fullest possible day's work; altogether too much labor turnover—definition the more planes, tanks and ships our country can turn out —and the shorter the war is going to be. Ford Grandson Says He Knew No Details Of His Army Transfer SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich., Sept. 11.-Lt. Benson Ford, grandson of Henry Ford, testified today in the court-martial of Col. William T. Colman that he knew no details of his transfer from Fort Custer to this Army air base.

Lt. Ford was a prosecution witness in the trial of Col. Colman on charges of effecting fraudulent transfers and other accusations of improper conduct while in command

The 23-year-old lieutenant testifled that he was treated the same as other men at Selfridge Field. Capt. W. Stanley Dolan, assistant trial judge advocate, asked Lt. Ford if he had been assigned to duties involving his "special knowledge" on aircraft, and the witness answered, 'No. sir.

Enlisted at Kalamazoo. Immediately after his testimony Lt. Ford left to return to duties at the induction center at Detroit. He enlisted at Kalamazoo, Mich., October 12, 1942, and was transferred within a few days to Selfridge after induction at Fort Custer. He received his commission at Officers' School in Fargo, N. Dak., after service in San Francisco with the 4th Bomber Command.

Harry H. Bennett, personnel director of the Ford company, testified yesterday that he alone had sought Lt. Ford's transfer from Custer to Selfridge.

Cheer up your home for wartime winter months. And have fun doing it-with SPRED-the revolutionary new washable paint made from soy beans.

SPRED is a different kind of paint. It contains the new ALPHA PROTEIN*-a development of four years of soy bean research in the Time-Tested Laboratories. Its creamy paste mixes with water to make a durable, washable paint for winter or summer application.

You don't need painting experience to get excellent results with SPRED. It goes on fast, shows no brushmarks. The bother and mess of ordinary painting is gone. It completely covers wallpaper, and most other household surfaces, with one coat-and dries in 30 minutes with no painty "after" odor. It wipes clean easily and can take repeated washings.

You'll like SPRED's remarkable economy, too. One gallon of SPRED concentrate mixed with a half gallon of water makes enough paint for an average room.

Text of Wallace Foreign Policy Speech

An abbreviated text of Vice President Wallace's address before a meeting sponsored by the Chicago United Nations Committee to Win the Peace:

Those of you who must read the McCormick press know the inevitable conflict is here. Now, not tomorrow. No man should be free to take another man's freedom away from him. God gave every one of us certain rights. He gave all of us a world rich in soil and minerals. And to many of us he gave such scientific understanding that we know it is now possible to build health, comfort and happiness for every one. If we plan right, there can be freedom from hunger and freedom from the fear of a poverty-stricken old age. The farmer can be free of his fear of impossibly low prices for what he sells and outbuys. The businessman can be free from the fear of those monopolies

In the world of modern technology, ago, freedom of discussion and freedom of religion meant more to peo-ple than freedom from want. Those farm and in the workshop were only about one-tenth as efficient as they are today. There was little talk about freedom from want in those days because nearly every one thought scarcity was the will of God. Isolationism is the screen behind which special privilege seeks to entrench its control. When I say this I am not talking about people who honestly believe the United States could isolate itself from the problems of the rest of the world. Certain of these people whom I have known personally have devoted their lives to the elimination of special privelege. Senator Norris, who fought more vigorously against special privilege than any man of his generation, was at one time an isolationist. But men of Senator Norris' insight and motivation sooner or later realize that not only are isolationism and special privilege theoretically the same thing but that the men who back isolationism in the economic world have a very keen interest in special privilege.

High Enrollment Of School Cadets Likely This Year

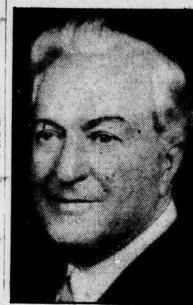

Cadet enrollment in the high schools is expected to be high this year, despite heavy drain of boy stu-dents into the armed services and

"In proportion to the total number of boys in school," Col. Wallace M. Craigie, commandant of the corps, declared, "we expect the cadet enrollment to be heavy." Last year about 2,000 boys enlisted.

Although all "the emphasis possible" will be put on cadet training by the Board of Education and school officials, enrollment in the corps cannot yet by law be made mpulsory. Congressional leaders, however, have indicated they may introduce legislation next month to require boys to take three years of military training in Washington

For boys working in the after-noons this year the board has authorized principals to schedule

Both boys and girls in the high schools will continue with their five periods a week of physical education. Suggestions had been made by board members that a combination of study, work, cadet training and physical education might be too nuch for boys. Jeffers Packs Bags for Home, Proud of Doing'Pretty Good Job'

Rubber Czar Going To Omaha, and 'First Love'-Railroading

William M. Jeffers, the stocky Irishman who took over the Nation's chaotic rubber problem and made a success of it within a year, cleaned out his desk, packed his bag and went home to Omaha last night, in better spirits than he had been in since his arrival in the Capital last

Mr. Jeffers was on his way back to his first love—railroading—after a hectic year in which he stepped on the toes or "bulled" aside most of the bureaucrats about town. He was returning to his "baby"—the Union Pacific Railroad—the organization in which he rose from call boy to president in a comparatively few years. He said he wanted to leave Washington as quietly as possible and with as little ill will in his wake as possible. Always willing to criticize Government operations in the past where he thought criticism was justified or would blast away red tape, Mr. Jeffers had no comment to make of the Washington scene last night. Hurt Feelings of Many.

"I am not laboring under the delusion that all of the officials around the city are my friends," commented the former rubber "czar." "I know very well they are not. I didn't operate that way. I know I was tough and I hurt the feelings of many people, but I think I did a pretty good job of putting over the rubber program. That was the job I was brought here to do and I was determined that no one would pre-vent me from doing it."

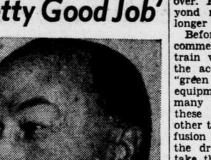

Mr. Jeffers said the secret of his success in building a huge new industry in record time was his refusal to be diverted from the job at hand. When he took over the rubber program he was told it was the most important of the many problems facing embattled America. He believed it and refused to let anyone interfere with him. Confident of his own strength and ability, he was always the lone wolf, never depending upon another official to help him in his fights. "A great many strong men come to Washington," pointed out Mr.

Jeffers, "and they come here with the best plans and intentions to do a good job. Almost always, however, they are not here very long a short time and sized up the job, I figured it would take me about six months to put the rubber program over. Because of circumstances beyond my control it took a little longer than that."

Before departing, Mr. Jeffers commented on the recent disastrous train wrecks. He said he believed the accidents were due largely to "green hands," wartime strain on equipment, and the fact that so nany of the men running trains these days have their minds on other things. He declared that confusion and uncertainty surrounding the drafting of fathers tended to take the minds of many trainmen

Flight Officer Teague Credits Australian With Saving Life

It was the picture of his wife, Lena, on the instrument panel that Flight Officer William B. Teague, jr., first thought of saving when his plane crashed in New Guinea last

The flight officer, who lost his left foot in the crash, was pilot of an overloaded C-47 cargo plane when it overshot the runway at Wau Field, New Guinea, and crashed.

The improvised landing field, the 24-year-old pilot explained, was built on an incline; in fact, it was no more than a grassy hill. Planes land at the bottom of the grade just over treetops, communication lines and other obstructions and then taxi uphill. Flight Officer Teague doesn't know just how he missed the field and said he had made several suc-cessful landings there before. He recalled that 27 men had been killed in a crash on the same hill the day before his ill-fated landing.

D. C. Slum Clearance Tops Legislative List Of District Committee

By WILL P. KENNEDY. The chief legislative drive of the returning House District Committee will be to obtain the adoption by Congress of a long-range slum reclamation program, under which thousands of substandard living quarters here would be torn down and replaced by an adequate supply of low-rent new housing. The first District bill expected to be passed, however, is for settlement of the long-disputed boundary line between the District and Virginia, which has been complicated by the development of the National Capital

Airport, on the Virginia shore. An effort will be made to get House action on four bills passed by the Senate at the earliest possible date, probably before the first Dis-trict day, September 27. These bills would designate the Public Library as a public depository for governmental publications; authorize the District assessor to mail out real estate tax bills, including any unpaid assessment, to the owner of record, or his tenant or agent; provide for the mailing of annual notices to owners of tax-exempt properties, and authorize increased ompensation to the recorder of deeds and the superintendent of the National Training School for Girls.

District Committee, and are regarded as noncontroversial. Ready in Two Weeks. The slum reclamation legislation is expected to be drafted within the next two weeks and placed before the House District Committee for John Ihlder, executive officer of the National Capital Housing Authority and one of the chief proponents of slum replacement, said yesterday he will submit his recommendations for the proposed legislation to the committee soon, at the request of Chairman Randolph. Returning members of the committee have indicated they will co-operate earnestly with Mr. Randolph in pushing for adoption of the "better nousing" program.

While most of the proposed slum reclamation probably will have to wait until after the war, because of the shortage of critical building materials, Mr. Ihlder has indicated that this session of Congress will be asked to appropriate $5,000,000. This sum, he has said, will permit planning of the program now, and will enable building to begin before the war's end in the event that easing of military demands makes sufficient critical materials available.

Backed by Commissioners.

District Commissioners have pledged their support of the program, and Commissioner Guy Ma-son has suggested that the initial request for funds be for $10,000,000.

District committee members emphasize that the low-rent housing to be furnished by the Government in the District is to supplement what is done by private enterprise. If private capital undertakes this task, the Government will be relieved, they say. Chairman Randolph and other hopeful the Virginia boundary dis-pute can be settled very soon, by approval of the bill sponsored by Mr. Randolph. This would make the high water mark on the Virginia shore of the Potomac River the natural boundary line. This bill has been approved by the Virginia Legislature, by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, by the District Commissioners, by the Interior Department, which polices the grounds, and by the Department of Justice which helped redraft the bill. The Civil Aeronautics Board, which administers the airport, desired to have it placed in the Dis-trict, and is the only interested agency which has not endorsed the Randolph bill.

"Logical" Boundary. Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, explained yesterday that the "commission felt the logical, common-sense boundary line is the Potomac River-that as long as a man stands on the Virginia bank and keeps his toes dry he knows he is in Virginia—when he gets his feet wet he'll know he is in the District." The boundary line would follow any new water line. Mr. Settle further explained that "the District has a police station on the water front and would make any necessary arrests on the water. The park police now make arrests along the Mount Vernon boulevard and would police the land side as a Federal agency. The land is all owned by the Federal Government and no property rights are involved. The Federal Government bought the land, developed and built the airport and operates it through a Federal agency."

Another pending District bill on which House committee action soon will be sought provides for registra-tion of births in the District which were not registered at the time of birth. This bill was introduced by Mr. Randolph on January 6, 1943, and referred to the Judiciary Subcommittee on March 8. A favorable subcommittee report is expected before the first full committee meet-

Chairman McGehee of the Judiciary Subcommittee intends to have a hearing as soon as possible on the bill introduced March 25, 1943, with favorable recommendations from the District Commissioners, to amend the law regarding sales of property for delinquent taxes in the District. Chairman Randolph expects to get group spokesmen and individuals will have opportunity to present their views on the totals, the prospective effects on District taxes, the Federal payment and on separate items. The Commissioners now have begun private hearings $58,595,758, for an increase of $7,for department executives, calling on them to justify their requests.

Debt Retirement Reduced. This year the District's debt payment to the United States, for the old public works and the more recent wartime facilities loans, was stepped up to $6,850,000 in a move to make the "best use" of District revenues which could not be spent, due to priorities, for needed building construction and other capital improvements. For next year, however, the debt retirement payments would be cut back to $4,150,000. Also, the budget proposals this year are different in that there are included items totaling $1,100,000 to cover the District's share of costs of the District courts and Freedman's Hospital. Heretofore, these items have been included only in Federal appropriation bills, with due charges against District revenues. Now it is planned to list them also in the District supply bill so as to show, in one act, the total obligations of the District.

The inclusion of this $1,100,000 item in the 1945 requests and not in the total D. C. appropriations for this year indicates a proposed aggregate increase of $11,700,000, though actually it is more nearly $10,600,000, not yet counting on the increase of $1,697,176. The new budget is being set up in a "simplified" form, listing the many different services and agencies under 17 general headings, far less than formerly.

As the total picture was outlined yesterday, the city heads made public details of eight divisions, wherein but minor increases are sought for the year beginning next June 30. Asks $367,443 for Zoo.

For the Zoo, Dr. William Rann. director, seeks an outlay of $367,443, as against $270,130 for this year. Wartime extra and overtime pay would take up $48,000 of the increase, and supplies and materials costs are up by more than $17,000. partly due to increased costs of food for the Zoo collection. Also, Dr. Mann asks for $4,200 for the purchase of additional animals and other specimens. He emphasized that the collection had been allowed to deteriorate because of war conditions. An expenditure of nearly $10,000 is proposed for construction of an incinerator which was held to be badly needed from the public health standpoint.

Officials of the Public Utilities Commission request $107,309 for next $25,555' to permit the hire of two year as against $99,030 for this year, more laborers and the purchase of virtually all the increase being for an additional truck, to pay for more the legislated extra pay.

pay and overtime account for some $70,000 and an increase of more than $136,000 is asked for maintenance repair and operation, including some $60,000 for raising of wage rates for per diem workers to meet the prevailing rates for similar employes in the District and water items, $3,938,584, for an the past fiscal year. In support of the District buildings, for installaup 50 per cent above "normal" and was increasing daily due to expansion of the war effort, and that this growth was reflected in "additional use and abuse" of park facilities. For the National Capital Park and Planning Commission request is made for $54,856 for next year as against $47,050 for this year, almost all the increase being due to extra pay legislation. The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board seeks $44,458 for next year, most of a minor increase being for salaries. 15,000 Rent Cases Filed.

Rent Control Administrator Robert F. Cogswell asks $87,733 for next year, against $79,680 for this year, with most of the increase for salary items. He reported that of more than 15,000 rent cases filed since the office was established January 1, 1942, nearly 13,000 had been decided. In addition, his office has received 35,000 personal or written appeals and 38,000 inquiries or complaints by telephone.

Poundmaster Frank Marks proposes an increase from $17,380 to dog food for an expected larger The Office of National Capital number of captured animals, and Parks calls for an outlay of $1.261.642 to cover other costs. He stressed for next year, an increase of more that due to the city's increasing than $300,000 over this year. Extra dog population and to rationing, the number of stray dogs had been increasing. Last year the poundmaster received more than 7,300 stray dogs, a large number of which had to be destroyed. As we loved her, so we miss her. In our hearts she is always near: Loved, remembered, longed for always, Bringing many a silent tear.

What would we give to hold your hand. Your happy face to see. To hear your voice and see your amile That meant so much to us. YOUR LOVING CHILDREN.

TILGHMAN. CHARLES B. A tribute of love to the memory of our dear father. CHARLES B. TILGHMAN, who has passed and sone to eternal rest one year ago today. September 12, 1942.

His weary hours and days of pain.
His troubled nights are passed.
And in our aching hearts we know
He's found sweet rest at last.
TOLBERT, JERRY. In loving memory of our husband and brother, JERRY TOLBERT, who smiled and passed away four years ago today, September 12, 1939.
The love you save us for many years.

The love you gave us for many years
Will never from us depart.
Though you are gone beyond our reach,
You will live always in our hearts.

the end of the month on a new tax bill, but opinions differ as to whether both Houses can agree on the end of the calendar year. Treasury suggestions are expected September 20.

The session which starts Tuesday probably will continue up to the national conventions of 1944, and realistic observers believe the issues of the forthcoming campaign are almost certain to take snape in the Congressional debates of this fall and winter. What Congress does on any important subject within a year of an election is bound to have some political effect.

United on War Effort.

Prior to the recess this Congress was united in supporting vigorous prosecution of the war, as reflected in the funds granted for military operations and lease-lend, but it frequently challenged the administration on home-front problems.

The law-makers have had two months to chat with the folks back home, and observers will watch with interest to see whether the recess results in any increase or lessening of opposition to the administration's domestic policies.

The last legislative battle in July was over the administration's plan to use subsidies to hold down food an additional $1,000,000,000 for that Never one to discuss his personal purpose may offer one test of affairs, Mr. Lunn never told his wife whether the trip home caused any substantial change in Congressional sentiment toward this and related domestic issues.

According to the records, it is his 101st birthday, but Mr. Heurich insists that it is the 102d, reckoning the day on which he was born as the first. As for the rest of the family, Mr. Heurich says he has been too busy counting his own birthdays to know how the others compute

Mr. Heurich, well known throughout Washington and esteemed for his outstanding service to the com-munity, is the oldest member of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia and one of the first members of the Washington Board of Trade, and belongs to the Columbia Historical Society. He is a former president of the Ruppert Home for the Aged, has devoted much time to the German Orphan Home, Anacostia.

This year the celebration is to be a simple one—just the "usual Sunday dinner" with all 17 members of the family present. Mr. Heurich accounts for the number very simply by explaining that he has three hildren, married and living in Washington, each of whose families s a unit of five.

Yesterday, with a twinkle in his eyes and an expression of keen interest and excitement lighting his face, he talked a few minutes with reporters before leaving for a drive to his cattle farm near Hyattsville, Md. Some of his Holstein cattle will have to be sold this year because of the feed shortage resulting from the drought

The stables on the farm were built by Mr. Heurich when he first came to Washington. He used cement imported from England and Germany. At the time it was considered in the nature of an experiment, as cement was not commonly used in buildings. Mr. Heurich says that they will be standing at the end of another

SUPERB BEAUTY-IDEAL LOCATION-LOW PRICES

HE Book-Ludt Organization -developers of fine ceme-teries - plans to give our Nation's Capital a cemetery as fine or even finer than Forest Lawn Memorial Park in Glendale. Calif.; White Chapel in Detroit, Forest Lawn in Youngstown, Ohio -or Sunset Memorial Park in Minneapolis and St. Paul.

> What we have done before-

Fine 16th Century Chapel

This elegant structure is one we designed and built in Forest Lawn, Youngstown, Ohio. It is a pattern of old Norman churches of 16th Century; as fine as any Cemetery Chapel in America.

DISTINCTIVE NEW BELFREY FEATURE

This beautiful Belfry-soon to be erected-is patterned after one found at Pohick Church (George Washington's home parish) below Mount Vernon in Virginia. All details and features follow authentic Early American architecture as seen in abundance at Williamsburg. The bell to be placed in this tower bears inscription indicating its use at 1876 Philadelphia Centennial observing 100th Anniversary of Signing of Declaration of Independence. In its most central position, this will prove one of the particularly appealing structures here.

Try to Equal Our Low Prices --

Beautiful 4-Grave Plots as low as $140.00 to $240.00 and 6-Grave Plots as low as $210.00 to $360.00. Convenient Payment Terms if desired. (Service Charges at time of burial will also be found definitely lower than is customary at comparable cemeteries.)

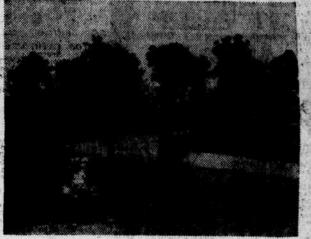

OTWITHSTANDING the exceptionally distinctive features offered at George Washington Memorial Cemetery-you will be amazed to learn that Grave prices begin at $35.00 per Site.

-VEN with difficulties of construction imposed by war priorities, definite plans are under way, and substantial progress shown - providing distinctive features that will enhance the superb beauty of this fine Memorial Cemetery. Just a few are shown on this page.

> What we are doing now-

Garden Plan of Development

Splendid winding drives attractive trees and shrubs in abundance artistically placed to enhance the Garden plan of development.

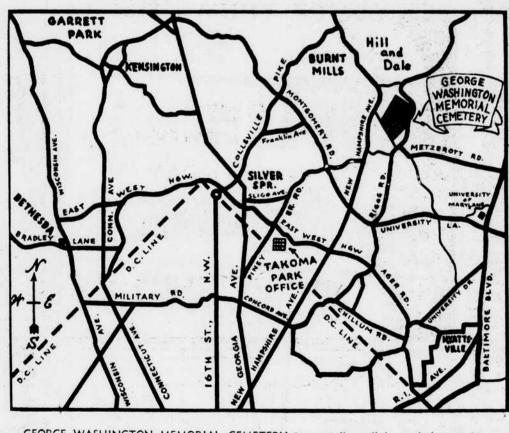

Enchanting Bird Sanctuary

Another Forest Lawn feature is this replica Bird Sanctuary from a famous Devonshire, England, Estate. Suggestive of similar features planned for early completion here.

English Garden Shelter

Impressive and decorative Garden Shelter inspired by a famous English Estate. This was likewise constructed by us at Forest Lawnand suggests similar touches of elegance and beauty planned to give charm here.

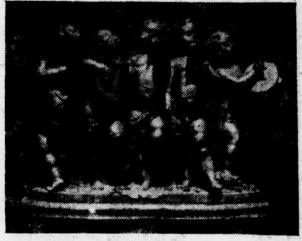

GEORGE WASHINGTON MEMORIAL CEMETERY is specially well located, being close to N.W. Washington and easily accessible over fine highways leading from all directions to the property. Its elevation is the highest of any Cemetery serving our Nation's Capital.

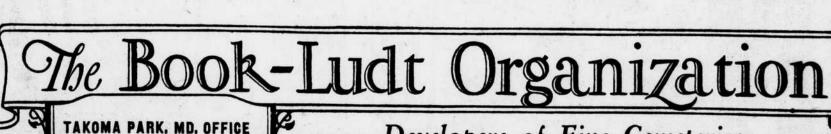

Old Well Watering System

At convenient intervals throughout property, these distinctive Old Wells, copied from Wil-liamsburg Colonial designs, are placed for

Paper, Editors Told

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.-Methods used by many newspapers to save newsprint paper were detailed today at the wartime conference of the Associated Press Managing Editors' Association. Dwight Perrin of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin reported there had been widespread reductions in the space or wordage given comic strips and society, financial and sports There has been a "firm pruning" of the news report, he added, but "a commendable effort has been made everywhere to save the important general news and local space at the expense of somewhat less necessary departments." He also stated that "every paper seems wide open to generous treatment" of news concerning men and women in the armed services.

39 Newspapers Report. Mr. Perrin's report was based on information he received from managing editors of 39 newspapers of more than 50,000 circulation.

Arthur Moore of the Bloomington (Ill.) Pantagraph told of similar changes disclosed in questionnaires filled out by executives of 60 newspapers of less than 50,000 ci-culation.

He reported the majority had reduced space accorded church news, "handouts" from Government agencies and general suburban and county news, while 14 were stressing sharp editing and terse writing.

He also related many had reduced society, sports and market stories and had cut or eliminated such features as menus and serial fiction and such specialized copy as radio logs and automobile and real estate sections. He said 45 papers had reduced the size of their comic

WLB Asked to Correct Blunder, Avert Two War Plant Strikes

Spokesmen for District 50 of the United Mine Workers asked the War Labor Board yesterday to correct what they termed a blunder of the National Labor Relations Board and avert a strike in two Springfield (Ill.) war production plants of the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co.

Scerial Thompson and Yelverton Cowherd, UMW attorneys, charged that the NLRB was "inconsistent" in denying a bargaining election in denying a bargaining election for the UMW on grounds that a contract had been signed between the company and the United Farm Equipment Workers (CIO). They contended no contract existed in the Springfield plants when the UMW petitioned for an election, and accused the company of "cashies."

UMW petitioned for an election, and accused the company of "cashing in" on the "weak and vaciliating policy of the NLRB" to discriminate against UMW members.

Lee H. Hill, Allis-Chalmers vice president, and Ben Meyers, general counsel for the United Farm Equipment Workers, told the board the NLRB had certified the equipment workers as exclusive bargaining agents for the plants and that a contract now is in effect between the company and that union.

Mr. Meyers said that in a bargaining election on June 5, 1842.

gaining election on June 5, 1942, the Equipment Workers was the only organization represented on the ballot, that no other union had petitioned to be represented and that the Equipment Workers was the choice of a majority of the Springfield plants' workers.

The dispute is the first case to come before the board in which a strike vote has been taken under the Smith-Connally Act. On August 4, 1943, a strike was voted by UMW members in the plants, but no further action was taken pending the WLB hearing.

Mr. Thompson and Mr. Cowherd told the board yesterday that UMW workers will work for the Government "without pay if necessary" to continue war production but that they will refuse to work for the company unless a Government agency finds a solution for their

The planes, the first such ships to be sponsored by a university, were named "University of Maryland One, Two and Three." In addition, the cowling of each plane was painted black and gold—the university colors. They will be used to teach Army air cadets how to fly. The presentation was made possible by a War bond drive last summer by students through their Victory Council. The goal of the campaign originally was set at one Fairchild trainer, but enough bonds were purchased to buy three planes. Ruth Buchanan, Silver Spring, chairman of the Victory Council, presented "University of Maryland One" to Lt. Thomas M. Cunning-Dorothy Coseboom, 1113 Flower avenue, Takoma Park.

"Three" was presented by Nettie Garman, 3019 Channing street N.E., a member of the council, to Lt Phillip F. Cummings.

The officers, who are attached to the staff of the Army Air Forces' resident representative at the Fairchild plant, accepted the planes on behalf of the AAF and immediately prepared them for delivery to the training fields where they will be put into service.

Richard S. Boutelle, vice president and general manager of Fairchild Aircraft, congratulated the students on their efforts.

that the present system "is subject to being made a matter of political toyor."
Mr. Omohundro said the county has a purchasing agent and staff who "apparently are authorized to purchase plumbing materials, building supplies, office equipment and supplies for the county government without bids."

Many local firms have complained about the system, but to no avail and many items are bought outside of the county at higher prices than they can be secured locally, he said. Mr. Omohundro said State law provides that "all purchases of, and contracts for, supplies, materials, equipment and contractual services-shall be used wherever feasible on competitive bids." Asking that a "stop be put to the present system," he said that Republican candidates, if elected, would put the purchasing department of the county on a "legal and businesslike basis."

Internal Revenue Staff To Work Overtime to Help on 'Declarations'

To help taxpayers make out their new "declaration" of income and victory taxes due Wednesday, the local office of deputy collector of internal revenue will remain open later during the next three days, it was announced last night.

The office, at Room 1002, Revenue Building, Twelfth street and Constitution avenue N.W., will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. tomorrow and Tuesday and from 8:30 a.m. to midnight Wednesday.

A staff of more than 140 experts will be on hand to assist taxpayers to make out their declarations. These experts have advised more than 20,000 persons on the new form since September 1.

Third Installment Cancelled. Many people, it developed last night, have had the mistaken notion that they still owe the third instalment on the 1942 income tax and should pay the same amount September 15 as they did on March 15 and June 15. Under provisions of the new pay-as-you-go income tax, however, the new "declaration" which is due Wednesday midnight. along with whatever tax payment it calls for, will take the place of the third regular quarterly payment. Many persons whose "withholding" from their pay envelopes is large enough will not have to pay any tax on Wednesday. Revenue officials estimate that only about one-third of the income taxpayers will have to file the new declaration, and pay the excess tax called for. The other two-thirds will be taken care of by the withholding from their regular salaries or wages. Experts in the office have been patient and courteous in helping taxpayers with their new problem, which for the first time in the history of the income tax involves a guessing game in that it requires an estimate of how much income will be earned, and how much tax will be due for this entire current calendar year, 1943.

Certain Groups Must File.

Generally speaking, those who are obliged to file, are single persons subject to withholding who earn over $2,700 a year; married people, subject to withholding, who earn over $3,500, and people with estimated income sufficient to require the filing of an income tax return including over $100 from sources other than salary or wages subject to withholding.

Professional persons, such as lawyers ,doctors, dentists, farm help and domestic help, are among those not subject to "withholding" and must file the declaration if they come within the required brackets of income.

Since this is the last Sunday before the deadline Wednesday midnight, it is expected thousands of persons throughout this area will spend hours over their tax problems.

File Here or in Baltimore. The declarations may be in person at the local office of deputy colson at the local office of deputy col-lector in the Revenue Building, or may be mailed to the Collector of Internal Revenue Baltimore Md

D. C. Auto Mechanics Are Placed on List Of Critical Jobs

With some garages reporting they have lost 50 per cent of their me-chanics to the armed forces or other industries, the Washington Labor-Management Committee yesterday added garage mechanics to their list of critical occupations. Put on the list at the same time were all occupations in the shoe repair industry. Previously, only shoe repairmen were listed, but the new ruling covers shoe finishers, benchmen and other repair workers. Hereafter, men in these occupations can be hired only through the United States Employment Service and are given "special consideration" for draft deferment. Twelve other local occupations are covered by the Shortage Is Acute.

While autemobile mechanics have been on the national list of essential activities, they were not included on the new national list of critical occupations and therefore were not covered by the exclusive hiring rule until yesterday's action of the Labor-Management Committee.

Garages described the shortage of automobile maintenance and repair men as "very acute" and reported that the average motorist now finds it takes much longer to get work done.

The time required for repairs varies from one garage to another, according to a spokesman for the American Automobile Association's Washington division. Minor repairs are difficult to get, and motorists usually must wait from a few days to as long as two weeks.

Most garages which formerly kept open all night now are closed. Only one or two are open for emergency service at night. The American Automobile Association has had so many calls for service that it now has three mechanics to serve its many members. The AAA has made a survey of the manpower situation during the last two years. This survey shows, for instance, that during the first three months of this year, retail garages here had to reject 36 per cent of their work because of the shortage of "Fleet" establishments rejected 9.4 per cent, during the same period, while wholesale places rejected 37.4 per cent. The average amount of work rejected by these three classes was 29.4 per cent, according to the AAA figures. The situation now is worse, a spokesman said.

The force of mechanics, machin-ists and "parts men," in Washing-ton fell off from 3,167 in January 1, 1941, to 1,919 in April 1, 1943, the AAA survey shows. The classification known as "mechanics" dropped during the same period from 2,177 to 1.159 in retail establishments, and from 2,761 to 1,669 in all kinds of establishments here during the same period.

Boys Help Out. During the first three months of this year, retail garages lost 258 men to the armed services, fleet shops lost 50 and wholesale places 13, for a total of 321. All three classes of establishments lost 442 men to other industries during months, but replaced only 197 fulltime men and 73 part-time men. One garageman said high school boys below the draft age have been of much help during the summer, but when they return to school,

2 Infantile Paralysis Cases Reported Here

The season's first two cases of poliomyelitis in the District were reported last week to the Health Department, it was announced last night by Dr. George C. Ruhland District health officer.

The two patients, both girls, one 8 and the other 12, are receiving the "Kenny" treatment in local hospitals. The cases were described as "mild" and the victims are recovering rapidly.

These bring the number of polio cases this year to four, the others having been reported in January and March. Dr. Ruhland said epidemiological reports from the Bureau of Preventable Diseases indicate that "we are not likely to see major outbreak of poliomyelitis this year." There have been no deaths this year from the disease

The number of cases, from 1938 through the current year, were tabu-

Game May Reveal New Bergman Offensive; New Talent on Way, Declares Marshall

By WALTER McCALLUM.

Before a crowd expected to total Packers last Sunday. 50,000 persons, including several thousand servicemen, the Redskins today in Baltimore's municipal stadium will try to win their first victory of 1943. They have no light opposition in the ferocious Chicago Bears, bad boys of the National Football League for many years, whom they'll meet in an exhibition game which will mean nothing except a chance for Coach Dutch Bergman to try out further the plays he will use during the league season opening here 'October 10. Kickoff is slated for 2 p.m.

Sinkwich in Good Trim

If Lions Sign Him

ATLANTA, Sept. 11.-Lean and leather-tough after two months in marine "boot" camp, football's All-America Frankie Sinkwich returned to civilian status tonight, hopeful of at least one season of professional football with the Detroit Lions.

Pausing en route to Akron, Ohio the captain of Georgia's Rose Bowl champions said he would confer with Fred L. Mandell, jr., Detroit, who selected Sinkwich in the annual player "draft" as postwar insurance.

Kane-Latsios Tussle Brings Undefeated Welters Into Ring

Two undefeated welterweights, Eddie Kane of Washington and Nick Latsios of Alexandria, share the spotlight on tomorrow night's boxing program at Griffith Stadium with Heavyweights Claudio Villar, former Spanish champion now living in Washington, and Larry Lane, Trenton colored battler. These two main bouts are for 10 rounds or less.

Another heavyweight match scheduled for eight rounds, supports these two engagements. Opponents are Georgie Brothers, New York, and Willie Thomas, Philadelphia. The Kane-Latsios bout, aside from being a natural between two local youngsters, has the added incentive of a match against Beau Jack for the winner. This engagement will be booked by Promoter Joe Turner at the first available date at the ball park. Both principals, incidentally, wen by knockouts in their last engagements. Kane chilled Pete Galiano only last Monday night, while Latsios stopped Maxie Starr.

The Lane-Villar heavyweight engagement also may provide action. Lane is a fast puncher, especially around the body, and sports a potent right. His attack put Al Hart, Washington's leading heavyweight, on the floor in a bout here this summer although the best Lane got out of that match was a draw. Villar was knocked out by Hart in one round. He weighed 180 pounds then and reportedly just was recovering from an illness. In workouts this week a Turner's Arena he was up to around 200 pounds and appeared fresher

Gus Dorazio, Philadelphia contender for the heavyweight championship, is expected in Washington early this week to finish training for his 10-round fight on Monday. September 20, against Al Hart at Griffith Stadium.

Hart, big Negro soldier stationed at the War College, has been drilling daily at Ahearn's gym on Ninth street, where Dorazio, too, will toil. Hart has a public workout scheduled there at 2 o'clock today.

This fight is attracting attention from promoters and matchmakers in other cities and the winner likely a degree of prominence by defeating

Flock Into Tourney At Chevy Chase

Probably the biggest mixed Scotch foursome golf tourney ever held around Washington is slated for the Chevy Chase Club September 22. Where the District Golf Association, which will sponsor the af-fair, has been elated at entry lists of 50 or 60 pairs in past years, the one coming up next week probably will swamp Bill Barr and his coworkers. The golf-hungry folks around the Capital, shy of tournaments this year, are due to welcome the event and turn out in unprece-

Handicaps of the Women's District Golf Association will be used by the feminine competitors, while the men will use club handicaps. The mixed affair will be open only to members of the District association member clubs, using half the combined handicaps. Go to Black Flier, Cornish Hills

By LARRY LAWRENCE.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 11.—Conformation and smooth performances that have stamped Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry's Cornish Hills as champion hunter of 1941-2 and one of the greatest conforma-tion horses for all time again won for his rider-owner the tricolor at the Maryland hunter show at Pimico today.

Mrs. Perry rode the imposing son of John P. Grier-Marvella II to his fifth championship of the year by taking the blue in the Corinthian, the Conformation Hunter Stake and the Model Hunter for a total of 121/2 points. This is the 25th tricolor the chestnut gelding has won in four years of campaigning.

Another Virginia entry, Meander

Now Able to Practice, Harwood Promises To Help Backfield

By GEORGE HUBER.

Western High School's football team generally is called the Red Raiders because of the predominantly red color of its uniforms, but after yesterday's activities don't be surprised to hear them referred to as the Cornhuskers.

Coach Fred Mulvey at Western is reasonably well fixed in the line, but woefully lacks experienced material in the backfield. He is taking some of the youngsters and last year's reserves from the line and trying them in various backfield slots, and one of the newcomers showing some promise but in need of much practice is Tom Harwood. Harwood recently informed Mulvey that he couldn't practice this week because he would be needed on his family's farm up near Leesburg, Va., to help get in Baldwin-Wallace

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Sept. 11.-Illinois' weak football team staved off Camp Grant in the first and third periods today, but was victimized for three touchdowns and a safety in the other two quarters to lose its 1943 grid opener, 23 to 0, before 3,-500 fans in Memorial Stadium. The soldier eleven, which gets its first real test next Saturday from Michigan's power-laden team, held back much of its offensive talent

But Camp Grant showed fleet backs in Jimmy Dewar, late of Indiana, and Reino Nori and Tony Storti, and the former Notre Dame fullback, Corwin Clatt, was his usual bone-crushing self.

Two Camp Grant linemen trapped Don Greenwood in the end zone in the second period for a safety, and later Storti scored on a running and an 18-yard hike by Storti. The soldiers thus led, 9 to 0, at the half.

In the fourth period Storti intercepted an Illinois pass and ran it back 43 vards to set up the secwarrior touchdown. A pass from Nori to End Bill Huber, who lateraled to Storti, gained 12 more and Clatt in two plays charged the last 5 yards to score.

Reserve Halfback Bill Burghardt supplied a thrill near the end of the game by intercepting another Illini aerial on the Illinois 44 and sprinting to the goal line.

Trojans' Grid Outlook Is Rosy Despite Loss of V-12 Stars

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 11.-There was a lot of talk all summer about what a good football season it was going to be, despite the war, and how Southern California should be the standout of the West. Things have changed, and quickly.

The Trojans did come up the first day of practice with a fine-looking roster, one jammed with transfers under the Navy and marine training E. C. Eastwood's Challamore won program. But the same day, and before even one football was kicked Handicap today at Narragansett into the air, the Navy handed Coach Jeff Cravath a note. Maryland Test Is Off As Some Gridders Fail to Appear

University of Maryland's intra-squad football game, scheduled at College Park yesterday morning, was called off on account of a "manpower shortage." It was to have been the first test of the green materia under game conditions.

There were enough players on hand to form two teams and more but as a number of the leading aspirants failed to put in appearance, Head Coach Doc Spears decided to postpone the tussle until tomorrow night under lights.

Put Game in Jeopardy.

Spears openly was chagrined over the actions of the missing gridders. He is finding it tough to carry on, with practically no experienced ma-terial, and it is safe to say, if such lack of interest is displayed again, it will jeopardize the game at Mary-land this fall.

A difficult 8-game schedule has been arranged in an effort to keep the sport alive at College Park and the Old Liners doubtless will be out-manned in all of them, and by an overwhelming margin in some.

October 2-Wake Forest; 16-West Virginia at Morgantown; 23-Penn

May Use Old Colors. Penn State and Bainbridge have powerhouse squads and others surely have more asset than Maryland. Maryland, if it goes through with its schedule, likely will return to its old colors of black and gold. Spears said yesterday that he planned to use jersies of these colors with white pants. Red jersies and white pants were introduced at Maryland last fall by Clark Shaughnessy and he has come up with a like outfit in his new job at Pitt.

. . I went on one hunting trip that I'll never forget. Several others and myself visited three villages in three days and were welcomed at each one with a dozen different kinds of fruits and flowers. The natives are crazy about American soldiers and will so most anything for them.

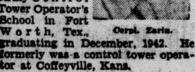

"I had a bar of scap in my shirt pocket and also a handful of silver coins, trying to trade a half dollar or so for a grass skirt. The native boy wouldn't take the silver, but instead pointed to my pocket and said, 'soap!' So I gave it to him. Then it happened. He peeled the paper off the end and took a bite of soap, then wrapped it back up and put it away. He chewed the soap, just like an old man would a plug of tobacco, and grinned from ear

"After we had traded silver for everything imaginable we were asked by one of the natives (in pidgin English) to go hunting with them, as the Japs had taken their weapons from them. We bagged something that looked like a wild steer and they were overjoyed. They are excellent trackers and I never shall forget that hunting trip.'

African Interlude

The following anonymous poem was written by a private on ship en route to Sicily There are silent rows of crosses From Bizerte to Arzew. And around them stretch the flow

ered hills

Of red and white and blue. For we faced no mean opponent On this battle-storied shore, And a heavy toll was paid By every unit in the corps. Death looked down from ever diebel: Death came soaring overhead, Death was sown in every roadway And lurked in every oued. You might have been a dog-face Or driven a tank or truck, But you did your job and faced it-And if you're still here, that's luck! The men who strung the wires Or loaded deadly freight Weren't issued many medals But there's few who didn't rate. And don't forget the nurses Who have shared our risk and fare. And the medics and stretcher teams Who gave our wounded care And the engineers who waded Into fields of mines and traps, And the men who cooked the chow Or pecked the keys or drew the maps.

There are lots of jobs that must be done, To win this kind of war, And victory's due to every man-And woman-in the corps! So now farewell to Africa

Faces Many Problems In Restoring Islands To Former Prosperity

By JESSIE FANT EVANS.

One of the least publicized men of international prominence in Washington is Dr. Pieter Honig, commissioner of the Board of Economic and Financial Affairs of the Netherlands Indies, Surinam and Curacao,

A gifted linguist who speaks English, French and German as fluently as he does his mother tongue, this world-famous Netherlands agricultural scientist, economist and colonial administrator was elected president of the International Society of Sugar Cane Technologists at its last meeting at Baton Rouge, La.,

Now he is trying to help solve the difficult postwar problems for the Netherlands East Indies which will have to be met once the yoke of ported from Indonesia, as, for in Japanese oppression is removed. Wife Presumed Captive.

This prematurely gray, humanitarian Hollander, whose whole adult life has been given to colonial service for his country, has not heard from his wife since one morning in Java, when, with certain high Dutch government officials, she was ordered aboard a plane for Australia, with the invading Japanese but 30 miles away by jungle approach. From their three children, previously sent to Holland, he has heard but once since the German occupation of this Sugar, Rubber Authority. As the former director of one of the Netherlands East Indies leading sugar experiment stations, and as the administrator of its rubber research work before the Japanese invasion, he is an authority on both sugar and rubber. He is also one of the world's greatest experts in tropical agriculture. In this field alone, he has studied native nutrition problems first-hand in Puerto Rico, Cuba, Haiti, New Guinea and Spain and traveled extensively in agricultural areas in European countries and the United States. He was a delegate to the Hot Springs food conference.

In his opinion, the postwar world will demand food first. In many countries, he believes, the slogan of "guns before butter" will be supplemented by a program the slogan of which will be "butter before armament. How this modified ideology will change the quantitative structure of the world, both for the Netherlands Indies and other lands he consider: a problem which can only be vague ly approximated. But he is confident that world trade in foodstuffs will have a much wider scope than world dealings in technical and socalled strategic materials.

Cites Islands Riches. The Netherlands Indies with its many islands, Dr. Honig points out, is territory equal in the aggregate to the area of the United States Its riches lie in its fertile soil. The profitable growing of sugar, rubber. quinine, copra, coffee, tea, spices, palm olive oils, kapok, cocoa, tapioca and derris, used for insecticides, nov items so critically needed by the United Nations, was due in large part to the Netherlanders. Netherlands scholars, in their numerous experimental laboratories, have improved the quality of all of them. They also found new ways of combatting the peculiar diseases which attacked them and developing disease-resistant varieties. These experiments of theirs in turn helped set the pattern for the whole scientific world wherever similar conditions of soil and growth pre-

The Netherlanders also set up a political, colonial administration by their policy of seeking the eco nomic participation of the natives in their country and a systematic program to substitute existing food crops for others that would give better-balanced diets.

Changed by Japanese. "All of this," Dr. Honig emphasizes, "was necessarily changed by the Japanese occupation of of the Netherlands East Indies. Naturally, too, the United Nations were compelled to develop their own production of materials formerly im-

"The resumption of the production of some of its former exports, such as copra, pepper, kapok, certain of the essential oils and spices, will be com-paratively simple," Dr. Honig says. They can be produced by the native population and are virtually suited for the world markets without a complicated technical proc-

"It is more difficult," he continued, "to resume the production of certain articles of export which require a complicated technical apparatus and a rational industry or operating organization. This applies to the technical raw materials, such as rubber, sisal and palm oil and to such pharmaceutical products as quinine and derris. It also applies to tea and coffee. Our Indonesians cannot learn new skills overnight, for they are an agricultural people and working on the land is all

Choking, gasping, wheezing, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma ruln your sleep and rob your blood of vitally important oxygen because you can't get air in and out of your lungs properly. But now it is no longer necessary to suffer from these terrible attacks without the benefit you may receive from a physician's prescription called Mendaco. Within a very short time after the first doke, Mendaco ingredients start circulating thru the blood, thus reaching the smallest as well as the largest Bronchial tubes where they usually quickly help liquefy, loosen and remove thick strangling mucus (phlegm), thereby promoting freer breathing and more restful sleep. In fact, Mendaco has proved so successful in helping thousands of sufferers from recurring spamms of Bronchial Asthma that it is sold under a guarantee of money back unless completely satisfactory. So get Mendaco Mendaco for only 60s.

Need for Recreation.

3. The wartime situation has made the need of recreation facilities more pronounced in our crowded city. A committee representing the Board of Education will cooperate with representatives of the Recreation Board in a study of the need for enlargement of certain small elementary school playgrounds which do not afford play space for the small children of that school neighborhood.

4. Consideration is being given to an extension of the co-operative work-study plan whereby high school students may attend school and be employed a part of the day at the same time thus helping the manpower shortage.

5. A modification of the child labor law of the District of Columbia is under consideration having as its purpose a liberalizing of the restrictions now in force affecting the hours and the night employment of certain age levels of boys and girls. This also is related to the shortage of manpower.

Schools Being Adjusted.

As the war problems loom larger and larger, making prodigious demands upon the individual and collective efforts of all citizens, educators are adjusting the public schools to the war situation. At the same time they are trying to meet as far as possible the responsibility of providing and maintaining on a high plane the regular school program of instruction in classrooms, shops and laboratories.

While other cities are experienc-ing great difficulty in staffing their schools and high schools as teachers have left for the patriotic adventure and higher pay of working in war industries, Washington has sizable waiting lists of experienced, qualified women teachers recently arrived from other communities, Robert Haycock, acting superintendent of schools, told The Star.

"We are very lucky," said Mr. Haycock. "These women are unemployed wives of administrative officials recently appointed to Government war agencies."

Use Part-time Teachers. Washington's universities have been able to fill vacancies in their technical courses, the hardest hit, with Government scientists teaching on a part-time basis.

Only places where difficulty is being experienced in staffing the schools and high schools are in the manual arts, vocational training, science courses and physical training. Reed Finds Quality Of Soldier Depends On Basic Education

"The quality of our soldiers depends to a large extent upon the basic education which they have when entering the Army," according to Dr. C. R. Reed, first assistant superintendent of schools, who returned recently from a tour of three induction centers by State educa-

Arranged by Dr. John Studebaker, United States commissioner of education, and Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckford of the 3d Service Command, the tour included the Baltimore Army Induction Station, the Fort Meade Reception Center and the Aberdeen Replacement Training Center. Its purpose was to provide educators with an opportunity to observe Army training and life, in order that the preinduction train- visions. ing program might be made more

"The man who is best trained," Dr. Reed continued, "has the best chance to survive in modern combat, so in a very real sense, we are saving the lives of American boys by giving them a thorough training the fundamentals in the schools before their induction into the

Those fundamentals are defined by Dr. Reed as the following: An understanding of the issues of the war, a knowledge of world geography, familiarity with the Selective Service Act, as it pertains to induction, classification and assign-ment; a conception of the problems of efficient group living.

Dr. Reed stresses the importance of a thorough grounding in English to enable each boy to cope with reports, orders and training manuals, to write necessary reports and letters and to fill out forms, regulations, receipts and ad-

150 More Soldiers To Be Enrolled in Georgetown Courses

Opening of the fall term at Georgetown University will be accompanied, it was announced last night, by the launching of a new Army training program for 850 soldiers in basic engineering and an expansion to 400 trainees in foreign area and language courses.

The 1,250 soldiers who will be enrolled in these two separate branches of the Army specialized training program at the Hilltop this week are in addition to 356 Army and Navy men already attending classes in the medical and dental schools. The total of 1,600 military personnel is about the maximum number the university can accommodate at this time in view of civilian attendance.

The incoming basic engineer trainees arriving during the next few days will replace the soldiers who have been filtered through Georgetown's STAR unit, which was discontinued last week. There are already 248 soldiers attending foreign area and language courses to fit them for service in occupied enemy territory or countries which, like Italy, have capitulated. These courses, conducted by the school of foreign service, have proved so successful that the Army is enrolling 150 additional soldiers this week.

Quartered on Campus. Soldiers assigned to basic engineering will be given instruction in the college of arts and sciences. Like those attending the foreign service school, they are quartered and fed on the campus. Only the medical-dental trainees are on a commutation basis.

Georgetown's STAR unit, which functioned since last May, maintained a high record of efficiency. The men were given refresher courses while being classified for assignment to Army Specialized Training units at other schools in the territorial limits of the 3d Service Command. An average of 1,200 or more men were quartered daily on the campus during the past four Soldiers arriving this week for college work will be given training in mathematics, physics, chemistry, English, history and geography. The engineering courses are divided into two terms, one for men of freshman qualifications, the other for effective working relations between sophomores.

Civilians Are Outnumbered. Departments of the university opening tomorrow for civilian students, now greatly outnumbered on the campus, are the college and Foreign Service School. While the number of new registrants is small

it is not below expectations in view of the national emergency. The School of Law is the next to open, on September 23.

District College Deans Serve as Advisers to Uniformed Students

"Advisor Extraordinary" should be the title of college deans during wartime. Students about to enter the armed services, men in the Specialized Training and Reassignment Unit (STAR) courses, and soldiers in the Army Specialized Training Program (ASTP) or Navy programs turn as a matter of habit to the dean for advice and guidance.

Each dean meets a situation at once common to all campuses and peculiar to his own. Father Stephen McNamee of Georgetown University has had to handle problems arising out of the simultaneous presence of college students and STAR and ASTP soldiers. The last two groups have occupied much of his time in recent months.

The outstanding general reaction, Father McNamee said, among the STAR and ASTP men was their appreciation of the opportunity to get a college education. Many students have come to him, he added, to tell him they plan to continue their studies after the war.

Dr. William Johnstone, armed service representative and Junior College dean at George Washington, gets all types of military problems also. Questions range from which service a boy should enter to which of her soldier admirers a young woman student should marry.

Once enrolled in a military education program, Dean Johnstone said, students who did poorly in college were eager to tell him how they had improved. One boy who had hardly passed freshman mathematics proudly came to the office and told the dean he had passed Air Forces calculus.

The dean disclosed that men have written to him from North Africa, New Guinea, Australia and Iceland. Dean George Woods of American University said many students are concerned with what will hapen to their scholarships when they enter the Army. One youth who had received a scholarship but had been inducted before he could enter college thought he was going to lose the grant. He discovered the college had adopted a policy of holding scholarships for all men to whom they had been awarded.

to prepare workers for the war tasks. Thus, in addition to keeping the regular educational establishment in good running order, the officers have been organizing new activities, procuring the proper equipment and materials, and employing special teachers for many new fields of instruction. The Government has made special allotments of funds to the schools to support this program. Many war production training classes are now operating day and night under the auspices of the Board of Education where special instruction is being offered in drafting, radio, automotive and aircraft mechanics, machine shop practice, electricity, sheet-metal work and welding.

Night Schools Important. portant expansion that has taken that sound the air-raid signals have place in our regular night schools where workers employed during the day can improve their skills and attainment in shops and labora-tories. The war industries are in need more and more of trained men and women with special skills. Our schools, for instance, have co-operated in the training of men and women for the Washington Navy Yard. Large numbers of persons employed during the day enroll in our evening classes, where they may be trained for greater proficiency in their war services. Courses being offered are fundamentals of machines, electricity and radio, mechanical drawing, physics, chemistry, cable splicing, steam fitting, machine shop and special wartime language instruction in Portuguese, Spanish and German.

The war situation has created a tremendous demand in Government offices for trained stenographers, typists and office machine operators. In the commercial training depart-ments of our day schools, and in our night schools, hundreds of persons have been trained for this Government service. Although it is to be deplored that so many of our young people are having the continuity of their public school progress inter-rupted, it is a fact that many boys and girls thus employed are releasing adults nedeed in other phases of the war effort.

If this seems undesirable because of disfigurement of the plant a dusting with lead arsenate may partially control

Gardeners are advised to take extra care of their strawberry beds this fall, feeding and mulching them. Plants for replanting are reported to be scarce, so that weeding and care of old beds is desirable this year.

The perennial Artemesia, a silver gray foliaged plant, is very useful to give contrasting color in the perennial border. It is effective as foliage in many bouquets. Artemesia thrives in any ordinary garden soil, is a vigorous grower and seems to be relatively free of insects and diseases. Because of its strong growth it should be lifted and divided each year, discarding a large part of the old root. The variety, Silver King seems to be satisfactory.

Stock Market Takes Irregular Course

in Dull Session

By Bernard S. O'Hara,

Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Sept. 11.—Peace shares were again the brighter side of today's stock market, and a number of war issues yielded a little more ground.

Although hard fighting in Italy was indicated, speculative ideas, as translated in the stock exchange dealings, continued to lean toward the belief that stocks of companies that stood to benefit soonest with the ending of the world conflict were more attractive than those which have had a big share of the war contracts.

Steels turned a bit soft near the close. Motors, aircrafts and utilities also shaded lower, but rails were helped by a fairly brisk demand for Santa Fe and Chesapeake & Ohio. Fractional gains were the rule in store stocks, farm equipment and scattering of tobaccos and industrial specialties.

It was one of the slower Saturdays of the year, with dealings at 296,480 shares, compared with 173, 570 the previous two-hour session.

The low activity seemed natural to brokers in view of what had happened during the week in the foreign sphere. Many figured that the week end might well brings some new well and the previous two-hour session.

Joint-Trusteeship With U.S. To Preserve Peace, British Aim

By Charles G. Ross.

England wants to work with the United States after the war, and will go to almost any lengths to do so. She would like to see the United States and England in the role of joint "trustees" of the peace for the transition period immediately following the war; these two countries, with Russia and China, to form the nucleus of whatever arrangement may be set up for the maintenance of world peace.

Co-operation with Russia is deemed imperative. The great mass of the British people are deeply sympathetic toward Russia; that fact alone would compel a governmental policy of cooperation. Added to this sympathy is another powerful factor; the fear that if a way is not found by which England and the United States can collaborate with Russia, the Soviets and Germany will be thrown together. With Russia's natural resources and Germany's technical skill, they would make a formidable combination.

Thus Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, just returned from a three-week series of conferences in England with governmental, industrial and labor leaders; summed up what seemed to him to be the prevailing British thought about the postwar world.

"As to details," Johnston said to the writer, "you get a variety of opinion, but I found everywhere the keenest desire for continued collaboration with the United States and the feeling that Russia, somehow, must be brought into the

In the light of his observation in England, what, Johnston was asked, did he think would be the world trend after the war? Would it be toward or away from governmental controls over industry and the individual?

Sees Free Enterprise Throttled.

He paused to consider his reply. "I believe I see after this war," he said carefully, "a strong tendency toward national direction and the throttling of free enterprise.'

Just what did he mean by "national direction"?

"Call it socialism." he replied. The trend toward state socialism, he added, was pronounced in England. He instanced the governmental ownership of the telephone system-and hastened to add that ours was so much more efficient that there was no comparision.

There would be no revolution in England, he said. If state socialism should be extended—as apparently it would be the English would find some other name for it, and the growth would be slow, evolutionary process, in keeping with the habitual English way of effecting social

There was something indigenous in the dividual. Opportunities that we took as a matter of course were lacking in England. Our homestead laws, for one thing, stimulated private enterprise. The immigrant from Europe was likely to react to his new environment and become as keen as any for the preservation of free enterprise.

Sees Little Difference.

Johnston was surprised to find in England that even the Socialist proposal to nationalize the land-which seemed to him the ultimate in Socialism-was discussed in fairly conservative quarters without the alarm and anger that such a program would evoke in comparable Printed by Special Arrangement with the

One important industrialist, indeed, put it to Johnston that however much he, the Englishman, might dislike the scheme on principle, after all there wasn't much difference between paying rent to the government and paying it-as many in England still do-to a ducal proprietor under a 999year lease.

Johnston spoke up vigorously for his own views-once in a sharp radio debate with the leftist Harold Laski-and he has continued to do so since his return to this country.

"After the Revolutionary War," he said, "our practice of democracy made us an example for the rest of the world. We can again be an example after this war. But we can be this only if we convince the great masses of our people that they can have a higher standard of living under our economic system than any other.

'We must offer the people the four decencies:

The business people in England, said Johnston, think differently from ours. The goal there is a guaranteed profit; that is why the cartel system appeals. The American businessman thinks of the profit system as a profit-and-loss system. The Englishman argues that his is the way to guarantee employment. Johnston's reply is that you can guarantee employment under the profit-andloss system and still retain competitioncompetition that forces people to do a better job and keeps down prices.

"It is essential," said Johnston, "that we and the British should recognize and understand our differences. We can't work through to a lasting friendship on a basis of sentimentalism or racialism, but only on a basis of realism."

Johnston spoke with warm admiration of the spirit of the English people, and particularly that of the women. Women, he said, were, almost literally, "in everything." In one war plant which he visited, 92 per cent of the 5,000 employes were women. It was partly because of the large employment of women, he said, that production in England had soil of the United States, Johnston said, reached its stupendous figure. Other that made for the indepence of the in- | causes were the introduction of American mass-production methods and the long hours worked-hours sometimes up to 60 a week, though it had been found that efficiency declined after 54.

"The English," he said, "have shown a simply amazing ability to absorb hardships. All things considered, they have a higher tax system than we have, yet one hears hardly any complaint—on that score or any other. Even the blackout has failed to get them down, and they've had four years of it. When you say that, knowing the effect of the blackout on the nerves, you pay a high tribute to their stamina."

West Tries New Manpower Plan

By Marquis W. Childs.

On the West Coast a new system is to 1 go into effect this coming week which attempts to restore reason and order in the field of manpower. Essentially it is an effort to place control over manpower resources in regional committees. It is a recognition of the patent fact that Washington cannot do the job without invoking the aid and even the direction of local communities familiar with local

The West Coast is, of course, a very special area. It has been estimated that between one-third and one-fourth of all war production is concentrated there. While this is doubtless an exaggeration, the proportion is certainly high. It has made for the most overwhelming human problems-overcrowding, wartime slums, a very high labor turnover, a constant migration in and out of the area.

On the coast the pressure for men and women has been greater than anywhere else. For lack of manpower at critical points production has fallen down. In one month the Boeing plant in Seattle fell below schedule by 40 big bombers because men and women simply were not available.

The manpower problem on the West Coast differs in degree but not in kind from the same problem in other areas where war production is concentrated. If the new system works in California, Washington and Oregon, it will be introduced elsewhere. If it fails, then the strong probability is that President Roosevelt will ask Congress for a national service act which would make it possible to order men into necessary jobs regardless of their personal desires expansion of West Coast war production

Congress Stand Uncertain.

Sentiment has been growing within the administration for some time for such an act. Such zealous advocates of all-out production as Under Secretary of War Robert Patterson have insisted that only through a compulsory service act could total mobilization of manpower be achieved. There still is, however, important opposition to a compulsory labor act and the opposition argues, forcefully, that Congress would never grant such powers in the face of the misuse of authority that has already grew out of an urgent plea which Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Air Corps, carried to James F. Byrnes, head of the Office of War Mobilization. Arnold was afraid he would not get the planes necessary to step up the attack on Europe and in the Far East. He had become alarmed over reports of declining production.

Byrnes promptly turned to his unpaid assistant, Bernard M. Baruch, who a year ago unscrambled the rubber mess in a forthright report that cut through the underbrush of controversy to get down to basic facts. He asked Baruch to analyze the problem of manpower scarcity in airplane plants on the West Coast. With another unpaid assistant, John M. Hancock, banker and industrialist, and the small staff these two men have recruited at their own expense for their own use, Baruch got down to the job.

Within a surprisingly short time Baruch and Hancock had completed a concise outline of the problem which included a recommended solution. Byrnes was urged to form community committees around local leaders who would, first, have the respect and confidence of the community and, second, a knowledge of local conditions that an outsider could never have. These local committees would exercise priority control within their areas.

The report stressed the importance of the proper distribution of workers as between airplane centers. It also urged extreme care in considering any further and suggested the need to curtail industry there. Equally important, the report explored the human phases of the problem, making it quite clear that workers could not be expected to stay on the job without housing which provided a minimum of decency and without some recreation and relaxation. Particularly in this section, dealing with what American workers need and desire, the report showed Baruch's broad understanding and demonstrated why his advice has been so valuable in the war crisis.

Real Objectives Blurred.

After studying it himself, Byrnes submitted the report to the War Mobilization Committee. With some modifications it was adopted. Unfortunately, the modifications tend to blur the real objective-control in the local communities -and leave the way open for further disputes among the claimants for man-

Instead of one committee in each of five West Coast war centers, the plan as modified calls for two committees. No. 1 will be a Manpower Priorities Committee. This will be set up by the War Manpower Commission which will select as local chairman a man outstanding in the community. On this committee will be representatives of the various procurement agencies-War Production Board, Army, Navy, the Aircraft Resources Control Office and Manpower Commission.

These same local representatives will also serve on another committee—an Area Production Urgency Committeewith another chairman. This committee will consider the whole area from the viewpoint of production urgency and will make recommendations to the committees functioning locally.

There were strong arguments for combining both functions in a single group but this was overruled by the procurement agencies. The success of the plan will depend on how much authority Army, Navy and WPB grant to their local representatives so that the two groups can operate without constant interfercence from Washington. Sponsors of the plan are confident, however, that it will bring about a marked improvement although there are likely to be degrees of success as between one city and another No one can doubt the need for drastic new action. Byrnes in announcing the plan said that schedules for important war items were behind as a result of manpower shortages. The war work scheduled for the coast this fall and winter, according to Byrnes, would require 160,000 persons in shipbuilding and ship repair and 100,000 more in aircraft. production.

"It is obvious," said Byrnes, "that the production program scheduled for both war materials and civilian supplies must be carefully re-examined to make certain that the productoin most urgently needed is not held back by efforts to meet production less urgently needed and that, whenever feasible, work that can be done elsewhere is shifted to areas where labor shortages are les sacute. "Manpower and production cannot be dealt with separately, for they are inseparable parts of a single but complicated problem. The West Coast war up of operating machinery for the flexible and continuing adjustment of manpower and production in accordance with the changing needs of our strategy.

"If, when all available labor is exhausted there is still a shortage and after review of contacts it becomes apparent that the war effort would best be served by canceling certain war contracts in an acute labor shortage area and placing these contracts in another area where more labor is available, such action will be taken.

"However, the greatest care will be exercised not to disrupt existing production and no essential contracts will be canceled and production shifted elsewhere until after thorough study and investigation it is determined that labor is not available in the area involved."

Byrnes Attacks Problem.

In many ways Byrnes, as a part of the huge job the President has put upon him, is attacking this problem of manpower. In fact, almost every move he makes touches either directly or indirectly the question of getting sufficient workers into essential jobs. He is engaged just now in scaling down Army and Navy programs that were originally based on the need to get all of everything at the earliest possible moment. For example, he found that the Army had on order an astronomical number of overcoats, far beyond any forseeable need. The figure was scaled down at Byrnes' direction and thereby men and women who might have been making overcoats were released for vital tasks.

At the same time the cry for men and more men is coming from every side. Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, warned last week that a crisis in railroad manpower is imminent unless positive measures are taken immediately. As though to point up his warning, the worst railroad wreck since 1918 occurred on Labor Day. While the disaster may not have been related directly to manpower, it served to emphasize the need for sufficient men to keep the roads running safely and efficiently. Eastman recommended a 13-

Surrender of Italy Paves Way For Allied Attack on All Fronts

By Constantine Brown.

While the political aspects of the war | British bases are being completed. Noth--which can have serious repercussions on our strategy-remain beclouded because of Russia's enigmatic attitude, the military phase is better than at any time since December 7, 1941.

The most cautious and careful military observers agree that our preparations are not beyond the most optimistic expectations and that we are ready to assume the offensive, both across the Atlantic and the Pacific. Plans for American-British operations on all fronts have been completed. Short of some political upheaval, such as a peace between a non-Hitlerite Germany and Russia—there is nothing which can prevent an Allied attack in Western Europe within the next year, now that Italy is out of the war.

Politically, the situation remains obscure and some of the most intimate advisers of President Roosevelt hope that he and Prime Minister Churchili will soon find some formula to offset the strong "unconditional surrender" slogan adopted in a moment of enthusiasm at Casablanca.

It is now realized in political and diplomatic circles in Washington and London that such rigid formulas are detrimental to the United Nations unless they are adopted by all. The Russians do not believe in them and have told us so plainly. Hence, in order to avoid additional misunderstandings and frictions with our eastern Allies, particularly in the postwar era, it will be necessary for the American and British leaders to adopt other less rigid, though less impressive, conditions for peace for our enemies in Europe:

See Delay in Pelicv. The Russians believe that you can catch flies easier with molasses than with vinegar. They have told us that they do not seek the destruction of the Reich but of its present political body. Moscow describes our policy as unrealistic, and our idealistic doctrines of unconditional surrender are regarded by them as likely to prolong the war-without benefit to any one.

The Russians have promised the Allies to fight until the Germans are defeated. They maintain that defeat of the Germans could be brought about more quickly if the people of the Reich decided to quit. And the Germans cannot be induced to give up as long as complete dismemberment of their country is threatened.

In spite of the assurances given them by President Roosevelt in his Ottawa speech, "unconditional surrender" means the break up of Germany into small states, some of which may be united with central or western members of the United Nations.

Russia has never promised to fight until the Germans surrender unconditionally. They have left themselves free Hitler government may be established in Berlin. Thus, unless the American and the British governments modify their rigid peace terms to dovetail with the Russians' view, the possibility of a Russian-German negotiated peace looms strongly in the foreground and is caus-

But for the present it must be assumed that there will be no break in the United Nations' front. The armies of the United States and Britain will be ready to jump across the English Channel in the next few months while the Russians will be in a position to drive against the Germans from the east.

Our preparations for an invasion from

ing is being left to chance and when the zero hour arrives we can be sure that the American and British forces will not be stopped by the Nazis. Our air superiority will be increased to such an extent this fall and winter that we may not need the so-called 2-to-1 superiority in ground forces.

At present Germany has about 32 divisions in the Lowlands and in France. Under the best circumstances, so long as the Russians remain in the war, the Nazis will not be able to send more than 30 additional divisions to the area even if their eastern front is sufficiently shortened to be held with a smaller force.

The submarine menace is well under control and the Allies have a complete naval supremacy in the North Atlantic. This will be of enormous assistance to the invading force.

Gen. George C. Marshall, who soon will go to England to take over the command of the Allied forces, will put the final touches to the preparations. Those who know our Chief of Staff realize that he will leave nothing undone.

We are fully aware of the German defenses dotting the entire coast from Denmark to Spain. But they no longer fill us with misgivings. We have already encountered the Germans in Africa and Sicily and we know that fixed defenses, regardless of how well they are manned. can be conquered by a well-trained and organized invading force.

The surrender of Italy frees the British fleet from the Mediterranean and the few remaining Nazi submarines based on the Aegean Islands and Crete will not bother the British lines of communication. A few light units backed by the French fleet which are ready to put to sea can easily take care of whatever opposition these submarines may offer.

The freeing of the Britsh warships is of utmost importance to the United States. Plans for a successful campaign in Burma depend largely on the presence in the Gulf of Bengal of a powerful British naval force to which could be added the American units now operating in the Mediterranean.

Acceptable to Chinese.

Lord Mountbatten, who has been chosen by Prime Minister Churchill as commander of the Allied invasion force in Burma, is a young man full of vigor and enthusiasm. There is no question that he will do his utmost to reopen the Burma road if he is given sufficient men and equipment and adequate naval Lord Mountbatten's selection has been heartily indorsed by the American leaders. Because of his record and his close family relationship with the King of England, he is bound to impose his will on the hesitant Viceroy Field Marshal Archibald Wavell. For the same reason he is more acceptable to Chine alissimo Chiang Kai-shek than any other high-ranking British officer.

Lord Louis has chosen a number of young American generals who will be on his staff. He is enthusiastic about this task, which will add more luster to his name. But, like other military men, he is convinced that unless he has the backing of a strong naval force his offensive will have to be confined to brilliant if ineffective raids.

It is true that jungle warfare does not require as large an army as is required in fighting in Europe. One division, which on the eastern front is regarded only as an adequate rearguard force, can

Senator, remarked on leaving a conference, "The old devil didn't bite me." I remember when just one "hif" flashed around town as an Ickes bellylaugh. When President Roosevelt suddenly ordered him to take over strike-bound coal mines, Ickes got so confused, what with all his new titles such as solid fuels administrator for war, petroleum administrator for war, co-ordinator of fisheries, and what not, that he called a staff meeting to figure out what else he was. The White House had overlooked a title for his new job, so lawyers dissected the executive order and decided he was "Federal coal mines administrator" . . . but Ickes never could remember it.

Mike Straus, Interior's First Assistant Secretary, typed the title on a card and pinned it on Harold's vest so he'd be safe in conferences.

In a day or two, however, it turned out that in the jumble Ickes had taken over three Government mines on public domain and inadvertently sent himself three telegrams authorizing "H. L. Ickes" to act as "Federal operator." The reporter asked if 39 jobs were all he had, and Ickes replied, "That was all up to 20 minutes ago." These include 23 regular Department of Interior jobs with their scores of subjobs, 12 "outside" jobs, such as "member, National Power Policy Committee," and his four strictly war jobs (solid fuels, petroleum, coal mines, fisheries).

The big shots are himself, Straus, Undersecretary Abe Fortas and Assistant Secretary Oscar Chapman. Each has his own particular slice of the work done by 4.500 department employes in Washington and 45,000 in the field.

Ickes calls a daily average of 30 straw bosses to his office, and frequently sees several hundred employes in group conferences from daylight to dark. The

Harold says he has a formula for always being "right"—a combination of "guts and gumption" to follow his own nose, organize, "hire the best brains I can find to do my work" and prove that every one else is wrong!

He recently had to put the heat on himself, taking himself in hand for urging, as Interior Secretary, that the usual 20,000,000 vacationists visit his 22,000,000 acres of national parks at the same time that he, as solid fuels administrator for war and petroleum administrator for war, howled for motorists and train travelers to stay at home and save gas, oil and coal.

Here are two extremes in Ickes' days: One day he called an annual meeting of the Virgin Islands Co. (rum makers) Board of Directors and stockholders and polished it off in 10 minutes. Another day he heard a grievance committee of Negro workers on public domain, listened to an Indian delegation redefine tribal rights, conducted a coal conference, dashed upstairs to his radio broadcasting station to join a Catholic monsignor, a Methodist bishop, a Jewish rabbi and a Mormon prophet in praying on a national network for success of American arms, dashed down again to hold an oil conference and went home to feed 5,000 chickens and turkeys on Mrs. Ickes' poultry ranch.

Somehow, Ickes said, he didn't have very much fun that night reading his usual blood - and - thunder detective stories.

At this point the self-styled curmudgeon began to tire of this interview. particularly when it got around to the suggestion that maybe he was going soft. He was in the middle of yelling, "You'd better write something nasty about me or never come back here" when Straus came in to say:

"Hey, chief, the grass around this building is about to die for lack of rain." Ickes thundered, "Somebody's gonna catch hell about that!"

Invasion Costs Money

It is singularly appropriate that the sponsors of the Third War Loan drive should have selected as the keynote of their selling campaign the obvious truth that invasions cost money. For while it was a coincidence that the invasion of Italy was just getting into stride when the bond campaign began, this circumstance gives us an exceptional opportunity to understand what invasions really do cost, not only in terms of money, but in terms of human lives and human suffering as well.

The fight for Italy, which many thought was over when the Badoglio government capitulated, is actually just getting under way. It will bring our troops into contact with the Germans on a large scale for the first time, and it will be a hard and bitter struggle. As these American soldiers fight their way forward against a determined and powerful enemy they will need all the support from home that they can get, both material and moral. The results of the Third War Loan drive probably will not have any effect on the material aspects of the invasion of Italy, although they will have an important material bearing on the fighting that is to come later. But the moral consequences of this domestic financing effort will be very important indeed.

By the end of September the Treasury expects to raise $15,000,000,-000 from nonbanking sources. That is a lot of money, and if it is to be raised every American will have to go beyond the point of what he can comfortably spare in bond purchases. Yet there can be no consideration of failure. Every American in this country, as he considers what he can really buy as distinguished from what he can buy easily, should bear in mind the moral effect on the Americans in Italy, and at other battle stations around the world, if the end of the month should bring the sorry disclosure that those of us at home have not seen this thing through.

One could emphasize the selfish interest that all of us have in meeting the cost of this war as far as possible through noninflationary financing. But it is probably more appropriate to think of bond buying as a part of our obligation to the men at the front, just as we think of death and suffering as a part of their obligation to us. The men at the front will not default on their obligation, and no good American at home will default on his.

Pyramid at Etzna

Paradoxically, the more that men know of prehistoric America, the less they know. Most explorers of the Columbian period expected so much that they were surprised at the little they found. Modern archeologists, on the other hand, are accustomed to anticipating relatively small returns for their labors and consequently on occasion are amazed at the wealth of their discoveries. And it is what is found, not only what is not, that makes the mystery.

For example, the Associated Press recently announced the "reconstruction" of a five-story pyramid believed to have been built by the Maya Indians a thousand years ago. Part of an ancient city called Etzna, it was revealed when a jungle in the State of Campeche was cleared for the planting of castor beans for exportation.

Alberto Ruz Lhuillier, a skilled investigator of remote antiquity, reports that the town originally embraced an area roughly a mile square. The pyramid, he explains, "has rooms and corridors with windows on each floor, and a towering place of worship on top." The stairways are decorated with eighty hieroglyphics, not yet deciphered. Within the structure a large sculptured tiger head was excavated in association with ceramic fragments, copper implements, jade beads and other artifacts. Nearby a well-preserved ball court was located. The latter bears an inscription corresponding with the year 672 A.D. Some of the figures unearthed at Etzna resemble those discovered at Chichen Itza in Yucatan. They also just as reasonably may be compared with similar works found in Peru. It happens, likewise, that they have a kinship with relics of classic China, Egypt, Crete and Downland Britain. While it is not alleged that the same people created these examples of primitive artistry, it is claimed with ample logic that they constitute a single cultural movement. Ideas traveled in the distant past perhaps more than their sponsors did.

The conception of an artificial hill as a monument or as a place of religious ceremonials was common everywhere ages and ages ago. Silbury is, in effect, a brother to the Pyramids of Gizeh. A like observation may be registered with regard to the mounds of West Virginia and Ohio, the tumuli of Russia and Poland, the manufactured "mesas" of Mongolia and Turkestan. Close to them come the lake dwellings of Switzerland, the cave dwellings of Spain and Southern France, the cliff houses of Colorado, the idols of Easter Island, the great monolithic circles of Avebury and Stonehenge, the ruins of once mighty Troy.

Who knows? Possibly in another thousand years Macaulay's pilgrim from New Zealand may find no vast metropolis of Senor Ruz Lhuillier's day in any better repair than Etzna. That is part of the tremendous mystery of civilization. It always is getting smashed and being put together again, dying and living.

The Race for Italy

The Italian kaleidoscope whirls so dizzily that detailed comment on current happenings is vain, since developments follow each other so fast that the situation changes literally from hour to hour. Out of the confused military and political welter into which the peninsula has fallen it is possible, however, to perceive a few basic features:

The first of these is that the Badoglio regime has lost control of Italy. The grip of the Germans has proved stronger than was generally supposed, and they are acting with a speed and boldness reminiscent of their early "blitz" campaigns. The industrial cities of the north appear to have fallen into German hands after more or less sporadic resistance by the local Italian garrisons aided by the populace. The quick fall of Rome to German motorized units revealed the weakness of the Italian defense. Indeed, the Germans continue to put up a fight even in the south, as evidenced by their stiff opposition to American landings in the Naples area and the presence of German units outside Taranto, the naval base on the heel of the Italian boot

The inability of Italy to defend itself either against the Allies in the first instance or now against its former German Axis partner is not surprising when it is remembered that the greater part of the Italian Army is outside the country's borders. It is reliably estimated that of Italy's regular formations, estimated at sixty divisions, not more than twenty were in the peninsula when Mussolini was overthrown, the balance being engaged in garrison duty from France to the Balkans or at island posts from Corsica and Sardinia to Rhodes. The Germans saw to it that none of these troops returned to Italy. They have now been disarmed and will probably be turned into labor battalions slaving for their German masters. The home forces. dispirited, bewildered and sandwiched in between German troops better led and equipped, could not have been expected to do much. The peninsula thus becomes a battleground between Germans and Allies, the Italians playing a minor military role.

With the Italian Army virtually out of the picture, the strategic situation boils down to a race against time between the Germans and the Allies for possession of key points in what seems destined to become a prolonged and desperate struggle. The Germans seem to have won the first laps in that race outside the extreme south. On the other hand, the bulk of the Italian fleet has escaped their clutches and has taken refuge in Allied or neutral ports, thus giving the Allies undisputed command of the Mediterranean, which will facilitate further landings of Allied troops wherever our high command may elect.

Another trump card in our hands is air supremacy over the Mediterranean and at least over Southern Italy. It is doubtful whether the Luftwaffe can spare planes enough from the many other fronts it has to defend for a decisive struggle in Italian skies. Combined sea and air mastery should go far to compensate for the preliminary successes on land which the Germans have won. Furthermore, as time passes, the Italians should logically rally to the Allied side against the vengeful fury of their former partners, as is suggested by the appeal issued to them by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill to rise wholeheartedly against the Germans and aid the "great surge of liberation." Almost overnight Italy is transformed from an Axis partner into the embittered victim and enemy of Germany. Ultimately, that will be a factor of great importance from every point of view.

'Aegean State'

A new nation of a sort may rise in the Eastern Mediterranean as one result of Italy's defeat in the Second World War. The beginning of such a development occurred 31 years ago, when an "insular assembly" at Patmos proclaimed the establishment of "the autonomous State of the Aegean." For an understanding of its significance it is necessary to examine a record which dates back to remote antiquity. But first a glance at the map should be helpful. Just west of the lofty coast of Asia and somewhat farther northeast of Crete, it will be noticed. there lies a group of thirteen islands marked with the name "Southern Sporades." The archipelago, however, is better known as the Dodecanese from the Greek word for "twelve." though in point of fact they number a baker's, not an ordinary, dozen.

is something of a mystery-and a scandal. For uncounted ages they were Hellenic territory. Rhodes, the largest, was the site of the celebrated Colossus, the statue of the sun god a hundred feet high which is included among the seven wonders of the ancient world. It was the home of the valiant Knights of Saint John in medieval times. Each of the neighboring isles is famous for an event or a personality of universal and enduring importance. All are rich in the fruits of the earth, yielding abundant harvests of cereals, grapes, olives, melons, oranges, figs and, as the National Geographic Society News Bulletin says, "varied market produce"

The Italian irredentist agitators of four or five decades ago wanted the Dodecanese as a phase of their dream for the restoration of the empire of the Caesars. No moral claim to them could be advanced nor was any very seriously attempted. Only on the doubtful merit of expediency was the aspiration justified. Yet it succeeded for a while. The islands were secretly promised to Italy in the Treaty of London in 1915; they were "formally assigned" to Italy in the Treaty of Sevres in 1923, and they were "recognized" as belonging to Italy in the second Treaty of Lausanne, also in

But the inhabitants of the islands were and still are predominantly Greek. Generation after generation lived under Turkish rule from 1652 until 1912 when the Battle of Psinthos terminated Ottoman control. The Italians, General Ameglio and Admiral Presbitero, on the eve of the contest, had promised the natives that "autonomy" would follow. It. was in anticipation of freedom that the "Aegean state" was announced. Now at last it may become a complete reality.

New Job for Landis

The White House announcement of the resignation of James M. Landis as director of the Office of Civilian Defense and his appointment as the American Director of Economic Operations in the Middle East does not come as a surprise, as there have been rumors for the past two or three weeks that a move of the sort was in prospect.

President Roosevelt's letter asking Mr. Landis to take on the new duties does not specify exactly what these are to be, but presumably he will function in connection with the Office of Foreign Economic Coordination recently set up in the State Department under Assistant Secretary Dean Acheson to correlate the activities of such agencies as Lease-Lend Administration. Office of Economic Warfare and Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation. In addition, he will serve as the principal American representative at the Middle East Supply Center, which handles civilian supplies. He will have the personal rank of Minister.

Mr. Landis, a New Deal stalwart. who is on leave as dean of Harvard Law School, is quitting the OCD after little more than a year and a half's service there. He took over from Mayor La Guardia after the agency had come under attack in Congress for sponsoring a program that included dancing and other recreational activities. As director, Mr. Landis worked earnestly to train and equip an adequate civilian protective force, and at the same time he sought to encourage public participation in other civilian war services. Over his objection, the last session of Congress eliminated most of these nonprotective functions. In accepting Mr. Landis' resignation, President Roosevelt said that "you have done a fine job under great difficulties."

Mr. Landis previously had served as a member and chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission and on the Federal Trade Commission, and his administrative experience should be valuable in the new field.

Psychokinesis

For years Duke University has been conducting researches in parapsychology, a jawbreaker including telepathy and other phenomena of thought transference at a distance. without words or signals, and which has been followed with much interest by the Scotch, who are intrigued at the idea of eventually being able to send telegrams without charge. Now Duke comes up with a new branch of parapsychology, called psychokinesis, or actual control of mind over matter. The "matter" is a pair of dice, and the "mind" a wish to have them roll right. By concentrating on a certain point, the experimenters find that it comes up quite a bit oftener than called for by the law of averages, and conclude that "the mind can exert a direct influence over a physical system."

This is no news to millions of lay scientists now in the armed forces, much of vaose leisure time is engaged in serious research as bone specialists and whose laboratory is a blanket. When they need a tough point, like a ten or four, they instinctively realize the value of psychokinesis, though not under that name, and automatically co-ordinate mind, hand and tongue in fervent prayers for Big Bick or Little Joe, as the case may be. Unlike the experiments at Duke, results vary. Some show no trace of psychokinesis, and are broke for a month; others are so psychokinetic that the ground rules have to be changed and the little cubes required to bounce off a wall before telling their final story.

The Island of Kiska seems to have been chockfull of the "Little Men How Italy got possession of them | Who Were Not There."

Costs of War Cancel Isolation

By Owen L. Scott.

This war is to make one point very clear to the American people. The point is that the financing of world wars falls more and more heavily upon this country, so heavily, in fact, that there is beginning to be a question whether the United States could afford a third world war.

World War I cost this Government about $26,000,000,000 and it required $10,-000,000,000 in war and postwar loans to Allies. Those loans today are as good as canceled. In World War II, Congress already has authorized $280,000,000,000 for direct war expenditure and $60,-000,000,000 for lease-lend, of which $14,-000,000,000 already has been spent.

Figures of that size, by themselves, mean little. It is when they are translated into natural resources poured out. into taxes that approach a level of confiscation, and into dislocations in the economic system that they take on real meaning. It is then that people begin to ask the question whether the United States would not profit by taking a direct hand in world affairs to try to assure against a third world war. Any cost of participation in terms of effort or of cash outgo to bolster a little world machinery might appear cheap by comparison.

The present World War is costing about 10 times as much in terms of direct outlays by the United States for its own military effort. A national debt of $26,000,000,0000 after the last war. readily can become a debt of $260,-000,000,000 after this war.

But that is not the most costly part of the war. There is no consideration for lives lost or injuries incurred. There is no consideration of the fact that when dollars are turned into form of resources they mean that this country is fast depleting its irreplaceable reserves of crude oil. Our reserves would not last through another war of this scale. Those war dollars, too, mean that the high-grade iron ore that has supported America's vast steel industry is going to be exhausted before many years have passed. America's copper long ago was insufficient to meet war needs. The country's hardwood forests are largely cut down as a result of the present war.

What has appeared to be an unlimited national wealth in resources will not appear to be so unlimited by the time the present war is ended.

Expense in Taxation.

At the same time, the dollars that measure the cost of financing wars also measure the size of taxes that must be levied to help meet that cost. Tax rates already are confiscatory as they apply to the income of individuals with large earnings. The level of corporation taxes is a definite deterrent to enterprise that is recognized even by the New Deal group that has urged taxation as a means of redistributing income. Yet it is doubtful if high taxes of this war can be reduced very greatly when the war ends owing to the high permanent costs that the war will carry with it.

This war, too, like the one before it, is almost certain to leave behind economic problems that will be most difficult to solve. The disrupting effect of World War I was not felt fully until 1929, more than 10 years after the peace. Upsetting effects of this war may not be so long in appearing due to the far greater mobilization of industry and manpower for war purposes.

All of these things and up to the growing official conviction that the American people will refuse, following the present war, to take the advice of those who would have the Nation crawl back into its shell. The official view is that the public now realizes that the world will drift automatically into war unless the power of the United States is exercised continuously to try to maintain stability in the world.

Danger of Bankruptey.

One more war and it is doubtful if this country could avoid a receivership and reorganization that might leave an economic system that would little resemble that of the present. That, at least, is the growing view.

Then there is one more angle to the present-day problem of war cost. This angle, stemming from lease-lend deals with the fact that the United States, free of charge, is using its resources to build up the industry of the world. Lease-lend exports of machinery, in the first half of 1943, amounted to $305,000,000. Great quantities of machine tools are being shipped abroad to Britain and Russia and Australia and India. Whole factories are being moved. More than $2,500,000,000 of "industrial items" have gone out through leaselend to date, with the trend upward.

Furthermore, in the postwar period there will be great quantities of goods and materials in the United Statessome estimates run as high as $50,000,-000,000-which will be a drug on the market unless exported. The world may draw heavily on the United States. maybe through lease-lend, to build up its industry after the war ends.

All in all, war costs are something that the American people need to think about. The costs of this war are staggering. Those of a third war might be more than can be carried.

The Task That Is Ahead From the London Sunday Dispatch.

Events are posed for an Allied invasion of Europe. The question has been for months not whether we will invade, but where-and when. . . . To most people here the inevitability of our invasion of Europe has taken such positive shape that there is a danger of our progressing mentally faster than our feet can carry us. There is no precedent in history for the military operation to which destiny has committed us. Masses of Europe's inhabitants are waiting for deliverance, but meantime they must work against us. And the armorplated coastlines are manned by a resolute and desperate foe. It is no weakening of our determination to invade if we assess coolly, as our leaders have already had to do, the full measure of our task. Only by doing so shall we prepare ourselves to match the occasion by the effort; to give all our nerve and sinew to the enterprise in which we all have a part, and to sustain ourselves through a period which must inevitably bring reverses as well

THE WAY OF SECURITY

By the Rev. James H. Taylor, D.D., Pastor Emeritus of the Central Presbyterian Church.

One thing that concerns us very and work and leave God out of account greatly today is the question of security. Security in the material world or in the spiritual experience of men is after all the same object of our common desires. The sense of uncertainty has pervaded our life to such an extent that fear has taken possession of our minds and hearts. This uncertainty is evident not only in our economic and industrial life but also in our spiritual experience. To have any real and abiding sense of security we need to turn to the Scriptures. There are certain conditions of security which we need to recognize.

First of all, there is the need for national humility. One of the misfortunes of our lives is that we are inclined to pride, forgetting the proverb that "pride goeth before destruction." We have boasted so long of our national wealth that we are at a serious disadvantage in regard to our international relations. To be humble is a rare virtue and a great attainment. A nation that is humble before God has the assurance

Again, there is the need to pray. Here is a recognition of the fact that God is the God of nations as well as individuals. To pray is to acknowledge that God is supreme in the affairs of men. Prayer is not only a real power in the life of the individual but also in the life of a nation. A nation has a soul and it is possible for that nation to lose its soul. It is imperative that a better moral and spiritual atmosphere be created in our country and the way to accomplish this end is through prayer.

Then, too, there is need for us as a nation to turn to God for counsel and guidance. Too often we have left God out of account in our individual and national life. We cannot continue to plan any more than we can ignore the law of gravitation, the law of growth or the economic law of supply and demand. It is necessary that we shall recognize these fundamental laws of God in every department of life if we would have security. There is in the Scriptures positive assurance of security provided certain commands are complied with. God has said, "If a people shall humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways, then will I hear from Heaven and forgive their sin and heal their land." If we continue to try to go along without the guidance of God and make all sorts of plans-individual, national, economic, industrial, social and moral, leaving God out of account, we have no guarantee of safety.

Due to the widespread condition of crime, it is imperative that we insist more and more upon obedience to the laws of God. One of the many causes of this tragic situation is the greed and selfishness of men and utter unconcern for the moral law. We are not going to improve this condition by any sort of a program of social betterment that leaves the commands of God out of account

There is also the assurance that the land will be healed. The healing power of God extends to all the relations of life and it will mean that into the heart of the nation will come a peace of mind and spirit that is sadly needed in this noisy and restless age.

Security comprises not only armed defense but also moral and spiritual defense. We need the healing power of religion, we need humility, we need to pray, and we need to make righteousness a primary object of life.

Capital Sidelights

By Will P. Kennedy.

When the news of Italy's unconditional surrender was flashed to the Capitol press galleries it was received by Anthony P. Demma, assistant superintendent, who forthwith had an exultant celebration. He had just received this letter from Raymond Clapper, columnist for the Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance: "Dear Tony:

"When I was in Sicily, driving through the town of Termini, we went down a street which, according to the sign, was Via Antonio Demma. I made a mental note then that I would tell you about it, so you could go over and claim your rights. The street must be named for some notable ancestor of yours or else after the best superintendent of mails the United Press ever had."

It so happens that Tony's father, Francis Demma, came from that town, and now Tony is planning to look the place over after the war. In the meantime he has been buying bonds and helping to buy ambulances and bombers to speed the victory. He was born and grew up under the shadow of the Capitol, and is about as good an American as can be found. He started working 30 years ago as a newspaper messenger, was the best of his day, and has steadily progressed by industry and courtesy; known personally by the last five Presidents, who called him by his first name, and by the leading Government officials. "If Tony tells you, it's so" has long been a press gallery axiom.

Representative Charles A. Plumley of Vermont has been doing more than 'building political fences' this summer. He has had as his guest Wendell Willkie, titular head of the Republican party. They were business associates a quarter of a century ago in the legal division of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. at Akron, Ohio, Mr. Plumley was parliamentarian at the 1940 national convention that nominated Mr. Willkie in Philadelphia, and two years ago had him as his guest at the Vermont sesquicentennial celebration. Mr. Plumley's son Fletcher is Secretary of State for Civil and Military Affairs, and together, father and son, they showed Mr. Willkie the "works" on how that State is doing its utmost toward winning the war.

When they went to call on the Governor at the State House Mr. Willkie took a lively interest in a session of officials of the State Department of Agriculture and the State Office of Price Administration with representatives of the creameries on the butter situation. He complimented Gov. William H. Wills on being "not only an able administrator but also with sound views on national and international affairs." In the reception hall, Mr. Willkie took special interest in an English hand-carved oak clock made in 1720, purchased in Chester, England, by the late Gov. Percival W. Clement, and enjoyed its chimes. He also admired a large painting of the 1st Vermont Brigade in the Battle of Cedar Creek October 19, 1864. They also visited the offices formerly occupied by Mr. Plumley as Speaker and clerk of the Legislature. Mr. Willkie continued on to visit President Ernest M. Hopkins of Dartmouth College and to be a guest at the summer home of Sinclair Weeks, Massachusetts Republican leader.

Co-operation There Too From the London Daily Herald.

"The government is prepared to work with other like-minded governments to establish the conditions under which"after the war-"the shipping of the world can be carried on." "We shall need arrangements for the joint control and use of the shipping of the world of a very close kind. Collaboration among the United Nations must be comparable to that which we have in the war days." That announcement, on behalf of the government, was made by Philip Noel-Baker in the House of Commons recently. It is an announcement of the first importance. Already the government has declared itself eager to carry out fully the policy recommended by the Hot Springs conference for international co-operation in the production and distribution of foodstuffs. No such policy could succeed unless there were co-operation also in transport. The government's attitude to the future of shipping encourages us to believe that its approach to the problem of international economic co-operation will be realistic and thorough.

General Marshall Builds A Magnificent Army

By John H. Cline.

The biennial report which Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, has submitted to the Secretary of War, tells the story of the development of the Army of the United States and of the military effort it has exerted around the world during the past two years. But it does not tell the whole story of how this Army was developed under the superior leadership of a man whom the Nation was most fortunate in having as Chief of Staff during what probably has been the most dangerous period of our national existence.

Gen. Marshall became Chief of Staff on July 1, 1939. The beginning of the Second World War was only two months in the future, but we were still suffering from the consequences of carefully nurtured propaganda to the effect that the munitions makers caused the First World War and that the way to escape another conflict was not to have any munitions. As we look back, it is difficult to believe that this one bit of silly but insidious propaganda could have had so much influence in shaping our own attitude toward our own inadequate little

When Gen. Marshall took over, the Army consisted of about 170,000 poorly armed and improperly trained men. In addition, there was a small National Guard, whose training and equipment, measured by modern standards, was almost negligible. To make matters worse. many of the Regulars were scattered all around the country, broken up into garrisons for Army posts of no importance except in a political sense.

Under the new Chief of Staff, however, there was to be an expansion program. As reported in The Star of June 30, 1939, it was to include the following:

Training of 2,134 pilots and some 18,000 aviation mechanics. Orders for more than 2,500 planes, in addition to nearly 1,000 contracted for in the preceding two months. Manufacture or purchase of arms and munitions costing about $186,000,000.

Work on five new outpost airbases. Inauguration of the military department of the Caribbean. That was our estimate of the military preparation required by the United States on the eve of the greatest war in history. The propagandists had done wonders with the munitions makers

bugaboo. Military Plans Ready.

Fortunately, the War Department had not embraced the notion that the way to end wars was to disarm the United States and chase the munitions makers out of the country. Lacking funds and in the face of constant discouragement. it had gone ahead with plans for the building of a real Army. A few months after the outbreak of the war Gen. Marshall scraped together enough menabout 70,000 in all-for field maneuvers. If the results were enough to dishearten a professional soldier, the maneuvers at least had the virtue of demonstrating to any one sufficiently interested to observe them that the United States was lamentably unprepared to defend even a minimum of its vital interests. Then came the terrible spring and summer of 1940. when France collapsed and it suddenly dawned on most of us that Britain might go down and that the Germans might become masters of the Atlantic Ocean.

Things began to get a little better. The National Guard was called to active duty and the Selective Service Act was passed. Congress began to pass appropriation bills for sums of money, which, if available in the War Department's famine years, would have given us a real Army at a fraction of the cost later required. But Gen. Marshall's troubles were not over. The distrust of all things military was deeply rooted.

By the summer of 1941 we had an Army of nearly 1,500,000 men. It was poorly equipped and inadequately trained, but it was at least a creditable beginning. Under the law as it then stood, however, the drafted men and the National Guard could not be kept in service for more than one year. And they could not be sent out of the Western Hemisphere. Thus, Gen. Marshall was faced with the destruction of virtually all of the progress made during the preceding year.

In these circumstances he went before Congress to urge that the Army not be broken up and that it not be tied down to the Western Hemisphere. Legislation was needed and Congress was asked to pass it. With the Germans at the peak of their victory stride and with Pearl Harbor only a few months away, one might think that there would be few to question the judgment of the Chief of Staff as to what was needed to insure the security of the United States.

Troubles Not Over. But quite the contrary was the case.

There were many in Congress and throughout the country who professed to know better. It was charged that Gen. Marshall was asking for another expeditionary force to plunge this country into war. Others suggested that selectees had been deliberately sent to outlying posts to put pressure on Congress to extend their terms of service. There was an organized effort to have soldiers petition Congress against extending the length of their service-a movement which Gen. Marshall promptly and properly denounced as "sabotage." Finally. the necessary legislation was passed. But the vote was so close that Gen. Marshall must have had some very bad moments until the result was announced.

Gen. Marshall survived this storm as he survived others, both before and since. And he has survived them because he is a man of very exceptional qualifications. As a soldier he commands the full respect of military men. His talents as an organizer are of the highest order. But, in addition to these very important qualifications, he is endowed with a kindliness and a philosophical turn of mind which enable him to get along well with men outside the Army, and this last is a qualification which has played a very considerable part in the truly remarkable success that he has had in converting a pale shadow of an Army into one of the greatest military forces in the world. It is characteristic of Gen. Marshall that his report to the Secretary of War bestowed no laurels on himself. But the American people know what he has done, and they realize that it has been their good fortune to have him as head of the Army during these four critical years.

Fall of Italy, Posing New Problems for Hitler, Brings War in Europe to a Head

America's 92d Week of War 210th Week of World War II

By Howard P. Bailey

The battle for Europe last week came to a head.

Hopelessly beaten, sick of war and eager to be rid of their unwelcome association with the Nazis, the Italians withdrew from the camp of the enemy and, if early developments may be considered indicative of the future course of the Italian armed forces, may soon be in open war against by Gen. Eisenhower for unconditional surrender and added a warning to his countrymen that they must not oppose in any way the armed forces of America and Great Britain, but must be ready to meet attack from any other source which could only mean, of course, from the Nazis.

Already many clashes have occurred. The Germans, in France, in Yugoslavia, in Greece and other countries where Italian troops formed part of the occupational forces of the Axis, have disarmed the Italians. Berlin claims that part of the Italian fleet has been trapped in the Adriatic Sea, that a battleship and a heavy cruiser seeking to escape from La Spezia, naval base near Genoa, had been sunk by Nazi planes between Corsica and Sardinia.

On the other hand, the British announced that four battleships and at least 13 smaller naval vessels, following the instructions of Admiral Cunningham in command of Allied naval forces in the Mediterranean, had arrived in Malta, while seven warships, including one battleship, had reached the Balearic Islands

The capitulation of Italy does not imply, of course, that all of Italian territory has been surrendered. In fact, by far the greater part of Italy is in German hands. Striking quickly after the announcement of the surrender, the Nazis have captured Rome, guaranteeing to protect the Vatican, and have also seized Milan, Genoa and about 250 miles of coast line extending into France. Practically all of Northern and Central Italy is under German domination, with the only immediate opposition lying in the hands of the Italians.

Allies Have Tochold.

But the Allies have a toehold, in fact, several tocholds in Southern Italy. The crossing of the Strait of Messina by Gen. Montgomery's British 8th Army has been followed by steady advances until now any Nazis left on the toe of the boot have been successfully cut off.

Other British forces Friday landed at Taranto, the main naval base on the instep. Quickly consolidating their gains. they started driving for the Adriatic coast toward Bari, intending to bring the heel of the boot completely under control.

Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's American 5th Army has made several landings in the Naples area and, though opposed in five sharp mechanized attacks by the Nazis, has expanded the early landings into firmly established beachheads. Salerno, below Naples, has been captured. No word has come as to the activities of the American 7th Army or the British 1st although Berlin reported that a large sea-borne expedition was moving up the Adriatic in the direction of Albania to which Germany is now rushing reinforcements. Whether this report is accurate or refers to the force which landed at Taranto remains to be disclosed

Allied landings were made on Sardinia and rumors were that others occurred on Corsica, where Italian troops are occupying the airfields.

Hitler Belittles Italy.

Adolf Hitler, making his first radio talk in six months, assured the German people that the loss of Italy to the Axis cause is unimportant although he admitted that Germany might be forced to cede some territory. Earlier in the week, Propaganda Minister Goebbels, in an effort to keep up German morale, told the people in a radio broadcast, that if their knees must shake, they should be limited to shaking in private in order that others might not be affected.

The already weakening morale of the Balkan countries received fresh shocks from the retirement of Italy from the war and rumors were flying thick that Rumania, Hungary and Bulgaria are considering following Marshal Badoglio's lead and break off hostilities.

Germany is left largely on her own in Europe, now, and the problems placed before Hitler are insurmountable. The end of the war has been brought appreciably nearer by the loss of Italy to his cause and if Italy assumes an active part against Germany as both President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill urged in a joint statement issued at the White House, this fact will be empha-

Hitler must, as he hinted, cede some territory or replace from his dwindling reserves, the many Italian divisions serving as occupational garrisons in Southern France, in Yugoslavia, Albania, Greece and the Dodecanese Islands. Not only must the Italians be replaced, but other German forces must be earmarked to oppose the Italians themselves.

Hitler's Many Problems.

Hitler must be ready to face fresh Allied landings along the east coast of the Adriatic in Albania and Yugoslavia. He must have the strength to oppose an expedition which might seek beachheads on the Rhone Delta in Southern France. He knows that sooner or later a direct attack across the Channel must come and he is forced to keep at a high level, the troops manning the defenses in Western France and the Lowlands. He is aware of the strained relations with Sweden and the serious consequences which might follow a break. He realizes that the sweeping advance of the Russians toward the Dnieper River is bringing them ever nearer the Rumanian oil fields which have already been badly damaged by American air attack.

As Gen. Marshall, in his biennial report to Secretary of War Stimson declared, the war now has entered its final phase in Europe. Bitter fighting lies ahead, now that the issue is squarely joined between Germany and the United Nations. The Nazis may be expected to resist fiercely the efforts of the Allies to move northward in Italy because their extended lines down to the Dodecanese now are menaced by the Russians in the north and the Americans and British in the south. Every mile by which the United Nations shorten the distance between their northern and southern armies draws the pincers that much closer together. And over in Tokio, Tojo must make his plans to meet the new threat arising out of the release of naval strength formerly necessary in the Mediterranean to offset the Italian Navy. In fact, he may find it necessary to face units of the Italian fleet itself. With his long lines of communication and tremendous naval losses, he, like Hitler, may find it necessary to cede some territory.

As the week got under way, the British moved slowly forward from the Calabrian Peninsula along both coasts but the advance was slow, apparently serving largely as a screen for the announcement that was to come Wednesday and the movement of Gen. Clark's army toward the coast near Naples.

Looking ahead to the fighting to come in the North, Allied planes struck heavily at railyards and communication lines in the Naples area, inflicting considerable damage Monday. Wednesday, a heavy raid was made on the airfields in the Foggia area which is about opposite Naples and a short distance inland from the Adriatic. The fields in German hands were badly smashed, although stiff opposition was met and 11 enemy fighters were shot down. Other American and British medium bombers fanned out all over Southern Italy, attacking airfields. rail lines and highways. The freight yards at Capua, north of Naples, were bombed and the Viterbo airfield above Rome was damaged.

By Thursday the rumors were pouring in like wildfire. The Germans were reported to have called divisions in the Verona and Trentino areas back into Germany through Brenner Pass. Other reports declared that the Allies had made landings at Genoa, Leghorn, and Ostia, the port of Rome. Nothing came out officially to confirm any of these rumors. In fact, quite to the contrary, the Nazis swarmed all over the areas listed and quickly disarmed the Italian troops garrisoned in the various cities of Northern and Central Italy. Reports were that the Germans have a quarter of a million troops in Italy.

As the week closed, clashes between Italian troops were recorded at Rome, Trieste, Bozen, Cremona, Genoa, in the Savoy region of France, at Reggio Calabria and at many other places where the

Russian Front

The Russian advance against the Germans in the Ukraine is rolling along steadily until the Nazi retreat toward the Dnieper has reached almost the extent of a rout. Stalino, important industrial center, has been recaptured by the Red armies and the entire Donets Basin has been cleared of the enemy. Along a 600-mile front from the Sea of Azov to Smolensk, the Nazis are moving backward, whether to shorten their lines and withdraw troops to face the new menace in Italy or because of the overwhelming strength of the Russians could not be accurately determined.

The authoritative Russian paper Pravda, commenting on the attack on Italy and the surrender of the nation, declared that the campaign was beautifully timed and beautifully executed. Though Pravda did not say so, it was evident that the new front has taken considerable pressure off the Russians. The Russian advance southward moved forward over a wide area Monday.

reaching within 3 miles of Stalino, which was burning. Penetrating the German lines over the entire front in some cases to a depth of 9 miles, the Reds freed about 250 villages from the invaders. bringing to 1.500 the retaken towns in the greatest week of Russian advance. The Reds claimed to have killed 8,000 Germans in the day's fighting. In the north, a rail junction 85 miles south of Bryansk was captured and the important center of Konotop was menaced. Tuesday, Stalino came under fire of Russian guns and the Reds completed recapture of the rich mining area in the Donets Basin. In a day of fighting the Reds claimed to have killed another 10,000 Germans and taken nearly 300 more towns and villages, though these totals may have included Monday's con-

420,000 Nazis Killed.

Lost in the tremendous news of the Italian collapse Wednesday was the recapture of Stalino. Berlin, admitting the loss of the city, declared that the Nazi commander was shortening the front, but Moscow declared that the city had been outflanked. Recapitulating the results of fighting since July 5, when the present offensive began to roll, Moscow reported that 420,000 Germans have been killed, 1,080,000 wounded and 38,600 captured. At least 30,000 square miles of Russian territory, or roughly an area the size of South Carolina or Maine, have been recaptured.

By Friday, the Red armies had approached to within 80 miles of Kiev. capital of the Ukraine and center point on the German defense line on the Dnieper, and Konotop was in Russian

Down in the south, Mariupol, important port on the Sea of Azov lying 55 miles west of recaptured Taganrog, was seized and the threat to the Nazis still holding out on the Kuban Peninsula was increased. In fact, the entire position in the Crimea shortly may become un-

European Front

In the first offensive gesture in many weeks, a German naval task force attacked and captured the island of Spitsbergen, 600 miles east of Greenland and 660 miles south of the North Pole. The Germans claimed to have inflicted heavy casualties, captured prisoners, destroyed munitions and oil dumps and wrecked radio and meteorological equipment. The island thus has changed hands for the third time in the war, Germany having seized it shortly after the outbreak of hostilities only to lose it about two years ago. There has been nothing to indicate that any large Allied garrison was on the island.

Other than that one setback, the Allies continued the same story which is told week after week-devastating bombing of German industrial cities. Monday probably 700 bombers of the four-engined type dropped between 1,000 and 1,500 long tons of bombs on the twin cities of Mannheim and Ludwigshafen and American flyers followed up the British night attack with further bombing in daylight. The night attack was the third successive night raid on the continent, during which the Rhineland and airfields in Northern France and Belgium were struck.

It was reported Monday also that the Germans are moving all civilians back from a coastal strip 50 miles long near Montpelier and to have brought 10,000 engineers into the area around Toulon and Marseille to prepare against in-

Tuesday Stuttgart and Munich were heavily bombed and throughout the rest of the week minor targets were hit in Northern France, Belgium and in the German industrial areas.

Reports received in Sweden declare that the havoc caused by the raids on Berlin has been so great that the city is without gas with which to cook and that field kitchens have been established to feed the people. At night, it is said, the terror-stricken population takes to the Grunewald Forest. The approach of winter makes the problem of shelter for the people bombed from their homes with the loss of their furniture, blankets, heavy clothing and other property, increasingly serious. Many are described as badly dazed by the effect of the huge block busters which have rained down on their capital

Pacific Front

The Tokio radio, in a gross understatement of the situation Monday, told the people of Japan that development of the war situation hereafter warrants absolutely no optimism. It was pointed out that the Americans were carrying on day and night raids without let-up in the Solomons and New Guinea, in which 100 to 200 planes are employed.

Wednesday, the radio announced the surrender of Italy and declared that the Japanese government "deems this most regretful." However, the announcement went on to say that Japan has resolved to crush America and Britain to the very end and thus put the Emperor "at ease." The situation reverses that when Japan undertook to defend herself, no matter how deeply she had to push into China to accomplish the defense. Now her forces are going to crush Britain and the United States, no matter how far back she draws her extended lines of conquest.

In the actual fighting, the Japs in area, numbering some 20,000, have been caught in a trap by paratroopers who were dropped to block their path of escape to the jungles. Gen. MacArthur, a passenger in one of the planes taking part in the operation, expressed his satisfaction with the manner in which the men were thrown across the Japs' only outlet and with the dropping of small artillery to bolster the

In fact, Gen. MacArthur took personal command of the veteran Australian troops who stand poised now to destroy the enemy garrison. The Allies, striking suddenly at Lae while the Japs were occupied at Salamaua, made a landing just east of Lae, though under heavy enemy plane attack. Many bombers, escorted by 35 fighters, struck at the task force engaged in the operation, but counterattacking P-38s destroyed 21 of the enemy to the loss of two of the Lightnings. Two landing craft were damaged by bombs and forced ashore. Looming much larger in Japanese eyes, the two boats were reported to Japan as a cruiser and six transports.

Tuesday the Markham Valley airfield of the Japs was taken, to be followed by the landing of the paratroopers and the entrapment of the enemy.

An announcement by the Nevy Department, detailing the action at Marcus Island, which was the target of a surprise attack by a naval task force the week before, declared that the island, less than 1,000 miles from Tokio, had been thoroughly plastered with bombs and that at least 80 per cent of its facilities had been destroyed.

Otherwise the week was quiet in the Pacific theater.

Nazis 'Employ' 12 Million The Naxi news agency DNB said in a dispatch to be published in German newspapers that the number of "foreigners" who were "employed in German industry" had increased from 500,-000 at the beginning of the war to 12,100,000 at the end of May.

The DNB dispatch, which was reported by the foreign broadcast intelligence service of the United States, said that the figure included prisoners of war but did not include "masses of foreign labor and prisoners of war employed outside the Reich territory."

may make it possible to bring large numbers of prisoners to this country, There are those who believe that war prisoners will go a long way toward solving the labor shortage, particularly in agriculture. If necessary, it is argued, they could be paid union rates with the stipulation that a part of their earnings be set aside and sent back to their homeland. The money would help to rehabilitate families in Italy, providing a nest egg for a new start when the prisoners were returned.

At the end of his report Baruch said emphatically that there were only three ways out of the crisis even after all possible manpower adjustments were made. One was to increase the efficiency of each worker in industry. A second was to scale down civilian life, cutting out all diant personality and good humor have frills and extras. And the third, which is scarcely a choice at all since it cannot be considered until victory is won, is to cut down the war program itself. tack from which they hope to hit the Nipponese on all sides.

Late in August, planes from a United States naval task force pushed past Japheld Wake Island to bomb Marcus Island, 1.000 miles from Tokio and well within Japan's outer line of defense.

Experts did not immediately agree on the motive behind this raid. Some believed it was spade-work for the opening of a large-scale attack on the Japanese mainland, and that on this theory, the Southern Pacific theater would become a holding operation while the offensive was concentrated against the heart of the empire.

Others held that the raid was of more psychological than military significance, event in the attrition which has gone on for months.

Still a third theory was that the United States Fleet was baiting the Japanese main fleet to fight in the northern "zone of equality," between Paramushiro and Wake Island, where both fleets would be equidistant from their bases. Under these circumstances. the United States Fleet might claim superiority-or at least equality-a condition that would not exist if the fleets fought nearer the Japanese home Appearance of the United States Fleet in northern waters also indicates the strength of the MacArthur forces in the south, probably to the degree that his air superiority removed much of his former dependence upon surface units.

Air raids on Paramushiro and Marcus show that two anchors of the Japanese inner defense zone can be brought under attack, although the Japanese mainland itself still is out of reach of bombers operating from Pacific island outposts.

It is along the loop of Japan's outer defense line that some experts look for a major air-sea operation, although it may not come until developments in the European war make units of the British fleet available. A possible line of attack would involve simultaneous naval operations by British and American fleets, with the British striking through the Indian Ocean at Rangoon and the Americans swinging up from Australia and the Solomons.

hold on for a long time in the jungle. We have seen it happen in New Guinea. A campaign through the wilds which separate India and Burma will be long and tedious. In addition to a newly organized Burmese Army, the Japanese are reported to have about 150,000 men in Burma. This force could hold out almost indefinitely against an Allied land Fleet Ready in Pacific.

Defense against an Allied landing operation from India and Ceylon to Rangoon and adjacent points would require a larger force than the Japanese have in the area at present. Moreover, the threat of an Allied fleet in the Gulf of Bengal would compel the Japanese general staff to dispatch to the gulf a large number of ships and planes.

If the British can transfer their fleet from the Mediterranean to the Indian Ocean in the next few months they can apply the first pincers movement against Japan.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz has a large number of warships in the Pacific. They are divided between the Southeast Pacific Fleet of Admiral William F. Halsey. jr., and the various task forces in the Central and Northern Pacific. What proportion of the bulk of the ever-increasing United States Navy Admiral Halsey has and what proportion is operating in other areas is a military secret. But we can take it for granted that the fleet in the Pacific is ready for offensive operations and is only awaiting the moment to strike with force.

Jap Losses Heavy.

Confronted with a synchronized action from the east and west, the Japs would be placed in a difficult position although they may adopt a strictly defensive strategy. They have lost a large part of their fleet in the engagements since last year. Replacements have been slow. It is questionable whether the Japs have been able to replace more than 50 per cent of their transports.

It is true that they have the advantage of land bases for their planes. But this weapon, which aided them so much in the earlier stages of the war, is no longer as feared as it was in 1942.

The modern Allied warships can take care of themselves with greater ease. Moreover, the new American carriers which far exceed in number those of the Japanese, can efford a protection to the Navy which neither we nor the British had earlier in the war.

Ready for Any Surprise.

The forces of Gen. Douglas MacArthur are being heavily reinforced. Men returning from the Southwest Pacific speak enthusiastically not only of the spirit and efficiency of the American and Australian forces, but also of the large reinforcements in men and war materials-particularly planes-which have been sent to the former stepchild of the Allied war planners.

Within the next few weeks, when Gen MacArthur's men really get going, the news from the Pacific front is likely to

The Gaspe region is the doorstep of the submarine warfare and its Frenchspeaking Canadians are organized in this continent's unique home guard-Les Guetteurs (the signalmen).

Relatation of censorship precautions recently has permitted the first accounts of defense measures on the Gaspe coast. where U-boats ranged the gulf last year and survivors of torpedoed merchantmen landed in the French villages. Watchers on the cliffs of Gaspe are ready to spy out submarines and aircraft, and the home guard is armed to the teeth. The Gaspesians have sprung to the defense of their coast and the reservists number 60 to 100 and more in hamlets of 500 to 1,000 population. The "guetteurs" are good shots, too, with their army rifles, for men along this coast are accustomed to using small rifles and shotguns. The civilian volunteers co-operate with powerful land, sea and operational forces which guard the St. Lawrence shipping

Many of the clerics of the French towns are active reservists. Take the case of Father James Leblanc of Gloridorme parish. He is captain in the reserves. Father Leblanc said he had seen a German U-boat sail audaciously close to his Gloridorme parish last summer when a score of ships were torpedoed. He has pieces of one torpedo on his mantle, It exploded ashore on a day when a St. Lawrence convoy was attacked.

"Then we were unorganized," said the priest, buttoning his military coat over his black robes. "We had no weapons and all we could do was to care for the poor lads who came ashore in lifeboats. We were pretty mad about the whole business.

"We got madder when we heard ugly stories that we were doing nothing to frustrate the raiders. We could do nothing because we were not equipped. This year though it's different. We've got the equipment and our men have rushed to the defense of their coasts. They'll never see their beloved fishing waters and land violated by U-boat or saboteur, or, for that matter, by any token air raider who might try to cross our country."

One of the great innovations of the coast is the telephone system installed for the Aircraft Detection Corps. Around the north Gaspe coast, from Matane to Gaspe town, there was no phone before. Now the village vigilantes have practiced incessantly what they will do when a warning comes from the ADC-Aircraft Detection Corps. They scramble commando style, along the craggy coast and into their fishing boats, ramming home mets. The reservists conceal themselves behind driftwood and wait long hours before the "all-clear" is given. The call will also bring big bombers charging into the air toward the area of suspicion, trim warships and sleek Q-boats of a naval base concentrating in battle formation and heavy fortress batteries in a little Gibraltar awakening to the cry of "action stations."

At one point along the coast there is a grim relic of what happened last year. This consists of the two sections of the freighter Frediricka Larson, torpedoed on July 12, 1942. She is broken completely in two sections, almost amidships, with the stern of one section and the bow of the other pointed landward. Behind the shelter of this wreckage the reservists have practiced landings to test the village defenses. At a given signal they dash for the land. Immediately the church bell tolls, and the men of the reserve army line the river and, tactically speaking, repel the invaders.

In one village of some 1,500 inhabitants officers recruited 106 men. In another little place of 687 population they signed up 66 men. In both instances the recruiting was done in two hours on Sunday, working between church services. The men showed themselves keen for their new calling, eager to distinguish themselves. So much is this the case that people who are not well known are required to identify themselves very strictly, and that applies to officers as well as others. Boats which ply between the ports do well not to be careless with flashlights, for that brings a spontaneous mobilization to the shoreline. There is still the old friendliness, but there is also an awareness. They want to know who is who, and who may be a spy.

The coming of this war and the preparations for defense are bringing changes. The young men who have come into the area have quickly made contacts. There are dances, receptions, an outflow of hospitality from people who had largely to depend upon visits to Quebec to meet new people. The army appears to be on excellent terms with the native sons and daughters.

War and preparations for war have done more than turn this peninsula into an armed district. They are changing the social life of the people, bringing them into close link with the rest of the province and of Canada. Men who have moved into the peninsula are learning at first hand of the warm Gaspe hospitality. There is nothing surprising in this, but the Gaspe people are learning to know men from all parts of Canada. since soldiers and airmen and naval men in the area are from all provinces and many cities and towns.

become as spectacular as the news from the Mediterranean has been.

This favorable over-all picture of the war does not mean that the enemy i defeated and is ready to sue for peace Quite the contrary.

The Japanese will fight to the bitter end, even though they may realize that their ultimate defeat is certain.

Of course, the picture in Europe would change considerably if the political situation shifted suddenly and we found ourselves confronted by a Germany freed of the necessity of keeping her armies

Sesquicentennial of the Laying of the Cornerstone of the U.S. Capitol

By John Clagett Proctor.

Just how much of a celebration there will be next Saturday, in commemoration of the sesquicentennial of the laying of the cornerstone of the United States Capitol, is a question that cannot be answered with any degree of certainty at this time. Naturally, the war conditions will have quite a bearing on the matter, and whatever is done will likely be of a simple and limited nature. However, the spirit and devotion will be there, whether the occasion is celebrated in a big way, or passes by quietly.

Indeed, when the first cornerstone of this famous structure was laid on the morning of September 18, 1793, except for the part taken by the Masonic fraternity, there was little to record of the event. But, naturally, Washington was then but a straggling settlement, and only a city on paper, and the country itself a new republic, just emerging from a long war, with a population of around 5,000,000 people, and with not enough money to pay for its own public buildings. But whatever lacking of finance there might have been, and how small the attendance was upon that important occasion, the ardor and enthusiasm displayed at the time could hardly be exceeded even now by a much larger assemblage, and manifestly mean to the people not near as much.

Today, after a lapse of 150 years, Washington has grown to be a great metropolis, but it was not always so, and it took all these years to become the beautiful city it is and the glorious Capital of the "land of the brave and the home of the free," and the light of the

Naturally, the city cannot be reproduced as it was in 1793, nor can we even adequately hark back to its appearance as described by Thomas Moore, the poet, in 1804, when he wrote:

This embryo Capital, where fancy

Squares in morasses, obelisks in trees; Which second-sighted seers, ev'n now, With shrines unbuilt and heroes yet

Though naught but woods and Jefferson they see.

Where streets should run and sages ought to be."

Several years before Moore wrote this, Richard Parkinson, who toured America in 1798 to 1800, said that Washington contained only 300 houses and that it was too young a city for a brewery, which he had thought to establish.

In 1800 John Cotton Smith, who came here as a member of Congress from Connecticut, said he found only one wing of the Capitol erected, which, together with the President's house, were "shining objects in dismal contrast with the scene around them."

The Masonic ceremonies upon the occasion of the laying of the Capitol cornerstone were arranged by and were under the supervision of the Grand Lodge of Maryland. There were at this time the three subordinate lodges referred to: Alexandria Lodge, No. 22, under the Grand Lodge of Virginia of which Gen. Washington was charter worshipful master, serving as such about 20 months in all, from April 28, 1788, to December 20, 1789. On April 30, 1789, he was inaugurated President, and thus the last eight months of his term as master of Alexandria Lodge also found him serving as President of the United States. Soup in Brick Form for Europe

By Sigrid Arne.

At the Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation, I've seen soup in brick It's cream-colored, hard, granular, easy to break off. I've seen vegetable stew that looks like coarse flour, lemon drops which actually are little bullets of vitamin C, brown boxes of powdered foods stamped "Made in the U.S. A." and marked off into sections so the same recipe can be repeated in 14 different languages. These are part of the preparations of the Office of Foreign Relief (generally called "The Lehman Committee," because of its head, former Gov. Lehman of New York) for the food barrage it plans to lay down in Europe behind conquering Allied armies. The Lehman group's nutritionists, headed by Helen Mitchell, formerly director of nutrition research at Battle Creek College, faced several problems in trying to figure out the right foods to

There will be millions hungry. They'll have to be fed, first, in blitzed cities, perhaps with no stoves, no water systems, no refrigeration.

Must Taste Familiar.

The foods must be simple so they can be parceled out to private houses or cooked up for a soup line of thousands. They must at least taste like something familiar, because there's no time just after a blitz to explain, "This stuff may taste queer, but it's good for you."

Relief food must be spoilage-proof. There's little tin to ship it in. Glass breaks. Above all, the food must be quickly nourishing.

So what are the answers?

Most of these foods come in powder or brick form. Several can be made into more than one kind of dish.

There's a cheese soup in powder form. Add three parts water and you have soup. Add two parts water and you have a cheese sauce to dress up vegetable Dehydrated Stew.

This soup with the milk base is designed for Northern and Western Europe, which likes milk base soups.

The Balkans don't, so the nutritionists have fixed up a dehydrated vegetable stew for them (it's in powder form), made of precooked beans, peas, soybean grits, whole grains such as barley, and dehydrated diced vegetables, plus brewer's yeast and seasoning. The Balkans like soups with meat flavors, so they can easily add a good deal of water to the stew and toss in chunks of meat—if they can get it. Paste foods (spaghetti and macaroni) are eaten all over Europe, so the nutritionists have devised some new types which are richer in food value than those we know: 18 per cent protein as against 12 per cent The paste foods are being manufactured in two forms: In the regular spaghetti shape and in powder form. Miss Mitchell's staff also has created some fish pastes for the countries that like fish: Norway, Denmark, eashore areas generally. Their fishing industry is reported almost gone.

Greeks Like Squid. But every day American fishermen used to throw away perfectly good fish which people in this country won't eat because the names are unfamiliar. Now the Lehman committee is buying those castaways, canning them or making them into fish pastes.

They include the Menhaden and Whiting from the Florida coast; the Pilchard, etc., from California, and the

The fish pastes can be used to make chowders, to flavor vegetable stews or to spread on bread.

These eating habits of Europe were catalogued first from books. But the final tests were conducted by the National Research Council. Drs. Margaret Mead and Natalie Joffe of the NRC staff asked foreign-born women here to pass judgment: Norwegians, Dutch and Greeks in New York, Yugoslavs in Pittsburgh. They met, cooked up new mixtures according to the recipes, then made suggestions.

Then the committee found that vitamin C was lost in practically all the foods in cooking. But C is important to fight off disease and infection. We get it in citrus juices, but how to get it to Europe?

Miss Mitchell learned the British were putting it into chocolate bars, but there's, 50 per cent loss. The Canadians were having better luck putting it into hard! candies. So now we're making a lemon drop, heavily fortified with C, which will be given, one a day, to school chil-

The committee says it's prepared to prove this is the cheapest carrier for C, and will save shipping space.

The experts had curious times devising recipes that could be understood from a Norwegian fjord to the Adriatic. They couldn't use usual measurement terms. So now they use "bowl" widely-"one bowl soup powder to four bowls water." The size of the bowl doesn't matter, the proportion will be the same.

How Trained 'Trouble-Shooters' Safeguard Health in Restaurants Here

"I wouldn't want to be a customer

By Joseph Young.

Henry Jenkins is the "trouble shooter" for the Health Department in its campaign to insure better health conditions in the District's restaurants.

"Whenever we learn of a restaurant that is a chronic violator of sanitation laws, we send old 'trouble shooter' to make the inspection," Food Inspector Dr. R. R. Ashworth said the other day. "He'll be a good man to show you how inspections are made."

While awaiting his day's assignment schedule, Mr. Jenkins, a veteran of 19 years' experience, explained some of the details connected with the inspections of the District's more than 2,400 eating places.

"We have a job on our hands," Mr. Jenkins said, explaining that during the past 12 years the number of restaurants in the District had increased approximately 300 per cent. "Of course, that includes Government cafeterias and drug store fountains," he said.

Frequent Inspections

Most establishments are visited every 60 days with the exception of downtown restaurants which are checked approximately every month. Chronic trouble makers also are visited more frequently, the frequency of the visits depending on how soon they correct objectionable conditions existing on their premises. A staff of 10 inspectors are assigned to restaurants, six for general inspection and four assistant bacteriologists who specialized in determining the bacteria count of drinking glasses, cups and silverware. The six general inspectors are assigned a definite territory and each inspects about 400 restaurants a month. The reporter's tour with Mr. Jenkins started with a visit to a restaurant in the 500 block of Indiana avenue N.W. "This is one of the cleanest restaurants in the District," the inspector remarked in advance.

It was a "one-armed" restaurant with a marble floor and everything seemed spotlessly clean.

The inspector was greeted cordially by the proprietor, who took us into his kitchen, where the dishwasher was engaged in washing utensils.

Washing Dishes

Mr. Jenkins nodded his approval as he watched. First the glasses were soaked in a compartment filled with sudsy water. Next they were rinsed in a bin of warm water and finally were placed in a compartment of boiling water to be sterilized.

"That's the way I like to see utensils washed," Mr. Jenkins told the proprietor. "Too often the dishes are soaked in the soapy suds and then placed directly in the boiling water to be sterilized." He said that failure to rinse the utensils before they are sterilized will leave a greasy film on the utensils after sterilization.

Although the inspector doesn't usually take the bacteria count of the utensils. he demonstrated the procedure with a kit borrowed from one of the bacteriologists.

Five glasses, cups and silverware ready for public use were selected and swabbed with a piece of absorbent cotton placed on a swab stick, a different swab used for each type of utensil. Next the cotton is placed into test tubes filled with sterile water. The tube is quickly sealed and placed back into the kit, where it remains until opened by bacteriologists in the laboratory in the Municipal Center Building who determine the bacteria count.

Bacteria Count

Utensils are allowed a maximum bacteria count of 500. Restaurant operators found serving utensils with a higher bacteria count face court action. Mr. Jenrestaurants are serving utensils with ily responsibilities. either no bacteria count or a count far below 500.

as this one," he said. "This job would be a pleasure." Mr. Jenkins' final stamp of approval was indicated when he ordered coffee and doughnuts for us when the brief inspection was completed. "I'm careful where I eat." he said. Trouble Spot

The next visit was to a restaurant on

Pennsylvania avenue. "This place has been giving us trouble for months," the inspector remarked en

The inspector asked the proprietor to accompany us as we started the inspection of the refrigerated food display case. Sliding open one of the refrigerator's compartments, Mr. Jenkins removed a paper pie plate covering a cocoanut custard pie. The plate was dirty and covered with brown spots.

There Are No Excuses

"What is that filthy cover doing on that pie?" the inspector demanded. "It's not my fault," the proprietor said. "I've just come back from my vacation and my employes haven't been paying attention to the business"

"That's no excuse." Mr. Jenkins replied. "This store has been cited four times on health charges." Further examination of the refriger-

The inspector then asked to see the back yard. Outside, the stench was almost overwhelming. It seemed that thousands of flies swarmed about the garbage stored in wooden bushel baskets. As we re-entered the restaurant Mr.

the proprietor answered. "That isn't true. Negligence and lack of supervision are responsible," Mr. Jenkins replied. He advised that the restaurant close for a week to effect the necessary changes.

"I would be ashamed to admit to any one that I was the owner of such a place," he told the proprietor, who promised to make a concentrated effort to improve

Revoking Licenses

Leaving the restaurant, Mr. Jenkins said that the Health Department had decided that, in the case of flagrant violators, not to seek court action, but to send the cases to the License Revocation Board after giving the restaurant a reasonable amount of time to comply with health standards.

'We're not trying to put them out of business. We only want to help them," Mr. Jenkins said. "In my 19 years as an inspector there have been only a handful of restaurant owners who have refused proper procedure. to co-operate with me."

The next restaurant on the schedule was only a block away.

Approximately 35 restaurant operators attend the class every Tuesday afternoon to hear lectures on sanitation problems by Dr. Ashworth and his assistant, W. W. Burnette. Since the school's inception last December, more than 8 owners have attended the classes. Each week 40 operators are selected by the department to attend. According to a recent District regulation, every restaurant owner or manager must attend a class session and pass an examination at the end of the session.

Each week a guest speaker addresses

Robert Wilson, executive secretary of the Washington Restaurant Association, Recent guests have been Commissioner Mason and Police Supt. Edward J. Kelly.

After lectures by Dr. Ashworth and Mr. Burnette on proper methods to be followed to insure sanitary conditions, Mr Wilson addressed the class. Most of those present took copious notes as the speakers addressed them, with expressions indicating almost painful interest.

Mr. Wilson praised the current Health Department campaign and said there was a very good spirit of co-operation between restaurant owners and the department. He urged that whenever possible restaurants close for a certain period each day for thorough

Questions and Answers

After the lectures there was a general question and answer period.

A hand went up. "How often should a refrigerator be defrosted?"

"Frankly, I never thought of that problem before, although it's very important," Dr. Ashworth said. He advised that refrigerators be defrosted once a week to prevent freezing of pipes. "This is one case where the faculty has benefited from the pupils," he added. Now came the general oral examination which would determine if the members of the class would receive the manager's certificate required by law. The questions were asked at random by Dr. Ashworth, Mr. Burnette and Mr. The pupils were now enthusiastic and ager to win their certificate. "How may rats, roaches and flies be kept out of eating places?" Mr. Burnette asked of one pupil.

"By closing or screening all openings, by storing food so that it is not accessible to them and by removing garbage properly," was the prompt reply. Other questions asked were: "What

The next day, however, he qualified his statement that the ban on the father draft might hinder the war program by explaining that if the high command reduced its calls for men, the Wheeler bill might do no harm.

Senator Wheeler's bill to postpone the drafting of fathers until January has already been reported out of committee. Col. Keesling's second statement high lighted the main question that will have to be answered:

"Will the fall of Italy result in an increase or decrease in the requirements of the armed forces?" Col. Keesling pointed out that the selective service estimate that 446,000 fa-

While expressed sentiment on Capitol Hill has been against drafting fathers and for cutting down the size of the armed forces, a sizable contingent has shown signs of wanting more information from the armed forces before taking any steps that might jeopardize the successful prosecution of the war.

17-year-olds are already, to some extent,

a source of supply through enlisting. Men Over 38

Resumption of the calling of men over 38 would certainly be protested by the Army and it is also doubtful how large a supply could be drawn from this sailors began early this year, the Army and Navy worked out a set of standards agreeable to them both spokesmen privately contend that the "work or fight" ruling perverts the intent of selective service and uses the armed forces as a club over men's heads to force them into essential work. Fourthly, hearings on Capitol Hill are

Women in Service That includes women. While Congress has taken the lid off WAC recruiting, the number of women entering the service is many thousands short of the hopedfor goal. The size of the WAC force has a direct relationship to the number of men to be drafted. If WAC recruiting falls short by 100,-000, an equal number of men-and that means fathers now-will be called to make up the contemplated strength. In all, Gen. Hershey estimated that 446,000 fathers will go into uniform this year. Compromise Plans

The last alternative is a compromise. Several Senators have suggested limiting the father draft to men under 30 years since presumably they would be less established and have fewer responsibilities. On the other hand, fathers in their 20s usually have such young children that their wives would face a greater hardship than the older women.

Another compromise possibility is drafting men with one child first. An indication that the wind may be blowing that way is found in the national inventory ordered by selective service, to be conducted beginning this week. For the first time, draft boards will report the number of children each draft-age father has. Previously, only the marital status of the registrants as it affects classification has been reported. Gen. Hershey, however, has said on children should not be considered as a factor to determine which families would suffer least from the induction of their breadwinners. He contends that the father of two children might be inducted with less hardship resulting to his dependents than the father of one child. Whatever Congress decides to do-

A large number of the men in this age group, furthermore, are now in essential work. The armed forces released nearly 200,000 of its senior citizens on the stipulation that they be employed in war supporting activities or face a

Myers also made portrait drawings and prints. An etched selfportrait in the present exhibition shows him dressed in a fancy costume, with a quizzical expression in his eyes. There is a fleeting hint of Rembrandt in this print, as in some of the representations

American pilots made those ships fly and made them fight. The tales of individual initiative in air combat of sheer improvisations, which fill this book are the best which the reviewer has read in war literature so far-unless it be the corroborative account in Pat Robinson's recent "Fight for New Guinea," where some of the same men and ships are mentioned. The American flyers down under seem to be their own only rivals, in other words. They haven't been beaten so far by any one.

Mr. Kahn was in a slightly different position to report the war from Mr. Johnston. Though he is a professional writer he was at the front as a sergeant, not as a correspondent. Just the same, he has done some very pretty reporting. His book has the literary cast which is not style for news writing; it has personality flavor, the flavor of a cool young man who is doing his bit but privately thinks war is something which adds up to nothing. The book makes a good supple-mentary report to Mr. Johnston's volume, for, while Johnston devotes himself mainly to the air fighting, Mr. Kahn describes the infantry, and he was, in his own person, a

The New Guinea terrain seems to be a soldier's nightmare. It has the bad features of all kinds of landscapes. It contains the densest jungle in the world, it has lush malarial swamps and crocodile-filled rivers, it has a killing climate. In addition it has some of the steepest mountains known to man and it has no roads. And the Japs got into it first. When MacArthur started his offensive it was against cun-ningly established and concealed positions all through that appalling About the only way the Americans and Australians could locate their enemy was to get fired on, generally from close range. Well, they drove them out. Mr. Kahn, now that it is all over, assumes a slightly Olympian manner in telling how it was done. But you can't hold any kind of manner against a lad who was through it. The two books add up to something you ought to know. The reviewer recommends them without Unattended by book club escort though it be, "Malta Spitfire" is far and away the best air book of the last year. It is pure fact, undressed German-inspired war, must be stronger for the lack of something that is generally thought a necessity even in 'a war book; to wit, 'love interest." Flying Officer Beurling had no little woman back home, no girl waiting in Montreal. The only girl who figures at all is one he happened to be watching in a London street one day, an hour before one of her legs was amputated as the result of a German attack.

And Leslie Roberts, who talked 17 straight days with Beurling in a Canadian hospital, has had the good sense to pour out the story just as Beurling must have told it-no $5 words, no padding, no "arrangements" and quite a lot of profanity sprinkled through. Newsman Tells Of Japanese Ruthlessness

My War With Japan

By Carroll Alcott. (Henry Holt.) China, not Japan, was the logical choice as a stabilizing factor in the Par East, but America and Britain failed to recognize this fact, and we are paying for this blunder today in lives, cash and toil. Such is the theme of Carroll Alcott's book, trac-ing Japanese duplicity before Pearl Harbor.

The book, in spots, is wearisome, as the author tells of personal difficulties with the overbearing Nipponese. Still, he had to personalize his story to give his book validity. His conclusions, rather than his personal experiences as newspaper editor and radio commentator, should be of value to the peacemakers when victory is achieved

Witness these two paragraphs:
"It can be said that the United States, in reality, gave Japan her industry. The Germans presented her with a modern army. She copied her navy from the British. The Chinese also contributed heavily to Japanese development. They gave Japan her art and much of her culture. They are mentioned merely to point up the fact that the history of Japan, as an empire, has been one of planned, often deceitful, aggrandizement. In dealing with that sort of an enemy, it is obvious there can be no temporizing, no soft-heartedness.

"Japan already has completed the first and second phases of her pro-gram. The third and last step is to unite the races of Asia under Japanese rule, with the idea of eventually fighting the rest of the world and bringing it under the Mikado. The Japs are working on that plan now. They will continue there are Alain Locke's "The Ne-gro in Art" and Forbes Watson's so badly defeated and so completely to work on it until they have been crushed they never can rise to power again."

Mr. Alcott cites chapter and verse support of his thesis. He emphasizes that crime and idealism are two different things, and that the same law must be applied to international gangsters as is applied to the individual criminal, both being menaces to society. A reading of Mr. Alcott's book sheds additional light on the ruthlessness of our Pacific foe.

Greece Against the Axis

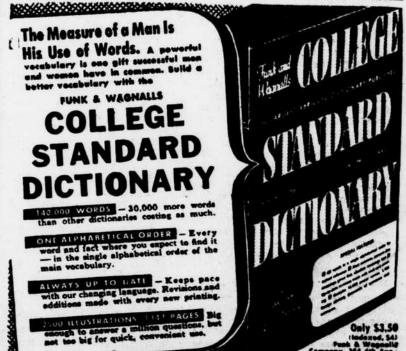

By Lt. Col. Stanley Casson. (American Council on Public Affairs.)

As the author points out in his preface, this is "a story of the greatest catastrophe which has ever overwhelmed the Greek people." But it is also a story of almost unbelievable heroism, told by a man who saw it with his own eyes. Col. Casson was a member of the British Military Mission in Greece during that country's struggle to remain free, and his book is a record of what he saw and heard and thought and felt. No one can read it witmout agreeing with him that "Greece has made her name forever in modern history.' P. H. L.

Nature Walk Near Greenbelt Is Interesting

By LORCHEN HERMANN, 11, Greenbelt (Md.) Elementary School, One night after supper, Catherine, Freddy, my father and I took a walk to the Greenbelt lake. We took path and walked past a magnolia bush with a big flower on it. We Just Between Ourselves ...

Would you like to be a reporter?

Well, aim your pen or typewriter at The Junior Star and fire away. Every year, boys and girls in all the schools of the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia act as correspondents of The Junior Star. And every year new correspondents are needed to take the places of those who have graduated. All girls and boys, from the first grade through the fourth year of high school, are eligible to write for The Junior Star. And all correspondents, regardless of age, stand an equal chance to share in the $5 in cash prizes awarded for the best contributions published each week.

Some correspondents are appointed by their teachers, but many others appoint themselves, so to speak, by turning in an interesting news story or feature article. This year, as in the past, The Junior Star will welcome both kinds of correspondents. That is to say, it will continue to co-operate with all teachers who wish to designate official correspondents for their schools, and it also will continue to extend a cordial greeting to students acting on their own initiative.

If you would like to be one of your school's correspondents this year, read the contributors' rules published elsewhere on this page, feet away. If You Like Prize Contests Read These Valuable Tips

By RALPH J. SATTERLEE.

Daily, in hundreds of newspapers, magazines, circulars, pamphlets and radio broadcasts, we hear about prize contests of various types—writing statements about a product, patriotic essays, puzzles, naming contests, jingles and limericks. In these and others the sponsor has set aside a sum of money. War bonds, or mer-

Pick a contest you are interested in and one you know you will enjoy working on. If you like to write letters, choose a letter contest or a 50 or 100-word statement contest. When the contest is about a product, always remember that the sponsor is looking for a new point to adver-

"Sail 'the sea of victory'—buy 'raft' of War Bonds." "Buy Stamps and Bonds for the 'Do' ration."

Some contests require a box-top, a label, or entry blank to qualify the entry for a prize. Most contests have a set of rules. Follow these rules carefully, for this is one means the sponsor takes to eliminate hundreds of entries. In some cases the rules are very strict. If you want to give your entry a chance to win-give it a chance to be seen and judged. Watch closing dates—better to be early than to lose out entirely. There are local contests in almost every town, and here the beginner has a wonderful opportunity to experiment on his new-found hobby, with less competition. Once you win a prize in a local contest you will gain confidence for bigger competitions to come.

Prize contests are not lotteries. Entries are read, graded and judged according to definite standards. Prizes are awarded for merit and almost always every effort is made to present the prizes to the most deserving entries.

Here are a few tips which may solve some of the problems you will meet in your new hobby:

of play writing continues, it is not imponceivable that a course in the science of obstetrics will have to be added to college drama courses. Clearly, today's dramatists have told themselves, and are telling the public with varying degrees of success, that childbirth is a dramatic thing. It is not in the old hackneyed sense they are speaking, the one in which the tottering marriage is saved by the advent of a helpless, new life. That one had its day, so long a one that even the playwright became bored with it. The current attitude is that childbirth is a comedy subject, a thing to be treated with levity if it is to be contemplated at all. But even the license of the author of comedy does not justify an ignorance of the rudiments of his subtraction. The snark is a Boojum" was a of comedy does not justify an igno-rance of the rudiments of his subt-ject, hence the not improbable need of a general course in the science

The fascination of the dramatist with the subject was emphasized anew at the National last week in Elmer Rice's "A New Life." Mr. Rice is a significant playwright and the Playwright's Company, which produces his dramatic literature, is even more significant. If they are going to add their joint weight to giving the theme standing, heaven knows where it all will end. It might even grow to a stature that reviewers, stealing the terse lingo of birth notice reporters, will dash off their findings in a sentence Born to John Golden, a three-act

Wards of Playwrights.

That would be a pleasant escape, indeed, for in writing for family journals, critics lack the freedom of speech which is given to playwrights when they deal with subjects of such delicacy or indelicacy.

Mr. Rice's play, laid daringly in a maternity hospital, is the third of a recent cycle dealing with the subject. The first was Mr. Golden's "Three's a Family," which earlier had been titled such things as "Three-Cornered Pants" and "The Home Front," under which it played here last spring. After that, just a week ago, came "The Snark Is a Boojum." a stillborn sort of thing from the pen of Owen Davis. Three of anything makes a trend in the theater and this trend happens to be one nicely calculated to create consternation among those who review plays for a living. Why consternation?

To answer that in terms of Mr. Rice's play, the one most intimately concerned with the science of obstetrics, the reviewer is at a complete loss to estimate the authenticity of such scenes as that laid in what is called in the program "the twilight room." It is a very arresting scene, of course, from which one gathers that the dialogue which goes on there is a perfect blending of the painful and the hilarious. Miss Federal Theater Project officials had had a startling adventure of another sort. With a partner, Welles did a sensational Negro "MacBeth," moving the scene of the classic drama from Scotland to Haiti.

Art Without Props.

Betty Field, who plays it on a sepulche-ally darkened stage, does it superbly so far as one can estimate her work. But is it typical talk? Does Mr. Rice, who became a father about a year ago, have experience beyond that of average men in the dialogue of such cloistered sprecincts? Is the reporting Some years he's seen 270 openings.

The Matrons Protest.

This reviewer-who once waited through 26 tired cigarettes from a tired delicatessen near such a hospital—thought he had nicely evaded any possible condemnation by writing around the scene and its relation to accuracy. He still thinks so, but that is more than do several feminine readers who apknowledge that the young man had parently know more about it. "The Snark Is a Boojum" was a casualty of the professional reviewers, not because of the theme, but because it was handled with marked ineptness.

Public Taste Persists.

The chances for Mr. Rice's play, which is treated with deftness and good taste throughout, are the greatest of the three. His accent on the twilight room scene may strike the critics as irrelevant to the point of self-conscious daring, or trickery, but it is unlikely to damage the prospects of his play for all that. On the contrary, it probably will enhance them for the public apparently agrees thoroughly with the playwright of today that the subject is a very amusing one. Another slant on modern play-writing will be evident on the stage of the National this week, the week in which "A New Life" journeys to New York to learn further of its fate.

That is the one represented by "Dark Eyes," the dizzy situation comedy which the Misses Elean Miramova and Eugenie Leonovitch authored for themselves. •When they, in common with so many other actresses, found authors so spellbound that they could not put words to paper, the capricious Russian ladies decided they would do their own writing. Accordingly, they set to work on a laughable thing which they decided was the type of drams to which their talents and audience taste were best suited.

In the way of people who have been trained to the acting branch of theater, they thought of a play which would include a group of performers involved in a series of situations. No substanial characterization, no message, just people and fun. Plays written by actors and actresses — and occasionally by others—are like that. The first consequence is that they are anticipated with suspicion by critics who sit with frowns upon their faces

Of course, Bogie (as every one calls him) looks as tough as a 3-inch nail and snarls through the left side of his mouth. He says anything that comes to his mind-that is, if it is tough enough—but after half an hour of conversation, I would bet my last red ration point, a baby could twist him around its little finger.

I eventually got around to the girls. Betty Grable was rehearsing in the traditional Hollywood slacks, looking plump-but very happy. Her coming motherhood suits the No. 1 pinup girl, who by May hopes to have a junior pinup edition. Betty

"Abie's Irish Rose," of course, has long been in a class by itself when it comes to plumping for religious tolerance. But last season, when Amanda Randolph was added to the radio cast, its authors made an attempt to plump for interracial understanding, too. The result was that liberals of both races deluged the authors with complimentary fan mail. Amanda got the first actual contract of her long radio career and this season her part in the script will be increased in proportion to the message the authors have to deliver.

He Gears Scripts As Client's Vocal Tone Demands

When William Shakespeare's longhair sonnets meet up with jive talk -anything can happen! When Bob Crosby and radio's newest comedy discovery. Les Tremayne, team up on the former's program, the Bard of Avon takes a powerful beating. Tremayne, one of radio's outstanding serious dramatic stars, may be new to the snappy chatter and gagline department, but he's getting "groovier" by the week.

Super "hep" and smart "cat" Bob Alan Dale is the new Carmen is a past master at the jive talk. As former maestro of the sing aggregation known for years as the Bobcats, Bob acquired the scat language way back when the swingrecorded on 11,500 feet of hair-like | dings started sprouting drape shapes steel wire on a spool no larger than and reet pleats. He can twist the the ordinary doughnut, in a new most sentimental Shakespearean quote into icky parlance. But back of his chatter and Tremayne's chatter, as well as behind the chatter of Bing Crosby, is a much unpublicized but very important gentleman-Carroll Carroll.

Rhythms in Voice.

The man with the musical name is not only a writer of remarkable ability. At least half of his work must be attributed to his manner of interviewing talent. Carroll contends that the human voice under normal conditions moves in a rhythmic pattern, measured like music It is this rhythm which he attempts to capture in his script. A Crosby Crosby's voice; a Tremayne line to the rhythmic motion of Tremayne's voice, or a Ken Carpenter speech to the rhythmic motion of the Carpenter voice, thus preventing cacophonous stumbles.

A Great Chatter. This gives his script the flow and tempo, the importance of which Carroll believes should never be underestimated. In interviewing a guest, he is observing the motion of the voice as well as the words that are being spoken. Being an excellent conversationalist, Carroll chats with radio artists or their guests with great informality and they unconsciously tell him the things which make up entertaining and interesting interviews. Carroll is capable of great concentration when he is working. It's doubtful if an air raid on his office could distract him, unless a bomb hit his typewriter. If it hit at the right moment he'd put it in the script.

Matter of a Career And Avocation First For Renee Terry

NEW YORK. Renee Terry's telephone started tingling merrily recently and kept it up for several days. The calls were from men offering themselves sistent clamor, and Renee was overburdened with written proposals. It was all due to a photograph of pretty Miss Terry, radio actress, in a New York newspaper. Before the telephone and the mail halted their busy business of bringing the messages to Renee, she had garnered Baltimore Stadium.

By C. E. Butterfield.

NEW YORK. Four new songs, each an integral part of the musical story, last night went on the air for the first time when the new operetta, "About the Girl," music and liberetto by Kent Cooper, executive director of the Associated Press, has its premiere in a special presentation by the Chicago Theater of the Air on the MBS network at 9 o'clock Saturday night.

They are the title song, "About the Girl," as well as "Song of the Alaska Highway," "June Time" and "Don't You Want My Heart," another Cooper composition previously presented, "Sunset and You," has been woven into the theme.

The operetta has the Alaşka highway as its principal locale, telling the love story of a highway engineer and a night club singer he had heard on the radio from Chi-It is Cooper's first full musical presentation, although within the last two years or so several of his popular tunes, including "Dixie Girl," have been heard on the networks. Music has been his hobby for years, however, and he writes both words and music for his com-

For the operetta Marion Claire, soprano, and Thomas L. Thomas, baritone, are the singing stars, with the dramatic leads portrayed by Laurette Fillbrandt and Marvin Mueller. The orchestra will be conducted by Henry Weber and the chorus by Robert trendler.

Reminders on Rationing

governs the rationing of sugar and shoes.

Blue Stamps, War Ration Book No. 2-To be used for canned fruits, canned vegetables, fruit juices, soups, frozen foods, catsup, etc. Stamps lettered R. S and T are valid now and will remain good through September 20.

Those marked U, V and W became good Wednesday and will remain valid through October 20.

Red Stamps, War Ration Book No. 2 be carefully filled out and returned -To be used for all meats including canned meats, and for butter, margarine, lard, cheese, canned fish, fats and oils and canned milk Coupons X, Y and Z are good now and through October 2.

Brown Stamps, War Ration Book No. 3—A stamps in War Ration Book 3. used for same foods as red stamps in Book No. 2, are good beginning today (September 12) and through October 2.

B stamps are good beginning September 19 and through Octo-

Servicemen of the United States or Allied nations may obtain special food ration certificates if going on leaves of 72 hours or longer. A "furlough ration unit" -certificates good for 8 points of canned goods, 8 points of meats or fats, and 14 pound of sugarwill be issued the serviceman for each three days of his leave or fraction thereof.

Members of the armed forces who are eligible to use ration stamps should apply to their ration board. Their application should be accompanied by a letter from their superior officer showing need for a ration book.

Sugar-Stamp No. 14 is good for 5 pounds and will remain valid through October 31.

Stamps Nos. 15 and 16 in Ration Book No. 1 may be used to obtain sugar for home canning purposes. Each of these stamps will be good for 5 pounds through October 31.

Families needing more than 10 pounds of sugar per person for home canning purposes must make application to their ration boards for all over this amount. In any event, not more than 15 additional pounds will be allotted to a family Fuel Oil-Period No. 1 coupons for next season's ration may be used now or at any time before next January 5. Be sure to note whether the value printed on the face of each coupon is stated in gallons or units. The period No. 1 coupons are good for 10 gallons per unit.

Coupon No. 5 from last season's allotment is still valid and may be used anytime through September 30. Each unit represents 10

Gasoline-All old-type B and C coupons (those in books numbered 527, 527A, 528 and 528A) became invalid September 1. Motorists who still have some of these coupons should exchange them through their local ration board for the new-type B's and C's. The swap will be on a coupon for coupon basis. Application forms for renewal of basic A gasoline rations together with instructions for filling them out are now being mailed to Washington motorists Holders of A books are cautioned to retain the back cover of their book since it will be needed in applying for the new "A" ration stamps, issuance of which will be-It is important that applications to the board in which the applicant resides as soon as possible. No. 6 "A" coupons are now valid and will be good for 3 gallons each through November 21. "B" and "C" coupons, good for 21/2 gallons each, expire according date indicated on the individual books. "TT" rations are issued at 1740

Massachusetts avenue N.W. after approval is obtained from local Offices of Defense Transportation on the basis of certificates of war necessity.

New Automobiles—Any one gainfully employed or doing voluntary work for the war effort or the public welfare is eligible to obtain a rationing certificate for the purchase of cars with a list price of over $1,500, or convertibles, regardless of price. The applicant must show need for a car to get to or do his work and must show that his present car, if any, is not

Eligibility for automobiles with a list price of less than $1,500, except convertibles, is confined to persons who can show the need for a car in any of the essential occupations (such as war workers physicians, ministers, etc.) who do not now have the use of an adequate car. New 1942 model passenger cars with a list price of more than $2,500 and 1941 model cars driven more than 1,000 miles are available without rationing certificates to any one who has need for a car in a gainful occupation, or who needs a car for volunteer work in connection with the war effort or the public welfare. Both dealer and buyer are required to send to the OPA inventory unit here a statement certifying to eligibility of the buyer and giving the description of the car sold.

Tires-All classes of drivers may now have tires recapped with Grade C camelback without obtaining certificates from their ration boards.

Certificates must be obtained from the rationing board for the purchase of any type of tire. Certificates are issued only after presentation of applications on which a tire inspector has certified the need for replacements and if applicants are eligible.

Tire eligibility requirements have been changed to restrict the issuance of certificates for tires where the applican's vehicle is already equipped with four servdeny applications for a fifth tire unless the official tire inspection station has indicated on the report used as an emergency spare tire (through the use of a boot, inner lining, etc.) and only grade 3 may be issued.

Tire Inspection Deadlines-August 31 was the deadline for holders of C gasoline ration books. September 30 is the deadline for holders of A books, and October 31 for those with B rations and certain types of "play" shoes. Any consumer who inadvertently has detached a shoe stamp from his war ration book, or did so without knowing, this action renders the stamp void for over-thecounter transfers, may exchange the stamp at a local board providing the board is satisfied with the reasons furnished. The applicant must present the war ration book from which the stamp was detached, state in writing why it was detached and surrender the loose stamp. Persons living in the United States, but who expect to be away from a source of supply for long periods of time, may make arrangements to obtain the number of additional pairs of shoes he will

Bicycles for adults built specifically for use as delivery vehicles may be obtained without rationing certificates if needed for delivery purposes.

Typewriters-Preferences on rental of non-portables made between 1927 and 1935 is to be given to rationing certificate holders.

To get a rental rationing certificate, an applicant must apply to his local rationing board and show that typewriter will be used at least 24 hours a week for purposes necessary to the war effort. Nonportables made between 1914 and 1928, as well as most portables made since 1935, may be rented for a limited time without a rationing certificate.

Generally, sales are prohibited on nonportables made since 1915. Sales and rentals are unrestricted on models made before 1915 and on "stripped" portables, machines lacking at least two of certain modern features.

Congress will convene Tuesday after a two-month recess and members of the Senate and Lower House, with exceptions, will be in their places when the gavels are brought down declaring the two houses in session.

A number of lawmakers are being accompanied by their families, especially those who have school age children who will return to their studies here. However, not a few of the congressional wives will linger a while longer in their native states before joining their husbands in Washington. Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn is en route to this city from his home in Texas where he went immediately after the adjournment in July. The Speaker is not expected to arrive until Tuesday morning for he remained at his ranch until the very last allowing himself just enough time to reach Washington in time for the opening Tuesday. Another Texan now en route to the Capital is Senator Tom Connally. With Mrs. Connolly, the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, is motoring here from Texarkana.

Senator Joseph T. Ball has had a busy recess time. He made an extensive speaking tour on the West Coast with only a brief vacation with his family at a Northern resort. The Senator spent Friday in Chicago and then went to his home in Minnesota. Mrs. Ball went to St. Paul to join him and will accompany him back to this city the first of the week.

Representative and Mrs. Thomas F. Ford already are back having arrived a few days ago from their residence in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Ford is president of the Congressional Club and now having set her apartment in order, is deep in plans for carrying on with the club's activities. Although the clubhouse at 2001 New Hampshire avenue will not be reopened until December, the Red Cross and Bond Selling committees will meet this week to complete arrangements for the continuation of these projects.

Diplomats and Officials Attend Stromholt-Johnson Marriage

By Margaret Germond.

The Norwegian Ambassador, Mr. Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, was among the many prominent guests from diplomatic official and residential society circles who attended the wedding early last evening of Miss Katherine Beeckman Johnson and Lt. Edmund Stromholt of the Royal Norwegian army, which took place at 6:30 o'clock in St. Alban's Church. The Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom and the Minister of Denmark, Dr. Henrik de Kauffmann, also were among the guests.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hallett Johnson and has spent the greater part of her time in Europe in countries where her father was a diplomatic representative of the United States. She received most of her education abroad, attending the Brillanmont School in Lauzanne, Switzerland.

Mr. Johnson is a career diplomat, and his last assignment was that of American Consul General in Sweden. Three years ago the daughter whom he escorted to the altar last evening was presented at the Royal Court Ball in Stockholm. Mr. Johnson is at present with the Division of Blockade and Supply of the State Depart-

Lt. Stromholt, whose home is in Oslo, spent 18 months in this country lecturing at training camps, leaving for his home about a year ago. He is now in this country on a special mission for his government.

White roses, gladioluses and lighted candles with a background of ferns decorated the altar for the ceremony, at which the Rev. Dr. Charles T. Warner officiated, and Mr. Walter Nash, organist of the church, played a program of wedding music selected by the bride.

Mrs. James Cecil, jr., of Providence, Mrs. Achille Gorki of New York and Miss Dorothy Cogswell of Albany led the bridal procession to the altar, with Miss Priscilla Johnson, who was maid of honor for her sister, immediately preceding the bride and her father. The attendants were gowned alike in peacock blue taffeta trimmed with bands of matching velvet and made with square necklines and very full skirts. Rose tulle and ostrich tips formed their headdresses and they carried old fashioned bouquets of mixed flowers. White satin was worn by the bride, the dress having a wide panel of lace down the front and edging the hem and the long train. A square neckline on a yoke of net and long sleeves edged with the lace featured the bodice of the dress. Her tulle veil was frilled at the top and

Also coming with the official is Senor Victor Rioseco, who is serving as secretary to Senor Fernandez but after the latter's trip in this country, Senor Rioseco will remain in Washington as secretary of the Embassy.

The travelers will be met in Miami by Senor Pedro Alvarez, former Minister of Economy of Chile, who has been in Washington for some time on special mission from his government. Senor Alvarez will join the foreign minister's party during their stay in this country. The Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels have issued invitations for a reception Saturday evening which will have a double purpose, honor their foreign minister and also celebrate the 133d anniversary of Chilean independence. The invitations were engraved for an early evening party from 6 to 8 o'clock but was changed to an evening party at 10 o'clock as the Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull, will entertain at dinner in honor of the visitor that evening. His party will, as is his custom, be given at the Carlton, where he and his charming wife lived for so many

The Ecuador Ambassador, Capt. Eloy Colon Alfaro, had with him for a very brief time last week his brother-in-law and sister, Dr. Emilio Huerta and Senora de Huerta, who came to Washington to undergo treatment at Doctors Hospital, where they are patients.

Also visiting the Capital from Ecuador last week was the superintendent of banks, Dr. Alberto Wither Novarro, who was combining business and health during his trip to this country.

Four Weddings Hold Attention Of Service and Resident Sets

Service circles focused attention yesterday on the weddings of a popular daughter of an officer of the Navy and an equally popular daughter of an Army

In St. Alban's Church, at 5:30 o'clock, Miss Dorothy Coman, daughter of Capt. Vaughn Kimball Coman, U. S. N., and Mrs. Coman, became the bride of Mr. Robert Holman Hicks, son of Mrs. Edgar Hicks of St. Georges, Staten Island, and the late Mr. Hicks.

Then, at 8 o'clock in the evening, the spotlight centered on a ceremony taking place in St. Mary's Chapel of the Washington Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul, at which Miss Caroline Barnes, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Homer D. Barnes, was married to Sergt. Gerald W. Mc-Kenna, jr., Marine Corps.

As the guests were assembling for the wedding of Miss Coman, Mr. Walter Nash gave an impressive organ recital and as the bride, escorted by her father. walked to the altar he played Lohengrin's wedding march. White gladioluses, asters and dahlias were used to decorate the church and there were candles on the altar. The Rev. Dr. Charles

T. Warner officiated. The bridal procession was led by a group of naval and Marine Corps officers who earlier had shown the guests to their places

Capt. P. W. Rivers, Maj. Eric Wood, Capt. C. A. Jamison and Lt. E. A. Bartlett, all of the Marine Corps, and Lt. Comdr. E. G. Friedrick and Lt. R. W. Boster of the Navy.

Following the ushers were the bride's attendants, including Miss Florence King, Mrs. Oscar F. Douglas III, Miss Eleanor Meem of this city and Miss Paula S. Vogelsang of New York, cousin of the bride. Mrs. Ann Meem McLean was the matron of honor.

The bridal attendants wore velvet dresses in autumn shades, Juliet caps with flowing veils to macth and carried shaggy chrysanthemums to blend in color with their gowns. Mrs. McLean's costume was in amethyst, Miss King and Miss Vogelsang were in golden and Mrs. Douglas and Miss Meem in emerald green. Mr. H. Melville Hicks, brother of the bridegroom, was the best

Following the ceremony the guests went to the home of the bride's parents for a reception. Receiving with the young couple were their respective mothers. Mrs. Coman wore a gown of deep blue crepe with a dubonnet hat and Mrs. Hicks was in tan lace with a lavender velvet hat. Both

Phyllis Brown Is Married to C. W. Tull, Jr.

Attractively arranged was the wedding of Miss Phyllis Frazier Brown and Mr. Charles Watson Tull, jr., which took place last evening. The ceremony was performed in the Chevy Chase Methodist Church, the pastor, the Rev. Homer Richmond, officiating at 9 o'clock. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bethel C. Brown of Cleveland, Tenn., and the bridegroom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Tull of Bilt-more Forest at Asheville, N. C.

Mr. Brown gave his daughter in marriage and she was attended by Miss Frances Tull, sister of the bridegroom who was maid of honor, and her bridesmaids were Miss Mary Margaret Greenlaw and Miss Polly Clark. Mr. Preston Russell of Kansas City was best man and the ushers were Mr. Robert Rich of Banbridge, Ga., and Mr. Earnest Hesse of Charleston, S. C.

The bride wore traditional white satin with long sleeves, and a circular train in the skirt caught with chantilly lace and gardenias. A juliet cap of heirloom lace held her veil and she carried a shower bouquet of white orchids, gardenias and stephanotis.

Her maid of honor was in pale Engagement green marquisette and lace with a tiara of white roses and carried an arm bouquet of white roses and stephanotis. The bridesmaids' costumes were similar, one in flesh color and the other in pale yellow; their tiaras and bouquets made like that of the maid of honor.

The wedding supper was served at the Shorebam at 10 o'clock for members of the wedding party who remained for the dancing. Mr. and Mrs. Tull will live at Aberdeen, Md., while the former is taking technical training in the ordnance depart- at Lafayette, La. ment at the Aberdeen Proving to Washington last winter.

Since her return Mrs. de Voogd has been telling her friends of the visit she had with the Crown Princess Juliana at Big Win Inn, Lake of Bays, where she had a cottage for part of the summer.

While Mrs. de Voogd visited with the Crown Princess and admired her blue eyed baby daughter, the little Princess Margriet Francisca, her son Jan and Egbert played with the Crown Princess's daughters, Princess Beatrix and Irene, on the hotel grounds near the cottage.

Mrs. de Voogd and her sons were among the few Washington residents who attended the christening of the little Princess Margriet Francisca in Ottawa last June.

Dorothy J. Miller Is Recent Bride Of Lt. N. D. Fratt

In an impressive ceremony in the Metropolitan Memorial Church, Miss Dorothy Jean Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Miller, became the bride of Lt. Nicholas D. Fratt, Army Air Forces, Saturday, Sep-

White flowers were used in the church and the Rev. Edward Latch officiated at 8 o'clock in the evening. The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of ivory satin and lace, the skirt falling into a short train. Her fingertip-length veil was held in place by a Juliet cap of lace and she carried a bouquet of gladioluses centered with a white orchid.

Miss Nancy Pond was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Bette Dawson and Miss Anne Keene. They wore dresses of iceblue satin and carried bouquets of salmon-colored gladioluses, which corresponded with the flowers worn in their hair.

Mr. Peter Fratt was best man for his brother and the ushers were Mr. Roy Spaulding, U. S. A., and Mr.

Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of the Woodrow Wilson High School. The bride was graduated from Mount Vernon Junior College. Her husband left Harvard to join the Air Forces, receiving his wings about two weeks ago. He is the son of Mrs. E. T. O'Callaghan of Long Island and Mr. Nicholas F. Fratt, II, of Cincinnati, who came from their respective homes for their son's wedding.

WANTED WOMAN SALES EXECUTIVE

A nationally known corporation with headquarters in New York is opening a small, smart, ground-floor retail salon on Connecticut Avenue to merchandise an unusual, nationally successful hair and scalp process for men and women. This is an unusual opportunity for a cultured, neat-appearing woman, thirty to fifty, living in Washington permanently, to earn a substantial income. Experience in this field is not essential, but sales ability and character are. Please state, confidentially, a complete, brief history of your business career and when available. A representative will be in Washington between September 12 and 20. A personal interview will be granted to the right person. Address Box 453-S. Star Office.

Miss Lorene Joan Coleman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry I. Coleman, was married last evening to Chief Petty Officer Nathan Segal, Maritime Service, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel S. Segal. The wedding took place in the South American room of the Hotel Statler, Rabbi Henry Segal officiating at 8:30 o'clock, and Miss Helen Handelman sang, accompanied by a string orchestra conducted by Mr. Sidney Seidenman.

Mr. Coleman escorted his daughter and gave her in marriage. Her wedding gown was ivory satin, with fulllength train. Her fingertip-length veil was held by a headdress of pearl orange blossoms and she carried a white orchid and gladioluses.

Miss Esther Ann Zussman was maid of honor and the bride's other attendants included the Misses Shirley Clayman, Lucille Kirsch and Mrs. Helen Tebeleff. Their costumes were similar, made of faille silk and velvet, with matching headdresses, the maid of honor's in purple and the others in British rose. Their bouquets were of orchids. Mr. Segal was best man for his son and the ushers were Mr. Allan B. Coleman, Mr. Jack Segal, Mr. Aaron Segal and Pfc. Harris S. Kassel. A buffet supper, with dance, fol-lowed and later Mr. Segal and his bride left on their wedding trip. They will make their home at 1308 Farragut street. Mrs. Segal attended George Washington University and the Abbott School of Art. Mr. Segal received his bachelor of commercial science degree from the Benjamin Franklin University.

A Weekly Sponsored Column of Things Advertised and Interesting.

New York, Sept. 12th. Last Sunday, this column celebrated its second birthday . . . after two years of bringing news of nationally advertised products to newspaper pages from coast to coast. Many of you took the trouble to sit down and write friendly little notes . . . telling your experiences with products featured in BUY-LINES and requesting information on other subjects. I won't try to thank you for this ... rather, I'll ask you a question. Have you ever recommended some product, a recipe, a treasured beauty secret to a friend . . . and then enjoyed the reward from her pleasure in sharing it? Then you already know how much I appreciate hearing from you! And now to report on new BUY LINES . . . and on brand-new uses for old favorites!

The essential beauty of Sterling Silver has made it a bride's first dream! So,—if you're a bride-to-be ... DON'T let shortage talk frighten you into believing you'll have to wait until later for this 'very first" permanent and precious possession in your post-war home! Even in wartime there are the 7 most-used pieces in 12 lovely TOWLE Sterling patterns from which to choose YOURS!... they're the BASIG pieces to start your sterling set with essential place settings. For completing your set quickly in peacetime.—ask your Jeweler for the specially designed War Bond Plan envelope which bears a Priority Number so which bears a Priority Number so you won't have to wait too long for your precious TOWLE Ster-ling. Keep your War Bonds there "earmarked" for your chosen TOWLE pattern after the war. Ask your Jeweler about this mar-velous TOWLE Bond Plan . . . and see the beautiful TOWLE Sterling patterns while you're there. Craft traditions of TOWLE Sterling, you know, go back to the master silversmith of 1690 . . . and the high standards of quality maintained through the years mean a lot to you and to your OWN TOWLE

Yes, this lady DOES look forlorn . . and no wonder, for she's known as the Ugly Duckling in her set! Why? . . . there may be many a good reason—but one bet is that she's not TOO particular about personal fastidiousness! That's bad, anytime . . . but in the Fall it's AWFUL. Warm clothes and Indian summer days conspire to cause plenty of damage. Damage to clothes—damage to a woman's C. Q. (Charm Quotient). But why take these undue risks when there's an easy, delightful way out . . 5-DAY Underarm PADS. Whisk one of these bits of magic under your arms and you've used the most effective means known for the prevention of under-arm perspira-tion and odor. Try 5-DAY UN-DERARM PADS. I know you'll like them. The cost is just 55c a jar at any department or drugstore. Get into the "5-DAY" habit TO-DAY ... and gain new confidence!

How about making a smoking checkup? Get a package of VI-CEROYS and notice how the unique filter tip keeps crumbs of tobacco out of the mouth. Also, the outer tipping keeps the cigarette firm and dry . . . doesn't spoil your lip make-up. Now put the cigarette out, tear open the filter tip, and examine the minute folds of paper which are stained brownish with the irritants that have been filtered out of the mild, clean smoke you've just enjoyed! That's why fastidious women prefer VI-CEROY . . . relaxing, stimulating, fragrant and enjoyable . . . blended from fine quality tobaccos that appeal to you and the man in the family. Ask your Tobacconist for VICEROYS and be thankful this smart cigarette is popular priced!

When ONE RUB does the work of THREE . . . why spend this extra time, and effort on cleaning silver? SILVO Silver Polish can cut silver cleaning time down onethird . . . and take the messiness right out of this chore, too! That's because SILVO is a LIQUID Silver Polish . . . as tender to your lovely hands as it is to lustrous silver! Contains no acids, mercury or harsh abrasives . . . and because it is a LIQUID, it gets right down into the tiniest crevices of the most intricate chasing and silver filigreework. Washing after cleaning is unnecessary,—for SILVO leaves behind no ugly chalky deposits. Even the odor of SILVO is pleasing. Extremely low priced for 25c at Department stores. Ask for it

A Yardley Complexion.

This expression is a compliment unto itself! Clear, fine-textured, smoothly finished in the best "thoroughbred" manner! So try the helps toward it! English Complexion Cream, pure as country cream and is soothing soft, is just right for keeping young and normal skins scrupulously clean. For dry skins that have a tendency to tired, drawn lines, YARDLEY Dry Skin Cleansing Cream is best because it is compounded to soften, lubricate and coax dry complexions back to dewy freshness. Use YARDLEY Night Cream ALWAYS . . . rich smooth complexion! Cost is $1 a jer . . . find them at finer shops

When you plan your week's meals of vegetables, meat and cheese dishes,—let Van Camp's TEN-DERONI help out in making them go further, save time and give more delicious enjoyment and healthful nourishment to the family! You'll be perfectly amazed at how this UN-rationed treat can keep war-time meals UP in flavor and DOWN in cost! TENDERONI is processed with egg white,-the same ingredient that keeps an angel-food cake white, light and fluffy. That's just what happens in TENDERONI . . . light, white, tender and fluffy walls that cook in only 7 minutes and NEVER become doughy! TENDERONI is as different from ordinary macaroni and spaghetti as an angel food cake is from a loaf of bread . . . so try it in combination with vegetables, meat and cheese. Remember NO ration points are required for this different. delicious for that's what any woman is who loads herself down with soap, disinfectant, scrub brush and cloths for toilet sanitation! SANI-FLUSH is THE buy-line for the WHOLE job. And don't make the mistake of thinking toilets are sanitary because they LOOK clean. They can go a long time without showing stains or dicoloration, if you live in a soft water area where there's not much iron in the water to stain. But a persistent film forms quickly,-a place where toilet germs and a cause of toilet odors lie! SANI-FLUSH, and remember that SANI-FLUSH does an allin-one toilet sanitation job! Use it twice a week according to directions . . . you don't even need a disinfectant!

Another reminder of how to make your next letter to a serviceman or woman something special slip in a Fleet's CHAP STICK! ALTHOUGH half way around the world, he'll never forget the woman with the beautiful skin.

Temptingly does your skin whisper, "Caress me", or does it shout, "Underneath the powder I'm faded and dull. I've been sunburned, I've been coarsened. I'm not so attractive, I know."

If your skin says that, why not try MERCOLIZED WAX CREAM. This exciting cream, used according to directions, invisibly flakes off in tiny particles the rougher, drab, weathered outerskin, revealing to your delighted eyes a whiter, softer, lovelier, more lovable complexion, your protected underskin. It actually leaves the skin firmer, smoother, and what is more, younger looking. Buy a jar of

Advice to the Clotheslorn

Recently, the large number of telephone calls and letters from readers have led us to believe that you would find useful a column in which we can regularly answer questions pertaining to clothes problems. This feature will run every Sunday. We ask that you address any questions you may have on clothes or clothes conservation to Mrs. Hayes, and watch this column for the answer:

"I enjoyed your column the other day on planning a fall wardrobe and found it most useful. In it you suggested that it would be a good idea before buying a dressy crepe dress to study the dinner clothes in one's closet to see what possibilities they offer. I have acted on your suggestion and now find myself confronted with a problem. I have a black evening dress which I've had for years and which I know I shan't wear often in the near future because it is too formal, with a fairly deep neckline. I'd like to transform it into a short black dinner dress but I don't think there is enough material in the narrow skirt for sleeves. Have you any suggestions? "Mrs. J. T. Q."

Answer-Our hat's off to you in your plan to make something do for another year. There are several ways you can transform your evening dress into a new and more useful short dress even though you may not have enough material for sleeves. Why not fill in the nakedness with a yoke and long sleeves of sheer black net? One of the smartest women we saw at the National the other night wore a short black dress with sheer sleeves and yoke. She accented the black with turquoise feathers in her hair, matching gloves. On the other hand, you might make short cape sleeyes out of the material you snip off the long skirt. Cape sleeves don't take as much material as set-in sleeves and, what's more, they're very new-looking.

* * * * "I have a pair of silver foxes which I treasure very highly, but I haven't had much opportunity to wear them in Washington. Do you think it would be a good idea to have them put on a coat?

If so, what kind? "Miss K. A. S." Answer-It would be very extravagant, I think, to have your silver foxes put on a coat, because that would limit the usefulness of your coat to very dressy occasions. It would be much wiser to buy or make a simple black coat—not too tailored, not too soft—that would be a fine foil for your foxes, at the same time serving as a good wear-with-everything black coat. On the other hand, you might have your foxes made into a short fur jacket which you'll probably find more useful than the scarf; a clever furrier can fake the sides of the jacket with fabric if there isn't enough fur to go around fall afternoon dress and would like to buy one of black satin, because the satin is more flattering to me than crepe, and actually seems to bring a glow to my face. However, I am rather large-size 40 and my daughter says that satin will make me look larger.

Do you agree? "Mrs. M. Z." Answer-Your daughter has given you good advice in suggesting that you avoid satin. Any fabric with a sheen makes the figure look larger. Why don't you buy a crepe or wool dress with touches of satin, such as a flattering satin bow at the neckline. That would bring the "satin glow" to your face without being unkind to your figure. Or you might choose a dull-surfaced dress with satin buttons to light it up. This combination of two fabrics is a very new fall fashion and one that will prove a flattering compromise for you.

"I possess two fur jackets that are lovely and still in excellent condition. One is silver fox, the other a sable-dved skunk. According to the cry, "don't buy what you don't need," I shouldn't be thinking of purchasing a new coat this coming year, but from a health angle, I must. After all, a short coat doesn't keep one "toasty warm." I would like to buy a coat that could be worn for sports as well as dress occasions. The style I have in mind is a slightly swagger coat with a tuxedo collar of a short-haired fur. I am only 5 feet 2 with high heels, so do you think this is a good selection?" MISS. M. C. Answer-Your selection of a tuxedo coat is indeed good for one of your height. As you probably know, the long unbroken line of the tuxedo front will add inches to your height. Choosing a short-haired fur is wise, too; a long-haired pelt would be overbearing for such a dainty person. However, before you decide to purchase another coat, may I suggest that woolen petticoats and underthings make a short coat as "toasty warm" as you please; and if you haven't seen them lately you don't know how pretty they can be. Also with your skunk coat, you might wear woolen sports skirts which you will find more than adequate in keeping the nether regions warm when the wind whistles.

Wartime Etiquette

By Emily Post

I am printing the following letter from a Maj. X, U. S. A. (that means the Regular Army) first, because I do, of course, want to co-operate with the military authorities in every way I can and because I am only too glad to print what they ask me to. Even so, I must say that the "as of today" character of wartime manners and customs make dangerous going for a column that is not on a news page and therefore can easily be out of date by the time it gets into print. However, as to Maj. X's letter referring to a paragraph in which I advised brides and sweethearts that an officer in uniform should not be asked to carry bundles, Maj. X writes: "Normally you are right. An officer does not carry bundles (his purchases are delivered by the store) but in wartime, many customs go by the board in order to conserve resources and manpower. Therefore, it is now customary, I believe, for officers to carry home their packages just as civilians are doing. And incidentally, many young officers have confused customs with regulations. Recently I met a new second lieutenant with his mother. He had just bought a complete new uniform: coat, slacks, shirt, ties, cap, shoes, socks, etc. And believe it or not, his mother was loaded with all of these packages. It was certainly out of keeping to see a husky youngster strolling down the street with his elderly mother trudging along beside him loaded down like a pack horse. Couldn't you hold the mirror up ficers' idea back to the Indians?" To this I can only say that "the idea" was never mine. In my only article on this subject I merely repeated what I have many times been asked by military persons, to tell my readers; namely that flowers should not be pinned on the tunic of a bridegroom and that his wife or sweetheart or mother should not hand bundles to him to carry. None has said "unless unavoidable." Perhaps this is taken for granted? Frankly I don't know when military precepts are "customs" and when they are "regulations"-in short, when they may be adapted to situations, and when they must be rigidly en-

The question of whether it is proper for a stenographer to remain seated when introduced to the commanding officer who visits the office, even though the stenographer finds it difficult to get out from behind her desk piled with work, is answered thus:

If she is in uniform, decidedly no!-if not in uniform, then no, too, to the degree that she should at least make the gesture of attempting to rise.

Smart Washington Wears Washington residents are still vacationing, taking advantage of the prolonged hot weather to store up sunshine for the busy winter ahead. Tall blond Adelaide Whitehouse, who is secretary to Mrs. Dwight Davis, and spends most of her Washington days dressed in a Red Cross uniform, loves pastel shades for her day and evening frocks. She looks particularly pretty in a tailored white crepe dress, with which she wears pastel sweaters on cool days. Mrs. Caresse Crosby prefers flowers. Flowers in the print of O.

Two fabrics are twice as smart as one in this fall's smartest dresses. Here is a youthful version of the fashion of playing one fabric against the other, suggesting in its satin midriff and buttons a good makeover trick for you who patriotically want to give a new look to last year's dress.

Keep Your Head in Clouds For Good Posture

grace, charm and importance than a head well carried—held high.

To carry your head proudly you must strengthen the muscles between shoulders and along your back. You also must correct faulty posture.

According to Miss Dorothy Nye, a New York specialist in corrective exercises, when a rigid, rounded upper back is the case, and a curvature of the spine exists, an orthopedic doctor should be consulted. The condition has evidently existed too long to be corrected by exercise -but it can be helped.

flowered bathing suits make up her summer wardrobe. Mrs. Drummond-Wolff (the former Margaret Fahnestock) is still as slender as in the days when she made her debut in Washington. She wears printed slacks for the beach, gay printed dresses for afternoon. Seldom wears a hat, but always gloves.

Newest glamour girl head covering for the beach is to tie a bandana, not around the head, but across, so that the back hangs down "snood" fashion. At the gayer resorts, where people still dress for dinner, the blouse

Perfect Health Is Aid to Real Charm

If you want to be a beauty you must keep healthy. Even the ordinary cold can pull down your vitality and make your eyes and nose red. More acute illnesses have very bad effects on your hair, your posture, your eyes, your skin.

One should not need to play up patriotism to urge you to keep fit. You should be vain enough and conscientious enough to keep as healthy as possible.

Although this is a beauty column, and I like to tell you about aids which will enhance your beauty, and exercises which build beauty, still I cannot too strongly stress the vitalness of good health to a happy life. Without good health you are enjoying life only percentagewise.

I have, personally no use for any woman or girl who tries to do what she wants by pretending to be ill and playing on the sympathies of those who love her. Too many woman use such tacticsbut they lose out in the end.

If you have health, you can get what you want by going out after it. You do not need to wait until it is handed you on a silver platter. If you are healthy and vital and pleasing to look upon, you have your world in the palm of your hand. What you get amounts simply to what you make an effort to get!

If you have any minor ailment or disfigurement, which is causing you do grow a complex, face the problem squarely and do something about it.

MADE TO

skirts are floor length and the blouses anything from the sheerest wisps of lace and ruffles to the most severely tailored shirts. Mrs. Loring Christie wears a lovely street-length pink and black printed chiffon gown for summer dining in restaurants, and for the smart town look tops it off with a tiny black hat and long black gloves. Smart New Yorkers who are already beginning their winter shopping are choosing simpler frocks this season. The choice is for dark colors, everything simply and superbly cut, to last a long time. Many of these are of wool which will be practical for those not so warm houses we will have to face this winter. For color and excitement in dress they depend on gay amusing and striking accessories, and the shops have more of these than ever before it seems.

Mrs. Albert Burrows, the darkhaired vivacious wife of Lt. Comdr. Burrows was very chic the other day at lunch in a lush lime green wool dress which she set off with a Chinese influence hat in natural color. She was engaged in serious conversation with Miss Gertrude Prisley, smart publicity director of one of our favorite stores. Pris was wearing a new black side draped frock with a cute little black bonnet perched atop her pompadour. We suspect Mrs. Burrows was telling Pris about her husband's just receiving the Navy Cross-she's that proud of him. Incidentally, Mrs. Burrows will be one of the speakers at the Treasury "Back the Attack" show at the Monument grounds, doing her bit for the Third War Loan drive.

Mrs. Carolyn Kenison, hopping off to Washington from New York to spend the week end with her twin sister, stepped out to dinner in sister Evelyn's clothes looking exceptionally lovely. Evie says she sat in the corner green with envy while her twin sailed around in a long flowered skirt of two shades of purple on a white ground, topped off with a longsleeved purple gaucho shirt. She wore scads of stark white beads around her neck. As the twins are as alike as two peas, we see no reason for envy on Evie's part, and feel sure that it is just her admiration of her twin that makes her insist she wishes she could look like her just once.

Civic Problems, Civic Bodies

Civic Groups Resuming Activities; Waste Paper to Help Win the War

By JESSE C. SUTER.

The meetings last week of the Southeast Council of Citizens' Associations and the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens' Association and the basket supper and festival of the Arkansas Avenue Citizens' Association marked the opening of the fall and winter activities of the organized citizen groups. The Southeast Council considered plans for the elimination of slums from that section and improved sewage facilities. The Rhode Island Avenue Citizens' Association had under consideration the problem presented by the use of Rhode Island avenue as a thoroughfare for heavy trucks. The Arkansas Avenue gathering was a festive occasion with music by the Capitol Theater Band, the playing of games, mass singing and motion pictures. The residents of the area were invited to come and bring basket suppers.

Civic Groups Urged to Boost Paper Salvage Program

The War Production Board and the D. C. Salvage Committee declare that there is a greatly increased demand from our armed forces and lease-lend for supplies of paper and paper containers. The sharp decrease in virgin pulp for manufacture has again caused a marked and decided shortage of waste paper. They also say that inadequate manpower in the collection field has also contributed considerably to this shortage.

Because of this condition the War Production Board has directed the D. C. Salvage Committee to set up an intensified paper salvage program for the District of Columbia. This is a part of a movement embracing the entire country which has been asked to exert every effort to increase waste paper collections 1,000,000 tons this year over collections for last year.

The D. C. Salvage Committee desires that all civic groups in the various sections of the District give active co-operation, first, in helping arouse the interest and participation of householders and apartment dwellers in this essential part of the war program. Some specific requests will be made by the committee of the groups from time to time. The principal job in each community at this time will be to have the paper saved, tied up in bundles and made ready for collection from the homes at the time covered by a definite schedule.

The following grades of waste paper are specifically wanted: OLD CORRUGATED BOXES, BROWN WRAPPING PAPER, NEWSPAPERS AND MAGAZINES. Because of the labor shortage the value of the salvaged paper will be materially increased if it is sorted and prepared as requested. Wherever possible it should be separated into specific grades and tied in bundles. Mixed paper must be baled or packed in boxes for collection. All corrugated boxes should be flattened out and tied in bundles and included with the brown paper. All waste paper snould be kept dry and clean. It should be borne in mind that mixed paper is not wanted unless The collection of prepared waste paper will be conducted by Area Salvage Committees of the District of Columbia Salvage Corps. Boy Scout troops, Girl Scout troops, citizens' associations, civic associations, parent-teacher associations, boys' clubs and similar organizations will be asked to assist in the collection program. Charity collection agencies will also make collections. The D. C. Salvage Committee, Republic 8488, will accept pickup orders for 150 pounds or over of prepared waste paper. Pickup orders for small accumulations cannot be accepted because of manpower and gasoline shortages. If persons wish to sell their prepared waste paper, they should take it to the nearest junk dealer.

A regular schedule of home paper collections has been made by the committee for each Saturday. The first collection is on the third Saturday of this month, September 18, in the Southeast section; the second, on the fourth Saturday, September 25, in the Southwest; the third, on the first Saturday in October, in the Northeast section, and the fourth, on the second Saturday, October 9, for the Northwest section. The following additional directions are given by the committee regarding these home paper collections: 1. Save and prepare your paper according to the paper salvage

2. Tie your paper in bundles-20 to 30 pounds each-and place on your front porch or steps before 9 a.m. on collection day. If you have no porch or steps, place the paper directly in front of your entrance. It is important that the paper be kept dry. 3. If your paper or your neighbors' paper is not collected by

3 p.m., call Republic 8488 and report it. 4. Paper will only be collected from your home on collection day.

Hearings on 1945 Budget Announced by Commisioners The hearing on the 1945 budget has been announced by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia beginning at 10 a.m. Thursday, September 16, and ending on the following day. This follows a custom established some years ago by a former board and is intended to give the citizens of the District of Columbia an opportunity to appear and present any recommendation they may desire relating to the District budget for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1945.

The notice addressed to the various civic groups states that any recommendation relative to the budget must be in writing and filed with the secretary of the Board of Commissioners not later than September 13, together with the name of person or representative who will appear and the amount of time desired. The persons whose names are filed will then be notified by the secretary promptly of the date and time they will be heard. It is requested that in the reply to the secretary the telephone number be given.

This hearing represents the second step in District budgetmaking, the first having been the recommendations to the Commissioners from the various department heads and other District

American Legion To Vote Charter Amendments

Five amendments to the constitution of the American Legion will be voted upon at the 25th annual convention at Omaha, Nebr., September 21 to 23.

Four of them deal with changes necessary to make the membership eligibility provisions conform with the amended congressional charter that has opened the ranks of the Legion and its auxiliary to honorary discharged veterans of World War II. The fifth amendment comes from the 1942 convention of the Michigan department. It would amend the eligibility provisions of the consti-tution to make United States citizenship a prerequisite to enrollment in the American Legion.

Officially listed as missing in action since December 28, 1942, when he left on a search mission from which he did not return, Sergt. Noble, a veteran bombardier of the Southwest Pacific action, has been awarded the Silver Star, the Air Medal and two Oak Leaf Clusters. He received his flight training at Hickam Field, Hawaii, and was on duty there when the Japanese attacked. He received the Silver Star award for actions against the Japanese in August and October, 1942. During the first, a two-plane attack on a Japanese task force of one carrier, two destroyers and two cruisers, a direct hit was scored on the Jap carrier, and two of seven attacking Zeros shot down.

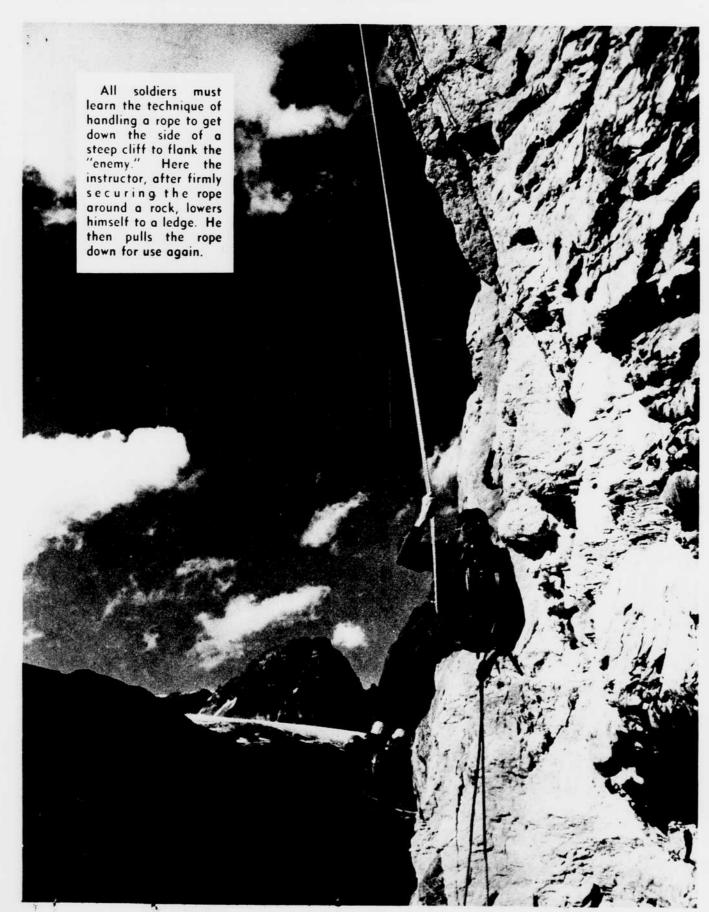

Subsequent air actions against Japanese task forces in the Pacific area and at Guadalcanal brought the Air Medal and the Oak Leaf Cluster additions.

Sergt. Noble, 24, is the son of Lt. Comdr. and Mrs. Charles M. Noble, 900 North Wayne street, Arlington, Va. Comdr. Noble, formerly chief engineer of the New York Port Authority and the Pentagon Building project, is now on duty in the Pacific with the Seabees.

Sergt. Noble was graduated from the Princess Anne (Md.) High School and enlisted in 1939 at the end of his freshman year at Maryland University where he was preparing for a premedical course. He was a member of the university's R. O. T. C.

HIGH in the rarefied air of the Canadian Rockies, soldiers of the Canadian Alpine forces are toughening up and learning the hazardous methods of mountain fighting. They are instructed by members of the Alpine Club of Canada in new techniques of rock and ice climbing. They become accustomed to high altitudes, learn to advance over snow-bridges where a breakthrough could plunge a man hundreds of feet into ice-lined caverns below.

Men trained to fight in the mountains have proved their worth in many campaigns where action took them over rough terrain.

Supplies for these troops, training in mountain camps that are inaccessable to auto or truck, have to be packed in by horse over high moraines and through swiftly flowing, icy streams.

W. W. CHAMBERS

One of the Largest Undertakers in the World

EATH is a sorrowful occasion, yet it is one thing we can not escape. It can be very unpleasant, especially if the undertaker you engage has a limited stock of caskets—and lots of excuses. Chambers is not making excuses—he has plenty caskets!

This beautiful casket in a complete funeral

Chambers also owns and operates modern rolling equipment, and can furnish every item necessary for a fine funeral. For the price, $336, here is a funeral with 60 services that is "fit for a king," and fine enough for any body. Chambers can also supply funerals at prices much lower, or much higherranging from $95. Because Chambers is one of the Largest Undertakers in the World.

STEP INSIDE ...

The hall is crowded—for a War Bond rally is going on! Here is a thrilling picture of America, by a famous writer usually the younger fry — can safely lay claim to beauty as well as brains, and to glamour as well as a talent for writing, it always has been my contention that writers should be read and not seen.

by Edna Ferber

We are, as a rule, on the stuffy side, pictorially. Our features never would decorate a coin, our figures have not benefited by the hours spent daily doubled up over a typewriter or desk; our costumes may be modish and even costly, but a certain inherent lack of chic seems to descend like a blight upon any garment that once has draped our frames.

So it was that when the time came to present War Bonds in their most alluring form the Treasury Department flew like a homing pigeon to that nest of glamour, Hollywood. Blondes and brunettes, sarongfamed sirens, stalwart male stars with miraculously regular incisors did a valiant job in swapping pulchritude for Bonds.

Then some dreamer in the Treasury Department ventured the idea that there were a good many people in the United States who read. Not only that, they thought writing was quite an art and had even some curiosity regarding these moles who hid in corners and put one word after another down on paper. Authors, ventured this optimist, might be presented as entertainment. Not that alone, they might present War Bonds in a fresh and lucid light.

"Authors!" hooted his hearers, in derision. "Who wants to look at authors! Or hear them!"

But the thing was tried, and astonishingly it worked. Middle-aged men and women, sedentary and desk-bound for years, found themselves being whirled through towns on Bond-selling campaigns, and not only that, found themselves selling Bonds to the tune of millions and millions of dollars. Perhaps they weren't photogenic, but they had something to say, and they said it. They said it over the radio, they said it from platforms, they said it at huge dinners. They had earnestness and fire and a way with words that would charm the gold out of your teeth. Words were their accustomed tools; emotions were their stock in trade.

"Look what we've found! Authors are people! Authors are box office!"

It was decided to try a mad scheme. A night meeting. A huge hall. No one entitled to a seat who had not bought a $25 War Bond, or more. The greater the purchase the better the seat. Again the scoffers said, "Oh, now, look — a joke's a joke. Nobody'll come."

But come they did. And one of those meetings — just one in many like it — seemed to me to be as thrilling and reassuring an American experience as I've ever encountered.

A New England town, sizable but not large; engaged in defense work. The people in it were average American citizens of varied background — American stock two hundred years old, as well as Polish, Czech, Italian, German, Scandinavian, French of first and second generation. They had known the ups and downs of the past quarter-century in the United States.

Well, it was wonderful. There were three of us: two men and a woman. One was a newspaper correspondent who had been imprisoned in Japan, Otto Tolischus. One a poet, Mark Van Doren. And myself, a writer of novels and plays. We were past our pristine youth, to put it tactfully. I would have sworn that the thousands of people in a busy New England town would not be interested even mildly in a middle-aged trio such as this.

No preliminaries, even if they had been planned by Hitler himself, could have been worse for the selling of United States War Bonds. Word had come to the Treasury Department that the town had reached its quota and that the bottom of the barrel had been scraped.

Gasoline rationing was at its height — or depths. You were scarcely permitted to use gas to go to your own funeral. On the day set for the night meeting it began to rain as only the early summer of 1943 could rain, and it kept on raining with unabated violence at six, seven, eight, nine. People, we said, were going to stay home in droves.

But they came. Thousands came in the rain and presumably on foot. Everyone present had bought Bonds. Everyone there could, instead, have gone to a movie or stayed home and read or played gin rummy or listened to the radio. The thing that happened wasn't spectacular; it was somehow touched with the miraculous.

The miracle lay not in the program itself, but in the spirit and the electric atmosphere of the gathering. No one of us three said anything world-rocking. There was singing; the fresh young untrained voices of a high-school chorus. Two young soldiers spoke very briefly, both local lads home on leave. The one, as I recall it, was of Polish and the other of Irish antecedents.

They had been in the thick of the Solomons. They were terribly and touchingly young. Their features had scarcely crystallized into the mold of manhood. They weren't speakers, as orators go, and they rather mumbled and repeated and blushed and looked ill-at-ease, their hard young hands gripped into fists, and the audience laughed a little, but it was a laugh of fond affection. You knew, as they stood there speaking so inexpertly, that here were two boys who would man a gun or fly a plane or best a Jap or tinker a jeep and that there would be nothing inexpert about that performance.

Two veterans of the War of 1914-1918 in the uniform of their Legion Post appeared, one on either side of the stage; they carried the flags down the little steps and up the aisle and out. Their bearing was none too military, they had graying hair and their waistlines weren't what they once had been. They looked like one's neighbors, like the men one sees every day in buses or subways; their faces were human and civilized and touched with the pencil of life. Carrying the flags, they faced, wheeled, marched up the aisle, and one of them bumped against a music stand in the orchestra pit. It was the dignified and serious rite of an unmilitary nation; it was unprofessional and democratic and good, and it was reassuring and wonderful to realize that it would have been done much better in Germany or Japan or Italy.

But none of these things, certainly, was noteworthy in the least. The only wonder was that the great gathering in that hall was a thing of unity. No one in that audience was there for gain or for evil or for spite. They wanted nothing except to give. Outside, in many a town and city in the United States, there was conniving and disunity and invective. No one there but knew this. Inside that hall was purity - purity of purpose, of action; purity, really, of race such as Hitler never could have achieved even if his had been success instead of failure. For every one in the hall was there of his own free will, everyone had given his share that his government might survive this dreadful ordeal, everyone was there to hear and perhans learn and even perhaps to gain fresh courage. There was no fanfare, there were no antics, no glamour. It wasn't dull, it was even humorous at times. But above all it was a mass of people being voluntarily good and big.

It was moving, it was stimulating, it was unregimented, it was America.

LOYALTY. A Navy friend reports that when he got to the West Coast he was surprised to find how many Okies — the small farmers of Oklahoma — were working in the shipyards and how many of them had enlisted in the Navy. He also was surprised when he went aboard his own ship:

He climbed up to the crow's nest, found

this message scrawled: "To All Okies — This looks like a bee tree, but it ain't. It ain't no silo neither. This ship kicks and bucks like a mule. But I'll follow her till she either kicks or bites me."

"About War Babies," gave the wrong interpretation of Army regulations as to how you can send baby pictures, by V-Mail, to Daddy overseas. Pictures can not be pasted or attached to the V-Mail form. But here's what you can do if your baby is less than a year old or was born after Dad left for overseas:

Take the picture to a printer. Ask him to have made a metal "cut" of it, not larger than one-third of the form's correspondence space. With the cut, he can print the picture directly onto the upper left-hand corner of the correspondence space. Then you can write your letter, have it V-mailed overseas.

FACT. Sailors will be glad to know that two of their comrades on post-office duty are Billy B. Good and Billy B. Quick.

Palmolive Plan
Helen Anthony of Detroit, Mich.

"My complexion had lost its lovely look. So I said 'yes' quick when invited to try the new 14-Day Palmolive Plan—along with 1284 other women all over the U.S.A.! My group reported to a Detroit skin doctor. Some of us had dry skins; some oily; some 'average.' After a careful examination, we were given the Palmolive Plan to use at home for 14 days.

"Here's the proved Palmolive Plan: Wash your face 3 times a day with Palmolive Soap. Then—each time—massage your clean face with that lovely, soft Palmolive beauty-lather...just like a cream. Do this for a full 60 seconds. This massage extracts the full beautifying effect from Palmolive lather for your skin. Then rinse and dry. That's absolutely all!

"After 14 days, I went back to my doctor. He confirmed what my mirror told me. My skin was brighter, clearer, less oily! Later I learned many skin improvements had been observed by all the 36 examining doctors. Actually 2 out of 3 of all the 1285 women got see-able, feel-able results. So the 14-Day Palmolive Plan is now my beauty plan for life!"

YOU, TOO, may look for these skin improvements in only 14 Days!

WILL WAR WEDDINGS LAST?

mance, and it is therefore not surprising that Pearl Harbor should have called the nation to arms in more ways than one. During 1942, the rush of young people to the marriage altar assumed almost panic proportions, reaching an estimated alltime high of 1,800,000, an increase of 11% over 1941. In some localities near Army camps or naval stations, the upward-soaring marriage chart leapt clear through the ceiling, scoring an increase in San Diego of over 176%, and in Tacoma of over 105%.

Two-thirds of the grooms were servicemen. "Prior to the war, the average age for bride and bridegroom was from twenty-six to twenty-eight years; now it is nearer twenty to twenty-two. Then marriage was a deliberate act of the mind as well as of the emotions. Today, 'They are all doing it.'" This is how the situation is described by the Very Reverend George A. Robertshaw of Garden City, New York, who has married many war brides and grooms. "I do not in any sense infer," he adds, "that our young people today are of inferior stuff to our young people of yesterday. No, they are in many instances superior. They have courage and a new spirit of adventure; but the circumstances which are playing upon them today are making them act more and more upon their emotions and less and less on considered and sober thinking."

Before America went to war, the marriages of these young people would have been regarded as mainly a personal problem. Most of them will be surprised to know that it is now considered a problem of national importance, closely related to winning the war.

Why? Because the morale of so many of our troops is involved. John Steinbeck, the author, who is visiting Army camps in various war theaters, recently reported that soldiers who get no letters from their wives, or the wrong kind of letters, sometimes worry so that they have to be hospitalized. "One good letter can make the difference between a good soldier and a sick man."

Worried Men Can't Fight

Norman Davis, Chairman of the Red Cross, puts it this way: "Our fighting men need more than the best equipment in the world. Each man needs the security of knowing that all is well at home on the family front. The woman who is married to a serviceman therefore has a double reason for making her marriage a success—her personal happiness and the welfare of her country. That is one of the reasons why the Red Cross provides field directors with our men, and home-service workers on the domestic front, to maintain a constant link between the servicemen and their loved ones."

Has John Doe, who used to be a good soldier, suddenly begun to drink heavily and go AWOL? Maybe he has learned, through a friend, that the young bride he left behind is running around with other men. Or perhaps it's mother-in-law trouble; the young wife is still living with her parents, who opposed the hasty wartime wedding. John senses that they are gradually weaning her away from him. The brief furloughs, which he has to spend at their house, are not the happy home-comings they should be. He sees his marriage headed for the rocks.

The marriage rate is soaring: Will these wartime matches last when soldiers come home to wives they scarcely know? In many cases it's up to the bride! Here is what she can do to prevent a break-up...

Cases like this illustrate the importance of the war marriage to Army morale. As one young soldier expressed it, "A good wife is as important to a soldier as a good gun; he depends on her just as much."

In her position as Chairman of the Civilian Activities Division of the Army Emergency Relief, Mrs. Preston Davie has become acquainted with the intimate problems of thousands of young service wives. "In wartime," she says, "the task of holding a marriage together falls principally on the wife. She has to bear most of the social, spiritual and frequently the financial responsibility of a home. If there is a child, she often has to bring it into the world and care for it alone. She has to be husband and wife, housekeeper, breadwinner and handyman - and pretend that it's easy. Considering how many brides are barely out of rompers, this is a big order. For brides of today are embarking on an adventure far more difficult than a peacetime marriage, and one for which they will have to make their own charts as they go along."

Aid and Advice Available

Many agencies — the government, the Red Cross, Army and Navy Relief and a host of others — are helping today's war brides to solve their economic problems and the frequent question of what to do when a baby arrives; but when it comes to the more intimate psychological and social problems, the war bride is pretty much on her own.

One of the first things to be remembered by the girl who has simply been dazzled by a uniform, is that marriage to a serviceman is the easiest kind to get into, and the hardest to get out of. This is no reflection on our fighters; it is an outgrowth of the well-meaning efforts of lawmakers to smooth the paths of the boys to whom we owe so much. For them, many state legislatures have abolished temporarily the waiting period usually required between license and ceremony.

And while the entrance to marriage has thus been thrown wide open, the exit has been locked even more tightly. Federal law makes it impossible for a serviceman's wife to get a divorce, no matter what her provocation, unless her husband co-operates. This is a fact which should be given sober thought (but probably won't be) by some girls in the vicinity of Army camps who are rushing into marriage with men whose last names they don't know until they see them on the licenses!

As rector of New York's famed "Little Church Around the Corner," the Reverend J. H. Randolph Ray has tied the knot, since Pearl Harbor, for more than 2,000 war marriages. His first rules for success begin before the marriage has taken place — a list of look-before-you-leap signs:

1. Do you really know each other? The qualities which make for popularity at a USO dance may be the very ones which will break a marriage.

2. Have you similar backgrounds or interests? This may not seem important now, but it will be important when the man returns to civilian life.

3. Are you both really in love? Is it just sexual attraction, perhaps, on the man's part? He may be just as easily attracted by another girl, in fact more easily, when he is 3,000 miles away, and has that "tomorrow-we-die, today-we-live" feeling so natural to soldiers. Is the girl really in love, or is it just sympathy for a gallant boy who may never come back?

4. Does the girl realize that when her husband returns, he may be a stranger to her? Almost no one can go through the experience of war without being profoundly changed in habits and points of view. Can she meet these changes with love, and adaptability, and understanding?

But though Dr. Ray emphasizes these warnings to prospective brides and grooms — where he feels they are needed — he agrees that the warnings usually fall on deaf, though polite, ears. Admitting, then, that most of these young people are going to marry anyway, we asked a number of young war brides this question: "What special things are you doing to make your marriage a success?" Here are some of the replies, which may serve as guideposts to others:

Set up a separate home of your own, even if it's only a one-room apartment. Don't stay in your parents' home or go to live with the boy's parents if you can avoid it. "My husband," said the wife of a flyer, "writes me in almost ever letter, 'Darling, you don't know what it means to me to know that we have a little place all our own that I can come back to. It makes me feel that we are really married.' I think," she added sagely, "that having a home, even if he isn't its main support right now, helps give a man a sense of responsibility. Joe and I had only three days together before he went away. I was afraid that if I went on living with my parents, Joe would gradually come to feel that our marriage was just a pleasant little episode."

Young Brides Need a Home

It should be noted that this particular war bride is a business girl in her middle twenties. When the bride is very young, or not able to support a little home, or is expecting a baby, the husband may be happier knowing that she has the security of her parents' home, or of his.

Though our trains are full of war brides who feel, with a good deal on their side, that no trip is too long or too difficult if it will insure one more day with their husbands, other girls advise: Don't follow your husband from camp to camp. "I know of several marriages that have fallen apart because the wives did that," says one little bride whose man is now in New Guinea. "Living around the camps is a harum-scarum business. The wives have nothing to do but more: and when their husbands aren't on furlough, some run around with other soldiers who are free. And even if the girls want to play straight, there isn't much incentive to stay at home when home may be only a rented room in a crowded lodging house."

"Keep in touch with your husband's family," advises a girl whose man, at the time she spoke, was fighting in Tunisia. "I try to call Tom's folks, or go to see them, every day. I share with them every letter I get from him, and I write him homey little details about them. I know there's nothing I could do which would be a bigger help to his morale."

"Remember that your husband is no longer the master of his own time, and is living under a strict military regime," warns another war bride. "This means that Bill's furloughs with me must end on the dot, regardless of my plans. As the wife of a soldier, I have to be adaptable — very."

"I think in the beginning," says the wife of a sailor, "things were harder on me than on Frank. He was having lots of excitement, while I was sitting at home between short leaves, watching the unmarried girls having a good time and being sorry for myself. I got a cat — every service wife who doesn't have a baby should have a pet — and went in for rolling bandages, spotting planes and so on. But it wasn't enough. I took a munitions job, and now I'm too tired to mind staying home in the evenings. The knowledge that I'm doing my part gives me an extra link with my husband."

These are all wise words, and raise the hope that today's generation of war brides may, on the whole, be making a more thoughtful approach to the problems of a war marriage than did their parents 25 years ago.

If they do not, their marriages will follow the pattern set by World War I, after which there was a marked rise in our divorce rate.

Some of these divorces resulted from the tragic fact that lighthearted boys sometimes returned as bitter and disillusioned men, or restless men unable to adapt themselves to domesticity. But it remains true that making a war marriage succeed is chiefly the wife's job. This poses a great — an important — challenge for the girls of this generation.

The End

BEFORE YOU WED Face the facts, you soldiers and brides-to-be! Ask yourselves these four questions, which the Rev. Dr. Randolph Ray asks couples about to be married at New York's "Little Church Around the Corner":

- 1. Do you really know each other?
- 2. Have you similar backgrounds or interests?
- Are you both really in love?
 Does the girl realise that, when her husband does return, he may be a stranger to her?

If you can answer "yes" to all four, you stand a good chance of making your marriage last. But there are many pitfalls. This article may help you to understand and face some of them in advance.

N JERSEY CITY you'd never look twice at Joe Blake. He had sandy hair and blue eyes and was on the biggish side. Gaudy, but not neat. He used to drive a truck for some guy who had a wholesale business on Communipaw Avenue, and he was driving a truck, now, only it was for the Army in North Africa.

I was walking along the main drag of Algiers late in the afternoon when I saw him sitting at a sidewalk cafe, his fingers wrapped around some sort of pale, pink concoction. I sat down and said, "Hello Joe." He said, "Well, whaddaya know! Eddie Morgan."

I wanted to know how come he wasn't with his outfit, and he said he was also on furlough. "How come you're all prettied up, Joe?"

He handed it to me with a dead pan: "I got a date with a spy." "A beautiful female spy," I said, going along with the gag. "The kind G-2 warns you to look out for, only you never really get a

"That's her, Eddie. Only more so." He takes on a rapturous look. "Raven hair. Eyes black as coal with glints of fire in 'em. A shape - " With his right hand he makes a break like meeting one."

"Has she got a friend?"

"No. Only me. So you'd better scram."

"No kidding - do you really know a dame in this town?"

"Not just a dame. She's a seductive and voluptuous spy."

"All right," I said. "Keep on making with the jokes. You've met a girl and she's gone to your head. So you give with this spy stuff. Trouble with you, Joe - you never should of read a book."

"MAYBE." He looks kind of dreamy. "Only - this femme has got to be a spy."

"What gives you that idea?"

"Look me over, Eddie. I'm a buck private. I'll never be anything but a buck private. So why would a gorgeous female waste time on me unless she was collecting info about the armed forces?"

That seemed logical. Of course I'm not a woman, and never could figure what makes dames tumble for guys; but with a whole army to choose from, it must be more than coincidence she should pick a slap-happy mug like Joe Blake. "What's her name?" I ask.

"Yvonne." "That's her all right. All French spies are named Yvonne. Where'd you bump into her?"

"A jernt called La Nuit Rouge. She sings."

"Are you needling me?"

"Nope."

"Then I got something to say. You know what we been warned about. Loose talk does something. If this Yvonne is pumping you -"

"So what? What do I know? If I told her everything, what would I spill? I know my name is Joe Blake, from Jersey City. I came a long way on a boat. What I'm doing here, I haven't the faintest idea. About what I'll be doing next week, I got even less knowledge. So where can I do any damage?"

It's against regulations. If you think she ain't right, you oughta turn her over to the M.P.'s.'

"Them lugs. Let 'em get their own dames." Joe reasons it out okay. After all, there ain't anybody knows less about what's going on than a soldier that's in it. I said, "I wanna meet her."

"Stick around, Eddie. But if you try muscling in, I'll pin your ears back."

We talk about this and that for a few minutes, and then Joe's face lights up. He rises, gives a sort of a semi-salute and says, "Bon jour, Mademoiselle. Common tally voo?"

I turn to where he's looking. I think, "Spy or no spy - she's worth being shot for."

We sit down and start talking. Right away she wants to know all about me: my name, where I'm from, where my outfit is. Her English is bad but cute.

Some of the boys walk past. They got gleams in their eyes. Two of them stop and shake hands with Joe and ask him haven't they met him somewhere. Joe says they have not, and he hopes they enjoy the walk they are about to continue to take.

I ask her ain't she got a friend or a sister, but she says, "No, I am all alone in Algiers. All alone except for Joe and you. You will come to hear me sing. No?"

I look at Joe and he shrugs, meaning okay. So when the sun goes down, we go with her to a little restaurant where we don't care how much they charge us for steaks, which is plenty. After that we walk to where Yvonne Industry, like individuals, has a Mission to America . . . an obligation to maintain American precepts and to contribute to a better way of life! The Stroock Mills today are more earnest than ever in carrying out their mission; to make quality fabrics whose standard never varies . . . to give to the men and women of America the beauty, value and dependability to which they are entitled. From one generation to the next, Stroock has created distinguished woolens—has made the Stroock label the insignia of superiority, the symbol of supreme quality, the name of fabric leadership in the fashion world.

As long as there is a Stroock label to buy by—you can be sure that good old American quality is still on hand. Look for this label on fine clothing for men and women—available at good stores everywhere.

which is narrow, and another one, which is even narrower. This is the Rue Babel Oued. You could stretch your two arms out and start a traffic jam. The houses rise straight up and so do the smells. We get to a church which Yvonne tells us is named the Eglise Notre Dame des Victoires, and then we're in the Rue de la Kasba. A few doors away is a sign which says LA NUIT ROUGE. We walk down some stairs.

Joe says, "If we went up instead of down, it still wouldn't be no Rainbow Room."

I got to admit Joe has something. Nobody but a Jersey City truck driver could have found the place. It's got a low ceiling, a sort of bar, a couple dozen tables, and a few bedraggled girls sittin' 'em out with soldiers and sailors. In the corner is a three-piece band: piano, sax and drums, and what they do with honest jive is poison. Yvonne excuses herself, says she'll be right back. I give Joe a look.

"So what?" he says. "Suppose she does work here. It's a living, ain't it?"

"Okay. So she ain't no tramp. But it still doesn't add up right."

"Times is tough, Eddie. She refugeed out of France. It was either sing here or meet a fate worse than death."

"I'd like to try that - just once."

"Anyway, that's her story. I'm not sucker enough to fall for it. I notice a lot of the lads drift in here, so maybe there is plenty to be found out and maybe there ain't."

"It's a matter for Military Intelligence."
"Is that my headache? M.P.'s are here all the time. It's their job to tell G-2, not mine. All I want is a little harmless fun."

He's got me again. Only one thing's got me worried and I mention it. "Being away from Jersey City as long as you have, Joe — don't let this dame get under your skin."

"Why not? If she ain't a

"But you said she was."

"I can be wrong. If I am — gosh! Can you imagine her on Bramhall Avenue?"

She came back then. She's got on a red evening gown — what you can see of it, which ain't much. She sits between

"I been wondering," I said to her, "what you see in a screwball like Joe."

She pats his hand. "He's a chivalrous gentleman, Monsieur Eddie. And maybe — who knows — I need a friend."

We order a bottle of wine. Before it's served, somebody joins us — a slick little guy about forty years old. He has beady eyes, a thin black mustache, and weighs maybe 125. Joe and I look at him and then at each other. Joe closes his fist and points the thumb down. I nod. From the beginning, we both got a profound distaste for this lad, even after Yvonne tells us that he is M. Marcel Vernet, proprietor of La Nuit Rouge.

This guy Vernet speaks nice English in an unpleasant way. He keeps pawing Yvonne, which doesn't make him popular with Joe. He starts right away asking us military secrets, which we don't know the answer to. Evidently he's got the idea all American soldiers are dumb, or else that they will shoot their mouths off quick. He talks to us all the time Yvonne is giving out with some chansons. Then she disappears to some place in the back and Vernet trails her.

"Mysterious," I tell Joe. "What you think?"

"Him? He's a wrong gee."

"Him and her is very friendly."

"Are you insinuating something?"

"No-o." I'm picking my words carefully.

"That's the funny part of it. She could be anything, but I get a hunch she ain't. Did you get that crack about maybe she needs help?"

"Yeh. I got it." Joe looks at me through the bottom of his glass. "We're taking this too serious, Eddie. Let's have fun."

So we had fun, if you could call it that.

Two more nights we visit La Nuit Rouge. When we're in the place, we can't get Vernet out of our hair, and the closer he sticks the less we like him. There's something about the guy that ain't right in a large way.

Joe asks Yvonne a straight question, and she tries to give him a straight answer. She says there is something funny about Vernet, explaining that while they were good friends, their friendship never got quite as tropic as M. Vernet would have liked.

"Is mysterious," explained Yvonne, "what goes on. Many times I did use to go to his home for dinner. Before you Americans came, there was not much food in Algiers. M. Vernet had always plenty. I went with him because, my friends, I did not enjoy to starve. But now — " she shrugs — "he asks me no more. Not for more than ten days has he invited me. It is as though he was no longer interested in me, but that I know is not the case. Is something different."

"Maybe," I said, "he got sore because he found out he couldn't make the grade."

She blinks at that one, and asks an explanation. Joe gives it with a red face. Yvonne thinks it is funny. "Is not that," she insists. "M. Vernet is always the optimist. He does not believe that any woman can forever resist him, especially if she is hungry."

Later that evening Joe and I agree that what Vernet needs is a swift kick in the right spot. When he joins us, we are very insulting, which he don't seem to mind.

DURING the night Joe and I consume a lot of ordinary wine. It makes Joe ugly. He decides life ain't worth living unless he tells M. Vernet where to get off.

I figure that I better get Joe out of the jernt quick before we get in bad with the M.P.'s, and so it is arranged we'll go with

The only trouble is — M. Vernet goes with us. That gets Joe hot under the collar. It's the wrong play at the right time. But Vernet goes anyway.

We start down the narrow street outside La Nuit Rouge. It is deserted and lonely, except for a few Arabs whose white robes really look white because it is nighttime. Vernet starts ahead with Yvonne, and for about three blocks Joe stands it. Then he boils over. Before I know what gives, he has parked himself in front of the little guy and started telling him off.

M. Vernet makes a gesture with his shoulders. "Somesing is wrong, Meester Joe?"

"Yeh, somesing is wrong. I don't like you, see? I don't like nothing about you. Don't want you around. Beat it."

M. Vernet is slow on the uptake. "But my verry dear frriend —"

"Don't gimme that stuff! Just clear out."

Vernet gets sore. "You uncouth Americans

Vernet gets sore. "You uncouth Americans

"he starts, but Joe snaps him off. "What's that crack?" he wants to know.

"You Americans are uncouth. You invade our peaceful country. You are barbarians."

THAT'S the straw that dumps the camel. Joe's fist comes up from nowhere and explodes against the little guy's jaw. Marcel Vernet goes out like a light in a blackout.

Yvonne shrieks. I start scraping M. Vernet up from the sidewalk. I look at my big friend reprovingly. "You shouldn't of done it, Joe. This feller ain't gonna wake up until the middle of next Monday."

"So what? He had it coming."

"Yeah — And what have we got coming? What can we do now?"

"Lay him back in the gutter. We're getting out of here."

Yvonne starts talking. She tells us that we are in a very dangerous quarter of the city, and that terrible things might happen to M. Vernet if we leave him lying there unconscious. Then she wants to know what would happen to Joe and me when the report was made to the gendarmes? Especially if somebody was so thoughtless as to stick a sharp instrument between M. Vernet's ribs.

Joe says, "So we take him back to La Nuit Rouge and dump him in the front door."

"Oh, yeah?" I say. "And run smack into the M.P.'s? Not me, Joe. Nor you, either."

Yvonne says, "We take him home. Is not very far from here. We pretend that he is drunk. We leave him weeth his servant. Maybe tomorrow morning he forgets what have happened. But even if he does not — it is still tomorrow morning."

Joe sees the common sense in that, so he picks the man up. Yvonne leads the way. Me, I'm now plenty worried. Every once in awhile I take a gander at Vernet. He's still got a pulse, but that's the most I can hand him.

"You gotta pick Algiers to prove you got a punch like Joe Louis," I tell my friend. "How do I know you ain't killed him?"

We walk up one street and down another. The houses in that part of Algiers are jammed right against each other, and all look just about the same. We stop in front of one and Yvonne tells us this is it.

I make to ring the bell but she stops me. She explains that if the servant comes to the door and sees Vernet, he might call the police right away. But if we're inside the house, we got a chance to argue with the guy. So we hunt through Vernet's pants and produce some keys. We find the one that opens the front door and we step inside.

We turn on a light and Joe drops Vernet on a chaste lounge. The little guy still don't know from nothing. Yvonne sings out in French. There is no answer. She calls again. I'm all for leaving Marcel lay, but Joe says no. He's the guy who slugged him and now he's scared. He ain't gonna go until Vernet recovers consciousness.

The room we're standing in has got a tiled floor. There is a flight of steps that look like marble. The stairs have a wroughtiron railing. Yvonne raises her voice higher and makes with the loudest call of all.

But instead of rousing a servant, she stirs up something else. Something that has me and Joe staring like a couple of dopes.

A man appears on the balcony. He's tall and slender, with bright yellow hair which you can see under a bandage. He stands there in the half light, looking down at us. What surprises us is the clothes he's wearing.

"British," says Joe. "He's a British major."
The officer is staring at us, but there is something very queer about the way he looks—like he was blind, only I got a hunch he ain't blind. I walk to the foot of the steps and say "Hello," and he says "Good evening." But he seems to be looking right through me. Gives me the creeps.

"You visiting M. Vernet?" I ask.

No answer. Just that blank look. I ask him more questions, but there's still no answer. He's wearing a set, polite little smile, but it doesn't take a smart guy to figure he ain't among those present. I hear Joe say, "Shell shock," and I nod. "Maybe," I agree, "and maybe just a head wound."

"Whatever it is, he doesn't know the score."

WE'RE trying to get the angle when two men appear. One of them is a huge lad, and the other is short and thick. They give a quick look downstairs and then start for this Britisher. The big guy grabs the officer by the arm and says, "Come along."

The Major doesn't move. The big man pulls him, and the officer says coldly, "Take your hands off me." But the other fellow keeps on pulling. I see the Major frown and shake his head. The big man says, "Come along —" and gives another pull. Meanwhile the thick-set guy is moving downstairs. Joe turns to Yvonne. "You know anything about this?"

"No." I can see she's handing it to us straight. "I'm frightened — This man. What is he doing here? Why should Marcel be keeping him? Maybe that is the reason why he has no longer been inviting me to his house for dinner — maybe he did not wish me to know."

Joe and me look at each other. Joe says, "Vernet is holding him prisoner."

Meanwhile the tough little guy is downstairs. He looks at Vernet and then at us. He and Yvonne start jabbering in French. I don't grab what it's all about, and neither does Joe, but we do understand when the other lad pulls out a nasty-looking automatic.

"He says he will kill us all if you do not get out of here. Queek," Yvonne says.

get out of here. Queek," Yvonne says.

Joe shakes his head. "What gives with the Major?"

The stocky man said something. "He says he is a friend of M. Vernet, who is taking care of him while he is ill," Yvonne tells us.

THAT OLD SAYING about the pen being mightier than the sword was never truer than it is today.

The swords of modern war are tanks and planes and ships and bombs. These things cost money . . . huge sums of money . . . and that makes money the first requirement in fighting a war.

Every time an American opens up a fountain pen and writes a check to pay taxes, or to buy a War Bond, or to sign a pledge to put at least 10% of his pay into War Bonds, that pen is helping to make possible the swords of modern warfare.

Your Government not only can't fight a war without money, but Victory will require all the money you can spare! And your Government needs that money right now!

Buy all the War Bonds you possibly can. Buy them regularly by making every pay day Bond day! No doubt you are now doing your bit . . . but the time has come for all of us to do our best. Buy an extra War Bond this month.

Through investment in Government Bonds, your life insurance companies are helping to finance the war effort. Metropolitan, for example, has invested substantial sums for the benefit of its policyholders. Metropolitan's Home Office and Field employees are also buying War Bonds by direct purchase as well as through the Payroll Savings Plan.

"BEAUTIFUL SPY" STUFF

Joe ain't having any. He says, "There's something here that smells bad." He takes a step forward. The man raises his gun. Yvonne gives a scream, I grab the hand that's got the gun, and the battle is on.

It's good. I've got myself a handful, and what I mean this feller knows all the tricks that ain't Marquis of Queensberry. Meanwhile the big guy comes downstairs on the fly, and he's got a gun, too. He fires twice. Then, I see Joe make a flying tackle, and him and the other guy are wrassling around.

Yvonne looks the situation over. She sees it ain't healthy. Joe has been hit and she doesn't know whether it's serious. All she sees is some blood. She gets out of that front door and starts down the street, and me and Joe are strictly on our own.

It ain't any picnic. The guy I'm tangling with is wearing me down. He kicks and butts, and hits with his elbows. I'm dishing it out, too, but the betting is even that I won't last more than ten minutes.

Two other things start happening which I just get in glimpses. One is that M. Vernet has come to, and ain't happy about the situation. He gets up and grabs himself a bronze vase from somewhere. And our British friend moves in.

He has come downstairs and stands watching the scrap. Me and Joe are in uniform—the kind of uniform he knows. There's something behind those British eyes which must be stronger than any head wound. Training, I guess: or instinct. Whatever it is, he takes a hand, and he does it neat. That lad musta been commando-trained.

He LAYS Vernet like a rug, and moves in where he's needed most, which is in Joe's sector. He hauls the big guy off Joe, and they go to it. Joe is weak, but can still help, and between them they flatten this lad. They do it quick — but not too quick, because my man plants a blow that hurts, and then jumps toward the others.

He slugs Joe, and that is curtains for Mr. Blake. Then he picks up the bronze vase off the floor and closes in on the Major.

The Major hangs a beauty on his jaw and staggers him. But the bronze vase catches the Britisher on the side of his head, and that leaves me against the tough, stocky guy. I'm too busy to be as scared as I should be. All I know is that I wish I was somewheres else.

And then ... zowie! It's Yvonne, and she's brought reinforcements. Two hours before you could tell me I'd be glad to see M.P.'s and I'd have called you a liar. But circumstances change. One M.P. advances on the bronze vase from the flank. The other one says, "What gives, buddy?"

I look at him kind of silly. I start reeling, and the M.P. that ain't busy catches me. He holds me tight, and the last thing I know is that I'm saying, "Oh, sweetheart — are you ever welcome!"

Next thing I know I'm waking up with a headache and various other contusions. I'm laid out on a cot, and across the room is Joe. We sit up, and Joe shows me where he was shot in the fleshy part of the arm.

"So what does that make us?"
"A coupla goons," he says.
"We get positive orders to treat the citizens good." I'm putting my thoughts into words. "So we slug a cabaret owner, bust into his house, battle with his servants, get picked up by the M.P.'s and — Joe, we're in one hell of a mess."

"Uh-huh." He shakes his head.
"But we ain't dead."

"Before we're through, we'll wish

A little while later three guys come in. One is the provost marshal. One is a G-2 captain and the other a first lieutenant. "Everything," I explain to Joe, "except the firing squad."

MILITARY Intelligence starts asking us a lot of embarrassing questions. I look at Joe and he shrugs, which means we're in for it, and better play it straight across the board. After a lot of questions the captain gives with, "When did you first suspect that M. Vernet was in the employ of the Gestapo?"

Joe says, "I didn't like the way he was acting. And then the girl —"

"Yeah. She didn't like it either, I hope. So we decided to find out." "What did you find out?"

"Captain," Joe says, "begging your pardon, sir, I'm damned if I know."

The captain grins. "Well, I know," he tells us, "and if you've got any personal reasons for keeping some of it to yourself, that's okay with me. What has happened is that you've furnished us with evidence which will justify us in turning over this Vernet to the French authorities for the sort of action they take against traitors. Yvonne is waiting outside. She has been of great help to us, and she seems most interested in your condition."

"That British major?" Joe asks.
"You'll be hearing from him, Blake. It seems he was wounded in the action around the Mareth line — Head wound. A friend of Vernet's found him wandering around the countryside. Vernet was holding him prisoner, the idea probably being that the man might give him some valuable military information without realizing what he was doing."

"Gee," I said, "the poor guy. Captain, you ought to see how he pitched in when things started getting real unhealthy."

"And very fortunate for him, too." This was the provost marshal speaking. "He got slugged in the head, and that cleared away whatever it was that had him foggy. He's right as rain now. Of course he doesn't remember what happened, but we've told him, and he's waiting to thank you."

Joe and I look at each other, and he nods for me to ask the question that's worrying both of us. "Captain," I say, "I gotta find out. Do we spend the rest of our furloughs in the guardhouse?"

The three officers start laughing.
"You'll have reports to make out, and you'll both be commended—but aside from that, you can do what you want."

Joe grins: "If Yvonne is willing, I know what I want to do. How about you, Eddie?"

I touch two or three of the tender spots on my anatomy. "Me — I'm rejoining my outfit. I want to get back to the front where at least I understand what's happening."

ARCHIE GOES HIGHBROW

AST week I told you about Archibald, the Gentleman of the Road, who rewarded this soup sanctuary with his uninvited presence.

The trouble is, Archie, the bum, stayed on. The morning after I made him peel a few spuds for his supper, he showed up again.

"Mr. Proprietor," said Archie, "during my nocturnal meditations it came upon me that I was in your debt - an obligation I wish to repay, with interest."

"Go 'way," I said to Archie, "I ain't interested."

"Ha!" Archie takes me up. "A pun to cover your embarrassment over a public tribute, sir, to your generous heart!"

Well, I know when I'm talked out of a breakfast. So I give up quicker than an Italian in Sicily.

After eight of my hot cakes an' 40 cents worth of trimmin's, Archie comes up for air.

"My BENEFACTOR," he says, as sweet as th' maple syrup he has just wiped on his sleeve, "somehow the chewing movement of one's lower jaw sets the mind into a tranquil train of thought. . . "

"Listen, Archie," I interrupts him, "that chewin' business o' yours reminds me of a taximeter. Now you get off that stool an' mop up this place before I bust your thinker-upper with a skillet!"

"Sir," he says, "I take what you say as kindly banter. I was about to tell you of an experience I once had among the natives of the Orange Free State. "I was there tradin' for ivory. Down a jungle path came 29 magnificent black men, each with an elephant tusk balanced perfectly and curving gracefully fore and aft across his shining head. "I admit I felt a surge of greed and avarice at that moment. I bargained - with beads, with trade goods, with knives.

"Not a taker. And suddenly there came to my mind the Grecian myth of Atalanta - how that fleet goddess was outrun by the youth who remembered to toss golden oranges in her path.

"I offered them an orange for each tusk. They accept-

"Archie," pipes up Bushy Barnes, who'd just stepped in, "in my book, it wasn't oranges that that Greek gal fell for, it was gold apples - set with jewels."

Then it dawns on me that I've been falling for Archie's line that he's been trying to trade me a myth for a mop handle.

"An' besides," I tell him, "this ain't gettin' the floor washed. Here — grab this swab!"

Archie took the mop an' started to swing it, but not hard enough to damage th' linoleum. An' he shook his head, sighed, an' sort of observed to himself, "A little knowledge is a dangerous thing ah, me!

Listen, Ralph! Lloyd would pay a price for the message - a great price. But if it got through, nothing else mattered by Walter Marquiss dashed up to the old castle, diagonally across the river. Three motorcars followed; strutting men in uniform alighted and hurried inside. Lieutenant Lloyd Carson had already noticed that this sort of thing happened every Friday, during the minutes when he was permitted to stretch his legs in the prison yard. Lloyd had been fascinated by the castle. Looking over at it, he could almost imagine he was back home in Pennsylvania, a boy again, playing with his brother Ralph, "Scratcher" Ellis, and "Butch" Cline - all the old gang. The long buildings of the military prison on this side might be the row of river-front houses where they'd lived. Several weeks before, Lloyd had flown over this place. He had spotted it on his map, in a wave of nostalgic excite-

And over here, the railroad curves ip over a mountain — believe it or not. t might be the Erie, out north of town! Right about here is an old castle. From the air you'd swear it was Dighton's farm - remember? - across from our THEY'D got excited talking about it, with the excitement of homesick boys over something familiar. Lloyd had said, "Gosh, Ralph, see if you can wangle permission to go out with me can see for yourself!"

But that was not to be. On a flight over Belgium a few days later Lloyd's the castle and thinking of home. He and Ralph wouldn't see each other gain until after the war - if ever.

They'd been close together - closer than most brothers! They'd gone into the Air Corps together, but been separated when Ralph shifted to Intelli-

A good man for it, too: Ralph had imagination, and hunches. Smart. Gosh, those notes they used to write to each other! The codes Ralph worked out had stumped him time and again; but he had never been able to make up one to stick Ralph.

Lloyd looked at the storm troopers over there; probably the bodyguard of some Nazi Mr. Big. A few feet off, two guards were watching too. Lloyd heard "Herr Doktor Hopf." That would be Emil Hopf. He was one of the most feared and hated of all the Nazis - the man personally responsible for countless hundreds of hostage murders! Long ago the English newspapers had bestowed a title upon him. A gleam fighted Hopf's eye as he read. Ah, this was better than he had hoped for. This heartbroken wail of a homesick boy - just the thing for the silly, sentimental Americans! Dummköpfe! . . .

Refore the microphone at Radio Ber lin, Lloyd held his papers with trembling hands. And as he read he prayed. Then he paused, and for one swift instant closed his eyes, silently thinking, "Listen, Ralph. For God's sake, Ralph, listen!"

twitched, for he had seen this man's printed picture more than once, with the caption, "The Butcher of Europe."

The Nazi appeared to be in an expansive mood. He radiated good will, but of a kind that leered with menace. He said in suave and excellent English: "Gentlemen, I have some good news for you. You are to have, henceforth, privileges which have been necessarily denied to you. These will include somewhat more palatable food, and certain reasonable liberties. All that is asked in return is that one of your number volunteer to broadcast a message to the United States'

Except for one stabbing look, Hopf ignored the remark.

"This volunteer will be a guest of the Reich for a visit to Berlin, and will broadcast, with a number of others. from there. The program will be well publicized in preliminary broadcasts, to insure an ample audience in America and Great Britain.'

Lloyd stiffened slightly, and his eyes imperceptibly narrowed when he heard that. It made him think of Ralph, of talking to Ralph. But he said nothing.

"What you will say will be left to you. It is hoped you will mention the - ah - considerate treatment you are receiving here, and -" The Butcher's tone seemed to click into a polished metallic shot -"and that you will speak of the idiocy of continuing a senseless war between two great peoples!"

The Americans merely looked at him. Hopf's voice rose a note: "If one of you does not volunteer, I need not speak of what can happen to all of you! I am at this place once a week and I shall make it my weekly business to remind you that we do not forget those who reject favors offered by the Reich!"

The men still looked in stony silence. All but one. Lloyd Carson burst out: "I can't stand it any longer! Maybe you fellows don't know what it is to be so homesick you want to die! We may be kept away for years - because of this war we never wanted to fight! Anything's better than that!" Lloyd's fellow prisoners all turned toward him, each looking as if he had suddenly found himself alone in the room with some slimy reptile. Then the others were led away.

Hopf pointed to a desk. Lloyd wrote when Lloyd finished, the officer snatched is not different—it's so like America in so many ways that it makes me fairly sick for home! In the quarters they've given us, sometimes I can't believe I'm not home! Only I know I'm not. It's on a river—of course I can't name it. But it's like our river, where I lived all my childhood. And across the river is a large house—it makes me think of the farm where Eddie Cline lived.

"Do you wonder I want this war to end, so I can go home? Eddie Cline was the leader of our crowd. We used to pretend — the way kids do — that Eddie Cline was heap big Indian chief and we were all his braves. We used to go over there every Friday afternoon and hold a big pow-wow!"...

Back in prison camp, the still tasteless fare proved what Hopf's promises were worth. There were no added privileges, not even a minute's extension of the precious time allowed for exercise. About him, smothering him, was the contempt of his fellow prisoners. They now called him Lord Haw Haw.

And for what? Lloyd did not dare to hope. He only dared to pray that Ralph had heard. But if he had heard, what then? Had it started Ralph's agile mind to puzzling over why his brother was saying Eddie Cline had lived in the home where only the Dightons had lived? Had Ralph wondered at that crazy stuff about Friday meetings in that farmhouse which they had never even entered?

A FRIDAY had passed, another almost gone. Lloyd sat alone. In the yard today he had watched Hopf's entourage roll up. Now the dusk of this Friday was gathering on the river. It was no use to hope any longer.

There was a sudden clatter of running feet on stone, distant yelling. From far off came a scream of sirens and the bark of ack-ack. The crash of block-buster bombs beat at the prison walls and shook the floor. Tense on his feet, Lloyd closed his eyes tight, while a tremendous throb rocked him.

Ralph had heard, and understood. Ralph had caught the tenuous link between "Butch" Cline and The Butcher of Europe!

The Guild is an official clearinghouse for Hollywood's younger set. They can furnish, on a second's notice, a kid of any age (from six months to 14 years), color, size, personality, appearance. Guild members work in movies, pose for magazine covers, model clothes, are veteran radio performers.

If a movie studio needs a whole crowd of kids, the Guild is called. It helps make up the gangs in kids' pictures, furnishes dancers for films like "Mr. Big." Sam Goldwyn needed "Russian-type" children for "North Star." He got 'em.

The Guild has an impressive list of graduates, among them Margaret O'Brien, the little girl who brightened up "Journey for Margaret," and Lon McCallister, the teenager whose shy-soldier performance in "Stage Door Canteen" is the stand-out of the film.

HE SPEAKS 30 TONGUES!

Meet Dr. Mario Pei: His knowledge helps us fight the war...

po sight in Oran: a Yank standing on the street try-ing to talk to a pretty French girl. He has a French-English dictionary in his hand, and he looks up each word before he says it. He doesn't get his date because he can't turn the pages fast enough.

That's what happens when Americans are language isolationists, says Dr. Mario Pei, who can get along in about 30 of the world's 2.796 languages. Dr. Pei, Columbia University professor, is one of the nation's top language experts. He says that in these days of global war, languages have become more important than they ever were. He has plenty of proof:

When German parachutists swooped down on Holland they came equipped with Dutch uniforms -and a perfect command of the Dutch language. German cyclists, in French uniforms, spread terror and panic through France in perfect French. An American corporal cleverly managed to capture 75 soldiers and their officer in Oran because he could speak Arabic. When we moved into Africa, Pei, himself, was asked to outline the geographical distribution of the African Negro languages.

Quick Learning

OTHER wartime activities which have a crying need for language knowledge: Army and Navy Intelligence, FBI, Censorship Bureau, OWI, Office of Strategic Services, Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs. So Dr. Pei has devoted all his time to figuring out a way to teach Americans languages in a hurry. Results of his work have already appeared in all the activities above.

Dr. Pei says if you know 11 key languages, plus English, you can get along anywhere in the world. The 11: German, French, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, Russian, Chiese, Japanese, Arabic, Malay, Dutch. According to him, that sounds much harder than it is. He says all you need is a simple knowledge plus about 1,200 basic words of a language. Dr. Pei says Chinese has one of the easiest grammars on record. Hardest language of all is Irish.

Handy Word

THE longest legitimate word he knows is an Italian one. It pops up in an old Italian saying:

Chi troppo sale cade di repente Precipitevolissimevolmente.

Dr. Pei remarks that whoever originated it must have had a hunch about Mussolini:

Those who rise too far often fall With the utmost haste.

The professor's pedagogic approach is simple: for quick teaching, he throws out all the exceptions. doesn't bother with a lot of things highschool teachers drill into their pupils. If you're a Commando raider, he says, you won't worry about using the subjunctive. You'll just want to know how to ask a quick question and understand the answer. He wants soldiers to be able to read signposts, get the food and help they need, make themselves understood.

Dr. Pei is also looking to the postwar world. He thinks that linguistics are vital to a lasting peace. His candidate for the international language is English. He says that you can get to 700 million people with it. Before it can be internationalized, though, its spelling must be simplified, modernized.

Dr. Pei is big, bald-headed and has a Santa Claus laugh. He left Italy when he was seven, began picking up languages when he was in high school. He is learning new languages all the time. But he has no trouble relaxing at home - his wife can speak only English.

1. BOMB SPEED . . . If a Flying Fortress dropped a bomb from 50,000 feet up, how long would it take the bomb to hit?

It would take 40 seconds, and its penetrating force would be almost as great as a shell from one of our battleships' big guns. — W. E. K., Phil Campbell, Ala.

2. TREES... Wood is an essential war product. It provides crates for supplies, housing, rayon, explosives, etc. How many trees does it take to equip each U.S. serviceman?

Five trees—one for crates, one for housing, and the other three for a thousand and one other products.

3. FASHION NOTE ... Why will uniforms be issued to women clerks who are to be sent overseas to help establish civil government in reconquered territory?

Uniforms will identify the wearer as an American, and she won't be required to obey foreign customs; they will cut down the amount of luggage as well as insure the wearer of priority in airplane travel.

4. PRESH AIR... When one of Uncle Sam's subs is submerged under fathoms of water, the air is clean and fresh for days at a time. How do they keep it that way?

Our subs are air-conditioned just like modern office buildings. Non-toxic, non-flammable and non-explosive refrigerants are used.

5. JAPS . . . What is the meaning of the words, Issei, Nisei and Kibei?

Issei ... Japanese born in the Orient who came to this country but were not permitted to become citizens; Nisei ... Japanese born and educated in this country; Kibei ... American-born Japanese (United States citizens) who were educated in the Orient. — Mrs. D. K., Milwaukee, Wis.

6. CODE . . . What is the meaning of the letter "R" in a soldier's serial number?

It indicates that he served during the First World War and has re-enlisted.

- M. C., Washington, D. C.

7. WAVES . . . What were the women of the United States Naval Reserve Force of World War I called, and how many were enrolled during 1917-1918?

They were called Yeomanettes. There were over 12,000 enrolled for four years or the duration. In this war the Navy wants 64,000 more Waves to make a total of 81,000.

- E. B. G., Tarentum, Penna.

8. SLANG . . . What designation is given the Army Officers who are assigned to duty in offices in Washington, D. C.?

They are called "Paragraph troops." — M. B., Washington, D. C.

Wisconsin's Dr. Karl Link and the mysterious "killer" hay

From clue to clue, chemists toiled for seven years. Then . . . triumph! They found dicoumarin, something new in medicine . . .

by J. D. Ratcliff

T ISN'T likely that you saw the little news stories that ran in farm papers several years ago. A strange bleeding ailment was killing off cattle in the prairie states.

This was very bad luck for the cattleman. And, indirectly, it was bad luck for the city man who liked beefsteak. But it would be of no very vital concern to the general public if it weren't for one reason. Study of the cow sickness led to a brilliant new drug which promises to save the lives of innumerable human beings. The drug eliminates one of the ancient bugaboos of surgery—as we shall see presently. But this is getting ahead of our story. Let's, for the moment, get back to the sick cows with the mysterious bleeding sickness.

What Killed the Cow?

RESEARCH men thought some bacteria might be responsible. They investigated and found nothing. Then they wondered if some degenerative disease of the liver might not be responsible. Another blank wall. They autopsied animals that had died of this thin blood sickness — died because their blood refused to clot.

They went over them organ by organ—and found nothing. Everything was in order, and everything perfectly healthy. The whole thing was more baffling than detective fiction. Then two veterinarians came up with a beautifully shrewd observation.

F. W. Schofield, working in Canada, and L. M. Roderick, working in North Dakota, saw light at the same time. This murderous cow disease occurred only in animals that were fed clover hay. And it occurred only when they had eaten certain kinds of clover hay — hay that had been improperly cured.

After this observation, research men knew where to attack. There was something, some chemical perhaps, in badly-cured clover hay which brought on hemorrhage. The search for this needle of death in the clover haystack was undertaken by one of the country's most brilliant chemists: Dr. Karl Paul Link of the University of Wisconsin's Agricultural Experiment Station.

to find the chemical - a white crystalline stuff called dicoumarin. They found the method by which it was manufactured in clover hay; and how hay should be handled to prevent its formation.

This solved the problem of death on the range. The story might have ended here - one of those compact pieces of research that stud the history of veterinary medicine. But it didn't. A group of research men interested in human medicine heard of Link's work. They wondered.

The formation of blood clots within the larger blood vessels is one of the serious hazards of surgery. When a blood vessel is injured, and particularly when there is also infection present, a clot is apt to form in it. This is called a thrombus. Thrombi that develop in the larger veins have a tendency to extend within the vessel, and finally attain such a size that parts break off and are swept away in the venous stream back to the heart. This accident is a hidden threat to life, for the broken-off particles of clot may be carried through the heart to distant parts of the body and lodge in and block vitally important arteries. This process is called embolism, and the escaped fragments of clot are called emboli, Emboli may lodge in the arteries to the brain and cause apoplexy. If they block one of the major blood vessels of the lungs, blood can no longer pick up the necessary oxygen supply. The physician may put his patient under an oxygen tent, but unless the clot breaks up, death follows in a few hours.

Drama in the Bloodstream

THESE are the dramatic manifestations of blood clots. The clots may lodge in less vital spots, as in the artery to a leg. If the blockage is complete enough the leg may have to be amputated, but the arterial supply is so generous on the periphery of the body that collateral circulation often provides sufficient nourishment to save the

In varying degrees of severity, this kind of thing happens to about five per cent of all middle-aged and old people who undergo surgery. The first glimmering of real hope came several years ago with the discovery of heparin, a material derived from animal livers, lungs and other tissues. Heparin slows the clotting time of blood and to a large extent eliminates the danger of thrombi forming after surgery. But it is exceedingly expensive and not easy to administer. Hence, it was no answer to the problem of em-

Now we switch back to the cows again. Immediately Link announced the finding of dicoumarin, the same idea struck a dozen research men. Here was a material so potent that it caused cows to bleed to death. Wasn't it possible that tiny doses of this killer drug might be the very material surgeons had prayed for? Wasn't it possible that it would thin the blood just enough to prevent clots?

His discovery may

This was nice theorizing — but theorizing doesn't save lives. Hard laboratory drudgery must always precede the life-saving that makes headlines. A group under Dr. Jesse L. Bollman undertook this at the Mayo Foundation, at Rochester, Minn. Their patients were dogs.

Could the drug be given by mouth? Did it have any toxic effects? What doses could be safely given? This was the type of question Dr. Bollman's group set out to answer.

Normally, a dog's blood coagulates in six to eight minutes. But a day or more after they had swallowed the dicoumarin their blood required double the normal amount of time to clot: This was hopeful, promising. The drug was doing what the research men had hoped it would do.

Dog after dog got the drug. Enough facts were assembled to clear the way for human trials. In the Mayo Clinic it was tried on 70 cases of pulmonary embolism. According to medical statistics at least a dozen deaths might have been expected in this group. Actually there were only two deaths: one from uremia, the other from a clot that had grown to massive proportions before the drug was administered.

Mayo clinicians used the drug on 368 patients. Clots occurred in only three after the drug had taken effect. Similar work was carried on in Buffalo, N. Y., with equally good results.

Speedy Recoveries

ONE of the most spectacular series of cases came from the Sahgrenska Hospital, Gothenburg, Sweden. The drug was used on 100 cases of thrombosis of the veins of the leg. Patients recovered in one to three weeks, instead of having to spend as much as two months in bed while the painful swelling subsided. In this same hospital the drug was used on 170 women who had undergone various abdominal operations. There was but one case of thrombosis, and one mild case of embolism - and no deaths.

The evidence seems to indicate that the drug has the power to prevent thrombosis and embolism. It apparently achieves this by reducing the amount of prothrombin . in the blood. This is one of the blood's clotting factors. There is some suggestive evidence that the drug has the power to dissolve clots that have already formed. But more work will be necessary before this is completely cleared up.

Another point naturally arises. Isn't the drug dangerous? Can't it cause the same type of hemorrhage in men that it causes in cattle? Yes, unless it is used by men who thoroughly understand the drug. Individual responses to dicoumarin vary. One person will react to a small dose, another to a large. Clotting time of blood must be watched carefully to avoid the danger of hemorrhage.

Actual hemorrhage does occur in a considerable proportion of the patients who are given dicoumarin. Small blood vessels in the skin ooze blood and bleeding of the gums is frequent. If the situation becomes serious, if widespread hemorrhage is threatened, the surgeon has a protective weapon. Immediate transfusions of fresh, whole blood will' stop the hemorrhagic process.

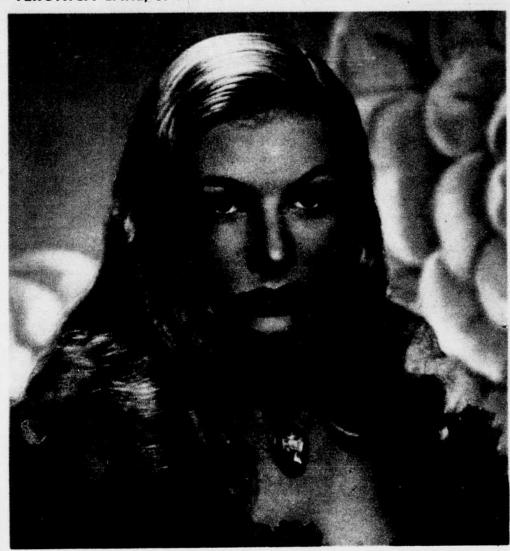

This work is so new that only a few hospitals are experimenting with the new drug. They are laying the groundwork for a much wider use. They are determining safe dosages, and quick methods of determining blood-coagulation time. When this has been completed surgeons everywhere may have a potent new weapon in their ceaseless war against death. Steadily, research and testing are going forward.

One surgeon sums up the work as it stands today. He calls dicoumarin "the most interesting and challenging development in the field of biologic sciences in recent years."

MAKE A LOAF OF SOYA BREAD!

Wheat and soya flours, rightly blended, yield a delicious product...

by Esther Foley

Bread is to be a large part of your food this year, and bread should meet as many of the requirements of good nutrition as possible. Enriched or whole wheat bread is a basic food. But for those mornings when eggs are not served, and for the sandwiches at noon which must be made with unrationed fillings, make bread with soya flour. Soya flour gives bread a richer share of protein, helps it replace more fully some of the meat, cheese and eggs which are scarce.

Soya flour is already available in stores in many towns and cities. If it is not yet in your store, it probably will be available before the end of next month.

Soya Broad

- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 3 teaspoons salt
- 2 tablespoons fat, melted 2 cups milk, scalded
- 1 cake compressed yeast
- 1/4 cup warm water
- 4 cups sifted flour
- 1 cup soya flour

Place sugar, salt and fat in mixing bowl. Add milk and stir until sugar has dissolved. Let cool to room temperature. Soften yeast cake in warm water, stir until dissolved and add to cooled milk. Add 2 cups of flour to milk mixture and beat hard one minute, then, immediately, add remaining flour mixed well with soya flour. (If the soya flour is packed or lumpy, it should be put through a wire sieve before measuring.) Mix quickly until a stiff dough forms.

Kneading - Turn the dough onto a lightly floured board. Knead with the palms of the hands until the dough is smooth and elastic. This will require 15 minutes steady slow work, and about 1/2 to 3/4 cup additional white flour. The dough will be slightly more sticky and slightly less springy than a white-flour dough. But it will be easy to knead if handled gently, not forced. Grease a mixing bowl, place the dough in it, and brush the top lightly with melted fat. Cover with a towel and let stand in a warm place until the dough rises to twice its volume, but not more.

Temperature - To be good in texture, bread dough should not rise too rapidly nor too slowly. From start to finish, making bread should take from 4 to 41/4 hours. This time limit can be met only if the dough is kept at a constant temperature of 80° F. A kitchen in use is about that temperature. The top of a stove heated by a pilot light is about that temperature. Otherwise the mixing bowl of dough should be kept in a pan of water that is slightly warm to the hand, and the water kept warm during the rising process.

Punching Down - When the dough has reached twice its bulk, it must be punched down in the bowl. This takes just a minute. Then grease the surface lightly again, cover the bowl with a towel, and let rise until dough has doubled its bulk once more.

Molding - Turn the twice-risen dough onto a lightly floured board. Knead down and divide into two equal parts. Knead into balls and let stand 10 minutes to soften slightly. Then, using the hands flatten each piece into a rectangle. Fold in half, seal edges by pres with the fingers, flatten again, and fold once more. Do this several times, each time folding the opposite way. The last time, fold both ends toward the center, seal the edges by pressing with the fingers and place the dough in greased pans, sealed edge down, for the last rising. Brush surface lightly with fat, cover pans with wax paper and keep in a warm place (80° F.) until the dough has doubled in volume.

The Dent Test — The pans should be about half filled with the dough. When well risen the dough will fill the pans and round over the top slightly. Press lightly with the forefinger. If the dent made goes out immediately, the dough is still elastic, and should be allowed to rise a while longer. If the dent stays in, the bread should be baked at once, Baking - Put the risen loaves into a hot oven (375 to 400° F.). This recipe yields two one-pound loaves. Loaves this size will bake in 45 to 50 minutes. When done, the crust will be well browned and crisp. The loaf will sound hollow when tapped with the finger nails, and the sides will have shrunk slightly from the pan. Turn the loaves out at once onto the cooling rack. Let stand, away from a draft, until perfectly cool. Then wrap in wax paper and store in the bread box.

Characteristics of Soya Bread -

Soya bread has a creamy color, a firm crumb, a very satisfactory flavor and texture. It slices well and keeps fresh for three days, and longer if kept in the refrigerator. If the soya flour used is high in fat, the fat may be omitted from the recipe. But even with the high-fat flour, a small amount of shortening gives a richer flavor and a more silky crumb. Soya flour appears to absorb salt. Bread made with it needs more salt than does plain wheat bread, if a distinctive flavor is desired. And salt in bread gives it a pleasant taste that permits you to use a less generous spreading of butter - a valuable feature in these days of rationing and wartime scarcities.

Try baking bread with some soya flour. Any type soya flour will give good results in this recipe. A loaf of bread with a high protein content will take the worry from meat-

The letters you get from servicemen have plenty of sentimental value - and the envelopes they come in are often worth real money!

ETTERS you receive from members of the armed forces may have so much sentimental value that you can't set a price on them, but do you realize that their envelopes are philatelic items whose worth can be reckoned in cash?

There are thousands of collectors who buy envelopes and card messages mailed from the war theaters. This type of collecting is as old as philately itself, for through the collection and study of the mysterious markings on such "covers" one is able to trace the history of any war within the last 100 years.

Philatelists are as anxious to obtain "franks" and military cancellations as the postage stamps and postmarks that they provisionally

Although millions of such letters reach this country every week, their recipients are so anxious to read them that the envelopes are forgotten and destroyed. This decreases the supply, so that the few that are saved, bring relatively high prices.

Front-Line Rarities

THE really rare ones are those mailed during a battle period on some distant shore. William Watson, a Weehawken, N. J., resident, received a strange-looking card from a friend stationed in the Solomons early this year. The printed inscription was in Japanese, but the familiar "free" was in the corner, and a short message was on the face.

The Marine who had written it later sent a letter, in which he explained that a small supply of these cards had been taken from a package found in a conquered Japanese camp. The Americans had only a limited supply of stationery, so they began to use them to send messages back home. A few had been dispatched before a colonel prohibited their use. The remaining ones were burned. Mr. Watson has since been offered over $25 for his copy by a number of "war-cover" collectors.

Censorship may be a nuisance to all concerned, but it has one good point: stamp collectors pay good money for envelopes which have censorship markings or labels. There are hundreds of different types; some are common, others scarce, but all of them have some value.

History on the March

Even President Roosevelt, whose philatelic hobby is well known, has turned from a collection of adhesive stamps to the accumulation of envelopes sent to him by members of the armed forces. Through them he can get a living history of the war as it progresses in its elimination of oppression through the world.

Prisoner-of-war cards and envelopes are particular favorites, and because they are comparatively scarce, prices range from 50 cents to $10 each.

Even V-mail forms are being sought after, and while few will want to sell such personal messages, they do have a monetary value.

The value of any of these items, however, depends entirely upon condition. A neat, clean cover of a common type often is worth more than a carelessly opened or soiled cover of a rarer type. - ERNEST A. KEHR

SERVICEMEN'S SHOPPER

They send the cash, and she buys what they need: Anything from pins to pianos

ROBABLY no one knows more about the way fighting men spend their spare dollars and cents than Mrs. J. Truman Bidwell, of the Navy League Center, in New York City. She runs a unique free shopping service for uniformed men of the United Nations.

Over a year ago she discovered that men in service often need items for themselves, or want to send gifts to their families which they can't get to stores to buy. So she came to their rescue by opening Servicemen's Service, Inc., which buys anything from pins to pianos for fighters.

On ships and far-away fronts men hear of the Service via OWI short-wave radio, posters and service newspapers. They tell Mrs. Bidwell what they want, send a money order, and her 50 volunteer bargain hunters speed out to find it in a N. Y. store, or write a shop out of town; then they ship the item, and return any change that's

A Son-Going Kreisler

No TASK is too small or too large. A corporal overseas asked for a string of sleigh bells, "because I've been picked to pass out gifts to my buddies at Christmas and need some atmosphere." The time a sailor on sub patrol asked for a good violin for $30 (his "war fiddle" he called it), a shopper searched secondhand stores two days to find it. And every day Mrs. Bidwell's staff buys slide rules, textbooks, boxes of candy, shirts, musical instruments and paper collars to be sent to remote fighting fronts. Those paper collars, which cost four cents, are beloved by Navy officers, far from laundries.

Mrs. Bidwell has found that Americans pamper their families with gayer gifts than do men of other nations. British, Canadian and Australian soldiers usually order bolts of dress material, food packets, thread and needles (unavailable in most countries) for their folks. A very American gift is a $7.98 black-lace nightgown which over a dozen U.S. husbands overseas have ordered for their wives. Soldiers are apt to spend more on fiancees than on wives; they like to send their mothers poems along with gifts.

Soothing Mama's Nerves

OFTEN a whole group of men on a transport sailing into a combat zone will order gifts to be delivered six months in advance. They soothe worried families with flowers, perfume, toys, furniture, clothes. One generous soldier calmed his mother with a $45 basket of orchids.

Of the thousands of orders Mrs. Bidwell has filled, none has given her more pleasure than buying a teddy bear for an Army captain's infant son — a son he'd never seen. The pleased papa wrote, "The teddy bear is my son's most cherished present ... only his tender age keeps him from writing you himself . . . Since I'm in a combat theater over 2,000 miles from him and can't do the little things I'd like to, you've filled a need I'll long remember."

WANNA BUY A BOMB?

Tanks, machine guns, shells: Get them for our men - with Bonds

You saw the PC-Boat and the depth bombs on our cover. You saw how one of those TNT loaded ashcans can blow an Axis sub to hell. It looks wonderful, makes you feel good all over that these are the weapons and the boys that have helped win the battle of shipping for us. But remember you're in there pitching, too. You can't buy a new car - but you can buy a depth bomb. And that's only one of the many Victory weapons you can buy with War Bonds.

The weapons that will win this war for us are expensive things. But every time you buy a War Bond or a War Stamp you're helping to pay for one of them. A depth bomb costs $100. So you plunk down that much and whenever you hear about another Axis sub on its way to the bottom, you can pat yourself on the back and say, "Maybe that's the ashcan with my name on it."

You Can Get This

WE FIGURE that you have a right to know what your War Bond dollars are buying. Here are the costs of your best-buy purchases:

Flying Fortress - four engines, excellent for trips over the Ruhr Valley: $300,000.

PC-Boot - fast, quick-turning, guaranteed to keep Axis sub-sailors awake at night: $1,360,000.

Machine-gun - water-cooled, 90 pounds, fires 500 rounds a minute; good buy at $600.

Bomb - 2,000-pound block-buster, a weight on Nazi minds. $600.

Tank - medium, streamlined, all-cast body. This is what made Rommel run: $75,000.

Rifle - Garand, carried by every GI, splendid for daily use: $80.

Antiaircraft gun — 37-mm, fast manual operation: $12,325. Shells to fit: $3.25, each.

The need for those dollars never stops. For example: once a minute a battleship can fire its nine 16-inch guns. Cost of each volley: $13,500. That's why every dime you can spare should be shoved across the counter of a War Savings window. Even if it's only a dime, it's important. One 10-cent War Stamp will buy a message capsule for a carrier pigeon. Three of them will feed a pigeon for a month - and one pigeon can save, and has saved, dozens of lives. Remember this:

You can buy two things when you buy War Bonds - Victory and a cash investment for your own future.
