

Russian Isolation Danger in Europe, Hoare Declares

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, Sept. 21.—Sir Samuel Hoare, British Ambassador to Communist-hating Generalissimo Francisco Franco's Spain, asserted yesterday that the great danger to Europe after the war was not Russian influence, but Russian isolation. In an address to Chelsea war workers, Sir Samuel, home for consultations after a recent meeting with Franco, said: "In any stable Europe the greatest of the Slav peoples, whose territories possess vast resources and whose achievements have amazed the world, must take their rightful place. Communism, for all the claims of some of its propagandists, is a national and not an international product. "It is brought about by internal conditions. If you fear it, you should so set your house in order that your social and political conditions will silence any demand for its introduction."

Famine and Anarchy Great Dangers.
Declaring that the two great dangers to a better Europe were famine and anarchy, Sir Samuel said that unless these specters can be driven away there is little hope for the political recovery of Europe. He said the third great need was liberty and added that European civilization could not live without it. The British Ambassador made no reference to Spain by name in his speech. He said there had been periods in history when European liberty was temporarily stifled and declared that the tyranny produced by Nazism and Fascism was the blackest of these chapters. "Sooner or later the breath of liberty always dissipates the encircling obscurity and revivifies the life of Europe," he declared. What particular course that spirit will take in Italy, Germany or any other country on the continent, Sir Samuel said he could not say, for "political constitutions, social conditions and economic needs will vary between one European people and another."

Broad Principles Uppermost.
"If we are wise," he said, "we shall accept these differences and make no attempt to impose uniformity upon a Europe that will never accept it. What matters to us are not details of constitutions or differences of habits and methods, but rather the broad principles without which civilized life is impossible." Sir Samuel declared that these broad principles should be focused upon the "revival and maintenance of human nature" in which the "police state" built up around state idolatry and racial bigotry has no place. "Just as I do not believe that any human being, however excellent he may be, can be safely entrusted with absolute power," Sir Samuel said, "so I am convinced that no state, however intelligent and well meaning may be its officials, can safely be allowed a monopoly of power. I share, therefore, the view of many of my continental friends who wish to see a renaissance of non-state activities in Europe."

War-time Regulations Raise Court Income

War-time regulations and the Health Department's campaign against insanitary restaurants are credited with a 24 per cent increase in Municipal Court revenue from fines in August over the same month last year. The increase was recorded despite a decrease in the number of cases heard last month compared to August last year. The total amount collected in fines last month was $29,284.24, compared with $71,853.10 for August a year ago.

The number of cases heard last month was 3,659, a decrease of 1,321 cases from the 5,180 trials held a year ago.

Restaurants Fined.
The Health Department's campaign against restaurant violators, which brought fines ranging from $25 to $300, is credited for the increase in the District branch of the court where health cases are heard. Last month the District Court collected $42,514.19 in fines, as contrasted to the $30,193.15 during the same month a year ago. Violations of OPA ceiling prices were held responsible for the increase in fines in the criminal division of the court. Fines as high as $1,000 for ceiling price violations were assessed against grocers and meat dealers, bringing the revenue from fines for the month to $7,012.40, compared with $2,961.30 for last August.

Traffic Fines Raised.
Traffic Court figures show that $45,757.65 was collected last month as compared to $38,879.40 a year ago. Cases heard this month numbered 1,855, compared to the 1,995 last year.

The Nation-wide 35-mile-an-hour speed limit to conserve tires and gasoline is credited with increasing the fines in Traffic Court. It was explained that judges are apt to impose more severe penalties during wartime than they would under ordinary circumstances.

Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor Of Britain's Exchequer, Dies

Was Credited With Keeping Finance
On Even Keel

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, Sept. 21.—Sir Kingsley Wood, 62, chancellor of the exchequer, died today.

The man who was credited largely with keeping Britain's wartime finance on an even keel died on the eve of the anticipated announcement of his pay-as-you-go plan for workers' income tax.

Sir Kingsley had served as chancellor of the exchequer under Prime Minister Churchill since May 12, 1940, when he received the post in a cabinet shake-up. He previously had served as lord privy seal and air minister. On November 3, 1940, he was made a member of the war cabinet, but was dropped from this inner circle in February, 1942, in another shake-up.

Wood was the son of a Wesleyan minister. He began his political career in 1911 as a member of the London County Council, equivalent to a city council in the United States.

He had been a member of the same constituency since 1918 and in 1930 became chairman of the Executive Committee of the National Conservative and Unionist Association—the Conservative party.

Sir Kingsley's death was announced in the House of Commons. The senior partner of a London law firm and a prominent insurance executive during the early 20s, Sir Kingsley also led the movement in Britain which resulted in the establishment of the Ministry of Health.

He was responsible for the taxation program by which Britain raised unprecedented amounts of money to pay war costs while still keeping the country in a sound financial condition.

Wood's Death Is Loss To U. S., Morgenthau Says

The Secretary said he received a letter from Sir Kingsley only a few days ago.

"We've had the most cordial and co-operative relations with the British treasury and with Sir Kingsley personally," Mr. Morgenthau declared. "I was greatly impressed with his ability and sincerity. Last year I had the pleasure of meeting him in London, and I was impressed with his frankness and personal charm. The people of the United States as well as England have suffered a loss."

Col. Charles White, Chief Aide to Colman, Ordered Out of Army

By the Associated Press.
SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich., Sept. 21.—Lt. Col. Charles G. White, the second high-ranking officer of this Army base to be convicted with-in a week of violating the Articles of War, was sentenced by a general court-martial last night to dismissal from the Army. After deliberating nearly seven hours, the court-martial found Col. White guilty on five counts, including "drunk to the prejudice of the service" on two occasions, gross neglect, misappropriating the labor of two civilian field employees to repair his private automobile and an attempt to persuade them to perjure themselves before the court-martial. The 35-year-old suspended executive officer was found innocent of 10 other counts, including charges of fraudulently obtaining transfers of enlisted personnel. Col. William T. Colman, former base commandant, was demoted by a court-martial last Tuesday to the rank of captain after he was convicted on four counts of drunkenness and careless use of firearms in connection with the shooting and wounding last May of Pvt. William R. McRae, colored soldier-chauffeur. Convictions of both Col. White

Mrs. Roosevelt Sees War Setting New High In Handicapped Men

By the Associated Press.
HONOLULU, Sept. 21.—Rehabilitation of the war-wounded poses a serious and delicate problem for America now and in the postwar years, and it must be solved, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt says.
Here after a 20,730-mile flying tour of the Pacific war theater during which she visited hospitals at every opportunity, the President's wife told newspapermen quite gravely yesterday that:
"We will have more handicapped men—who have lost arms, legs, an eye—after this war than we ever have had before."
Returning these wounded and crippled men to the Nation's social life "will be a problem," she conceded, adding:
"We can prepare now to place these men in useful jobs after the war. Employers already have been called upon to use handicapped workers. They will have to be asked to take more—and they will be willing to do it."

Problem of Social Life.
The problem that concerns me most is how these returning men will re-enter their social lives."
She cited an incident in her knowledge of a soldier whose face was badly scarred on one side. He took a girl companion into an Australian restaurant.
Patrons stared at him. One woman looked, turned away and began weeping. The soldier arose abruptly and walked out.
"That's an illustration of the problem I mean," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "One's natural reaction at seeing men like this is first to feel sorry for them and then draw away."
"There remains a great job of adjustment and much work and education among the people. We must realize that these men urgently desire to feel independent and believe they can do things themselves."

Will Visit Injured Man's Mother.
Mrs. Roosevelt's tour of Army and Navy stations and hospitals in the Pacific area began nearly a month ago. She appeared first in New Caledonia on August 25 and proceeded via New Zealand to Australia, where she was received by high dominion and provincial officials in Canberra, the capital, and in the large cities of the east coast.
On September 14 she left Brisbane, Australia, for an unannounced destination, and was not reported again until her arrival here yesterday.
She told of seeing in a hospital yesterday a young Brooklyn soldier who had been pinned for an hour under an overturned tank and lost a leg.
"I told him, 'You're going to get well,'" she said. "He didn't respond much at first. Then I said, 'If you'll promise me you're going to get well, I will go see your mother and tell her.'"
"His face lighted up. 'Will you really go see her?' 'If you do, I'll promise to get well.'"

Mrs. Roosevelt Pins Medals on Navy Hero
A SOUTH PACIFIC BASE, Sept. 15 (Delayed) (AP).—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, at a Navy hospital today presented the Navy Cross, the Purple Heart and the Gold Star in lieu of a second Purple Heart to Navy Lt. Hugh Barr Miller, 33, of Tuscaloosa, Ala.
Lt. Miller, who quarterbacked the University of Alabama in 1931 to a 24-to-0 Rose Bowl victory over Washington State, saved the lives of two men during the sinking of the destroyer Strong in the Kula Gulf in the Central Solomons the night of July 4.
Injured by depth charges, Lt. Miller lived for more than a month in Japanese territory, was strafed in the neck by a Japanese plane, killed five Japanese with their own grenades and finally was rescued by naval airmen.
Admiral William F. Halsey read the citations, then asked Mrs. Roosevelt to pin the medals in the name of the President.
Lt. Miller, nearly recovered and awaiting travel to the United States to visit his wife and son in Tuscaloosa, blushed as Mrs. Roosevelt told him he was a great hero.
The ceremony was held in front of the bed of Electrician's Mate (Second Class) Willard G. Langley of Cordell, Ga., the only known survivor of the engine room of the Strong.
Lt. Miller's mother is a member of the faculty of the University of Alabama. The Navy Cross award cited "extraordinary heroism, distinguished service" and said he furnished valuable information concerning Japanese positions and units.

Italian Flyer Escapes Nazi-Held Airfield To Join Americans

By the Associated Press.
AN ALLIED AIRBASE SOUTH OF SALERNO, Sept. 14 (Delayed).—One of the first airplanes to land in the Allied bridgehead south of Salerno was piloted by a 21-year-old Italian flyer who escaped from an airfield in Northern Italy because he preferred to pitch in with the Americans rather than the Germans.
"We listened to broadcasts from Rome, London, Bologna and Berlin," he said, "and most of us decided to join you. We knew that if we stayed where we were the Germans would force us to fly in Germany or against Russia."
The young pilot, who lived in Genoa, said that some Italian flyers had changed into civilian clothing. He himself climbed into a fighter trainer ship and took off as the Germans came to take over the field. Although he had been in the Army 14 months he had never flown in combat.

Day and Night Battles.
But Allied airpower has been supreme. It has been the decisive factor—a mighty fist closed and able to mass its mobile power at any point. British and American and the thumping roar of anti-aircraft guns.
In this hell of sound and dust and battle fury the troops have been fighting almost without rest since they stormed into Italy a week ago under the front line fire of German mobile 88-mm guns set up on the beaches.
Field columns flung by the Allies have seized and held coastal strips adjoining the landing beaches for several miles. The Germans are entrenched in bordering hills from which they make periodic sorties with tanks and infantry. The fighting has been of greater ferocity than any previous amphibious operation in this theater. In addition to their ground sorties the Nazis have tried, with hit-run air-raids and night bomber attacks, to break up British and American advances and overrun their positions in strong counterthrusts.
Circled Naples Area.
He made the 300-mile hop in two hours, he said, and first circled the Naples area intending to land there. "Things didn't look quite right so I continued on until I saw your invasion fleet," he said. "I circled around it and then came on and landed at the first field I saw."
He talked to Lt. Col. Vincent Sheean, author and newspaperman who speaks Italian. The young flyer was put in an American unit that came under German artillery fire a day after he landed. He seemed to enjoy the experience and twice Mr. Sheean had to shepherd him to cover.
Continuous Shellfire.
Your life seems much more valuable to you when some one is trying to take it away from you. Whatever fate may befall the troops battling to secure and extend this bridgehead in Italy, there is little prospect of them dying of boredom. Every manjack has been within reach of Nazi artillery fire since coming ashore. The sound of shellfire has been almost continuous, and when it does fade to a muted thunder the skies are clouded black and white with bursting ack-ack helmet and your foxhole—and you sleep within reach of all three.

When you are in danger 24 hours a day you get a bit fed up with it. You cease to worry much about the casual shell bursts or the possibility of being struck by our own falling ack-ack. Life is something you just keep living as long as you can.
During one German air raid Corpl. Charlie H. Webber of Kansas City, Mo., was shaving at one end of an Air Corps jeep. Gathered in and around the vehicle listening to the woman blues singer over the radio were Lt. Col. Eugene Cropper of Flemingsburg, Ky.; Lt. Col. Robert Nelson, Jr., Winchester, Va., and Capt. Ted Waxelbaum of Atlanta, Ga.
The bitterness of this fight, into which the Germans have thrown every ounce of their strength, has stirred the battle spirit of every soldier engaged, making him realize that here indeed is the real war for survival. For the securing of this beachhead spells the beginning of the end for Hitler and what he stands for.
"Sky Pilot" Excited.
Watching one flight of American B-25 bombers hurling tons of explosives at the Nazi foreman, a chaplain shouted excitedly:
"I hope they are hitting them!"
"That's a fine thing for a chaplain to say," one of his friends said jokingly.
"What do you mean?" the sky pilot answered. "Chaplain or no chaplain, if we don't hit them they're going to hit us. That makes sense to me."
That's the way every soldier feels about it in this battle, where your three best friends are your gun, your

Five District Bills Approved by House; Four Go to President

The House today passed by unanimous consent five noncontroversial bills, including one authorizing increase in compensation for the Recorder of Deeds and the superintendent of the National Training School for Girls.

That measure increases the salary of the recorder from $6,400 to $8,000 annually, and that of the superintendent of the school from $2,700 to $3,600 a year.

Four of the bills, including the salary increase measure, already have passed the Senate and now go to the President. The others are:

To assure the mailing of real estate tax bills to all property owners in the District or their agents.

Library Bill Passed.

To make the Public Library of the District an authorized depository for Government publications.

To provide for mailing of annual notices to owners of tax exempt properties in the District.

Fifth Bill to Senate.

The fifth bill, which must go to the Senate, would permit Lansburgh & Bro., Inc., to construct pipelines for steam heating purposes under Eighth street, east of the properties which they own on the west side of the street to their properties on the east side of the street.

The pipelines will not interfere with the conduits of the gas or electric companies. Similar permits have been granted by the Commissioners under authority of Congress to other firms and public service corporations. Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee explained.

eloquent testimony of the devastating effect of incessant Allied air attacks on retreating German columns.

Cairo headquarters, reporting the bombing of Venice, said one explosion caused there was followed by a column of smoke 5,000 feet high, but the full results of the attack were obscured by clouds.

Liberators based on the Middle East also hit railway yards and bridge approaches at the Adriatic port of Pescara.

Most of Corsica's Italian garrison of about 40,000 men has joined native guerrillas and French troops landed to wipe out the German forces on the island, an official announcement said.

Submarine Makes First Visit.

The announcement, issued by the Allied naval command, declared that French destroyers of the latest design, which are among the world's fastest warcraft, had dashed into Ajaccio harbor with troops and supplies on a first visit. This submarine was a French submarine. This submarine joined the French navy after a daring flight from a French port last November.

Some nights after the first operation at Ajaccio the same warships made a second fast trip to the harbor with more men, guns and other equipment. At the time, the naval announcement said, "there were believed to be some 12,000 Germans on the island east of a line drawn from Bastia to Bonifacio." With them had joined an Italian Fascist regiment.

The Corsican patriots already were waging an effective guerrilla campaign in the mountains, with one group capturing 126 Germans in a single day.

On both the first and second swift runs which brought them into Ajaccio in the middle of the night, the French warships were spotted by enemy reconnaissance aircraft, but they succeeded in escaping attack.

Wildly Cheered at Docks.

When the ships arrived and the wildly enthusiastic Corsicans gathered on the docks to stage a celebration as French Moroccan troops disembarked, fires were still blazing on the hillsides. They were started by German planes which on the preceding day sought to fire Italian ammunition dumps.

The first French invasion move went through without a hitch. Official sources failed to disclose immediately whether the Germans on the island, among whom were members of the Nazi garrison who fled from Sardinia to escape the pursuing Italians, were still resisting the French troops and patriots.

(First announcement of the landing in Corsica by some of the French forces which took part in the Tunisian campaign was made last night in a terse communique issued by Gen. Henri Giraud. He said only that the fighting had "taken a favorable turn.")

Meanwhile the Northwest African Air Forces concentrated their attention yesterday on the Salerno battle area and without opposition practically wiped out a large convoy of enemy motor vehicles.

Fifty gasoline and oil laden trucks traveling west of Salerno were bombed and strafed and when fighter bombers pulled away 30 big tank trucks were afire and other were damaged. Other motor transport also was attacked and the day's loss was 67 destroyed and as many damaged.

Bombers attacked roads and railways within a short distance of the front and once again not a single German aircraft came up to try to stop them.

American Flying Fortresses hit the railway yards at Torre Annunziata, the tracks south of Pompeii and three roads south of Salerno. Mitchells attacked the road junction at Castelnuovo, and American Marauders successfully raided the bottleneck between the railway yards at Formia, halting south-bound traffic.

Fires are Started.

The night before, in the face of bad weather, RAF bombers started fires, hit roads and railway junctions close to the battle area. Yesterday Mitchells bombed Avellino and Calabritto in the rear of the battle front. A large explosion took place at the Avellino road junction. United States African Air Power Inverters knocked out some gun positions.

Last night RAF and RCAP Wellingtons bombed roads and railway yards in Benevento.

There were no losses in yesterday's raids, and since there was no opposition no German planes were shot down.

Found Supply Lines.

In the Naples area unescorted Fortresses continued to pound German supply lines with an attack on communications at Sarno and Torre Annunziata, southeast of Naples. The railroad and the main

Maas Leading Move For Supertax in Lieu Of Renegotiation Act

Several members of the House Naval Affairs Committee proposed today that the renegotiation law be terminated January 1, 1944, and that thereafter "excessive profits" in war contracts be recovered through a super-tax assessed after allowance of reserves for conversion to peacetime production.

The group, headed by Representative Maas, Republican, of Minnesota submitted the proposal as a substitute for recommendations by the Naval Affairs Committee's staff, approved by Chairman Vinson, that the renegotiation statute be retained and the Government pay the cost of industry's readjustment at the war's end.

Mr. Maas said he did not know which plan would be approved finally by the Naval Affairs Committee and submitted to the House Ways and Means Committee, now studying proposals for revision or repeal of the excessive profits recapture law.

Present Tax 90 Per Cent.

The present excess profits tax is 90 per cent, of which the taxpayer gets 10 per cent as a postwar credit. Mr. Maas said the supertax his group has in mind would levy up to 85 per cent on the net of the 20 per cent of excess profits industry now is allowed to retain before contracts are renegotiated.

Meanwhile, Undersecretary of War Peterson reappeared before the Senate Committee on War Contracts and heard two of its Republican members—Representatives Jenkins of Ohio and Reed of New York—hurl charges of "ruthless procedure" and "arrogance" on the part of Government price-fixing boards in renegotiating war contracts to recover excess profits.

Mr. Patterson's reappearance followed disclosure by the War, Navy and Treasury Departments and the Maritime Commission that the renegotiation act was being amended during August eliminated the 20 per cent excess profits, raising the total saved in this manner about $4,400,000,000.

Mr. Jenkins said some of the manufacturers, dissatisfied over renegotiated contracts, had been warned they would get "a worse deal" if they came to Washington to complain.

Used No Coercion.

Mr. Reed declared he objected to the "arrogance" with which the contractors are treated.

Mr. Patterson insisted no coercion had been used by the War Department in renegotiating contracts, and its procedure had been to follow the law.

"The only question is," he declared, "whether we haven't been too easy on the contractors."

Mr. Patterson pointed out the renegotiation act was designed to take profiteering out of the war, but predicted that despite it, cases of profiteering would be discovered "after the war is over and everything is done."

Saved $3,000,000,000.

Mr. Patterson explained that the War Department had recovered about $3,000,000,000 in excess profits through renegotiated contracts, and added:

"The thing that worries me most is the money we're paying out; not what we are getting back."

When Mr. Patterson was asked highway intersection at Sarno were made unserviceable, crews reported, and at Torre Annunziata two road junctions and a road bridge were hit. At Formia road junctions and railroads northwest of Naples were bombed by unescorted Marauders from Africa and the crews reported several hits on the road junction. The Marauders' high explosives cut the railroad. Hits were scored on the road intersection and other hits were reported southeast of the northeastern junction.

how much time he devoted to the renegotiation of War Department contracts he raised his hands above his head. Later, he said he did not devote much time to individual contracts, but to policies, and explained: "I have other things to do."

The Army, Navy and Treasury Departments and Maritime Commission, in a joint statement yesterday, informed the committee that excess profits totaling $4,404,108,000 now have been recovered through actual repayment or in reduction of current contract prices.

The Army listed $1,399,900,000 in cash refunds and $1,549,200,000 in price reduction savings in the 16-month period. Navy's were listed as $669,151,000 in cash refunds, $665,137,000 in lowered prices. The Maritime Commission renegotiations yielded $69,720,000 in cash refunds, $48,505,000 in reduced prices. Treasury recoveries were $2,595,000, all from refunds.

Reynolds Gets Protests.

He said he had received a number of indignant telegrams from private citizens opposed to Gen. Marshall's transfer.

Aroused over the reported shift, other members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee have protested to Secretary of War Stimson and to other high officials of the Government.

It was learned that the War Department admitted that the transfer had been "under consideration." It was denied, however, that the transfer was yet "an accomplished fact."

The House Military Affairs Committee is understood to have discussed the reports informally in executive session today, but no action was taken. One member said individual committee members expressed supreme confidence in Gen. Marshall. The discussion is believed to have been incidental to other business.

In the opinion of the Senators it would be a great mistake to remove Gen. Marshall from his present duty—which is overall command of the American military forces and which concerns itself with military policy.

For this job they consider Gen. Marshall the most eminently fitted man in the American Army.

Further, they contended, the whole Congress and the country have great confidence in Gen. Marshall. To remove him from his present position, they insisted, would be to stir up further controversies in Washington and to cause reports of disunity.

If Gen. Marshall is to be placed in command of combat troops in Europe, the members of the Military Affairs Committee believe he should be made general of all the American armies, wherever located, as well as of all Allied troops in the European area. They do not believe he should be in a measure "demoted" by being placed in command of merely the European area. Barring that, they say Gen. Marshall should be placed in command of all Allied forces as Gen. Foch was in supreme command of the Allied forces in the World War.

Agree on Qualification.

The reason said to have been given for placing Gen. Marshall in command of the Allied forces in the European area is that, having made the plans for these major operations, he should have the opportunity of carrying them out under his personal direction, and that he is qualified in every way for such a command. To this the Senators agree, but they nevertheless insist that his services as chief of staff are of even greater importance.

This insistence on the retention of Gen. Marshall as chief of staff is not confined either to Republicans or Democrats, but is shared by both, it was said. Emphasis was laid on the fact that the demand that Gen. Marshall continue in his present place is in no sense political.

Representative Sumner, Republican, of Illinois told the House yesterday that "a few weeks ago I heard they were trying to get Gen. Marshall kicked upstairs because he stands for our American rights."

"And," she said, "after Quebec they started to get rid of Admiral Leahy (William D. Leahy, chief of staff to the President) for the same reason."

"For the same reason," she continued, "they keep Gen. MacArthur from heading our war effort. Their technique is subtle. Whenever they find an officer who stands up for American rights, they get some American officer they can handle to ask that the officer they cannot handle be put somewhere that looks like a promotion, or sent to South America, or given a vacation. I reiterate—they are going too far."

Reynolds Threatens Protest Should Marshall Be Shifted

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Reynolds of the Senate Military Affairs Committee gave notice today that he would interpose strenuous objection if Gen. George C. Marshall should be transferred from his post as Army Chief of Staff to other duties.

Commenting on an editorial in the Army and Navy Journal which discussed recurring reports of Gen. Marshall might be reassigned as Allied commander in chief in the European theater, Senator Reynolds said in an interview that removal of the chief of staff would be "the most destructive thing that could happen to the morale of our troops throughout the world."

"I would feel obligated," he said, "both as a United States Senator and as a citizen, to protest the removal of Gen. Marshall by kicking him upstairs."

"Gen. Marshall is the one man

Truman Voices Doubt Army Needs 630,000 More Men This Year

have 3,000,000 men left in this country," Senator Truman declared.

Senator Truman also supported Senator Wheeler's charge that war industries have surplus manpower, when he said:

"Huge blocks of manpower are still being hoarded or wasted by the continuance of practices which management and labor have a clear duty to end."

Nearly a year ago, Senator Truman said, his committee pointed to a number of simple and practical ways of achieving efficient utilization of manpower. While some progress has been made, he said, "I am sorry to say that it has been much less than we had a right to expect from industry and labor in a war effort."

Opposes Overall Service Act.

He turned thumbs down on a national service act, saying it is "inefficiency we must seek and not more complex and unworkable controls."

Dismissing the size of the Army, Senator Truman said:

"The fact is that the number of men who have been in the Army for 12 months or more and are still in the United States has been steadily increasing until today we have many hundreds of thousands of men in the Army who are impatient to be sent abroad or home. The other members of the committee, of which I am chairman, and myself have inspected a large number of Army camps and have had the privilege of talking with hundreds of the men in the ranks about their work."

"Over and over again we have been told that the soldier is doing now the same thing he was doing six months or a year or even two years ago and that he is learning nothing new. The boys themselves and their relatives and friends are fully aware of this situation, and they properly resent it."

Taft to Offer Amendment.

Senator Taft, Republican, of Ohio served notice in the Senate today he will offer his amendment to the Wheeler bill to require the calling first of fathers under 30. His amendment would apply only to fathers who were married before December 8, 1941, who have children under 18.

Senator Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan offered a new approach this afternoon to avoid drafting of fathers. Believing that cost-plus-plus contracts encourage waste of labor in war factories, Senator Ferguson introduced a resolution to curtail such contracts and predicted "that if the Manpower Commission will revise its use of manpower under fixed-price contracts it will avoid and delay the drafting of fathers."

His resolution would do two things:

1. Prohibit any new cost-plus-fixed-price contracts, except in ordinary cases where an actual contract price cannot be estimated.
2. Call for the renegotiation of existing cost-plus contracts.

In his recent report, Mr. Baruch recommended a plan, now being tried on the West Coast, for pooling plants to meet the needs of war plants in vital areas. At the same time, the Baruch report deplored failures of Government agencies to work as a team in handling the manpower problem.

Senator Fustler, Republican, of Vermont said yesterday's testimony by the military chiefs convinced him the ban on drafting fathers should not pass.

Although Mr. Baruch made some criticism of hoarding labor, he also said it would be unwise to exempt fathers in nonessential jobs if it meant taking skilled men from war work.

Meanwhile, Senator Thomas, Democrat, of Oklahoma came back to Washington announcing he would vote against drafting prewar fathers, "because everywhere I go the placard is alive with soldiers." Contending this country cannot properly support more than 4,000,000 men overseas, he said it would be better for the United States to furnish equipment for fighting men of the other Allied nations.

Throughout the Senate hearings, Senator Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, has sought to show that some war plants are hoarding workers and that the drafting of fathers would be unnecessary if this condition was solved. It is expected he will seek to draw out Mr. Baruch's views on this contention.

To the specific question of whether fathers should be drafted, the military leaders take the position they need a specified number of men by December 31 to carry out the strategic plans for pushing the war against the Axis on all fronts. How many men are needed is a problem for selective service.

Selective service officials have testified they cannot fill the remaining quota of 1,200,000 men for 1943, on the basis of present physical standards, without calling at least 446,000 fathers.

WACS, Lacking Tunics, March In Raincoats

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The first WACS assigned to secretarial duties in United States Army headquarters for this theater have arrived in England.

And are they blushing!

Their barracks bags—containing their smart tunics—became side-tracked, and couldn't be found in time for their first review after debarking.

The girls had to march in raincoats, filing clerks and telephonists at the London headquarters which, until now, had been staffed mainly by men, with a few English girls added to the pay roll.

The latest group of WACS to arrive was 299 strong—but 130 of them will join the first separate battalion which arrived two months ago for service with the United States 8th Air Force. Those who relieve English WAVES.

hope will bring this conflict to an early conclusion.

"But please remember that this phase is just about to begin, a point which seems not to be understood by our people here at home, possibly because they are far removed from the agonies of war except for those whose sons or husbands have been engaged in the fighting."

Gen. Marshall said he found himself "in a curious state of mind" over suggestions that perhaps the Army had acquired more than it needed of some types of war goods.

Gen. Bradley and Lt. Gen. Simon B. Buckley, who has been directing American operations in Alaska, accompanied Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, to the convention.

Gen. Bradley cited examples of German soldiers putting up a white flag of surrender, then shooting down Americans who went forward to meet them. He said the Germans planted explosives on bodies of the dead, and indiscriminately sowed mine fields in Sicily so that innocent women and children were either maimed or killed by their explosions.

"Now I find myself in the position of being questioned, if not investigated, for having too much of something or other. I don't know yet exactly what this excess is, but I do know that I am profoundly grateful for that once in the history of the United States there is suggested the possibility that we may have too much of something or other with which to support our armies."

Preparations have been made in North Africa and Sicily, and I do about to be made in Italy, for the support of huge ground and air forces, said Gen. Marshall, and for a long time similar preparations have been under way in Great Britain and the Pacific.

"The Mediterranean success will release great naval forces for the war against Japan, he said, and this means advance planning for bases from which the ships can operate."

"We are similarly engaged in planning regarding other forces, particularly the rearrangement of the affairs of the Son of Heaven with his military clique. . . ."

Must Proceed Carefully.

"But I would add that these matters are not the affair of a moment, the result of a campaign of propaganda, or of temporary enthusiasms or special interests."

"We must proceed in the most businesslike manner possible to make this war so terrible to the enemy, so overwhelming in character, that never again can a small group of dictators find a sufficient following to destroy the peaceful security of civilized world."

"The President, in his message, said: 'It is with sincere regret that I have to forego the hope I had entertained of attending in person the twenty-fifth annual convention of the American Legion. But in these grave times all of our actions are determined by the unexpected demands of the day and hour and personal preferences must give way to the larger and sterner exigencies of all out war.'

"I have been privileged to address the convention. I should have emphasized the thought that nothing can help our enemies more than for us to relax our efforts of all kinds in the prosecution of the war. In many phases of the national program there is need for an increasing rather than lessened effort. Every American has a duty to himself as well as to his country, in increasing his effort in the war job he has, or in getting into a war job if he hasn't already done so."

Warns Against Relaxing.

"Had I been privileged to address the convention I should have emphasized the thought that nothing can help our enemies more than for us to relax our efforts of all kinds in the prosecution of the war. In many phases of the national program there is need for an increasing rather than lessened effort. Every American has a duty to himself as well as to his country, in increasing his effort in the war job he has, or in getting into a war job if he hasn't already done so."

"In certain fields, particularly where the need might not at the moment look large but where we shall not have time to prepare should the actuality arise, increased effort and awareness are needed. Civilian defense is an example of this sort of latent need. We don't wait until the house catches fire to be sure that our community has an up-to-date active fire department."

"I am therefore glad to learn that the American Legion from motives of the highest patriotism and in accord with its tradition is taking the lead with the 'America alert' program which I understand is being made the major theme of your convention."

McNutt Speaks.

"Legionnaires know at first hand the fact of latent need. They can and they should carry to all of our fellow citizens the message that the end of the war is not in sight until unconditional surrender has become a reality."

Before Gen. Marshall spoke, Mr. Waring and Paul M. McNutt, War Manpower Commissioner, joined in telling delegates that only by summoning the full strength of America will the war result in a complete victory for the United Nations on the battlefield and at the peace table.

In a report of his activities as national commander during the last year, prepared for delivery to the Legion, Mr. Waring declared that the Legion must not only recommitt itself to its present wartime mandates but also must consider plans

3 Denver Firemen Killed As Train Tunnel Caves In

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Sept. 21.—Three Denver firemen were killed today in the cave-in of a fire-swept tunnel of the Denver & Salt Lake Railway about 27 miles west of Denver.

The men, members of an emergency crew, were identified as Vernon Parrish, assistant superintendent of the Denver Fire Department; shops; Jim Williams, pumper driver, and Jack Kennedy.

Officials said the tunnel caved in after supporting timbers were burned away. A brush fire evidently started the blaze in the 1,800-foot bore. Trains were rerouted over another line.

Italians Await Landing Barges For Trip to U. S., Sailor Relates

One Had Chickens With Him, Says George Hupp of D. C.

The old gag of "Mister, we were just waiting for a streetcar" received a new twist when the members of the amphibious forces landed on a beach in Sicily.

The story came from Machinist's Mate George Bally Hupp, 22, of 2314 Nineteenth street N.W., now home on furlough. Mr. Hupp makes his home with an aunt, Mrs. Anna Cottrell.

"We came charging up the shore after leaving our 'chicken boxes' (landing ships) all ready for action," he said, "and what do we meet. A whole group of Italian civilians, standing on the sand, each one with a grip packed and ready to go places.

When Do We Go?

"What's the idea?" one of our men who spoke Italian asked.

"You're Americans, aren't you?"

"Yes, but—"

"We surrender. We're prisoners. Now when do we go to New York?"

"An old man, hanging on to two live chickens with one hand and to a grip with the other, pushed in.

"Me, too. I'm going to New York and make money with a chicken farm. When do we go?"

All the landings in which Mr. Hupp, former Hundred (W. Va.) High School football player, took part did not have the same light touch. One of the operations undertaken by the amphibious forces will never be forgotten by Mr. Hupp.

Three Bombs Hit Craft.

"At 8 a.m. on July 11," he recounted, "our boat stood off from Licata, Sicily, waiting our turn to go in. I had just come up from the engine room for a breath of air and was sitting in the bow when there was a burst of machine gun fire and I dove under a gun turret. It was an enemy plane.

"I don't know exactly what happened in the next few minutes. Three bombs hit the ship in rapid succession, one of them landing right smack in the center and practically breaking the boat in half.

"I got to my feet and looked around. The place was all smashed up. Near me were three wounded men. Luckily, a couple of my buddies were around, and they weren't hurt. One of them cut loose the life raft and got on it. The other one and myself helped the injured men onto the raft and then we dove in.

14 Cling to Raft.

"By that time there were 14 men clinging to the raft, and not an ear in the place. We were only 300 yards from shore, and all of us hung onto the raft with one hand and paddled with the other. I never realized 300 yards was so far in my life. We got a break, though. When we were about half way an amphibious jeep came along and took the wounded men.

"We kept going despite the enemy planes which came over and took pot shots at us. After we got to the beach, we all made for the hills. I was just about ready to fall down and go to sleep when the signal for an air raid came. The raid lasted 2 1/2 hours. Then we all got together around Lt. B. S. Lockwood, a wonderful skipper to be under, and went into Licata."

Brush Breaks in Gun.

The first time we went into Sicily, Mr. Hupp recalled, a soldier on the boat tried to clean his rifle with a wire brush. The brush broke, and the soldier spent the rest of the time prior to the landing trying to get it out. Then came the order to go in. There was heavy fighting, the boat sank and hours later Hupp got safely on shore.

"What do you think was the first sight I saw? There was the same soldier, wet and covered with dirt, still trying to get the wire brush out of his gun."

Mr. Hupp joined the Navy in Washington in June, 1942, and took his "boot" training at Newport, R. I. He was sent to Diesel engineering school at Richmond, Va., and began his amphibious training in October, 1942, on Chesapeake Bay. He has a brother, Seaman First Class Jack Hupp, stationed at Corpus Christi, Tex.

British and Russian Religious Discussions Claim Wide Attention

By the Associated Press.
Ecclesiastical developments in Moscow—once the antireligious center of the world—are being watched closely by official and diplomatic quarters here.

Marshal Stalin's recent approval of the organization of a holy synod and election of Metropolitan Sergei as patriarch of the Russian Orthodox Church was considered significant enough in itself and a possible move toward creation of a state church functioning in collaboration with the Soviet regime, just as the old state church of pre-revolutionary days collaborated with the Czarist regime.

The publication in Izvestia, official organ of the Presidium of the Supreme Council of the USSR, of a church order excommunicating all priests and laymen who have cooperated with the enemy, further emphasized the apparent trend toward co-ordination of church and state.

Appeal to Christians.
What particularly impressed some observers of Soviet developments, however, was a proclamation of the Orthodox Church last week appealing to Christians of all countries to unite in defense of their faith against Fascism. This appeal, coming from the place where the Comintern used to call on proletarians of all countries to unite against capitalist exploitation, was a sharp reminder of the distance traveled in Moscow since the heyday of the militant Godless League.

It took on added interest in the light of world-wide anxiety for the safety of the Vatican, now ringed by German troops.

It was emphasized again by the arrival in Moscow Sunday of the Archbishop of York, representative of the Church of England, for conversations with the hierarchy of the rejuvenated Russian Orthodox Church. The scene at Moscow airport when the archbishop, wearing the purple cassock and four-cornered mitre of his office, was welcomed to Stalin's capital by robed and bearded dignitaries of the Orthodox Church, was a far cry from the days when Moscow newspapers regularly observed Easter with an outbreak of anti-religious articles and cartoons.

Against this background, officials here showed much interest in a 64-page article on "Stalin and God" appearing in the summer issue of the quarterly Booktab, published in New York.

The article reviews the life of Stalin, depicting his youthful revolt against religion and his subsequent career as a revolutionist, and culminating with a description of his gradual realization, under the stress of war, that he was the man called by God to save not only Russia, but Europe, democracy, religion and western civilization.

Russian Churchmen Invited to London

MOSCOW, Sept. 21. (AP)—The rejuvenated Russian Orthodox Church was invited today to send a delegation to London to return the visit which its leaders now are receiving from the Archbishop of York. The Archbishop of York yesterday paid his first formal visit to the patriarch of all Russia, the Metropolitan Sergei of Moscow, and handed him a letter from the Church of England assuring "the Russian Church and the Russian Nation of our unity of heart with them."

The letter was signed by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, who invited the Orthodox Church to send a delegation to London. The Archbishop of York arrived in Russia by plane Sunday for talks with the hierarchy of the Russian Orthodox Church.

The letter said, "We have watched with deep sympathy the sufferings of the peoples of the Soviet Union these last two years and have been inspired by the patriotism and constancy of the Russian church in faithfulness to the one Lord, Our Savior, Jesus Christ."

"We share with all our countrymen" the letter continued, "the admiration aroused by the heroic resistance of the Russian people and the Red Army to attacks and treacherous aggression. And we look forward to the time when the evil forces of Fascism will be destroyed and true peace may be established, rendering possible fuller realization of true brotherhood among all nations and fellowship in the work of Christ. Our God, among all Christian people."

Poles Drafted by Nazis Stream Into Forests

By the Associated Press.
STOCKHOLM, Sept. 21.—Two regiments of Poles conscripted for Nazi military service have fled into the extensive forests near Augustow, 135 miles northeast of Warsaw, with artillery, mortars and other equipment and brigaded to harass the Germans, the secret Polish radio station said yesterday.

WAR BONDS

Let's Bury the Tramps— with Bonds and Stamps!

The men and women of Philco are Backing the Attack... with War Bonds and War Production!

During this month, they have organized a campaign among themselves to help the Third War Loan go over the top. They are conducting a drive to urge every Philco employee to buy an extra War Bond during September as a personal investment in Victory today... and in the fruits of Victory tomorrow.

But this month and every month, Philco soldiers of production are backing the attack on the industrial front. With America on the move, they know that whatever toil and sweat it has taken to win the initiative, it will take more of the same to win the final Victory.

All they have learned in their research laboratories and production lines during twelve straight years of radio leadership is devoted now to the making of radios, communications and electronic equipment for America's planes and tanks. The knowledge and skill that brought Philco to the forefront of home refrigeration and air-conditioning are now turned to the production of artillery fuzes and shells. And today, all this diversified production is at an all time peak, serving almost every branch of the Army and Navy... helping to give our soldiers, sailors and flyers superiority in the attack.

When Victory is won, these Philco soldiers of production will be back at their peacetime tasks. In radio, television, refrigeration and air-conditioning, their research laboratories will bring you the newest achievements of modern science, built to the tradition of quality that has made the Philco name famous in millions of American homes.

The unequivocal statements submitted to the Senate Military Affairs Committee by General Marshall and Admiral King should convince Congress that this is not the time to tamper with the draft of men for military service.

The Greatest Navy

The Navy's production report bristles with amazing statistics of accomplishment that would have been dismissed a few years ago as too fanciful to believe.

The Bennetts

In a very literal sense, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Bennett gave the best part of their lives to the Washington community. Their devotion to the work which called them here was singularly unselfish and their span of service at the Central Union Mission, which ended with Mrs. Bennett's death on Sunday night, covered twenty-seven years.

The Meaning of Sardinia

Soldiers of the Press

This war has changed many old conceptions of warfare. One of the greatest changes has been in the methods of war correspondents in getting their news.

In the last two years in particular British propaganda against the enemy has been a very fine job of work. Its principal instrument, the BBC broadcast, is listened to by thousands of Germans and Italians.

The backbone of the German defense in South Russia has for some weeks been the Kiev-Poltava-Stalino railway. The German defense has been well in front of this line, and has stiffened whenever the Russians approached it at any point.

Visitor From Chile

The Chilean Foreign Minister, Joaquin Fernandez, who has been a guest here since last Friday, stands in the front rank of those who have worked indefatigably to infuse inter-American co-operation with the meaning and substance that have contributed so much to the safeguarding of the political and social institutions of the Western Hemisphere in the dark days of the past decade.

Long a good friend of the United States and of the cause of freedom, Senator Fernandez has summarized the attitude of his government in these words: "It is not through vanity, but through justifiable pride, that I claim Chile to be a nation conscious of its obligations, a political entity having a democratic machinery capable of deciding when and how to play its proper role in its relations with other nations."

These are sentiments which, naturally, meet with a favorable reception in Washington. It has been a pleasure to have Senator Fernandez as a guest, and it is to be hoped that, before so very long, it will be possible to carry out earlier plans for a visit to this country by President Rios.

THIS AND THAT

"Dear Sir: Perhaps you can identify a bird for me. I saw it the other day, just a glimpse, and I am sure I never saw its kind before."

"It was small, and was gray and black, with some black around its head or throat. It reminded me of a chickadee, but definitely wasn't a chickadee."

"The female is a plain olive bird, with a bit of yellow underneath. About the only real identification is a white spot at the base of the wing. This also appears in the male, but is usually lost in the larger coloration."

"In certain sections of the country, it is called the black-throat. While it is definitely a forest bird, in migration it may be seen almost anywhere. Migrating warblers like to perch in bushes of all sorts."

"The plain greenish female may be around, but the watcher will have to service is more to be desired than profits or personal gain."

Haskin's Answers To Questions

Q. What is the height of the American soldier at the present time?—D. O. A. The War Department says that as of July, 1943, the average height of soldiers in the Army of the United States was 5 feet 8.4 inches, and the average weight was 150.9 pounds.

Q. What is Senator Harry S. Truman's middle name?—P. C. H. A. The middle initial does not stand for any name.

Q. Are there more bathtubs or automobiles in the United States?—N. A. F. A. In 1940 it was reported that there was one bathtub for every six persons but one automobile for every four persons.

Q. What does the least emotion?—E. W. B. A. The American Indian of the Plains and the Chinese are said to be the most inscrutable peoples.

Q. How is it possible for a circus to transport a giraffe by rail?—W. B. C. A. Circuses have a specially padded giraffe wagon which is loaded on flat cars. The giraffe must hold its head at an angle and lie down. This is a difficult position to travel in and several of the animals have been killed by jolting.

Q. Please name some famous men who, in their youth, were newsboys?—S. R. A. Among the prominent men of today are Alfred E. Smith, Hiram Bingham, Harry G. Leslie, former Governor of Indiana; Victor M. Hanson of the Birmingham News and Age-Herald; Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan; Justice William O. Douglas of the Supreme Court of the United States; The late Judge Benjamin B. Lindsey; Cyrus H. K. Curtis, Thomas A. Edison and Edward W. Bok were also newsboys in their youth.

Q. Is it correct to say that sound carries better before a rain?—D. K. E. A. This is an ancient belief and is scientifically correct. The carry of sound often is especially good before the onset of a general rain. Several factors combine to make it so.

Q. What is the greatest biography in English literature?—C. B. A. "The Life of Samuel Johnson," by James Boswell, published in 1791, is by many critics considered the greatest. The two men did not become acquainted until Johnson was nearly 54 years old and it has been calculated that they met only on 276 days, a brief time for such an intimate record.

Q. Is there an insect that lives in petroleum?—M. M. A. It is an astonishing fact that one member of the insect family, Pallopa petrolei, can live regularly and thrive in crude petroleum.

Q. What foreign languages does Anthony Eden speak?—D. D. J. A. The British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs excelled in Oriental languages at Oxford, especially in Arabic and Persian. He speaks French like a Parisian and speaks some German.

Q. How many cattle are condemned under United States inspection?—A. K. G. A. In 1942 a total of 95,448,996 kilograms were inspected by the Federal Government. Of these, 11,577,874 were cattle and 56,889,559 were swine. There were 4,844 live cattle and 21,579 swine condemned. At post-mortem inspections 60,661 cattle and 131,073 swine were condemned.

Q. Can an opening two-bid (forcing) and the club convention, both be used at the table of bridge, according to Culbertson?—H. H. A. The club convention is not part of the Culbertson system or of any other national system but is used locally and has different meanings in different circles. The forcing two-bid and the club convention tend to duplicate each other and therefore the club convention is not used.

Q. What is the history of the three bronze horses of Venice?—E. McN. A. In times of peace they stood before the Cathedral of St. Mark in Venice. They are 5 feet tall and are the sole existing specimens of an ancient quadriga. It is probable that they once adorned the triumphal arch of Nero. In 1797 Napoleon sent the celebrated horses to Paris. They were restored to Venice in 1815.

Q. What type of vessel is the U. S. S. Millicoma?—L. M. K. A. The U. S. Navy Department says that the U. S. S. Millicoma is an auxiliary oiler.

Q. Where was broccoli first cultivated?—J. M. D. A. Broccoli originated in Italy, where it once was grown exclusively in the Province of Calabria. United States gardeners began growing it for the market in 1918.

Never Quite Alone There is a company at night When a distant farmhouse light Cleaves the darkness like a knife With its evidence of life. When we waken from our sleep In the valley, broad and deep, We behold the weathered gray Of the house against the day. Through the gold transparency Of the rising sun we see Curling woodsmoke giving proof Of life beneath the distant roof. And though our unknown neighbors are Distant like the morning star, We are never quite alone Upon our acres, fenced with stone. HARRY ELMORE HURD.

Letters to the Editor

Enlarges on Proposal: For Basic English. To the Editor of The Star: Prime Minister Churchill has given a magnificent impetus to consideration of the all-important question of the need for a world-wide auxiliary language. He apparently regarded it as so important that more than 20 per cent of the text of his address at Harvard University on September 6 dealt with this idea.

The friendship of Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt has undoubtedly bred a mutual sustained interest on their part in basic English. It is not surprising that both men, thinking in terms of Anglo-American unity, should be heavily influenced by the "English" content of the proposed plan. Thus the weight of these powerful personalities has been thrown into the scales of popular judgment concerning what may become one of the outstanding features of postwar planning.

There is certain to be a strong reaction to Mr. Churchill's present advocacy of basic English. An international language is not peculiarly the property and problem of the English-speaking races. Imperialism can exist in the field of language as well as in other matters.

It is safe to assume that the living mother tongue of no great nation will ever be formally adopted as the common language of the earth. Nor is it likely that any "pidgin" arrangement of such a language will ever be adequate to meet complicated intellectual needs. The final solution most likely will be based on the systematic utilization of about 50,000 words common to English and the neo-Latin languages such as French, Italian, Portuguese and Spanish, and to Russia, China and the enemy nations, Germany and Japan, with whom peace will be eventually established.

One of the least known, but most scientific, highly developed projects of this character is Latino sine flexione (Latin without inflections) or Interlingua, which makes use of Latin words possessing given derivatives in English and which adopts words well known in the leading languages of the world, including a few classical Latin necessary words which do not have international equivalents. Those favoring this system have complete material assembled, including English-Interlingua and Interlingua-English vocabularies, more extensive in scope and content than any yet planned so far as known and capable of indefinite expansion. This material now available for consideration also includes a key and primer.

The whole subject should be dealt with by an international commission representing all the nations, empowered to consider all competing plans, the fundamental specification for which must be that the international auxiliary language finally adopted shall meet the most complicated intellectual and scientific needs of all the peoples of the earth. We are indeed indebted to Mr. Churchill for pushing this important question into the limelight and which increasingly thrusts itself upon the world for attention. VICTOR L. LOWE.

Gen. Marshall Shift Rumors Held Logical

By DAVID LAWRENCE.
It is most regrettable that a discussion has arisen concerning possible transfer of Gen. Marshall to a high post in the European theater of operations.
President Roosevelt, who knows what is being planned, is hardly in a position to reveal what plans are being made that may involve Gen. Marshall, and the public at the same time is eager to know if any such transfer is really scheduled to take place.
Meanwhile, rumors and reports naturally arise which tend to bring into the open the question of who will run the War Department if Gen. Marshall goes abroad. This introduces the matter of a successor, and Washington has been talking for several weeks about it.
One school of thought says that Harry Hopkins, who has the ear of the President, favors the appointment of his old friend, Gen. Somervell, who now is in charge of the Service of War in New York City when Mr. Hopkins was at the head of the WPA during the depression years. Another school of thought, represented perhaps by several of the Regular Army officers, suggests that the deputy chief of staff, Gen. McNarney, would be the logical man to succeed Gen. Marshall here because he knows the whole Army setup and is familiar with the Marshall plans of organization.
Critical Months Ahead.
But, it will be asked, why should this idea of a transfer for Gen. Marshall be suggested? The answer is that the critical months of the war are approaching. Unquestionably, President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill laid out in their Quebec conference plans leading to a large-scale invasion of Europe either the latter part of this year or in the spring of 1944. When such a move is made, doubtless an American Army of many millions will be in the field. America is to furnish the bulk of the manpower—hence, America is to have the high command.
It will be recalled that in the last war a supreme war council sat at Paris and that Gen. Bliss, a former Chief of Staff, was the American member. In addition, Gen. Pershing was in command of all American operations in the field but Marshal Foch was the generalissimo in command of all Allied armies. The whole Allied military movement in Europe logically will require an over-all commander in chief. When the surrender of the German armies is accomplished, the Allied forces will be located in the south of Europe, the west of Europe and the northern countries of Europe. Some individual may have to be chosen to synchronize operations of all these armies.
Spot Decisions Needed.
As matters stand today, the combined chiefs of staff, sitting in Washington, act as a unified central command. When operations grow more complicated, it is believed to be the British view that decisions will have to be made on the spot in Europe and that either the combined chiefs of staff will have to move to London or else some one must be appointed to act for the combined chiefs of staff. Naturally the man who has the confidence of that joint organization is Gen. Marshall.
There are rumors that the plan is of British origin and that the British feel that, with an American commander in chief, the supply of American manpower to subdue Hitler and even to maintain the peace after the armistice is signed, will continue to flow undiminished. Likewise, there is the possible advantage that an American commanding all the Allied armies might be able to act to synchronize operations with the Russians.
Clearly the British have had the idea of urging Gen. Marshall for the new post for some time because London dispatches have mentioned it several times over a period of several months. Perhaps this is one of the reasons why the plan has encountered a bit of suspicion here, as always happens when a suggestion comes from a foreign government relative to our own choice of personnel. In this instance, however, the British have a right to speak because it is an Allied army and a generalissimo which is the post under discussion and it is, of course, complimentary to Gen. Marshall that he is so highly commended by the British.
No "Demotion" Involved.
It is just possible that the rumors that Gen. Marshall is being "demoted" arise from quarters which fear the kind of successor who will be appointed here in his place as chief of staff. But there is no "demotion" involved. Some one has to command all the Allied armies in the final push and give the chief of staff back in Washington orders, just as Gen. Pershing did when he used to tell the chief of staff back home, Gen. Peyton March, what he wanted and when he wanted it.
Gen. Marshall is a great organizer and a great soldier. If he is needed more at Washington than in Europe, then Gen. Eisenhower would seem to be the logical choice for overall commander. But with the size and scope of the military operations now being planned, it would seem logical for the directing head and boss of the job to be an American commander stationed in the midst of the whole European theater of action.

Cartels May Be 1944 Issue

By RAYMOND MOLEY.
It has been obvious for a long time that the New Deal intends to use "cartels" in 1944, much as Bryan used "trusts." So the Henry Wallace blast was not unexpected. About the word "cartel" is thrown about, it is losing all precise meaning and ultimately will be the screen behind which a generalized class attack upon business enterprise will be carried on. For in its precise sense, "cartel" is a word for the courtroom rather than the soap box.
A cartel is a combination of commercial or political interests. As the word is used in Europe, it describes a combination of producers to regulate prices, output and markets. Thus, a German cartel would be illegal in the United States. But in dealings of an international cartel, American companies have always been free, under our law, to make agreements in their own or our combination with foreign firms, themselves, be it illegal in America. Such agreements are not in themselves cartels and, as can be shown by innumerable examples, can clearly be in the interest of this country. The fact is that cartels can be made by government itself. Mr. Wallace's AAA was, in effect, a cartel created under Government authority to guarantee minimum prices.
The issue, then, comes down to the question of whether each particular agreement is a good deal from the standpoint of the United States as a Nation. To single out one company, as Mr. Wallace did, and to carry on a public controversy, is hardly the way to get to the truth, for the discussion then becomes an effort to create prejudices wholly aside from the legal or public policy involved.
The Wallace charges are old. They have been freely discussed before and the people against whom they are made seem abundantly able to reply. But as is usual with charges of that sort, the remedy is vague.
What are Henry's suggestions? Entire withdrawal of American companies from all international agreements with foreign companies? That would be a type of isolationism anathema to Wallace. Would he require all foreign patents to be licensed to all comers? Or would he require the licensing of all patents? Surely not the latter, because that would hurt his "common man," for it would pinch small manufacturers most.
Does Mr. Wallace suggest that Mr. Roosevelt's Attorney General have been incapable of enforcing the Sherman Act, which presumably deals with monopolies, domestic or foreign, or in combination? He has not said so. The fact is that he scarcely hints at any remedy that big engineering firms and industrial corporations would not accept or, in fact, have not advocated long ago.
The National Association of Manufacturers has been on record for a considerable time as follows: "We approve in principle the recording of agreements, particularly international agreements, pertaining to patents or the filing thereof with the Patent Office where such instruments contain restrictive provisions or involve cross-licensing under patents or the pooling of patents."
Along with such measure of compulsory publicity, the government might well determine in advance what agreements are in the national interest. Experience would probably show that even the wisest bureaucrat would not be able to protect American interests better than our big companies have done in recent years.

Cross-Channel Thrust?

By DEWITT MACKENZIE,
Associated Press War Analyst.
One wonders whether the authoritative Army and Navy Journal hasn't opened the closet door on a rather grim international skeleton by its sensational assertion that powerful interests would like to remove Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall from the Washington scene.
"Acting under the President's instruction," explains the Journal, "the (Marshall) has labored zealously to insure the fullest measure of co-operation with our Allies and especially the British, a policy based on the President's and his own appreciation of the necessity of safeguarding American interests." Thinking only of winning the war in the shortest time and saving every American life possible, in connection with the bloody operations which it calls for, Gen. Marshall, of course, has come into conflict with powerful interests which would like to eliminate him from the Washington picture, and place in his stead an officer more amenable to their will.
Wants Direct Invasion.
That's a nasty picture. Who are these powerful interests? The Journal leaves it to us to figure it out for ourselves. The general public has learned of only one difference of opinion between Gen. Marshall and critics.
The Chief of Staff is said to have held firmly to the conviction that Western Europe should be invaded directly from England. Other strategists, particularly those on the British side of the table, have frowned on cross-Channel invasion. Timing of the drive also is said to have caused some dissension.
Well, it certainly is interesting to know where Gen. Marshall has stood on such invasion, for that has been one of the major issues of the war, as Moscow hasn't allowed us to forget. It persistently has been pointed out that the quickest way to victory would be this admittedly highly dangerous operation—always provided the Allies were properly set for it. Nobody with any knowledge of military affairs would suggest such an invasion short of full preparedness.
You'll find plenty of military ex-

This Changing World—

By CONSTANTINE BROWN.
The Chinese government is placing high hopes on the promised Allied offensive at the end of the monsoon rains. Naturally, they expect a vigorous campaign which would open up the Burma road within the next year.
The appointment of the spectacular Lord Louis Mountbatten as supreme commander of Allied forces in Southeast Asia made an excellent impression on our allies who have been fighting the Japanese with determination but with very little equipment.
Lord Mountbatten, who has specialized so far in commando warfare which is more spectacular than effective, is expected to show his qualities as a leader of large forces in a different kind of warfare. In the past commando attacks may have had some effect in Europe, where nations subjected by Hitler were hungering for any kind of an action, but they are not likely to make a dent on the Japanese or the Burmese.
Tokio, which, according to all available indication, has decided to fight henceforth a purely defensive war, has taken all possible precautions to offset any kind of Allied effort to reconquer Asia except that based on an overwhelming military force.
Burma has been given her independence. It may mean nothing to us who know what the Japanese mean by making an Oriental nation independent. We have seen the case of Manchuria, where, by the appointment of a puppet emperor and by changing the name of the country to Manchukuo, the Japanese claimed to have created an independent state. To the Burmese people who have been clamoring for even a token independence in the past the gesture of the Japanese is said to mean something.
Know U. S. Position.
The Philippines also are by way of receiving a "complete independence" within a few months. The Japanese task there will be far more difficult because in the last decade the most vociferous Filipino nationalists have realized that America meant well by them and the freedom granted them was given in good faith.
member of the Union Executive Board and deputy vice chairman of the War Production Board, said that "artificial rubber manufacture is the greatest challenge ever tossed to American workers."

Barney House to Train Volunteer Workers
A training course for adults interested in volunteer work at settlement houses will begin at 7:30 p. m. Thursday at Barney Neighborhood House, 470 N street S.W., it was announced today by the Council of Social Agencies.
The course will be open to men and women who are at least 18 years of age and are high school graduates. It will cover eight weeks, with each meeting at one of the eight settlement houses of the city.
The staffs of these houses, all of which are members of the council and the Community War Fund, are sponsors of the course, in co-operation with the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office, the Federation of Churches and the National Recreation Office.
The first meeting will cover the history and philosophy of settlement houses, with Dr. Ernest S. Griffith, director of legislative reference of the Library of Congress, and Miss Margaret Merrill, head resident of Barney House, in charge.

McLemore—Generous Sergeant Adopts 'My Colonel'

By HENRY MCLEMORE.
The sergeant was feeling no pain. He came in through a club car not only in his cups, but in his saucers, as well. The aroma of distilled grain hung heavily about him, and one had the feeling that he was just about two cars ahead of the M. P.'s. He seemed to feel that his time was short, too, because he never stopped talking for a minute.
There wasn't a seat for him, so he sort of sat with an everybody for a while. He told us his life history, including the fact that he had been in the Army 12 years, and that everybody who wasn't in the Army was strictly a bum.
"And that goes for you, too, conductor," he said when he gave him his ticket. "That's the wrong uniform you've got on." The conductor couldn't have been a day over 65, but the sergeant had his say before he let the conductor go on.
He told all of us civilians where we got off. He wasn't mean about it, but he was awfully insistent. Finally, he spotted a colonel at the far end of the club car, sitting unobtrusively back of a newspaper. The sergeant went for the colonel like a dog for a bone—a slightly lurching dog, I might add. He patted the colonel approvingly on the shoulder and, addressing the car, said, "Here is my kind of man. In time of war he gets in the Army. He has done right good, too, folks. He's a full colonel, and he is my colonel, too."
Offered Colonel His Berth.
It was obvious that he had never laid eyes on the colonel before, but he took immediate possession of him. It was "my colonel," this and "my colonel" that. The colonel, obviously embarrassed, rose and said he guessed he would go to bed. Then he made a mistake. Just by way of parting conversation he said he didn't look forward to going to bed, however, because he had only been able to get an upper berth, and never had been able to get a decent night's rest in an upper.
This set the sergeant off. "If my colonel doesn't like the berth he has, he can have mine."
The colonel said "no," that he wouldn't think of taking the sergeant's accommodations.
The sergeant addressed everybody in the car. "My colonel must take my berth," he said. "If he can't sleep in uppers, he is gonna have my bed."
The colonel protested. The sergeant insisted. Finally, to save what he could see would be an endless discussion, the colonel gave in.
Exchange Accommodations.
"Thank you very much, sergeant," he said. "I'm very appreciative. I just can't sleep in an upper."
The sergeant beamed. He started looking for his Pullman stub. He found it and beamed again. "Here it is," he said triumphantly. "It's for you, my colonel." They exchanged accommodations.
A few minutes later I went to bed. As I walked to my car I was surprised to see the colonel climbing a ladder into an upper berth. I was so surprised, in fact, that I spoke to him and said, "Colonel, didn't you just swap your upper with the sergeant in the lounge car?"
The colonel smiled a tired smile. "I certainly did," he said, "but that damned fool had upper seven, right across from my original upper six."
Not long after, I could hear the M. P.'s putting the sergeant to bed and the last words I heard were a mumbled "my colonel."

Brookland Citizens Recommend Site for Branch Library

The Brookland Citizens' Association at a meeting last night appointed a committee to recommend to the Board of Library Trustees a site for a library to accommodate the Brookland and Burroughs neighborhoods.
Action was taken following a report by Marvin M. McLean, president, that an item had been included on the new District budget for the purchase of a library site of approximately 30,000 square feet in Brookland. J. M. Jamieson, president of the Burroughs Citizens' Association, promised the support of that group in the project.
E. C. Giddings, assistant to the president of the Capital Transit Co., was guest speaker of the evening. He explained the problems which are facing the transit company in the restoration of curtailed bus routes and the maintenance of service.
"Seven hundred of our men are already in the armed services, and if fathers are drafted, the company anticipates an additional loss of 1,000 men," he said, adding, "Women will be needed to replace every man who goes."
Two months are required for the process of planning and picking the schedules necessary to the restoration of curtailed routes, according to Mr. Giddings. With the manpower shortage the company is unable to give better service on shortened runs because of the limited number of operators.
A resolution was passed indorsing the bill now pending before Congress which will increase payments to retired Government employees.
Sergt. Rasmussen of the 12th police precinct reported that crime conditions in the Brookland neighborhood compared very favorably with other parts of the city.
The meeting, held in the Brookland Methodist church, was presided over by Marvin M. McLean.

Second Strike Threatened By West Coast Trainmen

By the Associated Press.
LOS ANGELES, Sept. 21.—For the second time within two months, a union grievance committee representing 2,500 employees of the Pacific Electric Railway has set a strike date because of the economic stabilization director has not authorized a 13-cent hourly wage increase.
The new time fixed for the walk-out—Friday at 2 a. m.—Pacific War was agreed upon after a conference of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen's Grievance Committee and endorsed by 400 workers at a mass meeting last night.
Employees of the interurban line receive a wage of 87 cents hourly, and their plea for $1 was approved by the company several months ago.
A stoppage last July was averted, union officials said, when President Roosevelt promised a review of the case and immediate action.
Northeast Civic Group Opens Headquarters
Ceremonies were held by the Northeast Boundary Civic Association, Civilian Defense Unit No. 51, to celebrate the opening of headquarters at Fifteenth and Grant streets N.E. Sunday.
Participating in a parade which preceded the addresses were two Red Cross ambulances, the Fire Guards and the auxiliary police, headed by Sergt. Thomas Ryan of Maj. Edward Kelly's staff.
Speakers on the program included the Rev. Father Peter C. Curran, S. J., of the Church of the Immaculate; Drs. Charles H. Marshall, Dr. Herbert Marshall and E. F. Harris, representing civic organizations; Dr. Howard H. Long, civilian defense inspector; Adj. Albert Dunlap of the American Legion; Bishop Alexander Terrill and Charles M. Thomas, president of the organization, presiding.

57,415 Applicants Given Statements of Availability in July

More than a third of the statements of availability issued by the United States Employment Service to job seekers during July were approved to enable workers to make a greater contribution to the war effort in new jobs, the regional War Manpower Commission said today.
WMC also announced that a higher percentage of requests for the release were denied by USES in July than in June.
Throughout this region, which includes the District, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina, a total of 57,415 statements of availability were granted. Of the total granted, 20,119 went to workers where it was determined transfers would result in a more effective prosecution of the war, WMC said. Of the others, 3,555 went to workers who were not being released because of their need to continue working because of other compelling reasons. The remaining releases were given because workers had been discharged, laid off more than seven days or for other reasons.
Total inquiries for information about the employment stabilization plan increased in July by about 12 per cent. Appeals taken by employers and employees from decisions of the USES increased 35 per cent over the previous month.
Approximately the same number of releases were denied during July as during June, but in relation to the number of cases handled, a higher percentage of requests were denied in July, WMC said. In June 10.3 per cent of the requests were denied and in July 15.1 per cent.

Earl of Kenmare Dies; Newspaper Columnist

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, Sept. 21.—The Earl of Kenmare, 52, who as Viscount Castlerosse was one of London's best-known newspaper columnists before the war, died unexpectedly yesterday at the ancestral home at Killarney, Eire.
His death followed by less than nine months his marriage to Enid Viscountess Furness. His first wife, Viscountess Castlerosse, from whom he was divorced, died last January 5 from an overdose of sleeping medicine.
Lord Kenmare had suffered from heart disease for several years. Valentine Castlerosse, as he was known to his friends, was a popular figure in London and international society. He was a director of the Evening Standard, Daily Express and Sunday Express, newspapers owned by Lord Beaverbrook with whom he was long associated.

Rees Urges Tax Program Be Prepared Speedily

By the Associated Press.
Representative Rees, Republican, of Kansas has called on Congress to get busy and work out a tax program on its own without waiting for the administration to "make up its mind."
"Otherwise," he told the House yesterday, "we will be again confronted with some more last-minute legislation."
Mr. Rees also said the House Ways and Means Committee could do a lot of good if it would submit legislation to simplify "these tax reports that are giving people a lot of headaches throughout the country right now."
Before victory is won, we've got to build more, fight more and buy more War bonds. Buy at least a $100 bond during the Third War Loan above your regular bond buying.

3 House Bills Aimed At Reducing Waste Of Federal Funds

By the Associated Press.
Representative Jones, Republican, of Ohio has served warning that he is looking for a "comandante" raid on the wasters in the Federal Government" in introducing legislation aimed at obtaining for Congress information on general expenditures and any "unnecessary duplications and waste of public funds" in Government agencies.
One of his three bills would repeal the provision of the administration's reorganization plan No. 1 which transferred the Budget Bureau from the Treasury Department to the executive office of the President.
Mr. Jones' bill would make the Bureau an independent agency reporting to Congress and to the President details of all requests by departments and agencies for appropriations. It also would furnish information on whether the request money would be used to carry out functions now authorized by law.
A second bill would appropriate $200,000 for the remainder of this fiscal year to permit the Controller General to make inquiries, reports and recommendations to Congress on receipt, disbursement and application of public funds. He also would submit reports on expenditures or contracts made in violation of law and furnish congressional committees any requested information.
The third measure would require the Controller General's office to make disallowances and withhold credits where expenditures are made illegally and to start collection proceedings against those receiving the illegal payments. His office also would report to Congress annually any overlapping or duplications of functions of agencies.
Mr. Jones said in a statement yesterday that "Congress has had the will to eliminate duplication and waste, but it has not had the facts from the executive departments and the General Accounting Office to get the waste and duplication stopped with dispatch."

Cathedral Arranges London Church Display

Visitors to Washington Cathedral this week will see a special display on All Hallows Church of London, arranged by John H. Bayless, curator of the Cathedral.
Pictures of the 13th century London church at various periods in its history will be shown. A book, "London Wall Through Eighteen Centuries," and a stone taken from the debris after the church was bombed in 1940, will be on display.
The Cathedral will continue to remain open until 8:30 p. m. Tuesday nights. A tour of the building, conducted by Pilgrim Volunteer Aides, will be held at 7 p. m. There will be music on the great organ from 7:45 p. m. until closing time.

Alumni to Meet

Officers for the next year are to be elected at the first fall meeting of the William and Mary Alumni Club of Washington at 8 p. m. Friday at the Statler Hotel.

Rubber Union Chief Urges Full Support For Roosevelt

By the Associated Press.
TORONTO, Sept. 21.—Full support for President Roosevelt was advocated yesterday by S. H. Dairymple, president of the United Rubber Workers of America (U.R.W.A.) in his presidential address to the eighth annual convention of the union here.
After asserting that "we are going to be confronted with a national labor day benefited under the present administration by the passing of the Wagner Act, social security laws and other legislation."
Canadian Labor Code Urged.
"During the next year we have a profound duty to perform," he said, "certainly we cannot afford to sit idly by like we did in the last election and allow a number of progressive-minded Congressmen and Senators to be ousted and reactionaries elected to take their place."
"Neither can we afford to fail to give our undivided and full support to our Commander in Chief, the Honorable Franklin Delano Roosevelt."
A. R. Moshier, president of the Canadian Congress of Labor, in a speech, said that Canadian workers need a labor code similar to that of the United States.
"We in Canada are still striving for a labor code guaranteeing workers the right to organize and bargain collectively and punishing employers who do not want to recognize labor's right," he said.
Synthetic Rubber Is Challenge.
Mr. Moshier expressed hope that after the war, "a round-table conference of workers from Great Britain, Canada, the United States, Russia and other Allies will have its place in the building of a world of freedom."

Cook County Reports It Is Without Funds To Pay 6,000 Workers

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—The money box in the Cook County treasurer's office for payroll purposes was devoid of immediate cash today and payless paydays until December 1 for some 6,000 employees was forecast by Treasurer Victor L. Schlaeger.
Some $625,000 was to have been distributed to the employees yesterday in salaries and wages for the first half of September, but Mr. Schlaeger did not sign the payroll checks, marking the first payless payday for county employees since 1933.
There'll be money coming into the treasurer's office during the next 10 weeks, Mr. Schlaeger explained, but the revenues that accrue to the county in that period already are earmarked for specific purposes—but not for payrolls. Approximately $3,000,000 would be needed to meet the next five semimonthly payrolls.
On December 1, the beginning of the county's next fiscal year, the county could arrange to sell tax-anticipation warrants to pay back salaries, Mr. Schlaeger explained.
County Board President Clayton F. Smith said that the county's troubles were due to insufficient revenues; that its total income from taxes was less than $7,000,000, far below the estimate.

AT LEFT is a summary of United States Government Securities offered during the Third War Loan. Below is a reproduction of the application forms for War Bond purchasers which your Volunteer Treasury Representative will fill out for you according to your instructions. Study these forms. Your Volunteer Representative will be glad to go over them with you and answer all questions.

about this volunteer who calls on you...

It's time for another visit from your Volunteer Representative of the United States Treasury . . . to explain the types of War Bonds the government is offering in the 15-billion-dollar Third War Loan.

That's all there is to it—that and taking your order and seeing that you get your bonds safe and sound.

You aren't going to be high-pressured. Your Volunteer Treasury Representative knows you'll do all you can, that you don't have to be sold.

Today our boys are on the offensive against America's enemies all over the world. To supply and maintain them, to provide them with the weapons of Victory without stint, costs billions of dollars. But we can do it—must do it—will do it! We'll back the attack with War Bonds.

The only question for you to decide is what bonds you want. Your Treasury Representative will fill out your application for you and make arrangements for their delivery.

But you need not wait for the Volunteer Representative to call. You can go, right now, to any one of the many places where War Bonds are sold. And buy all you can!

This message is published in co-operation with the United States Treasury by the Shell Oil Company, Inc.

Miss Blue once was lined up for one of the Billy Rose supercolossal ideas; one, however, which did not reach full fruition like the Aquacades or Diamond Horseshoe. As Miss Blue relates, it was one of the Beautiful Dreamer's more beautiful dreams. Simple, too. Mr. Rose had in mind a supercolossal trio of songstresses; talented, yes, and totaling a weight of about one-quarter ton. It was to be comprised of Kate Smith, Mildred Bailey and Miss Blue. Moreover, the deal was on the very point of consummation before Mr. Rose awoke to realities: whose name to headline on the billing. None of the principals would accept less than top billing, stunt or no stunt. Leaving the fertile creativeness of Mr. Rose sadder, wiser and, of course, undeterred as far as con- sidered future projects.

Danish Parties Reject Nazi Puppet Status
By the Associated Press.
STOCKHOLM, Sept. 21—A dispatch from Denmark yesterday said a committee representing the "big five" Danish political parties had unanimously rejected a German proposal which would reduce the kingdom to the status of a puppet and disband its parliament.
Details of the German plan to replace the military control with Nazi Minister Werner Best assuming power as the Reich's protector, were presented to the Danish cabinet September 13, the Danish Press Service said.
Under the proposal, nonpoliticians would administer and control laws, with Germany reserving control of the press and radio and retaining all legal power acquired under the present state of emergency.
The Germans demanded that Parliament be summoned to em- power the new government to issue laws and then be dismissed permanently, the news service said.
They also demanded the aboli- tion of the War Ministry because of the de facto demobilization of Danish defense forces.
The Parliament leadership, on the same day the demands were re-

THAT FREIGHT TRAIN REMINDS ME OF AN ALL-AMERICAN FOOTBALL TEAM . . . MADE UP OF PLAYERS FROM ALL OVER THE COUNTRY.

YES, AND THEY'RE SHOWING THE KIND OF TEAMWORK THAT WILL DOWN THE JAPAXIS GANG BEHIND THEIR OWN GOAL LINE!

Navy Man—You know, I can't figure out how freight cars from so many different railroads get together in one train. I just counted cars from 34 different roads in that Burlington train.

Ex-Railroader—Well, the map at the bottom of the ad practically gives the answer. All those lines which connect with each other to form a network over the whole country are railroads. The heavy ones are the Burlington. The light ones are a lot of other railroads, each one serving a particular part of the country.

Navy Man—I get it, the heavy lines hook up with the light lines in every direction, don't they?

Ex-Railroader—Exactly—and that's why you see the cars of so many different railroads in that Burlington train—in every Burlington train.

Navy Man—That's mighty interesting, and I can see from the map that the Burlington covers a lot of important territory, all right.

Ex-Railroader—11,000 miles in 13 states . . . some of them agricultural, some of them industrial, and all of them mighty important. But it isn't just size that makes it such an essential link. Another big reason is that the Burlington serves 22 major gateways and has more than 200 interchange points where freight cars are switched from one railroad to another.

Navy Man—I suppose a lot of new interchange points have been added to take care of wartime traffic.

Ex-Railroader—No, as a matter of fact, there hasn't been a single new one added. You see, unlike most war industries, the railroads have had to handle their increased work with very little new plant or equipment. They spent $10,500,000,000 between World War I and II, in getting themselves in tiptop condition. That's why they have been able to do so much more work, thus far, without any new tools, so to speak.

Navy Man—You know, I never realized how thoroughly the railroads are geared to do our wartime shipping job. What I've learned during the last few minutes has given me an extra shot of confidence, I can tell you that!

Thanks, Lieutenant. We of the Burlington, more than 35,000 of us, are going all out to justify that confidence. The only thing the railroads ask is this—enough materials to keep their track, power and rolling stock in fighting condition. It takes weapons to win a war—and every rail, every locomotive, and every freight and passenger car—is a vital weapon of war, these days.

Pitching Problems to Worry Cards, Yanks in World Series

—By JIM BERRYMAN

Stars Wobbly, Rivals Must Gamble With Hurling Talent

By SID FEDER. Associated Press Sports Writer. NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—For a number of years now, the most famous last word in the American League has been to start shouting about what you're going to do to the Yankees on any given occasion.

Win, Lose or Draw

By BURTON HAWKINS.

Nats Appear League's Best Despite Yankees' Lead

"I had been able to get this team together earlier in the year we would have won the pennant," said Clark Griffith, the Nats' boss, after witnessing Washington snatch a double-header from the Yankees on Sunday.

Hurlers Have Sparked

In that nine-game span the Nats' pitchers have produced some brilliant effort in 82 innings that have permitted only 17 runs and 54 hits.

Cards Likely Favorites

Those 20-13 odds favoring the Yankees over the Cardinals are out of line. The St. Louis bookie who quoted those odds was the same character who quoted the Nats last April as 100 to 1 to win the pennant.

Idaho Football Hinges On Naval Trainees

MOSCOW, Idaho, Sept. 21.—Fate of Idaho's 1943 football program depends on whether 40 naval trainees are permitted to play, says Athletic Director J. A. (Babe) Brown.

Bonham's Speed Missing

"I hope the Yankees don't have to use Bonham in the World Series," said Griffith on Sunday after seeing his Nats hammer him for 14 hits in seven innings.

Four Twin Bills Left On Nationals' Card

Four double-headers are booked on Washington's schedule for the remainder of the season at Griffith Stadium, with the Nats slated to tangle with the St. Louis Browns tomorrow night in the first of them.

Yanks' Fight to Clinch Pennant High Spot of Waning Season

The major leagues will swing into their last interseasonal round robin of the season tomorrow and instead of everybody ogling the St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn Dodgers, as appeared likely when the schedule was drawn up, attention will be centered on the New York Yankees' games with the Detroit Tigers.

Hits by One-Hit Softy Hurlers Tell in 'World Series' Finals

By the Associated Press. DETROIT, Sept. 21.—Pitchers who can hit were hailed today as the heroes of the Amateur Softball Association "world series" that crowned the Hammer Field Raiders of Fresno, Calif., and the New Orleans Jax Maids as champions from an original starting field of 50,000 teams.

Injured Wilkin Won't Play With Redskins In Chicard Game

Willie Wilkin, 265 pounds of stalwart tackle and a mainstay of the Redskins line, will shuffle off to Buffalo when the Skins leave Thursday night, but Willie probably won't get in the exhibition against the Cardinals Sunday, the last of the three-game series for the Tribe before they open the National Football League season here October 10.

Frisco and Seattle Reach Coast Final

By the Associated Press. SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—It's San Francisco versus Seattle in the final of the $10,000 playoff of the Pacific Coast League.

Musial and Appling Better Margins as Batting Leaders

By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Both Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals and Luke Appling of the Chicago White Sox tightened their grips on the batting leaderships of their leagues during the past week.

Catawba Quits for Year

SALISBURY, N. C., Sept. 21 (AP).—Catawba will not have a football team this season. This was announced by Coach Gordon A. Kirkland after a conference with Dr. A. R. Keppel. It is effective only on this fall.

Williams and Garner Head Turner Fights

Holman Williams, Chicago Negro, will be the opponent of John Garner of Washington in the 10-round middleweight scrap arranged to usher in the winter season next Monday night at Turner's Arena.

Yank Reserved Seats Gone

NEW YORK, Sept. 21 (AP).—It still is 14 days before the World Series and the Yankees have sold all the reserved seats.

White Sox Want Dykes To Remain as Pilot

By the Associated Press. CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 21.—Manager Jim Wilson of the Chicago Cubs said today he hoped the rumor-mongers would stop insisting that he will resign.

Byrd Nine Under Par

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 21 (AP).—Sam Byrd, Merion Club pro, clipped nine strokes off par to take the qualifying medal in the Philadelphia district country golf tournament at the Llanerch Country Club. He shot 69—66—135.

Minor Playoffs

WPB Bans Contracts In 59 Areas of Acute Manpower Shortage

By the Associated Press. A new drastic policy of banning additional war contracts in areas of acute labor shortages was put into effect today by Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the War Production Board.

Mr. Nelson forbade placing of contracts in 59 so-called "areas of acute labor shortage" in which it is possible to meet military time-tables by filling them elsewhere. Further, Mr. Nelson directed that no contract requiring increase of employment shall be placed in the West Coast region or any other region to which a program similar to the West Coast manpower program may hereafter be applied, without prior approval by him.

At the same time Central Connecticut's growing manpower problem reached such a critical stage that Regional War Manpower Director William J. Fitzgerald ordered all new war contracts stopped in Hartford, New Britain, Meriden, Bristol and Waterbury. Mr. Fitzgerald said the Connecticut regulation differed from that of the West Coast in that it applies only to manufacturing plants. He said the labor shortage in Connecticut was more than 50,000 workers and growing daily.

The District was in the revised WMCO list of acute labor shortage areas, along with several other Maryland and Virginia cities in region 4; Baltimore, Elkhart, Md.; Hampton Roads and Petersburg, Va. The new overall contract-placement policy rating manpower second only to that of the West Coast, which controls procurement officials of the Army, Navy and all other agencies.

As insuring manpower is hurting production, procurement agencies are directed not to place contracts in areas of acute labor shortage (listed September 1), notwithstanding the existence of facilities capable of doing the job, whenever it is practical to do so elsewhere, said Tudor Bowen, director of WPB's procurement policy division.

Will Free Some Labor. The same reasoning is applied in reverse to cutbacks in the war program. Whenever demand for an item diminishes contracts will be terminated in labor shortage areas before other areas, thus releasing labor for more important jobs in the places where most needed.

Previously the existence of plants and equipment in a city outweighed possible manpower shortages in determining where contracts should go. Re-emphasizing that Government agencies should place contracts by negotiation, Mr. Bowen stressed that negotiation should be the first step to make possible "maximum efficiency in the use of overall national resources, including manpower, materials and money, as well as individual plant capacity."

In a reasonable premium, small plants are authorized where such plants have higher unit costs.

ALLIED LANDINGS REPORTED IN DODECANESE—RAF occupation of an airbase on the island of Cos (Coo) in the Dodecane group was reported today. French commandos landed on Corsica to aid French patriots fighting Germans who had fled from Italian-held Sardinia. Seizure of two islands off Naples brought that city within artillery range. In the land fighting around Naples, Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's headquarters announced the capture of Eboli. Blacked-in area indicates progress made by the Allies since collapse of the German armies in Tunisia. Pantelleria surrendered June 11. Invasion of Sicily began on July 10 and fighting ended on August 17. The Italian "boot" was invaded on September 3 and on September 9 the 5th Army landed in the Salerno sector, capturing it on September 11.

Callings himself a one-man pressure group for a silver-and-gold currency standard, Frank E. Gimlet, whiskered 78-year-old prospector who wears 25-year-old boots, said he made his last trip in 1941. He doesn't give up easily, although "Fifty years ago William Jennings Bryan walked down Pennsylvania avenue carrying the 16-to-1 banner and 10,000 people cheered. I walk down the same street carrying the same banner, and no one followed me but a mongrel dog. I was glad of his company."

at Gallinger for his personal employes; that he has provided on numerous occasions free board for certain favored employes of the hospital; that for six years he employed as his personal servant a Filipino whose wages were paid from appropriations made for Gallinger Hospital; and that he has contained, and possibly aided and abetted, the activities of "loan sharks" who had mulcted employees for interest at the rate of 25 per cent semimonthly on small loans.

Makes No Assertions. "Naturally, I can make no assertions as to the truth of these charges; but any one of these charges, in my opinion, would, if proven, be ample cause for dismissal of any employe from the public service."

In addition to the charges leveled against Dr. Bocock and certain other employes of Gallinger Hospital, the report furnished to the District Commissioners by the controller general's office last July, called attention to several instances of sloppy administrative practice which undoubtedly require certain corrections. The report also called attention to an alleged failure to maintain adequate records or inventories of alcoholic liquors and narcotics, and appears to indicate that no adequate control over such supplies has been maintained.

Girl, 14, Is Acquitted On Murder Charge

By the Associated Press. BALTIMORE, Sept. 21.—The youngest girl ever to face the Baltimore Criminal Court on a murder charge, Shirley Rosemary King, 14, was free today. She was acquitted of slaying her grandmother with a milk bottle during an argument last August 3.

The jury sitting under Judge Eugene O'Dunne acquitted her yesterday without leaving the jury box. Judge O'Dunne told the jury he did not consider the girl a criminal and would not sentence her even if she were convicted. He explained, however, that his statement was merely advisory and not binding upon the jury.

Shirley testified that her grandmother, Mrs. Clara Hancock, 63, had been drinking and had struck her with a broom. The girl said she had taken the broom from her grandmother and struck her. Shirley testified that when her grandmother went toward a room where she kept a heavy stick with which she occasionally beat her she picked up and threw a milk bottle. The bottle struck Mrs. Hancock on the back of the head and she ran part way up a flight of stairs and fell.

Shirley's mother is divorced and remarried and she had lived with her grandmother and grandfather since she was about 2 years old.

Barclay Leaves $45,000 To Brothers and Model

By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—A will of Lt. Comdr. McClelland Barclay, submitted yesterday to Surrogate Court, disposed of $45,000 of the artist's estate mainly to his two brothers and Miss Patsy Sanders Hoff, 29, Mr. Barclay's model and secretary.

Mr. Barclay was reported missing in action in the Southwest Pacific in July. The will is not to be offered for probate until a year hence, after legal presumption of death. Letters of administration were issued by the court placing the estate in care of Robert Hamilton Barclay, the artist's brother, an electrical engineer. The other brother is Shephard Barclay, bridge expert. Shephard Barclay and Patsy Hoff was sent by her father, Guy Hoff, artist, to McClelland Barclay to learn painting some years ago.

"A very fine friendship grew up between the two," he said, "and she served my brother both as model and secretary, and portended another her by my brother having adorned many a magazine cover."

Bus Lines Intensify Use of Equipment

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—Although passengers on intercity bus lines increased 53.3 per cent in June, as compared with the same month in 1942, the added load was assumed with a gain of only 11.3 per cent in mileage through the more intensive use of equipment, according to a report issued by the National Association of Motor Bus Operators.

The June figure fell below the trend of months immediately preceding because of the 20 per cent emergency cut in mileage required in the 12 Eastern States by the gasoline shortage.

Since this curtailment order was revoked in August, the association reports that all intercity lines in the affected area have restored their former services as a means of meeting wartime transportation demands.

come back

We can dare to think about it now... About the day when they'll be coming back again... back to the peaceful villages and farms and cities of America... back to their families and the ones they love. We can see Victory now, like a faint light upon the far horizon. And we can think about the day when they'll be coming home. * * * But thinking alone is not enough. There is so much for all of us to do... work to do and sacrifices to make... before we have them safely with us once again. For the harder we work, the more freely we give... the sooner they'll come back. * * * One thing all of us can do is buy War Bonds. No matter what your job, it becomes war work when you invest your earnings in War Bonds. So—this time—buy to your limit. And then buy more. For the more Bonds you buy—the sooner they'll come back!

Senor Fernandez Is Honored At Luncheon and Dinner

The Vice President, Mr. Henry A. Wallace, made an official call on the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Chile, Senor Joaquín Fernandez, this morning at 11 o'clock at Blair House. Last evening Vice President Wallace was the ranking guest at a men's dinner given in honor of the Chilean Foreign Affairs Minister by the Ambassador of Chile, Senor Don Rodolfo Michels, at the Embassy.

The distinguished Chilean visitor was the guest of honor at a luncheon given today at the Brazilian Embassy by the Ambassador, Mr. Carlos Martins, and he will also be honored at a dinner party to be given this evening by the Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Rodriguez at their residence on Hillier place. Others in the company will include the United States Ambassador to Chile, Mr. Claude Bowers; heads of the Chilean Naval and Military Missions, officials of the State Department, and members of the Chilean Embassy staff, with their wives. There will be 22 at dinner with a number of other guests invited in later in the evening.

Dorothea Kuntz Becomes Bride Of Mr. Schuech

Miss Dorothea Kuntz, daughter of Mrs. Margaret I. Kuntz of Johnstown, Pa., was one of the brides of the week end, her marriage to Mr. Charles Daniel Schuech, son of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Schuech, taking place Saturday in the Hamline Methodist Church.

Simple decorations of palms and lighted candles decorated the altar before which the Rev. H. W. Burman officiated at 7:30 in the evening and the bride, who was escorted by her brother, Pvt. James Kuntz, wore a dress of ivory satin trimmed with buttons and ending in a fan-shaped train. A beaded tiara held her full-length veil and she carried a bouquet of orchids and white roses.

Miss Mildred Peagans of Lynchburg was the maid of honor and was gowned in rose taffeta. Rose Orlich, feathers formed her head-dress and she carried a bouquet of cream roses.

Miss Juanita Gardner of Faith, N. C.; Miss Teddy Kinsey and Miss Helen Louise Klopfer were the bridesmaids and wore blue taffeta with white ribbons and carried tallman roses.

Pfc. William Yeager was the best man and those serving as ushers were Pfc. Chris Murphy, Jr.; Pfc. Frank Rose and Pfc. Jack Schumacker.

When they return from their wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Schuech will make their home at 4406 Fifteenth street.

Wedding Date Is Selected

October 29 has been chosen by Miss Dorcas VanDyke Buck, daughter of Senator C. Douglass Buck of Delaware and Mrs. Buck, as the date of her marriage to Capt. Donald Keith Farquhar, Army Air Forces, son of Mrs. R. J. Farquhar of Redlands, Calif., and the late Mr. Farquhar.

The ceremony will take place at 4:30 o'clock in Immanuel Church on the Green, Newcastle, Del., with a reception following at Senator and Mrs. Buck's home in Wilmington.

Officers to Dance

The midweek dance for officers in the series being given at the Sulgrave Club will take place Thursday evening from 9 o'clock until midnight.

Forrester, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hoffacker, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lefevre, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Snow, Mr. and Mrs. Myron Witters, Mr. and Mrs. Rolland Buckley and Mr. Roland Doane.

Miss Alice Long Wed Yesterday To Mr. Tumulty

The Church of the Holy Name was the scene of a lovely wedding yesterday morning when Miss Alice Regina Long and Mr. Joseph Patrick Tumulty were married with the Rev. James A. Caulfield officiating at the 10 o'clock nuptial mass.

Palms and white gladioluses decorated the church and Miss Marie Sauter was the soloist. Miss Sauter also sang at the reception and breakfast which were given at the Mayflower Hotel after the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Joseph Long and she was escorted to the altar by her father. Her gown of white taffeta fallie was made with a long train and a Mary Queen of Scots head-dress held her full-length veil of illusion. Her flowers were a shower bouquet of white roses, gypsophila and lilies of the valley centered with white orchids.

Miss Mary Margaret Long was maid of honor for her sister and wore fuchsia taffeta featured with ruffles. Fuchsia net fashioned her Mary Queen of Scots head-dress and she carried an old-fashioned bouquet of yellow roses and blue delphinium.

The bridesmaids were Miss Joan Patricia Long and Miss Lillian Loretta Tumulty, the former a sister of the bride and the latter the bridegroom's sister. They were dressed in gold taffeta with Mary Queen of Scots gold head-dresses and carried old-fashioned bouquets of tallman roses and blue delphinium. Wearing white taffeta with a head wreath of tallman roses and delphinium and carrying an old-fashioned nosegay of autumn flowers, Kathleen Ann Collins, niece of the bridegroom, served as flower girl.

Mr. Tumulty is the son of Mr. William Tumulty and the late Mrs. Tumulty, and his brother, Mr. William P. Tumulty, was his best man. Richard E. Collins and Mr. Harze J. Scharnokow were the ushers.

Mr. and Mrs. Tumulty left after the reception for a trip to the Pocono Mountains, with the bride wearing for traveling a brown outfit and a corsage of white orchids. She attended St. Paul's Academy, and her husband is a graduate of St. John's College.

Reserve Ensigns Are Married

The Chapel of St. Joseph of Arimathea of the Washington Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul was the scene of the wedding Friday of Ensign Mary Olivia MacNeven and Ensign Arnold Stifel Mengel, with Canon J. Curtis Draper officiating at the afternoon ceremony.

Wearing a dress of white fallie trimmed with seed pearls, the bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William MacNeven of Kansas City, was escorted by Mr. Arnold G. Stifel, uncle of the bridegroom, and given in marriage by her mother. Her veil was held by a Mary Queen of Scots head-dress of seed pearls and she carried a spray of roses and stephanotis.

Miss Audrey Stifel, cousin of the bridegroom, was the bride's only attendant.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert F. Mengel of Washington and St. Louis, and his father served as his best man. Mr. and Mrs. Mengel were hosts at a reception following the ceremony, after which Ensign Mengel and his bride, both of whom are in the Naval Reserve, left for a trip to Hot Springs, Va.

Luncheon Given Future Bride

Miss Yolande de Mauduit, daughter of Mrs. Griffin de Mauduit, has chosen Saturday, October 2, as the date of her marriage to Maj. James Laughton Collins, Jr., U. S. A., son of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. James Laughton Collins.

The wedding is to take place at St. John's Church at 5:30 o'clock, Rev. Dr. Magee officiating. The prospective bridegroom's two sisters, Mrs. Cordy Wear and Miss Agnes Collins, will be Miss Mauduit's attendants, as will Miss Dorothea Sowers of Washington and Miss Corinne Ingraham of New York.

Yesterday, Mrs. Walter R. Tucker and her daughter, Mrs. Robert Hugh Williams, entertained at a luncheon for the future bride, and other informal parties are being planned in her honor.

An announcement will be made of persons eligible to receive certificates of meritorious achievement in recognition of perfect attendance during the past year. Nominations of officers for the coming year will be made by the Nominating Committee. Miss Francis Rowe, the president, will direct the meeting. Officers of the Credit Women's Breakfast Club, in addition to Miss Rowe, are Freda Chamberlain, vice president; Helen Rubenstein, corresponding secretary; and Lillian Levin, recording secretary.

British Schools Called Better Than Before War

Neither blackout nor blitz has curtailed or retarded the education of English children, and four years after the war, John Bull's educational program is better than it was in pre-war days, according to Miss Hilda Beal, a former teacher at York, England, now in this country with the British Information Services.

Visiting Washington from her office in New York, Miss Beal was guest speaker at the regular Monday tea of the American Association of University Women yesterday at club headquarters on I street.

Taking as her subject "British Education in Wartime and Peacetime," the speaker told how war problems had been solved advantageously by British educators, resulting in many benefits to be continued after the war.

"Our children are the nation's future security and we feel our boys and girls must have the first consideration," she declared.

Greater attention is given to proper nutrition of school children, she explained, and every school child in England is required to drink an allotment of milk each day. In addition, plans are now under way to make it obligatory for each child to eat a hot meal at noontime at the school.

The evacuation of over a half million children from bombed areas to camp schools, where children are under complete supervision of teachers, has been highly beneficial to the children, Miss Beal added. They are receiving proper food, hygienic instruction and recreational supervision which was unknown to many in the poorer districts, she explained.

Children are also being taught thrift and the care of their clothes. "There is no such thing as waste of paper in the schools," she said. "Textbooks are carefully bound so as to last as long as possible. Girls are taught nutritional values in home economics classes as well as to mend and repair clothes."

All boys from the age of 12 are affiliated with some military training program, she continued. One of every four boys between the ages of 14 and 18 is with the Air Training Corps, she added.

England early solved the problem of a teacher shortage by freeing all women teachers at their jobs and deferring all men teachers over 35. Men over 30 who teach mathematics or sciences also are deferred, she added.

Miss Beal believes that geography, which she teaches, has become a much more important subject since the war.

"Even little children are interested in the countries that once sent us taught nutritional values in home economics classes as well as to mend and repair clothes."

History also has become increasingly interesting to young people, she continued, and American history is now an important subject in English schools.

"We think the teaching of American history will promote better understanding between the nations," she added.

Miss Beal first came to the United States as an exchange teacher in 1938, remaining here for two years. She returned last year on an invitation from the American Association of University Women to lecture before Western groups, and remained later to work with the British Information Service. She plans to return to England at the end of this year.

Boy Falls From Auto, 5 Others Injured In Traffic Accidents

Six persons, one a 4-year-old boy who toppled from a moving automobile when he accidentally opened the door, were injured in Washington traffic yesterday.

Dock A. Pittman, 36, of 3848 South Capitol street, and C. A. Houston, 33, of 516 Raleigh street S.E., were injured when a Capital Transit bus skidded on wet streetcar tracks and crashed into an electric light pole on Nichols avenue S.E.

Mr. Pittman was admitted to Casualty Hospital for treatment of possible fractured ribs, while Mr. Houston was admitted to St. Elizabeth's Hospital where it was said he had a possible fractured hip.

Operator of the bus was Hugh F. Cooley, 36, of 618 L street N.E.

Joseph C. Kerns, 4, of Fairfax, Va., fell from the car operated by his mother, Mrs. Clarine R. Kerns, 26, and suffered lacerations and contusions of the scalp. After being treated at Emergency Hospital he was removed to Children's Hospital and admitted for observation. He was climbing from the front seat to the rear when he accidentally opened the rear door of the car.

George A. Robey, 8, of 1605 Isherwood street N.E., was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a possible concussion after running into the side of an automobile operated by Francis E. Mattley, 27, of Clinton, Md., in the 600 block of Fifteenth street N.E.

The boy lives with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Robey, at the above address. His father is on duty with the Army Air Forces.

Two colored men, James C. Thomas, 37, of 46 O street N.W., and Robert Harris, 57, of 54 I street S.W., were injured when struck by a car at Seventh street and Rhode Island avenue. Police said they were walking against the red traffic signal.

Mr. Thomas was discharged after being treated for lacerations at Freedmen's Hospital but Mr. Harris was admitted to the hospital with a compound fracture of the leg.

Driver of the car was Jack B. Fletcher, 18, of 2015 Jackson street N.E.

Music Union Refuses Six Recording Firms Terms Given Decca

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—The American Federation of Musicians, through its attorney, yesterday rejected a request by six major electrical transcription companies to resume the manufacture of recordings under the same agreement Decca Records, Inc., and its subsidiary, World Broadcasting System, reached Saturday with the union.

The proposal was made at a special mediation panel hearing of the War Labor Board by A. Walter Socolow, attorney for the Associated Music Publishers, Inc.; Langworth Feature Programs, Inc.; Empire Broadcasting Corp.; Standard Radio, C. P. MacGregor and the radio recording division of the National Broadcasting Co.

The Decca company and its subsidiary were permitted by a verbal agreement to resume manufacture of recordings and transcriptions, banned since August 1, 1942, by AFM President James C. Petrillo. Milton Diamond, Decca attorney, said terms of the agreement were being drawn and would be announced after it was signed.

Joseph A. Padway, AFM general counsel, after refusing the request of the six firms, said: "These other companies have failed until now to show any disposition to settle. If the agreement signed with Decca does not meet with their approval after it is drawn up they won't have to accept it.

"We are not so dumb as to let them build up a backlog of records, thus making them more adamant when the time comes to sign the agreement. . . . If the other companies fall in line with the Decca proposal they, too, can start to make records five minutes later."

Mr. Socolow requested, in view of the Decca understanding, that the six transcription companies be permitted to employ AFM musicians under the same verbal terms as Decca, and added that "We are willing . . . to accord fair employment to members of the AFM."

Do You Know What Cuboids Are?

Cuboids are foot balancers . . . (much more than a mere arch support) . . . which keep your body in correct posture whether you're sitting or standing. With your body in correct posture, your feet are relieved of all fatigue and strain.

With Cuboids in your shoes you are assured absolute freedom from pressure . . . you "walk on air" and find a new buoyancy in your step. They're light in weight, interchangeable in your shoes and contain no metal.

North-South had to lose three aces in a spade contract and could make only four; so South should not have bid five spades, and West should not have sacrificed with the six-club bid over it. But once West did get into six clubs doubled, he should not have done badly. Most East-West pairs bid five clubs and made it, losing only one heart and one diamond. This West player managed to go down four tricks, 1,100 points.

North opened the spade ace, and dummy trumped it. West entered his hand with a club lead and took a diamond finesse, losing to South's queen. South returned a club, knocking out dummy's queen.

Now West could not get back to his own hand without giving up a trick; but instead of leading the heart ace and another heart West tried to cash the diamond ace. South trumped this and cashed the spade king. Then South led a heart, and West was stuck in dummy and had to give up tricks to North's kings of hearts and diamonds. This made five tricks that West lost.

Disposition of Gas Puzzles Police Chief

MADISON, Ind.—The current complication in Fire Chief John Eckert's life is how to dispose of 50 barrels of gasoline without selling it, dumping it or giving it away.
An Ohio River gasoline barge, here for repairs, must be rid of its load before a welding torch can be applied.
The local ration board says the gas can't be given away. Government regulations forbid dumping it in the river and no ration stamps cover sale in such a situation.

Alexandria Board to Issue A Gas Books October 8

Gasoline A books will be issued in Alexandria Friday, October 8, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.
James S. Douglas, executive secretary of the board, said that volunteers will issue the books at the George Washington High School, the Mount Vernon School and Gadsby's Tavern Schools will not be closed and teachers are not being asked to aid in the distribution.

On and after tomorrow, applications may be obtained at any of the city's filling stations. Mr. Douglas stated that applications should not be mailed or brought to the board, but should be kept until October 8, when they are to be taken to one of the three centers. The cover of the old A book and the tire inspection record must be brought to the center or the new book cannot be issued, the official said.

There has been no announcement of an earlier expiration date for the current A books and Mr. Douglas said that unless such an announcement is made by the national OPA it can be assumed they will expire on November 21, as originally provided.

Traffic Council Asks Driving Instructors Be Licensed Here

The District Traffic Advisory Council last night voted to recommend to the Commissioners that persons engaged in commercially instructing applicants for drivers' permits be licensed by the District.

William A. Van Duzer, director of vehicles and traffic, told the council that today persons need only an operator's permit to get themselves up as expert instructors. With licensing and strict examination of instructors, he said, not only will incompetent commercial instruction be eliminated, but the standard of driving will rise.

The measure was hotly contested on the grounds that it might lead to compulsory instruction of applicants by one of these licensed teachers. This, opponents pointed out, would prevent parents and relatives from instructing.

Parking Lot Trash. The council recommended also that the assistant corporation counsel prepare an amendment to District parking lot regulations to enforce removal of trash and broken glass.

Mr. Van Duzer reported that Washington was second this year in the national traffic safety contest, while Milwaukee, Wis., ran first. He also reported that streetcar accidents in the District resulted in 25 deaths during this year as compared with 16 in 1942 and only 7 in 1941. This year's high death figure, almost four times that of 1941, resulted from only one and one-half times as many accidents as occurred in that year, he said.

Safety Leaders Hailed. The council acclaimed the work of the 13 police co-ordinators of the District, who during the summer worked with more than 360 boys in helping to set up traffic patrols for the safety of school children.

Chairman Arthur Sundin sent recommendations to proper committees regarding traffic problems at specific intersections. He asked for a survey of improperly and unmarked intersections throughout the city, characterizing them as a safety hazard.

The council brought out the fact that more and better safety education must be instituted in the District to cut down on traffic accidents. This year it has asked for $30,000 for safety education, Chairman Sundin said.

Detroit Firm Challenges WLB Power in Suit Here

A challenge to the jurisdiction of the War Labor Board in a labor dispute involving recognition of a contract between service employees and the owners of a large office building in downtown Detroit was filed yesterday in District Court.

The court was asked, in a complaint filed by the Simon J. Murphy Co. of Detroit, to declare that the WLB has no jurisdiction over the dispute and further to enjoin the WLB from holding a hearing here on the matter. The dispute, which involves a CIO union, is scheduled for hearing next Tuesday.

Jesse Freiden, associate counsel for the WLB, said it was one of the first cases challenging the jurisdiction of the board to come before a Federal court.

You girls who suffer from simple anemia or who lose so much during monthly periods that you feel tired, weak, "drugged out"—due to low blood-iron—start today—try Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound TABLETS (with added iron).
Pinkham's Tablets is one of the greatest blood-iron tonics you can buy to help build up red blood to give more strength and energy and to promote a more robust bloodstream—in such cases.
Taken as directed—Pinkham's Tablets is one of the best and quickest home ways to get precious iron into the blood. Just try them for at least 30 days—then see if you, too, don't remarkably benefit. Follow label directions. Well worth trying!

Interfederation Acts To Obtain Study on Postwar Housing

The Interfederation Conference at its first fall meeting last night appointed a committee to study postwar housing and to exchange ideas and information within the various jurisdictions.

Action came on a motion by Ernest F. Henry of the District Federation following a discussion of housing needs in the District and suburban areas. Particular study will be made on one and two bedroom apartment units.

Appointed to serve on the committee were: Mr. Henry and H. W. Austin, District Federation; Mrs. Florence Cannon, Arlington County, Va.; Fred W. Gast, Prince Georges County, Md.; Rhett Burket, Montgomery County, Md.; and Dr. Thomas P. Martin, Fairfax County, Va.

Judge Alfred D. Bailey of Prince Georges County offered a motion, which was carried, calling for the appointment of a committee to recommend compulsory military training in high schools to the superintendents of those schools involved. Only students proving physical disability would be excused.

A. B. Duvall of Montgomery County, Walter S. Wasson of the District, William C. Hull of Arlington County, Edward P. Roll of Fairfax County and Walter F. Mulligan of Prince Georges County were appointed to that committee.

Reports from all of the federations were heard, as well as a complaint regarding the fares to the Pentagon Building and to Suitland, Md. It was pointed out that a person residing in Maryland wanting to go to the Pentagon would have to pay a Maryland, District and Virginia fare, as he would be traveling on three different lines. No action was taken pending the Interstate Commerce Commission decision.

The meeting, held in The Evening Star Building, was presided over by Dr. Victor Meyers.

Give up that vacation drive cheerfully; we need gasoline to take the enemy for a one-way ride.

City of Mexico Orchestra Hailed by Capacity Audience

By ELENA DE SAYN.

Through the magic of music, the audience in the Pan-American Union was brought once more in close touch with our neighbor, Mexico, whose famous Orquesta Tipica de la Policia of the City of Mexico made its reappearance in the Nation's Capital last night. Sponsored by the Mexican Ambassador, the orchestra, on its way from New York, where they played at the Mexican Independence Day celebrations, presented a colorful program of native music which found an instantaneous favor with the invited guests who filled the Hall of the Americas to capacity. The salvo of enthusiastic applause which greeted each number spoke more eloquently than words of the sympathy and interest which prevail here toward that country.

During the intermission, the director general of the Pan-American Union, Dr. Leo Rowe, presented the Minister Counselor of the Mexican Embassy, Senor Don Rafael de la Colina, who made a short address in behalf of the Mexican Ambassador, which the District Commissioner, Guy Mason, acknowledged by a few words of thanks.

The musicians, in elaborate charro costumes, 70 men strong, formed a picturesque group augmented by several women seated on either side of the semicircle dressed in richly spangled "china poblana." Of these, Senorita Laurita was heard with Ray in "Huanpangos y Corridos Mexicanos" to the latter's guitar accompaniment. On insistent demands the artists added "La feria de las Flores" and "Arandas, Arandas," a folk song from the Mexican state of Jalisco, as encores. Another attractive singer, Senorita Margarita, assisted by Sergio, presented "Jarabe Tapatio."

Following the national anthem of Mexico, the patriotic strains of which acquainted one with the unusual combination of instruments and the distinctive tone quality of the orchestra, Maestro Pablo Marin Hernandez brought out four of his compositions: "Rapsodia de la Revolucion Mexicana," founded on the famous "La Cuchara" air; "Jilgueros y Clarines," with obbligati played in a virtuoso manner on a salterio by Manuel Sandoval; "Fantasia Yucateca," and "Fantasia Americana," a work based on North American airs especially arranged by Mr. Hernandez for this tour.

To hear the familiar strains of "Turkey in the Straw," "Old Folks at Home," "Dixie," "Old Black Joe" and an intimation of the "Star Spangled Banner" played with fine effect, ornamented by a violin cadenza and a vibrant cello solo, embellishing on Stephen Foster's matchless tune, was a novel experience. The quantity of native guitars, salterios and marimbas are chiefly responsible for the characteristic tone color of the orchestra augmented by the usual combination of instruments. Precision of the attack, crispness and healthy vigor characterize the sparkling effect of Senor Hernandez's readings.

After the intermission the conductor introduced his assistant, Miguel Lerdo de Tejada, son of the late Miguel Lerdo de Tejada, sr., founder of the orchestra. "Las Violetas" was sung by Ramon Salas, whose sweet tenor voice made the most of the selection. He was accompanied by the orchestra under the able direction of Senor de Tejada. The remainders of the program included

"Canciones Rancheras," performed by a trio from the orchestra, and "Rancho Grande." The concert was brought to a close by a stirring performance of the national anthem.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people eliminate about 5 pints a day. If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. U. S. Housing Work Progressing at Rate Of 1,000 Units Daily

During the last several months Government financed housing for war workers has been completed at an average rate of 1,000 units a day, according to the Federal Public Housing Authority. As an indication of the speed with which the projects are moving, the agency said 32,177 units were completed in July. A total of 236,697 units were completed in the first seven months of this year, twice the number completed in the last seven months of 1942, according to Herbert Emmerich, FPHA Commissioner. A total of 174,306 dwelling units were under construction at the end of July, and contracts were yet to be let for 60,747 more under the present program. Since July 1, 1940, a total of 470,924 units have been completed, of which 321,380 were family dwelling units, 122,137 dormitory units and 27,407 trailer units. These production records do not include the dwelling units to be made available through Government conversion of existing homes and other structures under the National Housing Agency's Homes Use Program. As of the end of August, 26,109 such units were under lease to the Government for conversion, some 15,531 of which are completed or under construction. As of July 31, a total of 706,000 dwelling units were under development or management in the Government-financed phase of the National Housing Agency's war housing program. Standard Plans Are Key. "The use of standard plans has proven of major importance in the employment of mass production methods for large-scale emergency building, such as is represented in the bulk of this publicly-financed war housing," said Mr. Emmerich. "The FPHA recently has issued drawings and specifications for two new series of standard plans for war housing dwellings. One is for one-story row houses and the other for two-story apartments. These new plans provide a slight increase in floor area. Construction of either series may be of wood frame, or where local conditions are favorable, of masonry. "Where wood frame is used, construction may be conventional construction, site fabrication methods, or factory fabrication methods, thus utilizing the time-saving systems which different branches of industry have developed. The plans of the dwelling units are the same regardless of type of construction so that adequate competition in bidding is assured," he added. Your assignment to buy an extra $100 War bond during the Third War Loan was made for you by your son and neighbor's son on the fighting fronts. "Back the Attack" with War bonds.

150 Cargo Planes Shuttled Troops to Strengthen Alaska

By the Associated Press. FORT BENNING, Ga., Sept. 21.—The Army used more than 150 passenger planes of various air lines to transport troops and equipment to Alaska when the Japs threatened Dutch Harbor in June, 1942, an officer of the Troop Carrier Command has disclosed. The officer, Captain Ben L. Parker of San Diego, Calif., then was in a newly formed squadron of the Troop Carrier Command, and flew to Alaska with the first planes making the trip. "Our planes were the only means of getting troops and equipment into Alaska in a hurry," Captain Parker said. "And we went to work. Our 12 planes carried men and equipment 24 hours a day. I made 12 trips from Anchorage to Nome. On my first trip there were two or three huts on the airport. On my last there were thousands of men and plenty of equipment for them." Capt. Parker said the airlines "sent up every available big plane. . . . Those planes and their pilots were put to work as fast as they arrived—I was told that there was a plane landing and taking off every five minutes. "Within two weeks, if the Japs had struck Alaska, they would have found it in shape to make an attack very costly indeed. However, when Kiska was taken, we knew that instead of a direct invasion of Alaska, the fleet had turned and landed there. That gave us more time and we used it to every advantage." Capt. Herman J. Pardey of Aurora, Ore., operations officer of the Fifth Squadron here, also is a veteran of Alaskan flying. At the time Capt. Parker was flying men and equipment, Capt. Pardey was manning one of the few war planes in Alaska. Both officers hold the Distinguished Flying Cross.

If You Suffer From Occasional CONSTIPATION
 Read This:
 E-Z Tablets are especially recommended for those who may be disappointed with results from other laxatives. E-Z Tablets give prompt and pleasant relief without any distressing after-effects whatever. If you are sluggish, headachy, listless, due to occasional constipation, take one or two E-Z Tablets at bedtime, and tomorrow note the difference. 60 Tablets 25c at drug stores.

Another Lincoln?

Wendell Willkie is Hoosier, farmer, business executive, world traveler, author, defeated candidate and "leader of the opposition party." Is he also the man to "bind up the nation's wounds" and achieve a "just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations" as next President of the United States?

AMERICA and her allies stand today in much the position of the North at Lincoln's second inaugural.

Victory is in sight, and while no one can say when the war's end will come, we can foresee as Lincoln did the great need that will follow it.

We know, as he knew, that the first job was to win the war — "to finish the work we are in," as he put it in his second inaugural address.

We can see also that, after this, comes the same need he defined in that same talk to his countrymen — "to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and his orphan — to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations."

The problems to be faced by our next President will not be merely the military and naval problems of winning the war.

They will be the even more difficult problems of winning the peace — of restoring domestic and world-wide economy — of uniting many factions on both nation-wide and world-wide scale — of healing the wounds of depression-born class prejudice — of putting a great nation back in smooth running order again in both its domestic and its foreign affairs.

Answering questions put to him by LOOK, Wendell Willkie has expressed himself on the most pressing problems to be faced by the country in the next four or five years.

He has outlined his idea of a liberal Republican platform, stated his belief as to what is the most important matter before the American public today.

All that is included in the October 5th issue of LOOK.

With it are frank estimates of Willkie by shrewd newspaper correspondents of leading rank. There is a full picture biography covering Willkie's boyhood, his Army service, the campaign in which he was elected "President of 45% of the people," and his world-girdling travels since.

Does all this mark Wendell Willkie as a "second Lincoln" capable of leading us through the critical postwar period?

Are his views the views that can shape the kind of postwar world the American people want?

Read the October 5th issue of LOOK and decide for yourself.

Read it not alone to learn about Wendell Willkie, but for a clear, plain statement of the important issues to be determined in the next Presidential campaign.

Read it to see why the forthcoming conventions of the major political parties will be the most important conventions the country has witnessed in many, many years.

IS THIS THE PEOPLE'S PLATFORM?

Asked what kind of platform the Republican party should offer for 1944, Wendell Willkie names these five matters as "planks" that must be included. Are these the views of the common people of America?

1. MINORITIES. "We must never forget that the essence of freedom is the protection of minorities. We must not protect these rights fitfully, inconsistently and with political purposes, as has the present administration."
2. EFFICIENT ADMINISTRATION. "The more money we spend for government, the less we have for new enterprises and the creating of new opportunities. The entire executive branch of the government, in my opinion, needs a very substantial revision to the end that it may give the people a better government for their tax money."
3. FREEDOM OF OPPORTUNITY. "We must have a rebirth of enterprise — real enterprise. We must have competition, invention, expansion, lower rates, lower prices for manufactured goods. Only thus can we create more opportunities, raise the standard of living, and — most important — maintain real jobs for all."
4. EMPLOYMENT INSURANCE. "All forms of social insurance, including protection against unemployment, must be taken out of politics. The exploitation of human fear and misery for political ends is a shocking crime."
5. FOREIGN RELATIONS. "The Republican party must take the leadership in formulating a new foreign policy, by which we and other nations can assure our future safety and promote our mutual interest. The Administration has no such policy to announce; it is all too clearly acting on pure expediency."
