Army Show Visitors Pause to Pray in Chaplains' Tent

Few exhibitions at the Army Show on the Monument grounds attract more visitors than the Chaplain Corps tent located between the Air Corps and the Quartermaster Corps sections.

Many remain through the services and organ recitals. Chaplain Leighton E. Harrell, adjutant for the exhibition, said, "Others enter between times, walk slowly around the exhibition, and then sit down. Individuals, particularly the older people, often stop to pray."

The officials are proud of the white country church facade which provides the entrance to the tent. There is a loud speaker in the green steeple through which the organ recitals and church music played from records in the nearby chaplain's headquarters are broadcast.

Many Take Off Hats. The effect of the facade upon visitors is noticeable, Chaplain Harrell said. Men take off their hats as they approach and seem to speak in a lower tone before mounting the steps to the entrance.

The setting within the tent is similar to that of a church, except for the panels on each side and the two displays in the rear. The panel slides show the transition of a clergyman to an Army chaplain. It tells in pictures the story of his enlistment, physical examination, class work, life during his training period at Harvard, and activities with the soldiers.

The rear entrance display is called the Hall of Heroes. It has pictures of many of the 76 chaplains who have died, are missing or have been wounded in action.

"Beyond Call of Duty." The rate of casualties among the chaplains has been very high. The cause the men have gone into the field," Chaplain Harrell said. "Many have been decorated," he added, pointing to the 33 names on a panel near the pictures, "for heroism beyond the call of duty."

A center of attraction is the altar at the front and the chaplain's field equipment ranged on both sides near it. The altar is a duplicate of the cantonment type used at camp and in the field.

Visitors like to examine the field equipment, officials said. The portable desk, altar, organ, hymn book, container draw frequent comments. The table opposite has a display of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish items used by each chaplain in his particular services.

Nine Chaplains Assigned. There are nine chaplains, exclusive of the Executive Chaplain Joseph O. Ensrud and Chaplain Harrell, assigned to the exhibition. These men are divided into two teams, each having a Protestant, Catholic, Jewish and colored representative. They work at 1:30 p.m. and the Jewish worship at 6:30 p.m.

As the visitor leaves the tent, he approaches an alcove on which a large oil painting is hung. Above it is the inscription, "Greater love hath no man."

Painted by Eyewitness. The picture, painted by a sailor eyewitness, shows the bow of a torpedero ship right out in the water. On its deck stand four small figures, praying. The center of the ship is red with flames, and the rear is under water. In the foreground a lifeboat with survivors is being lowered into the sea.

The story is told on a placard beneath the painting. It says that when the ship was being abandoned, Chaplains George Fox and Clark Poling, Protestants; John Washington, Catholic; and Alexander Goode, Jewish, saw four sailors who had lost their lives. Unhesitatingly, the four chaplains took off their lifebelts and gave them to the sailors, who leaped into the sea and were eventually saved. The four chaplains stood side by side near the ship's rail, holding hands as the boat went under the water.

Chaplain Goode, who lived at 5131 Second street N.W., was awarded the Purple Heart by the War Department. His widow, Mrs. Theresa Goode, received it last week. The scene made such an impression upon Ben Lewis, one of the sailors who saw it, that he put it into an oil painting and gave it to the Chaplain Corps.

Army Show Facts Admission Is Free; Cameras Allowed. Admission to the Army show on the Washington Monument Grounds is free.

The Army calls it the largest collection of war material ever assembled in America.

It opens at noon each day, including Sunday, and spectators are welcome at any time until 10 p.m.

Arena performances are at 2:30 and 8:45 p.m. each day, with a White House guard mount daily at 4:45 p.m.

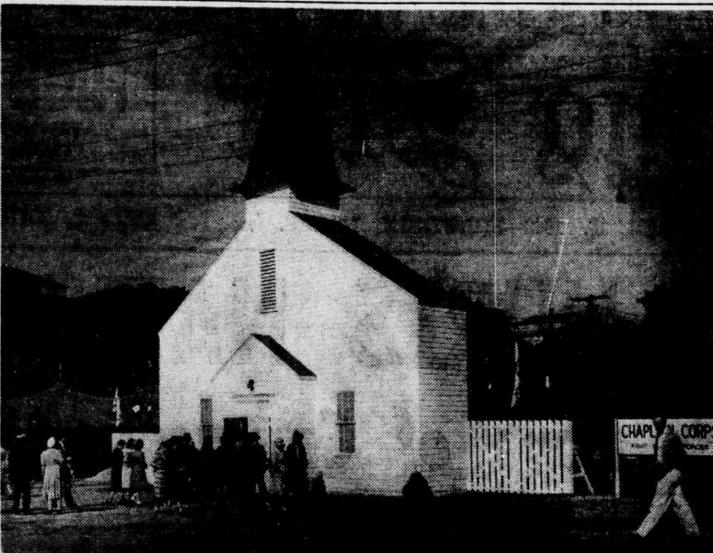

At the 2:30 p.m. show 1,000 of the 6,000 seats will be reserved for school children, the remainder being open to the public on a first-come, first-served basis.

At the 8:45 p.m. show 3,000 seats are reserved for holders of tickets distributed through Federal agencies by Treasury minute men; 2,500 seats are reserved for holders of tickets distributed through banks, department stores and other bond issuing agencies; and 500 seats are reserved for organization and bond salesmen who have completed their bond quotas. In all cases, whether purchase of a bond is necessary to get a ticket is left to the individual or agency to whom the tickets are given. If ticket holders are not in their seats by 8:45 p.m. the general public is admitted on a first-come, first-served basis.

Photographs may be taken anywhere. Spectators may manipulate the guns, expose themselves to tear gas in a specially constructed chamber and look through a direction finder which clearly will show the wrist watch on the arm of a person at the top of the Monument.

Military personnel is on duty to explain the purpose of all equipment and its operation.

Every branch of the Army is represented except the paratroopers. The Army will not sell war equipment on display is worth, but many millions of war bonds will have to be bought to pay for it.

Two House Members Demand Review of Col. Colman's Trial

Representative O'Toole, Democrat, of New York has demanded of Secretary of War Stimson an investigation of the court-martial of Col. William T. Colman, saying, "The morale of the Army and of the public will be shattered by the retention of such specimens within our armed forces."

The New Yorker also demanded yesterday that Col. Colman be suspended from all duties until the inquiry is completed. Earlier, Representative Shafer, Republican, of Michigan described the outcome of the court-martial as a travesty and said he would ask the House Military Affairs Committee to review the case.

Col. Colman, former commanding officer at Selridge Field, Mich., was convicted by a general court-martial of violating the articles of war and faces a demotion to the grade of captain, with no chance for promotion for three years. He was found guilty of careless use of firearms in the shooting and wounding of a colored private and on four charges of drunkenness on duty.

If press accounts are accurate "and this man is allowed to remain as an officer of the Army of the United States," Mr. O'Toole wrote Mr. Stimson, "I could not blame a civilian or member of the Army from falling to have respect for those who are known as 'officers and gentlemen' by act of Congress."

Mr. Shafer asserted "we cannot have confidence in our military if we are going to allow officers to be punished with nominal penalties for serious offenses."

The verdict against Col. Colman is subject to review by the War Department and the President and the sentence will not take effect until finally approved.

War Bonds (Continued From First Page.) Mr. Morgenthau said the Sicilian campaign cost the United States 13 million dollars.

Thirteen per cent of all 155-mm. howitzers landed in the month-long campaign, 46 per cent of all 57-mm. guns put into action, 13 per cent of all guns employed, 8 per cent of all medium tanks, 7 per cent of all light tanks, 54 per cent of the cartridges for 37-mm. guns, 36 per cent of the motor carriages for the 75-mm. gun, and 24 per cent of the cartridges for 105-mm. howitzers.

Terms Sicily an "Outpost." Termining Sicily "merely an outpost of the fortress of Europe," Mr. Morgenthau asserted the current war was not a mere tactical operation. Lashing at optimists, he added: "A week ago, Italy surrendered. We did the same thing all over again. The war was won. We could stop producing weapons. We could reduce taxes. In Sicily we met only the most obstinate opposition. We are getting from the Germans now in Italy. This is the beginning of the war, as far as the United States is concerned."

He pointed out that "when and if we conquer the whole of Italy, we will still have a long way to go."

Forecasts Heavy Casualties. "These next few weeks and months will bring losses of life and material that will shock and stagger us."

"Let management spend less time telling the public that the magnificent job it is doing—which everybody knows—and more time doing the job."

"Let labor think less about the fun it's going to have on Saturday night and think more about ways to increase production and buy more bonds."

"Our weapons are for the purpose of killing Germans and Japanese. We must kill them, or they will kill us. We are fighting for our lives."

$3,350,000 Purchase. The largest individual purchase of the District drive was made yesterday when Edward G. Baltz, secretary of Perpetual Building Association, 500 Eleventh street N.W., handed his company's check for $3,350,000 worth of securities to Lynn Allison, local radio and stage vocalist. He said the purchase was part of a national effort by building and loan associations to buy $1,000,000,000 of securities.

G. W. Butler, district manager for Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, announced his company will allocate $300,000 to the District's quota drive.

John A. Reilly, chairman of the District War Finance Committee, will make a bond appeal at 6:45 o'clock tonight over Radio Station WRC.

Bond rallies scheduled today include: 9 a.m., teachers and officials of the School Board at Dennison Vocational School, with Benjamin L. Tepper speaking; meeting of National Furniture Co. employees at noon, with Miss Madeleine Roussin as speaker; Junior Boaters' Conference at 12:30 p.m. at Annapolis

"Back Salerno Day." The Treasury, emphasizing that buying a bond now will save a soldier's life later on, has designated tomorrow as "Back Salerno Day" as a tribute to the thousands of American boys who are now facing the enemy in one of the bloodiest battles of the war.

Throughout the District the day will be a signal for the Capital's thousands of volunteer workers on the War bond front to make "Back Salerno—push back the Germans" their battle cry. It will afford all Washington an opportunity to buy extra bonds in support of our fighting forces.

The District Committee announced that Federal Reserve Bank figures on the campaign through September 13 showed sales to individuals in the Nation's Capital totaled 9 per cent of the local individual quota, equaling the record that has been established throughout the Nation. Bond sales to corporations here amounted to 25 per cent of the quota, as compared to a national figure in this category of 19 per cent.

Drive Picks Up Speed. There was mounting evidence of increased momentum in the drive to reach the District goal of $125,000,000 for inclusion in District totals.

Purchase of $250,000 worth of securities was announced by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission. Commissioner J. Donald Clagett said the purchase was approved by Prince Georges and Montgomery County commissioners.

Pending official reports next week, Richard P. Green, chairman of Montgomery County's $2,375,000 drive, said the campaign was off to a good start, with some organizations exceeding their original quotas. In the lower sections of the county, 2,000 air-raid wardens are making a house-to-house solicitation to raise $300,000. Pledges should be redeemed at issuing agencies as quickly as possible, officials said.

Jap Bombers Inflict Only Minor Damage In Solomons Raids

By the Associated Press. Japanese planes, in the first raid on American positions in the Solomons in two months, inflicted minor damage in two attacks, the Navy reported today.

Both raids were carried out during the night of September 13-14, Solomons time, when a group of enemy planes hit at Lunga Point Airfield on Guadalcanal, and a lone Japanese bomber attempted to attack the nearby Russell Islands.

Minor damage was caused by bombs dropped at Lunga Point, site of Henderson Airfield, while on Russell Island, 52 miles away, no damage resulted.

No Personnel Casualties. The Navy added that there were no personnel casualties in either raid.

The last reported enemy bombing in the Solomons was on the night of July 16-17 when enemy planes attacked American positions on Guadalcanal, causing some casualties and light damage.

The Navy also reported that American flyers shot down 358 Japanese planes in 37 days and "practically eliminated" enemy air opposition prior to the final capture of Munda airfield in the Solomons on August 7.

The Japanese losses included 269 fighter planes, 60 twin-engine bombers and 16 float planes. These, the Navy said, accounted for all except 20 or 30 of the enemy planes in the Solomons area.

125 Jap Planes Destroyed. The destruction was accomplished by Army, Navy and marine flyers and the Navy reported that Navy and Marine Corps planes made up about two-thirds of the American forces.

American losses were 71 fighters and 22 bombers. The heaviest blow was struck in the first two days of the action, when 125 Japanese planes were knocked out of the skies, compared with the loss of 25 American craft. "So crippling was this first blow to the Japanese forces," the Navy reported, "that they subsequently avoided large-scale attacks on American formations and attempted only harassing actions."

Justice Lühring Reported In Serious Condition. Associate Justice Oscar R. Lühring of District Court was reported seriously ill with a heart ailment at George Washington Hospital.

Stricken while on vacation at Rehoboth Beach, Del., Justice Lühring was brought back to Washington last Friday, it was reported today, and ordered to the hospital Monday. His personal physician said he was "a very sick man." He is 64 years old. Justice Lühring has been on the bench of the District Supreme Court 13 years.

Smoke Caused Crash Of Planes at Ploesti, Army Airman Says

But for the bombs that three other planes of an earlier raiding force had dropped on the Ploesti oil fields, the raid undertaken by about 200 planes of the 9th Air Force might have been even more successful, Capt. Royden L. Lebrecht of Denison, Tex., said last night at the Army's War bond show.

As it was, smoke and flames caused by those bombs obscured the target, hid chimneys and high-tension wires, and caused many of the pilots to hit chimneys and low-hanging wires, Capt. Lebrecht said.

The raid was carried out in daylight and the planes reached the target area in the afternoon. In addition to those planes lost through collision with wires and chimneys, others were downed by pursuit ships and anti-aircraft fire, Capt. Lebrecht said.

"Our losses," he added, "were pretty heavy."

"We got only high enough on the flight to clear the mountains in Greece after having taken off from a field in the Middle East. Once over the mountains, however, we let down to heights averaging only 50 feet above the ground, and that was the level at which we hit the target. It is not surprising that, with the target obscured by smoke from fires caused by a previous raid, many of the pilots were unable to see the obstructions that caused them to crash."

Balancing the personnel losses against the damage done, Capt. Lebrecht said:

"It was reckoned that the oil fields we attacked were the source of 42 per cent of the fuel for the Axis. These fields will never again deliver that amount of oil to the Axis."

"We were in the air for almost 15 hours, and during the actual engagement the air was filled with thousands of tracers. Flames shot up and entered the windows of some of the waist ports of the ships. It was actually a movie producer's dream."

"Much credit for the success of the mission must go to the Liberator bomber, the only plane which could have made a trip of that distance. As it happened, many of the ships came back to their fields with their motors shot out and with great holes in their fuselage," he said.

Twenty-seven of the flyers, who thus the raid appeared on the platform at last night's show. The flyers arrived here in three bombers after a lightning trip from Africa to Brazil and Florida. The 27 men present represented the crews of but three planes, each aircraft carrying a normal complement of nine.

Prizes, including 10 pounds of beefsteak for the best cornhusker, will be awarded Sunday at a feed-the-hungry husking bee to be held from 2 to 4 p.m. at Majestic Hills Farm, near Great Falls.

P. E. Rhinehart, owner of Majestic Hills Farm, said the contests are open to all. He said the incentives will be:

Ten pounds home-dressed beefsteak for the best husking man. Five pounds of rib roast for the best husking woman.

Five pounds of pork chops for the best husking boy. Five pounds of hamburger, ground while you wait, for the best husking girl.

"No bananas at all" for the most "stupid" cornhusker.

Boy, 9, Struck by Auto, In Coma After 7 Weeks

By the Associated Press. COLDWATER, Mich., Sept. 16.—Seven weeks in a coma, 9-year-old Richard Langdon is baffling physicians at the Branch County Community Health Center.

The boy, who was brought unconscious to the hospital after being struck from his bicycle by an automobile July 28, had suffered a brain concussion.

After three weeks Richard revived partially, attendants said, but has been unable to recognize any one. He has been fed intravenously. His mother, Mrs. Marianne Langdon, former dancing teacher who is now a war worker, spends part of each day at his bedside hoping for a sign of recognition from him.

Dr. James E. Bailey, attending physician, refused to express an opinion as to recovery. An Army doctor and a brain specialist have consulted with him.

Richard's is the second such incident in this community in recent months. Fifteen-year-old Donna Lee Simonds was unconscious 25 days after being struck by an automobile. She is now fully recovered.

Witnesses Oppose Any Tax Increase for 1945 District Budget

But Civic Leaders Tell Commissioners Greater Spending Is Required

By DON S. WARREN.

Wartime problems of the District government will require increased outlays for many municipal services, but the 1945 budget must be limited so as to avoid any tax rise or new levies, spokesmen for organized citizen and business groups advised the Commissioners today.

At the opening of public hearings on the $67,230,000 budget requested by departments and services, representatives of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, the Board of Trade and other groups, while urging expansion of funds for various operations, demanded that total expenditures be kept within expected revenues.

From Harry S. Wender, president of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, came a demand that the Commissioners continue to fight for a more equitable Federal payment toward expenses of the Capital. He said his group was convinced the present $6,000,000 annual payment was too small and was becoming increasingly so as District costs rose from year to year. He said efforts should be continued for adoption of an equitable "yardstick" for the payment, as against the present arbitrary flat sum.

Urges Tuition Charge

Mr. Wender also urged the Commissioners to demand that Congress permit the District to charge tuition for school children of parents not residing in the District. The present free tuition, he insisted, is unfair.

L. H. Parker, chairman of the Municipal Finance Committee of the Board of Trade, summed up the recommendations of the body's 4,200 members as follows:

"We recommend the 1945 budget be supported with funds to be received from present taxes at present rates; we heartily approve the principle of the postwar aspects of this budget; we believe capital expenditures should be kept to a minimum; where absolutely necessary, expenditures should be increased, but that all frills and unnecessary items be eliminated, and that a close regard be given to personnel requirements in view of the extended work week."

Mr. Parker said the trade body desired that District functions be maintained at the present "high level" and that services be constantly improved, but that this would present a serious problem.

Cites High Federal Taxes

"Recognition must be taken of the fact that Federal taxes are at their highest level. Also we must be aware of the fact there is a strong likelihood of a further increase in these taxes. Intense war production campaigns and increased living costs likewise must come in for consideration. These are known factors which must be dealt with as a necessary incident to the war," he added.

He termed "an admirable step" the proposal in many of the department requests for the war program—that is, proposals for purchasing sites and drawing actual plans now for capital improvements, which must be provided as soon as priorities permit. He said the Board of Trade has established a postwar planning committee with the premise that "planning is good, but plans are better."

Mr. Parks said there is no question but that the District, like all other communities, will be faced with a tremendous task of re-adjustment following the war. Requests by the welfare, school and library systems for purchase of sites and development of plans for post war use is regarded by the Trade Board as "forward looking," he said.

Mr. Parker recommended that funds be provided for the Motor Vehicle Parking Agency, so that it may complete studies now for parking facilities that will be necessary after the war.

Health Program Praised

Provision of funds for the Health Department for the proposed establishment of a cancer control program and mental hygiene services was called "highly desirable," and the Board of Trade also urged additional funds for food inspection work and for a rat control program.

It was suggested that in view of a lessening in school attendance a revision of the school budget might be possible, but the trade body said if this is done there should be no lowering of educational standards.

Recalling that the work week for municipal employees had been increased, the Board of Trade urged that each department make a close study to see if there could be any reduction in personnel.

Mr. Wender emphasized the desirability of buying needed sights now for school, library and recreational areas and stressed that considerable time would have to elapse after land is purchased before it could be taken over by the District and developed or used. He said the municipal government cannot "and should not" oust people from their premises "overnight" like the War Department.

Permanent Cleanup Urged

The Commissioners and the Health Department were commended by the Federation spokesmen for the recent campaign to clean up restaurants and other eating establishments. Mr. Wender said his group would not be satisfied with a mere temporary success, and that the cleanup must be made permanent.

He asked "very generous" treatment of all Health Department requests, arguing that our appropriations for health programs are "far below" the standard for a city of this size.

Dr. E. F. Harris, president of the Federation of Civic Associations, recommended that the old Western Market at Twenty-first and K streets N.W. be abandoned and that funds be provided for building a new Stearns Elementary School and a new No. 3 police station house.

Backs Refuse Requests

Speaking for the Outdoor Cleanliness Association, Jesse C. Suter, its president, urged the Commissioners to approve in all the requests of the city refuse division, calling them "most conservative" in view of the increase in population and the pres-

Ban on Whisky Making Stands As Industry Demands Alcohol

Synthetic rubber got the blame today for a War Production Board ruling against a brief resumption of whisky-making.

Distillers, along with many officials of the WPB itself, expressed surprise at yesterday's decision not to grant a two-week "vacation" from the uninterrupted production of industrial alcohol, in which all distillers have been engaged exclusively since last October.

Even so brief a vacation would have refurbished hard-liquor supplies considerably. The capacity of distilleries has been stepped up greatly to meet wartime demands, and distillers normally operate only a few months of the year.

Decision Was Surprise

Less than 24 hours before the official veto, a high WPB source had said the proposed "furlough" was getting favorable study, since it appeared that four-fifths to five-sixths of the beverage whisky industry's capacity would be sufficient to meet requirements for industrial alcohol.

Members of the Industrial Alcohol Industry Advisory Committee who met confidentially here yesterday were notified that a "substantial increase" in military requirements had to be met and that the stock piling of alcohol must continue. No release could be given this year, they were told, nor could any assurance be given of what 1944 might bring.

Subsequently a new factor came to light—a 20 per cent increase in the estimated requirements of industrial alcohol for synthetic rubber in 1944. The office of Rubber Director, Bradley Devitt, confirmed that an additional 40,000,000 gallons had been requested for next year and "several million" gallons more this year.

Fears "Bad Psychology"

WPB sources said also that the War Food Administration had passed the word along that the use of grain for whisky making at this time would be "bad psychology," in view of the drive for increased food production.

While WPB blamed increased requirements for synthetic rubber for the decision not to give distillers a "holiday," figures recently released by the agency do not substantiate that claim. In the release, WPB estimated industrial alcohol production and imports this year at 375,000,000 gallons and last consumption for synthetic rubber, Army, Navy and other uses at 272,100,000 gallons.

ent lack of sufficient personnel and equipment.

Mr. Suter also urged that funds be provided for a modern utility building to supplant the present open-air garbage transfer station in Southeast Washington, about which there long has been public complaint.

By the Associated Press.

SARNIA, Ontario, Sept. 16.—Miss Ethel Trott, 51, testifying in her $15,000 breach of promise action against Elmer Mott, 41, former Sunday school superintendent, said in Supreme Court yesterday: "Elmer never left me in 35 years but what he put his arm around my waist and gave me a good-night kiss."

The action was tried in February, 1942, and at that time was taken from the jury by the trial judge and dismissed. The hearing opened here yesterday before Justice Daniel Kelly.

Principals of the action lived in Oil City, a small Lambton County community. Miss Trott said Mr. Mott proposed marriage to her in 1908, but kept putting off the ceremony.

Roosevelt and Hull Felicitate Mexico on Independence Day

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt today sent the following message to President Manuel Avila Camacho of Mexico, on celebration of the anniversary of Mexican independence:

"It is with particular pleasure that I extend to your excellency and to the Mexican people my heartfelt congratulations on this anniversary of Mexican independence which finds Mexico and the United States firmly allied in a common and triumphant struggle to preserve the heritage of liberty and democracy left us by those whose deeds we celebrate on our national holidays."

"On this day you and your compatriots may contemplate with satisfaction the contributions you are making to the cause of the United Nations. Mexicans have laid down their lives for that cause. Mexicans are fighting and working for it. The products of Mexico in an ever increasing stream are swelling the arsenal in which the victory of that cause is being forged."

"I am happy to send to your excellency at this time, my most sincere good wishes for the continued welfare of the united Mexican states as well as my most cordial personal greetings. I cherish the recollection of our meeting last April and greatly value your friendship."

The following message was sent by Secretary of State Hull to Minister of Foreign Relations Ezequiel Padilla:

"We are glad to continue in harness under the War Production Board's decision. The distillery industry is behind the war effort 100 per cent."

E. F.'Brien, vice president of the Frankfort Distilleries, Inc., Louisville, said, "Since October 8, 1942, the alcohol beverage industry has been converted 100 per cent to the making of war alcohol. The entire liquor industry will continue that policy until the war is won."

J. B. Deacon, vice president of Schenley Distillers Corp., declared that "the War Production Board has decided against whisky production at this time. That is the body that should make decisions in such matters. This is no matter of private concern to promote its own interests. The primary aim is to prosecute the war to a successful conclusion."

"It would have been comfortable to have received a go-ahead signal, but what price comfort in times like these?"

Collection of Waste Still Behind Quota

By the Associated Press.

Restrictions on motor truck deliveries, in effect in the District and the 12 Northeastern States since last spring, will be extended to the entire Nation October 11.

Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, said the action "is the best means of safeguarding the public's interest."

The order, announced yesterday, bans retail deliveries of packages weighing less than 5 pounds or measuring 60 inches or less in length and girth combined; prohibits Sunday deliveries except for ice, milk or cream, and restricts to once a week retail delivery of alcoholic beverages, tobacco, confectioneries, soft drinks, ice cream, magazines and flowers. Bread and bakery products, meat, poultry, eggs, fruits, vegetables and fish, may be delivered only three times a week. Laundries, dry cleaners and tailors are held to two trips.

Hearings Postponed On 1944 Tax Measure By House Committee

By the Associated Press.

A big question mark hovered over the search for new billions of wartime revenue today as the House Ways and Means Committee postponed indefinitely the opening of hearings on the 1944 general tax measure.

However, Chairman Doughton said he still had hopes the measure, which no doubt would embrace new and higher levies, could be enacted by January 1.

The hearings had been set tentatively to begin next Monday, but it was understood neither the Treasury nor the congressional tax staff, recently at loggerheads and apparently unable to work together, was ready to present a program.

That situation brought a sharp statement from the Republican side of the Ways and Means Committee by Representative Reed of New York, who said "no concrete proposals have yet been made, due largely to the President's inability to reconcile conflicting viewpoints within his administration," though the President "as long ago as last January requested a $16,000,000,000 increase in revenues."

Reed Opposes Delay

Mr. Reed said he favored committee consideration of tax legislation without waiting for the administration's proposals. Mr. Roosevelt told a press conference Tuesday that it might be some time before the Treasury is ready to present its recommendations for new levies.

Mr. Doughton indicated the committee would not wait long, saying of course we want their views, but if the don't make tax decisions down town, that won't keep us from making decisions up here.

Consolidation Studied

Mr. Doughton and Chairman George of the Senate Finance Committee discussed the revenue situation with the President yesterday, and Senator George disclosed later that the joint Senate-House tax staff had been instructed to study the feasibility of consolidating the 5 per cent victory levy with the regular 8 per cent income tax, as a major step toward simplification of computing tax returns.

Senator George said that this might involve an increase in the normal rate to a wartime total of 10 per cent, with abundant decreases in present exemptions of $1,200 for married persons and $500 for single persons. The surtax levies, which range upward from 13 per cent in the lowest brackets, would remain unchanged.

At the same time Senator George said he had recommended that the so-called second windfall provision of the pay-as-you-go tax law now in effect be eliminated because it would work injustice to many taxpayers and would add little, if any, new revenue.

Under this provision, large taxpayers are required to compare the larger of their 1942 or 1943 tax liabilities with a basic year during 1936-40 and to pay an additional "windfall tax" on all of their earnings that exceed that year's by more than $20,000.

Marvin Jones to Put Milk Problem Before Senate Committee

By The Associated Press.

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones will lay before the Senate Banking Committee tomorrow a critical milk production problem which, if unsolved, might lead to consumer rationing of fluid milk this winter and to higher ration values on butter, cheese and canned milk.

The food chief will suggest, aides said, the possible use of Government subsidies during the winter season, when production costs generally advance.

Dairy experts of the War Food Administration estimated such subsidies might run between $140,000,000 and $180,000,000.

Meanwhile, both the White House and Congress took up the 1944 food output problem for minute examination to insure an adequate diet for the Nation besides meeting huge foreign commitments.

Will Outline Views.

Mr. Jones accepted an invitation to outline for the House Agriculture Committee Monday his ideas for next year's program—production, distribution and price fixing.

Chairman Pomeroy said the committee and the farmers want to know just who from now on will have the "definite power" over the food output and what plans are being contemplated.

The food subject also occupied the attention of President Roosevelt who met with his advisers and with leaders of the major farm organizations yesterday.

A 1944 program involving a somewhat lower level of guaranteed farm prices—and hence fewer Government subsidies—may be the outgrowth of those discussions.

Many areas of the Nation, particularly in the urban districts, already are running into milk shortages—a fact which last week led the WFA to inaugurate a system of dealer quotas.

Big Milk Drop Expected.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics said in a recent report that milk production in 1944 might drop to 115,000,000 pounds, or 7,000,000,000 less than the WFA goal, unless steps are taken to encourage a greater output.

Dairy authorities said the present ceiling prices on milk and dairy products are insufficient to cover winter feed and other production costs. Inasmuch as Mr. Roosevelt has issued orders that the line be held on food prices, an increase in ceilings appears to be out of the question.

Subsidies might be in one of two forms, or a combination of the two. They might be paid to dealers to enable them to pay dairymen larger prices without increasing consumer prices. Or the subsidies might be made in the form of reduced feed prices. The Government would buy the feed at market prices and sell to dairymen at a reduced price.

Aides said Mr. Jones would offer Congress no definite program, but would lay the problem before the lawmakers with the suggestion that subsidies offered one solution.

Subsidies for Emergencies.

The farm leaders brought from the presidential meeting yesterday assurance, they said, that the subsidies—which most of them opposed—would be used sparingly and only in cases of emergency.

That assurance may indicate that the administration is planning to make some changes in its rationing program, under which the Government aims to guarantee farmers above-ceiling prices by buying at a higher price and reselling at a lower figure, taking a loss on the difference.

Reports have been circulated that the administration planned to ask Congress for at least a billion dollars to cover such losses.

The National Grange and the American Farm Bureau Federation, as well as some congressional farm bloc leaders, object to such a program, contending the losses would be nothing less than consumer subsidies. They ask for ceilings based on the support prices.

WFA officials said elimination, except in the case of a few special items, of supports in excess of ceilings appeared to be the only way of meeting objections of the subsidy critics.

Prices Well Above Parity.

Some administration economic advisers believe the Government has placed too much emphasis on price as a factor in obtaining maximum production. They contend that some commodities have been supported at too high a level.

Latest official figures show that the general level of farm prices is 17 per cent above parity. Parity prices have been defined as those equally fair to producers and consumers.

It would be possible to lower the support prices on some commodities, eliminate Government purchase and losses and at the same time maintain a farm price level of more than parity.

Other commodities besides milk now supported at levels in excess of ceilings include peanuts and soybeans grown for vegetable oil and other foods, major canning crops, sugar beets, dry beans and peas.

Next year this list may be reduced to milk in the winter season of high feed prices, peanuts and soybeans and a few minor crops.

The WFA has already reduced the support price of one major farm item—hogs—effective on next year's production.

Quiz Kids Arrive Here For Sunday Show; Pleased at 'Sellout'

The Quiz Kids of radio fame reached Washington today, three days in advance of their Third War Loan broadcast Sunday night in Constitution Hall, to learn their $3,500,000 attraction is a sellout.

We are happy to help the war effort, beamed 15-year-old Margaret Merrick, infantile paralysis victim. Her statement found her Quiz companions—Gerard Darrow, 11; Richard Williams, 13, and Harve Fischman, 13, nodding agreement.

Greeted at Union Station this morning by Hugh Lynch, administrator of the District War Finance Committee, the juvenile "brain trusters" faced a busy program. Two were to appear at the Kiwanis Club luncheon and two at the Cosmopolitan Club meeting. At 2 p.m. they were to hold a press conference, and at 3 o'clock they were scheduled to appear at the Army-Treasury show at the Monument Grounds.

Study While Traveling.

Margaret, laying aside her crutches while pictures were being taken of the group, said she reads her father's medical book "when I get real hard up and have nothing else to read."

Margaret, like Richard, was clutching a textbook. "We are in high school and we take our books with us when we travel," she remarked.

Asked about his career preference, Richard said he wanted to be a civil engineer or research expert. He is the mathematical "wonder" of the Quiz Kids.

Gerard, youngest and smallest of the noted quartet, said his ambition is to become a "great surgeon or explorer." Calling attention to his hands, he added: "I have been told by medical men that, judging the shape of my hands, I should become a skillful surgeon."

Accompanied by Relatives.

Shepherded through the concourse by relatives, the Quiz Kids looked like other children. But when they started talking, similarity to normal children ceased. They have polio, radiate confidence and possess warm personalities, which explains why they have a radio audience of millions of children and adults each week.

Two and one-half years ago the Quiz Kids paid their first visit to Washington and were guests of Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House.

Their broadcast Sunday will be over the Blue Network. They will be greeted by an audience paying from $25 to $10,000 a seat.

Wood Fuel Shortage Forecast for Canada

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Canada is experiencing a shortage of wood fuel "so serious that it assumes the form of national emergency," A. H. Williamson, Canadian timber controller, said here today in forecasting reductions in the production of pulpwood and other forest products this season.

As a "direct result of an overstrained manpower situation," Mr. Williamson told the National Hardwood Lumbermen's Association, "the production of newsprint output appears inevitable." He emphasized that the burden of reduced production and increased lumber exports "has been borne in our Canadian domestic market."

"Increased exports of lumber from Canada (to the United States) might be possible if we could obtain increased production," the timber controller said, "but under present circumstances the requisite increase in logging could be made possible only by diverting men already engaged in the production of pulpwood, fuelwood and tanning timber to the production of sawlogs."

"As matters stand now," Mr. Williamson said, "it is expected that production of pulpwood in Canada will be less than in 1942 when production was 1,000,000 cords less than consumption, the balance coming out of inventory. The pulpwood supply situation in Canada is such that reduction in newsprint production appears inevitable, and certainly there is no possibility of transferring any large number of men from the production of pulpwood to the production of saw timber under existing conditions."

$1,000 in War Bonds To Be Given Tonight As V-Garden Prizes

More than $1,000 in War bonds and stamps will be awarded to Victory gardeners at an exhibition tonight in the Washington Gas Light auditorium at Eleventh and H streets climaxed the 1943 Victory garden contest.

The exhibit will be on display from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. in the auditorium. Fresh vegetables and canned goods grown by many of the 25,000 Washingtonians who participated in the program will be on display, according to J. Mortton Franklin, Victory garden supervisor.

A first prize of a $100 War bond will be given for the best garden in the metropolitan area of the city. This prize is donated by the Washington Gas Light Co.

Area Prizes of $25 Bonds.

Twenty-five-dollar bonds donated by The Star will be given the winning gardeners in each of the following areas: Northwest, Northeast, Southwest and Southeast Washington; Arlington-Alexandria-Patuxent; Bethesda-Chevy Chase and Silver Spring-Takoma Park.

Second prizes for the sectional contests will consist of $10 in War stamps, donated by the American Association of Nurserymen.

Prizes of $10 and $5 in War stamps will be given for the best and second best gardens, respectively, in each of approximately 40 of Washington's 86 defense areas. These prizes have been given by the RKO-Keith Theater.

Prizes of $5 in War stamps, presented by the Washington Times-Herald, will be awarded for each of the best specimens of 20 varieties of vegetables.

Directions to Exhibitors.

Vegetables and canned foods to be entered in the contest must be taken to the H street door of the auditorium by 1 and 5 p.m. today to be eligible for the contest, Mr. Franklin said.

Canners must bring two jars each of five varieties of fruits or vegetables. Twenty varieties of fresh vegetables will be judged, and gardeners must bring entries in the following proportions:

String beans, 25 pods; lima, 25 pods; beets, 5; broccoli, 3 heads; cabbage, 1 head; carrots, 5; corn, 3 ears; cucumbers, 3; eggplant, 1; kale, 1 plant; okra, 10; onions, 5; parsnips, 5; peppers, 5; potatoes, 5; pumpkins, 1; sweet potatoes, 5; Swiss chard, 1 plant, and tomatoes, 5.

Fresh vegetables will be judged between 5 and 7:30 p.m. and will go on exhibition immediately after the contest.

Prizes of $25, $10 and $5 in War bonds and stamps will be given to winning exhibitors of canned vegetables or fruits.

Mr. Franklin said that the committee will donate all produce not picked up after the show to District institutions.

Civil Liberties Union To Test Work Law

By The Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 16.—Charles J. Stinchcomb, Baltimore attorney, said today that he had been asked to become associated with counsel retained by the American Civil Liberties Union to make a test case of the Maryland "work or fight" law.

Mr. Stinchcomb said he had been asked to become associated in any test case that might be instituted by Attorney Joseph I. Paper of Baltimore. He said Mr. Paper had been retained by the Civil Liberties Union through the Workers' Defense League of New York.

"My action would depend on the nature of the case," Mr. Stinchcomb said. "It might be that there would be some case not proper to become involved with, and again there might be some proper test case."

The 1943 State Legislature passed a law making it a misdemeanor for men between 16 and 60 in 14 Maryland counties to refuse a bona fide offer of employment at the prevailing wage.

Several weeks ago a Montgomery County Army reject was arrested for refusing to work for a farmer for $2 per day. He served two days of a 30-day sentence, and then was released following a hearing at which it was testified the youth was not offered the prevailing wage.

110,000 Axis Captives Used by U. S. to Meet Manpower Shortage

By The Associated Press.

Many Axis prisoners in this country are being used to relieve manpower shortages, the War Department reported today, announcing that 110,000 of the approximately 141,000 captives are at work on farms and elsewhere.

The department said the war prisoners have helped relieve labor shortages in many States, adding: "They have harvested peanuts in Georgia and South Carolina, tomatoes in Indiana, corn in Iowa, have picked cotton in Texas, dug potatoes in Missouri and worked on a variety of nonagricultural jobs in several sections. One group now is engaged in constructing a dam for flood control in Oklahoma."

All prisoners, except officers, may be required to work on projects having no direct relation to war operations under the terms of the Geneva convention. They receive 80 cents a day, the money being credited to them regardless of whether the work is done for a Federal, State or private contractor.

All employers of war prisoners other than the Army itself pay the United States the same amount of money for any job as they would pay free labor. This money is not received by the prisoners, but is turned over to the Treasury.

James R. Sothoron Dies At Rooming House Door

James R. Sothoron, 39, fell dead early today as he was returning to the rooming house at 1230 Massachusetts avenue N.W. where he lived.

According to Mrs. Jean S. Graves, who operates the boarding house, Mr. Sothoron was found at the front door about 2 a.m. by another roomer. Mrs. Graves said Mr. Sothoron had been living at the Massachusetts avenue address for five years. The body was taken to the morgue.

Mrs. Graves said Mr. Sothoron had been suffering from heart disease and had collapsed on the street about three weeks ago.

Whites Thought Leprous

PAPEETE, Tahiti (AP)—Because Polynesians thought the first white visitors had a disease—since they were not dark-skinned—they termed them Ta'ata Pupure, meaning leprosy man. For the same reason blond today is called Valine Pupure, meaning leprosy woman.

Nazi Antitank Guns Reported Mounted Outside Vatican

By the Associated Press.
 GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 16.—An Italian border dispatch to the Lausanne Gazette said today that German troops armed with antitank guns and machine guns were preventing persons from entering or leaving Vatican City.

"A dozen mobile antitank guns have been placed in St. Peter's Square at the base of the grand stairway of the basilica, while machineguns were installed along the celebrated colonnades," the dispatch said.

German parachute troops have mounted guard around Vatican City to check all contacts between Rome proper and the Holy See, it was reported. The dispatch said it now was impossible for faithful Italians to obtain permission to pray in St. Peter's. These measures were taken, an Italian crowd was told, to check the entry into Vatican City of anti-Fascists seeking refuge within its precincts.

The Lausanne Gazette said German troops had surrounded workers' quarters in Transtevere, across the Tiber River in Rome, where "Communists, rebels and Socialists installed barricades in the streets and fortified their homes."

The dispatch declared Italian troops of the Rome garrison had been installed in a big camp at Tivoli and were being treated as prisoners of war.

Some stores were reported reopening in Rome and the city's bus lines were partly functioning again, but the scarcity of food presented a serious problem to Rome authorities.

 NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Cecil (Punch) Fairs, 68, of Glen Head, N. Y., former English court tennis professional and former world champion, died on Monday.

Born in England, he won the championship four times, in 1905, 1906, 1908 and 1910.

Pennsylvania Railroad Official Drowns in Surf

By the Associated Press.
 MONTAUK, N. Y., Sept. 16.—C. Gordon Pennington, 57, general passenger agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad in New York since 1941, drowned yesterday while swimming in the surf here.

Mr. Pennington, employed since 1900 by the railroad and its subsidiary, the Long Island Railroad, had been the Pennsylvania's general passenger agent in Chicago and Washington before coming to New York.

A resident of Garden City, Long Island, Mr. Pennington is survived by his widow, Edith, and son, Lt. Richard Pennington of the Army Air Forces.

Mr. Pennington served as general passenger agent for the Pennsylvania Railroad in Washington from June 16, 1939, to June, 1941, when he was transferred to New York. While here, he lived at the Westchester Apartments.

Mr. Pennington was a member of the Press Club, the Kiwanis Club, the Board of Trade, the Early Birds, the Traffic Club and the Washington Passenger Club.

Robert Fletcher, 63, Federal Employee, Dies

Robert Fletcher, 63, an employe of the Government Printing Office for more than 35 years, died of a heart ailment yesterday at his home, 3118 Sixteenth street N.W.

Born in Rockville, Md., Mr. Fletcher was the son of the late Arthur H. and Julia May Fletcher. He came to Washington when he was 17 after receiving his education at the Rockville Academy.

He was a member of Federal Lodge, No. 1, of the Masons and attended St. Stephen's and Incarnation Episcopal Church.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary Irene Fletcher; a sister, Mrs. F. D. Rust, and a brother, Arthur W. Fletcher.

Funeral services will be at the S. H. Hines Co. funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street N.W., at 11 a.m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

'First Job Is School,' Forum Speakers Tell Children of Nation

School children of the Nation were informed last night in the National Radio Forum that "your first job—war or no war—is school." Three Government officials and a 17-year-old student of Calvin Coolidge High School participated in the program, arranged by The Star and broadcast over the Blue Network through WMAL, The Evening Star Station, Channing R. Dooley, director of the War Manpower Commission's Training Within Industry Service, and Lt. Gilbert Wrenn, vice president of the National Vocational Guidance Association and now with the Bureau of Naval Personnel, joined with Miss Katharine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Labor Department, in advising that school comes first.

Calls School 'First Job'
Addressing herself to Walter Robbins, a student at Coolidge, who participated in the broadcast, and to thousands of other students now about to start another school year, Miss Lenroot declared:
"Your first job—war or no war—is school. You must make good in that job. If you don't you won't be able to make good in the future. The habits of hard study you form now are going to count later on. If you are needed on jobs outside of school, pitch into them the same way you pitch into your school work."
"Always remember, we're counting on you to be first-raters at whatever you turn your time and hand to. If you measure up to the best standards you know, you will not only help us win the war, but you will be ready to help on the still harder job of peace."

Mr. Dooley pointed out that "if we can do our production job without using school boys and girls, we want to do it, because we are going to need you later on." Where industry does need young people, the official said, the WMC thinks a plan should be worked out whereby students could work part time and still continue their schooling.
Nation's Responsibility.
Miss Lenroot said it was her belief that the "Nation's first responsibility to boys and girls is to urge them to get the best education possible for the years ahead."
Agreeing with Miss Lenroot, Lt. Wrenn added that it was their duty to be sure in their own minds that getting all the schooling they can get is an essential war job—their war job.

Young Robbins said that he was going back to school but that he knew "a lot of fellows—some girls, too—who haven't made up their minds yet." Some of them, he said, claim school "is kid's stuff," while others feel that "all they have to do to be an air pilot is just to sign up."
At this point, Lt. Wrenn asserted "it takes plenty of learning to get the important jobs in the Army and Navy." The more study you have had by the time you are called up, he told Walter, the more chance you have to get ready for important jobs in the armed services.

Tells of WMC Policy
The WMC is telling employers that school comes first. Mr. Dooley said, although this rule stands to be modified in such areas as the West Coast, where there is a shortage of plane and ship workers. The WMC policy there is for employer first to see if there are people who have completed school available for the jobs before taking young people from schools.
Mr. Dooley said copies of the policy statement on part-time employment of youth could be procured from the Children's Bureau. Speakers on the program were introduced by Lothrop Stoddard, special editorial writer for The Star.

Dittler Says Kansas Vote Highlights Trend to GOP

By the Associated Press.
Representative Dittler, Republican of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, said last night the result of the special congressional election in Kansas Tuesday "serves again to highlight the steady trend of the Republican party nationally and away from the leadership of the New Deal."

Errett P. Scrivener, Republican attorney, was elected from the Kansas second district as a successor to the late Representative Guyer, Republican. Mr. Scrivener defeated Herbert L. Driase, Democrat, whom Mr. Dittler described as a New Dealer.
Mr. Dittler said that in the 1942 regular election Mr. Guyer was re-elected by 59.1 per cent of the votes, while in the special election, Mr. Scrivener received 69 per cent.

Program to Aid Veterans Urged by La Guardia

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Mayor F. H. La Guardia, asserting that "the percentage of casualties will be greater in this war and more severe in character," said yesterday "we should have a rehabilitation program completed now" to provide for returning veterans.
He made the statement to a group of national officers of the Disabled American Veterans, who called on him prior to the opening of a four-day convention here tomorrow. The convention will emphasize positive Mayor La Guardia said the program should guarantee returning soldiers an opportunity to complete their educations.

Du Pont Funeral Rites Held at Wilmington
By the Associated Press.
WILMINGTON, Del., Sept. 16.—Funeral services for Richard Childer du Pont, 38, glider authority, who was killed Saturday in the crash of a glider at March Field, Calif., were held yesterday at Christ Episcopal Church, Christiansa Hundred.
Mr. du Pont's body was flown in from March Field in a Douglas DC-3 plane of the Air Transport Command and arrived at du Pont Airport shortly before noon.
Among the many Army and Navy officers attending the funeral was Brig. Gen. William E. Hall, an aide to Gen. Henry H. Arnold, who brought the general's message of condolence and of regret that he was unable to attend.
Riding in the airplane from March Field were Maj. A. Felix du Pont, Jr., a pallbearer; Maj. R. Ernest Blomquist, Capt. John McChesney Morgan, the pilot, also a pallbearer; Capt. Elliott Noyes and Capt. R. N. Sawyer.
During the burial service at the Du Pont family burial ground on the Brandywine, two planes of All-American Aviation circled overhead.

Easy Does It — How to keep crowded quarters super-clean and sanitary
1. Living in furnished lodgings, with only one bathroom for a whole household of roomers? Don't take chances! Disinfect washbowl, tub and toilet often with Lysol, the powerful germ-killer many hospitals use. Lysol helps remove stains, too.
2. Authorities say crowded living conditions may endanger health. Be on guard against disease germs from fly-infested garbage pails, poor plumbing. Keep your home hygienically clean with Lysol solution. (2 1/2 tablespoons to 1 gallon water.)
3. Most of your shared laundry facilities with other families? Then beware of infection germs! Be sure to add Lysol disinfectant to all laundry water. Don't rely on "cleaning compounds" and bleaches, alone.
4. Lysol costs little because it's so concentrated—you dilute it for use. Get Lysol today, at any drug counter. (Over 1,000, by Lysol & First Products Co.)

House Prepares to Act Monday on Resolution Stating Postwar Stand

By the Associated Press.
The House majority leadership took drastic steps today—with Republican acquiescence—to avoid a floor battle over a post-war antiaggression resolution, but rumblings of a Senate fight were heard after Senator Connally, Democrat, of Texas suggested a peace-by-force commitment.
The House Foreign Affairs Committee decided late yesterday to forestall any possible show of disunity by calling up the Fulbright resolution next Monday under suspension of the rules, a procedure which will bar amendments but will require a two-thirds vote to pass. The resolution would place Congress on record as favoring American participation with other countries in establishing and maintaining a just and lasting peace.

Chairman Bloom predicted the proposal sponsored by Representative Fulbright, Democrat, of Arkansas would "pass overwhelmingly." House Minority Leader Martin said he left the procedure up to the committee, and while he would oppose rule suspension in ordinary times, he felt there was "justification in this case because we're at war."
Mr. Martin also indicated heavy Republican support for the resolution on the floor. He said it was "along the lines" of the proposal adopted by the Republican Postwar Advisory Council at Mackinac Island, Mich.
Speaker Rayburn said "liberal time"—possibly all afternoon—would be allowed for debate.
While the House group was meeting in executive session, Chairman Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee told a press conference that he favored American membership and leadership in an international organization of sovereign nations with power to enforce its decisions by military and naval force.

That is a little further than some other Senators are willing to go at this time, but they are holding their fire until they see what the Connally group produces. A Foreign Relations Subcommittee headed by the Texas will meet next Wednesday to sift a dozen postwar peace resolutions, but Senator Connally said the group probably would write its own.
"It seems to me fundamental,"

District Officer Listed in Error On Death Roll

LT. RAY DAU.

The name of First Lt. Ray Dau was erroneously carried on the honor roll of men killed in action during this war, which was published in The Star on September 9.
His father, who lives at 6110 Fourteenth street N.W., was notified last January by the War Department that his son had been wounded in the Southwest Pacific. He was released from the hospital in February.
Mr. Dau said yesterday he had received a letter from his son a few days ago.

Field Museum in Chicago To Drop Founder's Name
By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—The Field Museum of Natural History, founded 50 years ago by Marshall Field, will be given a new name, Stanley Field, president of the museum, announced last night.
At exercises marking the golden anniversary of the institution's founding, Mr. Field announced the name will be changed to the Chicago Museum of Natural History, "thereby identifying its ownership more closely with the public of Chicago."
He explained that the adoption of the new name will be made at the suggestion of the grandson of the founder, Marshall Field, 3d, whose contributions to the institution have totaled $2,852,000.
President Field also announced that Marshall Field, 3d, is to give to the museum "certain pieces of property which should produce an income at least equivalent to what his annual contributions have been in recent years."
The new name will become effective after the museum's State charter is amended.

Danger Ahead

The first day of hearings before the Senate Military Affairs Committee on the proposal to ban or defer the draft of fathers makes it clear that this is essentially a question of whose judgment should prevail in a matter of this kind.

There is no mathematical process by which the armed services can demonstrate conclusively that they must induct men with children. They can show how many men are needed to fill quotas, but they cannot prove that these quotas are absolutely necessary to the successful conduct of the war.

On the other hand, they can state, on the authority of expert opinion, that the armed services must have a certain number of men by a certain date if they are to go through with military operations planned or planned. And they have done this without qualification. Undersecretary of War Patterson told the committee that a ban on the induction of fathers would cripple the military effort by forcing the services to draw upon single men now engaged in the production of munitions. Lieutenant General Joseph T. McNarney warned that a prohibition against the draft of fathers would upset the Army's strategic plans. "Whoever initiates such a change," he said, "must assume the grave responsibility for ignoring the considered judgment of our military leaders, arrived at after careful and prolonged study."

Admiral King, commander in chief of the United States fleet, advised the committee that there can be no lowering of the numbers of men to be furnished the armed services by December 31 without serious detriment not only to planned operations but to operations that are now under way or in process of mounting.

In the face of these categorical statements a majority of the committee apparently remains unconvinced. Presumably the Senators feel that their judgment on this military question is better than that of the military commanders. But upon what grounds is the senatorial judgment based? They certainly are not military experts. Nor do they even pretend to have any information which has not been available to the military leaders. They are staking an inexperienced judgment on a military question against the judgment of the best military minds in this country, with the crippling of our war effort as the price of error. That is something which should be made perfectly clear now, for if Congress goes through with this plan to override the high command, and if a military setback is the result, there should be no doubt in any one's mind that the full responsibility will rest on the Senators and Representatives who vote for the ban on inductions.

It is most earnestly to be hoped, however, that Congress will not trample on the judgment of the men who have been entrusted with responsibility for the conduct of this war. If the legislators will look back over the record they will find that time has upheld the judgment of the military commanders in every instance in which there has been a difference of opinion between them and members of Congress. And they should also keep in mind the fact that anything which Congress may do now to cripple our fighting power will inevitably be paid for with the lives of other men who have already been drafted and sent to the combat fronts.

The Net Tightens

The fall of Salamaua, Japan's big naval and air base in Northeast New Guinea, marks one more break in the ring of island strongholds behind which the Japanese once fondly imagined they could consolidate their stolen riches. But it may be doubted that any one in Japan with the means of ascertaining what is happening in the Pacific continues to cherish that illusion.

Salamaua was to have been one of the principal Japanese concentration points in the Southwest Pacific, and they clung to it tenaciously long after they had been denied use of its landing field by the incessant Allied bombing. When the American and Australian troops broke through, however, the Japanese abandoned great quantities of equipment and fled northward, hoping to join the trapped force at Lae, twenty-one miles away.

More significant than the conquest of Salamaua itself, however, is the further indication which it provides of Japan's waning sea and air power. This is not merely a matter of losses, although they have been heavy, especially in the air. But Japan also is falling behind relatively, for the trend of the war in the Pacific reveals clearly that our ability to build up our strength at the critical points while writing off battle losses is much greater than that of the Japanese. And this is one thing that Japan can do nothing about.

No one doubts that Japan remains strong, nor that losses like those she has sustained in the fall of Salamaua and Munda are but tiny cracks in a sturdy wall. Yet they are breaks, and they will become increasingly serious as we, with our Allies, step up the tempo of the Pacific war and subject the enemy to ever-mounting pressure.

One can only guess at the length of time the Japanese will be able to keep up the fight. But it is a reasonably safe assumption that December 7, 1943, second anniversary of the treacherous attack on Pearl Harbor, will not be an occasion for unrestrained rejoicing in Japan.

Mussolini Mystery

The old adage that truth is stranger than fiction is again exemplified in the prolonged mystery which shrouds the fate of Mussolini. No Oppenheim thriller is more sensational than the chain of events which began on the morning of July 25, when the deposed Duce went to see King Victor Emmanuel and tender his resignation as head of the Italian state. After what is reported to have been a stormy interview, the little King made a signal, a group of armed generals burst into the room, and Mussolini left the Royal Palace a prisoner, bound for an undisclosed destination.

That, at least, is one of several melodramatic versions with which we have been regaled from various sources, the broad divergencies indicating that these accounts stem from hearsay rather than from firsthand knowledge. This in itself is surprising, because there must have been a considerable number of eyewitnesses to the actual events. The Royal Palace in Rome is hardly a place of seclusion, and Italians are apt to be garrulous. Yet no one immediately concerned seems to have talked.

Still more amazing is the way the secret of Mussolini's subsequent movements has been kept. Leading members of the Badoglio government, police officials, soldiers and others must have had either full or partial knowledge of what went on. But here again we have a wide variety of rumors putting the Duce in all sorts of confinement places, ranging from Rome itself to islands and mountain tops—that being the latest locality given by a German propaganda story as the spot where he was allegedly rescued by Gestapo agents, S. S. men and paratroopers. Dr. Goebbels' publicity machine has been busily grinding out reports of his rescue and what followed, but even these do not always dovetail.

When those first inspired reports came out of Berlin, the Allied and neutral world displayed a healthy skepticism. Since then, London appears to be reluctantly accepting the facts of Mussolini's liberation as true. A shadow government is certainly being set up in his name, and vigorous attempts are being made to rally the dispersed Fascist oligarchy to serve under the German occupation forces in such parts of Italy as are under their military occupation or control. Yet the orders and decrees of this regime, though issued in Duce's name, are never publicly attested by his personality. Why has Mussolini's voice not come over the radio? Why has he made no official appearance? The advantage of such simple acts would seem to be self-evident, but they have not been done.

What is the explanation of this continuing mystery? Is Mussolini dead? Is he desperately ill? Is he violently insane? Have Dr. Goebbels and Adolf Hitler cooked up a gigantic hoax, prepared under the Fuehrer's well-known recipe that if a lie is big enough and stated with sufficient brazenness, it will be believed.

Meanwhile, the Germans are trading on Mussolini's name with some success. The Fascist Old Guard was so compromised in the eyes of the Italian people that its members had little to hope for after the collapse of their system from which they had derived power and wealth at the expense of their fellow citizens. Such men can be expected to serve foreign masters as selfishly and as unscrupulously as they did their party bosses when Fascism ruled Italy. Mussolini's name will be a useful rallying standard in any event. Whether it be more than a name, time alone can disclose.

The Surviving Original

Some students of ancient and medieval history have come across hieroglyphics which are said to include, as the original members of the President's Brain Trust, Raymond Moley, the late Louis M. Howe, Assistant Secretary of State A. A. Berle, Governor Rex Tugwell of Puerto Rico and Justice Samuel I. Rosenman of the New York Supreme Court. There is some difference of opinion as to whether Justice Felix Frankfurter began functioning as a steady adviser at first or whether he assumed such functions along toward the middle ages. Harry Hopkins, it is said, was a later arrival who had to work his way up, or in, with the passing years. He was not, at any rate, an original.

But of Justice Rosenman there is no doubt that he was there in the beginning. In fact, there are those who say that he was the nucleus around which the original group developed. And time has not altered a unique relationship between himself and the President which is manifestly founded on a deep loyalty and affection, as well as a distinguished ability to do what the President wants done in a manner that is pleasing to the President.

His coming to Washington now to devote all of his time as a special adviser to the President, at less than half the salary received as a member of the New York Supreme Court (he has served ten years of a fourteen-year term) is by way of resumption of a position he held as personal counsel to Mr. Roosevelt as Governor of New York. But in the intervening years he has never been far from the President and has been a steady commuter to Washington for frequent conferences and special assignments.

Throughout his administration the President has relied strongly on the loyal services of men whom he trusts. Justice Rosenman is one of those whose "passion for anonymity" and selfless service have made him invaluable to his chief. Regardless of what one may think of some of the plans attributed to Justice Rosenman, there has never been a question as to his devotion or his sincerity in carrying out any task the President has given him.

Oppression in Argentina

An editorial in a Buenos Aires newspaper urging freedom of the press has attracted international attention. That fact, of itself, is a striking commentary on the extent to which individual freedom and democratic concepts have been stifled in Argentina.

The editorial was published in Prensas, one of the country's most prominent newspapers. The comment was conservative in tone, merely pointing out that the press had been muzzled and calling on the present government to restore freedom of the press by terminating the state of siege that was proclaimed by the Castillo regime in December, 1941. Yet correspondents writing from Buenos Aires, despite the mild tone of the article, have applauded Prensas' editor for his courage in taking even this cautious stand. And well they might, for at least a dozen of Argentina's newspapers have been suspended by the government on one pretext or another, the latest victim being the Journal Noticias Graficas, whose editor has been clapped into jail for commenting on the recent exchange of correspondence between Secretary of State Hull and Argentina's Foreign Minister Storni. Admiral Storni was rebuked by Mr. Hull when he asked for lease-lend aid for his country.

The state of siege, of course, is pure fiction. What the government is trying to do, with considerable success, is to suppress not only criticism by even dissenting factual presentations relative to its foreign policies. That these policies are inimical to Argentina's best interests seems self-evident, but the government, for domestic political reasons, has refused to abandon them. In order to do this, however, it has been deemed necessary to destroy freedom of the press, and this is a step which the Argentine government has not hesitated to take.

When such things as this can happen in an enlightened and progressive country like Argentina, there is all the more reason to welcome decisions like that of an appellate judge in Mobile, Ala., setting aside a contempt of court conviction of the editor of the Mobile Press and Register. The editor had commented critically on a final ruling by a judge of one of the inferior criminal courts, and the judge had sentenced him for contempt. The higher judge set this aside as an infringement of "the constitutional liberty of the press," thereby erecting one more barrier against any possible suppression of legitimate comment in this country.

Governors' Gamble

The natural-born kibitzer likes to hang around the scene when good gamblers get together with the big stakes on the table. Let him rejoice, then, at the gigantic gamble now going on between Messrs. Osborne, Dempsey and Schoepfel, whose table is wide, covering three States, and whose stakes are high. Each, in his office as Governor, has bet that his own State will show up best in the Third Victory Loan. Governor Osborne of Arizona has risked the Grand Canyon, Governor Dempsey of New Mexico the Carlsbad Caverns, and Governor Schoepfel of Kansas, the oil fields of that State. All those stakes theoretically are in the pot now, waiting for the winner to collect it, as when, and especially how, he can—for the terms, by mutual agreement, are FOB and not COD.

Assuming that there is still time, Governor O'Connor of Maryland is advised to sit in and ante up the Chesapeake Bay. The whole East Coast would be rooting for him. Just what Maryland could do with the Grand Canyon and the Carlsbad Caverns is something of a mystery, and they might even be left behind, in a spirit of magnanimity, but those Kansas oil fields are a tempting plum. The Governors' gamble, of course, is good-natured whimsy for a serious purpose, that of inducing as many as possible to subscribe to the Third Victory Loan, but it is not a bad idea to assume that it is genuine. Certain it is that the sooner victory comes, the sooner Kansas oil will flow freely in Maryland and everywhere else.

Germans Face Disaster In Ukraine Fighting

By Maj. George Fielding Eliot.

With the capture of Neshin, the Russians have cut the last rail communication between the German armies of the center and those of the south, save for the long detour by way of Kiev. Thus the "serious operational breach" in the German defensive system, which the German military commentator, Capt. Ludwig Seritorius, said the other day was the only thing the Germans had to fear in Russia, seems to have been effected.

It remains now to be seen whether the Russians can exploit this achievement by destroying that part of the German army (the southern part) which they have cut off from the remainder. On the face of the situation as we know it, it does not seem likely that they can wholly succeed in doing so. The reasons for this opinion are (1) the fact that the Germans are carrying out extensive demolitions as they fall back and that the Russians will have to reconstruct a whole new rail and road system. This becomes more difficult and slows progress more in proportion as the Russian armies advance into territory once held by the Germans. (2) The approaching rains of autumn, which will turn the roads of the Ukraine into quagmires of thick mud. (3) The tremendous military barrier of the Dnieper, with its comparatively few crossings, will serve the Germans as a formidable delaying obstacle at least until it freezes.

The major threat to the Germans at this moment is that the Russians from the Neshin-Priluki area will strike down to the Dnieper somewhere but at Kiev-Poltava-Lozovaya railway, which so far the Germans have managed to keep in operation and which is the backbone of their defensive system in the south. If the Russians reach the Dnieper in the area indicated and can stay there, the retreat of the Germans becomes dependent on three crossings of that river—the bridges at Kremenchug, Dnepropetrovsk and Zaporozhe.

The loss of one of these crossings would mean a serious German reverse, the loss of two might mean a great disaster comparable to that of Stalingrad. All are threatened, but none is threatened very closely. The Germans will get many men and much material across in all probability.

They may even be able to stabilize their position so as to hold at least part of the Kiev-Poltava railway. But that they will lose prisoners and material in considerable numbers also seems likely, for the Russians are pressing hard on their heels and all will not get away. The situation is shaping up toward a new stabilization on a new front for the interval to prepare their winter offensive. What is interesting right now is just how much the Germans can save out of the wreck, how much of their southern group of armies finally can get behind a newly-stabilized front and how much will be lost in the process.

Another threat to the Germans is the prospective loss of the Crimea. As the Russians press forward toward Zaporozhe and Melitopol, the cutting of the one railway line into the Crimean Peninsula becomes more and more likely. Should it be cut, the German troops in the Crimea, and those in the Tamensk bridgehead across the Strait of Kerch, would be dependent on what supplies they have in their depots, plus two precarious lines of communications, neither of great capacity.

One of these is the road from Khereson, on the lower Dnieper, to the end of a branch line railway which connects the main towns of the Crimea with the Isthmus of Perekop. It is hard to see how this line could be defended if Melitopol were in Russian hands. The other is by sea—and again it is hard to see how the Germans could do much in the way of sending supplies to Sevastopol by sea if the Russian Black Sea fleet were back to Novorossisk; an event which seems likely to occur within the immediate future.

The military and political effects of a Russian recovery of the Crimea would be so great, not only as affecting the Russian campaign, but throughout the Balkans, where German prestige already has been rocked by the surrender of Italy, that it seems hard to believe the Germans will not make a really desperate effort to defend the Crimea—which means, in effect, holding a line somewhere in front of Zaporozhe down to the shore of the Sea of Azov.

Should they fail to hold such a line, and should they lose their Tamensk bridgehead as well, the Crimea almost certainly will be recovered by the Russians during the winter, perhaps before the year ends.

Medicine in the Future

From the London Daily Telegraph and Morning Post.

There has generally been a long time lag between discovery and its practical application and commercial production. In some departments the period has been marvelously shortened by intensive scientific work under pressure of war. Lord Samuel suggested for the needs of peace an organized distribution of research between the State, the universities and industry. Those advances in medicine which have miraculously mitigated suffering and prolonged life and vigor are not yet at an end, and they will have a counterpart in the transformation of homes and the machinery of living. The new age promises mankind an extension of comfort over physical conditions beyond the dreams of last century. Upon the speed and the manner in which it is brought about depend the recovery of the world from the war's devastation and the future security and welfare of mankind. It is quite true that this country has given the world a number of scientific discoveries of the first importance and not a few men of science whose work will be immortal. We may count upon leaders in the future, but they must have an army. The Government has yet to review the arguments, but there is a strong case for fresh organization of training and research.

Beans for Meat

From the Topeka Capital.

There is a movement on to educate the American people to eat the soybean and like it. We may accept this Oriental product as an addition to the regular diet, but if the bureaucrats hope to convert our people from a Nation of meat eaters to beans as a substitute, they are doomed to disappointment.

THIS AND THAT

By Charles E. Tracowell.

"HOME FRONT."

"Dear Sir: "Once you complied with my humble request and delighted me—and I dare say all of your readers—with an article on a subject I suggested (Pet Aversions)." "As busy and weary as I am many evenings, I try to get to read the editorial page of The Evening Star regularly, particularly your contributions.

"Now, I should like to see in print an article by you on the subject of 'brushing off.' You know that the birds will soon give us their usual 'brush off,' so you might give them a 'brush off' for one evening and devote your genius to a discussion of a timely article on brushes—and I do mean real brushes—most emphatically the small whisk broom.

"Many times I have admired a well-dressed individual—some yards away—only to be perturbed at seeing 'flakes' on his or her dark shoulder. And sitting directly behind such persons in the cars or buses is not pleasant. Also, I was told that dandruff causes inflammation when blown into the eyes.

"Thank you very much, indeed, for any consideration you may give this letter.

"Yours respectfully, L. G. F."

Persons with dandruff on their coats are not always members of the 'great unwashed.' "Often they brush industriously, but possess the sort of flakes which float down at the slightest touch.

"Thus no prior amount of 'brushed off' will do them any good when seated in front of some sensitive person.

"The latter may, as our correspondent, think that the person is merely careless, when all the time he or she is in an agony of embarrassment.

"Why doesn't such a person go to a dermatologist, it may be asked.

"Well, heavens, have you ever been to a dermatologist? "A dermatologist is a person with a cold, gray eye, and an impersonal manner.

"He is so dreadfully busy that he hasn't time to do more than give your itching head a nick with a finger.

"Give him the lamp," he says to a cool assistant.

"The cool assistant throws a great black cloth over you and says to bend over.

"You bend over and are told to stay that way until further notice.

"Great lights come on.

"You have visions of being done to a turn, or a crisp, as the case may be.

"You wonder how long this shall go on. Busy feet come and go, but no one pays any attention to you.

Letters to the Editor

Holds All Germans Responsible for War.

To the Editor of The Star:

I ask the hospitality of your columns to expose a grave and costly fault that rests squarely upon our own shoulders. The officials who connive in it are merely in step with their friends and neighbors.

It has been and is our quaint and touching belief that every foreign people with whom we go to war are animated only by the kindest feeling toward ourselves and are being led from the path of peace by selfish and unscrupulous leaders. Such an assurance was given to Germany in 1917 by President Wilson, though he well knew that the night of the day in which Belgium was invaded was spent by the Berlin populace in wild rejoicing. A quarter of a century later President Roosevelt, in a message to "the good German people," assured them that we were not being deceived by Nazi lies and that we would do our part in freeing them from the rule of a criminal clique under which they must secretly groan and chafe.

Such gestures may be harmless except insofar as they tend to expose us to ridicule. But our President's well-meant error has had sequelae which if uncorrected will cause us grave embarrassment and operate against an Allied victory securing a lasting peace.

That Mr. Roosevelt's distinction between the Nazi party and the German people was invalid had become apparent when the first 100 German prisoners were interviewed in England. Its unreality has been demonstrated time and again by every news commentator who worked in Berlin and by every German "intellectual" who fled Germany. No more perfect example of national solidarity has ever been witnessed than that exhibited by Germany when she embarked upon the spoliation of her neighbors in 1939-40.

No Hitler was needed to expound Germany's national creed: "No country has the right of independence, nor any individual right of liberty if their possession runs counter to German wishes." Tacitus and Julius Caesar agreed in that summation two millennium ago. It has been the keystone in the educational arch of every German child. It has formed the text of every German publicist whose words have not earned him death or banishment.

Today our leaders and our spokesmen are denying the most important teaching of German history. Not after weighing proof, but merely as the expression of a pious hope.

"Only the Nazis are vile; the German people are incapable of atrocities." That is the view voiced, but certainly not believed by the Office of War Information, by our Senators and Representatives and by our newspapers. We are engaged in a great war against a wicked political group whose members can be called by name, segregated and punished if and when the victory is ours!

Every screaming headline, every bulletin of the OWI featuring "Nazi" cruelty to Jew or Gentile, or "Nazi" disregard of common decency or human rights and every violation of sacred treaty obligations attributed not to the German, but to the Nazi, strengthens the hand of a treasonable group already too strong that is now being groomed to start a crusade for a "generous peace," i.e., one that will enable "the good German people" to rest, rearm and reorganize for a fresh attack upon their neighbors or upon us.

Our duty is plain. Let the word "Nazi" be expunged from our vocabulary. Then German crimes and German criminals literally will be described as such.

HOWARD PITCHER OKIE.

Says War Department Babies Employed.

To the Editor of The Star:

"Portal to portal" pay seems to be the only solution to the hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission, which may well be entitled "The War Department vs. the Capital Transit Co."

It is apparent that it is not so much the extra fare involved, but whether or not a girl can maintain and afford a date and at the same time maintain the extra 5-cent extra bus fare she is now subjected to.

Such was the testimony Friday before the Interstate Commerce Commission. One particular witness, a comely and very factual one, went so far as to say that, as a personnel director, she believed that the extra 5-cent fare contributed largely to the resignation of numerous employees. She added, however, that it was only a contributing factor. When asked if the lack of romance or the lack of dates might also be a factor the witness replied, "Oh, yes, but we can take care of that."

That the Capital Transit Co.'s profits were as yet undisclosed is credited to their attorney, who insists that the question of the company's profits within the District of Columbia has no place at this hearing.

It is pointed out that the commission is interested only in interstate fares and to the reasonableness of the rates therein involved.

The public will rejoice, however, when the War Department stops "babbling" their employees. What's the 5 cents compared to a date, of which the modern young lady usually contributes her share.

F. W. PACKARD.

Rationing of All Scarce Items Urged.

To the Editor of The Star:

In view of rationing of some scarce articles in this country, why not ration all scarce articles? For example, there is a scarcity of oranges. Why should some stores be allowed to ration on their own initiative? If it is necessary to ration, it seems that the fairest agency to do it would be the Government.

There also seems to be much laxity in the enforcement of OPA regulations, the failure of stores to post price ceilings in particular. It is very hard for the consumer to keep track of the constantly changing ceilings. At one store you can buy California oranges for 57 or 59 cents per 5 pounds but at another store you have to pay anywhere from 63 to 69 cents for the same type of oranges buying by the dozen.

It is very confusing to have different ceiling prices for the same thing. Consumers are told by the OPA to watch prices and also price ceiling postings. Why should that burden be placed on the consumer when he is already busy with ration coupons and also the cash register for his own protection?

Perhaps OPA has tended to keep prices down, but many people believe we would be just as well off without the OPA law if it is not going to be well enforced.

Haskin's Answers to Questions

By Frederic J. Haskin.

Many readers send in questions to the Information Bureau signed only with initials, asking that the answers appear in the newspaper. The space is limited and would not accommodate a fraction of such requests. Besides, many of these questions are too personal to be of general interest. Send your questions to The Evening Star, Information Bureau, Frederic J. Haskin, Director, Washington, D. C. Include stamp for return postage.

Q. When George Washington selected the site for the White House how much did he pay per acre for the ground?—R. D. J.

A. The average price of this land was about $66 per acre.

Q. What organization provides Bibles for prisoners of war?—K. M. D.

A. Through its office in Geneva, Switzerland, the American Bible Society has already provided over 200,000 Bibles, testaments and portions, in more than 30 languages, to prisoners of war in all countries.

Q. What is the insect that always walks backward?—F. B. G.

A. The doodlebug, the larva of the ant lion, for some unexplained reason has the ability to walk backward only.

Q. When did the United States finally decide against participation in the League of Nations?—C. S. A.

A. It was rejected on the final vote in the Senate upon the treaty of Versailles, by which the league came legally into existence, on March 19, 1920.

Q. How are the serial numbers of soldiers determined?—U. S. R.

A. When the first number is either 1, 2 or 3, the 1 stands for enlistment, 2 indicates a member of the State National Guard, and 3 means inducted under the Selective Service Act. The second of the serial numbers indicates the number of the service command. Thus if the first two letters of a serial number were 37, the man in question would be a selectee in the 7th Service Command Area.

Q. How many nations are represented at the Vatican?—W. O.

A. Before the present war more than 30 nations had accredited representatives at the Vatican. This is the world's smallest sovereign state, its area being less than that of many a city park.

Q. Where does the largest flower in the world grow?—E. B. R.

A. The largest is said to be the Raflesia arnoldi, one of a group of parasitic plants which grows only in the tropical rain forests of Asia. The seeds are said to be carried largely by the feet of elephants, although birds transport some.

Q. Does the Red Cross make any charge for supplying blood plasma?—R. N. H.

A. The headquarters of the American National Red Cross says that no charge is made for the blood plasma collected from donors and contributed to the Army and Navy. The plasma becomes the property of the Army and Navy as soon as it leaves the laboratory.

Q. What was the capacity of the Normandie when it was a passenger ship?—E. B. S.

A. The carrying capacity of the former French liner Normandie (now the U. S. S. Lafayette) was as follows: Passengers, 2,170; officers and crew, 1,500.

Q. What is the daily cost of maintaining a veteran in a Government hospital?—D. V. N.

A. The Veterans' Administration says that it now has 88 hospitals and homes located in all of the States except two and in the District of Columbia. The cost per day per person in the three types of hospitals is as follows: General medical, $5.25; tuberculosis, $5.04; neuro-psychiatric, $2.23.

Q. What is a rose window?—J. K. L.

A. The rose window is a circular window with mullions and tracery generally radiating from a center, filled with stained glass of great beauty. It is so named from its fancied resemblance to a rose. It is a characteristic of Gothic architecture in which it was developed.

Q. How long does a seed remain viable, that is, retain the power to sprout and produce sturdy seedlings?—E. M. G.

A. There is considerable variation. Some seeds rarely retain their germinating power longer than one year; whereas seed of celery, cabbage, cucumber and various other vegetables and flowers may sprout well when 10 years old or even more.

Q. What was Thomas A. Edison's first invention?—C. F. B.

A. J. G. Crowther, in "Famous American Men of Science" says that Edison made his first invention at the age of 16 while employed as a telegraph operator. Night operators were requested to send hourly signals to show they were awake, and Edison devised a clock which made the time signals automatically so that he could sleep when he wanted.

Song

Now in this fresh-washed morning, now in this rarest hour of the year,

With the sea-wind coursing in this clear autumn morning light,

The sea grass faintly stained with gold of pale new-minted sun,

Now is the air as golden wine served from the chalice of the night.

And now shall the last and liquid silver notes of larks, as doves flutes,

Or cold cascade of harp tones spilling, glitter and sing their final song;

Sing, for their time is fragile and brief as the morning light is brief,

Sing, for after this azure and golden morning their hour is not long.

Army Rules Draft Despite All Pledges

By DAVID LAWRENCE.

The extent to which the selective service machinery is dominated by the military, in direct violation of the spirit of the assurances given to the country that men would be selected for the armed services by civilians agencies of the Government in keeping with the democratic process, is evidenced by the testimony given a congressional committee.

Even the review boards which handle so-called presidential reviews are composed of military officers. The public has been told, for instance, that deferments for occupational or other reasons are handled by civilians and that appeals boards are composed of civilians and that the final review is by the President of the United States.

Actually the President doesn't see these cases. They are handled by a group of Army officers in the Selective Service headquarters and "recommendations" equivalent to final decisions are handed to Maj. Gen. Hershey, who acts in behalf of Mr. Roosevelt. The presidential review is purely a theory, and in a sense the language of the act is being disregarded. Not long ago a Supreme Court decision ruled that where a statute required a hearing by an official named in the law, the hearing function could not be delegated as it was judicial. Mr. Roosevelt could not, of course, review the cases before him or hold hearings, but he might well have designated Judge Rosenman or some other person in a civilian capacity to act in his name in accordance with the spirit of the law.

Hershey Testimony Cited.

The fact that Army officers rule the roost at Selective Service headquarters is disclosed by the testimony before a subcommittee of the House Committee on Appropriations in the last Congress. It ran in part as follows:

"Representative Hare, Democrat, of South Carolina: What is your total employment—in the department headquarters and in the field service?"

"Gen. Hershey: In the department we have a total of 1,371 personnel.

"How many personnel do you have in the field service?"

"In the field service we have 23,007."

"That does not include commissioned officers?"

"No, neither of these totals include the commissioned officers."

"How many commissioned officers do you have?"

"We have 553 commissioned officers. That figure includes the field and national headquarters."

"That figure is not included in your budget?"

"No, sir."

"Are they paid by the War Department?"

"Gen. Hershey—Yes."

The Selective Service Act provides that the President may at any time permit officers on the active or retired list of the Army, Navy or Marine Corps to perform functions for the Selective Service System, but specifically says they may not serve "on local boards, appeals boards or agencies of appeal."

But while local boards do not have Army officers, there are several Army men serving as State directors and issuing instructions to local boards and really passing judgment on their requests in connection with the operations of the law.

Army Judge and Jury.

The President on December 23, 1940, delegated authority to handle "presidential appeals" to Gen. Hershey, then transferred it on December 5, 1942, to Manpower Commission Chairman McNutt by executive order. He, in turn, re-delegated it to Gen. Hershey, who has set up a "board of review" consisting entirely of commissioned officers, who presumably get their pay from the War Department. While it is stressed that these men have no authority to make decisions, actually they do make them.

Thus does the Army act as judge and jury on the matter of deferments, and the aforesaid board of review does not permit any testimony to be taken from an employer nor does it grant any hearings. It is strictly a star-chamber affair such as the military mind naturally would impose.

That's one reason why industry has had such a labor turnover. The disruption of personnel on the West Coast in aircraft plants has grown to such lengths that it is referred to in the Baruch report which has thus far been suppressed. Secrecy is always absolutely essential to protect blunders.

Badoglio's Weakness Blamed—

By PERTINAX.

In competent military and political circles there is little disposition to question or impugn the good faith of Marshal Pietro Badoglio. In the course of the armistice negotiations, which were more complex and more involved than hitherto revealed in the press, King Victor Emmanuel and Marshal Badoglio told American and British leaders that as early as last February they had fully realized the hopelessness of the German cause.

They intended to do much earlier what they finally accomplished on July 25 and on September 3—ousting Mussolini and signing the armistice. They wanted and postponed their about-face on the calculation that the pressure of the Red armies would become more intense and prevent the German command from shifting troops southward. To throw off the mask and openly turn against the Nazis, they needed the protection of American and British arms, and maybe they complain now that this protection hasn't fulfilled their expectations. Observers on the spot, however, declare that they followed a consistent line all the way through, and prior to the negotiations.

Incidentally, it is disclosed that an American general went from Sicily to Rome to hasten the course of the armistice discussions. The son of Lord Beaverbrook, a major in the Royal Air Force, also made the journey. Unknown to the Germans, there was much coming and going between the Italian capital and Allied headquarters. Thus the Allied general staff had ample opportunity to investigate Italian affairs.

Badoglio Controls Few.

Today, in contrast, the fire curtain has been lowered. The British Minister at the Vatican, F. D'Arcy Osborne, is shut off from the outside world. Not one dispatch has been received from him during the last four days, and apparently his American colleague, Harold H. Tittman, does not fare better.

The whereabouts of Marshal Badoglio and presumably of the King are known today to the American and British governments, and this disposes of the rumor that they are playing false and trying somehow to evade the consequences of their reversal. It does reveal, though, that Marshal Badoglio, as head of the Italian government, is not able to assert effectively his authority beyond the districts under the occupation of the Allies and a strip of territory along the Adriatic coast line which the Germans didn't think worth their while to hold. In brief, Badoglio's call to the armed forces and the population does not seem to have impressed great numbers.

The response of the Italian fleet has by far been the most satisfactory result secured by him. The commander in chief of the main Italian squadron was on the battleship which was sunk off Corsica and he is believed to have gone down with her.

The land forces did not react so unanimously and resolutely. In Rome, some 100,000 Italian troops and 20,000 Germans were locked in battle, but the advantage rested with the latter. In Corsica the 400 Germans of the Luftwaffe ground crews, quartered on the island, were strengthened by German elements brought over from Sardinia, and are still there. Yet no less than two Italian divisions were recently reported to be also there. In the Balkans some 30 Italian divisions are surrendering their arms to Germans and Yugoslavs indiscriminately.

Heavy Traffic in Pass.

German forces are now in possession of practically the whole Italian Peninsula as far south as Naples. South of that area they have wrecked all lines of communication. For no other reason does Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery experience so much difficulty in rushing his army northward to join Gen. Mark W. Clark's hard-pressed contingents. Seven or eight Nazi divisions are at large in that part of the country.

In the area of the Po River no certain figures can be given as to the size of German effectives. Supplies amounting to 75,000 tons can be transported daily through the Brenner Pass. Northern Italy is the bulwark of anti-Fascism, and here the Germans must reckon with the resistance of the local population.

The trouble with Marshal Badoglio is that, although never on friendly terms with the Fascist regime, he, as a soldier, nevertheless, had to associate with its worst military ventures. He, therefore, is not in position to appeal to the masses. On that account his leadership is beset with limitations, even assuming that he unreservedly strives to redeem his pledged word.

And perhaps it is not so sure that he did not deliberately shut his eyes to what was being contrived by the Germans to rescue Mussolini. Was he afraid of making himself responsible for the trial and execution of the dictator and for the political and social repercussions which sooner or later such an extraordinary deed would have in Italy? On that subject, however, no information is available.

Mr. Hull and His Critics—

By RAYMOND MOLEY.

The critics of Secretary Hull learned on Sunday night that he is no need shaken by the wind. To examine with care his interpretation of American foreign policy is to feel the assurance that our external affairs are being conducted in the light of good traditions.

The critics will not be satisfied, of course. One of them has already said that Mr. Hull's speech merely rattled the bones of international law. This is like saying that Chief Justice Stone is rattling the bones of the Constitution. The bones of international law are not dead. To imply that they are is to say that all men of good will and intelligence have created in the international relations of 3,000 years vanishes at the first whiff of powder.

Wars do not mark the failure of international law; they merely indicate that there is a vast area of international relations which lies beyond the scope of international law. That area, Mr. Hull says, is being explored and, in building postwar arrangements, will be explored further in a nonpartisan conciliatory spirit.

It is clear that Mr. Hull's main purpose in his speech was to indicate that our diplomacy has labored to save lives in this war and to make easier the thrusts of military force. In wartime, that is what a State Department is for. If it should work to make Europe ever permanently, while war is still raging, the war itself might ultimately be very much more costly in lives and in time. If, for example, we seek to precipitate revolutions when we still have a chance to eliminate an enemy wholesale, we add to the agonies of both victor and vanquished. Mr. Hull makes the case—and the facts have amply proved his case—that in Spain, in Vichy and in North Africa, our diplomacy served well as a primary aid to military power.

In acting as such, Mr. Hull and his department have relied upon a tradition of international law which his critics would scrap whenever they dislike the internal affairs of another country—the traditional principle of recognition. That principle was discarded by Wilson in 1913, in the Mexican affair. It was set aside in our relations with Russia for 15 years. But it is still the only permanent workable policy under which international affairs can proceed.

With reference to Mr. Hull's attitude toward Russia, this writer has some basis for a judgment, for he served in the department during the months before the recognition of Russia in 1933. There was never any indication of prejudice toward Russia on Mr. Hull's part then, when, if ever, it was likely to manifest itself. Nor have events since that time revealed any such bias. To suggest that such a bias exists is to impair relations with Russia, which are now a matter of life or death.

There are many post-war questions about which there may be honest disagreement with Mr. Hull. But the country is fortunate in having had, since we entered the war, so steady a hand as his in the State Department.

Safeway Stores Answer OPA Motion on Complaint

The Safeway Stores, Inc., yesterday contended the United States Emergency Court of Appeals has jurisdiction to decide its complaint, filed August 27, against Price Administrator Brown in a meat price regulation case, despite the Price Administrator's failure to take specific action on a protest filed with OPA in the case.

The corporation's contentions are in answer to a motion filed by OPA asking the court to dismiss the complaint. Dismissal had been asked by OPA on the grounds the tribunal can only consider a complaint after the latter has denied a protest made by a complainant.

The Safeway Stores, Inc., however, contends that while the Price Administrator had not formally denied the protest to OPA, he had taken no specific action on it within the statutory limit of 30 days after the issuance of the regulation protested.

The complaint, which the OPA seeks to have dismissed, is against a protest made by the allegedly forced the corporation to reduce prices of meats to the extent of 10 per cent in its individual stores which did an annual business of more than $250,000 in 1942.

Wife Seeks Separation From Vanderbilt Heir

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Socially prominent Mrs. Claire Mapes Hatch, 22, yesterday filed an action in Supreme Court for separation from her husband, Rutherford Lewis Hatch, grandson of the late Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt.

Attorneys for Mrs. Hatch, a native of Birmingham, Ala., said she has asked for $100 weekly alimony in addition to counsel fees. In conformity with Supreme Court rules on marital actions, the papers were sealed.

The couple was married in December, 1942.

This Changing World—

By CONSTANTINE BROWN.

While the position of the American forces, supported by some British units, on the Salerno front is somewhat improved, it continues to be serious and gives a good deal of concern to the strategists in Washington. When the operations in the Naples area were planned it was realized that it would be no picnic.

There were two courses to choose from.

One was the slow method of moving northward methodically toward Rome with the British. The other was a landing in the Naples sector.

The first would have lost precious days, offering the Nazis all the time they needed to make their position in Northern Italy as powerful as their positions on the west coast of Europe.

The definitely risky operation around Naples presented the great advantage that, if successful, the Allied forces from the south and the west could push on to Rome and the Arno River before the end of the fall.

On the whole western coast of Italy Naples is the only port which is capable of providing large armies with all the necessary facilities. Had Naples fallen into our hands it would have enabled us to pour in all the men and supplies needed for a large army.

Nazis Had Superiority.

The Naples-Salerno operations were not undertaken without some misgivings. Gen. Eisenhower and his staff realized that if the Nazis managed to bring in large numbers of troops we might get a bloody nose. They relied, however, on the co-operation of the Italian people, who might have been able to sabotage the German lines of communications, and on the fact that when the attack was mapped intelligence reports showed that the Nazi force in that area did not exceed one division.

Whether the intelligence was faulty or the Germans were able to rush additional forces much quicker than we expected is undetermined.

The fact is that when the first waves of Gen. Clark's 5th Army began to land they were opposed by much superior German forces. It is probable that instead of our having a 2-to-1 superiority it was the enemy who had that advantage.

The German-Italian numerical superiority in the Sicilian campaign did not bother us since the Italians were ripe for surrender and they gave up enthusiastically. Unfortunately, in spite of their reverses, the Germans are not yet in that frame of mind and their troops are fighting with a fierceness and determination greater than in Egypt and in Tunisia.

The generalship of the German commanders also is far superior to that of the Italians and at least as efficient as ours. As in their previous successful campaigns, the German generals did not miss a bet.

Our air force continues to be overwhelmingly superior to the Nazis, but our bases are too far away to make it as efficient as it was in Tunisia or Sicily. The German air bases are much closer to the theater of operations and the Nazi planes have bothered us considerably.

Outcome Still in Doubt.

Although the roads and highways have been heavily bombed, the Germans appear to have been able to bring in reinforcements in sufficient number to make our situation on the Salerno front very difficult.

The British 8th Army under Gen. Montgomery has advanced northward without much opposition, because the Germans have withdrawn as fast as they could.

Communications between the east and west coasts of Italy are very bad. In their retreat the Nazis have blocked the few available roads with all kinds of devices. Thus while there is no intensive fighting except some skirmishes between the German rearguard and the British advanced units, we must not be too optimistic about the support the 8th Army can give to Gen. Clark's forces.

Fifty long miles separate the two forces, and the physical difficulties which so far have prevented a rapid advance by the British are likely to be enhanced.

According to military observers, the Nazis are likely to start a stiff resistance when the 8th Army arrives within about 30 miles of the junction.

The possibility that the 5th Army may be compelled to withdraw must not be entirely discounted.

In such event we would have to revert to the slower method of tackling the Nazis by operations from Southern Italy northward.

Before victory is won, we've got to build more, fight more and buy more War bonds. Buy at least a $100 bond during the Third War Loan above your regular bond buying.

Passes Credit to All Who Have Hit Axis

A man would have to be a blithering idiot with a capital B and a capital I not to realize the tremendous part Russia has played and is playing in the defeat of Germany.

Even those celebrated mental vacuum men who haven't enough sense to come in out of the rain would admit, even as the rain soaks them to the skin, that the democracies owe the men and women of Stalin's country a great debt.

But—and this comes from a man who loves Russia and the Russians so much that he once went so far as to try a slug of vodka and a turn at that Russian dance where you throw your feet out from under you and land most uncomfortably—the Russians are going a little too far when they claim that they were chiefly responsible for the finish of Italy as an Axis partner.

It's all right for the Russians to ask to share in the credit for the knocking out of Italy, but they needn't jump overboard with all their clothes on, and intimate that all the British and Americans contributed to Mussolini's downfall was a few generals to sign the capitulation papers.

After all, the British 8th Army isn't hay. Its hard-bitten little units hung on in Africa when it looked as if they were as lost on the continent as Livingstone ever was. And no one is going to tell me that Alexander and Montgomery are just a couple of Eaton boys who licked Rommel because they could get quick laundry service for their top hats in Cairo.

And what about the Americans under Patton and Clark and Eisenhower? Didn't they have something to do with Tunis and Sicily? Those tanks and guns and airplanes we had manned by our men didn't hurt, did they? Does Russia really believe that the Gen. Sherman and Grants and P-40s and Spits and Libes and Fords and Marauders and P-47s didn't lead to the collapse of the Fascist forces? Do they believe the British Commandos, the American Rangers and the paratroopers of both countries cut and chopped at the Germans and Italians with knives for butter and hearts to match?

Certainly the Russians' offensive helped the British and the Americans to get Italy out of the war. No one would deny that, but for Russia to take the entire credit is ridiculous and unsmart. Unsmart for this reason. We of the United Nations have been led to believe that this is a war of co-operation, of teamwork, of all the foes of Nazism pulling together.

Even if Russia's claims were true, how much smarter it would have been for the Russians to have given credit to the British and the Americans. If they had issued a congratulatory message, saying, in effect, "Thanks, pals," it would have been a great factor toward closer co-operation in the future. It would have enabled the British and Americans to stick their thumbs in their gulluses, poke out their chests a bit and say back to the Russians, "Thanks, pals, and soon we'll show you what some real G. I. fighting is."

In other words, the United States, England, Russia, China and all the others who have united under the banner of decency, are fighting a war together. It doesn't become Russia to start claiming credit for everything, magnificent as she has been.

Gen. Lewis Presents Lt. O'Farrell's Mother His Posthumous DSC

The Distinguished Service Cross, awarded posthumously to Second Lt. Rufus E. O'Farrell, Jr., for "extraordinary heroism in action in Tunisia last April," was presented yesterday to his mother, Mrs. Rufus E. O'Farrell, 1701 Park road N.W., by Maj. Gen. John T. Lewis, commanding general of the Military District of Washington. The ceremony took place in Gen. Lewis' office in the Pentagon Building.

Lt. O'Farrell's father, and a group of relatives, attended the ceremony. A native of Bloxitt, Miss., Lt. O'Farrell attended De Witt School, Fishburne Military Academy and the University of Maryland, where he was a member of the R. O. T. C. Active in university sports, he also was a member of Sigma Nu Fraternity and Scabbard and Blade, national honorary military organization.

Commissioned a Reserve officer in the infantry at the University of Maryland in September, 1942, Lt. O'Farrell was ordered immediately to active duty at Fort Benning, Ga. The citation accompanying the award reads in part: "Lt. O'Farrell was leading his platoon across open terrain in the assault on Gap. His men were subjected to heavy enemy machine-gun and mortar fire, but under his leadership they continued to advance until a new concentration planned them to the ground.

"Lt. O'Farrell was wounded, but continued to advance on a machine gun nest and demanded its surrender. When the demand was refused, he fired his rifle from the position. He received mortal wounds when his gun became jammed and he exposed himself in order to draw enemy fire. These gallant actions enabled his flank scouts to destroy the enemy gun and its crew and his platoon to gain its objective. In spite of his wounds he called his platoon sergeant, gave him his final instructions for continuing the attack, and refused to permit any of his men to stay behind to aid him."

Miss Lucy B. Russell To Be Buried Tomorrow

Funeral services for Miss Lucy B. Russell, 83, who died Tuesday at her home, 1809 Biggs place N.W., will be conducted at 2 p.m. tomorrow at the home. The Rev. Charles T. Warner will officiate. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Miss Russell, a native of Washington, was the daughter of Maj. William W. Russell of the Marine Corps. She moved to Rockville, Md., with her parents when she was a young girl and was educated in the schools of Rockville and the old Briarley Hall Seminary for Women at Poolesville, Md. She was employed by the War Department until her retirement in 1931.

She is survived by her sister, Mrs. Virginia Brewer of Rockville, and a brother, William W. Russell, former Minister to Colombia, Venezuela, the Dominican Republic and Thailand. He lives in Rockville and Washington.

Mrs. Armstrong, 93, Dies in Rockville

ROCKVILLE, Md., Sept. 16.—Mrs. Ellen S. Armstrong, 93, died at her home in Rockville yesterday of a paralytic stroke suffered last week. She was the widow of the Rev. Alfred O. Armstrong, who at the time of his death many years ago was pastor of the Rockville Methodist Church.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Rose A. Dawson of Rockville; a brother, Charles Stalnaker of Jasper, Ala.; three grandchildren, Mrs. I. William Hill, Chevy Chase, Md.; Miss Carter Dawson, Rockville, and Maj. J. Somervell Dawson, Jr., U.S.A., stationed at Fort Benning, Va.; a niece, Mrs. W. Russell Brewer, and a nephew, William Stalnaker, both of Cumberland, Md., and two great-grandchildren.

A native of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Mrs. Armstrong had lived in Rockville about 45 years. Her funeral services will be at the Rockville Methodist Church at 11 a.m. tomorrow. The Rev. John W. Rosenberg, pastor of the church, will officiate, assisted by the Rev. Dr. J. Forrest Fretzmann and the Rev. Frank Tyler. Burial will be in Rockville Union Cemetery.

Membership in Bund No Bar to Citizenship, Chicago Judge Rules

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Federal Judge William J. Campbell ruled yesterday that the German-American Bund was subversive and contrary to the principles of our Constitution, but that "mere membership in the bund in itself was not sufficient" to cancel naturalized citizenship.

He ruled that to denaturalize a bund member the Government must prove the nature and extent of each defendant's participation in bund activities and his knowledge of the bund's real purposes.

The ruling was contained in a three-page memorandum on proceedings in which the Government seeks to denaturalize nine persons, including Dr. Otto Willumeit, because of their alleged membership in the bund. The memorandum sets trial dates for the defendants from October 21 to December 1.

The denaturalization proceedings were consolidated in the spring, so that a ruling on the bund's character could be reached before going ahead with the separate trials of the nine defendants.

His memorandum declared: "The aims, purposes and organization of the German-American Bund and its predecessor organizations are subversive of the Government of the United States and contrary to the principles of our Constitution."

The court ruled that the bund, since its organization in Chicago on October 12, 1924, has been affiliated directly with the Nazi party in Germany and since the rise of Hitler to power, directly affiliated with the government of the German Reich.

The memorandum asserted the bund at present was continuing its activities as much as possible under the guise of local "singing societies," according to directions from Germany when the United States entered the war.

Defendants in the proceedings are Dr. Willumeit, under sentence in New York and Connecticut for espionage and violation of the Selective Service Act; his former secretary, Mrs. Irene Metz; Karl Herman Sautter, Friedrich Kiefer, Carl August Vogel, Hugo Johannes Luetche, Ernest Henry Scharf, Frank Alphonso Schoennagel and Frederick Ohrt.

More Aid Mapped For Soldiers' Children

By the Associated Press.
The House Appropriations Committee set legislative machinery in motion today to provide additional funds for infant and maternity care for dependents of servicemen.

Chairman Cannon called hearings for next Wednesday on a $20,000,000 appropriation to augment $5,500,000 previously appropriated to help the Labor Department's Children's Bureau provide for needy cases.

The new funds, Mr. Cannon said, probably will be limited to dependents of enlisted men only, as was the money previously advanced.

"We are investing this money in a future generation," Mr. Cannon told reporters. "It is but a small part of the obligation we have to our fighting men to take care of their dependents while they are away."

German Prisoner Asks About Axis Invasion of U. S.

By the Associated Press.
COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 16.—Gov. Olin D. Johnston said yesterday a German prisoner harvesting peanuts in Aiken County asked him several days ago about the "progress" of German troops "invading" the United States from the East Coast and Japanese from the West Coast.

Gov. Johnston who learned to speak German while with the American Army of Occupation on the Rhine after the World War said the prisoner not only believed that Axis armies had landed on the United States but that a German-Japanese victory was "only a question of time."

The Governor said Axis propaganda agencies had apparently convinced the prisoners that their soldiers were fighting winning battles in America.

"BACK THE ATTACK" 3rd WAR BOND DRIVE

Two Red Cross Girls From District 'Bring Luck' to Sicily

By THOMAS R. HENRY, Star Staff Correspondent.

WITH 7th ARMY, SICILY (By Mail)—The American Red Cross has just taken over one of the swankiest winter resorts in Southern Europe, the erstwhile exclusive beach club at Moncallo just outside Palermo, for the battle-weary soldiers of the 7th Army.

On lounges where three or four years ago, grand dukes and duchesses, barons and baronesses, lolled in luxurious ease now recline GIs with the dust of San Stefano and Troina hardly off their faces.

Palermo, hardly question one of the loveliest cities in Europe before the invasion remained off limits for troops until the end of the campaign. It now has been opened for limited numbers and is almost a paradise compared to the best they have known before overseas—the pirate dens which appear on maps as cities in North Africa.

But for the majority of soldiers even Palermo would have been a dreary place with its hordes of beggars and bitter poverty, had it not been for the foresightedness of the Red Cross which had its workers in the city within a day or so of its capture, preparing for the day when the recreation-hungry troops would pour in. The organization learned much from its experience in North Africa and here is making its best record to date.

The Mondello Club is its prize exhibit. It has sections for both enlisted men and officers, with individual dressing rooms for everybody. Six elaborately painted sailboats with gaily colored sails take parties for four cruises in the Mediterranean all afternoon and evening. Soldiers are brought in by the truckload every day.

The beach is one of the finest in Europe. Why bathing suits should be required is not clear. But the grand dukes used to wear them and the Red Cross saw no reason why GIs should be less dignified than grand dukes in their bathing. Besides the authorities are said to be a little fussy about nude bathing around a big city. The bathing suit problem was solved when a lot of Italian long woolen underwear was found in a captured war goods supply dump. Seamstresses were hired to cut off and hem the legs of the drawers and now there are about 1,000 sets of trunks for the soldiers.

Clubhouse Set Up.

In addition a fine clubhouse has been set up in the city. There will be an ice cream plant working night and day as soon as the Palermo city power system works regularly.

The Red Cross is maintaining regularly four men with each division and girl workers in each of the evacuation hospitals. It also is establishing a clubmobile service for the ground forces. In North Africa this was limited, largely through limitation of supplies, to the air forces.

Two Washington girls, Vera Reece of the King Smith School and Sally Stearns of 3121 Thirty-eighth street, N.W., have just arrived to operate these cars bringing supplies to the far-scattered troops.

Miss Reece and Miss Stearns left Washington in May and since then they say, have been casuals, depending on hitchhiking for their transportation and getting rations and billets wherever they could.

"It's such a change from the sheltered life of a city in America," says Miss Reece, "that the other seems like an old dream now."

"At any rate," says Miss Stearns, "we bring luck wherever we go. A town never has an air raid while we're in it—but always just before we get there or just after we leave. Some town ought to pay us to stay there until the end of the war."

Miss Reece was for two years secretary at the King Smith Art School. She left its employ last winter to begin service with the Red Cross, first taking courses in Washington and then beginning her overseas duty.

Miss Stearns is the niece of Mrs. Clifford H. Stearns of the Thirty-eighth street address.

Goss Blames Labor For Food Price Rise

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Labor "must bear the chief responsibility" for the price rise in food, Albert S. Goss, master of the National Grange, said today.

In a speech before the National Association of Food Chains, Mr. Goss said it doesn't make sense to place the whole blame "for the rise" on farmers and the food industry. "Labor must bear the chief responsibility for the rapid price rise," he said. "Since outbreak of hostilities in Europe, the labor cost per unit of industrial production has increased 64.5 per cent. Food prices have increased 36 per cent and the cost of living has increased 25 per cent.

"It doesn't make sense to place the whole blame on farmers and the food industry. Today we are paying 21 per cent of our income for food, compared with the 60 per cent spent in England, whose methods we are continually requested to follow."

Under what he termed "our cock-eyed ceiling-subsidy program," Mr. Goss said the Government is operating contrary to the laws of economics.

Navy Finally Identifies 'Praise the Lord' Source

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—The Navy made it official today and named a 35-year-old chaplain from nearby Haddonfield, N. J., as the man who first used the phrase "Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition!" during the attack on Pearl Harbor.

The chaplain, Lt. Comdr. Howell E. Forgy, was on his first visit home in three years and the 4th Naval District took the occasion to say formally that "the Navy Department officially confirms for the first time" that the phrase was Comdr. Forgy's. Its authorship has been widely disputed.

Comdr. Forgy, who once studied at Colorado School of Mines, was asked whether he'd also used any mine language during the attack. "I don't remember," he said, "but any one at Pearl Harbor that day might have cussed a little."

Colored Lawyer Nominated For New York Judgeship

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The Republican Executive Committee of New York County last night unanimously nominated Francis E. Rivers, colored, former Manhattan assistant district attorney, for justice to the City Court.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey Monday announced the interim appointment of Mr. Rivers until December 31 to fill a vacancy. The position pays $17,500 a year.

Mr. Rivers resigned as assistant district attorney yesterday. Democratic leaders were expected to nominate tonight an opposition candidate for the November election.

Mr. Rivers was the center of a widely publicized controversy last April when the American Bar Association failed to act on his nomination for membership. General Sessions Judge Jonah J. Goldstein, who nominated Mr. Rivers, and Arthur Garfield Hayes, director of the American Civil Liberties Union, resigned from the association in protest.

For a quick hot dinner... serve this fine meat dish often!

RECIPE: Ask your meat man for four 3/4-inch thick slices (about 3/4 lb.) of Armour's Star Old Fashioned Loaf. Fold each slice around a spoonful of your favorite bread dressing and fasten with a toothpick. Bake the rolls thirty minutes and serve with buttered carrot strips. This thrifty dish takes less than one red stamp per serving... yet it provides satisfying and tasty nourishment for your family.

Star Old Fashioned Loaf is a tastefully seasoned blend of fine beef and pork... made by Armour... giving you the same quality meats you choose for loaves you make at home. That's why ready-to-eat Star Old Fashioned Loaf really tastes like home made!

Star Old Fashioned Loaf saves you time and work and is easy on your red points. For it's baked when you get it, so there's no shrinkage... no waste. You can get the exact number of slices needed for your family... fry or broil them... or get a whole piece to heat in the oven. Remember, too, this loaf makes hearty cold sandwiches that keep their juicy freshness in the lunch box!

The more money you lend your Government the more planes, tanks and ships our country can turn out—and the shorter the war is going to be. "Back the attack with War Bonds."

Three Army Flyers Killed In Crash of Glider

By the Associated Press.

FORT BRAGG, N. C., Sept. 16.—The public relations office at Pope Field, troop carrier command base here, said yesterday that three members of the crew of a glider training plane were killed Tuesday when the ship crashed after cutting loose from its tow plane.

The dead were: Flight Officer Kenneth W. Benson, Auburn, N. Y.; Flight Officer Vernon J. O'Fallon, Hutchinson, Minn.; and Sgt. John R. Laughlin, San Francisco.

The public relations office said the long-winged craft went into a loop shortly after cutting loose from the tow plane and crashed into a wooded area near the field.

Eight Army Officers From D. C., Arlington Win Promotions

Six Washington men and two from Arlington have received temporary promotions, a War Department announcement revealed today.

The men and their new ranks are Maj. Robert H. Bates, 3922 Ingomar street N.W.; Capt. George V. Thompson, 3832 Twenty-sixth street N.E.; Capt. Herman W. Luth, 1419 R street N.W.; Capt. Francis E. Dugan, 3901 Connecticut avenue N.W.; First Lt. Paul B. McGhee, 2101 New Hampshire avenue N.W.; and Charles R. Link, 2222 Q street N.W.; Capt. Francis W. May, 3931 North Fourth street, Arlington, and First Lt. Dolph Hays, 1762 North Rhodes street, Arlington.

In Research Branch. Maj. Bates, 32, is stationed here with the research and development branch of the Quartermaster Corps, and has had experience on scientific expeditions. He came here two years ago to work as a civilian in the Army and was later commissioned.

Maj. Bates.

During the summer of 1942 he was executive officer of an Army expedition to Mt. McKinley, which tested various types of emergency equipment for the Air Force. He also participated in six expeditions to Alaska and one to India for the National Geographic Society, the American Geographic Society, and the American Alpine Club. He is a Harvard graduate and a native of Philadelphia.

Capt. Thompson, 40, is stationed here in the Adjutant General's office. Before being commissioned a first lieutenant in January 1943, he was employed by the Federal Power Commission. A native of Maryland, he spent most of his life in the District. Before joining the PFC, he worked for the Agriculture Department and the Registration Administration.

Capt. Luth, 43, also is stationed in the Adjutant General's Department here. Before his entrance into the Army on December 7, 1942, he was an assistant superintendent in the Division of Motor Vehicle Service in the bureau of the fourth assistant post office general.

Mail Clerk in 1926. A native of Long Prairie, Minn., Capt. Luth came here in 1920 and joined the city post office as a mail clerk. He later transferred to the national office. From 1930 to 1937 he attended Georgetown and National Universities, receiving his degree from the latter institution and passing the bar in 1937.

Lt. McGhee is stationed at Palm Beach, Fla. Before entering the Army in May, 1942, he was with the Washington Bureau of the Chicago Sun.

A native of New York, he has lived in the District since childhood. Lt. Link, 24, is in the Air Forces. He entered the Army in September, 1941. He is a native of Raleigh, N. C., and has one brother, Staff Sergt. John C. Link, who is stationed at Roosevelt Field, Long Island.

Heiress Seeks Release From Mental Hospital

By the Associated Press. PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—Cecilia Grant McCormick, Pittsburgh steel heiress, is seeking release from a Philadelphia mental hospital in which she charges she is unjustly confined.

A habeas corpus writ on her behalf, issued by Presiding Judge James Gay Gordon of Common Pleas Court No. 2, is returnable next Wednesday, when a hearing is scheduled in the judge's chambers. The writ was served yesterday on Dr. Earl Bond, acting superintendent of the Pennsylvania Hospital's department of mental and nervous diseases.

Earlier, a Philadelphia attorney, William A. Gray, charged in court that Miss McCormick has been held a virtual prisoner at intervals for 14 years.

Mr. Gray said letters from Miss McCormick were "intelligently written" and appeared to have been penned "by a person who is sane." Formerly a popular member of Pittsburgh society, Miss McCormick, now 31, is the adopted daughter of the late John S. McCormick, head of a steel foundry business which is still operated.

First Woman Nurses Land in Salerno Area

WITH THE 5th ARMY IN ITALY. Sept. 16.—The first American Army nurses to debark on European soil since 1917 landed in the Salerno sector of Italy yesterday afternoon and immediately went to work in a field hospital.

Garbed in G. I. steel helmets and wearing fatigue uniforms with long trousers, they first attracted little attention until one soldier noticed them wading through the water to the beach and cried, "Wow, women are here."

Fifty-seven nurses were in the first contingent to land. Sales of coffee pulp, once considered a waste, are mounting in Mexico.

Wonder Bread Publishes $1,000⁰⁰ Guarantee of Vitamin Tests

$1,000 GUARANTEE

The numerous analyses we have made of representative loaves of Wonder White Bread show in every case a Vitamin B₁ content equal to or in excess of the minimum requirement of Vitamin B₁ as recommended for bread by the Federal Food and Drug Administration. We will pay $1,000 to any charitable organization named by the citizen of the United States first to disprove the above statement prior to December 31, 1943.

The Bakers of Wonder Bread

TODAY EVERYONE KNOWS you need all the vitamins you can get in available foods. That is why vitamins have been added to bread. But many women know that precious food vitamins are lost in cooking and baking. In bread baking the loss of Vitamin B₁ can be from 6% to as much as 29%, as shown in recent tests. "So how can you know what you are getting?" women ask. Of course, no one can guarantee the future but Wonder Bakers can and do guarantee the accuracy of Vitamin B₁ tests that have been made as stated above. Our laboratory method has been checked with 32 other representative food laboratories. Our tests this year show the average Vitamin B₁ content to be 15% more than the minimum requirements for bread set forth by the Federal Food and Drug Administration. These tests will continue. While these analyses have been limited in their scope, we believe, because of our standardized method, that they are representative of all Wonder Bread. This means that we are spending time and money to protect you from baking loss of vitamins in Wonder Bread. Serve this richer, better bread today and every day for its generous food value and its precious vitamins. You'll be glad you did!

Cannery Union Head Says Troops Offered To Pay Labor Dues

By the Associated Press.
TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 16.—The business manager of a Cannery Workers' Union local, commenting on an allegation that the union had "compelled" soldiers working as "volunteer" employees in South Jersey tomato canneries to pay union dues, said yesterday the soldiers had offered to pay the dues "and everybody was satisfied."

Leon Schachter, an official of Meat and Cannery Workers' Union, Local 56 (AFL), asserted the allegation was "a smear against union labor."

Herbert W. Voorhees, president of the New Jersey Farm Bureau, told a crowd of 4,000 at the New Jersey State Fair here that he was "shocked beyond words to learn that when a contingent of soldiers reported for work at a certain South Jersey cannery, the management was instructed to make the usual union dues deductions from the cannery pay envelope of each one."

Mr. Voorhees, who operates a general farm at Hopewell, also is national president of Free Farmers, Inc., which has combated efforts of John L. Lewis to enroll in the United Mine Workers of America the dairy farm operators of the Northwestern States.

Soldiers from Fort Dix helped to relieve a labor shortage at the canneries during the peak of the tomato processing season.

"We farmers are proud of the job they did for us," Mr. Voorhees said, "but when we were informed that these boys were compelled to pay union dues, we are not too proud of the union organization which collected these dues."

Mr. Schachter confirmed that "several hundred" soldiers paid union dues of 25 cents per week for a period extending over two to five weeks during the summer. He said 25 cents was the temporary workers' rate, as compared with a rate of $2 a month for permanent workers.

CIO Didn't Ask Dues.
He contended the collection was required under a closed-shop agreement the union had with the P. J. Ritter Co. and Edgar P. Hurff canneries. Approximately 75 soldiers were employed at each cannery during the peak of the labor shortage, he said, and were paid union wages ranging from 50 to 60 cents an hour which, Mr. Schachter asserted, "gave them a little extra spending money which they were glad to get."

He said the only objection to the collection of dues from soldiers which he had heard was "from the gentleman making this speech to some farmers at the fair today."

"He doesn't represent the cannery business at all," said Mr. Schachter. Meanwhile the State CIO announced that Local 80 of the United Cannery and Agricultural Workers (CIO) had not required the payment of union dues by soldiers working at the Campbell Soup Co. plant in Camden, the State's largest cannery.

Many employees of the Campbell plant are members of the local, but said President Irving Abramson of the State CIO, "at that plant there is not even a closed shop, so that even civilians who are not members of the union are not required to pay dues."

Harry A. Bryant Dies; Kansas Bank President

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Harry A. Bryant, president of the Parsons (Kan.) Commercial Bank and past president of the Kansas State Chamber of Commerce and Kansas Bankers' Association, died of a heart attack here Tuesday night.

Mr. Bryant was attending the annual convention of the American Bankers' Association here. He long had been an advocate of the dual system of State-chartered and Federal-chartered banks.

Judge Suggests Ice Cream to End Family Squabble

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Harold R. Peters, 72, pointed his finger at his two young step-grandsons in Municipal Judge John R. McSweeney's court and said:

"They put crumbs on a piece of paper and when my chickens try to eat they set fire to the paper. Another thing, they put black paint on my chickens and dig up my plants."

Peter Mihovjevich, 33, a machinist, father of the two boys, who was in court charged with disorderly conduct as a means of airing the family difficulties, offered no comment.

"I suggest," said Judge McSweeney to Mr. Peters, "that you try an ice cream cone now and then."

Mr. Peters responded immediately with a dime for each grandson, left the courtroom with them and their father.

Balloon Barrage Crews Landed With Salerno Assault Forces

By the Associated Press.
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Sept. 16.—RAF balloon barrage crews clambered ashore with American and British assault forces on the beaches in the Salerno area of Italy to give the ground troops and barges immediate protection from low-flying bombers, an RAF statement related yesterday.

"One detachment landed with their balloons in the Gulf of Salerno before daylight on invasion day," the statement said, "and waded ashore through 3½ feet of water carrying their balloons, which they planted on the beach in a wave of heavy machine gun and mortar fire."

The balloons were brought in at 200 feet altitude and then raised. "We had hardly set foot on the sand when the German guns and mortars opened up on us and the balloons," said the British leader of one of the first detachments. "One of the balloons was shot down, but a new one was sent up almost immediately. We all lay down flat on the sand and watched the battle between the coastal guns and the salvos of a destroyer."

The balloon crews were only 100 yards from a powerful German gun. A boat approached and a naval officer shouted: "Is that the enemy on your left?" The balloon men replied: "You bet it is. Can you clear him out?" A few minutes later a broadside from a warship knocked the gun out.

Then the gun crew came out to surrender. The balloon men rounded up 20 prisoners and took them to landing craft.

RAF service Commandos also landed soon after the assault wave, ready to service Allied aircraft as soon as an airfield could be captured and put into operation.

Gen. Crawford Shifted To European Supply Post

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, Sept. 16.—Maj. Gen. Robert W. Crawford, who has been in command of United States Army Service Forces in the Middle East, has been named deputy commander and chief of staff of the supply services for the Army's European theater of operations, it was announced last night.

Gen. Crawford succeeds Brig. Gen.

William J. Weaver, who has been named deputy field commander of the supply services, the announcement said.

Col. Royal B. Lord, former director of the Bureau of Public Relations in the War Department and former chief of operations for the Board of Economic Warfare in Washington, has been named chief of operations for the supply services in the European theater.

The best way to root for victory is to dig deep into that pocketbook or purse and buy War savings stamps.

Arthur C. Block Dies; Was Building Contractor

Arthur C. Block, 58, native of Washington and a building contractor here for many years, died yesterday after a long illness at his home, 206 Franklin avenue, Silver Spring, Md.

Mr. Block operated a private contracting business until about five years ago when ill health forced him to retire.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs.

Leah Block; a son, Capt. Charles A. Block, with the Army overseas, and a sister, Mrs. Helen E. Seagle.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a.m. tomorrow at the Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street N.W.

Huge Power Reserve
Even when plants now under construction are completed, the hydroelectric power resources of Szechwan Province, China, will be producing only a small per cent of that region's possible resources, a survey discloses.

Before victory is won, we've got to build more, fight more, and buy more War Bonds. Buy at least a $100 bond during the Third War Loan above your regular bond buying.

Elderly Woman's Suicide Laid to Ration Puzzle

By the Associated Press.
GETTYSBURG, Pa., Sept. 16.—Miss Fannie Rager, 76, was found hanged in her home here Tuesday and Coroner C. G. Crist said she committed suicide because she was unable to fill out a kerosene ration application.

A neighbor told the coroner Miss Rager had been asking permission for several days to help her with the application.

On her dress was pinned a note written on an envelope containing the application. It said:

"My dear Lord, forgive me. I thought I could get some one to fill it out for me. I had laid it away. Bury me at Appler's Church."

War Zone Party Needs Baseball's Regular Guys

Probably no other sport ever will be presented the opportunity to entrench itself so firmly in American hearts as baseball when its stars head toward the Pacific theater of war to entertain servicemen. It could be the most significant sports story of our era. It also could be a woeful bust unless those ball players work at the job of making themselves popular when they get there.

Baseball players for the first time will be coming down off their pedestals and mingling with the mob that made them. Most players are regular fellows, but some are conceited, stupid oafs who have lost the sense of perspective simply because they own the ability to wallop a baseball across considerable territory or throw a baseball from here to there in a hurry.

They'll be rubbing elbows with toward home warships that they were when they climbed aboard a ship headed for Hades. They'll be talking to youngsters who realize at the moment it's more vital to know the niceties of tossing a hand grenade than firing a baseball.

They'll be eating and sleeping with boys and men who don't want to like them. Those players will have the opportunity to emerge from that experience more popular than ever if they work at it, but merely playing baseball won't be enough.

Good Fellows Needed

Baseball diamonds where the stars will be playing probably won't be conducive to good baseball, but that won't matter much to the servicemen if before and after games they can shake the hand of or talk to Joe Gordon, Charley Keller, Spud Chandler, Mort Cooper, Billy Herman or Stan Musial and come away with the impression that they're good guys.

"There will be many times on this baseball tour," said Joe Cronin, manager of the Boston Red Sox, last night at Griffith Stadium, "when a player, manager or coach will find himself sitting on the bed of some wounded soldier talking baseball to just one lonesome boy, but making that one boy extremely happy by doing just that. The fellows who make that trip should have personality as well as playing ability."

Cronin Helped Game

"It was the Red Sox' idea that I mingle as much as possible with individuals rather than concentrate on talking to groups," said Cronin, "and it was a great idea. I sat on the beds of wounded soldiers and tried to tell them whatever they wanted to know in the way of sports."

Nats, Yanks Expected to Dominate Pacific War Zone Squad

Case, Johnson, Early, Wynn Held Eligible For Long Jaunt

The Nats and Yankees probably will dominate the 18-man American League squad which will be dispatched to the Pacific war zone to battle National League all-stars for entertainment of servicemen, with four members of each team likely to be selected.

George Case, Bob Johnson, Jake Early and Early Wynn or Dutch Leonard are Nats who figure to be in the running for berths, while Bill Dickey, Joe Gordon, Charley Keller and Spud Chandler probably will represent the Yankees.

Outfielder Case and Catcher Early played the entire game for the American League in the annual All-Star game at Philadelphia in July. The winning pitcher was Leonard, while Johnson saw service in the outfield for one inning.

Versatility in Bob's Favor

On a small squad, though, Johnson's value is increased, since he has played left field, third base and first base for the Nats this season. The cast of the clubs probably will include two catchers, five outfielders, six infielders and five pitchers.

Wynn since has supplanted Leonard as the Nats' leading pitcher, having captured the title of the week's Best Newcomer, one of baseball's more colorful characters, will be unable to make the trip.

Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis, who returned to Chicago yesterday after coming here for the announcement of the tour by Army officials, said there was a suggestion that each club in both leagues be represented on the squads, but that it would not necessarily be the case.

Shirley Hailed as School Sports Head

New Acting Director's Wide Experience Is Big Help in Job

By GEORGE HUBER.

J. Dallas Shirley, new acting head of the Department of Health and Physical Education of Washington public schools, is a man with ideas and ability who brings to his new post a thorough background and knowledge gained first as a pupil and athlete and later in numerous administrative and teaching capacities. Today he was being hailed as a good man for the job.

In recommending his appointment, which was approved yesterday by the Board of Education, Robert L. Haycock, acting superintendent of schools, said:

"In addition to being a successful teacher, Mr. Shirley has demonstrated exceptional ability and tact in handling assignments. Pupils, teachers and parents like him. His philosophy of education and his ability in organization and administration should make him a strong integrating force and an effective temporary head of the Department of Health and Physical Education."

Approval is unanimous.

The board was unanimous in accepting Shirley as successor to Hardy L. Pearce, who, earlier this summer, entered the Navy as a lieutenant.

Shirley is known best to the sports public as a colorful and competent basketball official, but he has handled many other athletic and recreational jobs with marked ability. He has served as a member of the administrative staff of the District Recreation Department and recently completed a season as supervisor of activities for the city. He was teacher of health and physical education at Alice Deal Junior High, for five years and last year served in the same capacity at Eastern High, where he also was basketball coach and chairman of interhigh football.

He likewise has coached various swimming teams and served as a swimming meet official.

Was All-High Basketer.

A graduate of Eastern High, Shirley was an all-high basketball player in 1930 and 1931. He played three years of varsity basketball at George Washington, where he was graduated in 1936 with a bachelor of science degree. He later took several graduate courses at G. W. in administration, supervision and health and physical education.

In his high school work, Shirley has demonstrated a preference for good balance between competitive athletics, both interhigh and intramural, and classroom gymnasium work in physical conditioning. He is a strong believer in competition, but not to the point where it offers athletic training to only a few outstanding boys at a cost of less training for those who possibly need it more.

Hi-Skors Top Bowlers In Ladies' Loop Start

Hi-Skor, defending champion, got off to a 2-1 win over Rosslyn as the Ladies' District League opened its 19th bowling season last night. Bling Moe's 131 and 350 led the invading titleholders at Rosslyn Bowling Center.

May Diehl bagged top-set honors with 354 as Ice Palace whitewashed Red Circle at Lucky Strike. Anacostia garnered team highs of 593 and 1,856 in a 2-1 victory over Bethesda. Takoma was a 2-1 winner over Arcadia and Lafayette, last season's runner-up, nicked Rendezvous for the odd game.

At Arcadia, King Pin swept Columbia.

Ted Bieber was top man as Arlington County League opened last night at Rosslyn with his scores of 153 and 416, which enabled Arlington Cleaners to dust off Arlington Trust.

Twenty teams of men and eight of women will take the Lucky Strike Runways Saturday night at 7:30 when the Building Trades League, under the direction of Ernie Fontana, opens its third season.

Talbert Bows Clarendon Five Into District Loop Lead Tie

Deadlocked with Lafayette for first place in the District League pennant chase with six games won against no losses, the champion Clarendon team today owes its standing mostly to the anchor rolling by Capt. Jack Talbert that led to victory over Lucky Strike.

Talbert needed a double-header strike to win the first game in a rolloff last night at Clarendon and he was equal to the occasion. Ollie Pacini, Lucky Strike anchorman and captain, helped to set the stage for the plucky veteran's timely wallop when his last-box spare count knotted the score at 578 in the regulation period.

It was easy sailing for Clarendon in the next two games as it climaxed a 1928 set with a season record game of 686. Talbert fired an even 400, his second straight. For six games his average is 135-6. Tony Santini's 376 led the invaders' 1,756 tally.

Turf Juvenile Picture Further Scrambled as Alorter Wins

The 1943 2-year-old racing picture was scrambled more than ever today.

The $15,000-added 6½-furlong Cowdin Stakes, which was expected to clarify the picture, instead found the odds-on favorite, Henry Lungtitt's Professor Lee, and John Marsch's highly regarded Occup, finishing fifth and seventh at Aqueduct yesterday.

The winner, over a sloppy track, was A. C. Ernst's Alorter, a 17-to-1 shot, which came from next to last place to nip Mrs. Helene Miller's 47-to-1 shot, Ogham, by a head. Comdr. Harry Guggenheim's Bellwether, at 28-to-1, was third.

Alorter, a bay son by The Porter and Sun Bijur, was overlooked in the betting despite the fact he was three-time stake winner on the Chicago tracks with one of his triumphs over the topweighted Occup.

Alorter ran the distance in 1:18½ and earned $15,250.

Tipped to D. C. Rules, Dorazio Points for Clash With Hart

Jimmy Wilson, handler of Heavyweight Gus Dorazio, wants an explanation of the District point-scoring system for boxing to avoid running into the same sort of trouble he encountered the last time his charge fought here. Gus then mixed with Joe Baksi at Uline Arena, with Baksi getting the decision, although it generally was agreed that Dorazio won the greater number of rounds.

Wilson cried so loud and long that he was suspended by the District Boxing Commission and Dorazio's manager, Frankie Palermo, stated emphatically he never would let Dorazio fight here again. All now is forgiven, however, and next Monday night Gus will meet Al Hart in a 10-rounder at Griffith Stadium.

The local scoring system, Wilson has learned, gives the winner of a round 10 points and the loser 1 to 9 points, depending on how close he was. In an even round each fighter gets 10 points. A foul takes off 2 points, but does not necessarily cost the boxer the round. The man with most points at the finish is winner.

Dorazio and Hart are working daily in public at the Ahearn gym on Ninth street, Baksi at 2:30 and Hart at 7 o'clock.

Allied Troops Tighten Grip on Salerno With Nazi Retreat Indicated

led withdrawals from the wedge they had driven into the Salerno beachhead earlier this week, and dispatches from Allied headquarters said American and British troops were holding like a rock in the face of increasingly savage German attacks.

Wes Gallagher, Associated Press war correspondent, said the battle was still at a critical stage, however, with the terrific fighting raging back and forth under the roar of 16-inch guns from British battleships.

Mr. Gallagher said the 5th Army opposed equally of Americans and British, was now the largest Allied force engaged in a single battle since the Mediterranean campaign began.

"On the 5th Army front, our troops have strengthened their hold on the beaches," the earlier communique from Allied headquarters announced.

Reinforcements continue to arrive. "Naval and air support is playing a great part in assisting the consolidation."

"Eighth Army troops have reached Eboli and are pushing north." Front line reports said Gen. Clark personally inspected all forward positions along the 27-mile bridgehead and told American and British troops they must "hold on at all costs."

"There must be no falling back." "Nazi Acknowledge Great Strength." After trumpeting a false victory claim that the Allies were fleeing the Salerno invasion beaches, the Berlin radio today acknowledged that the numerical strength of American-British forces under Gen. Clark was "far greater than had been originally believed."

"A blistering taste of Allied fire power was said to have dampened the enemy's ardor for tank thrusts, and the Germans were reported digging in on the mountain slopes. At least 20 blacked-out tanks dotted the plain in one section alone."

"As in the previous 24-hour period, all aircraft in the Northwest African Air Forces once again blasted German front-line positions and communications, particularly in the Eboli area, about 16 miles southeast of Salerno."

The entire Allied air force thus joined the struggle for the second straight day and hurled hundreds of tons of explosives on the German positions with earth-shaking barrages.

Exploit Advantage. "With unchallengeable control of the sea the Allies exploited the advantage to the utmost by moving their mobile naval batteries up close to the beaches and hurling tons of steel at the Germans. The British battleships Varing and Warspite joined in the bombardment."

Casualties in the Salerno battle have been the heaviest of any in the Mediterranean fighting. At least 10 German divisions had been identified in the action and more were being brought up. It was probable that as many as five had been employed in the effort to smash the Allied grip.

The headquarters communique had nothing further to report of the British force which landed at Taranto and sliced off the Italian heel with the capture of Brindisi and Bari in a flanking drive on the east side of the peninsula. These troops were believed to have cut out through the lower backbone of the Apennines, however.

A DNB broadcast from Berlin said German troops had stormed Persano, at the mouth of the Sele River, indicating a claim to the splitting of the Allied front in the Salerno area. Casualties were reported to be 700 prisoners taken, the broadcast declared.

The German communique made no such claim, but declared "landing heads were further narrowed."

Nazi Report May Be Dead. "When storming Altavilla, Americans lost numerous dead and prisoners," the communique said, adding that the German Air Force destroyed an 8,000-ton transport and damaged 11 more ships of the landing fleet.

The German International Information Bureau, in a propaganda broadcast, asserted that Allied shipping losses in the Gulf of Salerno from September 8, the first day of operations, until Tuesday totaled 20 merchantmen and 15 landing craft, eight destroyers, five destroyers, 99 transports, tankers and freighters damaged.

Stressing that the 5th Army was composed equally of Americans and British and that there would be no attempt to make this either an exclusively British or American show, a headquarters spokesman said:

"It would like to emphasize that this Salerno attack always was considered a hazardous enterprise and that fighting was expected. The element of surprise was missing and from the first day the fighting has been furious."

The Germans were rushing all available troops to the front despite the terrific Allied air bombardment which was blasting the whole area with bombs and the heavy ezing Italian guns and munitions to throw into the fray.

Daring Tactics Employed. Americans and British, on the other hand, were using some of the most daring tactics of the war and accepting "suicide" assignments as a matter of course, headquarters reports said.

Still weak in the air, the Germans were unable to meet the Allied air armadas thrown over the bridgehead. The Allies lost four planes yesterday while shooting down five of the enemy.

Lt. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz's air headquarters said the daily bomb tonnage deluging the Germans in the Salerno area was "vastly greater than any previous effort in the Mediterranean," including the 1,200 tons dropped on Rome in the first raid on the huge Pantelleria airfield.

The big air assault was meeting almost no resistance, with the flyers reporting very little antiaircraft fire over the battle area, indicating the Germans had not yet had time to bring up their heavy antiaircraft batteries and were forced to engage them against American and British troops rushing up from the beaches.

The fierce fighting around Salerno had tapered off to some extent yesterday and Gen. Clark took advantage of the lull to reorganize and reinforce his lines.

'Never Any Thought' Of Allied Evacuation, Stimson Declares

By the Associated Press.

The position of the Allied troops in the battle of Salerno is serious, Secretary of War Stimson said today, but "our commanders are confident."

Describing the struggle critical of the Allies as one of the most critical battles in the Mediterranean campaign, Mr. Stimson said reinforcements and additional supplies were reaching the Allied forces, now reported to have consolidated their beachhead and to be making progress.

"There has never been any thought of evacuation," the Secretary declared.

So far, he said, the forces on both sides have been about evenly matched numerically. The Germans have the advantage of interior communication lines, enabling them to bring up reinforcements and supplies more quickly than the Allies.

The Germans also probably have a preponderance of tanks and heavy equipment, he said.

On the other hand, he said, the American and British forces under Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark have definite air superiority, handicapped somewhat because the planes have to fly a considerable distance, and a distinct asset in their ability to employ naval gunfire from Allied warships against enemy positions in the hills around the beachhead.

The heavy opposition encountered in the Salerno area was expected, Mr. Stimson continued, and constituted a risk undertaken deliberately because the prospects of success warranted it.

Further to the south, he said, the British and Canadian troops under Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery have seized virtually all of Southern Italy and are advancing northward in an extraordinary rate which may shortly bring the entire position to influence the battle at Salerno.

Montgomery Court Curb Approved by Attorneys

By the Associated Press.

Unanimous approval of a recent Montgomery County Circuit Court ruling restricting nonresident attorneys from filing pleadings or appearing before the court unless associated with members of the Circuit Court bar was given last night by the Montgomery County Bar Association.

Association members said interpretations of the ruling by outside lawyers were "inaccurate" and "unjustified," and pointed out that a similar but more drastic ruling applied to the District.

Officers elected last night include John E. Oxley of Rockville, president; James H. Pugh of Chevy Chase, vice president; Emma B. Waldrop of Silver Spring, secretary, and John R. Reeves of Bethesda, treasurer.

Directors named were Ralph S. Shure of Takoma Park, Ben G. Wilkinson, Jr., Silver Spring, and Clifford A. Robertson, Rockville.

Nazi division before them, covered some 25 miles Tuesday and 15 miles yesterday, in spite of enemy mines and demolitions. However, considerable rough terrain obstructs their advance.

Berlin dispatches to the Swedish press quoted a German military commentator as saying that the situation at Salerno would change radically if Gen. Clark could hold his bridgehead until Gen. Montgomery's arrival.

The Dagens Nyheter's correspondent there was only a small Nazi force in the south trying to block Gen. Montgomery's push.

Italian Radio Reports Suicide Of Cavallero, Ex-Chief of Staff

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The German-controlled Italian news agency reported today in a Rome broadcast that Marshal Ugo Cavallero, former chief of staff, had committed suicide.

Marshal Cavallero, who resigned his staff post last January, was reported arrested by the Badoglio government after the fall of Mussolini. A German broadcast only last Monday said he had been freed by the Nazis.

The Stefani broadcast today declared that the marshal, "not being able to bear the burden of dishonor which was blasted upon his country, has committed suicide."

Known as the "businessman-soldier," Marshal Cavallero, who was 63 years old, had divided his time in recent years between the army and large steel interests.

The Berlin radio reported today that Mussolini, acting as head of the new Fascist "government" in the Venetia Division, "employed in the Northern Italy, had named Lt. Gen. Renato Ricci as commander of 'voluntary militia for national security.'"

Ricci is a former vice president of the Fascist Party and also served as minister of guilds during the Mussolini regime. He was one of the Fascist leaders reported arrested after Mussolini left the premiership.

The dispatch, presumably sent from Rome through the German telephone and telegraph censorship, said the rationing offered the Italians were "tripled and quadrupled" over the usual Italian army ration and the pay 10 times better.

This, it was said, had "played a great part" in "increasing the num-

Italians Reported Given Choice in Joining Nazis

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, Sept. 16 (AP)—A Rome dispatch to the Spanish press said last night the Germans had given Italian soldiers their choice of joining "the National Fascist" army as allies with the same pay and rations as German soldiers or going to a camp for disarmed soldiers near Tivoli, 20 miles northeast of Rome.

The dispatch, presumably sent from Rome through the German telephone and telegraph censorship, said the rationing offered the Italians were "tripled and quadrupled" over the usual Italian army ration and the pay 10 times better.

Allies Again Throw All Available Planes Into Salerno Battle

By the Associated Press.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Sept. 16.—The Allied air command threw every available fighter and bomber into the battle for the Salerno bridgehead for the second successive day yesterday and last night.

The second day of this record aerial assault found Flying Fortresses assuming the role of mobile long-range artillery in close support of the ground troops, spraying bombs with deadly precision. Communications, supply dumps and soldiers only a short distance behind the front line in the sector where German armored troops have been attacking the American 5th Army.

Eboli Road Junction—only 9 miles inland from the 5th Army's landing beaches—was the focal point of the attack as American medium and light bombers and dive-bombers carried out an unceasing dawn-to-dusk assault and RAF bombers and American Mitchells kept up the pounding all through the night.

Smoke and flame spouted thousands of feet when bombs from American B-26 Marauders hit an enemy munitions or fuel dump near Eboli Junction, after an earlier wave of Marauders caused a similarly large explosion in a nearby area.

Troops and Transport Blasted. The attack continued on into the afternoon and crewmen saw fragments of an enemy motor transport hurled through the air when the raiders caught the Germans attempting to hide their vehicles.

Nazi troops, as well as their dumps and transport, were unable to escape the devastating aerial blows. American A-38 dive bombers destroyed 47 motor vehicles and damaged at least 13 others when they criss-crossed over a German bivouac area with machine guns wide open. The pilots saw more than 1,000 troops fleeing for cover and many of them were killed or wounded.

The same A-38 group managed to block three roads with bomb hits, destroyed a bridge, strafed several big, six-wheeled German vehicles loaded with troops and blew up a supply dump near Plierno.

As during the preceding day, far more than 2,000 sorties were flown and an official said that the tonnage rained on the Germans was "vastly greater than anything ever dropped on a single target area before in this war theater. It has been vastly greater than the tonnage dropped on Pantelleria, and the heaviest of bombs dumped on that island before it surrendered three times the tonnage ever dropped in an enemy raid on London."

German pilots again avoided combat wherever possible and anti-aircraft fire was relatively light.

Four Allied planes were missing from the two days' total of far more than 4,000 combat flights, a percentage of loss so light it amazed aerial combat veterans.

Five German Focke-Wulfs were destroyed yesterday while attempting sneak-run raids on the 5th Army's beachhead. They were shot down by P-40 Warhawks.

Flying Fortresses concentrated on bombing roads, and in the words of an official's statement, "plowed up a highway for a couple of miles."

Several fires were left in Eboli, a transport yard for Nazi supplies, other fires were seen blazing in the railroad yards and one string of bombs straddled enemy troops in a bivouac area.

Another wave of Fortresses blasted both the highway and railroad at Taranto, and the crewmen expressed the belief they left both impassable.

American Mitchells dealt powerful blows on roads in the Torre Annunziata area midway between Salerno and Naples and north of the 5th Army's beachhead. A string of bombs crashed into the center of a motorized convoy, and fires broke out near the road intersection.

Ships Bomb Same Area. Marauders also operated south of the Sele River bridge midway between Eboli and Sorre and another wave laid their bombs squarely on roads in the same vicinity.

Crewmen said they could see Allied warships bombarding the same area and Lt. Lester D. Snall of Hollywood, said:

"The combination! The Navy was blasting away from the sea and our gang from above. We couldn't miss."

While these attacks were under way, tactical bombers and fighters concentrated on frontline targets, starting at dawn when RAF bombers laid a pattern on the town of Boli, where German troops were seen massing and 30 minutes later when American Mitchells spread heavy explosions over the entire area.

Simultaneously, American P-38 Lightnings began strafing and bombing the enemy troops who had been subjected to many bombings the preceding night.

The leader of one flight, Lt. James E. Bower, said:

"We caught a German camp at dawn. They were awakened by eight 500-pound bombs we dropped among them just as they were getting up and our surprise raid started some action. The Jerries ran in all directions."

Freight Yards Hammered. Mitchells, Warhawks, Spitfires, Kittyhawks and Baltimore bombers joined in similar attacks during the afternoon.

Freight yards, motor convoys and enemy transports were the targets of the hammer blows.

More than 100 sorties were flown by the A-38 group commanded by Lt. Col. R. C. Patten, Lake City, Fla., and a German observation plane was shot down by Lt. Robert B. Walsh.

RAF fighters torpedooed two 2,000-ton vessels in an enemy convoy from early morning through the afternoon and American Mitchells braved a heavy storm of shore and ship fire to attack a large convoyed barge in the Tyrrhenian south of Rome.

Yesterday was the first wedding anniversary for Maj. Joseph E. Klei, of Portland, Ore., and he said:

"I was celebrating by dropping bombs on the guys who caused my being away from home so long."

Arlington Voters Urged To Attend Meetings

By the Associated Press.

Harrison Mann, chairman of the Arlington County Democratic Campaign Committee, today urged county voters to attend meetings scheduled by the Organized Women Voters for statements by all candidates for public office.

Mr. Mann said Democratic candidates, most of whom are "responsible public officials" also engaged in war work, do not have the time to answer all Republican challenges to debate. He added that candidates have been scheduled for talks at a series of meetings.

Announcing that the Democratic candidates' schedule of speaking engagements was already made up, Mr. Mann said that a series of luncheons will be held throughout the county under the auspices of various county Democratic organizations.

New Vice President Of ABA Well Known To Bankers Here

Capital financiers are already well acquainted with W. Randolph Burgess, newly elected vice president of the American Bankers' Association.

He was statistician with the War Industries Board in the First World War and in 1918 and 1919 was acting chief of the statistics branch of the general staff, with the rank of major.

Th present chairman of the National City Bank is a native of Newport, R. I. graduate of Brown University, which gave him an LL. D. in 1937. He also has a Ph. D. from Columbia. He joined the Federal Reserve Bank in New York in 1920 and took his present position with National City in 1938.

Mr. Burgess has been president of the American Statistical Association and the Academy of Political Science, has written several books, is chairman of the ABA Economic Policy Commission, vice chairman of the Research Council on the Executive Council and member of a special committee on Treasury war borrowing.

Wiggins and Waller Elected. As already announced, A. L. M. Wiggins, South Carolina banker, was elected president of the ABA and Wilmer J. Waller of this city was named ABA treasurer, this election following by one day his reelection to the presidency of the Hamilton National Bank.

Washington bankers, back in the financial district today, said one of the high lights of the New York convention was the bitter opposition to the Regional Agricultural Credit Corp. and other credit agencies which are actively seeking loans from farmers. The loss of these loans threatens the livelihood of country banks, it was claimed.

Bankers were told that loans will no longer be placed on their doorstep, but in the future they will have to go out after them vigorously. In other words, bankers must merchandise their loans.

C. B. Upham, deputy controller of the currency, stressed the importance of national banks in the credit banking system. Another speaker declared bankers should do a great deal more to get depositors to save money objectively for new homes or other definite purposes.

"All banks should continue to pay 2 per cent on deposits of $500 or less," one speaker declared. "Otherwise they may lose patronage permanently."

The delegates were urged to do everything in their power to help win the war. Later, however, they expect to demand new national banking controls and are pointing out that for international currency stabilization, the Capital delegates indicated today.

$3,350,000 Check Aids Drive. Edward C. Baltz, secretary of the Perpetual Building Association, gave a big boost to the War Bond drive by presenting a check for $3,350,000 to the District War Finance Committee for the purchase of War bonds for his association.

This was the largest purchase made so far in building and loan association in the city. Creditous purchases were reported today among the other 24 associations in the Capital.

Mr. Baltz is general chairman of the committee representing all the building and loan associations in the present drive, the same position he held in the Second War Loan Drive. Not only are the associations buying bonds for their own accounts, but they are urging patrons to do the same on a big scale.

Careful Stock Buying Urged. One leading investment service this week continues to urge selected and accumulation of selected stocks. Another is "not particularly optimistic over the near-term market but for the long pull considers stocks preferable to cash."

Another market letter advised selective accumulation of selected stocks. Tax factors are cited as having important bearing on present New York Stock Exchange trading. The September 15 tax payment and the Third War Loan drive are likely to affect buying power for several weeks, one writer points out.

Financial District Comment. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. has bought $425,000,000 Government bonds of the Third War Loan and the New York Life has subscribed for $250,000,000 of these bonds.

Washington members of the Investment Bankers' Association, of which J. Clifford Folger is president, and of the National Association of Securities Dealers, see a bitter content over mandatory control of bidding for selected stocks. In connection with the filing for and against the plan with the I. C. C. More dealers here oppose the plan than favor it.

Langston at New 1943 Peak. Fifty shares of Langston Washington stock exchange today, a gain of three full points and a new high mark for 1943.

Selected Stocks Up But Many Groups Lack Support

By VICTOR EUBANK, Associated Press Financial Writer. NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—A smattering of fairly strong industrial stocks kept the market looking a bit better today on balance, although many groups were generally lackadaisical performance.

A little buying persisted on the idea the mid-September tax date had passed without any disturbance and that the list was in a healthier technical position. Some potential purchasers, however, continued to hold a pessimistic attitude.

The session got off to an uneven start, but prices improved after mid-day on a selective basis. Rails moved up in the final hour. While many fractions to points were in evidence near the close, losers were plentiful. Dealings were sluggish at intervals and transfers for the full stretch were around 500,000 shares.

Workington Pump common and "A" and "B" preferreds were given a substantial impetus when both titles were cleared up on the senior issues. Sears Roebuck and Gimbel touched peaks for the year. Support also was accorded Chrysler, Westinghouse, Santa Fe, United Aircraft, Allegheny preferreds, Pepsi-Cola, and Occidental.

Declines were posted for Great Northern, Anaconda, DuPont Chemical, Douglas Aircraft, J. C. Penney and Union Carbide.

Business Briefs

Bank Clearings in 23 leading cities totaled $1,061,906,000 in the week ended September 15, compared with $859,945,000 in the preceding holiday week and were 33.8% above $751,558,000 in the corresponding 1942 period, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported. Important city gains over a year ago: New Orleans, 57.4%; Boston, 51%; Houston, 31.7%; Philadelphia, 27.5%; and Denver, 27%. Small declines were recorded at Cincinnati and San Francisco.

New Life Insurance written in August was 21.8% higher than in the like 1942 month, the Association of Life Insurance Presidents announced. In the first eight months of 1943, new business was 3.6% above the same period last year.

Freight Loadings in the week ended September 11 totaled $34,671 car, a drop of 7.4% from the preceding week and 2.4% above a year ago, the Association of American Railroads revealed.

American Stores Co. sales in August totaled $14,611,597 against $15,785,811 in August, 1942, a drop of 7.4%. Sales in eight months totaled $132,815,831 against $134,629,308 a year ago, a decline of 1.3%.

E. L. Bruce Co. earned $543,656, or $3.49 a share in the preceding year, compared with $711,507, or $4.75 a share in the preceding year.

Diamond Shoe Co. earned $403,333 or 70 cents a share in six months ended June 30, compared with $426,075 or 96 cents a share in the same 1942 period.

National Power & Light Co. earned $6,380,947 or $1 a share in the year ended July 31, compared with $4,857,649 or 60 cents a share in the preceding year.

Duplan Corp. earned $441,537, or $1.33 a share in the year ended May 31, compared with $54,027, or $1.15 a share in the previous year.

United Wall Paper Factors, Inc., earned $394,792 in the fiscal year ended June 30, compared with $500,882 in the preceding year. Latest results were after all charges, including provisions of $81,500 for contingencies. Sales for the year set a new record of $10,226,401, a 25% increase over the previous year.

Campbell, Wyant & Cannon Foundry Co. earned $412,824, or $1.20 a share in six months ended June 30, compared with $323,517, or 94 cents a share in the same 1942 period.

Oppenheimer, Collins & Co. earned $321,236, or $1.60 a share in the year ended July 31, compared with $184,023, or 92 cents a share in the preceding 12 months.

Washington Pump Clears Arrearages On Preferreds

By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Directors of the Washington Pump & Machinery Corp. today declared a dividend of $33.25 a share on account of accumulations on the class "A" 7 per cent preferred and one of $28.50 a share on account of accumulations on the class "B" 6 per cent preferred, bringing dividends on the two classes of stock up to date.

Both dividends will be paid October 27. These payments will leave only a balance of $1.75 a share on the "A" stock and $1.50 a share on the "B" for the current quarter. Latest records show 4,622 shares of the "A" stock outstanding and 3,165 shares of the "B."

Prior to today's declarations, the company had disbursed $45.50 a share this year on arrears on the "A" stock and $39 a share on the "B."

The board also voted to terminate the exchange offer covering the two classes of stock under the recapitalization plan approved in 1941 providing for the exchange of the shares for other obligations of the company at stipulated ratios.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

to all users of ELECTRICITY

At this crucial point in our all-out war against our common enemy, there is an even greater need than ever before for more coal, manpower, transportation and materials in the war effort. To increase the supply of these desperately needed items, the War Production Board has instituted a program of voluntary conservation of electricity, effective September 15, 1943. The letter of the War Production Board reproduced below is tremendously important. Please read it carefully.

We know you will be sympathetic and appreciative of your Government's desire that this necessary program of conservation be kept on a VOLUNTARY AND COOPERATIVE BASIS, thereby avoiding the necessity for mandatory regulation.

This Company accepts this program with its wholehearted and sincere support. We urge you to do likewise, for the success of the program depends on you. Therefore we urge you to use electricity only when needed. By so doing, your individual sacrifice will help to hasten the day we are all looking forward to . . . the day when the boys come marching home to Victory!

Your Government asks You to do these things:

RESIDENTIAL

- (a) Eliminate all waste in the use of various electric appliances such as refrigerators, radios, ranges, space heaters, water heaters, etc.
- (b) Turn off lights and appliances when not actually needed.

COMMERCIAL

1. Indoor and Outdoor Advertising, Promotional and Display Sign Lighting

- (a) Daytime: Eliminate completely.
- (b) Nighttime: Reduce burning hours so far as practicable but in no case burn for an interval exceeding two hours and only during the period from dusk until 10 p. m., in terms of local time.
- (c) Electric signs necessary for direction or identification of places of public service, such as public restaurants, public lodging establishments, transportation terminals, etc., may be operated during nighttime but only while the establishment is open for business.
- (d) Reduce lamp wattage of all signs by the maximum practicable amount.

2. Decorative and Ornamental Lighting Including Decorative Flood Lighting

- (a) Exterior lighting: Eliminate completely at all times.
- (b) Interior lighting: Eliminate all non-essential lighting; reduce the balance by the maximum practicable amount.

3. Show Window Lighting Which does not Provide Essential Interior Illumination

- (a) Daytime: Eliminate completely.
- (b) Nighttime: Reduce burning hours so far as practicable but in no case burn for an interval exceeding two hours and only during the period from dusk until 10 p. m., in terms of local time.
- (c) Reduce wattage by maximum practicable amount.

4. Lighting of Marquees (other than advertising signs) and Building Entrances

- (a) Daytime: Eliminate completely.
- (b) Nighttime: Reduce in intensity by maximum practicable amount consistent with public safety consideration.
- (c) Eliminate completely when establishment is not open for business except for amount necessary for protection.

5. Lighting of Outdoor Business Establishments

- (a) Daytime: Eliminate completely.
- (b) Nighttime: Reduce in intensity by maximum practicable amount.
- (c) Eliminate completely when establishment is not open for business except for amount necessary for protection.

6. General Interior Illumination and Show Case Lighting

- (a) Eliminate all non-essential lighting.
- (b) Reduce remainder by the maximum practicable amount consistent with public safety consideration and eyesight conservation.

7. General Conservation by Commercial Customers

- (a) Turn off lights and appliances when not actually needed.
- (b) Eliminate unnecessary use.

8. Air Conditioning

Adopt more moderate margins of reduction in temperature and relative humidity.

INDUSTRIAL

Many economies can be achieved in the use of electric energy by industrial plants both large and small without adversely affecting volume of production.

Utilities should utilize services of their power engineers and other personnel to assist industrial customers to effect more economical use of electric energy, keeping in mind the necessity of maintaining or improving maximum production levels.

EXCEPTIONS

No effort should be made to curtail necessary military aviation and police lighting, lighting essential to public health including eyesight conservation and safety, plant protection, transportation, and production purposes. As outdoor recreational activities are considered essential for wartime morale, the use of electric energy necessary for this purpose should not be discouraged.

WAR PRODUCTION BOARD
WASHINGTON, D. C.

IN REPLY REFER TO:

To Electric Utilities and Their Customers:

The War Production Board has proclaimed that maximum war production requires the greatest possible conservation of manpower, transportation, fuel, equipment, and critical material such as copper, steel, tungsten and many others - much greater than has been heretofore accomplished. It believes that this greater conservation can be accomplished by the voluntary cooperation of all citizens of our country in the effort. It has called for the institution of a program to effect savings on all home fronts by the Office of Defense Transportation, the Petroleum Administration for War, the Solid Fuel Administration for War, the Office of War Utilities, and other governmental agencies. These agencies have been developing the details of the conservation program.

Each principal industry and agency is organizing to carry the objective of the War Production Board to its members and they, in turn, to their customers so that the fullest conservation may be obtained. This is a definite challenge to each operating unit and each individual in the electric utility industry to do his or her share in backing up our fighting forces. We cannot exert maximum force against our enemies if waste on the home front is tolerated.

In the electric utility industry, the installed generating capacity, together with capacity now under construction, is ample to meet all foreseeable electric needs. But, it is essential to save the use of electricity wherever possible so as to reduce directly or indirectly, the demands for materials, fuel, transportation, and manpower.

The Office of War Utilities, in consultation with representatives of the electric utility industry, both public and private, has developed a comprehensive program to achieve the objectives of the War Production Board within that industry.

The desired result will be obtained through the full cooperation of millions of people in the conservation program. With everyone contributing, the effect will be tremendous in hastening the day of Victory.

Sincerely yours,

J. A. Krug

CHAPTER IX.

Eisenhower Assumes Supreme Command in Africa—Battle of Kasserine Pass—Spring Campaign Against Rommel—Axis Driven From Africa

Note—The Star is printing, in daily installments, Chief of Staff George C. Marshall's report to the Secretary of War on the period July 1, 1942, to July 31, 1943, just made public. "It is a record," Gen. Marshall writes, "of what was done and why it was done, and is submitted while America is at war to permit a better understanding of the great offensive operations now in progress."

The new year opened with the opponents in Tunisia testing each other's strength along the partially stabilized line and matching each other's bids for air supremacy, both forces concentrating against ports and lines of communication.

In Libya, Rommel's Afrika Korps, with its complement of Italians, abandoned a succession of defensive positions, withdrawing finally into Tripoli. By February, his troops were established on the Mareth Line in Southeast Tunisia. Meanwhile, Gen. Eisenhower's troops were being re-grouped on the Tunisian front preparatory to renewing the offensive against the Axis positions. The troops were given the operational command of Gen. Anderson, commanding the 1st British Army. So far as was practicable, American units were concentrated and the French units organized into a combat corps. German thrusts at weakly defended positions, however, necessitated a further intermingling of Allied units.

North African Theater Set Up. Throughout the African operation up to this time, Gen. Eisenhower had retained control of the United States Army forces in the British Isles, ground and air. This arrangement had been continuing in effect to afford him a free hand in drawing on such resources as he had established in the United Kingdom. Plans had been made before the launching of the African enterprise to effect a transfer of command, and this was actually carried out on February 4 when Gen. Andrews, a highly specialized air officer who had been sent to the Middle East for experience in combat and in contacts with our Allies, was appointed commander of the United States forces in the European theater of operations with headquarters in London. This order was paralleled by the creation of a North African theater of operations, under Gen. Eisenhower. Upon the arrival of the 8th Army on the Mareth Line, it came under the direction of Gen. Eisenhower. Gen. Sir Harold Alexander of the British Army was appointed his deputy and given direct command of the 18th Army group, which consisted of British, American, and French units. The British 1st Army, the British 8th Army, the United States 2nd Corps, and the French units on the Tunisian front.

United Air Forces Organized. North African air units were organized into the Mediterranean Air Command under the command of Gen. Carl Spaatz, who was appointed commander of the United States Army as commander of the Northwest African Air Force. All heavy bombers, together with fighter support, were organized by Gen. Spaatz into the Strategic Air Command. The 15th Air Force, which was organized at this time by Gen. Spaatz to unify command of light and medium bombers and fighter support into a force known as the Tactical Air Force to lend close support to land and naval operations. The 13th Air Force, under the command of Gen. Cunningham, became a naval command in chief in the Mediterranean under Gen. Eisenhower's direction. These Allied command arrangements led directly to the victories which soon followed in Tunisia, and conquest of Sicily.

The Break-Through at Kasserine. The junction of the veteran Afrika Korps with Von Arnim's command in Tunisia permitted the enemy to launch offensive strokes against the lightly-held portions of the long Allied line. On February 19, hostile armor units, reinforced by artillery and infantry and supported by dive bombers struck westward from Faid and broke through the Kasserine Pass. By the afternoon of February 21 the Axis forces had advanced a three-pronged armored thrust 21 miles into the pass, threatening the Allied position in Central Tunisia. Of this operation Gen. Eisenhower radioed the following comments:

"Our present tactical difficulties resulted from an attempt to do something too much. The enemy was able to maintain himself in his forward position for only two days before he recoiled under a concentrated attack by our ground forces powerfully assisted by the Allied air force in North Africa. Even the heavy bombers were used against their retreating columns. During this withdrawal, the enemy endeavored to capitalize upon possible Allied reinforcing moves the south, delivering heavy attacks in the Medjez-el-Bab area, but these were held or checked after small gains. These thrusts were the last offensive efforts of the enemy in Tunisia. The rains had ceased, the roads had been improved, the railroad had been vitalized with American methods and material, and more than 10 gasoline pipe lines, the two most important being from Bone to Ferrania and from Philippeville to Ouled Bouamou, had been built. These increased facilities permitted the movement into Tunisia of additional American troops. The time had come for a co-ordinated Allied effort which

Planners Meet Today to Study 1945 Budget

Postwar Projects Will Be Considered In Crowded Docket

By NELSON M. SHEPARD. The National Capital Park and Planning Commission looked ahead today to postwar needs in meeting its 1945 budget and such future projects involving replacement of the Highway Bridge across the Potomac and development in the Eastern section.

With the opening of its September meeting, its first in three months, the commission faced a crowded two-day docket, including a joint session tomorrow morning with the Fine Arts Commission.

As a basis for recommending new land acquisition appropriations for the 1945 fiscal year, the Planning Commission was prepared to consider the locations and needs of four playgrounds in the midcity section. These studies have been worked out in co-operation with the District Recreation Board and deal with the remaining portion of the midcity section not adequately served by recreational facilities.

Would Advance Program. By obtaining funds in the 1945 budget for land acquisition purposes, the commission said it would be possible to advance the local program at least six months. It usually takes a year to negotiate the purchase of land in approved city areas.

Also to be recommended are six new school sites. Congress already has appropriated approximately $500,000 for the sites. Certain other matters involving recommended changes in the official activities of the District Recreation Board also will be considered.

To Sift Highway Plans. This afternoon the War Department's plans for construction of a military highway from Bolling Field to the new Camp Springs Air Base in Maryland will come up for action. The highway—strictly for military use—will follow in general the route of the proposed Suitland, Md., Parkway. The commission's work in connection with this Parkway will enable the Army to begin construction of the Camp Springs highway six months ahead of time. Grading of the military road will start soon.

Reports on war housing, both public and private, will be considered during the afternoon. Included are plans drawn up for about 3,000 homes for colored families. About one-third of these are to be in the nature of public housing. Studies for the redevelopment of blighted areas east of the Anacostia River, called an "ideal area public housing," will be presented to the Commission in collaboration with the National Housing Authority.

Tomorrow morning the Commission will hear two proposals from Secretary Thomas S. Settle for East Capitol street projects. These would require legislation. Plans also will be studied for the replacement of the narrow Klingle bridge over Rock Creek Park, to make it more adequate for bus travel.

Brother Takes Start in Trial Of Clatterback

Pictures Defendant In Murder Case as Deeply Religious

By A Star Staff Correspondent. LEESBURG, Va., Sept. 16.—The trial of Thomas William Clatterback, a trial in Loudoun County Circuit Court for the murder of Walter Russell, tenant farmer, on June 1, began today with an older brother picturing the defendant as a deeply religious man and one worried about his business and on his honor.

The brother, Meredith Clatterback, testified that his brother's debts amounted to nearly $3,300, exclusive of interest. These debts involved the trucks he used in his business and a $2,850 which he owed on his home, sold about six weeks ago, the brother said.

Asked by defense counsel, Maj. Robert A. McIntyre, if he had noted "any differences in the activities of his brother since the first of February," Meredith Clatterback testified that he noticed that when he visited the defendant, in his house, when he was suffering from a bad knee, he noticed that he "wouldn't stay on the subject" of the conversation.

Worried Over Business. The witness said that their mother offered to buy a portion of the property of the accused, but that he, Meredith, did not feel that Thomas was dangerous and thought he would be all right once he was out of debt. Attempting to drive home the point that Thomas Clatterback was not a dangerous man, McIntyre brought out from the witness that at one time only one of the four Clatterback trucks was usable, that one truck had burned up and that Thomas had lost a number of good employes in the draft and had been in the military service.

Defendant Was Quiet. The witness said his brother was the "most quiet and obedient boy I ever knew to get along with." Maj. McIntyre has said that he will call a "surprise expert" to testify that Clatterback has a pronounced case of dementia praecox. He told Judge J. H. R. Alexander that he expected to complete his case by tonight.

Yesterday the prosecution completed the presentation of its case. J. Foster Hagan, Republican candidate for State Representative in Arlington County, opened his campaign last night with the statement before members of the Leeway Civic Association that "his membership in the minority party would not prevent his serving the people."

"If it is said, and it is, that I am a good chap but it will be useless for me to go to Richmond because of the Republican tag I wear," Mr. Hagan declared, "then we are wasting $240,000 a day in carrying on a war against one-party Government."

Mr. Hagan, who taught at Washington-Lee school before practicing law in the county, said he would advocate schools to fit community needs, emphasizing that "the school is the greatest bulwark against juvenile delinquency."

Randolph to Introduce Three District Bills In House Tomorrow

Provision for Home Care Of Dependent Children Sought in One Measure

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee tomorrow will introduce three District bills recommended to the Speaker by the District Commissioners.

One covers provision for home care for dependent children in the District, another permits the granting of beverage licenses in the District to service clubs of other United Nations, and the third makes provision for charges for persons committed to the District Training School for Feeble Minded who are able to pay.

Commissioner Young has informed House leaders that the present home care act for dependent children has been held by the Social Security Board to be wholly inadequate to meet requirements. The District receives money from the Social Security Board for old-age assistance, aid for the needy blind and aid to dependent children.

The bill provides one procedure instead of two to deal with cases where aid to dependent children is involved; defines eligibility in terms of social security legislation through which Federal matched payments are obtained; permits the inclusion in the grant of an incapacitated father who lives with his family; determines eligibility for aid on the residence of a child instead of the residence of the parent; permits assistance to children 16 and 17 years of age and removes from a standing committee of the Board of Public Welfare the necessity of reviewing each case.

The Commissioners believe the present law is inadequate to cover a situation where a feeble minded person acquires property after he has been admitted to the training school as a public patient, or where a relative dies leaving an estate and there has been no court order requiring that relative's estate to pay a portion or all of the cost of maintenance of such patient.

Arlington OCD Parade To Be Held Tonight

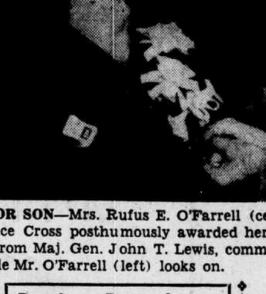

Fire Bomb Demonstration Scheduled for 8 P.M.

Arlington County's civilian defense force, Army and Navy units, OCD divisions, patriotic organizations and war agencies will begin at 6:30 p.m. today. Its route will be along Wilson boulevard, from North Danville street to Stafford street.

C. F. O'Connor is parade chairman. Police Lt. J. J. Scott, grand marshal, and Lt. Col. Leonce Legendre, honorary grand marshal, will lead the procession, which is to include at least 15 floats representing the development and the Washington Gas Light Band and the Washington-Lee High School Cadet Band will take part.

Mother Receives Award For Son—Mrs. Rufus E. O'Farrell

Accepts the Distinguished Service Cross Posthumously Awarded Her Son, Lt. Rufus E. O'Farrell, Jr., for Heroic Action in Tunisia

Mrs. Mary Guelow, price clerk of the Alexandria ration board, said yesterday that many price and rationing problems could be made easier if mothers would avoid sending young children to market except in emergencies.

She stressed the fact that shopping is such a complicated problem that merchants need the co-operation of customers. Sending children to market wastes time for overworked clerks who must take care of the payment of ration points.

In urging shoppers to do their share by going to market themselves instead of sending children, Mrs. Guelow said many cases of lost ration books could be avoided.

Irvin Hufford, chairman of the price panel of the Alexandria board, said some Alexandria grocers are requiring customers to purchase a glass of cheese with every pound of butter. This is a direct violation of the price regulations and should be reported, he said.

Both Mrs. Guelow and Mr. Hufford are at the ration board every Wednesday night from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock to answer questions about price regulations.

Gen. Lewis Presents Lt. O'Farrell's Mother His Posthumous DSC

District Officer's Heroism Outlined in Citation Accompanying Award

The Distinguished Service Cross, awarded posthumously to Second Lt. Rufus E. O'Farrell, Jr., for "extraordinary heroism in action" after he was killed in Tunisia last April, was presented yesterday to his mother, Mrs. Rufus E. O'Farrell, 1701 Park road N.W., by Maj. Gen. John T. Lewis, commanding general of the Military District of Washington. The ceremony took place in Gen. Lewis' office in the Pentagon Building.

Lt. O'Farrell's father, and a group of relatives, attended the ceremony. A native of Biloxi, Miss., Lt. O'Farrell attended De Witt School, Fishburne Military Academy and the University of Maryland where he was a member of the R. O. T. C. Active in university sports, he also was a member of Sigma Nu Fraternity and Scabbard and Blade, national honorary military organization.

Commissioned a Reserve officer in the infantry at the University of Maryland in September, 1942, Lt. O'Farrell was ordered immediately to active duty at Fort Benning, Ga. The citation accompanying the award reads in part:

"Lt. O'Farrell was leading his platoon across open terrain in the assault on Gap. His men were subjected to heavy enemy machine-gun and mortar fire, but under his leadership they continued to advance until a new concentration pinned them to the ground.

"Lt. O'Farrell was wounded, but continued to advance on a machine gun nest and demanded the water tender. When the demand was refused, he fired tracer on the position. He received mortal wounds when his gun became jammed and he exposed himself in order to draw attention to the position. His actions enabled his flank scouts to surround the enemy gun and its crew and his platoon to gain its objective. In spite of his wounds he called his platoon sergeant, gave him his final instructions for continuing the attack and stayed behind to permit any of his men to stay behind to aid him."

Workers Are Needed At Torpedo Plant Alexandria Station

On New Schedule

"Several hundred" workers are needed at the Alexandria Station Torpedo Station in order to maintain its present high production, Capt. R. B. Simons, commanding officer, said today.

Capt. Simons said production at the naval ordnance plant is 250 percent above last year. He said efforts will be made to push this percentage figure still higher. The commanding officer said the plant recently changed from three 8-hour shifts, working a seven-day week, to two 9-hour shifts, working a six-day week.

Education Board Favors Easing of Child Labor Law

Backs Commissioners In Plan to Widen Student Employment

The Board of Education has agreed to the Commissioners' proposal to liberalize the District child labor law to permit wider employment of students for the duration of the war.

Both the board members and the Commissioners agree that girls 16 and 17 years of age should no longer be barred from jobs in theaters and hotels except actual cleaning work in hotel rooms. They have also agreed that hours of night employment for these girls should be raised from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Stand on "Work Permits." The board, however, has recommended that the Commissioners strike from their proposed modification of the law a clause stripping the school officials of the authority to issue "work permits" for all children under 18.

Data that all children under 18 must give school officials to get the permits, it was explained, would keep the youngsters from taking any illegal employment. Managers of all types of business are required to show these work permits for any employes under 18 years.

This modification is a "back to school" movement. Lawson J. Cantrell, superintendent of the District, in charge of junior high schools, explained to the board when it reviewed the Commissioners' proposals yesterday. Loosening of regulations to permit more night work, he explained, will permit children who want to work to spend more time in school during the day.

Business managers are now required to keep such close supervision of their personnel, Acting Supt. of Schools Haycock told the board, that possibility of immoral conduct by 16 and 17 year old girls working a night shift was a consideration. The board reserved the right, however, later to recommend prohibition of employment of young girls in any capacity in burlesque houses.

Under the recommendations sent to the Commissioners, no student could work and attend school more than a total of nine hours a week and eight hours on non-school days. Hours for boys setting pins in bowling alleys were set forward only to 10 p.m. The Commissioners had suggested a curfew of midnight for these boys.

At the same time board members approved a "work-study" plan whereby students 16 and 17 year old can go to school in the morning and work four hours in the afternoon, eight hours on a holiday. For this work, supervised by school principals, students will receive academic credit. Students 14 and 15 years of age can work three hours after school and eight on holidays, but not after 7 p.m.

Prof. Molton A. Colton Of Naval Academy Dies

By the Associated Press. ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 16.—General services will be conducted tomorrow for Prof. Molton A. Colton, instructor in French and Spanish at the Naval Academy for 30 years, who died yesterday. A native of Oklahoma and a graduate of Yale University, Prof. Colton was in the Philippines as school superintendent in 1917. He also had taught in California. He retired from the academy faculty in 1937. Burial will be in the Naval Academy cemetery.

25 Cases of Measles Reported in Lynchburg

By the Associated Press. RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 16.—A minor epidemic of measles in Lynchburg, where 25 of the city's 36 cases were reported last week, was the weekly report of the State Health Department. A total of 340 cases of diarrhea and dysentery in Virginia—twice as many as in the comparable week of last year—were reported. Whooping cough showed a slight increase in prevalence with 119 cases reported. Other communicable diseases reported: Influenza, 65; scarlet fever, 28; diphtheria, 12; typhoid and paratyphoid, 20; meningitis, 4; poliomyelitis and Rocky Mountain spotted fever, 3, and undulant fever, 2.

Daily Rationing Reminders

Canned and Frozen Foods, Etc.—Blue coupons in Ration Book No. 2: R, S and T good any time through September 30. W and X also good now and will not expire until after October 20. Meats, Fats, Etc.—Red coupons in Ration Book No. 2: X, Y and Z valid now and will remain through October 2. Brown stamps in Ration Book No. 3: A stamps valid through October 2; B stamps will be good September 19 through October 2. War Ration Book No. 3—Citizens who have not received these new books should apply to local ration boards. Book is already in use. Sugar—Coupon No. 14 in Book No. 1 good for 5 pounds through October 31. Gasoline—Holders of old-type B and C coupons (those in books numbered 527, 527A, 528 and 528A) may still exchange them for new-type coupons at their neighborhood ration board. Book covers of A books should be kept; will be needed in applying for new A rations. Shoes—Stamp No. 18 in book No. 1 good for one pair through October 31. Stoves—All new domestic cooking and heating stoves designed to burn coal, wood, oil or gas are now rationed. Apply to your local ration board for stove purchase certificates. (More detailed information carried every Sunday in The Star.)

World Co-operation Urged By Women's Club Head

By the Associated Press. BALTIMORE, Sept. 16.—A plea for immediate establishment of a basis for world co-operation in the postwar period was voiced yesterday by Mrs. John L. Whitehurst of Baltimore, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Spoken at a luncheon given in her honor by Gov. O'Connor and the Maryland State Council of Defense, Mrs. Whitehurst said she learned in talks with refugees of the German occupation on her recent trip to London that they looked to the United States "even more than to Great Britain," to lead the way toward establishment of a lasting peace.

"How we can sit here quietly and think that we'll be secure without world co-operation is beyond me," the women's club president declared. "Now is the time to build your post-war plans. I'm not going to tell you how to do it, or whether we want an alliance with Great Britain or not, but we must make an effort now."

Tracks Down Russell

Clatterback believed that the Russells might have heard the screams of Mrs. Love and that Mr. Russell, who was thinning corn in the field, had seen him and his car. It was then that he decided to kill Mr. Russell. Keeping behind the shelter of the barn so that Mr. Russell could not see him, he moved toward the corn field, limbing over a fence and keeping the rifle concealed. He greeted Mr. Russell. When he was within four or five feet of the farmer he pulled out the rifle, placed it against Mr. Russell and fired. He then went toward the house where Mrs. Russell was standing by the door. She started to run, but he placed the rifle near her body and

Virginia Showers Fail To End 51-Day Drought

By the Associated Press. RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 16.—Rains which have fallen in several sections of Virginia during the past week or 10 days have amounted to little more than a drop in the drought bucket, statisticians J. A. Ewing of the State Department of Agriculture reported yesterday. Fully 4 inches of rain are needed to break the 51-day drought, he said. A demonstration of high explosives and incendiary bombs will be given at the Washington-Lee Stadium at 8 p.m. under the direction of William Sweetman of the division of chemical warfare. Mr. O'Connor said.

Mrs. Roosevelt's OCD Aide Enlists in Coast Guard

The Navy announced today that Mrs. Edith Mae Hand Knight of Falls Church, Va., former executive secretary for Mrs. Roosevelt and Mayor La Guardia in the Office of Civilian Defense, has been accepted for officer training in the Women's Reserve of the Coast Guard. She is scheduled to report for training next Wednesday at the Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn. At the time she enlisted, she was secretary to the chairman of the Petroleum Industry War Council. Mrs. Knight came here from Yellville, Ark. She studied at George Washington University and is a graduate of the University of Arkansas.

"Less than five minutes had passed," Yeoman Abert said. "I picked up my fork and went on eating that same piece of ham."

A recent wedding of interest in the armed forces took place September 6 in St. John's Episcopal Church when Miss Jo Ann Rice, daughter of Mrs. Sedley Peck of Gresham Farms, Md., became the bride of Lt. Edward A. Parry, jr., of Chester, Pa., now with the paratroop infantry and stationed at Camp Mackall, N. C. The bride is a pilot in the Civil Air Patrol and is assigned to Avenger Field, Tex.

The Rev. Howard Johnson officiated at the ceremony and Maj. Peck escorted his stepdaughter and gave her in marriage. She was attended by Mrs. Lee Black of Annapolis and by Miss Jane Abrams and Miss Patricia Murrush of Indianapolis. Miss Patricia Halpine of Selby-on-the-Bay, Md., and Miss Jacqueline Macaleese of Fairfax.

Mr. Edward A. Parry of Chester was best man for his son and the ushers were Lt. Comdr. Nicholas

Halpine, Ensign Lou Black, Lt. Francis Johnson and Air Cadet James Hartney.

American Republics Observe Independence Anniversaries

By Katherine Brooks

Independence, that coveted state for freedom-loving peoples, was celebrated yesterday by the five Central American Republics and today Mexico is observing the anniversary of independence for that country. There is no celebration of the day at the Mexican Embassy as the ambassador went to Mexico City by plane Monday and probably will not be back until the first of next week. The ambassador was accompanied to Mexico by a group of distinguished officials and officers who are attending the brilliant and gay celebration of the day in Mexico City. Several members of the Embassy staff have gone to New York for the equally festive celebration which Mexican residents there have arranged.

The Central American Republics, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua had similar fetes yesterday in their capitals but, the Ambassadors here opened their offices for at least a few hours during the day and then declared a holiday. Only two of them observed the day except as a partial holiday from work, the Costa Rican Ambassador and Senor de Escalante entertaining the members of the Embassy staff and the Costa Rican residents in Washington at a late afternoon fete. The party also was in the nature of a housewarming for their new Embassy which they recently moved into at 2112 S street, which they purchased from the estate of the late Mrs. Stokes Halkett.

The Nicaraguan Ambassador and Senora de Sevilla Sacasa also gave a late afternoon party entertaining very informally the members of the staff and Nicaraguan residents of Washington.

The El Salvador Ambassador and Senora de Castro with the younger members of their family have returned from a several weeks vacation in their homeland but planned no celebration of their independence day yesterday. The only observance was the closing of the Embassy offices. This also was true of the Guatemalan Ambassador, Dr. Don Adrian Recinos, who came back a few weeks ago from Guatemala City where he had a short vacation. Senora de Recinos and their daughter, Senorita Laura Recinos, are expected to join him here the last week of the month.

Interesting news of the Minister-Attache of the Spanish Embassy and Senora de Danis comes from them aboard the Gripsholm on its way for the exchange of United States-Japanese civilian internees. Senora Danis is the Spanish neutral delegate aboard the ship and the trip will take nearly three months bringing the Minister-Attache and Senora de Danis back to Washington the end of November. During the journey they will stop at Rio de Janeiro and Montevideo and the exchange of nationals will take place on the Portuguese West Coast of India. Coming back they will dock at Port Elizabeth and Rio de Janeiro.

Lt. and Mrs. Rodgers will leave the middle of next week for San Bernardino, Calif., where they will visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herman A. Rodgers. Later they will go to San Diego, where Lt. Rodgers will be on duty.

Soroptimists Told Women Workers Please Railroads

While "Casey Jones has gone to war," Mrs. Casey is doing a wonderful job," Carlton J. Corliss, manager, publicity section, Association of American Railroads, told members of the Washington Soroptimist Club yesterday.

Guest speaker at the club's weekly luncheon at the Willard Hotel, Mr. Corliss told how women had responded to the "call for workers on railroads as manpower shortages became increasingly acute.

Taking as his subject "The Wartime Picture of Women in the Railroad Industry," the speaker declared "women have put on overalls and are now to be found in every department of the railroads."

"Women have worked for the railroads for many years," he commented. "In fact, the first 'white collar' woman worker was employed as a telegraph operator in 1875. In the First World War women were brought in to replace men in many capacities but in the present war there is scarcely an occupation that women aren't handling well."

In addition to clerical work, 75 per cent of which is done by women workers, Mr. Corliss explained that women were now employed as drawbridge tenders, crew callers, commissary buyers, crew dispatchers, crane operators, engine oilers, registrars of contracts, car tracers, and in innumerable other positions.

"I even saw a woman driving the baggage truck on a platform recently," he added.

There are even a few women railroad presidents, Mr. Corliss said, in addition to the women chairmen of boards of directors.

Although women were employed by railroads in the last war, their number or the variety of occupations they filled cannot be compared to those of the present war, the speaker continued. There is from 80 to 90 per cent more freight traffic today than during the last war, with a similar increase in passenger traffic, he explained.

"The last wartime job for the railroad was tremendous," he asserted, "but this war has the other eclipsed surprisingly."

The railroads lost at least half their men employees since 1939, Mr. Corliss pointed out, and it was imperative to draw on the Nation's woman power to fill the emergency.

A comparatively new field for women in railroad work opened shortly before the war when stewardesses and hostesses were employed for service on streamlined passenger trains, he said.

While the operation of this passenger service has been curtailed to some extent, Mr. Corliss predicted it would increase rapidly after the war.

"After the war, I expect to see many more streamlined trains," he said, "and there will be many more stewardesses and hostesses. From letters of inquiry, it is obvious, it is a field in which women are deeply interested and one which will expand after the war."

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. Marguerite McKenna in charge of the program, Miss Mildred Clum, president, presided. Announcement was made of a membership classification meeting to be held September 20 and of a civics section meeting September 21. The club's next luncheon, September 22, will be a "Salute to China" with Loraine Good in charge of the program.

Mrs. Kearfott Guest

Mr. and Mrs. A. Eugene Barr have as their guest in their home in Chevy Chase their daughter, Mrs. Hugh S. Kearfott of Martinsville, Va., who will be with them for a part of the autumn.

Church Women Entertained By Mme. Wei at Tea

As a preliminary to the annual missionary institute of the Washington Council of Church Women, members of the council's Missionary Education Committee were entertained by Mme. Wei, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, at a tea yesterday at Twin Oaks, the Chinese Embassy on Woodley road.

The hostess, who has been ill, received indoors for she is still under doctor's orders not to leave the house. Her guests were invited to enjoy the attractive grounds, however, and refreshments were served out of doors as well as inside.

The group receiving with Mme. Wei included Mrs. Irving W. Ketchum, chairman of the council's missionary department; Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, council president; Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel, a member of the Program Committee, and Miss Etta Mal Russell, executive secretary of the council. Mme. Chu, wife of the Chinese Military Attache, also assisted.

Among the church women who took turns in serving punch were Miss A. Barbara Wiegand, Mrs. Howard Stone Anderson, Mrs. Wilbur La Rose, Mrs. Gould Wickey, Mrs. Charles G. Lueck, Mrs. S. W. Stewart, Mrs. T. G. Carr and Mrs. T. W. Marshall.

The members of the council's Missionary Committee, composed of missionary chairmen of all the local churches represented in the organization, are completing plans for the annual institute which is scheduled for September 28, 29 and 30. Sessions will be held at the Calvary Baptist Church at Eighth and H streets N.W.

The two subjects under discussion will be "The Church and America's People" and "Christian Ventures in Learning and Living."

Six clubs was not a bad contract, even though East could have defeated it by opening the ace and another spade. But South's six-trump bid was the utmost in hopelessness, since South could hardly expect his partner to hold the ace of either major suit.

Yet as the cards lay, six no-trump could not be defeated. If West started with the heart ace he could not then lead the spade ace and South could win 12 tricks by running six clubs, three hearts and three diamonds, including a finesse for the queen. If West opened a low heart he would never get his ace since East would then have no heart to lead but for winning the spade ace. West actually opened a club and after winning it in his own hand South guessed correctly that he should attack the heart suit instead of the spades. If he had led a spade after winning the first club he could have gone down.

Yesterday you were Theodore Lightner's partner and, with neither side vulnerable, you dealt and held:

Expanded Postwar Production Is Needed To Employ 55,000,000-Man Labor Force

(No. 12 of a Series.)
By MIRIAM OTTENBERG.
The labor force at the war's end will be 55,000,000 strong, which means that more washing machines, more radios, more of all consumer goods will have to be produced to make a place for all the men and women who want to work.

In other words, business will have to think about expansion at the same time it's going through the headaches of converting from war to peacetime production. That's what business is being told by its own analysts. It's what the post-war planners in Government are counting on when they make their estimates of post-war employment.

Why Two Are Coupled.
Here's why the statisticians couple expansion with conversion:
At the end of the war—assuming that production and the armed forces don't taper off before Japan is defeated—about 63,000,000 people will be employed, including those in the armed forces.

In March, 1940, about 46,000,000 were employed, including half a million in the armed forces. The economists estimate that about 5,500,000 workers will withdraw voluntarily from the labor force after the war. That figure will vary, they say, according to how attractive old age benefits are to induce the older workers to retire; how many women decide to go back to home making and what is done to help the younger workers go back to school. The estimates also assume that the Government will hold 2,500,000 men in the armed forces. That leaves 55,000,000 workers to be placed in jobs—or more than 9,000,000 more than were working in 1940.

The technological strides industry has taken during the war may make the problem even larger. Some Government experts estimate that if production, when peace comes, is no higher than the level of 1940, unemployment may rise to 12,000,000 or 15,000,000 workers.

Jobs for 55,000,000 workers is the ultimate goal, but most of the experts agree that that won't come for at least 18 months after the war. The immediate postwar problem, they say, is to keep unemployment from running up so high that it will take many years to bring it down again.

They figure that if business, Government and the individual communities are all set to go on the job of shifting from war to peace before the ink is dry on the peace papers, unemployment during the first six months may be held to 7,000,000 to 8,000,000.

During that first six months, according to present predictions, discharges from the armed forces and from war production will rapidly outrun job opportunities.

Labor Seen On Move.
About half the labor force will be on the move. Seven to nine million men and women will be leaving the armed forces. A large proportion of the 20,000,000 workers now engaged in war production and war services will be looking for work. Many of the civilian industries, now operating on a wartime basis, will have to lay off workers while they re-tool their plants. Men and women who held "duration jobs" will be displaced by returning servicemen.

Eighteen months after the war's end, however, "if all goes well," there will be a different picture. The report recently made to the President on postwar readjustment gave this outline of "not an ideal but a reasonable goal":

Six million workers will have withdrawn from the labor market. Employment in the manufacturing industries will have shrunk from 18,000,000 to 13,000,000 workers but the non-manufacturing industries will have increased from 21,000,000 to 24,000,000 workers. The self-employed will have increased from 4,000,000 to 5,000,000. Agriculture will have absorbed about 1,000,000 persons. About 3,000,000 workers will be counted among the unemployed.

Objectives of Conference.
The President's conference made nearly a hundred recommendations toward making the postwar adjustment as painless as possible, but all of them are aimed to cover that first critical six months or to reach that reasonable goal 18 months later.

The conference outlined these objectives:
To protect workers financially and to sustain the spending power of the people during the transition period through such measures as separation pay for those in the armed forces, more liberal and uniform unemployment compensation and general extension and improvement of the social security system.

To adopt "all reasonable measures" to accelerate the rate of conversion of war industry, the resumption of peacetime industry and the rapid provision of jobs in private industry.
To provide useful work during the transition period by extending educational opportunities or employing people on public works.

After that—more washing machines, etc.

Tomorrow: Proposals for demobilizing the armed forces.

CLARA—is United States war slang signifying all clear following an air raid. You'll be in the clear financially if you invest your earnings in War Bonds. Back the attack with an extra $100 War bond in September.

PORTRAIT OF AN IDLE, EMPTY MILK BOTTLE

Yes... idle, empty milk bottles are among Hitler's best friends. They waste vital materials, manpower and transportation for the United States—help delay the day when we'll finish wrecking the Reich! Return your empties promptly... Either take yours to the store or put them out for your milkman without delay.

House Group Favors Including Efficiency Test in War Contracts

The House Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds has voted to ask wartime procurement agencies to consider plants' time and manpower ratings in letting future contracts.

Henry J. Kaiser, West Coast shipbuilder, appeared before the committee yesterday to explain his war plant efficiency proposal, and the committee's action was taken after hearing his testimony.

Announcing the decision of the committee, Representative Lanham, Democrat, of Texas said: "I am convinced that the most important as well as the rarest currency in America today is manpower. War contracts should no longer be let upon the basis of the cost in money alone but upon the basis of time and manhours per unit. The contractor should win or lose, survive or perish on these tests."

Kaiser Tells of Support.
Mr. Kaiser said he had official support for his plan designed to conserve manpower by granting war contracts on the competitive basis of manpower efficiency in war plants.

Charles E. Wilson, executive vice chairman of the War Production Board, is "fully in accord" with his proposal, Kaiser said in an interview yesterday, and so is William H. Davis, War Labor Board chairman.

"Mr. Davis is solidly in line with the idea that when the Nation faces a manpower crisis it must make a tremendous effort to consolidate its energy through effective use of its manpower," Kaiser said.

"The Army, Navy and Maritime Commission, under Mr. Kaiser's plan, would award contracts to producers who make the "best showing per man per ship or tank or ton."

"The resulting competition would be healthy," Mr. Kaiser declared. "I'm fully convinced that a great deal of the speed the Kaiser shipyards have been able to get is the result of competition among our own yards. Our measure of efficiency is the man-hour total for each Liberty ship."

Contracts could be placed also, Mr. Kaiser said, on the basis of the proportion of women employed, freeing men for other essential work. He noted that his Pacific Coast yards now have 30 per cent women workers.

The Government procurement agencies, particularly the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission, are "the key to the whole plan," Mr. Kaiser said, through their contract-placing powers. The commission, he noted, already operates to a considerable extent on that basis.

The shipbuilder said the proposal could be tied into the sweeping interagency plan to ameliorate the West's manpower shortage, without a wholesale removal of war contracts from that area, adding:

"I think the Government's overall West Coast plan—if it can be operated without creating a big backlog of resentment, and if handled intelligently with industry, Government and labor co-operation—has much promise."

Mr. Kaiser said his plan should be administered so as not to penalize small plants and small industries, which could not be expected to achieve man-hour records comparable to big mass-production companies. Workable yardsticks can be laid down for small operators, he said, to keep them all in war work unless their man-hour figures were "out of all reason."

Hal W. Hardinge Dies; Was Mining Engineer

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Hal W. Hardinge, 87, mining and metallurgical engineer and inventor and chairman of the board of Hardinge Co., Inc., died yesterday.

A holder of patents on more than 60 devices, he was awarded the James Douglas gold medal of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, and the John Scott medal, awarded by the City of Philadelphia, for his "advancement of the mechanical arts."

One of his most important inventions was the conical ball, an apparatus for the fine grinding of ores. He also invented a fire-damp detector to detect coal gas in mines.

He was born in San Antonio, Tex.

Sydney Prentice, 70, Dies; Was Scientific Draftsman

Sydney Prentice, 70, a native of Washington who was with the Carnegie Museum in Pittsburgh for 40 years as a scientific draftsman and draftsman, died yesterday in Pittsburgh, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

Mr. Prentice recently completed a series of illustrations for the National Museum here. He was a graduate of the University of Kansas.

He is survived by his widow and a daughter, Mrs. Peter Allemano, who lives at 2725 Terrace road S.E.

Policeman's First Job Is to Arrest Horse

By the Associated Press.
ATHENS, Tenn.—Two days after Sam Bishop was elected to the Athens police force he received his first call.

It was only a horse gobbling up three Victory gardens. The policeman took the horse to jail, tied it near the bars, without ball.

"I don't know just what we'll charge the animal with," said Mr. Bishop of his initial arrest, "but that is a grave offense, eating the gardens."

General Lee could have told you

Every great soldier in history has agreed on this point: Armies must have money to buy the materiel of war. General Lee could have told you this. So could General Washington and Napoleon. Today, Generals Eisenhower and MacArthur say the same. . . This is why you are asked for money: Not a gift, not a contribution—but a loan which will be paid back with good interest. You'll receive four dollars for every three you invest. So for security—as well as necessity—buy War Bonds often . . . regularly . . . and as many as you can.

U. S. Chamber Insists Renegotiation Law Can't Be Justified

By the Associated Press. The United States Chamber of Commerce today told the House Ways and Means Committee that the renegotiation law for recapture of "excess profits" in war contracts is "dangerous and un-American" and cannot be justified.

E. C. Alvord, head of the chamber's Federal Finance Committee, testified that "the power of taxation is the only acceptable power granted to the Congress by which profits in the possession of a citizen can be taken for the use of his government."

"If the Congress determines that our existing tax laws are inadequate to prevent in every case the retention of excessive profits," he said, "then the tax laws should be amended."

"If appropriate amendments to existing tax laws are adopted, they should become effective as of April 28, 1942, and every war contractor or subcontractor should have the option to pay the additional taxes thus imposed upon his 1942 profits or to remain subject to renegotiation."

Meanwhile, the investigating staff of the House Naval Affairs Committee, recommended government aid to industry in postwar reconstruction to civilian production, but retention of the Renegotiation Act to prevent "excessive" profits on war contracts.

The Naval Affairs Committee's report, the result of a long investigation, was released by Robert E. Kline, general counsel, after it had been approved by Chairman Vinson. Mr. Kline said a long list of recommendations would be submitted to the full committee, probably early next week, for passing along to the Ways and Means Committee.

In summarizing its report, the Naval Affairs Committee stated that those charged with the administration of the law "have demonstrated the extreme usefulness of the act to the procurement program, and they have saved the public treasury very large sums of money."

While saying that the Renegotiations Act is not the "proper vehicle" for meeting the problems of post-war readjustments, the report asserted "there is an obligation on the part of Government to assist industry in meeting those problems. It is recommended, among other things, that the Government provide severance pay for employees whose jobs will end with cancellation of Government war contracts."

Senator Ellender Urged To Seek Governorship

By the Associated Press. Senator Ellender, Democrat, of Louisiana is giving "serious thought" to invitations from personal and political friends in Louisiana to become a candidate for Governor.

While refusing to state definitely that he would announce, the Senator, who was elected last year for another six-year term in the Senate, said yesterday he had received so many requests that he felt he should give it close consideration.

Senator Ellender's friends expressed belief that he was the only hope of solidifying forces of the late Senator Huey P. Long's political machine in the coming gubernatorial election.

Cold-Storage Stocks Of Foods, Except Eggs And Pork, Increase

By the Associated Press. The War Food Administration reported today that cold storage stocks of frozen fruits and vegetables, butter, cheese, frozen poultry, beef, lamb, mutton and lard, increased substantially during August, while those of eggs and pork declined.

Creamery butter stocks reached a record level of 231,359,000 on September 1, excepting those of a year ago by 79,000,000 pounds. Much of this butter represented reserves accumulated for military use.

Cheese stocks increased 26,350,000 pounds, but the 209,322,000 pounds in storage on September 1 were 70,583,000 less than a year ago. The WFA said beef stocks increased in August from 88,046,000 to 101,451,000 pounds, while stocks of pork declined from 544,297,000 to 495,360,000 pounds. However, supplies of both beef and pork were larger than a year ago, the latter being about 16,000,000 pounds greater.

Lard stocks on September 1 totaled 227,623,000 pounds compared with 212,543,000 a month ago and with 75,840,000 a year ago. Eggs were reduced during August by 1,308,000 cases, leaving supplies of 9,106,000 cases in storage on September 1. This was 2,630,000 cases more than the holdings of a year ago.

Fairfax Dairyman's Death Is Ruled Accidental

A certificate of accidental death in the fatal injury of George H. Taylor, Fairfax County dairyman, on Monday when his truck struck the rear of an A. B. & W. bus on Route 1, south of Alexandria, was issued yesterday by Dr. John A. Sims, Alexandria coroner.

Police said the verdict absolved James A. Jones, 26, driver of the bus. Another inquest will be held tomorrow in the death yesterday of

H. C. Zimmerman, 65, of Gum Spring, from injuries received last Friday when he was struck by an A. B. & W. bus at King and Pitt streets. James W. Craig, 35, driver of the bus, was charged with reckless driving and released pending the inquest, police said. Police said Mr. Zimmerman's death was the second fatality from traffic accidents in the city this year.

'Coconut Radio' Gives News in South Seas Despite Censors

By the Associated Press.
PAPEETE, Tahiti, Sept. 1 (Delayed)—The South Pacific is a great whispering gallery. Despite censorship and the wartime imposition of restrictions on already limited communication facilities, news gets from island to island with incredible speed.

For example, we in Tahiti know what is going on at this or that island hundreds of miles away, even though some of these things may be military secrets. We know whether white or colored troops are stationed there.

Certain things which have happened in the Solomons, although withheld from the news by the War Department, are common knowledge here.

Recently there arrived in Papeete a copy of an Australian newspaper which said an island 120 miles from here had been bombed by German raiders. Papeete was pretty certain the report was in error, and made a checkup. The island had not been bombed.

The inter-island intelligence service is known popularly as the "Coconut Radio." Just how it works nobody knows. Some islanders say it operates through clairvoyance, mental telepathy and sacred sharks.

In any event it is something developed out of necessity through the centuries by more or less homogeneous South Sea Islanders. Living on small islands scattered over millions of square miles of ocean, they needed a means of inter-island communication. Now the "Coconut Radio" is serving them well.

Marshall

Tunisia, had isolated the enemy, cut off his supplies, and made impossible the escape of even the enemy high command. Directly connected with the Allied domination of the air had been the punishing defeats of German fighter forces administered by our precision bombers in their daylight attacks on Northwestern Europe. The enemy had found it impossible to concentrate on the African front either through aircraft or enough skilled pilots to dent the overwhelming surge of British and American planes.

Some 252,415 German and Italian troops and a large amount of equipment were surrendered. This completed the conquest of the African continent and placed the United Nations in a position to launch more direct attacks on the southern face of the European fortress. (The decision to capture Sicily was made at the Casablanca conference in January, 1943).

Mediterranean Is Reopened.

But this was only one result of the victory. The Mediterranean was again open to Allied shipping which, by shortening the turnaround of vessels, in effect meant an immediate increase of shipping equivalent to some 240 vessels. A French Army had been reborn, celebrating its birthday by the capture of 48,719 prisoners following a deep penetration of the enemy's position. American troops had demonstrated their battle efficiency and had gained a wealth of experience which could be disseminated throughout the army. Allied air forces had successfully demonstrated a technique involving effective co-ordination with ground forces and the strategic application of air power. Unity of Allied effort, command and staff, had been demonstrated to the world in a most convincing manner, as evidence of the growing concentration of power which will sweep the enemy out of control of the European continent.

Seabees Built Jungle Airfield In 11-Day Rain, Navy Reports

Under a torrential rain which continued for 11 days, a battalion of Navy Seabees (construction battalion) carved an airfield out of a dense tropical jungle and had it ready for service in 13 days, the Navy reported yesterday.

During the construction period, 16 1/2 inches of rain fell. The airfield was described as one of the springboards of attack in the current New Guinea offensive.

Jungle. Huge trees were dynamited and bulldozers cut their way through the dense undergrowth. Work continued for 24 hours a day, during the heavy rain storms and under bombing by Japanese planes.

But 13 days later the 3,000-foot runway, 150 feet wide, was surfaced with a foot and a half of crushed coral rock and the field was ready for use by planes engaged in their offensive. Five days later the field was extended another 1,500 feet and now has been lengthened to 5,900 feet.

In recognition of this construction feat, the battalion has received two letters of commendation.

Military School to Open

LEONARDSTOWN, Md., Sept. 16.—The Charlotte Hall Military School will open September 20, it was announced today by M. D. Burgee, principal. Mr. Burgee said a heavy enrollment is anticipated.

Two Nearby Officers Made Army Captains

Two residents of nearby Maryland and Virginia have been promoted by the Army from first lieutenant to captain, the War Department announced today. They are: Austin George Pahlow, 45, Adjutant General's Department, 3206 Bunker Hill road, Mount Rainier, and John Oscar Blades, 39, also in the Adjutant General's Department, 1617 North Queen street, Arlington.

A native of New York City, Capt. Pahlow has lived in Mount Rainier since 1928. He is a veteran of the World War and enlisted last September for duty in this war. He was employed as a postal inspector at the time of his enlistment and is now stationed in Seattle. He is married and has two children. Capt. Blades enlisted in the Army Specialist Corps about a year ago.

He was a supervisor with the Aetna Life Insurance Co. here at the time of his enlistment. A native of the District, Capt. Blades was graduated from Eastern High School. He is married and is now stationed at the Pentagon Building.

was fined $600 in Municipal Court yesterday for failure to provide police with the necessary records and information of purchased second-hand articles as required under the Pawn Act. The defendant pleaded guilty to six charges before Judge Armond Scott.

Pawn Inspector James Bertain said Greenbaum had purchased 88 used articles, including jewelry and radios, without notifying police and making the proper entries in his record book.

Report to the Housewife

Like the sailor who goes fowling on the lake in Central Park when he comes ashore on leave, I couldn't resist looking over the marketing situation during my recent vacation in New England. And, after listening to the complaints of shortages and high prices in the food line here in the Nation's Capital for the past many months, I was more than interested to find that conditions in the North are more involved than in Washington.

Whereas, here in general, diligent search and a dogged nature can track down approximately what the housekeeper desires, up there no amount of perseverance and effort can produce some items. Women line up for hours in long queues that stretch around the block to buy a quarter of a pound of butter—only to have the "No More Butter" sign set in the shop window while they are still six or seven stores away from their goal. Meats are really few and far between, bacon very hard to obtain and fresh fruits and vegetables scarce and relatively poor in quality. The more costly specialty stores had, naturally, more and better items to offer, but even they were "slim pickins" in many instances. Eggs in the cheaper stores were still priced well above the majority to be found here, and although fresh fish of nearly every kind is always right at one's elbow, so to speak, it was found in little variety and at prices comparable to those in Washington.

So, it was really with relief that I found myself back making the rounds of our own markets... a situation that wouldn't have been plausible to me a month ago. Whether it is by comparison with the conditions in the North, or whether it really is better here than it was a few weeks ago—which the market men assure me is the case—the picture gathered this week looks a good bit brighter in both supply and price.

Meats, most dealers say, are considerably easier than they have been, with "some of everything" to be found for the seeking. There are no overlarge supplies of beef, lamb or veal, but a few cuts of each type are available in most markets. The change in ration values, of course, has much to do with the increase or decrease in such supplies, and most highly rationed cuts will very likely be the easiest to find. Thus it becomes a matter of just how far your ration book will go and how much your budget will stand. There are still plenty of smoked and fresh hams and shoulders to be found, some meat sundries to be had and luncheon meats—at a price. Chickens—both fryers and stewing fowl—are very plentiful and reasonably priced. This situation has, of course, done a lot to ease the pain of meat rationing—as we all learned what chickens meant to us when we couldn't get them during the winter. Turkeys will not be released for civilian consumption until after October 1st, due, as you know, to the necessity for sending early shipments overseas for our boys for Thanksgiving. There are few, if any, ducks available here. There is a good supply of plump squabs on hand.

Storms off the coast and the general apathy of the fishermen in the North have cut down the supply of fish in wide variety of kinds, but supplies will probably increase as the weather grows colder and demand picks up. Dealers warn, however, that oysters will be scarcer and more expensive this year, due to the lack of labor to dredge the beds and the demands of the armed forces. Women are replacing men as shuckers in many places, so that particular difficulty has been surmounted.

Produce is generally plentiful and of good quality, but far from cheap. The earliest Concord grapes are in, to supplement the usual variety of Tokays and Malagas from California. Some Ribiers are still to be had. Fresh figs (green) are welcome newcomers, and all kinds of plums help make us forget the disappointing peach season. Sweet little pineapples, quinces and a few damsons for preserving have been noted. Seckel pears, as well as beautiful Bartlets, excellent apples, fresh prunes, cantaloupes, honeydews and big Persian melons offer further delights in the fruit line. Grapefruit are staging their annual disappearing act.

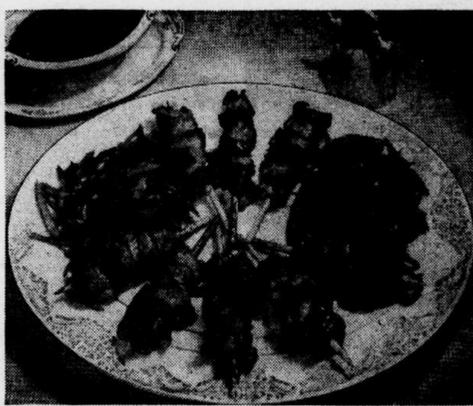

In the vegetable roster we find snap beans, egg plant, tomatoes, potatoes—both white and sweet—corn, squash, beets, turnips, celery, spinach and green peppers all in the "better buy" group. There are also nice green tomatoes for pickling, and bunches of the long red peppers that add so much to the spicy jars. Acorn squash is proving popular, and there is some broccoli and cauliflower to supplement the more familiar cabbage. Iceberg lettuce is higher in price than the "Boston" type, and so is the green Pascal celery compared with the white variety. A few parsnips are to be had—if you like them.

Here and There: Imports of tea are increasing, due to improved shipping conditions. According to Secretary Wickard, 20,000,000 Victory gardens were planted this year. Goal for next season is 22,000,000.

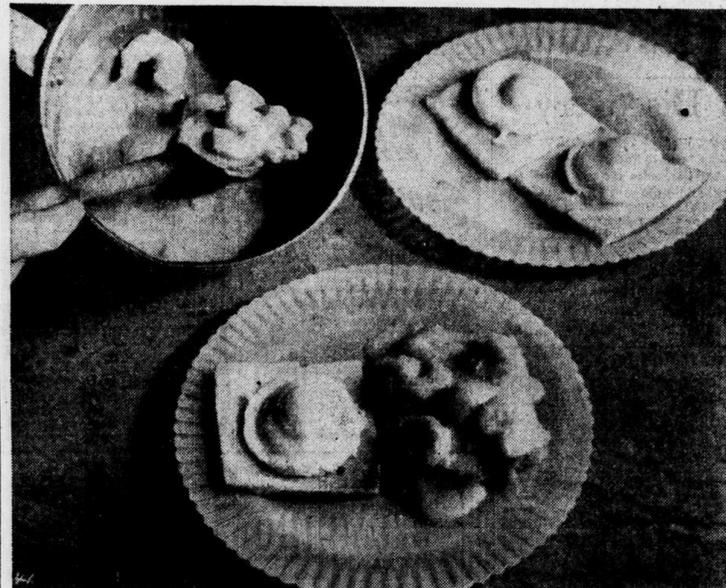

By Betsy Caswell,
Women's News Editor.

Public Affairs Pamphlet No. 84 is entitled "Jobs and Security for Tomorrow," by Maxwell S. Stewart. Interesting and very informative. May be purchased for 10 cents from the Public Affairs Committee, 20 Rockefeller Plaza, New York City... Start thinking about Christmas cards now, for the boys overseas. Many local stores have a good lot on display for you already to aid you in conforming to the request of the Army and Navy that you mail greeting cards for men in the services out of the country between now and October 15. Mark them "Christmas mail" so they won't be delivered too soon... "Feed From the Sea" is the name of Conservation Bulletin No. 33 issued by the Fish and Wildlife Service of the Department of the Interior, which contains much learned information about the fish and the fishing industry of New England. If you're looking for a fish recipe book, though, you'll be disappointed... But the service has issued a booklet on cooking domestic rabbit. It's "Wildlife Leaflet 240," in case you're interested. Write for it to the Fish and Wildlife Service, United States Department of Interior, Merchandise Mart, Chicago 54, Ill... Next time you prod your husband to ask for a raise, he may shut you up with the remark that you're just an Axis propagandist. "They" tell us that Mr. Hiller and his pals are trying to raise United States prices by suggesting to women here that they use their husbands' higher wartime wages to raise the cost of living by paying more than they should for essentials. So don't be surprised if your better half pins your ears back with that one... The Office of the Coordinator of Fisheries says that we can expect bigger and better oysters this season—but not as many of them because the armed services will consume approximately 40,000 gallons a week. The oysters will be better and bigger because the beds have recovered from the effects of the 1938 hurricane which jostled them so much that the oysters haven't been resting easy and growing fat until this year... Even rancid fat should be salvaged. We are now told. The need for waste fats is so great that, although some of the glycerin content is lost in rancid fats, butchers have been asked to accept them just the same... The Poultry and Egg National Board reports that there should be good supplies of poultry and eggs available for civilians this year, despite the fact that we are eating more eggs than ever before... There'll be fewer imported tree nuts, such as cashews and brazils, but adequate crops of our own varieties, such as walnuts, filberts, pecans and almonds... The first light frost is the signal to gather all green tomatoes in your Victory garden. Pull up the whole plants with tomatoes attached and hang them, root end up, in the cellar or garage, or wherever the temperature stays between 55 and 70 degrees. The tomatoes will ripen gradually and well under this treatment... Chicken feathers are being used in Chienkai for camouflage work... The Department of Agriculture has put out a fine bulletin, "Sewing Machines, Cleaning and Adjusting," Farmers' Bulletin No. 1944, which will help tremendously in keeping that domestic jewel in fine working order. The booklet is for sale by the superintendent of documents, Government Printing Office, for 10 cents.

"City chicken" is usually made by alternating cubes of veal and pork on long skewers, the meat often marinated first in vinegar and oil or french dressing. Flour the meat or not, as you prefer, and season with salt and pepper. Brown on all sides in fat, add two to three tablespoons water, cover and let cook slowly for 45 minutes. Serve on the skewers.

Unexpected guests—with rationing and all? Don't despair—just combine a few cooked shrimp with a luscious and easily made tomato sauce, and pour them over poached eggs on toast. See recipe to the left.

Tomato Sauce With Shrimp Over Eggs

1 cup boiled shrimps.
1 can condensed tomato soup.
½ cup milk or cream.
Melt the butter and saute the shrimps. Then add the tomato soup with milk or cream and heat. A little chopped parsley may be added just before serving.

Readers' Clearing House

This space is devoted to an exchange of ideas, recipes, housekeeping short cuts and suggestions between the housewives in Washington and vicinity. Please send your contribution or requests to "Readers' Clearing House, the Woman's Page, The Evening Star."

The views expressed in this "open forum" are not necessarily those of The Star, but are simply an exchange of opinions between readers of the Woman's Page.

As it is obviously impossible for this department to test all recipes offered for the column, we cannot assume responsibility for them.

ADVICE NEEDED.
(Requested by Mrs. G. W. Van H., Washington.)
I'm wondering if the Readers' Clearing House will help me with my problem?
I am a duration widow. My husband and I have decided to sell our small house so that we will be free to go wherever he can get a job after the war. This is my first real move and it will be to a room. What household supplies and furnishings will it pay us to keep and store? My main problem, to my present knowledge, is what to do about linens, condiment sets, glassware, pottery dishes and our collection of books and records.

I would appreciate advice from any one experienced in moving.

HOT MILK SPONGE CAKE.
(Thanks to Mrs. Z. C., Washington.)
4 eggs.
2 cups flour.
2 cups sugar.
2 teaspoons baking powder.
Pinch of salt.
1 cup of hot sweet milk.
1 heaping tablespoon of butter.
2 teaspoons of vanilla.
Beat eggs very light. Add sugar gradually, beat very briskly for 10 minutes. Sift together the flour, baking powder and salt and add to mixture. Heat milk with butter to boiling point. Add, beating rapidly. Flavor and bake in preheated oven at 350 degrees.

BROWN SUGAR PIE: FOOL-PROOF PIECRUST HINT.
(Thanks to Mrs. B. H., Washington.)
In answer to Mrs. W. A. L.'s request for sugar pie, I am sending my recipe which I think is unexcelled.
1 cup firmly packed brown sugar.
1 heaping tablespoon flour (mix with sugar).
1 cup cream.
1 large tablespoon butter.
2 egg yolks.
Mix in saucepan and cook over slow flame for about five minutes, stirring constantly. Place in cooked pie shell, cover with meringue and bake in slow oven for about 10 minutes. Pie will be slightly runny, but delicious.

Whatever recipe you use for pastry will be improved by reserving ¼ of the shortening to be added the very last, thus ensuring success.

SPICY MEAT ENTREE.
(Thanks to Mrs. M. E. W., Washington.)
Here is a recipe for a tasty, spicy meat entree:
1 pound ground beef.
2 or 3 fried leeks or onions (sliced).
1 egg.
Salt and pepper to taste.
½ pound ground veal.
3 slices softened stale bread.
1 can tomato puree or fresh tomatoes.
A few bay leaves.
1 peppercorn.
Mix beef, veal, fried leeks or onions and softened stale bread. When well mixed, stir in egg. Form into small patties, about 2 inches in diameter and fry till brown. Have tomato sauce with spices cooking gently and drop fried patties into sauce as finished. Cook slowly for about one hour so spice penetrates meat. Serve with steamed rice.

COOKED FUDGE.
(Thanks to Mrs. H. M., Washington.)
For one of the readers who requested a good cooked fudge recipe, here is mine, which never seems to fail.
2 cups sugar.
¼ cup cocoa.
1 teaspoon flour.
Pinch of salt.
1 tablespoon butter.
Mix sugar, cocoa, flour and salt, add milk and blend well. Place over a medium flame until boiling begins, but do not stir. Then turn flame very, very low and cook until a firm ball stage. Add one tablespoon butter and beat till mixture thickens. Pour on greased dish. Nuts may be added along with the butter if desired.
The Readers' Clearing House is as interesting as it is helpful.

(Thanks to Mrs. E. S. T., Washington.)
I have been wondering about the readers who have difficulty in making icings and meringues, even though they follow the recipes carefully. I think I know the answer. When separating the yolk from the white, it is important that the germ (the small gritty portion) go with the white; otherwise it will not beat up high and light. I have been surprised to find how many good cooks have trouble because they fail to do that simple thing.

Storing Home Dried Food

Home dehydration of this summer's fruits and vegetables may be of little help to next winter's table unless care is exercised in proper packaging and storing.

Adequate protection against moisture is an essential consideration for these products, particularly in humid climates, points out A. F. Wendler, technical section manager of the Du Pont Co.'s cellophane division, in a statement aimed at preventing waste of foodstuffs through improper procedures. Mr. Wendler and his associates have been conducting experiments in packaging dehydrated foods for several years.

"Every housewife knows that a leaky seal will ruin a jar of canned tomatoes or string beans," he remarks. "She should be equally aware that a poor container will similarly cause spoilage of many home-dried foods."

"Not all vegetables can be dehydrated successfully. Sweet corn, apples and parsley and celery (for soup flavoring) can be dehydrated and packaged without much difficulty if they are properly processed according to instructions issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. The amateur dehydrator confronts real problems when she tackles the more hygroscopic foods (those which absorb moisture easily). Even the industrial dehydrators, whose business has undergone tremendous expansion during the war, have had to overcome many difficulties in preparing and packaging these products for the Army and for lend-lease shipments.

"Carrots and cabbage are among the more troublesome vegetables. They are not only very hygroscopic but oxidize easily. The Army is, therefore, packaging them in tin cans immediately after dehydration. During the packing, the air is replaced in the can by an inert gas, nitrogen or carbon dioxide."

For the safe storing of most fruits and vegetables dehydrated in the home, a container must be used which has the greatest resistance to passage of moisture vapor.

"Cellophane of the moistureproof type provides an excellent protective package for dehydrated foods," Mr. Wendler advises. "However, it is not always easy for the consumer to obtain this type of film at present due to its great demand for war packaging. It is, therefore, important for the housewife to know the difference between moistureproof cellophane and the type known to the trade as 'plain transparent,' which is grease-proof, but not moistureproof. The moistureproof cellophane used for this purpose seals to itself upon application of a hot iron, and this is a simple test. This type of cellophane is available at some of the stores which sell home-freezing supplies, as it is extensively used in packaging frozen foods. The plain—or non-moistureproof—film should not be used."

"Where cellophane is used, it is a good idea to purchase a bag the amount of dehydrated food needed for one family meal. A number of these bags may be placed in a crock, jar or box with a tight-fitting lid. The food then can be kept in one bag at a time without exposing the remainder to moisture absorption."

"In the event that the home dehydrator cannot obtain moistureproof cellophane or other satisfactory moisture-resistant paper type containers she may turn to the traditional home-preserving receptacle, the glass jar, one of the safest and most available containers under present conditions."

"In all cases the packaging of dehydrated foods should be done promptly under sanitary conditions and out of contact with dust. Containers should be kept at the top in order to displace as much air as possible—to keep down oxidation. Extreme cold will not injure dehydrated foods, since they contain so little water. But prolonged storage in a very warm place will cause deterioration and light affects some products. Storage in a cool, dark, dry place is best."

"Home dehydrators should also make sure that the interior of larger pieces of fruit or vegetables is thoroughly dried. Too often one assumes that because the outer pieces feel dry the whole batch is sufficiently dehydrated, whereas the larger pieces may be still moist on the inside. Then when all are packaged together the moisture in the large pieces may be given off and cause the whole batch to become moldy."

"The observance of these precautions will help prevent spoilage of home dehydrated foods due to improper dehydration or packaging. As pointed out previously the difficulties encountered in the commercial dehydrator are magnified when the housewife tackles the problem."

Vegetable Chowder Good Dish; Easy and Quick to Prepare

You won't get ration arithmetic headaches if you do a little brush-up work in the economy possibilities of your point coupon budget. You can combine foods that are rationed with extenders that aren't rationed, for example, so that you will get added dividends of appetite satisfaction and nutrition for every point involved.

Here's one "extender" idea: Buy a package of quick-frozen corn, which is all ready to cook, and turn it into a meal-in-one chowder for six by the addition of celery, tomatoes and milk. With crackers or bread and butter and fruit or a salad, you will have a nourishing, satisfying and appetizing meal, easy to serve and easy to prepare on a hurried day.

The possibilities of chowder are varied, for a basic characteristic of the dish is that it is composed of many ingredients. The very name comes from "chaudiere," a soup pot of the French coast, in which a steaming, savory combination of foods was simmered into a thick and thrifty broth. Quick-frozen lima beans and a slice of bacon, with onions and potatoes, make another good chowder. You will be sure of garden-fresh flavor as well as a full quota of vitamins and minerals when you use quick-frozen vegetables. And you will find them a special boon on busy days, for all work of preparing them for cooking was done before quick-freezing. Remember to cook them in the small amount of water specified on their cartons in order to preserve their vitamins.

Place over boiling water, add butter and flour and mix well. Add lima bean liquor and milk gradually and cook until thickened, stirring constantly for lima beans and thoroughly. Serves 4 to 6.

CORN AND TOMATO CHOWDER.
2 tablespoons chopped onion.
¼ cup chopped celery.
4 tablespoons butter.
2 cups canned tomatoes.
1 box (10 ounces) quick-frozen golden sweet corn.
¼ teaspoon soda.
1½ teaspoons salt.
¼ teaspoon pepper.
1 teaspoon sugar.
3 cups hot milk, scalded.
Sauté onion and celery in butter until golden brown. Add tomatoes and frozen corn and cook 5 minutes. Add soda, salt, pepper and sugar and stir well. Add to hot milk and serve at once. Serves 6.

LIMA BEAN CHOWDER.
1 box (12 ounces) quick-frozen lima beans.
2 cups boiling water, salted.
3 cups lima bean liquor and milk.
1 slice bacon, diced.
¼ cup chopped onions.
1½ tablespoons butter.
1½ tablespoons flour.
1 cup diced cooked potatoes.
2 teaspoons salt.
Dash of pepper.
Drop frozen lima beans into briskly boiling salted water, bring again to a boil and boil 16 to 18 minutes, or until just tender. Drain, reserving liquor; add milk to make 3 cups. Chop lima beans. Sauté bacon and onions in top of double boiler over direct heat until browned.

Picture Charts Tell Story

Here's news for P-TA members of the school library, school teachers, school superintendents—all the people who're looking for up-to-date teaching materials for home economics classes.

In many schools one of the first lessons in the home economics room this fall will be on canning tomatoes. And, as every teacher and student knows, pictures are a big help in putting that lesson across. The new USDA picture folder on canning tomatoes tells the story of tomatoes from vine to jar in 20 pictures. It's free to any school who requests it from the United States Department of Agriculture.

Then there's a new set of pictures on home canning—the size to post on the school bulletin board. They give in big, clear pictures the step-by-step story of how to can a fruit and a vegetable and how to use the wartime glass jars, pressure canners and other canning equipment. The price of this set of 20 canning charts is 50 cents, and orders should be sent with cash or money order to the superintendent of documents of the Government Printing Office.

For classes in food conservation the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics has prepared two more sets of educational picture charts. One called "Get the Good From Your Food," shows in dozens of picture close-ups how to prepare and cook food so as to stop the invisible waste of food. A companion set called "Fight Food Waste in the Home," gives the right ways to store food to keep it from wilting, molding, wasting in ways you can see.

Then, to help keep household equipment in service, there's another set of 10 picture posters called "Make Your Household Equipment Last." And still another set abouts of "How to Repair Your Electric Goods."

For more information about this educational picture material for classes on the home front, write the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.

Apple Crop In Full Swing; Wise to Can

Those who live in the country may perhaps use some of their gas ration tickets to take advantage of the offers which some orchard owners make to come with their own baskets, and get a supply of apples for canning, and of course, for cooking at a low price. It will be well worth while to can apple sauce and to make butter if any can be found at a reasonable price.

As you want to get the most from your fruit, I suggest that applesauce be made without paring fruit, and that when paring is necessary as it is for sliced apples, it should be done as thinly as possible. Better get out the knife sharpener!

CANNED APPLESAUCE.
Wash, quarter and core apples. Cook with just enough water to cover. Cook covered over low heat until apples are very soft. Rub through coarse strainer, season to taste, add sugar if desired, and pack in hot jars. Partially adjust seal, and process 10 minutes in boiling water bath. Remove from bath and finish seal, except when self-sealing jars are used.

CANNED SLICED APPLES.
Peel, quarter, core and slice apples. Boil for 1 minute in thin sirup. Pack in hot jars, cover with boiling sirup. Partially adjust seal, and process for 15 minutes in boiling water bath. Remove from bath and finish seal, except when self-sealing jars are used. E. M. B.

ALL RIGHT, IF YOU DON'T BELIEVE IT YOU CAN ASK IT A QUESTION.

HAW, HAW! SO DIZZY LOOKING.

DIZZY? ME? AR. A WISE CRACKING KIDDO, EH?

WHAT YOU NEED IS A LITTLE OF THE OLD WHAMMY.

HERE'S A FEW ANTS ON YOU.

HEY! THERE IS ANTS ON ME!

A CAR COMING... I GUESS GRANDPA WANTS TO SEE IF I'M ON THE JOB. I'M STAYING RIGHT HERE IN THE SHADE.

BEEF! HOLD IT JOE, WHILE I LOOK 'EM OVER.

JUST FILLS THE BILL. DRIVE UP TO HOUSE AND I'LL MAKE 'EM AN OFFER.

WHY WASTE GOOD DOUGH, BOSS? NOBODY'S WATCHIN' 'EM. SOME DARK NIGHT...

LAY OFF I'M THE BOSS.

SIR OAKY!

OH! THERE YOU ARE, SIR OAKY!

BAM SLAM BIFF

DEAR ME! WHY DO I JUST STAND HERE? WHY DON'T I DO SOMETHING??

WE CANNOT ESCAPE THIS ENCLOSED VALLEY, MOANED ONE OF THE BLACKS: "YOUR ENEMIES WILL HUNT US DOWN."

"IT IS WE WHO WILL HUNT THEM DOWN WHEN THE TIME COMES! THE JUNGLE LORD ANSWERED GRIMLY.

THEY SAID "SAVAH!" HE EXAMINED MY TONGUE AND SAID I WAS A VERY SICK MAN! HE WROTE OUT THIS PRESCRIPTION AND CHARGED ME TWO DOLLARS!

THEN HE SET THE REFUGEES TO WORK MAKING WEAPONS.

THE OLD FAMILY DOCTOR OWES ME TEN BUCKS SINCE LAST FALL FOR PAINTING HIS CAR. I CAN'T SEEM TO COLLECT IT!

WHY DON'T CHASE GET SICK AND SQUARE IT THAT WAY?

TELL YOU WHAT—I'LL APPOINT YOU MY OFFICIAL COLLECTOR! YOU TAKE THIS BILL AND GO TO THE OLD DOC AND COLLECT!

SURE! I'LL COLLECT IT!

IT'S GOOD TO HAVE A LITTLE PAL LIKE JEFF! HE COMES IN MIGHTY HANDY SOMETIMES!

DID YOU SEE THE DOC?

YEH, I SEEN HIM!

WHAT DID HE SAY?

I'VE GOT TO KEEP SIKES' ATTENTION OVER HERE WHILE DUNN CRANKS BEHIND THAT PIPE—LINE!

LISTEN, SIKES! MAYBE WE CAN MAKE A DEAL!

CRASH!

WHAT TH'!

WE'RE GOING TO LAND AT BAGDAD, DRAIN AND CLEAN THE GAS TANKS. THE MOTOR FILTERS ARE WAXING UP AGAIN.

THANKS, THIS IS ONE PLACE I'VE ALWAYS WANTED TO SEE.

THIS TOWN NEEDS A SHAKE-UP IN THE STREET-CLEANIN' DEPARTMENT.

IT'S SEEN BETTER DAYS, GABE... AND A HISTORY BOOK FULL OF WARS.

GABE, WE'RE BEING FOLLOWED! KEEP CLOSE TO ME, WE'LL STAY IN THE LIGHT.

THAT'S GOING TO BE TOUGH—UNLESS WE CAMP RIGHT HERE TILL DAYLIGHT!

WOW! IS THIS TRAIN HOT—AND DIRTY.

TREE SWALLOWS.
(Iridoprocne bicolor.)

Swallows are singing birds. They migrate during the day, stopping overnight at places they use year after year, known as swallow migration stations. Unless bad weather overtakes them or delays their time for departure, one may see the vast army roosting in the trees, usually close to marshes.

They are not swift travelers. A large body of water is circled rather than crossed.

The family, Hirundinidae, is cosmopolitan. In it are over 100 recognized species throughout the world. America has 31 species; with one exception, they are all peculiar to the Western Hemisphere.

Swallows are more air-minded than most birds. Much of their time is spent chasing insects of the airways. They naturally have very strong wings, but weak feet and short legs.

The tree swallow, also known as the blue-back, white-breasted, stump swallow or white-bellied, is the first one of its clan to arrive in the spring, the last to leave in autumn.

Arriving at least a month ahead of the ladies and younger generation until they are joined by them, the males are gay fellows flitting about with spirited songs and feasting on the early insects.

There is no trouble identifying these 6-inch birds. The upper parts are greenish pure white. The plumage, of course, is compact, as is that worn by all members of the family. Wedding finery is assumed in early spring. Only one suit each year.

The forked tail has the regulation feathers.

As soon as the ladies arrive, courting begins. At this time, home territory is staked off and jealously guarded. Friends now fight bitterly for the holes in trees and stumps "seen first." Of late years, homes built for their use have been readily accepted. There is some trouble between the swallows and the English sparrows. If the swallows have been occupying the homes before, the outery that help is so loud and persistent that help is forthcoming and the sparrows driven away.

The furniture for the nursery is feathers and grasses. There are from four to seven pure white eggs. The babies are an industrious husband and kind parent. The father is a very busy insect consumer and very welcome to them.

By autumn great flocks of tree swallows begin to gather in the marshes. They are joined by other members of the swallow clan. They travel together, the great majority of them spending the winter in Mexico.

War bonds are just as much a weapon as a warplane or a long-range gun; how many bonds do you own? "Back the attack with War bonds."

Uncle Ray's Corner

Last fall while I was watching a football game a good-sized flock of geese came flying over the field. There probably were 40 or 50 birds in the flock and they formed a huge "V" in the sky.

Catching sight of the "V," the big home-coming crowd set up a cheer. The "V" seemed a sign of victory. Whether the crowd was thinking mainly of winning the war or winning the game it is hard to say.

Long before this war was started wild geese flew in "V" formation. It is a custom of the goose world. An old gander commonly leads the flock, taking his place at the point of the "V."

Just when or why that formation was adopted by these birds is not known. We may note, however, that men with guns find it harder to bring down geese on the wing than if they flew one straight behind another or bunched together.

The speed of geese is another help to save them from hunters. Often they fly at a rate of more than a mile a minute.

On this continent the Canada goose is the most common of the wild geese. It nests in many parts of Canada, as far north as the valley of the Yukon River. It also nests in some of the cooler parts of the United States.

The nest almost always is placed on the ground, but cases are known where Canada geese have nested in trees. These birds choose nesting sites which are out of the way and hard for hunters to find.

One day a flock of geese flew over the New York zoo. They were on their way to the South to spend the winter.

In that zoo were a number of tame geese which were enjoying a meal of cracked corn. Nine of the wild geese came down to join the tame ones. In the sight of a keeper they took their share of the corn.

With the help of more corn, the keeper coaxed seven of the wild geese into a wire cage. Very shortly their wings were clipped and they became regular members of the flock at the zoo.

The other two wild geese could not be coaxed into the cage, but stayed at the park through the winter, taking food which was tossed to them. In the spring these two flew northward and were not seen again.

THE WORLD AT ITS WORST—By Guyas Williams

"Mrs. James is the boy that owns the football's mother."
Q. My boss insists that I am wrong in writing: "The pipe is 12 foot long." But he says that "A 12-foot pipe" is correct. I don't get it.
A. Here is a simple rule for such constructions: If the phrase ends with long, high, wide, across, tall, etc., use the plural forms, as: 12 feet long; 2 feet high; 3 yards wide; 2 inches across; 6 feet tall. In your second construction, the singular form is correct, as: a 12-foot pipe; an 18-inch ruler; a 100-yard dash; a 60-pound weight; a 6-footer.
Q. My secretary scolds me constantly for beginning a sentence with the pronoun I, telling me I ought to be ashamed of myself. So what?
A. Tell that young tyrant that it is always permissible and often desirable to begin a sentence with I, and, but.

Handbook of Common English.
Q. Which is correct, "Of the three, John is the taller—tallest?"
A. It is customary in good usage to use taller (comparative degree) in speaking of two persons, and tallest (superlative) in speaking of three or more, as: John is the taller of the two; William is the tallest of the four brothers.
Q. In a society column I noticed the phrase "the bride-to-be's parents." Surely this cannot be right.
A. Society page English often is dazzlingly spectacular. Such a horrid locution as "bride-to-be's" should never have been written, since a bride is "a woman newly married, or about to be married (Merriam-Webster's)." "Bride-to-be's," therefore, is equivalent to "the-woman-about-to-be-married-to-be's parents." Wow! Reminds me of the remark of the little-girl-next-door: "The grenade got stuck in his teeth after he pulled the pin out!"

Sour Milk

Stuck with some sour milk? Don't waste it—home economists point out that the food value of sour milk is the same as that of sweet milk and it is easier to digest. Use it in some of your baked goods, adding a dash of soda to neutralize the sourness. Go easy on the soda—no more than one-half teaspoon to one cup of sour milk—or it will leave an unpleasant after-taste.

Taxpayers Must File Returns for 3 Years By Next March 15

By HAROLD B. ROGERS.

As tax declarations poured into the offices of collectors of internal revenue throughout the country today from those who met the deadline by mailing before last midnight, it was pointed out that next March taxpayers must file returns for three different years on two different forms.

One of these forms will be for an accurate report on both incomes and taxes for two years, 1942 and 1943. The second form will be similar to the one over which people have just finished struggling. It will be for the purpose of estimating income and taxes for the calendar year 1944, and arranging to pay.

Out of the calculations on three different years on or before next March 15, taxpayers may come to one of several different conclusions. They may find they are underpaid or overpaid on the two years 1942 and 1943. And they may find their withholding taxes are sufficient or insufficient to meet their obligations for 1944. It will be a job of balancing all three of these accounts. Many of the taxpayers will owe more to the Government, in which case he pays. If the taxpayer has overpaid the Government he will be repaid by check.

Tax Office Quiet.

Meanwhile, the local office of deputy collector in the Revenue Building, which has been the scene of lively activity for many days past, was quiet this morning. Only a few stragglers showed up to say they were late, and to make out their declaration. They faced penalties for late filing and late payments—if they had to pay.

All mailed declarations and payments postmarked by last midnight will be accepted as meeting the deadline, and will escape the penalty. It will be some time before any accurate reports on the number filing declarations can be obtained.

The taxpayers' lines were shorter than usual most of the day at the local office yesterday, but because the office stayed open until midnight the number of callers mounted to the record-breaking total of 8,000. This brought the grand total of visitors up to about 50,000 for the period since September 1. Thousands are known to have filed their returns by mail.

Small Returns Seen.

In Baltimore, A. Parks Rasin, acting internal revenue collector for Maryland and the District of Columbia, estimated that only one-quarter or one-third of Maryland's income taxpayers had filed since many were not required to do so under the law.

More would be received, he added, when the extended deadline for soldiers and sailors expired and as farmers' returns roll in between now and December 15.

The anticipated last-minute rush had not materialized last night at the Baltimore office, he said.

Papers sent to New York. Declarations made this week by taxpayers will be forwarded to the sorting section of the Revenue Bureau in New York, now being enlarged to 1,500 persons. All papers regarding each taxpayer will be brought together for cross reference. Officials estimated the total of these papers from taxpayers, their employers, and other persons who may have paid the taxpayers, may mount to 200,000,000.

On the next income tax date, December 15, many persons will have to pay their last installment of taxes for this year. Others will have paid their complete obligation by yesterday. Farmers who did not file by yesterday must file their declarations by December 15. Persons who find they have underestimated their tax liability for this year should file an "amended" declaration by December 15, to avoid a penalty. Each one, however, is allowed a 20 per cent margin of error.

The question of simplifying the income tax returns required of taxpayers is to come up in the new session of Congress, according to indications from leaders on Capitol Hill. But unless the principal features of the pay-as-you-go Revenue Act are substantially altered, taxpayers will face in March some of the most complicated tax returns in the history of the country.

Delays and Errors Slowing Distribution Of New Gas Books

Though new A gasoline books must be issued to about 133,000 District motorists before the currently valid No. 6 coupons expire, only 16,700 applications have been received so far by local ration boards, the District Office of Price Administration said today.

Handicapped by receipt of numerous faulty applications and by a lack of sufficient volunteer help, the boards have mailed out only an estimated 3,150 books, the OPA said.

Meanwhile, the American Automobile Association today joined with the OPA in pleading with motorists here to use greater care in filling out the application forms. The present "large-scale confusion" caused by faulty applications has the ration boards "virtually swamped and may result in large numbers of motorists not getting their A books on time," the AAA said in a statement.

The OPA pointed out that most frequent errors made by applicants have been in the section of the form requiring identification of the vehicle. Many motorists have failed to list the license number, State of registration, year model, make and body type of their car, or the serial numbers of their last-inspected tires.

Other applicants have neglected to enclose the required copy of their latest tire inspection record and the back cover from their present A ration book.

A motorists, the OPA said, should mail applications to their neighborhood ration board as soon as possible.

While the new A books are not expected to become valid until November 21, no date has been definitely announced. The District OPA is attempting to complete distribution of the new coupons by October 21, to safeguard against the remote possibility that the weekly East Coast gas ration might be increased to two gallons, which would make October 21 the expiration date for the currently good No. 6-A coupons, the last in the present books.

World Co-operation Urged By Women's Club Head

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 16.—A plea for immediate establishment of a basis for world co-operation in the postwar period was voiced yesterday by Mrs. John L. Whitehurst of Baltimore, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Speaking at a luncheon given in her honor by Gov. O'Connor and the Maryland State Council of Defense, Mrs. Whitehurst said she learned in talks with refugees of the German occupation on her recent trip to London that they looked to the United States, "even more than to Great Britain," to lead the way toward establishment of a lasting peace.

"How we can sit here quietly and think that we'll be secure without world co-operation is beyond me," the women's club president declared.

"Now is the time to build your post-war plans. I'm not going to tell you how to do it, or whether we want an alliance with Great Britain or not, but we must make an effort now."

"What's this I hear about you grown-ups mulling in on my strained food?"

Is it true that baby may not get his Full Dinner-Pail this year? That ration-weary adults are endangering the supply of prepared baby foods? That Mother may have to go back to the stove and make her own?

Ration expert Clementine Paddelford has investigated every angle of this subject that's so important in this blessed-evil year. Every mother will want to read her report, and her helpful suggestions, in "Babies Must Eat," Sunday in THIS WEEK Magazine, with

USE LESS GAS

KEEP WAR PLANTS HUMMING

War plants all over America are using more and more gas to speed production. That is why the War Production Board is asking you to use LESS gas.

We are cooperating with the War Production Board in every way we can to see that no war plant is without gas to make war materials—no home without gas for essential cooking, water heating, refrigeration or space heating.

Are you doing your part to save vital fuels?

HELP SAVE FUEL FOR THE WAR EFFORT
Uncle Sam asks you to check this list to satisfy yourself that you are doing all you can to save vital fuels.

HERE IS HOW YOU CAN HELP

- 1 Cook whole meals in oven. Cook "one-dish" meals on top burners.
- 2 Don't use running hot water for washing dishes, hands or for shaving. Repair leaky faucets. Heat no more water than necessary.
- 3 Never leave refrigerator door open. Cool cooked foods before placing in refrigerator.
- 4 Now is the time to have your heating system inspected. Don't wait for cold weather.
- 5 Winterize your home now by insulating and weather-stripping. It not only keeps your home warmer in winter but cooler in summer.
